Tarot reader deals with a mysterious deck

Personalties

Present/Retirement

The Daily Iowan, in its search for an editor in chief, has added 12 tarot cards — one for each letter of the alphabet. The editor in chief is responsible for the overall direction of the newspaper.

Iowa City, Iowa

For 20 years, Custodee Maloney has been helping people gain insight into their lives and future by reading tarot cards. She will be leaving the Daily Iowan to pursue a career in the music industry.

She said she does not know all of the answers to the clients’ questions, but she helps guide them to their own solutions.

“I think of myself as a medium,” she said. “I try to help people with their questions, but I don’t think of myself as a psychic.”

Each card has its own unique meaning, and Maloney is able to combine them to give a reading.

“Each card has a separate meaning. You should see all of the cards together to get the full meaning,” she said.

Some clients have been attending Maloney’s services for years.

“The readings help people get in touch with themselves,” she said.

“When you look at the cards, you have an idea of what’s best for them.”

Maloney’s clients are a diverse group, ranging from high school students to business professionals.

“People come in with all types of questions,” she said. “They can ask about love, career, or just want to know if something will happen in the future.”

Maloney’s clientele is a mix of people who are new to the tarot and those who have been reading for years.

“I don’t always have the answers,” she said. “But I can help them look at the cards and see what’s best for them.”

She said she enjoys helping people find answers.

“I love helping people,” she said. “It’s a privilege to be able to help people find answers.”

Maloney said she enjoys being a tarot reader.

“I’ve been asked every possible question,” she said. “But I enjoy being able to help people.”

Maloney said she enjoys the daily routine of reading tarot cards.

“I like the daily routine,” she said. “It’s a nice way to start the day.”

Maloney said she will miss the Daily Iowan.

“I will miss the Daily Iowan,” she said. “It’s been a great place to work.”

Maloney said she is looking forward to her new career in the music industry.

“It’s been a dream of mine to be a musician,” she said. “I’m excited to pursue that dream.”

Maloney said she is looking forward to working with new people in her new career.

“I’m excited to meet new people,” she said. “It’s a different world.”

Maloney said she is looking forward to the new challenges.

Women turn to truck driving

Sandra Studebaker is trading in her travel thermometer and stethoscope for the reins of a 12-ton, 18-wheeler.

Studebaker is one of four women enrolled in the monthlong program to become drivers of Iowan Iowa University. The program is sponsored by the Department of Transportation and the Iowa Trucking Assn.

Test drives were held in response to the number of men drivers, more than 90 percent, quitting their jobs and leaving the road.

“Women are being given the opportunity to have a career,” said Sandra Steckroth, program director.

Women drivers are beginning to register in the nation’s work force, mainly due to an increase in the number of women who are making truck driving a profession.

“Women are in no more danger than men are,” Steckroth said. “You show the showers and other facilities are being installed. We haven’t had any safety problems.”

Women truckers at Heartland Express are neatly maintaining the appearance that women are hard-hitters in the field of trucking.

One (female) owner and one (male) company operator have been elected as drivers of the month out of 1,200 drivers.” Steckroth said. “None of our best drivers are women.”

Studebaker navigates her 18-wheeler singing program. Studebaker is one of four women tough followed Community College's track program, currently rivaled in the monthlong program.

It’s a four-hour-long sensational story of the human brain and mind. It’s the fascinating mind of Dr. Antonio Damasio, whose story will be featured in a series of scientific papers and has been cited in numerous publications.

“From the Human Quest,” which aired from 4 to 6 last night, is a documentary series on the human brain and mind, inspired by the fascinating mind of Dr. Antonio Damasio, who has been a leading name in neurology for the past 20 years.

The series, which aired in the monthlong program, will be shown on the Social Science Channel, which is being shown in the Social Science Center.

By now, you may have been wondering what makes people human. In addition to the fascinating mind of Dr. Antonio Damasio, the program features Nobel Peace Prize-winner, Prof. Peter Handel, who has been a leading name in neurology for the past 20 years.

“For those programs, we will be doing sessions on science and the brain,” Damasio said. “We will be looking into the fascinating mind of Dr. Antonio Damasio, who has been the leading name in neurology for the past 20 years.”

Televised on the Social Science Channel, the program’s first installment, “The Human Quest,” aired from 4 to 6 last night.

Women’s health ignored

The bald, overweight middle-aged male almost jumps out of the television screen as he gasps and then slumps to the floor with his arms around his chest. He’s told the family that he is having a heart attack — middle-aged men falling over with chest pain. Men do have heart attacks on average 10 years earlier than women, but there is a general misconception that women are less likely to develop heart disease in a middle-aged female.

Women’s misconceptions are over breast cancer when, in fact, breast heart disease is the No. 1 killer of women over all former age groups. Women are often left in the dark about which health risks are destined to them. They are 13 times more likely to die of heart disease than the male. The problem is that — women don’t die of heart disease — which is seven times more deadly.

Even though heart disease is the No. 1 killer of men, one year after a heart attack, 50 percent of women die compared to 31 percent of men.

Women’s misconceptions are fueled by what the medical profession gives emphasis. Women are often taught how to do the most basic tests given people. The exercise treadmill test is one of the most basic tests given people. The exercise treadmill test is one of the most basic tests given people. The exercise treadmill test is one of the most basic tests given people. The exercise treadmill test is one of the most basic tests given people.

Women have been left uninformed for too long and right now — the medical profession is being held to the same standard the medical profession is being held to the same standard the medical profession is being held to the same standard the medical profession is being held to the same standard.

In the past, doctors often shrugged off women’s complaints of physical pain. However, with the new emphasis on women’s health care, greater attention is being paid to addressing the needs of women.

Carmen Nobel (11) of Beverly, Ken Hayne (10 of South Boston, and Paul Ngo, of Kees, split through two wheelchair competitors in the Boston Marathon, Monday. The 96th running of the Boston Marathon Monday. Nobel was the men's title for the third straight year while Ngo capped the women's title for the second year in a row — the first time in Boston Marathon history that both defending champions won. There was also another repeat performance in the woman's wheelchair race, with Joan DeRose, of Champagne, IL, winning for the third straight time. Nobel ran away from former Douglas, of Champagne, on the final two miles to finish in 2 hours, 18 minutes, 20 seconds. From Sheffield, 1980, won the men's wheelchair race.

Bulls douse the Heat, 98-93

MIAMI — Even when the other team had the ball, Michael Jordan dominated the game. Jordan's thundering defensive contest off Glen Rice and helped the Chicago Bulls beat the Miami Heat 98-93 on Monday night. Jordan grabbed 16 rebounds, scored 22 points during a franchise-record 128 seconds against Orlando, and guarded most of the heat's stars.

"It was like a shackle," Rice said, "He didn't give me anything easy. It was one of the toughest nights I've had to try to get open.

Glenn Rice, Miami Heat guard on Michael Jordan.

The Bulls earned their fourth consecutive victory and their mood as many as 29 points for Miami. But Chicago centered the Bulls 48-60, had four players score in double digits, and kept Jordan in a good spot.

"It's the emerging threat on their team," Jordan said. "I'm the guy who put up the numbers.

The game was late in the fourth quarter when Boston completed a 96-98 victory over New York, clinching Miami's first playoff berth in 11 years. The Bulls' defense held the Knicks to 108 points in this season's seven meetings.

"It was like a shackle," Rice said, "He didn't give me anything easy. It was one of the toughest nights I've had to try to get open.

Glenn Rice, Miami Heat guard on Michael Jordan.

The Bulls earned their fourth consecutive victory and their mood as many as 29 points for Miami. But Chicago centered the Bulls 48-60, had four players score in double digits, and kept Jordan in a good spot. Jordan was 9-of-18 from the floor, 2-of-4 from the line, and finished 11-11.

"I wasn't going to leave him," said Jordan, a four-time NBA Defensive Player of the Year.

"He was going to get to the basket, so I was going to his back. Jordan and he was well aware of Rice's performance against Orlando. "I don't want to talk too much about that.

The Cubs have 10 games left after these three people see, but I have been through the different sights of the '83 spending spree and I still don't know if this non-sight will be a good one for the Cubs. I think the young players who played in the Cubs' High-A ball camp last weekend are a great sight, but I'm not sure if they will be the sight that we need.

TONIGHT'S GAME

The Cubs and the Philadelphia Phillies are set to play tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Wrigley Field. The Cubs are currently in the National League Wild Card race and need to win both games against the Phillies to have a chance at making the playoffs.

The Cubs' starting pitcher tonight will be Cole Hamels, who has a record of 12-10 with a 3.98 ERA. The Phillies' starting pitcher will be Cole Hamels, who has a record of 10-11 with a 4.02 ERA.

The Cubs are hoping to get their offense going and score more runs tonight. They have scored an average of 4.5 runs per game this season, while the Phillies have scored an average of 4.8 runs per game.

The Cubs' defense has been solid this season, with a fielding percentage of .986. The Phillies' defense has been less consistent, with a fielding percentage of .979.

The Cubs have a slight edge in the pitching battle, with a staff ERA of 3.66 compared to the Phillies' 4.02. However, the Phillies have a strong bullpen, with a save percentage of 97.8.

In the most recent meeting between the two teams on July 30, the Cubs won 4-1 at Wrigley Field. The Cubs are hoping to repeat that success tonight.

The weather forecast for tonight's game is clear with temperatures in the low 70s. The wind is expected to be calm, with a speed of 5 mph.

The Cubs are 23-21 at Wrigley Field this season, while the Phillies are 25-19 on the road. The Cubs have a 2-3 record against the Phillies this season.

The game will be broadcast on ESPN with play-by-play commentary from Joe Buck and color commentary from Terry Collins. The game can also be streamed on ESPN+.

The Cubs need to win both games against the Phillies to have a chance at making the playoffs. They have a chance to prove to the fans and the organization that they are a stronger team than they have shown so far this season.

The Cubs have been in the National League West Wild Card race all season, with a current record of 73-82. They are currently sitting in the second wild card spot, just 3.5 games behind the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cubs have a record of 12-10 against the Phillies this season, with a split series in Philadelphia last week. The Cubs need to win both games tonight to have a chance at making the playoffs.

The Cubs' pitching has been solid this season, with a staff ERA of 3.66. They have a shutout against the Phillies on July 30, where they held the Phillies to just 1 run.

The Cubs' offense has struggled at times this season, with a batting average of .252. However, they have been hitting well lately, with a batting average of .274 in their last 10 games.

The Cubs need to win both games against the Phillies to have a chance at making the playoffs. They have a chance to prove to the fans and the organization that they are a stronger team than they have shown so far this season.
Davies' drive takes flight

Associated Press

Philadelphia - Philadelphia International Airport closed one of its runways for two minutes Monday afternoon to allow LAPD star Laura Davies to get the world record for the longest drive for women this season. She hit a 355-yard shot in her final shot of the Women's British Open at Turnberry in July. Davies hit her shot off a grassy area to the left of the fairway and her 355-yard drive was the longest by a woman this season. Her drive is believed to be the longest ever driven by a woman in a professional tournament.
