Employment is expected to increase, but prospects look dismal for degree holders

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

The George Jetson image of the 21st-century work force is idealistic, but recent statistics about employment opportunities are indicating the majority of jobs in the future will be anything but high-tech — or high-paying.

The media have shown people in the year 2000 flying around in expensive space vehicles, living in computer-run apartments and communicating with intelligent robots on the job.

But compared to the increasing number of low-skilled service jobs, employment statistics indicate the United States will have fewer high-tech jobs requiring a college education — and employment prospects are looking dismal for college graduates.

Employment in the United States is expected to increase by 22 percent — from 121.1 million jobs in 1992 to 147.5 million in 2005 — but the increase is not likely to help hordes of college graduates in "Many of the jobs we have open and work on are skilled (service) jobs: carpenters, truck drivers, auto mechanics, environmental mechanics. All of these are in demand."

Former UI head honored

The flag on top of the Old Capitol will fly at half-staff today in observance of a former UI head of surgery who died at the age of 101 Thursday. Dr. Frank R. Peterson died of natural causes at Greenwood Manor Convalescent Center, 605 Greenwood Drive. He became chief of surgery in 1936 and worked in the surgery department until 1947 after graduating from the UI. He also worked as director of medical education at St. Luke's Hospital in Cedar Rapids. He retired from active medicine in 1968 but served as a consultant for Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Highway 6 West, until the age of 97.

Peterson, who played football for the UI, served on the state Board of Athletics for many years.

Memorials may be made to the UI or Healthteams International Inc., 7518 S. Evanston, Tulsa, OK 74136. Peterson has donated his body to the UI. A family memorial will be held in Laurens, Iowa.

Simpson trial update

Prosecutors and criminalist Dennis Fung say a newly discovered news videotape shows a detective turning over to Fung an envelope said to contain a vial of O.J. Simpson's blood at Simpson's estate.

The prosecution turned over what they said was the transcript of a Kaelin conversation with author Marc Eliot that served as a book proposal. The judge, who last week was given 15 or 16 audiotapes of Eliot interviewing Kaelin, got permission from prosecutors to share them with the defense.

It has delayed interviewing the jurors about racial strife to consider a defense request that Simpson be allowed to sit in.

Bad to the bone

Cats beware, a new dog is in town and she has a big attitude — about half a ton's worth. While she may appear in any place at any time, a wind-blown Snooky was last seen Monday afternoon cruisin' down Burlington Street, then heading north. However, today's forecast may keep Snooky inside. Highs are expected to be in the upper 50s with a chance of rain.

Protesters settle with DePaul officials

Associated Press
CHICAGO — Black student protesters have ended their 10-day sit-in at DePaul University's student newspaper, saying school officials agreed to most of their demands.

The protesters left the office of the weekly DePaulia Saturday night. They said in a statement Monday that the university agreed to all but three of 20 demands, and two of the remaining demands could be satisfied by due process outlined in DePaul's student handbook.

MANY GET EXTENSIONS

Extra days don't help tax procrastinators

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan
Although tax deadlines were pushed back until Monday, the horror of last-minute filing remained the same.

All seven service areas at the Iowa City Post Office were manned

"Monday is our worst day, and with tax day falling on the same day, it was much worse."

Rick Leyendecker, post office supervisor of customer service with tax day falling on the same day, it was much worse," said Rick Leyendecker, supervisor of customer service. "As the day winds on, it keeps getting busier."

UI senior Kyle Krogh said this was his first year of tax-filing trauma, but he mastered the art of waiting until the last minute.

"I picked my forms up Friday from my lawyer, but I knew I had another day to send them in so I waited," Krogh said. "I had to transfer more funds here to pay."

Meanwhile, the man behind him was inquiring if the post office had tax forms on hand.

"I always wait and get an extension," Iowa City resident Marcos Melendez said. "Because I always owe, they always find a way."

All Tax & Accounting Services, Coralville, has prepared more than 100 extensions already, employee Ben Horne said. Form 4868 grants an automatic filing extension the first time an extension is requested.

Residence Services director dies at 57

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

George Droll, UI director of Residence Services, died at home Sunday night after a yearlong battle with colon cancer.

Droll, 57, had been at the UI since 1964 and had been the director of Residence Services since 1980.

UI President Hunter Rawlings described him as a "class act" who worked hard and cared about students. "George was a true professional who personified the best in service to this university," Rawlings said. "I want to emphasize he was a deeply caring individual who was constantly looking out for students."

He said Droll continued to work despite his illness. "He passed away in the most honorable way," Rawlings said. "He did not want people to feel sorry for him."

Droll was an impressive administrator.

Metro &amp; Iowa

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Sandra Studebaker navigates her 18 wheeler through Kirkwood Community College's truck-driving program. Studebaker is one of four women currently enrolled in the monthlong program.

Women turn to truck driving

Tracy Naden
The Daily Iowan

Sandra Studebaker is trading in her thermometer and stethoscope to join other women truckers basking in the freedom of the open road.

Needing a change from her job as a nurse, Studebaker is switching to full-time truck driving while working toward a master's degree in business and hospital administration through correspondence courses.

Studebaker is one of four women — 20 percent of the class — enrolled in Kirkwood Community College's four-week truck-driving program. Statewide, 5.9 percent of all truck drivers are women.

"I'm going to be team driving with my husband, who is already an owner and operator," Studebaker said. "I love to travel and see the mountains and the countryside, but mostly I just enjoy driving."

Having accompanied her husband on road trips before, Studebaker said she recognizes the potential dangers women drivers face.

"There is certainly a fair amount of sexual harassment from the CBs, which could carry over to the truck stops," she said. "But rest stops and rest areas are dangerous even in a car."

Safety also is a major concern for men truckers, said truck driver Clayton Hall, who works for Bullocks Express.

"Fifteen years ago, men didn't worry about where they stopped to sleep or who they gave a ride," Hall said. "Nowadays I always make sure my windows are shut, the doors are locked and (I) never pick up anyone if I'm alone."

However, despite some of the dangers associated with the job,

"I've seen women MDs, nuclear physicists, principals and two college teachers quit their jobs and take up driving. Most of them have raised their families and want to go out and see the world."

Ron Rath, Kirkwood truck-driving coordinator women aren't shying away from making truck driving a successful career. Kirkwood truck-driving coordinator Ron Rath said although the number of women drivers is still lagging behind the number of men drivers, more women are taking the plunge.

"I've seen women MDs, nuclear physicists, principals and two college teachers quit their jobs and take up driving," Rath said. "Most of them have raised their families and want to go out and see the world."

Heartland Express, a major over-the-road trucking company located in Coralville, has 77 women truck drivers on staff. Director Spence Steckroth, head of driver services, said the women aren't limited in any way compared to the 1,450 men on staff.

"We only hire experienced drivers," Steckroth said. "They have to be 23 years of age and have driven for one year, so they are all very qualified."

Truck stops are beginning to cater to the needs of women due to the increasing number of women who are making truck driving a profession.

"Women are in no more danger than men," Steckroth said. "More showers and other facilities are being installed. We haven't had any safety problems."

Women truckers at Heartland Express are slowly eradicating the stereotype that women are bad drivers.

"One (female) owner and one (female) company operator have each been elected as drivers of the month out of 1,500 drivers," Steckroth said. "Some of our best drivers definitely are women."

UI neurologists take spotlight in series

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

In a four-hour-long exploration of the human brain and mind, UI neurology Professors Antonio and Hanna Damasio will be featured in a series on Iowa Public Television tonight and Wednesday night.

"The Human Quest," which airs from 8-10 both nights, is a search into what makes people human. In addition to the husband-and-wife duo, the program features Nobel Prize winners, philosophers and neuroscientists.

"In these programs, we will be discussing issues that deal with memory, emotion, decision making and consciousness," Antonio Damasio said. "It's regarded as one of the best programs ever done on this matter."

The series, which will be shown nationally as well, consists of four one-hour programs titled "Human Nature," "On the Social Brain," "Consciousness" and "The Way of Science."

Antonio Damasio, the head of neurology in the UI College of Medicine, said the UI has been a leader in research on the brain and the mind.

"My understanding is that it features our group very prominently," he said.

Public education is the point of the show, Antonio Damasio said.

Hanna Damasio, who is the head of the UI neuroimaging laboratory, will also be speaking on her experiences in the field. Neuroimaging is a technique that helps doctors study the human brain in living individuals.

One of the Damasios' colleagues, Professor Robert Rodnitzky, said

Hanna Damasio has been at the forefront of neuroimaging.

"She's been very instrumental in developing new methods of imaging the brain," Rodnitzky said.

Rodnitzky said Hanna Damasio has developed brain scans that can be turned into three-dimensional images, giving doctors the opportunity to look at the brain as if they held it in their hands.

The work of Antonio Damasio has been leading in the area of behavior and the brain, Rodnitzky said. Antonio Damasio has identified and reconstructed areas of the brain where certain behaviors come from.

The makers of "The Human Quest," which was produced by KCET-TV in Los Angeles, came to Iowa City to interview the Damasios in the winter of 1993-94.

PINBALL TOURNAMENT OPEN UNTIL SATURDAY

Wizards rack up points for championship

Matthew Brown
The Daily Iowan

Out-of-state pinball wizards will be shooting for Iowa City early this week in the fourth annual Iowa Pinball Federation State Championship at the Deadwood tavern.

The tournament, which began Monday, became known to players in Kansas, Wisconsin and Illinois through word of mouth on the championship circuit.

"The folks are people we've met in other places," said Parke Heller, who finished 15th with partner Steve Leventhal in the World Pinball Championships in New York last February. Heller lives in Iowa City and works at the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St.

The competition is open to anyone until Saturday, and entrants are free to rack up their best scores on five of the bar's six machines. The top 16 scorers by 8 p.m. Saturday will participate in a sudden death final on Sunday. The champion wins $200, and prize money totaling $700 will be divided among the top eight finishers.

Jim Bell, owner of the Deadwood and director of the tournament, said last year's winner was Doug Osborne, a Wisconsin player. Bell expects to double last year's field of 25 players. He said players may have to achieve scores of more than 1 billion points to qualify for Sunday's final.

A further $100 will be divided among the top four youth players (12 years and under) during a one-day event Saturday beginning at 11 a.m. and lasting until 4 p.m.

Bell stressed that women players are particularly welcome. Last year, only one woman — Erin Schaefer — qualified in the women's tournament and became champion by default. Schaefer said she expects to be challenged by stronger competitors this year.

"The whole field is getting better," she said Monday, after totaling a million-plus score in one go on the "Theater of Magic" game.

Schaefer and partner Kerri Petersen will compete as an all-women team in a Professional and Amateur Pinball Association doubles league at the Deadwood this summer.

"One of our goals is for people to meet each other and make friends," said Bell.

Air Force plane crash kills crew, passengers

ALEXANDER CITY, Ala. (AP) — An Air Force jet crashed Monday in a wooded area while trying to land at the airport in this eastern Alabama town. All eight people on board were killed.

Fire Chief Ronnie Betts said there were multiple casualties but would not say how many. CNN said all eight people on board the jet were killed.

The plane was trying to make an unplanned landing at the Alexander City airport when it crashed near a subdivision 4 miles from Alexander City, said Lt. Frances Sconi, a spokeswoman for Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland.

The plane had been en route to Randolph Air Force Base in San Antonio, said Lt. Col. Johnny Whitaker, a spokesman for Randolph.

He said the jet, which had taken off from Andrews, was based in Randolph and was carrying a crew of two and six passengers.

A Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told the Associated Press that both military and civilian personnel were aboard the plane.

Whitaker, however, said all eight people were Defense Department personnel.

Prime-time press conference slated by Clinton

The president plans to make a brief opening statement in his first prime-time meeting with reporters since Aug. 3, focusing on the debate over welfare reform, the White House said Monday.

Greek funeral homes spurn AIDS victim

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Funeral homes in Greece's second-largest city reportedly refused to bury a man with AIDS who died of a drug overdose. Instead, the burial was done by his family and a priest.

Kostas Ossas, 31, and his wife, Foteini — who also has AIDS — drew national attention when they decided to marry two years ago. Both had AIDS and were drug addicts at the time.

The newspaper Ta Nea said Kostas Ossas was found dead Saturday. The paper said funeral homes in the Salonica area, where the couple lived, refused to take the body to his home village about 75 miles to the east because he had AIDS.

New video counters defense's allegations

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The O.J. Simpson trial opened its 12th week of testimony Monday with the focus on truth, lies and videotape. A prosecutor scored points with a few shadowy frames that appear to show a police technician holding evidence the defense contends he didn't receive until the next day.

Deputy District Attorney Hank Goldberg introduced the newly discovered video clip to try to shore up the undermined credibility of criminalist Dennis Fung and weaken the defense theory of a police conspiracy to frame Simpson for two murders.

Fung, in his eighth day on the stand, also explained to jurors why he told a grand jury he collected evidence that was actually picked up by an assistant, why he didn't wear latex gloves at the crime scene and why they should not believe a defense allegation that he handled a bloody envelope with bare hands.

The meticulous low-key prosecution counterpunches came on a day that Superior Court Judge Lance Ito tried to rein in time-consuming legal objections and told jurors he would begin interviewing them one by one after court.

Ito told panelists he would see them in his chambers, about three or four a day, to ask questions about an ousted juror's reports alleging racial divisions and personal animosity. He is also investigating the conduct of the sheriff's deputies guarding the group.

Before testimony began, defense attorney Robert Shapiro apologized to Fung and Asian-Americans for facetious remarks he made about Fung last Thursday while handing out Chinese fortune cookies.

"My heart has been heavy all weekend if even one person has been offended, and for that I sincerely apologize," Shapiro said.

Attention then turned to a vial of Simpson's blood that the defense has used as a key point in the frame-up theory.

Although Fung said he still could not remember exactly what he did with the vial, a second-by-second view of the new tape showed him apparently holding a gray envelope that a detective said contained the blood sample.

The running time code on the tape indicated the scene was recorded within a few minutes of the 5:20 p.m. notation Fung wrote on the evidence envelope as the hour he received it on June 13.

Defense attorneys first used tapes to bolster their claims of sloppy police work and a sinister conspiracy to frame Simpson. On Monday, the prosecution fought back.

Jurors watched often shaky images projected on a 7-foot-high courtroom screen, keeping their eyes fixed on the scene even when blurring and jiggling caused many spectators to glance away.

"There!" shouted Goldberg as he directed a video operator to the crucial moment.

In the few frames, shot from afar with a telephoto lens, Fung was seen standing in the foyer of Simpson's home with Detective Philip Vannatter and another police employee. At one point, Fung appeared to reach out and take a gray envelope in his hand. At another point, his assistant, Andrea Mazzola, is seen holding a black plastic trash bag.

Fung said he had no "independent recollection" of putting the blood vial in the trash bag but added, "From viewing this videotape and putting together many things I did remember, that's what I have concluded that I did."

Turning toward jurors as he spoke, Fung also explained that when he was questioned by a grand jury last June, he portrayed himself as the sole collector of evidence because he thought they wanted to know how the evidence was collected, not who picked it up.

"I tend to use the word, 'I,'" he explained. "It's like an engineer who says I built a bridge ... when he may actually have many other people working under him."

He said he never mentioned Mazzola's name because "I was trying to answer ... questions as to what was done, not who did what."

Fung disputed defense interpretations of another video clip that Simpson's attorneys said shows him handling a key piece of evidence — a bloody envelope containing eyeglasses — with his bare hands. He insisted the item seen on the tape was not that envelope, which was shown in the courtroom to be distinctively crinkled and bloody.

He also said he doesn't wear protective gloves at crime scenes unless it is absolutely essential because "when I am not wearing gloves it makes me that much more conscious not to touch things for prints and I tend to be careful."

"When I am wearing gloves, I am more likely to touch something because I think the gloves will protect the items from prints," said Fung.

DALLAS CENTER IN JEOPARDY

Commission shuts down STD prevention program

Mark Babineck
Associated Press

DALLAS — For nearly a decade, doctors and nurses from around the world distributed pamphlets, needle kits and condoms in Dallas County as part of a program to teach them how to fight the spread of AIDS and other diseases.

But that was before county commissioners said county programs could no longer hand out those materials.

Now the training program — run by the county and financed by the federal Centers for Disease Control — is in jeopardy.

The CDC has said it will decide in two months whether the ban, effective March 21, will force it to uproot the 16-year-old training center — one of 10 it finances across the country.

"We're concerned that it might affect the training of people from other parts of the country," said Bob Emerson, acting chief of the CDC's training and education branch in Atlanta.

Handing out literature, needle kits and condoms has been part of the program for almost 10 years.

Though the program is federally funded, it relies on county workers, facilities and other resources and therefore is under the control of the Dallas County Commission.

The ban was propelled by Kenneth Mayfield and Mike Cantrell, conservatives newly elected to the five-member commission.

Mayfield said the county should promote abstinence as a safe-sex policy. He said he has nothing against people using condoms, just with the county providing them.

"We don't give nicotine patches to smokers, so why should that be any different?" he said.

State health officials said the county is the only public health provider in Texas that doesn't provide condoms to adults for disease prevention.

The program on sexually transmitted diseases teaches medical workers from Texas and neighboring states as well as doctors from around the world.

County health workers and faculty members from Dallas' Southwestern Medical School teach visiting doctors and nurses at county clinics, where they perform many of the same duties as local workers, such as counseling and treating patients.

The instruction once included giving out condoms, bleach kits and literature to patients at the clinic and to people in high-risk areas, such as gathering places for gay men or heroin users.

The county was distributing about 10,000 condoms a month when the program was halted. Private organizations that hand out condoms, such as the local AIDS Prevention Center, are unaffected by the commission's action.

Dr. Charles Haley, the county epidemiologist in charge of programs to fight sexually transmitted diseases, said the ban means he'll have to come up with a new plan.

"I'm concerned about the liability of letting someone walk out without several condoms with a known sexually transmitted disease as standard practice," Haley said.

Some state health officials also said the change is unwise.

"There probably is no way to resolve this," said Dr. Charles Bell, head of the state Bureau of Sexually Transmitted Diseases and HIV Prevention. "It's negligent for any health-care provider not to provide devices and information. Just to tell them to not have sex isn't going to happen."

HEART DISEASE OVERLOOKED

Women's health ignored

The bald, overweight middle-aged male almost jumps out of the television screen as he grasps at his chest and then falls over in pain from the heart attack he's having. It's only a television show and the man is acting, but this is the typical view given to Americans about heart attacks — middle-aged men falling over with chest pain. Men do have heart attacks an average 10 years before women, but there is a general misconception that heart disease is a male disease.

Women's greatest health concerns are over breast cancer when, in fact, heart disease is the No. 1 killer of women over all forms of cancer combined. Women are often left in the dark about which health risks are deadliest to them. They are 12 times more concerned with breast cancer and AIDS than heart disease — which is seven times more deadly.

Even though heart disease is the No. 1 killer of men, one year after a heart attack, 50 percent of women die compared to 31 percent of men.

Women's misconceptions are fueled in part by what the medical profession gives emphasis. Women are taught how to do breast self-exams, yet they are unaware of the signs of a heart attack because the assumption is made that their heart attack would be just like their husband's. Women also have a misconception about the risk of a stroke. In a Gallup Poll of 1,000 women, only one in 100 was concerned about hypertension, yet more than twice as many women die from a stroke than they do from breast cancer.

Women are mistaken not only in the sense that what has been emphasized as their greatest health risks are not the deadliest killers, but also that heart disease is actually deadlier for women than it is for men. Even though heart disease is the No. 1 killer of men, one year after a heart attack, 50 percent of women die compared to 31 percent of men. These statistics are due in part to a lack of research on heart disease, cancer and strokes in women.

Women have been excluded from research in the past because of fear of harming a pregnant woman's fetus, concern that reproductive and menstrual cycles might alter the results of research, and the assumption that men and women are the same. Lack of research on women and heart disease is evident from even the most basic tests given people. The exercise treadmill is one of the cheapest and easiest ways to check for heart disease — in men. The differences between the sexes makes the treadmill unreliable in checking women for heart disease because women do not produce the same results as men on the treadmill.

In the past, doctors often shrugged off women's complaints as psychosomatic instead of acknowledging actual physical pain. However, with the new emphasis on women's health care, greater attention is being paid to their needs.

Medical schools now emphasize women's health and students can specialize in the subject. In the past, doctors often shrugged off women's complaints as psychosomatic instead of acknowledging actual physical pain. However, with the new emphasis on women's health care, greater attention is being paid to their needs.

Women have been left uninformed for too long and right now more research needs to be done so that women are educated about their health risks and they know the danger signs of diseases, especially one as deadly as heart disease.

LETTERS

Demonstration fantastic, pathetic

To the Editor:

On Tuesday night, about 50 concerned citizens — belonging to the Iowa International Socialist Organization, the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students, the Rainforest Action Group, the Campaign for Academic Freedom and Tallgrass Prairie Earth First! — attended en masse a lecture by Joseph Gaylord, Newt Gingrich's political coordinator.

Fantastic. Public debate. Democracy at work.

Unfortunately, these protesters took it upon themselves to chant anti-Republican slogans so loud that those gathered to actually listen (and perhaps debate) lost the text of the lecture to the insightful mantra "Give Newt the boot."

Pathetic. Childish. Symbolic.

Iowa International Socialist Organization and friends, you should be ashamed of yourselves. This was no fascist Reni Leifenthal torch-lit pep rally you crashed, but a gathering of people interested (admittedly for reasons beyond my ability to grasp) in hearing what Newt's lackey had to say. It is not your place to play the political Ward Cleaver and protect the collective Beave from a "Contract With America" that you feel we're too stupid to see is full of holes.

Pain not a symptom of disease; it's a way of life

"I treat my body like my car," my mother says. "I don't care how or why it's broken; I just want it fixed by Wednesday."

In the past 10 days, my mother's health has disintegrated to a dangerous level. Her joints ache, her muscles are sore, her left ankle is swollen and she moves so slowly that my 14-month-old daughter can outrun her. She tells me what her sickness isn't. "It's not arthritis. It's not lupus. It's not malaria."

My father is also complaining about his health. He has chest pains, he says, and he can't take a deep breath. He, too, tells me what he doesn't have. "They said it isn't heart disease. It's not asthma, probably not pleurisy. Maybe it's stress."

My mother has not ruled out this explanation for her own problems. "If it's stress, everybody has to be nice to me," she tells my sister and I, only half-jokingly.

It occurs to me that neither of my parents feel they are within their rights to ask everybody to be nice to them whether they're sick or not. So they search for medical explanations for their ailments. Without scientific rationalization for their pain, they cannot be sure they're really suffering. My mother's swollen ankle is not enough; she needs a doctor's certification that says, yes, she has disease X and therefore her complaints are justified.

This view of health and illness seems unique to 20th-century America, where a plethora of biomedical technology requires every vague ailment to be boxed and categorized. We are led to believe that each ache has a precise cause which can be diagnosed and then treated, whereupon we will be restored to a state of perfect health. There is no room for a fuzzy gray area in this model. Those who abstractly complain about feeling ill are considered pathetic and whiny. Pain is only considered legitimate as an indication of something more ominous — cancer, maybe, or acute appendicitis. It is never an end in itself.

I've found that in many other cultures pain is treated with the respect it deserves. It's not just a symptom of disease; it's a state of being. Those who say they're suffering are taken at their word and temporarily excused from the burdens of life. Healers are consulted, but their first priority is to the ease the pain of the sick, not to search — possibly in vain — for the precise cause of the sickness.

In the United States, medical technology has turned this priority upside down. Cancer patients are given chemotherapy which often makes them feel worse than their cancer does. My mother was offered a drug that would make the swelling of her ankle go down but was told the side effects might include dizziness, a sore throat, nausea, weight gain; sleep disturbances; fever; mood swings; and, ironically, swelling of the ankles. In our frenzied quest to wipe out disease, we have forgotten that the original mission of medicine is to relieve suffering.

Another peculiarly American belief is that the medical establishment has a monopoly on caring and curing. A Central American friend once shared with me a sad but telling story of his sister, who was diagnosed with cancer while she was still in her 20s. After much agonizing, his family decided to take her to the United States to search for a treatment. They went from doctor to doctor, but they were unable to save her.

If my friend had to do it over again, I'm sure he would have made the same decision, but he nevertheless regrets that in searching aimlessly for an effective treatment, his sister missed out on what he called the "culture of death." Instead of dying in El Salvador, surrounded by friends and grieving family members, my friend's sister died alone in an American hospital, still half-hoping for a miracle cure.

My friend says that the elderly in his home country are following a similar path. As their health deteriorates, they leave their villages for city hospitals, hoping to find the perfect pill which they subconsciously believe will make them immortal. In doing so, their families have stopped accepting and dealing with the inevitability of death. Instead, the families assist their relatives in the fruitless search for a cure — and are taken by surprise when their 98-year-old grandfather dies anyway.

Treating our bodies like cars is tempting. Since most of us no longer need to hunt, farm and search for water, it is easy to deprioritize our physical state. Our bodies are just vehicles for our brains to move around in. And if we do get sick, we assure ourselves we'll find the problem, cure it (preferably by Wednesday) and then continue with our lives. Our perspective has been lost.

AMY RESEWEHR

Making a community that isn't afraid to educate

White Ribbon Week will be recognized April 23 through May 1 to increase awareness of the consequences of teen-age sexual behavior in America. While the white-ribbon campaign is a nationwide program, Iowa's contributions are supported by the Iowa Department of Public Health, the Iowa Department of Education, the Iowa Department of Human Resources, parents and other community representatives. It is being held in response to teen-age pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases which continue to escalate in our society.

The campaign's premise is commendable. However, awareness is not the solution to teen-age pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases. Awareness is merely a way to bridge the gap between ignorance and action. Though the problem continues to grow each year with increasing severity, action is still slow going.

Our community needs to acknowledge the need for bold, assertive action in order to make any remarkable progress in teen-age pregnancy and STD issues. Each year, more than 1 million teen-agers become pregnant. The United States has the highest teen-age pregnancy rate of all industrialized countries. Three million teen-agers will contract a sexually transmitted disease this year.

There can be little dispute over whether we should deal with sexuality issues publicly or rely on the private sector to establish knowledge and values about sex in young adults. The problem is many parents don't know what to tell their kids. Parents are either misinformed themselves or are too embarrassed to talk openly about sex. That is why as part of White Ribbon Week, the Johnson County Adolescent Pregnancy Prevention Coalition is sponsoring a teen panel on "Sex and Iowa City's Teen-agers." The panel, scheduled for April 25, will allow teens to utilize and encourage their increased knowledge about sex to educate peers and parents. Opening the lines of communication has to be a step in the right direction.

When dealing with sexuality issues, our country continues to argue over the implications of disseminating values and knowledge while neglecting to acknowledge the day-to-day distribution of misinformation, sexism, racism, homophobia and the like. We spend millions of dollars each year to reinforce negative stereotypes and misinformation through advertising and television.

The Alan Guttmacher Institute stated it best this year when they acknowledged "nothing better illustrates this country's unwillingness to confront sexual issues than its failure to use national media to educate young people and adults about the importance of using a condom." Even the UI has been guilty of limiting sex education with its variety of policies, including forbidding residence hall assistants to hand out condoms. If we can't trust adults with decisions about protecting themselves from pregnancy and disease, how can we expect teen-agers to take full responsibility without the knowledge and self-esteem to do so?

I looked into the eyes of a young teen-age girl the other day who had just learned that she was pregnant. Tears rolled down her face as she explained how she could never tell her parents what she had done — they would be too disappointed in her.

I felt a sense of shame and guilt for days afterward as her words resonated in my ears. As part of a society whose greatest failure is having the knowledge to save young lives from emotional and financial despair as well as physical harm but simply refuses them access to that knowledge, I couldn't help but feel that I had somehow not lived up to my responsibility. Teen-age pregnancy and STD awareness is a community responsibility.

When I listened to the teen-ager's words, I wondered who her parents would have been disappointed with if she had broken her arm riding a bicycle and no one had warned her of potential hazards. I wondered how her parents would feel if she told them she was dying of AIDS because no one told her that by having sex one could contract a disease which could kill.

I think it is important to recognize that at some point our young community of teen-agers is going to turn around and say, "I am disappointed in you" to adults. They have a right to be disappointed. We are an educated community. Our youths deserve the truth, and the truth is that if you don't make careful decisions regarding sex, the consequences can be severe.

The week of April 23 to May 1, show your support by wearing a white ribbon. Talk about sex with your children. Let us make this a community that isn't afraid to educate.

Amy Resewehr's column appears alternate Tuesdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

Colleges accused of bolstering images through falsified information

Sally Streff Buzbee
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For years, American colleges have railed against magazine rankings of their campuses as oversimplified "short cuts" that gloss over the complex, subtle nature of learning.

Now there are contentions that some of the schools, under pressure to attract students, are fibbing about the figures they send each year for the rankings done by U.S. News & World Report, Money magazine and others.

The rankings have come under closer scrutiny since an April 5 Wall Street Journal article reported discrepancies in data sent for the rankings and information sent to debt-rating agencies.

The dispute over the rankings has underscored the importance of marketing to the nation's 3,000 colleges and universities.

"It's a buyer's market," said Lee Stetson, dean of admissions at the University of Pennsylvania, whose school was not mentioned in the Journal article. "And the amount of publicity you get helps determine the students you get."

A spokesman for New York University — which was mentioned in the Journal article — said questions asked by the surveys can be interpreted in different ways which results in varying answers.

For example, the Journal reported that NYU, in responding to the U.S. News survey, excluded the SAT scores of about 100 poor students in a special state-sponsored program. But NYU's Virgil Renzulli said Monday the U.S. News survey asked for SAT scores for students entering school in the fall. The 100 excluded students began classes in the summer.

"This has become a fairly big thing. We don't take this as an accurate rating of how good a school is," Renzulli said.

Among other discrepancies reported by the Journal:

• Northeastern University in Boston and several other schools excluded international and remedial students' SAT scores, even though surveys specifically said not to in their instructions. Northeastern's provost, Michael Baer, said the practice gave potential students a more accurate reflection of what their peer group would be.

• Harvard University, which often ranks near the top of surveys, had a slight discrepancy in the SAT scores it reported to U.S. News and Moody's Investors Service Inc., the Journal said. Marilyn McGrath Lewis, director of admissions for Harvard and Radcliffe Colleges in Cambridge, Mass., told the Journal the U.S. News figures are accurate and described the information from Moody's as a "mystery."

"It's more a reflection on how Harvard counts than anything sinister that could be read into it," spokesman Joe Wrinn said Monday. Joyce Smith of the National Association of College Admissions Counselors insisted "no school should misrepresent itself."

"But there is such fierce competition for students," she noted. "If you drop in those rankings, alumni might call. The president might get angry."

Some of the discrepancies uncovered by the Journal were inadvertent, schools say — the result of handling up to 50 surveys a year.

ST. HELIER, Jersey — Three hundred passengers rushed into lifeboats after a damaged twin-hulled hydrofoil began taking on water Monday between Jersey and other Channel Islands. About 100 people were injured.

All but the captain and crew were evacuated within an hour to rescue boats after the French craft suffered damage to one of its hulls 40 miles west of the Normandy coast. Jersey harbor master Roy Bullen said it was "quite likely" the hydrofoil hit a rock.

The St. Malo ferry, listing in moderate 4-foot seas, was towed to the Jersey shore by a French tug. The incident occurred about 10 a.m. one mile off Corbier Point, Jersey.

The ferry, carrying day-trippers to the sister islands of Sark and Guernsey, operates daily between the Channel Islands and the French port of St. Malo. Jersey, an English island, is about 100 miles south of the British coast.

Passengers leap from the stern of the listing ferry St. Malo into life rafts during rescue operations off the coast of Jersey Monday.

A Royal Air Force Sea King helicopter plucked some passengers from life rafts. "All the passenger shipping that was in the area came to its assistance. You could see maybe about 15 boats out there," Profit said.

All 300 passengers arrived in St. Helier, Jersey, in the afternoon, police said.

Authorities said 307 people had been aboard the St. Malo, including 185 Germans, 40 French and the rest British tourists, making a day trip to the islands west of France's Cotentin Peninsula. Monday was a national holiday in both Britain and France.

No Americans were known to be on board. About 50 passengers were brought to St. Helier General Hospital and 30 were admitted, mainly with broken legs and ankles, the hospital reported. The other passengers were taken to hotels throughout St. Helier.

A witness said the St. Malo got too close to Jersey's rocky shoreline. The vessel had been scheduled to go to Sark, then to Guernsey.

"I was fishing on the rocks and I saw her come around the back of the lighthouse," said St. Helier resident Dave Turner.

"But when she was coming into the bay, she came in too far. I've seen dozens of them come in, and you could tell she was in too close," he told the British Broadcasting Corp.

"She was just off course, so she hit on her port side on this rock that they were trying to miss obviously. ... Then she sort of twisted around slightly to her port and then started to keel over," Turner added.

Paul Mimmack of the Jersey Harbor Office disputed that account. "Where she was in quite deep water, and no rocks or anything like that around," he said.

Passengers donned life jackets and boarded lifeboats in seas with 3- to 4-foot-high waves, Mimmack said.

RELATIONSHIP BEGAN WITH WRONG NUMBER

Calif. police try to track girl and her 51-year-old admirer

Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — It began as a wrong number, blossomed into a romance — and turned into a nightmare for two families.

Authorities believe 12-year-old Tran Anh Vo ran off with 51-year-old Kent Phillip Phiko, a secret boyfriend she met through an errant phone call.

"We don't know if they are still in the area," San Jose police spokesman Louis Quezada said Monday. "We're sifting through information we received over the weekend, but there are no breaks yet."

On Wednesday, a warrant was issued for Phiko's arrest on a charge of felony child enticement, though authorities have said they don't believe the girl is in danger.

From what police have been able to piece together, the relationship began after Phiko dialed the wrong number and Tran picked up the phone.

Several months ago, Tran's mother, Mai Pham Vo, noticed the name "Kent" and a phone number on her daughter's notebooks. But she wasn't worried because junior-high crushes are common.

In November, at Tran's birthday party at a pizza shop, the girl confided to her friends that she had a secret admirer named Kent, police said.

Two months ago, Vo noticed that her daughter's marks were dropping and she began pressuring her to improve them. Then on April 5, Tran left for Foothill Middle School as usual and never returned home.

Police called the mysterious Kent's number and Phiko's wife answered. She told officers her husband was a 260-pound sheet-metal worker from nearby Campbell and had recently left home after telling her about Tran.

He said he had "met this little girl through a wrong number" and that they had had several more conversations, officer Todd Martin said.

Last week, Phiko called his wife to say he was "protecting" a girl and would not be returning home. It was the last police heard from him.

The FBI has been in contact with San Jose police, but spokesman Rick Smith said there is little the agency can do for the moment.

"We're ready to assist if necessary, but if she went voluntarily, it's not kidnapping, and we won't get involved," he said.

Organizations that help find missing children are distributing fliers with pictures of Tran and Phiko throughout the region.

"I miss her and I hope she is coming home soon," Vo said. "We've been praying every night since she left."

JOBS

next 10 years, one in four college graduates won't be able to find a job within his or her major field, according to Bureau of Labor Statistics data.

Michael Norris, senior economist at the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Kansas City, Mo., said jobs for cashiers, retail sales workers, general office clerks and secretaries are projected to grow faster than higher-paying occupations that require a college degree.

"One of the main complaints about growth projections in service industries is that they are typically in a lot of low-paying jobs," Norris said. "There are a lot of low-paying jobs and the numbers keep increasing."

The number of cashier jobs is projected to increase by 24 percent, meaning 666,000 new jobs by 2005; retail sales jobs are expected to rise by 21 percent, creating 877,000 new jobs; and security guard jobs are predicted to more than double with a 51 percent increase, generating 408,000 new positions.

"As our population becomes more affluent, people start to demand far more services," Norris said. "After establishing basic needs, you start demanding entertainment and more and more personal-type services."

Personal service occupations — cosmetologists, amusement and recreation attendants and child care workers — are also projected to increase by nearly 60 percent.

In comparison, jobs for physicists and astronomers are predicted to decrease by 3 percent, a considerable drop when taking into account that the nation's population is expected to increase by 10 percent.

GRADUATES

for after graduation makes him the norm, not the exception.

"I think a lot of people are starting to accept that many people don't get jobs right out of college," Gilliam said. "It's more rare to see students with jobs now than without jobs."

Being aggressive and persistent are keys to finding employment, said Sandy Heistad, a UI academic adviser at Dey House.

"You have to be very persistent and you have to be willing to be trained at an entry-level position," Heistad said. "But with a college degree, you will be able to move up faster. It may take two or three months to get a job in an area you like."

Kathy Foresman, a UI senior graduating in May with a bachelor's degree in journalism, said she hopes to find a job in advertising or public relations. Although she has sent few résumés to employers, she has spent time contacting companies.

"I haven't been super active with sending out résumés, but I've made quite a few calls to contacts," Foresman said. "What I'm finding in the field I want to go into is that they aren't hiring at this time. It's really frustrating. A lot of companies are looking for internships. It would be a testing period — both for the intern and the company."

Like Gilliam, Foresman said she is not overly nervous about the future.

"I've been really busy with school. I haven't been focusing as much on the job search," she said. "I'm sure things will pick up if I don't have a job when I get out of school."

Some UI students getting ready to graduate have not yet begun the search for employment.

"I'm going home for a month (after graduation)," said UI senior Jessie Waterbury, a psychology and communication studies double major. "I'll take the time then to find a job. I've been so busy lately. Right now I'm more worried about getting everything in order — leaving Iowa City and my friends."

an effective and flexible boss, said Van Oel.

"I appreciated him as a boss. He gave us a lot of leeway, and we just worked really well together," she said. "He also had quite a sense of humor. He always had a lot of one-liners."

Droll worked out of his UI office until spring break and then worked out of his home, Van Oel said.

Visitation will be on Thursday at the George L. Gay Funeral Home, 2720 Muscatine Ave., from 5-8 p.m. Funeral services will be held Friday at First United Methodist Church, 214 E. Jefferson St., at 2 p.m.

Droll's family has created a scholarship fund in his name. The George L. Droll Residence Hall Student Award Fund will be administered through the UI Foundation. Tax-deductible donations may be sent to the UI Foundation, P.O. Box 4550, Iowa City, IA 52244-4550.

Droll was a 1960 graduate of Oklahoma State University with a bachelor's degree in hotel and restaurant management. He is survived by his wife, Nancy, three children and three grandchildren.

contemplating blowing it off.

"I just never got around to (filling it)," Rudy said. "I'm getting $15. I didn't know what will happen if I didn't file since I don't owe. I guess that would be contributing to an already screwed-up government. Maybe they'd give me credit."

Computer gurus won't have to beg for a job

The statistics may appear depressing to college grads.

But despite the fact that low-skilled service jobs are projected to increase significantly, the future isn't completely gloomy — especially within the fields of technology and communication.

"(The United States) has a highly skilled and educated population and labor force," Norris said. "So it stands to reason that we are going to produce more intellectual products — software and engineering service products."

Jobs for computer scientists and systems analysts are projected to increase by 111 percent by 2005, according to Bureau of Labor Statistics data.

The UI Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office is seeing a high demand for computer-literate persons.

"This is one area where we haven't been able to fill the demand," said Deanna Hurst, director of the placement office. "We have a lot of employees seeking graduates in this area. Many of these graduates have already accepted offers."

Sandy Heistad, a UI academic adviser at Dey House, said she can't assure most students they'll get jobs after graduation — but computer engineers and health professionals seem to be exceptions.

"There are a few majors where you might be guaranteed a job when you graduate," Heistad said. "There always seems to be a demand in computer science, some engineering and some health professions, but it does fluctuate for even some of these. Many depend on the demand in the marketplace when you graduate."

As the nation's elderly population expands, health service occupations are projected to increase by 51 percent and occupations within health care will continue to grow, Norris said.

"People are living longer," he said. "We have a large number of people who are aging who require health care: baby boomers."

Also increasing — by 34 percent — will be openings for kindergarten, elementary and high-school teachers.

Iowa City is seeing an increase in service-oriented jobs

A large number of available jobs in Iowa City are service-oriented positions which don't require a college degree, said Doug Goodner, job service interviewer at Job Service of Iowa, 1810 Lower Muscatine Road.

Currently, Job Service has 165 full-time jobs and 60 part-time jobs available, most of which are noncollege-level service-oriented employment.

"More skilled (service) jobs are available and employers are having trouble finding people to fill the positions," Goodner said. "Many of the jobs we have open and work on are skilled (service) jobs: carpenters, truck drivers, auto mechanics, environmental mechanics. All of these are in demand."

Noncollege-level service jobs — like cashiers and sales clerks — where skills are learned on the job, also are increasing, Goodner said.

Bilbao repeats a pitcher of the week

For the second week, Iowa freshman Bilbao brought home Player of the Week honors.

After tossing a 14-shutout against Michigan, Bilbao earned the honor two weeks ago. Bilbao did not pitch a no-hitter again on Sunday.

For the week, Bilbao allowed one run on four hits and one walk. He was the first IU pitcher in two years.

"It's quite an honor," Bilbao said. "Our team played well. I'd like to attribute it to them. The defense was awesome."

Coach Gayle Blewett said Bilbao was not at his best this weekend, but the defense helped him to the honor.

"This is really a team effort," Blewett said. "Even if Bilbao is not at her best, the team can make defensive plays and pitch in a good spot."

Gretzky reaches milestone

CALGARY, Alberta — Wayne Gretzky became the first player in NHL history to reach 2,500 career points on a power-play goal on Monday.

Gretzky is the league's all-time leader with 813 goals and 1,963 assists and 10 scoring titles. He is a 16-year veteran who has won four points than runner-up Gordie Howe, who ended his career in 1982.

On the historic night, Gretzky scored from the sideboard at the point. Blake's shot was deflected into the net by Gretzky at 11:01 of the first period.

Santiago finds with the Reds

PLANT CITY, Fla. — Cincinnati Reds signed free agent pitcher Santiago to a one-year contract Monday, ending a tainty for one of the league's best defenses.

Santiago, 30, was a free agent working out of Miami, Fla., waiting for a contract. He made $3.8 million with Florida and the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1994.

General manager Dave Miley said Santiago's decision to join the Reds was a "win-win" for both parties.

Bilbao repeats as Big Ten pitcher of the week
For the second consecutive week, Iowa freshman Debbie Bilbao brought home Big Ten Pitcher of the Week honors.

After tossing a 14-inning shutout against Michigan to help earn the honor two weekends ago, Bilbao did one better, pitching a no-hitter against Penn State on Sunday.

For the week, Bilbao went 2-0, allowing one run on two hits. Hers was the first Hawkeye no-hitter in two years.

"It's quite an honor," Bilbao said. "Our team played very well. I'd like to attribute this honor to them. The defense just played awesome."

Coach Gayle Blevins agreed Bilbao was not at her best this weekend, but the defense helped her to the honor.

"This is really a team award," Blevins said. "Even when a pitcher is not at her best statistically, as with Debbie this past weekend, the team can make outstanding defensive plays and keep the pitcher in a good spot."

The No. 24 Hawkeyes play a doubleheader at Minnesota Wednesday.

Gretzky reaches another milestone

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Wayne Gretzky became the first player in NHL history to record 2,500 career points when he set up a power-play goal by Rob Blake on Monday night.

Gretzky is the league's all-time leader with 813 goals, 1,687 assists and 10 scoring titles. The 16-year veteran has 650 more points than runner-up Gordie Howe, who ended his Hall of Fame career in 1980 after 26 NHL seasons.

On the historic point, the Los Angeles Kings superstar passed from the sideboards to Blake at the point. Blake's slap shot hit Flames goaltender Rick Tabaracci in the chest and trickled in at 11:01 of the first period.

Santiago finds a home with the Reds

PLANT CITY, Fla. (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds signed Benito Santiago to a one-year contract Monday, ending weeks of uncertainty for one of the major leagues' best defensive catchers. Santiago, 30, was one of the free agents working out in Homestead, Fla., waiting for an offer. He made $3.8 million last year with Florida and led National League catchers in assists.

General manager Jim Bowden said Santiago's deal is comparable to the one that Tony Fernandez received last year. Fernandez, unable to get a big contract to play shortstop for any team, agreed to play third base for the Reds for a $500,000 base salary and appearance incentives.

The Reds, considered favorite in the NL Central, had planned to use Eddie Taubensee and Damon Berryhill behind the plate.

Santiago played two years for Florida, hitting .230 with 13 homers and 50 RBIs in 1993 and .273 with 11 homers and 41 RBIs last year in 101 games. He became a free agent after reportedly turning down a $200,000 offer.

Bulls douse the Heat, 98-93

Associated Press
Michael Jordan drives to the basket against Miami Heat forward Billy Owens during the first half in Miami Monday.

Associated Press

MIAMI — Even when the other team had the ball, Michael Jordan dominated the game. Jordan's smothering defense cooled off Glen Rice and helped the Chicago Bulls beat the Miami Heat 98-93 Monday night.

As a bonus, Jordan scored 31 points, including four free throws in the final minute.

Rice managed just 12 points after scoring a franchise-record 56 Saturday against Orlando. Jordan guarded him most of the game.

"It was like a blanket," Rice said. "He didn't give me anything easy. It was one of the toughest nights I've had trying to get open."

Rice was held scoreless for the first 28 minutes. He hit only two of his first 11 shots and finished 6-for-18.

"I wasn't going to leave him," said Jordan, a six-time member of the NBA All-Defensive first team.

"If he was going to get a shot off, I was going to be in his face."

Jordan said he was well aware of Rice's performance against Orlando. It surpassed Jordan's 55-point total against New York as the NBA high this season.

"He's the energizing factor on their team," Jordan said. "Rice is the guy who can put up the big numbers."

The game was late in the fourth quarter when Boston completed a 98-96 victory over New Jersey, eliminating Miami from the playoff race. The Heat have failed to make the playoffs five times in their seven seasons.

"We're playing for pride now," Rice said.

"It was like a blanket. He didn't give me anything easy. It was one of the toughest nights I've had trying to get open."

The Bulls earned their fourth consecutive victory and their second in as many days.

Rookie Khalid Reeves scored a season-high 27 points for Miami. But Chicago outscored the Heat 8-0 in the final 2:27.

Jordan hit two free throws with 40 seconds left to give Chicago a 95-93 lead.

Reeves drove into the lane and missed with 24 seconds left, and Chicago's Steve Kerr hit one of two free throws to make it 96-93. Miami's Brad Lohaus missed a 3-point attempt, and Jordan hit two free throws to clinch the win.

Heat coach Alvin Gentry was angry about his team's execution following a timeout in the final minute.

"We did a lousy job executing one of those plays, and it cost us the game," Gentry said. "We left the huddle and people got into the wrong spots. I don't understand."

The Bulls improved to 11-3 since Jordan's return from retirement a month ago. With Jordan, Chicago is 21-1 against Miami.

Jordan, shooting just .406 this season, hit nine of 21 shots and made 13 of 16 free throws.

ORLANDO, Fla. — Orlando claimed the Atlantic Division title as well as the top seeding in the Eastern Conference playoffs with a 111-100 victory over Washington on Monday night.

Shaquille O'Neal had 34 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots as the Magic survived a fourth-quarter rally to improve to 38-2 at Orlando Arena and assure itself the homecourt advantage through the conference finals.

The victory was only the second in the last six games for Orlando as it had lost 14 of its

Going to bat for the Cubs

Watch out Mickey, here come the Cubs. For the first time since 1908, the Chicago Cubs are going to Disney World.

Although some people believe that the Cubs will forever be the laughing stock of the National League, someone obviously forgot to tell that to a group of guys spending their spring down in Arizona — the Cubs.

The Cubbies are 5-0 in spring training and have a team batting average higher than the Cardinals' exhibition winning percentage.

Do you know what that means?

If there were another strike right now, and the season was never played, the Cubs would be named World Series Champions by default. I think.

It sure does bring back the memories of Tinkers effortlessly fielded the pea and gently flipped it to Evers, who gracefully tossed into the outstretched mitt of Chance.

Actually, I have no idea who

Boston Marathon

Cosmas Ndeti (1) of Kenya, Kim Jae-Ryong (2) of South Korea, and Paul Yego, of Kenya, split through two wheelchair competitors in the hills of Newton, Mass., during the 99th running of the Boston Marathon Monday. Ndeti won the men's race for the third straight year while Uta Pippig captured the women's title for the second year in a row — the first time in Boston Marathon history that both defending champions won. There also was a repeat winner in the women's wheelchair race, with Jean Driscoll, of Champaign Ill., winning for the sixth straight time. Ndeti ran away from Kenyan countryman Moses Tanui over the final two miles to finish the course in 2 hours, 9 minutes, 22 seconds. Franz Nietlispach, from Rheinfelden, Switzerland, won the men's wheelchair race.

IOWA BASEBALL

Hawkeyes aim to regroup at home

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Coming off its second consecutive losing weekend, the Iowa baseball team will look to regroup for four non-conference games this week, beginning with a doubleheader today against Grand View.

The Hawkeyes (19-14, 7-9) then hit the road for games against Northern Iowa and Iowa State later this week.

Grandview comes into Iowa City at 6-20 all-time versus the Hawkeyes, but took last season's contest 7-6. This will be the first of two doubleheaders between Iowa and the Vikings, with the second scheduled for April 25.

Today's first pitch is scheduled for 1 p.m.

The meeting with UNI is the first of the year for the Hawkeyes. The two teams were originally supposed to meet back on April 12, but rain forced a cancellation.

The Panthers (16-16) will throw a balanced hitting attack at Iowa, but are more or less a one-man gang. UNI third baseman Tom Owen has been a terror on the diamond this year, sporting a batting average over .410.

He leads the Panthers in batting average, homers, RBI, runs, doubles, triples and walks; all while driving in over 22 percent of his teams' runs.

On Thursday Iowa coach Duane Banks' squad packs up the bus again and heads to Des Moines. The Cyclones will be looking to avenge an embarrassing 7-2 loss to Iowa last Thursday at Iowa Field.

In the teams' last meeting, Iowa State went through seven pitchers, while Bob Holst, Brent Glendinning and Kurt Belger combined for the Hawkeyes.

Holst and Glendinning both allowed one run over four innings, striking out a combined six on seven Cyclone hits.

Iowa State will be looking to improve on a 14-14 record. Thursday's meeting, being held at a neutral site, will be the second of three games between the intrastate rivals. Over the course of Iowa-Iowa State baseball history, the teams have a 54-54 overall series record.

The final game will be played April 27 in Ames.

Draft Capsules

A five-day look at the draft needs and possible first-round picks of the 30 NFL teams for Sunday's 1995 selection meeting.

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Team-by-team capsules for the 1995 NFL draft, in the order they will pick:

7, Tampa Bay (6-10)

1994 DRAFT: They still think Trent Dilfer is the quarterback of the future and they actually got a good one at No. 2, with running back Erriett Rhett.

NEEDS: Defensive and offensive linemen. Defensive backs.

FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Alvin Harper, WR, was one of the big acquisitions of the year, but the Buccaneers may have overpaid for a guy who has yet to prove he can be a lead receiver. The rest of their signings were complimentary players like punter Reggie Roby.

LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: They came closer than any time in the last 12 years to avoiding 10 losses — the 10th came in their last game. They also have new ownership. Malcolm Glazer and his sons, although they're keeping Sam Wyche and the other football people for now. May finally be headed up a bit, particularly if Dilfer develops.

LIKELY FIRST PICK: Ellis; Stringer; Derrick Alexander, DE, Florida State; Mike Mamula, DE-LB, Boston College; Westbrook; Stokes.

8, Seattle (6-10)

1994 DRAFT: Sam Adams, the No. 1, showed potential but was hurt, and guard Kevin Mawae became a starter.

NEEDS: Receivers, defensive backs.

FREE AGENT: Quarterback John Freisz, much traveled, is good insurance for Rick Mirer.

LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Much better now that Ken Behring has turned over the team to son David and Dennis Erickson is the head coach. They also have their quarterback in place in Mirer, assuming they can re-sign him.

LIKELY FIRST PICK: Stokes; Westbrook; Mamula; Ellis; Alexander; Stringer; Joey Gallowsay, WR, Ohio State.

9, New York Jets (6-10)

1994 DRAFT: Aaron Glenn, CB, was an instant starter and an instant success and Ryan Yarbrough, WR, came on at the end of the year. Quarterback Glen Foley, the last pick, hardly played, but is No. 2 on the depth chart and considered a comer.

NEEDS: Defensive linemen, defensive backs, offensive linemen.

FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Lost more than they gained, although they got another backup quarterback in Bobby Brister and an all-purpose back in Dexter Carter.

LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Who knows? The Jets keep spinning their wheels, first going old (Ronnie Lott, Boomer Esiason, Art Monk) and now going young under new coach Rich Kotite. A team that never seems to know quite what it wants to do and keeps finishing between 8-8 and 6-10.

LIKELY FIRST PICK: Stringer; Gallowsay; Stokes; Alexander; Reuben Brown, G, Pitt; Wheatley; McNair.

10, Cleveland (11-5)

1994 DRAFT: Both Antonio Langham, CB, and Derrick

Umps lock horns with owners and managers

Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

Arguing with the umpires is nothing new to baseball.

It just seems that everybody is doing it a little more this spring, either on the field with replacements or at the bargaining table with the locked-out regulars.

Monday brought more of both. But it also brought a baseball rarity — an unassisted triple play by Randy Velarde of the Yankees. Cal Ripken was one of many raising his voice at a man in blue. He was called out on strikes three times and had words with replacement plate umpire Jim Paylor in Baltimore's 11-2 victory over Boston. Other players have complained in the past week about inconsistent strike zones.

Kansas City manager Bob Boone was on the field for at least five minutes arguing a call, and Red Sox manager Kevin Kennedy, who complained Saturday that the replacements were instigating arguments, got into a shouting match with the same umpire Ripken did.

In the Cubs-Rockies game, a line drive by Rich Wilkins in the first inning hit first-base umpire Terry Bovey in the upper thigh. Bovey ruled it foul before crumpling to the ground, then limped off the field and did not return.

Meanwhile, the rhetoric stayed harsh in the ongoing dispute between the locked-out umpires and management. Umpires made a new contract proposal Monday, but the owners' negotiator said he thought there was little chance for a deal by opening day April 25.

Umpires, who make from $60,000 to $175,000 per season, asked for a 40 percent raise over four years, down from 53 percent in their previous proposal and 60 percent in their initial plan.

"While he did make a new offer, it is not significantly enough lower to give me encouragement that we can make a deal in the near future," said Robert Kheel, the management lawyer who negotiates on behalf of both leagues.

"Forty percent is not something we can make a deal around."

While that dispute endures, exhibition games continue to be called by replacement umpires. Boone felt he caught one in a blatant error Monday.

His argument came after Deion Sanders of the Reds ran into the ball as he headed to first base on a full-count wild pitch. Boone went back and forth between first base umpire Bob Jones and home plate ump Bill Davis, drawing out the argument for several minutes. He relented only after going nose-to-nose with Jones.

RIK SMITS

Big man carries Pacers to playoffs

Hank Lowenkron
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Rik Smits is motoring toward his best NBA season, and the Indiana Pacers have hitched a ride.

The 7-foot-4 center already has more points and rebounds than in any of the six previous seasons since Indiana made the Dutch native the second overall pick in the 1988 draft behind Danny Manning.

Smits, whose best average was 15.7 points last season, is averaging 18.1 points. He's shooting 53 percent and has scored 20 or more points 28 times. He has 23 double-doubles.

"I think one reason for my success this year is the officials are starting to give me some respect, understanding my abilities," Smits said. "In my early seasons, I often got into foul trouble."

His performance has helped produce Indiana's first 50-win season since 1972-73, when the Pacers still played in the ABA.

"To win 50 for this franchise, some people take that for granted, but it's been quite a while," said Indiana coach Larry Brown, who also has the Pacers on the verge of winning their first NBA divisional title.

With three games to play, the Pacers began the week needing any combination of two Indiana victories or Hornets' losses to clinch the Central Division.

"Rik has become such a threat, it's amazing to me," said Brown, who has seen Smits average 19.8 points in his last nine games.

Smits' 577 rebounds tops his previous career-high of 512 in his second season.

He has 1,358 points, topping the previous career-high of 1,271 which he also achieved in his second NBA campaign.

376-YARD RECORD BREAKER

Davies' drive takes flight

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia International Airport closed one of three runways for 30 minutes Monday afternoon to allow LPGA star Laura Davies to set a world record for the longest drive by a woman.

Davies hit a drive 376 yards to break her mark of 341 yards set in Hawaii in 1988.

Davies hit 10 shots off a grass tee adjacent to the 5,460-yard long runway in the record attempt.

Davies' average of 269.1 yards per drive is the highest of any golfer on the LPGA Tour this season.

The men's record of 489 yards was set several years ago by former Boston Red Sox slugger Jim Rice.

COMPANY OFFERS PECULIAR FILM

'DeMarco' delivers farcical tale of love

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Charming, wistful and relatively plotless, "Don Juan DeMarco" stands out as an extremely odd release for a major American studio, even one as quirky as New Line Cinema. Aside from the conventional celebrity casting, "DeMarco" looks more like a French art film than anything else.

Most surprisingly, "DeMarco" contains very little conflict. It starts on a mild, pleasant note as a young man in a mask and cape gently seduces a strange woman in a restaurant. There's a brief moment of anxiety as the masked stranger considers suicide over his single failed romance. But in comes rotund clinical psychiatrist John Mickle (Marlon Brando of "The Godfather" fame) to save the day with a few words, and all is well again.

The masked mystery, played by Johnny Depp ("What's Eating Gilbert Grape"), calls himself Don Juan DeMarco and claims to be the legendary lover Don Juan. He's had more than 1,000 women, he says, but only one really matters and she's rejected him. Mickle is less than two weeks from retirement, but he finds DeMarco's fantasies so engaging that he ignores regular treatment procedures. Instead of trying to break down DeMarco's delusions as other doctors advise him to do, he sits back and encourages DeMarco to take charge of their sessions. And from the moment DeMarco opens his mouth, the film plunges into a lush and enticing world of handsome men, gorgeous women, exotic locales and other basic staples of classic romance.

There's a vague sense of conflict to the film, in that Mickle has been given 10 days to cure the young man or have him committed to an institution. But screenwriter and first-time director Jeremy Leven keeps his antagonists at arm's length, concentrating instead on the mild, amiable relationship between DeMarco and Mickle and the consequences of their friendship. Mickle begins to fall in love with his wife (Faye Dunaway, "Network") all over again. He can't quite take DeMarco at his word, but he also doesn't want to dismiss such wondrous fantasies. So all three characters spurn reality and drift blithely along toward a quiet, unassuming conclusion.

As a result, "DeMarco" contains almost no sense of pressure or power. It mostly floats along in an airy breeze of romanticized relationships and glowingly memorable encounters.

Leven builds a wondrously idyllic world of his own, offers it to his audience and even carefully shows them how to integrate it with their own lives. It's not hard to pretend that he made the film as a philanthropic gesture to the human race.

As a film, "Don Juan DeMarco" closely resembles a skein of cotton candy. There's no solidity or substance to the fluffy, bright exterior, and some people may even find it cloying and unsatisfying. For those with the specialized tastes to appreciate it, however — for anyone with a serious appetite for something sweet and lightweight — it fits the bill like nothing else available.

GRITTY REALITY SERVED UP

'L.627' cuts to the chase filming police

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

In a shooting diary French director Bertrand Tavernier kept while making "L.627," his unflinchingly realistic look at a police narcotics squad, he describes the hours he spent with his cast of gifted actors as a "rehearsal of the mundane."

Tavernier ran his cast of "cops" through days of filling out reports, tapping away at triplicate carbon utter objectivity. The film centers around Lucien "Lulu" Marguet (Didier Bezace), a likable narcotics cop surrounded not only by drug dealers and addicts, but by the villainy of red tape and bureaucracy. Bossed around by hotheaded superiors who are more concerned with filling arrest quotas and pulling practical jokes on their fellow workers than with fighting crime, Lulu's struggle in "L.627" is one of hypocrisy as well as of righteousness.

The film, named after a clause in the French Code of Public Health, is as unblinking in its realistic portrayal of cops who bust drug offenders as it is in portraying the pushers themselves. Accused by both the political left and right in France of being racist in its depiction of crime and the people who fight it, "L.627" is so unflinching that it can't be rightly accused of anything except complete and Racial and social tensions are raised by the fact that most of the drug offenders in the film are either African or Middle Eastern, and the bald fact of HIV infection among drug users is treated as the frightening truth that it is. Tavernier and co-writer Michel Alexandre, an ex-cop himself, observed that the racial situations in the film are merely an extension of the reality they saw in years spent studying and working with law enforcement.

Far from canonizing or exalting their subjects and their attitudes, Tavernier and Alexandre simply reveal a truth behind the historic glorification of cops in the cinema. "L.627" is short on action sequences and shoot-outs; but what it lacks in these areas, it more than makes up for with a kind of naked gaze straight into the heart of the matter. In this sense, "L.627" stands as a subversion of the false glory that is sometimes heaped upon law enforcement by a media too hungry for success to acknowledge failure.

"L.627" will be shown tonight at the Bijou at 7.

New Music Revue

To Bring You My Love
PJ Harvey

Polly Jean Harvey's dance card is filled with the kind of men mothers warn their daughters to avoid. Wandering through the storybook songs of Harvey's fourth CD, To Bring You My Love, are guys who like to knock a gal up and leave her stranded in the deep desert to die of unrequited love.

Harvey is more of a willing participant in her own demise than a victim, though, and her brand of love could never be mistaken for the saccharin-sweet Hallmark card kind. The Polly Jean Holy Roller Revival begins with the snarly, ecclesiastical title track and ends with Harvey reigning over a roomful of sweaty, spent parishioners.

"How long must I suffer / Dear God I've served my time / This love becomes my torture / this love my only crime," she asks in "Send His Love to Me," a song that rides on a swelling Hammond organ and staccato guitar.

Performing furious and distorted tracks like "Long Snake Moan" and "Meet, Ze Monsta," Harvey proves she hasn't forgotten how to be loud since 1993's Rid Of Me. Her voice finds new ways to pick at scars on Love as it catapults from fakey shrieks on "The Dancer" to a barely audible, ominous drone on "I Think I'm a Mother."

Matched up with some production wizardry, John Parish's guitar and drums, and the organ and bass of Mick Harvey, Harvey has created a lush sort of Polly's parables with To Bring You My Love. Her wry moral to the story told in this potent collection of songs seems like motherly advice: Although it's great fun to play with the boys for a while, your libido always gets you in the end.
