Why do people in our age scoff at a man whose harmony with the cycles of time was too obvious to deny?

"Nostradamus" offers an incongruously optimistic answer to these questions; the film's starry-eyed ending doesn't seem to jibe with the horrific visions it constructs. But whether this is right or not, the fact remains ... if someone out there doesn't ask the questions, the answers will never be known.

Director slaves to make RiverFest a success

Interviews with KRUI and KCRG are also on his agenda, and Jansen said he hopes to use those opportunities to inform more students about

Standing among the cables, trucks and frames for the CBS College Tour display, Jansen explains why he wanted to become so involved. "It's a good way to keep busy, and meeting new people makes it fun. I wanted to see if Government, which allocated you can actually pull off something like this - it's going to be great!"

"I'm kind of the intermediate between the council and student government," he said. "It's more than just a business to me, though; it's about the fun."

Jansen said throughout most of the year, he puts in about 10 hours per week. In the past few weeks, however, he has had to put in 10hour days, including some week-

The committee is given a lot of responsibility in planning events. Many ideas are brought to the RiverFest committee by other UI departments, such as the UI Lecture Committee, and the members are responsible for ensuring that everything is coordinated.

"We are given a lot of discretion," Jansen said. "We tell student government what we're planning to do, and they are very willing to help out and assist any way they can."

Jansen hasn't had to handle any large-scale problems as director, but said it's important to deal with the little things as they come along.

This year, more food has been sold, so the city health inspector has stopped by every day. Although no problems have arisen, Jansen said this is just one more thing that forces him to keep on his toes.

"There's always problems when you're planning large events," he said. "That's the fun of it. You get to be kind of a diplomat."

Jansen said he was chosen over four other candidates for the job based on his motivation toward the event and his leadership experience. He has served as president of Sigma Nu fraternity and on the UI Interfraternity Council as scholarship, leadership and service director. Jansen has been involved with the RiverFest committee for three years.

Jansen's experience has helped him to organize and run the festival very efficiently, said RiverFest public relations officer and UI junior essica Winkler.

"He's given everyone a chance to do their own thing," Winkler said. "He's given us a lot of room to do our thing ourselves. He's also very good

"The Anarchist's Cookbook" is one bomb-making instruction book that can be checked out at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. It gives instructions on how to make anything from the classic bubbling volcano with baking soda and vinegar to explosives using fertilizer and diesel fuel.

"The Terrorist's Handbook" and the "Poor Man's James Bond" are both sold at Iowa City stores and feature ways to make bombs and other destructive devices.

Moon Mystique, 114-1/2 E. College St., sells a variety of so-called "underground" books. Most people who buy the books purchase them out of interest and curiosity, not with an intent to harm, store manager Michelle Beckwar said. The store is sold out of "The Anarchist's Cookbook" now, but Beckwar said she sells about one of the books

"The majority of people I've seen are high-school or college kids," she said. "They buy it, read it once and put it on their shelves, not sit at home working on (a bomb)."

A 1988 graduate of the UI Writers' Workshop, Grealy returned to the UI Monday for three days of book promotion and guest teaching.

In her memoir "Autobiography of a Face," Grealy describes the daily trials she endured to overcome the barriers of beauty. Diagnosed with Ewing Sarcoma at age 5, Grealy faced 2 1/2 years of chemotherapy, which greatly disfigured her jaw line.

"I've spent five years of my life being treated for cancer," Grealy said. "But since then. I've spent my life being treated for nothing other than looking different from everyone else. It was the pain from that, from feeling ugly, that I'd always viewed as the great tragedy in my life. The fact that I had cancer seemed minor in compar-

Over the next 20 years, she underwent more than 30 surgical procedures to reconstruct her jaw.

"I felt alien most of the time," Grealy said. "Not alienated, which is characterized by a feeling of being turned away or shunned by that which is familiar, but alien - completely other than what I found around me."

As painful as this time was for Gre-

"Having given up all desire to feel like everyone else, I was free in what could only be described as spiritual sense," she said. "I got through my most alone moments by characterizing myself as some kind of pilgrim on a journey toward something other people didn't know existed, could not even know existed, could not ever know they should be seeking."

On the book tour for the last eight months, she has been showered with sob stories, phone calls and letters from people claiming that her story of living ugly in a beautiful world inspired them.

Denouncing the expectations of her following, Grealy said she should not be seen as a martyr.

"I just try to ignore them," she said. I could give a shit about helping people. I learned I don't have to respond people's ideas of me."

Before her memoir is read as "herstory," it should be considered as an artistic literary piece.

A new nepotism policy was approved, while a plan to prevent conflicts of interest was discussed at a UI Faculty Senate meeting Tuesday.

Changes to the nepotism plan, which refers to relationships among faculty and staff members, were approved unanimously by the Senate. The old plan refers specifically to blood relationships or relationship by marriage. The new plan defines other personal and business relationships as areas which might cause conflicts within a department or other areas of Eight-year-old Marci Chavez, who has leukemia, looked tired as she pressed a cookie cutter shaped like a dog biscuit into brown dough, but her spirits brightened when she talked about all the animals at her home in Chadwick, Ill.

The children were making and baking dog biscuits that will be prizes for pooches in the "Leash on Life" dog walk, which will be held in May. The walk is a fund-raiser for the American Cancer Society.

Marci has been in and out of the hospital for the past two years. Her latest stint at UIHC is a last-ditch effort to try out a new type of chemotherapy that may increase her chances of survival. Recently, her family was told there was little else doctors could do for the little girl.

Marci's mother, Roni Chavez, said programs like Tuesday's baking session help her daughter through the difficult hospital stays.

"She was really looking forward to this activity," Roni Chavez said. "She looks forward to this type of thing, and she really enjoys it a lot.'

Her daughter is used to being around animals at the family's farm, Roni Chavez said. The biscuit-baking activity falls near the family's recent purchase of a dog for Marci.

Programs like the one Tuesday are part of UIHC's Child Life Program. Created in 1978, the daily program develops a variety of activities to help young patients get used to hospital stays, said child-life specialist Kathy Whiteside.

'We try to take some of the stress out of going to the hospital," Whiteside said. "We try to make kids more comfortable during treatments and procedures and make them look forward to coming back to the hospital for subsequent treatment."

Eight-year-old Kira Carstensen also was enjoying Tuesday's baking session. After being in remission for six years, Kira relapsed back into leukemia last week.

She said it was fun to get dirty in the dough, which was made of flour, powdered milk, eggs and margarine.

Chlamydia and genital warts are the most common STDs.

Follett said about one to 10 new patients are diagnosed with genital erpes each month at Student Health

Stewart said there is a blood test to diagnose the infection, but it does not always detect it. The only sure way to check for the virus is when the blisters caused by the disease are present.

You really should avoid contact during that time," she said. "Even if there is minor contact, it can spread."

There is a medication, called acyclovir, to help prevent the severity, length and number of outbreaks, but nothing has been developed to cure the virus, Stewart said.

The Daily Iowan The much-discussed ordinance that eases regulations on sidewalk cafés for downtown restaurants passed first consideration at Tuesday night's Iowa City City Council meeting by a 5-2 vote.

The council is required to hold two more votes on the ordinance before it's officially enacted. The votes will be held at the council's next two meetings. A resolution to decide the fees for the sidewalk cafés also will be voted on at the same time as the third vote.

COUNCIL TO VOTE 2 MORE TIMES

The ordinance, which will allow restaurant owners to set up outdoor tables in front of their buildings, was first proposed in February to reduce the restrictive rules of the current ordinance and allow the sale of alcohol at the cafés.

Alcohol vending was one reason Councilor Ernie Lehman voted against the ordinance. Councilor Naomi Novick also voted against the measure.

"Although I enjoy eating outside as much as anyone, I won't be supporting this ordinance," Lehman said before the vote. "The only big difference I see between the previous ordinance is the serving of alcohol, and I don't think that's a good

The sunset clause - which will automatically repeal the ordinance after Nov. 1, 1997 - was also passed. The original amendment called for the repeal date to be Nov. 1, 1996, allowing the council to reevaluate the measure, but the majority of the council supported a later evaluation date.

"When people want to invest in outdoor equipment, especially when they have to go through design review, they want to buy good stuff," Throgmorton said. "If they only have one year until the ordinance expires, it will discourage people from doing what we really want to encourage them to

The council passed other amendments that require cafés to clean up litter, go through a design review and not use public trash cans. Businesses wishing to set up said they doubt whether business from buildings will disrupt the flow cafés also are required to notify

Banished teen-ager receives emergency lift to hospital

IUNEAU, Alaska (AP) - One of two Tlingit teen-agers banished to a remote island for holding up a pizza deliveryman was airlifted to a hospital with appendicitis, the Coast Guard said Tuesday.

Simon Roberts was picked up by a Coast Guard helicopter after he activated an emergency locator beacon Monday night, Coast Guard spokesman Edward Kander said.

Roberts was in stable condition Tuesday, Mount Edgecumbe Hospial spokesman Tom Hartrich said, refusing to comment further.

Roberts and Adrian Guthrie, both 18, were sentenced in September by a Klawock tribal court to 12 to 18 months alone in the wilderness as an alternative to crim-Inal sentencing by a Washington state judge.

The pair pleaded guilty in May to robbing and beating an Everett, Wash., deliveryman. The man suffered permanent eye and ear

French president-elect of France will acquire vintage wine with position

PARIS (AP) - When President Francois Mitterrand's successor assumes power next month, he will not only take over the sumptuous Elysees Palace, he will also inherit 15,000 bottles of the world's best

The palace's wine cellar, greatly expanded and computerized under Mitterrand's 14-year term, boasts some of the best vintages of France's finest wines, the newspaper InfoMatin said this week.

When Camille Devaine joined the palace as chief steward in 1984, he found the First Cellar in lessthan-worthy condition, he told Info-

"It had only 5,000 bottles," he said. "There had been staff cuts and there was only one typewriter."

After 10 years of building up the stock and modernizing its management with computers, Devaine has enough wine on hand to handle two or three state dinners, several smaller dinners honoring foreign leaders and intimate dinners in the palace's private apartments.

Today, the cellar boasts all five of the Premier Cru Bordeaux red wines, listed as the best of the best in the 1855 Bordeaux classification: Chateau Lafite-Rothschild (1961. 1966), Chateau Latour, Chateau Margaux, Chateau Mouton-Rothschild (all 1966) and Chateau Haut-Brion (eight vintages over the last 20

For extra-special occasions, Devaine has gone to extreme lengths, such as when he served Haut-Brion 1945 at a state dinner marking the 50th anniversary of the D-Day invasion last year.

Nuclear arms protesters slow delivery of waste

BONN, Germany (AP) - Police fired water cannons Tuesday and dragged away hundreds of nuclear weapons protesters trying to prevent a shipment of radioactive waste from reaching a storage site in northern Germany.

The reinforced truck carrying a 126-ton container of spent fuel rods inched its way to a storage facility in Gorleben surrounded by helmeted officers carrying shields. The 12-mile journey took five

Thousands of protesters formed human barricades along the route. As soon as police carried off protesters sitting in one spot, they regrouped at another.

The journey began Monday evening when the material left the nuclear plant at Philippsburg, near Karlsruhe in southern Germany. It was transported by train through four German states, arriving nearly 14 hours later in Dannenberg. There, the waste was reloaded onto the truck as police helicopters overed overhead. Outside the Dannenberg station, more than 200 protesters tried to block the train tracks with burning tires, hay and logs. Police used water cannons to disperse stone-throwers. About 25 protesters were arrested and 80 more detained.

About 7,600 police officers guarded the transport, and about 4,000 people took part in the

Sketches drawn up of suspects in Nebraska

Steve Kline Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. - Composite drawings were made of two suspicious men who were in an Omaha federal building, but people who saw the sketches disagreed Tuesday on whether they match the suspects in the Oklahoma City

One source who works in a federal building in downtown Omaha and spoke on the condition of anonymity told the AP the sketches are of two men who had been in the federal building the Friday before the blast. The source said they resembled Timothy McVeigh and a second suspect identified only as John Doe No. 2, who is still at large.

Another source, who also works in a federal building and spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the composites do not appear to resemble the two suspects.

Paul Orduna, acting agent in charge of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration office in Omaha, confirmed sketches were made. He referred questions about them to the U.S. attorney's

"I'm not sure of the sources of those drawings," Orduna said. U.S. Attorney Thomas Monaghan declined to comment on the report or whether someone suspicious had been reported in the Omaha federal building before the Oklahoma City bombing last Wednesday.

"All the questions regarding the Oklahoma City bombing need to be referred to Oklahoma City," Monaghan said.

The Omaha World-Herald reported Tuesday the sketches were made by the Omaha Police Department at the request of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The newspaper said in the Omaha sketches, a suspect who resembles McVeigh is shown wearing glasses and what appears to be a longhaired dark wig, and the sketch resembling John Doe 2 shows a man wearing a beret.

The Edward Zorinsky Federal Building in downtown Omaha is the main federal building in the city and houses federal court offices and the U.S. attorney's office. Federal agencies - including the DEA and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms have office space in another building a few blocks away.

Mark James, the bureau agent in charge in Omaha, referred all questions to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms command post in Oklahoma City.

"They're not going to comment on that issue," said Pat Berarducci, a bureau spokesman at the

The returnees were Hutus, members of the ethnic majority blamed for ast year's slaughter of a half-million men, women and children. Most of the victims were Tutsis, shot, hacked and clubbed to death by Hutu militias and, in a frightening number of cases, former friends and neighbors.

Ginger Rogers dies of natural causes

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. - Ginger Rogers, the glamorous blonde who made dance-floor magic with Fred Astaire in a string of unforgettable musicals and won an Academy Award as best actress for "Kitty Foyle," died Tuesday at the age of 83.

Rogers died at her home, apparently of natural causes, Riverside County Coroner Veronica Martinez said.

Rogers' career spanned 65 years in every field of show business from vaudeville to television. During the 1940s, she was one of the highestpaid, most sought-after Hollywood stars, appearing in such hits as "Roxie Hart," "Tom, Dick and Harry," "Lady in the Dark" and "Weekend at

In most of their 10 films together, Astaire was the smitten pursuer and Rogers was the reluctant beauty. Despite the air of romance, there were no love scenes. In her 1991 auto-biography, "Ginger: My Story," Rogers claimed Astaire's wife Phyllis didn't want him kissing other women.

Rogers continued performing her musical show into her late 70s, until ill health confined her to a wheelchair. Even so, she toured extensively "She made such a great contribu- to promote the autobiography, and received honors and tributes, notably never forget it," fellow movie dance the Kennedy Center Honors in December 1992.

Her career seemed to be everything. Rogers married and divorced

"I yearned for a long, happy mar-riage with one person," she wrote in her book. "But my life has been glided over polished floors in a perfect blessed in so many other ways that I display of grace and romance. blessed in so many other ways that I wanted to share the good times and the hard times with a public that has shown me unbounded appreciation."

Rogers was born Virginia Katherine McMath on July 16, 1911 in Harry Truman's hometown of Independence, Mo. Her father had abandoned his pregnant wife. A cousin couldn't pronounce Virginia and the name came out "Ginja." It was Ginger thereafter, and she adopted her stepfather's last name to begin performing as Ginger Rogers.

Her boyfriends included such Hollywood notables as Howard Hughes and Jimmy Stewart. At 17, she married Edward Jackson Culpepper, an older man who was a vaudeville comedian known as Jack Pepper. She divorced him two years later. She married Lew Ayres in 1934, when both their stars were rising in Hollywood. Their careers kept them apart, and they divorced in 1940.

Rogers' other marriages were to actor Jack Briggs (1943-1948), French actor Jacques Bergerac (1953-1957) and actor-producer William Marshall (1961-1970).

Are Americans still safe?

an it be true that we have become a nation so paranoid that tens of thousands of people across the country are armed and prepared to defend themselves against a hostile takeover by our own government? While the bombing in Oklahoma City appears to be the work of a few madmen, their connection - however loose it may be - to the Michigan Militia and other independent militias has forced Americans to wonder if they are safe

The World Trade Center bombing gave us an easy scapegoat. A Muslim fundamentalist makes a logical target when an act of terrorism is committed, as CNN found out when it initially reported that three men of Muslim extraction were being sought in connection with the bombing in Oklahoma City. Domestic terrorism was unthinkable at first, but we knew about these American groups long before they blew anything

Earlier this year, The New York Times reported on the Michigan Militia, describing a group of out-of-shape weekend warriors who huffed and puffed through weekends of light combat training and conspiratorial rhetoric and then went back to their nine-to-fives on Monday. Independent militias are clearly a greater threat than they were originally thought to be.

Groups like KlanWatch and The Southern Poverty Law Center have been warning the Justice Department of the rise of militia groups for a number of years. With a distinct hatred of the federal government and a paranoid fear of "one world government," these groups have been galvanized by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms raid at David Koresh's compound in Waco, Texas, and use it as a rallying cry in what some feel should be a war against the state. "The freedom of speech, freedom of religion, the right to bear arms. That's what the state took away from David Koresh at Waco," one member of the Michigan Militia told Leslie Stahl on "60 Minutes" last Sunday.

Before this tragedy occurred, there was much talk of the cynical mood of the nation, voter apathy and the public's distaste for politics in general. Talk radio has been tremendously effective in making anti-government rhetoric palatable for the mainstream American. Certainly, Rush Limbaugh bears no blame for the bombing in Oklahoma City, but the actions of Timothy McVeigh mirror the mood of the nation in a sense.

Just as the anti-war protesters of the Vietnam War era had a lunatic fringe (in the Weathermen and other radical leftist groups), the right-wing anti-government protesters of today have found they have a lunatic fringe as well. The government reaction will be the same now as it was 30 years ago. The FBI and the Secret Service infiltrated and spied on activist groups of every stripe back then and they are sure to take the same action now by infiltrating these militia groups, tapping their phones and monitoring their communications.

In an Internet newsgroup called alt.conspiracy, it was possible to read the reaction to the bombing in Oklahoma City of Bo Gritz, a Vietnam veteran who has close ties to a militia in northern Idaho and who was a large figure in the Randy Weaver incident of 1990. The bomb was "a Rembrandt of demolition," he exclaimed. Because of the bomb in Oklahoma City, all Americans are going to lose a little bit of personal liberty in order to be protected from people like McVeigh, Gritz and militiamen nationwide who complain of their loss of personal liberty. This is a tragedy that will last long after the dead are buried and the mourning has stopped.

Gaylord protest: 'Most people do know better' To the Editor:

It's amazing how many people who weren't at the April 11 protest against Joseph Gaylord are explaining why the protesters did the wrong thing. Invariably, these armchair critics are mistaken about what actually happened. Adam Witte's letter to The Daily Iowan April 18 is a case in

Witte aims his criticisms solely at the Iowa International Socialist Organization as if the protest was entirely our doing. Five other groups sponsored the protest. Most people there had no affiliation with the group. Protesters chose freely to disrupt the speech; the socialist organization did not force them. We were merely connecting with other people who are angry about the "Contract With America" and willing to act on that Witte claims that we think most people are too stupid to see what's bad about the "Contract." This is completely wrong. Members of the student coalition against the "Contract" think most people are smart enough to realize that Republican policies will hurt students, workers and the poor.

That's why we held a protest and not a teach-in. It was widely publicized, and all opposed to the "Contract" were welcome to participate. We expected to draw people to an angry, energetic protest and we were right: 75 angry people came.

Members of the coalition do not ee ourselves as the enlightened few demonstrating on behalf of the ignorant many. Only mass activity can liberate the majority. We want to be the spark that can light the raging fire. The 1960s was a long time ago, and most people aren't used to protesting. That's why the protest was relatively small. It will take time to build a movement against the "Contract."

Witte apparently believes that we used bullhorns to drown out Gaylord. This is false. We did it with our numbers and by being organized.

The protest cannot be compared to the UI's search of the socialist group's office last year. The protesters were simply exercising free speech. The UI was trampling on our freedom from unwarranted searches and seizures (a freedom, by the way, that is being targeted by the Republican's "Con-

Witte has several mistaken assumptions about the way the protest happened. Student activists are starting to conclude that the only way to stop the "Contract" is to show the Republicans that we won't let them get away with it. That's because Republicans seem unwilling to listen to reason, and Democrats - paralyzed like deer caught in the glare of approaching headlights - are doing nothing to stop the Republicans. It would be childish to expect politicians to defend people's interest.

Most people do know better.

Instead, this column is going to be about library books.

The particular library book that I will focus on is 15 years overdue. It was due back at the Bellingham, Wash., Public Library April 28,

This column is not going to 1980 - back when Blondie had a hit record and jeans and the illustrations of Ned made him be about the bombing in the nation had not yet heard of Col. Oliver look like a volleyball instructor from a girls.

I'm not sure why I never returned it or, rather, how I got away with not returning it. But it soon became one of my favorite childhood

The book was part of the Nancy Drew series - No. 51: "The Mystery of the Glowing Eye" and it dealt with Nancy's efforts to rescue her "good friend" Ned Nickerson from evil forces and restore good to the peaceful town of River Heights. The cover features a somewhat stunned, yet intuitive Nancy frozen in midturn underneath a giant all-knowing glowing eye, as the words "Cyclops" and "Warning" float ominously about her head.

It is dog-eared and the cover illustration is fading, but I have carted this book with me to every place I've ever lived. I think, on one level, I want to have it with me in case the library ever tracks me down and demands it back. (I am picturing a crazed little old lady wielding some sort of high-powered rifle.)

But mostly, I think I've kept it all these years because River Heights, with its Colonial-style houses and 16-year-olds with convertibles, was unlike any reality I had ever lived in. Sure, there was an occasional murder or kidnapping. but Nancy always solved it in time to dance the lead in the local ballet or host a cocktail party for her father, renowned lawyer Carson Drew.

In Nancy Drew books, there were constants. If there were terrorists, they wore trench coats, spoke with thick accents and only appeared in mysteries that took place abroad. If someone was captured, he or she (usually she) would be rescued. If an item was stolen, it would be recovered. If there was a federal building in River Heights, it was not going to explode summer camp.

And so I hung on to my little piece of River Heights. I hung on to the idea of wide, green lawns and housekeepers who made lemonade and fathers who wore suits. When April 18 came and went and it was time to return my delusion, I persisted because I didn't want to

OK. So I lied. This column is about the bomb. ng in Oklahoma City. Because when you get right down to it, what is so terrorizing about the tragedy is not the personal stories of the people involved, but the shattering of a myth. If it can happen in Oklahoma City, it can happen in River Heights, and this is a reality people do not want to deal with. It is a selfish response really. We mourn not the deaths of those few hundred people, but the passing of our own

And yet it is entirely human. And because we are human we will rise to the occasion and send flowers and money and volunteers. Because we are human, we will surrender a few more civil liberties in order to feel safe again and then all watch the "based on real life" TV movie (I'm seeing Brian Dennehy in a fireman hat). We will read the accounts of the survivors and watch the news specials and buy the issue of People magazine. We will speak to our children about God, the government and "bad men.

And then, because we are human, it will happen all over again.

You could count on these things even in the Chelsea Cain's column appears Wednesdays on the

Appreciating cigarettes' sublimeness from afar

My favorite picture of my best friend, Jami, and I in high school shows the two of us lying on her bed, wearing sunglasses and smoking cigarettes. We both have smug looks on our faces and coolness practically drips from us in the snapshot - the fact that we were "smoking" bubble gum did little to diminish the picture in our 15-year-old eyes. We never would have actually smoked since Jami abhorred the fact that both her parents did. Anyone who stepped into her house was barraged with apologies for the smell, and she incessantly burned incense in her room to cover up the smell. Her obsession continued into colege, when she would return home with laundry only to carry her clean clothes out to her car in garbage bags So I was a bit surprised when she admitted to me that she loves smoking cloves.

She's just one of the paradoxes I've encountered when it comes to smoking, and perhaps that is why I'm so fascinated with people who

In light of the anti-smoking sentiment that has permeated society in the last few years, it's amazing anyone even attempts to pick up the habit. It's expensive and unhealthy; yet while public smoking areas are becoming more difficult to find, smokers aren't. A walk through downtown Iowa City dispels any notion that "just say no" had much of a positive affect on our generation.

A friend of mine and her parents were musing over the reasons why so many college students smoke when they are obviously aware of its dangers.

"These are intelligent kids, so why are they smoking?" her father heatedly asked.

My friend, who smokes more than occasionally, acted like an innocent observer to my amusement but offered an insightful sugges-

"It's the best of bad things you can do."

This seems a more likely reason than Joe Camel's cartoonish phallus face hypnotizing thousands of young Americans. It gets to the heart of why so many people smoke, despite the loud and clear message that it is bad: It's

I neither condone nor condemn smoking. I've smoked occasionally, but I happen to be the worst smoker in the world: I can't light a match with any consistency, I often fail to inhale and I don't really know how to flick off an ash. In all, my friends sit around and make fun of the way I smoke.

But I'm intrigued with the actual act of smoking - its fire and smoke. Others might say that it's tasteless, dirty and unhealthy, but that seems to miss the point.

Would James Dean have seemed as cool without his cig in "Rebel Without A Cause?" How about Humphrey Bogart in "Casablanca" or, more recently, John Travolta in "Pulp Fic-

Cigarettes are a romantic way of living on the edge. Each cigarette is a reminder of life and death and the subtle enjoyment of the

In my newfound fascination, I even found a book that sings the praises of cigarettes. Richard Klein's "Cigarettes Are Sublime" spends page upon page delving into the philosophical reasons that make smoking a cultural

For the most part, I was more impressed with the pictures interspersed throughout the book of famous people smoking. Dark and moody portraits of Jean Paul Sartre, Coco Chanel and Pablo Picasso captured the mystical image that to me is the very essence of why people choose to smoke.

It would infuriate the people who produced the anti-smoking poster which hung in my high-school biology lab. Under the phrase Smoking is sophisticated," there was a picture of an ugly, wrinkled androgynous figure with a cigarette hanging loosely from its mouth. Despite the fact that I never determined the person's sex, I always thought the principle behind the poster was fighting an uphill battle,

The cultural notion that smoking is devious and dangerous will always make it enticing. The more authority figures harangue against it, the more people will indulge in the vice.

As Klein succinctly put it, "The notion that doctors' warnings will discourage people from smoking misses the seduction of cigarettes, which precisely depends on the risks and the displeasure they sublimely provide."

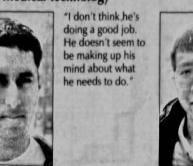

Luckily, I can appreciate cigarettes' sublimeness from afar.

The UI Graduate College has learned that some person(s) recently appropriated the logo of the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students and used it as a header on a poster advertising a meeting Friday, which they title "Making Graduate School a Career: How to Turn a 2-Year Degree Into a 7-Year Free Lunch," indicating that the meeting is funded by the taxpayers of Iowa, who are disparagingly referred to as "hicks."

The Graduate College denounces this action in the strongest possible terms. At the time that we received support from the Iowa state Board of Regents, the Governor's Office and the Legislature for the plan to revitalize graduate education — which involves improving net graduate assistant stipends to a competitive level among Big Ten and other peer institutions and improving health-care benefits this characterization of graduate education is particularly inappropriate and unfortunate. It is also grossly unfair given the improvement in graduate and professional programs realized in the past few years and now increasingly recognized by high national rankings by U.S. News and World Report and many professional and accrediting organiza-

The Graduate College condemns this action because it unfairly characterizes graduate education, and especially the important contributions of graduate assistants, and because it works against the positive strategy we have continually employed to improve stipends and benefits for graduate assistants: to convince the state that an investment in graduate education through improved stipends and benefits for graduate assistants is in the long-term interests of the state. The actions are also contradictory to the collegial way in which the campaign and all parties interacted last year and which we hope will be the hallmark of continuing discussions about improving conditions for graduate assis-

Pain is a sign that something is wrong To the Editor:

I cannot even begin to guess where

Laura Fokkena has received her education about human biology, anatomy, psychology or the medical profession. Not do I understand how she acquired her anthropological knowledge about how pain is treated in many other cultures "with the respect it deserves" and as something that is "not just a symptom of disease," but a state of being.

Pain is often a sign that something is wrong — a smoke detector for the body, you might say — and is rarely a simple plea from an individual who wants personal attention and "for someone to be nice to them."

When I am feeling ill, I am grateful for acts of kindness offered by friends and family. But Fokkena should also know that the modern medical care she is so quick to criticize has made a huge difference in my life. For example, it was the discovery of penicillin that made it possible to cure the numerous painful ear infections that I experienced as a child. Untreated, these infections would most likely have robbed me of my hearing at an early age in the same way that it so cruelly robbed my aunt of most of her hearing before the development of the drug.

In addition, as someone who is fighting a very serious illness, I want Fokkena to know that I am very appreciative of the "frenzied quest" to wipe out various diseases, including the one that has affected me. I know that I speak for millions of others around the world, including a growing number of people with AIDS.

For the record, the physicians I know in both professional and personal capacities take seriously the original mission of medicine: to relieve suffering. It is my hope that if Fokkena is ever faced with life-threatening illness, she will be close to a facility as excellent as UI Hospitals and Clinics. Perhaps then she will appreciate why the American medical system is one of the most admired in the world and will better understand why it was such a great act of love for the friend she writes about to try to get his sister to the United States for treatment of her cancer, even if the treatment failed.

Coalition observes week for animals

For those of you who care about animals and are against animal abuse, this is a good week to learn about the lives of

April 24 started World Laboratory Animal Liberation Week, and people around the world are speaking out for millions of animals who suffer and die in the name of research. The week highlights the work of compassionate people who struggle all year long to end animal experiments because of the cruelty and the waste of our health-

Each year in the United States, an estimated 20 million to 79 million animals are subjected to painful experiments. The Department of Defense, for example, continues to kill tens of thousands of animals each year in radiation experiments. The National Institutes of Health also continue to fund maternal deprivation experiments, where infant animals are isolated and then subjected to procedures intended to cause terror, despair, anxiety and pain.

Many doctors are now critical of such experiments, calling them unnecessary, duplicative and costly. They point out that animals and humans differ in medically important ways and often animal experiments can produce misleading results. Consider that of the 25 drugs which appear to reduce the effects of strokes in rodents, not a single one worked in human patients. People who care about human health will also be disturbed to know that of the 198 new drugs that went to market in the decade ending in 1985, 51 percent turned out to be more dangerous than premarket

If you are interested in learning more about the use of animals in research, the UI Animal Coalition will have a number of events throughout the week in the Union. For the time and room, see The Daily Iowan's calendar of events, or for more information, please contact the Animal

Criticizing the research status quo

Livery time someone tries to highlight the sad plight of laboratory animals, animal experimenters condemn the effort as a threat to human health. Yet it is the researchers' own obsession with animals - manipu- and animals render data from their diseases - that prevents less medical progress.

Animal research is a 17th-century technique based on the idea that other species are valid surrogates for humans. Those of us who criticize the research status quo do so exactly because we realize how much is at stake for human health. The notion that the philosophy of animal rights interferes with medical research is simply a red herring. It is the vested economic interests of the animal experimentation industry, not concern for animals, that is detrimental to the public's health.

that McVeigh "had the knowledge to manufacture a bomb" and that the three men made "bottle bombs" in 1992. Last year, the Nichols brothers made small explosive devices, the court document said.

McVeigh was not accused in the Michigan case, and the charges are not related to the Oklahoma bombing, authorities said.

In addition to linking the Nichols brothers to McVeigh, they allow the government to continue holding the men, who previously were in custody as material witnesses.

In Washington, a federal law enforcement official said the vehicle McVeigh was driving when he was stopped for traffic violations shortly after the bombing showed traces of nitrates and high explosive but that it was not yet possible to conclusively link them to the bombing.

The official estimated that the bomb weighed 4,800 pounds, the highest figure yet.

The FBI released an enhanced sketch of the most wanted man in America, a square-jawed individual linked to the nation's deadliest domestic terrorist attack here April

In Junction City, Kan., the manager of the Great Western Inn was watching television with two reporters when the new sketch flashed on the screen. He said he recognized it as the man who stayed in room 107 on April 17 — two days before the bombing.

"He spoke broken English. He was not 100 percent American," said the manager, who is East Indian and himself speaks with an accent. The manager, who requested anonymity for fear of retaliation, said the man gave a foreign name and was driving a Ryder rental truck.

"He was scared. He didn't want to talk to me too much," the manager told the AP Tuesday. He couldn't give the name the man registered under because FBI agents took away his bombing, according to sources in Washington who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The manager also said a man who gave the name "James Nichols" registered at his motel April 7.

Broadcast reports quoted unidentified sources Tuesday as saying eye-witnesses saw McVeigh driving the Ryder van in Oklahoma City, with a passenger, shortly before the bombing. NBC News said McVeigh was eight blocks from the federal building and asking directions.

Broadcasters also reported that McVeigh had chemical traces on his clothing linking him to the bombing.

In the Michigan case, the affidavit said Terry Nichols had "survival books" with information about making ammonium nitrate bombs, the kind used at the federal building.

ABC reported that officials believe Terry Nichols may have stored bomb-making material at a storage locker near his home in Herington, Kan. The network said the FBI had matched tire prints at the locker with the type of truck used in the

Rebecca Anderson was just beginning a new life when tragedy struck. Divorced, she started nursing school about three years ago and then went to work at the Brookwood Nursing

Her personal life was flourishing, too, thanks, to a husky blue-eyed truck driver she'd met through a mutual friend. Their first date was Oct. 2, 1993 — Rebecca Anderson's 36th birthday. Fred Anderson had scouted out a restaurant that served her favorite dish, Alaskan king crab. The next day he brought her gladiolas. Nine months later, they stood hand in hand at the church altar.

Both Andersons had the day off last Wednesday and were watching television when their house shook. Immediately, Rebecca Anderson grabbed some clothes and told her husband they needed to go help.

Though they'd been wed less than nine months, Fred Anderson knew his wife was a determined woman. He would take her to the blast site and then go off, looking to help where he

Rebecca Anderson always had a big smile and a big heart. A prim and proper girl who never cursed or got riled, as a child she brought home stray animals — even field mice — to feed. She picked up hitchhikers against her husband's warnings and once quit a debt-collecting job because she couldn't stand to hurt anyone.

So it was inevitable Rebecca Anderson would rush to the bombing site. Within hours after he dropped her off, Fred Anderson was paged by University Hospital. He got the message that his wife was injured badly. No, it must be a mistake — she was not in the bombed building, Fred Anderson said. It was no mistake that Anderson pieced together what had happened. There were public appeals for information, and a photo of his wife fainting appeared in a local newspaper. Finally, witnesses told him Rebecca Anderson was hit by a rescuers near the building.

She sat down, someone went to get help, then she got up again and began walking. She went a short distance, her eyes rolled into her head and then

NEW YORK (AP) — George Foreman could be forced to defend his International Boxing Federation heavyweight title in a rematch with Axel Schulz.

But that sense of loss will be away with the best record in the American League. From starting pitching to relief pitching to their neup, the Yankees have no flaws.

New York's only real challenge will be Baltimore, which would be a lock for postseason play in any other year with its personnel. Ben McDonald, Mike Mussina and Sid Fernandez are as potent a combo as any in the league if they stay healthy, but with Doug Jones as their centerpiece they dwindle in the bullpen.

respectability. Losing Dave Stewart to Oakland will actually help the Blue Jays' pitching staff, but Juan Guzman and Pat Hentgen have been inconsistent and could either be spectacular or dismal.

Don't expect 1995 to be a three-team race like last year. With a couple of off-season moves, Kansas City has taken itself out of contention and will let Chicago and Cleveland fight

Kenny Lofton has no equal in the American League when it comes to combining speed, average and moderate power. Carlos Baerga has surpassed Roberto Alomar as the league's best second baseman, while Eddie Murray continues to show he can contribute.

Albert Belle had an outside shot at the triple crown last year, but unfortunately for him Frank Thomas was getting all the recognition. Thomas, with Robin Ventura and Chris Sabo hitting around him, shouldn't have any dropoff from last year's MVP performance.

The White Sox lost Jack McDowell, but still remain the strongest pitching staff in their division. Alex Fernandez, Jason Bere, Wilson Alvarez, Jim Abbott and Scott Ruffcorn are reminiscent of Atlanta's staff from the early

Look for Chicago to repeat as division champs with Cleveland having to battle Baltimore for the wildcard spot in the playoffs.

Once again, this is the weakest division in the American League. California has absolutely no third place and will have to wrestle Dodgers have no relief pitching that claim away from Texas.

The Rangers have Will Clark gether. and Juan Gonzalez when he returns, but losing Jose Canseco from an already skimpy lineup will take them out of the race.

If Seattle can avoid any long losing stretch, it will claim its firstever playoff berth. Starting pitching pretty much comes to a standstill after Randy Johnson and Chris Bosio, but luckily the Mariners only competition, Oakland, doesn't even have that much.

Ken Griffey, Jr. doesn't have much of a supporting cast, but he does have Jay Buhner and Edgar Martinez, more than enough to get by in the A.L. West.

If it wasn't bad enough that Montreal had to trade Marquis Grissom, it had to trade him to a team in its own division.

There isn't a chance in the world that the Braves won't win the East. Their bullpen is suspect, but their lineup has three potential MVPs in Dave Justice, Fred McGriff and Grissom. Their starting pitching, as always, will be tops in the National League.

The rest of the division is up for grabs. Philadelphia's lineup is stacked, but should have stuck with a replacement pitching staff. All the Phillies have to do is look at six games Detroit's performance over the past couple of years to realize that it takes more than hitting to contend. Florida could finish anywhere

Students are observed engaging in heavy conversation about political issues and personal problems. One young man discusses eloquently the importance of every father being present at his child's birth, something he seems proud to have experienced. Nevermind that the youth is 18 years old and grew up in the ghetto - you'd never know it by listening to him articulate his newfound political and social

Wiseman sees this remarkable awakening happening in "High School II," but the truth isn't always as simple as that.

Wiseman works with a 30-to-1 shooting ratio, meaning that for every 30 feet of film he shoots, 1 foot is used in the finished product. Wiseman works with a 30-to-1 shooting ratio, meaning that for every 30 feet of film he shoots, 1 foot is used in the finished product. Because he spends so much time with his subjects and shoots so much film of them, Wiseman is able to literally blend into the era with monotony. It's this technique that allows his subjects to behave naturally and coaxes the truth of their situation out of its elusive shell.

The setting of "High School II" is the Central Park East Secondary School in New York City, an institution Wiseman studied in his 1968 film "High School." In the first film, Wiseman found that American schools were factories, churning out expendable drones to stock the machinery of the system. In "High School II," he poses questions and finds answers which are a bit more

The Central Park East school is unlike any other. Run by Deborah Meier, a widely recognized innovator in progressive education and recipient of a MacArthur Fellowship, the school specializes in close teacher-student interaction. ### MILK PLAYS GABE'S TONIGHT

Minneapolis band offers unique sound

Paul Ferguson The Daily Iowan

Minneapolis has been said to have a definitive "sound," but as with most cities, it is often the bands that don't conform to that sound which get noticed.

Milk would probably prefer that to be the case. These three Twin Cities natives have little in common with the likes of Soul Asylum or the Replacements, except for their instruments and their city of origin. The band will offer its audience at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight a taste of another side of Minneapolis.

Milk sets up elaborate musical structures on Succeeding / Recedalbum, but it is never satisfied with any single style of architecture. Sometimes it sounds at home among the scores of dissonant, noisy indie bands that churn out gnarled chords by the dozen and scoff at even-numbered time signatures: then it suddenly sounds more akin to the Joy Division school of murky, distant sound and thought.

More often than not, it wanders off on a unique tangent that can't be called derivative despite hints of familiarity - something like exploring newfound tunnels under a building you've known for years.

In true indie fashion, much of Milk's notoriety to date stems from a series of 7-inch singles and EPs. Its discography suggests the band isn't concerned about appearing dark or deep - in addition to EPs with titles like "Making the Most of Minimal Hearing" and "eggs breaking, thunder, sneezes & laughter,"

Sony tries to replace cassette tapes

John Pacenti Associated Press

You're driving down the open highway on a sunny weekend afternoon listening to your favorite cassette. Maybe it's a rare recording of Billie Holiday, a bootleg concert tape of Janis Joplin or even a European release of your favorite band.

Then all of a sudden in the middle of "Piece of My Heart," Joplin's voice becomes a little more gravelly than usual and begins to slow down like a broken engine. Panic-stricken, you push the eject button of the car stereo.

Too late, you've become the victim of the short-lived life of a cassette tape.

There's nothing you can do but watch your tape player spit out your "one in a million" cassette - the master long since vanished, the LP borrowed from a friend of a friend long ago and out of print for decades. It's lost forev-

As the front seat fills up with quarter-inch tape, the thought that it's time the cassette went the way of the 8-track and the LP passes through your mind.

Sony Corp. is banking on those feelings, hoping that its MiniDisc -introduced three real need to have it - and the blank discs are years ago - is the wave of the future for "tune the world out" types.

purpose very well. MiniDiscs provide all benefits of current cassettes with all the advantronics in New York.

Sony executives claim the MiniDisc ultimately will replace the cassette. But consumers and other experts don't quite agree with the electronics firm.

Despite the glowing endorsement and hype of the MiniDisc manufacturer, Mini-Discs have their problems. They are outrageously expensive and might actually be an attempt to quash the blank cassette market which takes such a huge bite out of CD sales.

"The blank discs are expensive — at least $15," said Michael Blumberg, a vice president of Dania, Fla.-based Sound Advice. "But Sony's got all these visions of the future with the MiniDisc. ... Sales aren't exactly brisk right now."

The compact disc, once the knight in shining armor of the recording industry, is beginning to show some chinks. The LP is making a comeback among collectors, and CDs are now being criticized for lack of fuller sound at higher volumes. Also, CDs never did drop to the price of an album.

"They lied to us in a major way," said Billy Banks, a New York City music producer. "They said, You are going to have to pay this price for a couple of years to pay for the development, and the prices are going to drop.' Prices have never dropped."

Prerecorded MiniDiscs as well as blank discs cost $17. Initial units on which to play them range from $499 to $699. As with the beginning days of CDs, the 1,000 titles available contain mostly current Top 40

"Until the price comes down on the product, they are limiting the number of people who are going to be able to buy it," said Blumberg. He added that MiniDisc players face stiff competition from portable CD players. "Unless it's a motion situation, such as sports, the DiscMan does the job," he said. "For people traveling on planes, there is no expensive.

Audio quality is actually sacrificed in Mini-"The analog cassette has been a great tech- Discs. To get them down to the size of a Ninnology for many decades and it has served its tendo game cartridge, the levels of sound humans can't hear are eliminated. Sony, not the only manufacturer of a MiniDisc recorder, tages of CDs," says Brian Levine of Sony Elec- says it is still better than listening to tape

Of course, Sony has tried to replace the cassette before. In the 1980s, DAT (digital audio tape) was for a very short time ballyhooed to consumers as the next big thing in sound technology. It instead found its niche among professional artists.

Like compact discs, MiniDiscs have random access. That means the consumer no longer needs that sixth sense to find his or her favorite tune while traveling at 65 mph with one hand on the steering wheel and the other on the fast-forward button.

The MiniDisc also reads the disc before you hear it with an overlay. Thus, you can jog with it and use it in the car and not have it skip like some portable CD players
