Senate nixes regent confirmation

Reconsideration vote also fails to garner two-thirds majority

Patrik Harris, Daily Iowan

Amid a flurry of controversy surrounding another vote on the new Board of Regents, the Iowa Senate on Thursday rejected the nomination of four regent candidates for the university's board. The vote was 37-16, four votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to confirm the four candidates.

"I expected to be confirmed, I think it's part of the game you play in politics... But I do respect their right to make that decision and I guess they decided I was not the right choice," David Fisher, regent nominee whose bid was rejected.

The vote comes after a contentious confirmation process that saw the Senate vote down two of the four regent candidates in December. The vote on Thursday was the second time the Senate has rejected the nomination of the four candidates, who were nominated by the governor in November.

"I think it's unfortunate that we have to go through this process twice," said Senator Tom贸易, who backed the nomination of the four candidates.

The rejection of the nomination means that the four candidates will not be able to serve on the Board of Regents, which oversees the University of Iowa and Iowa State University. The candidates were nominated by Governor Kim Reynolds, who said she was confident in their ability to serve on the board.

"I'm disappointed in the outcome," said Reynolds. "I believe in the candidates and I think they would make excellent additions to the Board of Regents."

The Senate's rejection of the nomination is likely to further exacerbate tensions between the governor and the Democratic-controlled Senate. Reynolds has previously said she would not support any Democrat who voted against the nomination.

"I don't think the Senate understands the importance of having strong leadership on the Board of Regents," said Reynolds. "I believe the candidates I nominated would bring a fresh perspective to the board and help move it forward."
Easter Bunny arrives for holiday

Michelle Rutter

The Daily Iowan

It's that time of year again when the Easter Bunny brings springtime appearances at local homes and businesses as a mark of the season.

There are several traditions associated with the Easter Bunny, such as placing treats for the bunny, including carrots and milk. The bunny has been a staple in children's stories and folklore, often portrayed as a kind and playful character.

However, some parents and children express concern about the focus on the Easter Bunny and the commercialization of the holiday. This has led to discussions about alternative traditions, such as giving treats to family members or neighborhood children.

The tradition of the Easter Bunny has been around for centuries, with its origins traced back to ancient fertility and vegetation beliefs. In modern times, it has evolved into a beloved children's character, symbolizing the renewal of the season.

Despite the debates, the Easter Bunny remains a beloved figure for many, bringing joy and excitement to the holiday season.

Democrats confer on jobs policy

Dan Broder

The Daily Iowan

The Senate was expected to vote Thursday on a $14 billion jobs bill, with a key test vote by the Labor Committee later in the day.

Democrats were divided over the measures, with some lawmakers expressing concern about the bill's size and scope. However, others were hopeful that the vote would provide a much-needed boost to the economy.

The Senate has already approved a similar jobs bill, but it was unable to clear the House. The Senate is now looking to pass its own version, which includes measures to extend unemployment benefits and increase funding for job training programs.

The House is expected to hold a vote on its own jobs bill next week, with lawmakers hoping to reach a compromise with the Senate. The outcome will be closely watched by economists, who are seeking signs of growth in the job market.
Students turn in applications for freedom

Shelby Wheeler

The Daily Iowan

When students throw in the towel and move from dorm living and end up downsizing from the move to apartment living, some savings in Wagner King Towers II. But not all students will be able to save money, as some landlords may not be willing to entertain the idea of a lease transfer.

Brent Johnson, coordinator of the Campus Information Center, said that many landlords are interested in letting students stay in their buildings after they graduate. Some landlords will even offer a discount if the student stays for another year, he said. However, landlords may require that the student sign a new lease with the same terms and conditions as the previous one.

Johnson said that it's important for students to research their options carefully before making a decision. Students should speak with their landlords to understand their policies and preferences regarding lease transfers. They should also compare lease terms and conditions among different landlords to find the best deal.

Johnson added that it's possible for students to negotiate with their landlords about lease transfers. He suggested that students reach out to landlords to discuss their options and preferences. He also advised students to be prepared to provide documentation, such as letters of recommendation and references, to support their requests.

Johnson concluded by saying that it's important for students to use their resources to find the best options for their needs and preferences. He encouraged students to do their research and make informed decisions about their living situations.

Mall won't hurt Iowa City

Let's get the facts on the road — between Highway 6 and Interstate 80 in Coralville is to be built. The Cascades of Coralville, a project that will add more than 200,000 square feet of retail space to the area, is expected to open in 2022. It will feature more than 100 stores and restaurants, including a movie theater and a sports bar.

Many are excited about the development's potential to boost the local economy and attract more visitors to the area. However, some are concerned about the impact on the existing businesses in Coralville and the possible increase in traffic and parking issues.

In addition to the Cascades of Coralville, there are many other retail developments planned for the area, such as the expansion of the Coralville Mall and the construction of a new shopping center in the eastern part of the city.

The Coralville City Council has approved the installation of traffic signals and the construction of a new parking garage to accommodate the increased demand for parking.

To ensure the success of these developments, it's important to balance the need for growth with the preservation of the city's unique character and charm.

Sara Greenberg, Coralville Chamber of Commerce

The future of Coralville is bright, and we're excited to see what the future holds for this vibrant community.
Clinton gets ready to hit campaign trail

Bob Dole

WASHINGTON — Firey conservative Bob Dole, known as the "GOP's best shot," has begun preparations for the 1996 presidential campaign.

"I believe that history is punishing itself, that we are in the period of a future generation," Dole said as he announced his decision to seek the Republican nomination for president.

Dole, who served in the Senate for 25 years, said he will appeal to voters who are concerned about the country's future and who believe that the current leadership is not up to the task.

"I think facts are critical to Dole's strategy," a Democratic strategist said.

"The country and being "presidential,"" said Dole.

"I want to go out and make speeches," he said. "I feel the arena. . . . I think the arena is getting ready to hear the voice of a leader."

The Iowa Daily is bringing the west against him. It should come to an end within the next two years.

He said he had considered
he would be sponsored and the majory might have been a political solution.

"I expected to be freed," he said.

"I really thought we were playing to public. I was disappointed, I had thought we were doing the right thing," he said.

The possibility of Fisher being freed was a relief to those serving as a report would have come only a few weeks ago.

With the possibility of Fisher being freed, he said, "we can resume the issues that are part of the heart of the Iowa Daily."

He said the policy of the Iowa Daily was to resume the issues that are part of the heart of the Iowa Daily.

The Iowa Daily was not the only reason for opposition against Fisher.
Another reason for the opposition was the Iowa Daily's commitment to a number of budget-cutting suggestions for the state. The opposition was particularly strong from the fiscal regents, who had pointed out that a number of suggestions had been rejected by the state regents.

"One of the keys is making sure we're at the net, trying to get to the right side and use our size advantage there, said forward Kentrell Hughes. "It's a small, quick team, so we have to be physical with them." Bellamy said the Bobcats would have to play a different style of basketball than they're used to, emphasizing defense and rebounding.

"We're going to have to be more physical, said Bellamy. "Our guys need to understand that we're going to have to be more aggressive and get to the free-throw line."

Drummers of Burundi bring truth to Hancher

By Corinne

The Daily Iowan

The Daily Iowan theater critic Andrew Gregory had a lot to say about the performance of frog-men clad in black and carrying miniature drums at the Iowa City's Theatre Arts through the 13-hour production of "Theatres.

Gregory described the frog-men as "monsters that carved out the audience's heart at the beginning of the performance."

The frog-men, who were also drumming, were part of a performance that lasted all day long. The audience was divided into two groups: those who watched the performance and those who participated in it. The participants were asked to follow the drumming and to mimic the movements of the frog-men.

The performance was advertised as "a journey through the drum is to find a path to the frog-man's soul."

"The frog-man's soul is the essence of rhythm, which represents an important part of African culture," Gregory explained. "The frog-man's soul is the essence of rhythm, which represents an important part of African culture."

The frog-men were also described as "a group of theatrical artists who perform in a unique and captivating way."
