Iowa teen found guilty in shootings

Associated Press

Defendant Robert Bledsoe, 15, was found guilty of second-degree murder in connection with the April 2007 shooting death of 14-year-old Allen Luhrs of Albia.

The jury also found that Bledsoe, who had a history of mental health issues, was mentally competent at the time of the shooting.

Bledsoe was sentenced to life in prison without possibility of parole.

Palestinian President Yasser Arafat ordered Hamas fighters in Gaza to give up their weapons as long as they promise to turn their activities to peaceful endeavors.

Arafat, under pressure from Israeli and the United States, expressed his readiness to continue the talks if the Hamas agreed to give up weapons.

Arafat's order, released Wednesday, was a dramatic change from earlier statements, in which Hamas was considered a terrorist organization.

Pence sets record straight about fees

To the Editor:

Attorney General Mike Pence has set the record straight about fees. Mike Pence did not charge any fees for his services free of charge. While his services were provided to the state, he did so as a nonprofit corporation, for the benefit of the most vulnerable of Ohio's citizens. It is important to note that Pence's services were provided at no cost to the state, and that he did not charge any fees for his services.

Thank you for your time and attention to this matter.

TV: sucking our ambition and imagination!

This has nothing to do with the value of television and intellectual life. I am not one who wishes to take the positions debated over the worth of television. I am, however, in the midst of several important issues. We are discussing the world of television, which is constantly leading to the downfall of civilization as we know it. How to exchange information and maintain personal contact are two issues that must be addressed.

To make matters worse are the series of stories that are not related to television. These stories are not related to television, but are related to television. The theme is not related to television, but is related to television. The characters are not related to television, but are related to television. The plot takes place in the world of television, but the events are not related to television.

To summarize: television is not related to television, and television is not related to television. The network is not related to television, but is related to television. The characters are not related to television, and television is not related to television.

LITTELL

I'm with television all the way.

To the Editor:

I am a great admirer of television. It has provided me with endless entertainment and has helped me through some difficult times. One of my favorite shows is "The Simpsons." It has a wonderful cast of characters and a fantastic storyline. I especially enjoy the episodes where they do humorous takes on current events. These episodes are not only entertaining, but also provide a different perspective on the world.

In conclusion, I believe that television is a valuable asset to our society. It provides us with information, entertainment, and a way to connect with people from all over the world.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Joe reaches the end of the road

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Joe will. Or Team.

Joe Montana, perhaps the best quarterback in NFL history, announced his retirement Friday after losing his starting job in Kansas City in a 19-0 loss to the Jaguars. Montana's last meaningful pass came in the Chiefs' Super Bowl victory over Buffalo in January.

"I can't say I'm in or out," he said.

When asked whether he'd be attending the Chiefs' Super Bowl game this season, he said no. "I don't want to be there. I'm hoping I don't," he said.

Montana's final year, which started with the Chiefs winning their opener at Denver, ended with the Jaguars' victory. Montana was benched in the Chiefs' next game for Trent Green, who eventually replaced Montana as the starting quarterback.

"I'm not going to comment on everything but I'm sure Montana's career is over," Chiefs owner Clark Hunt said.

"It will make this statement — that we will have a press conference here on Wednesday, probably at 11 a.m. specific to the status of the Montana," he said.

Montana, as a player benefit to San Jose, Calif., took the whole season off work and traveled to New York, Chicago and Los Angeles to meet with teams about possible coaching opportunities.

"I can't say it's in or out," he said.

Montana is the only player to start for the Super Bowl MVPs for both the Chiefs and 49ers, and the last in 1992 in San Francisco to lose a Super Bowl.

Montana said he has stronger reason to retire this year because he's been "so tired," and his back has been ailing. He said he's been asked about coaching a number of times but "I don't want to go into it.

"I feel confident by the end of the year, I'll have a decision," he said.

Playoff races go down to the wire

NBA has Final Four of its own out west

Woods E. Love

The playoff picture is set, and with two weeks to go, not much is settled in the NBA's conference races. Four teams, each separated by just one game, are jockeying for the spots.

The NBA's salary cap means that the teams on the edge of the playoffs this year are better teams than usual. With two or three teams separated by just 1 1/2 games, there are a lot of good teams not in the playoffs, which is why the league expanded its playoffs to six teams this year.

The only way to the conference finals is to break up the Lakers' season-long stranglehold, which is why the NBA is trying to create a more competitive league.

"We're not thinking about playing on the road," said one NBA official. "We're focused on the playoffs, which are the most important thing."
CHICAGO, April 13 - Boris Malenko, who had 15 points and 11 rebounds in the Wizards' 94-79 win over the Minnesota Timberwolves, scored 14 of his points in the first period against Ron Harper, who had 21 points for the Timberwolves. Malenko had 6 of his rebounds in the first 10 minutes of the game, as the Wizards took a 22-13 lead. Malenko said he was able to get to the basket quickly and get the ball away from the Timberwolves' defense in the first half.

George Foreman, 58, heavyweight champion, answers a question about his upcoming fight against Mike Tyson at a news conference Wednesday. Foreman said he was represented by a Tyson representative before that fighter's March 19 return from an indefinite prison.

"I fought with Tyson in prison," Foreman said. "I know him and his work ethic and the way he fights and his ability to handle the pressure." Tyson declined the offer, which he later said was from a $50 million offer for a fight.

"It was a joke," Foreman said. "I don't think he seriously thought about fighting me."

In other developments:

In the upcoming fight against Tyson now, "I'm not going to lose again," Foreman said. "I'm going to lose again," Tyson said. "I'm not going to lose again."

Mike Tyson of New York City, who was reported to have dropped to a lean 354-6391, returned from a 75-day prison sentence for rape.

"I'm ready," Tyson said. "I'm ready, too." Tyson never called, and Foreman sent word for him to come out of seclusion in Miami Beach, Fla., over the past month.

The Daily Iowan

GEOFFREY STRACHAN

Marilyn Manson's third album, 'The Golden Age of Grotesque,' is an adrenaline-pumping collection of songs that are as unorthodox as they are thought-provoking. Manson, who has been described as a 'cult figure,' has a knack for creating music that defies conventional boundaries. His latest album is no exception, featuring a mix of industrial rock and electronic influences that have made him a staple of the underground music scene.

Marilyn Manson will bring his Crazy Angels to Iowa City tonight when they play with Korn and Dying Wish.

Marilyn Manson will also perform several dates with Bush Women and Other Variations, which will be held in October and November.

Marilyn Manson discussed the inspiration behind his latest album, 'The Golden Age of Grotesque.' The album is a reflection of his personal experiences and emotions, which are woven into the music in a way that is both powerful and thought-provoking.

Duo brings ingenuity to Chekhov’s ‘Vanya’

Tanya Robinson

The Daily Iowan

Like so many films written by screenwriters rather than directors, “My Dinner With Vanya” has something of an identity problem. The film, which opens Friday at the New City Cinema, wasn’t made to find its own way through jungles of the film industry, but to defy convention a second time, when it was first performed more than 90 years ago, given this new infusion of inventiveness.

The rehearsal began to take on a workshop-style feel of a group of gifted New York actors under Gregory’s direction. Included in the workshop were actors Wallace Shawn, Brooke Smith’s assistant to Gregory; Julie Miller, Louis Malle and Gregory have made it to the emotional impact its actors bring the actors out into public with it.

And at that time, what was once a long-predicted return of inventiveness. The film is playing at the New City through Sunday.

BAD BOYS: BITCHED BY IDENTITY PROBLEM

Too many screenwriters spoil the film

The film sometimes successfully reimagines the two styles, most notably in the opening sequence. When Will Smith and Martin Lawrence, stars of “Bad Boys,” decide to be an identity problem. The screenwriters repeatedly assume that a witness who’s seen someone once before is someone who has never seen them before.

The humorous substratum often works in their favor more often, the screenwriters inject extended comic sequences betweencoffee parlors, taking aim at Malle’s approach of a narrative that makes for easy reaction.

In his usual nebbish type, is my favorite character portrayal in “Bad Boys” decides to be an identity problem. The screenwriters repeatedly assume that a witness who’s seen someone once before is someone who has never seen them before.

The humorous substratum often works in their favor, it seems, what was once a long-predicted return of inventiveness. The film is playing at the New City through Sunday.

Meredith Monk celebrates the mysteries of life, death, birth, rebirth, creation and transformation in her multimedia piece. The piece makes it easy to believe that the whole world is a titanic machine that is constantly recycling forms of life. Because Meredith Monk is equally gifted as a composer, choreographer, dancer and multimedia creator, her multimedia piece was rich in significance.
