TAs, research assistants get pay boost Stipend increase may bump UI toward the top of the Big Ten

The Daily Iowan

UI Teaching Assistants and research assistants will be getting a pay raise of almost $2,000 this fall — placing their salary stipends in the same ballpark as other Big Ten universities for the first time in recent history.

A report to be issued today by Professor

Leslie Sims, dean of the UI Graduate College, announces stipends will be raised 7.5

The increase is a result of efforts over the past two years to push UI TA and research assistant stipends to the top of the Big Ten. Legislators have allocated a raise that will take graduate students from four-digit stipends, near the bottom of the Big Ten, to minimum stipends of $10,500.

All GER criteria will be reviewed

Fewer required classes and the elimination of mandatory physical education may be in the future for UI liberal arts students.

The Educational Policy Committee is working to trim down all liberal arts general education requirements — including PE — and will submit its plan to the Faculty Assembly next fall, said Dean of liberal arts Judith Aikin at the meeting Wednesday.

Committee members also said it's likely the motion will suggest physical education weekend trips be scrapped because they are so times canceled due to weather conditions. Another reason for eliminating the weekend trips is because the classes last two days, and students receive a full credit. The Faculty Assembly voted 23-13 Wednesday against eliminating the PE requirement after reviewing a preliminary committee report. The assembly will revote on the motion to alter all GERs in the fall.

The committee report stated 53 percent of last year's graduating seniors who were surveyed felt PE was "not very valuable" or "definitely not valuable" to their education. Associate Dean of academic programs James Lindberg said well over half the graduating class answered the survey.

Kathy Janz, assistant professor of health promotion and a guest speaker at the meeting, said there may be outside reasons that skewed the survey results.

"It is so hard for students to get into what PE skill classes they want; they have negative feelings," she said. "So many TAs are cut; it is impossible for students to get in. I am sure if it was impossible to get into the foreign language they want, they would have the same

FBI hits lull in investigation

OKLAHOMA CITY - Two weeks after a bomb shattered downtown Oklahoma City, the investigation has yielded one steely suspect who's keeping his mouth shut, a cast of odd characters, several dead ends and plenty of questions.

With thousands of tips still to be followed up on, a federal grand jury has begun sorting through evidence in the secret confines of Tinker Air Force Base outside Oklahoma City.

The bombing's death toll now stands at 145, with a child's body among those found Wednesday. Twenty-eight people were missing, according to the state medical examiner's office.

Anxiety disorder is a common mental illness, but it's often diagnosed incorrectly, said one specialist who conducted screenings Wednesday as part of National Anxiety Disorders Screening Day.

There are no clear-cut symptoms of an anxiety disorder, said Dr. Donald Black, associate professor of psy-chiatry at UI Hospitals and Clinics. But some of the signs which indicate an anxiety disorder, like chest pains and a racing heartbeat, are oftentimes misdiagnosed as other

"It's important that we get the information out to the public because oftentimes people who have anxiety attacks often fear they're having a heart attack," Black said. "They will go through a series of doctors, heart specialists, lung doctors — what have you — before they even see a psychiatrist, who they should have seen in the first place. Two specialists from the Department of Psychiatry at UIHC conducted the screenings from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. About 20 people were expected for the screening, which is in its third

The sidewalk along a portion of Iowa Avenue may get a lift this sum-mer so disabled patrons can have more access to businesses along the street.

Gerry Ambrose, owner of GA Malone's, 121 Iowa Ave., which was formerly the Metro, made a request to the Iowa City City Council in March that the Iowa Avenue sidewalk between Clinton and Dubuque streets be raised to allow accessibility for the disabled into businesses along the street. The sidewalk is currently about 7 or 8 inches lower than entryways along the street and raising the sidewalk would be an alternative to building ramps for wheelchairs.

Ambrose is currently renovating his property into an Irish pub and restaurant and said he would like to see the sidewalk replaced in time for the July 1 grand opening of GA Malone's.

"The sidewalk is really in bad shape," Ambrose said. "The curb is deteriorated, and the sidewalk is busted and cracked and has chunks missing. It's really a safety hazard. I said to the city, 'Let's replace it, but let's do it right and bring it up.' It would really clean up the look of the street."

The city of Iowa City is currently willing to pay for part of the construction on the sidewalk, Public Works Director Chuck Schmadeke said. However, city staff still need to get feedback from other businesses that will be affected, he said. These busiber had approved - would be a clear nesses include Easy Place Chinese Restaurant, 119 Iowa Ave.; City News, 113 Iowa Ave.; and Joe's Place, 115

epending on how much it would cost. Exactly how high the sidewalk will need to be raised and who is responsible for funding the project still needs to be decided, Schmadeke said.

"If we can accommodate disadvantaged people by elevating the sidewalk and making accommodations in all the buildings, it's better than doing it individually," Schmadeke said. Ambrose said he would like to see the city fully fund the project because it has renovated other sidewalks in the area. "It seems only right that the city should do this," he said. "They allowed First National Bank to raise their south entrance, and this (lift) would make four businesses accessible.

Ambrose said the doorway of one property is at sidewalk level but is not currently being used. If the level of the sidewalk is raised, this doorway will be a step down, he said. "It's my contention that why should we let one doorway that's not used get in the way of improvements on four others?" Ambrose said.

Ron Boose, senior building inspector for the city, said state disability laws don't require businesses to make their buildings accessible unless there is a change in use. Because GA Malone's will still be a restaurant, it is not required by state law to be accessible even though considerable renovations are going on.

However, under the Americans with Disabilities Act, a business must make reasonable accommodations if a renovation is occurring, Boose said.

Senate nixes ban on colleges' homosexual programs

DES MOINES - On Wednesday, the Senate rejected a move to prohibit the three state universities - the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa - from offering programs that depict homosexuality as a "positive alternative."

"The purpose of a university is to promote the free exchange of ideas," said Sen. Mary Neuhauser, D-Iowa City. "It would be inappropriate for the Legislature to impede that free exchange of ideas."

Legislative committee divided on abortion

Mike Glover Associated Press

DES MOINES - Legislators tried Wednesday to come together on abortion rights, but hopes faded that they would reach agreement on requiring parental notification. The House and Senate have approved different versions of a bill requiring a young woman to notify a parent before obtaining an abortion. A 10-member conference committee met sporadically throughout the day Wednesday.

Pro-choice and anti-abortion

members of the committee spent most of their time identifying areas where they differ, making no

Legislative leaders, meanwhile, pushed hard to end this year's session and were not inclined to delay adjournment to allow more talks on abortion.

"They had a good meeting this morning, but unless they can get something wrapped up here in the next six hours it's probably going to have to wait until next year," said House Speaker Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids, who favors the parental notice requirement.

House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs, said leaders have focused on a few budget issues to try to force an end to the session. Those agreements were beginning to fall into place.

"If everything else is done and there is not an agreement on parental notice, we will adjourn," Siegrist said.

If the Legislature adjourns without resolving the issue, conditions will change.

The conference committee would remain after the Legislature adjourns. Sen. Elaine Szymoniak, D-Des Moines, said that would allow emotions to cool.

WASHINGTON - Benefiting from his high-stakes hearings, Dr. Henry Foster gained ground Wednesday in a struggle for confirmation as surgeon general. Democrats warned of retaliation if Republicans block a vote by the full Sen-

Sen. James Jeffords of Vermont became the first Republican on the Labor and Human Resources Committee to declare his support for Foster, saying the 61-year-old obstetrician had done a "superb job in taking care of the lingering, critical issues" in his two days in the witness chair.

An advocate of sexual abstinence for teen-agers, Foster offered a glimpse of his physician's style when asked how he would counsel a young, unmarried woman who came to his office with an unwanted preg-

"I say you have a dilemma by your own definition. ... I say there are only three rational things that you can do: You can have the baby and keep it, you can have the baby and put it up for adoption or you can have an abortion," he said.

"But which of those you choose has to be based on your own underpinnings, your moral values, your support system, your minister. They have to make you — help you make this very difficult choice," he said, adding he would refer the woman for counseling with a social worker.

A former medical school dean, Foster renewed the central points of Tuesday's testimony. He reaffirmed that he had performed 39 abortions in four decades as a doctor; that he heeded ethics standards of the time when he performed sterilization operations on four retarded women; that he didn't know about a federal program that left men untreated for syphilis in Tuskegee, Ala., until it came public knowledge in 1972.

That last issue, raised by Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., provoked a heat-ed response. "Under oath, incorrect; wrong, wrong, wrong, sir," Foster said of such allegations — raising his voice for emphasis as he denied any prior knowledge. To underscore his point, he lifted his right hand as if in court, swearing to tell the Jeffords' announcement left supporters searching for one more vote a panel with nine Republicans and seven Democrats.

Foster's nomination is for a job with an office that spends roughly $1 million a year - a pittance compared with many others in the gov-ernment — and has little formal role except as a spokesman on health matters.

But given the controversy over abortion and other subjects, it's become caught up in politics.

Texas Republican Sen. Phil Gramm has threatened a filibuster. Sen. Bob Dole, citing questions about Foster's credibility, has said he may not call the nomination up for a vote in the Senate if it clears committee. Gramm and Dole are rivals for the 1996 GOP presidential Win or lose, some Democrats believe they may gain politically from the nomination, particularly if Foster can be portrayed as a physician who performed few abortions, and always legally.

GOP Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, chairwoman of the committee, remained uncommitted on the nomination. She pressed Foster to say what leadership he had shown to improve his Nashville "I Have a Future" program after outside reviewers said it hadn't had much impact in terms of preventing preg-

Foster said his organization had adopted all the recommendations made for improvement and added, What I would like to do, Senator, is focus on the glass being half-full rather than half-empty."

Democrats also sought to undermine efforts by Kassebaum and others to raise questions about the effectiveness of the Nashville program, noting that teen-age pregnancy is a chronic problem that many have tried unsuccessfully to solve. "It's easy for us up here today to flyspeck programs," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

PANTHER MOVIE IS POETIC LIES

Former Black Panther Eldridge Cleaver sits on the stairwell of his home in Berkeley, Calif., Friday. "Panther," a film directed by Mario Van Peebles about the Black Panther movement, debuted on Wednesday.

Film distorts reality

Ellen Knickmeyer Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. - The most polite words Black Panther Party co-founder Bobby Seale can find for the movie "Panther" are "poetic Young Oakland wouldn't know about that. They hope the movie offers them their first look back at radical past. "People copycat the violence of it but probably don't know the positive things," said Marcia Lozano, a 23-year-old student at Merritt College, Seale's old school. "People know the slogans like cop killers,' but that's not what they were. That's all why I want to see it," Lozano said. "I don't know too much about the Black Pan-

Now as then, Oakland is in large part a community of minorities. It has been hit hard in recent years by a crushing earthquake, one of the nation's worst urban fires and a serious unemployment problem.

The movie, which opened Wednesday, focuses on the Pan- Black Panther minister of informathers' early days after Seale and Huey Newton founded the party in October 1966, taking advantage of a local law allowing them to carry

Mario Van Peebles directed the movie using a script based on a book written by his father, Melvin Van Peebles

As with Oliver Stone's "JFK" and Spike Lee's "Malcolm X," Van Peees is being criticized for blurring the lines of art and history. He insists the movie is drama, not documentary. The point is meaningless

"I know they say it's fiction, but it's tantamount to a bunch of poetic lies," said Seale, who wore a disguise to get into a sneak preview so he could avoid the appearance of endorsing the film.

The Panthers began prowling the streets of Oakland in response to police violence against blacks. Carrying shotguns, law books and tape recorders, they shadowed police officers with the mission of protecting citizens' rights.

Initially, the Panthers were nonviolent, running health clinics and free lunch programs for schoolchildren and actively protecting blacks from police brutality. Eventually, police and Panther patrols began to clash, fighting and shooting it out.

The Black Panther Party peaked with about 5,000 members during the angry months after the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and petered out in the

"The average person (watching the movie) is going to think these guys were street gang types. But we were part of a young black intelligentsia," Seale said. "We were avid readers. We studied the whole history of African-Americans."

Seale is pushing his own movie on the Panthers, based on a book he wrote. He said the movie would be a "high-confrontation drama adventure right in the middle of the ongoing civil rights protest."

Van Peebles doesn't make clear in his movie what brought down the party, nor does he discuss Newton's later slide into crime and drug use. Newton was killed in a crackrelated shooting in Oakland in 1989 after he served time in prison for shooting a police officer.

"It's a false rip-off of the story of the Black Panthers Party, and he twisted it and turned it and chronologically screwed it up," said Seale, now a 58-year-old community activist in Philadelphia. Eldridge Cleaver, the former tion, called the movie "a travesty" in USA Today. David Horowitz, a former Panther fund-raiser, said the film is a "two-hour lie."

Part of Seale's frustration with the movie is over who gets the credit for the party.

Counter to the impression Seale said he felt the movie gave, Newton was in jail and Seale was at the helm when the party reached its

Douglas Crain, an Oakland traffic officer-turned-desk cop, remembers first hearing about the Panthers from a call on the police radio about a ring of shotgun-carrying Panthers surrounding an officer parked at a curb.

He remembers 12-hour shifts, seven days a week, when Newton was on trial for the Oakland officer's death and recalls members of the Black Panthers singling his black partner out for abuse whenever they were booked into jail.

"My curiosity would be more or less to see how it's depicted," Crain said. "Whether they actually show it like it really was or they try to immortalize (Newton) and make him look like a good guy doing good deeds for the city of Oakland.

Approved alternative to latex condom warrants more research

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plastic condom approved by the Food and Drug Administration has been sent back for more testing.

The condom, which is recommended only for people who are allergic to latex, was approved for sale by the FDA in 1991, but new data from slippage and breakage studies have raised questions, said Susan Alpert of the FDA.

The FDA approved the condom after its manufacturer, London International Holdings U.S. Inc., submitted results from both laboratory testing and slippage and breakage studies, said Alpert.

The laboratory testing determined that the plastic material used in the condom was strong and impervious to both sperm and viruses. This is necessary since condoms are used as both a birth control method and to protect against infection.

In slippage and breakage studies, volunteer couples test the condoms under conditions of typical use — in the bedroom. The couples then file reports on the products. The manufacturer's data showed that the condoms had a failure rate of less than 2 percent in these tests, said Alpert.

However, independent slippage and breakage tests were conducted recently by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development. Couples participating in these tests reported a failure rate of about 14 percent.

Alpert said this prompted the FDA to order more research.

"We have asked both groups to go back and test the condoms again," she said.

The plastic condoms, sold under the name Avanti, are available to people who are allergic to latex, the most widely used material in con-

Old-fashioned punishment resurfaces in Alabama

ELKMONT, Ala. (AP) - Grumbling prisoners shackled together by clinking leg chains shuffled along a busy highway Wednesday, chopping weeds and picking up trash, as Alabama became the first state to bring back chain gangs.

The 12-hour workday started with shotgun-toting corrections officers standing watch while about 320 prisoners were made to kneel in the cold dew-covered grass to have shiny steel chains clamped to their legs.

Each gang was made up of five inmates linked together by 8-foot lengths of chain. They worked in squads of about 40 men each, with an armed officer watching each

White prison coats and billed caps were emblazoned with the words "CHAIN GANG" — a sight unseen in most states for decades.

Gov. Fob James reinstituted chain gangs in an attempt to make prison life so unpleasant that no one will ever want to return.

Alabama and many other states already use minimum-security inmates without shackles to pick up litter and perform other duties.

A bill is pending in the Legislature that would outlaw chain gangs, and critics say the program will only worsen Alabama's image as being backward and out of step with the rest of the nation. The American Civil Liberties Union has promised to sue.

Serbs keep up with retaliatory offensive

Teddie Weyr Associated Press

ZAGREB, Croatia - Serb missiles struck at the heart of Croatia's capital for the second day Wednesday, killing one person and wounding 64 as Serb rebels avenged their loss of territory to the Croatian army this week.

U.N. special envoy Yasushi Akashi announced a cease-fire in the Serb-controlled chunk of central Croatia where the Croats attacked Monday and Tuesday, seizing control of a section of the vital Zagreb-Belgrade highway.

But the truce may not calm the anger and animosity between Serbs and Croats, whose bitter 1991 war killed 10,000 people and left the Serbs in control of onethird of Croatia before spreading to neighboring Bosnia.

Croatian army withdrawal from the estimated 200 square miles of territory taken. A senior rebel Serb official, Ilija Prijic, insisted the agreement gave the Croats 24 hours to withdraw.

Some 5,000 Serb civilians fled from the Croatian offensive into Serb-held parts of Bosnia. The International Committee of the Red Cross said Croatian missiles then hit a hospital in Bosanska Gradiska, a Serb-held Bosnian

Violence mars Major's tour of Northern Ireland city

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland — Fighting between police and supporters of the Irish Republican Army disrupted Prime Minister John Major's visit to Northern Ireland's second-largest city Wednesday.

In the worst street violence in the British-ruled province since the IRA announced a cease-fire eight months ago, predominantly Protestant police dragged and pushed Roman Catholics away from a sit-down protest outside the Tower Museum, which Major was due to visit.

The protesters pelted police with bottles and bricks, injuring 12 officers. One protester was arrested, and none were reported hurt, police said.

Major later reached the museum out canceled his visit to nearby Guildhall, the seat of local government, where he was to have met Londonderry's politicians - among them figures in the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party.

About 200 demonstrators called for the release of IRA prisoners. Among the crowd were relatives of 13 people killed by British troops in Londonderry in 1972.

Mitchel McLaughlin, Sinn Fein's chairman who had been invited to the Guildhall gathering, blamed the trouble on police and on his supporters' anger at the slow pace of negotiations with Britain.

McLaughlin said he thought "the situation was mishandled on both sides," alleging police broke a verbal agreement to let protesters move aside when Major arrived. Major called that "absolutely ludicrous" and told Britain's Independent Television News the clash was "a riot organized so far as one can tell by

Earlier in Belfast, about 20 members of Sinn Fein shouted at Major as he emerged from a meeting with leaders of the Presbyterian Church, the largest Protestant denomination in Northern Ireland. Police pushed back picketers as Major shook hands with dozens of smiling shoppers in Belfast's bustling downtown.

Major defended his government's refusal to let Sinn Fein get beyond "exploratory" talks with Britain until the IRA agrees to disarm. In a speech to business leaders at a country hotel outside Belfast, Major said it isn't acceptable "for parties in our democracy to front private

"To sit at the same table, Sinn Fein" must gain the confidence of the other parties by making a commitment to progressive disarmament," he said.

Britain's talks with Sinn Fein entered a new phase Wednesday when Britain's No. 2 minister in Belfast, Michael Ancram, sat down with Sinn Fein negotiators. It was the first time a British minister met with Sinn Fein since an IRA cease-fire went into effect Sept. 1, ending the group's 24-year campaign against British rule.

BAD FOR HEALTH, ENVIRONMENT

Ethanol's disadvantages

For years, legislators have been looking for a cleaner alternative to regular gasoline. The search has been supported by President Clinton and Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad and even used as a campaign platform for Texas senator and Republican presidential candidate-hopeful Phil Gramm, who has been referred to as the "ethanol senator."

In 1990, the U.S. Court of Appeals said the Environmental Protection Agency could set a standard for the amount of pollution under the Clean Air Act. Last January, the act was modified to state that ethanol gasoline was required in many cities around the United States to combat smog problems.

Last Friday, however, the appeals court overturned the 1990 ruling, saying the EPA doesn't have the authority to require use of ethanol in cleaner-burning fuels. Perhaps legislators are finally coming clean to what they really know about the alternative miracle known as ethanol.

Ethanol seems to be the wonder fuel of the '90s. Not only is it better for the environment, but it is also made of corn. This seemed like a dream come true for Midwestern corn growers. providing them with a whole new way to use their crops. A U.S. Department of Agriculture study said use of ethanol would create a need for 1.5 billion bushels of corn.

But in some ways, the alternative was merely a fantasy. Studies show that ethanol can cause additional air pollution instead of helping to decrease it. According to an Associated Press article, it evaporates in warm weather, causing further contamination to the environment.

The fuel has also been plugged as cheaper than traditional

According to a Washington Post article, however, that is not usually the case. The Post reported that industry officials say prices have increased from 3 cents to 6 cents per gallon and as high as 17 cents per gallon in Wisconsin. This is hardly a low-

Ethanol also gives lower gas mileage - as much as 25 percent less than nonethanol gasoline. Consequently, drivers have to fill up 25 percent more often. It also isn't a favorable alternative for cars made before 1990 because it may cause engine problems in older automobiles, according to a February 1995 Washington Post article.

A fourth problem, according to The Chicago Tribune, is that ethanol has been linked to complaints of headaches and nausea. It also puts drivers at risk when they fill up at local gas sta-

It seems that researchers didn't do their homework five years ago when they ordered ethanol to be put in use by January 1995. Now, after it has been used for about five months, the courts decide that it costs more, may be worse for the environment and causes health problems. Then what are the advantages of using ethanol? It is very difficult to find any.

EASE OF RECYCLING

Habit not inconvenient

Americans rely on convenience. It's a fast-paced world, and nobody wants to fall a step behind. From the remote control to fast food and automobiles, everything in American culture is designed to be fast. Things that require extra effort often fall by the wayside, although often unintentionally.

Summer is coming, bringing with it road trips, beaches and sunshine. Most people spend more time outdoors in the summertime, participating in activities ranging from sports to camping out. The problem is that our fast-paced culture of convenience often leads people astray, allowing them to forget about an issue as important as recycling.

The growing problem of waste threatens to harm the environment and possibly take away many of the outdoor wonders that we take for granted. People hear about recycling all the time. In fact, they probably hear about it so much they eventually begin to tune it out. They hear that waste is bad and conservation and recycling are good.

Obviously, it is much easier to toss a soda can or a newspaper into a trash can than to collect them and take them to appropriate recycling bins. This is where our culture sets in. Most people do believe we need to recycle, but the effort to recycle must be a conscious decision. Rather than pitching the can and paper, people must take the time to save them and carry them away.

It is a matter of habit. Right now, aluminum cans are probably recycled more than anything else, perhaps only because of the 5 cent refund incentive, but it is a start. However, even with the refund, far too many cans are thrown into garbage bins around campus simply because it is inconvenient to carry them until an appropriate place can be found to dispose of them.

Many everyday trash items can be recycled: plastic, aluminum, glass, paper and newspaper. Bins are set up throughout cities across the nation, often at parks and grocery stores. The UI residence halls even have facilities in the basements, and outside of most UI buildings there are recycling facilities. Some cities in Iowa have even begun street recycling pickup. Residents are given a plastic crate in which to store various items for recycling and then these items are picked up on a weekly basis, just like trash.

Recycling is a simple procedure, and the recent attention it received has allowed it to become more convenient than ever before. All it takes is a conscious effort, a walk down some stairs, a quick stop on the way to the grocery store or a short walk to the curb. Do it a few times and it will become habit. It is often overstated and used to make people feel guilty, but recycling is just a simple habit that should become part of daily life, a habit the doesn't even have to be inconvenient.

It's always kind to help out a recovering slob

In writing this column, I am risking public derision, social rejection and probably total ostracism from all decent

I have decided to go public with a shameful secret of my existence. I am a member of a heavily discriminated against and much vilified group of people. We've been silent for too long, and it's

I am cleaning-impaired.

In the past, I always had excuses for my inability to keep a clean house: I was busy; I had exams; I was working on a cure for cancer. Anything to get out of doing a few dishes.

And recently, I've tried to mend my ways by undertaking an immense spring-cleaning effort. But now as I stand in my apartment unable to move two feet without tripping over something, I am confronted with my own failure, with the bleak and horrifying realization that my life, like my living room, is a God-awful mess. I've hit There was a time when I could control it - when I only had half of a residence hall room to contend with and would sit on my neatly made bed, snickering at the sloppy personal habits of my roommate.

Now the only way my habitat can bear favorable comparison with someone else's would be if that someone else was a dung beetle

I seem unable to master even the simplest of cleaning tasks. Take the dish cycle for example: clean dishes come from the kitchen cabinets, go out to the dining room (or in my case, the living room floor) to be dirtied, come back to the kitchen to be put into the sink and cleaned, then sit a spell in the drying rack before they are ready to go back in the cabinet.

their dishes virtually suspended at point A, the kitchen cabinets? My dishes seem to follow the dynamics of matter in a gaseous state: They spread out through the apartment, seeking to achieve equilibrium in which all space is equally dense with dishes.

It can be terribly embarrassing to realize that a week after I've had dinner guests, those guests are returning to the apartment and the pots and pans from that same meal have not made it back to their homes. Instead, they are still sitting around on the stove, silently testifying to my utter lack of cleanliness. I generally shut them up by covering them with potholders.

Then there is the matter of laundry

A few years ago, my significant other and I rented two rooms in a boarding house. One room we lived in and the other housed a staggeringly huge pile of laundry that belonged in a sciencefiction movie. Had it come to life, it would have easily been capable of consuming Tokyo and New York City, with Steve McQueen as a palate cleanser between courses.

When we moved into an apartment, the laundry came with us. We may well have laundry items that have been neither washed nor worn in years; we wouldn't know for sure because the aundry - like the dishes - gets done periodically but has never all been done at once.

What I am talking about, you understand, is not just the lack of calls from Good Housekeeping asking to do a photo spread of my place.

I am talking about being deeply shaken every time I call to have a pizza delivered and realize that the delivery guy is going to see my apartment. In that case, having a few boxes of laundry sitting out is a plus: "Maybe he'll think we just moved in," I'll say hopefully

I am talking about the fact that even though the toilet is broken (so that we have to turn the valve on the wall on and off each individual time we want to fill the tank), we never call the apartment manager because we want to clean up the place first. Embarrassment is not the only factor; Viewpoints Pages

GUEST OPINION • ASHLEY SOVERN

Dealing with the fact that it could happen again

The only appropriate word to describe the Oklahoma City bombing which has been used over and over and it is, in every sense, a "tragedy." I add my grief to that of the survivors, the families of the murdered victims and the world. As I listen to President Clinton making plans for how our government can make things safer for us from the threat of terrorism, I am struck by the haunting familiarity of his words and I now realize why.

Often, one of the hardest concepts for a rape victim to grapple with is that it could happen again. This is probably the one aspect of working with abuse survivors which I find to be the most painful, confusing and unfair. I know that many of us have dealt with tragedies in our lives or in the lives of people we love, traumas that according to the textbooks are "above and beyond the range of normal human experience," which just make it clear that we need to redefine normality in this age. We have been raped, abused, battered, victimized by incest, harassed, stalked, our loved ones have been murdered and we have handled it in the best way we know how, whatever that way is.

My wise friend Rosalie says that one of the most heartening things about humanity is the way in which we just keep going and that it is an affirmation of ourselves and the reality of our lives to just get out of bed in the morning. And how on earth do women keep getting out of bed in the morning, knowing it could happen again?

Sometimes a rape survivor tells me that They feel powerless. If violence against women she's never going to let it happen to her again because she's going to change - change her boyfriend, change her lifestyle, change her clothes, change her drinking habits, change her attitude, change her friends, change her apartment, change her plans. When I hear that, I know that part of the woman's healing process will involve her coming to the understanding that it's not her fault - which is more than something we're supposed to say; it is the truth. The woman will eventually come to the painful realization that even if she changes into a completely different person in a completely different life, as long as she lives in this world, it could still happen again. Someone might someday decide to hurt her again. And this knowledge is a tragedy as well.

If Clinton came into my office tomorrow and said - as he's said already in his remarks to the American people - "I will not allow the nation to be subjected to this horror," I would have to explain to him very gently that it's not his fault. And even if he changes the law, changes the budget, changes the appeals process, passes an anti-terrorism bill by the end of May, posts sentries at the door of every federal building in the way that many of our women's health clinics have been forced to; even if we all carry our mace, take self-defense classes, lock our doors - it could still happen

To many of us, the connections are clear. Acquaintances of Timothy McVeigh's, members of the Michigan Militia and other quasimilitary right-wing groups have said they feel like they have no rights anymore and they are afraid.

rape and assault - is a crime of power, then certainly the manmade catastrophe in Oklahoma City is also an attempt to gain power. Terrorists are terrorists whether they target a federal building full of people or one frightened

Responding to violence is only one part of the puzzle, but it has to be a consistent response. it isn't acceptable to blow up a person because they work for the federal government, then it must not be acceptable for Kenneth Peacock to shoot and kill his wife Sandra, with the excuse that she was unfaithful and therefore deserved it. The Maryland judge in the case decided Sandra Peacock's life warranted a mere 18 months in jail for her husband. I would be very surprised if McVeigh is convicted of the bomb ing to see him receive a sentence of only 18

Until the culture stops turning a blind eye toward violence against some of us, it will hap pen again. The 1,460 women killed by their partners in the United States last year weren't in a federal building (though they could have filled several); they were in their homes. The president has not rallied the country in their support; the media has not mourned them; no one has passed $1.5 million worth of immediate legislative action on their behalf to stop the terrorists. The remaining piece of the puzzle is creating a world where any violence against us as individuals is unthinkable and will not be tolerated.

The stipend increase is a result of a plan drafted in 1993 by the UI minimum stipend for UI research Revitalization Committee, a group of graduate students and faculty that has worked to increase funding for TAs and research assistants by lobbying the Iowa Legislature, Big Ten, with stipends for UI the Iowa state Board of Regents and Gov. TAs and research assistants at other Big Ten schools probably will not see such a dramatic salary increase in the 1995-96 school year, Sims told the UI Graduate and Professional Student Senate Wednesday night.

There have also been high-profile failures, most notably the dramatic arrest and subsequent midnight release of Gary Alan Land and Robert Jacks, two drifters whose travels seemed to connect them to McVeigh.

Although the two were released, the FBI is still checking their move-

At the El Travotore Motel in Kingman, Ariz., where they lived for five months, owners June and Bill Terranova said the FBI searched until Wednesday afternoon.

Also Wednesday, two agents interviewed the manager of Gene's Motel in Marshall, Mo., where Land and Jacks reportedly stayed last month.

"You're always going to have lookalikes," said FBI spokesman Dan Vogel. "But in a case like this, we'd be criticized if we didn't check them out. ... We have an obligation to."

Patrick Regan The Daily Iowan

It was an up and down year for Iowa athletics.

The 21 men's and women's varsity sports at the UI combined for just two Big Ten titles. But that doesn't tell the whole story.

The Hawkeye wrestlers went undefeated, winning a record 22nd straight Big Ten title and the NCAA Championship at Carver-Hawkeye Arena in March.

While heavy favorites Lincoln McIlravy and Joel Sharratt were beaten in their title matches, sophomore Jeff McGinness capped an unbeaten season with a national championship in the 126-pound division. He joins track and field all-American Yolanda Hobbs as the DI's Male and Female Athletes of the Year.

However, the Hawkeyes didn't make it there by dominating opponents as they have in the past. Following a disappointing third-place conference finish, Iowa redeemed itself with a Big Ten tourney crown and an upset of top-seed Old Dominion to reach the Final

The Daily Iowan

For the past six years, the name Jeff McGinness has been synonymous with winning. After capturing four state wrestling titles and compiling a record of 172-0 at Iowa City High, the 126-pounder took the next step this season, winning his first NCAA National Championship in front of a sold-out crowd at Carver-Hawkeye Are-

"It was a big thrill for two reasons," said McGinness a month and a half after capturing the NCAA crown.

"First of all, because I didn't win (the title) last year and second because I was able to win it in front of my hometown."

Hobbs sprints ahead of pack

Shannon Stevens The Daily Iowan

She proved she was a good runner by earning all-American status as a member of Iowa's 1994 recordbreaking 4-by-100 meter relay team. Then she went solo.

In her senior season on the women's track team, Iowa sprinter Yolanda Hobbs is charting new territory in the Iowa record books.

Following a strong performance at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships in March, Hobbs became the first Hawkeye sprinter in Iowa history to receive all-American status in an individual event.

As a result, she is the DI Female Athlete of the Hobbs earned all-American honors in both the 55and 200-meter dashes after recording ninth-place finishes in each event. She also won the 55-meter dash at the Big Ten Championships in 6.83 seconds. Hobbs hasn't lost any steam in the outdoor season. She has already provisionally qualified for the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships after clocking a time of 11.62 seconds in the 100-

Iowa assistant coach Jim Grant, who works primarily with the sprinters, said Hobbs' new-found success could be attributed to an increased intensity following a strong junior campaign.

"I think last summer she was really convinced that she could excel at this level," Grant said. "After competing on the 4-by-100 relay team that earned all-American honors at the national meet last year, she really came back a lot stronger this fall. She's working much harder in her workouts this season." Hobbs said she gained a lot of confidence running on the 4-by-100 relays.

Her running philosophy is simple.
"I'm a firm believer that every time you go out there you have to give it your best and that's what I always try to do," Hobbs said. "I'm never out there just to win. I'd rather lose and improve my time than always win and never get any better."

Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said Hobbs was a good role model for a young Hawkeye team.

Sherman was still recovering from a broken foot that had kept him out of five games. He had just come back for a fourth-quarter rally in Iowa's 21-21 tie at Purdue one game earlier.

"That's about as significant an impact as I've seen from a player in his first start," Iowa offensive coordinator and quarterbcaks coach described being in a zone' and that Don Patterson said. "The thing that sticks in my mind most is that even when he was sitting, he did a great job learning the plays. He was mentally rehearsing and learning the defenses (during his time off).

a freshman pushed him to the title his sophomore year.

"I think I was ready last year," McGinness said before the 1994-95 season began. "It was my own fault that I didn't win it. Whether it was lack of mental preparation or the fact that I was a little immature coming in. I really didn't know what to expect."

"This year I've matured a lot physically and mentally and I think I'll be right there."

And the 19-year-old all-American did not disappoint. He finished the year 30-0, improving on his 36record as a freshman.

But perhaps more rewarding than that was defeating Sanshiro Abe of Penn State in the finals, a wrestler who has handed McGinness one-third of his career losses.

"When I lost my first match to him, it was a setback mentally because it was one of my first losses (at Iowa)," McGinness said. Once I got over the hump earlier

Four-the DI's choice as Upset of the Year.

Many Hawkeye fans were discouraged by the football team's 5-5-1 record, but the future is encouraging with quarterback Matt Sherman returning for three more seasons. The freshman showed what he could do in his first start, completing 19 of 24 passes for 331 yards and three touchdowns against Northwestern, which was impressive enough to be chosen DI's Male Performance of the Year.

Despite a disappointing football season, fans were able to find some solace that Fall with the volleyball team's improbable run to the NCAA tournament.

After a projected 11th-place Big Ten finish, the Hawkeyes went from perennial Big Ten doormat to third in the Big Ten and a 24-8 record. The remarkable turnaround resulted in the DI's Comeback Team of the Year award and DI Coach of the Year honors for Iowa's Linda Schoenstedt

Women's basketball suffered a trying season at 11-16, but freshman Tiffany Gooden shined. She averaged 15.3 points and 5.1 rebounds in Big Ten play, including a 36-point, 11-rebound effort at Michigan State. As a result, Gooden wins the DI's Female Perfomance and Freshman of the Year

Teammate Tia Jackson was an easy choice for Comeback Player of the Year. A knee injury kept her out of action in the '93-'94 campaign and hampered her this year, but she battled through the pain to lead Iowa in scoring at a 13.7

While the women's basketball team was marred in its worst season under Coach C. Vivian Stringer, the men's team provided unexpected excitement to the winter sports season.

Tom Davis became Iowa basketball's winningest coach and the Hawkeyes rebounded from a lastplace Big Ten finish to go 9-9 in the conference and make a strong run in the NIT.

Few who were at Carver-Hawkeye Arena March 8 will ever forget Iowa's 79-78 victory over No. 9 Michigan State. Andre Woolridge buried a baseline jumper with two seconds left to give Iowa the win. Fans stormed the court after the victory, which appeared to lock up an NCAA tourney bid for the Hawkeyes. Four days later, jubilation turned into disbelief as Iowa was left off the 64-team guest list.

Nonetheless, the game and Woolridge's shot garnered the DI's

The spring performance, the culmination of the dance department's year, will focus on 12 works by faculty, graduate students and undergraduates. Traditionally a forum for undergraduate dancers and choreographers, the work that will most likely serve as a highlight to the show is a restaging by UI Assistant Professor Linda Crist.

'Sleeping' adds new element to romantic formula — family

The Daily Iowan

Most romances feature some take on the age-old formula "boy meets girl, boy loses girl, boy gets girl back." "While You Were Sleeping," although a traditional cinematic romance in some ways, dodges the cliché with the rather unusual formula "girl meets boy's family, fills the major hole in her

A romance between a young woman and an extended family is an odd theme for a light summer film, but it's this oddness that makes "Sleeping" an unusually sweet and special movie. While the film has its share of unlikely coincidences and reality-stretching plot conveniences, it eclipses them all with fresh, funny sentiment and a willingness to present its characters as humans, not romantic

Sandra Bullock, who won kudos for being sternly, confidentially submissive to Keanu Reeves in 'Speed," finds her true element in "Sleeping." She sparkles in her role New Yorker who gave up much of her future to be with her ailing father until his death. She has no family and few friends. She's the type of person whose life consists mostly of talking to her cat and fantasizing about passing strangers. It's not surprising that her boss at the Central Transit Authority grabs her whenever he wants someone to work on "family"

Bill Pullman and Sandra Bullock star in "While You Were Sleeping."

So it's also no surprise that she finds herself on duty Christmas Day collecting train tokens. But the dreary holiday takes a strange turn when she sees the man of her as Lucy, an attractive but lonely dreams accosted by some strangers, then accidentally pushed onto the train track. Lucy pulls him out of the way of an oncoming train, saving his life, but finds he's fallen into a coma. At the hospital, a nurse on duty overhears her frustrated lament, "I was going to marry him!" and begins telling the doctors and the victim's family that Lucy is his fiancée. Suddenly, a tight-knit group of quirky but friendly people think she's a member of the family and they welcome her with open arms.

The setup sounds ridiculous in print, but the "Sleeping" screenwriters use humor, creativity and some deft sleight of hand to make it work. Events fall together at lightning speed, leaving Lucy and the audience with little time to catch their breath but plenty of time to appreciate the upshot. Soon, Lucy is attending family parties and hanging out with her dream man's handsome brother Jack (Bill Pullman, recently seen at the Bijou in "The Last Seduction"). She's not sure how to tell the family they're wrong about her and she's not sure she wants to. They're sweet and energetic people though neither cloyingly cute nor improbably perfect - and she doesn't want to let them down or

Zollo and bandmate Darren Matthews, who plays guitar, spent the month of April overseas, playing about 15 shows. "It was kind of workmanlike, but we continued the work that was started the first time I went over there and last summer when the entire band went," Zollo said. "We seemed to be pretty well-received. The audience for the kind of music we play isn't as large as it is here, but by the same token, they are very hip. They turned me on to a lot of American music that I hadn't heard before." Matthews said playing in Italy was a good experience.

BLOOD, GUTS AND VIOLENCE GALORE

'Kiss of Death' comes off as rehash of 'Pulp Fiction' without the bite

Tasha Robinson The Daily Iowan

"Kiss of Death" is a cinematic anomaly. Director Barbet Schroeder ("Single White Female") started out remaking the 1947 thriller of the same name but ended up trying to imitate "Pulp Fiction" instead. The result is a well-written, well-acted but somewhat misdirected movie that's exciting to watch, but can't quite find a consis-

Schroeder takes what looks like a '40s police noir movie and packs it with '80s smut and action, often with mixed results. The hard-edged, crafty, '40s-flavored plot keeps things going, but Schroeder seems to want to modernize things via a massive influx of blood baths and naked women. He even throws in that oldest of '80s clichés, an extended, gratuitous topless bar scene.

Schroeder also netted two of "Pulp Fiction" 's cast members (Samuel Jackson and Ving Rhames) and had them reprise their roles on a smaller, drier scale. Still, "Kiss of Death" has a strong backbone under the blood-The police, on the other hand, and-breasts window dressing. Above all, the tension of Jimmy's ally abuse and threaten him. Screenwriter Richard Price ("The Color of Money") doesn't have Tarantino's talent for dialogue, but he's got an idea of how to keep an audience guessing.

Likewise, the actors mostly know what they're doing. Caruso is quirky but convincing as the one sort of good guy in the midst of a mess. Jackson's role is too drab while Rhames' is too small, but both actors still prove fascinating to watch. Only Cage ("Wild at Heart") seems out of place, as he delivers a toneless, glazed-over performance that seems to resemble Dennis Hopper's in "Blue Velvet" only without the drugs, the character motivation or the raw talent.

Schroeder's midfilm change of heart doesn't hurt "Kiss of Death" as much as it might have, but it keeps the film from living up to its true potential. More than anything, it points out why Schroeder's just not a Tarantino: He doesn't have enough confidence to weirdly popeyed body builder hit director's focus on unconven- trust his own creativity instead of

'L'avventura' stands as pure art film

Jonathon Gourlay The Daily Iowan

Michelangelo Antonioni's stark 1960 drama "L'avventura" is the quintessential art house movie. It is at once vague, philosophical, beautiful and dramatic. The ambiguities of plot and character it presents provide fodder for endless pseudo-intelligent conversations over espresso.

The story is simple: On a sunny summer day Anna (Lea Massari) disappears while on a pleasure cruise around barren islands in the Mediterranean. Her lover Sandro (Gabriele Ferzetti) and her friend Claudia (Monica Vitti) search for her but eventually forget about her and fall in love with each other.

The movie's slow pace, unexplained plot elements, emotionless characters - the entire existential nightmare that is "L'avventura" were revolutionary in 1960. But all of this is now familiar to any filmgoer who has ventured beyond the usual Stallone flick. What Antonioni did with great seriousness is now part of a post-modern bag of tricks that nearly any European director can call upon when they want to say something important.

As a culture we have become perhaps too addicted to speed. However, the plot of "L'avventura" is barely enough to fill the opening credits of most modern movies, so the movie may be good for us like step aerobics, but it is still tedious.

The deliberate slowness is meant to heighten the interior action of the characters. Every wan look on Claudia's face, every repressed emotion in Sandro's heart are staged methodically and gorgeously with Antonioni's unparalleled gift for composition.

Unfortunately, the characters are so self-involved and morose that it is hard to care much about their inner turmoil. Only Vitti's Claudia displays a kind of humanity that is sympathetic.

But at its heart, "L'avventura" is still a soap opera - albeit a soap opera that aims to portray "a psychological and moral adventure," as Antonioni describes it. The

DENFELD LIKENS TODAY'S ENVIRONMENT TO VICTORIAN AGE

Author tries to keep her head in changing world of feminism

Paul Ferguson

The Daily Iowan

It's not easy to stand in the middle of the feminist road these days, according to those who are yelling the loudest.

On one front, radical feminist theorists such as Andrea Dworkin and Catherine MacKinnon are questioning the very foundations of sexuality, gender and modern society. On the other front, anti-feminists from Camille Paglia to Katie Roiphe to Rush Limbaugh are claiming feminism has gone too far, teaching women to act like helpless victims and encouraging hatred of men.

One woman who is at least trying to tread the middle ground - if there can be such a thing - is Rene Denfeld. Her book "The New Victorians: One Young Woman's Challenge to the Old Feminist Order" (Warner Books) outlines her views on what is wrong with feminism today. And while it makes far too many assumptions about feminism and feminists, it may help move the discussion in a new direction.

"The fact is that feminism has changed - dramatically," Denfeld writes in the book's introduction. "While there are some feminists still in touch with most women's concerns, the movement for the most part has taken a radical change in direction. It has become bogged down in an extremist moral and spiritual crusade that has little to do with abolition of sex and abortion rights.

"In their campaigns against heterosexuality, pornography and in their sweeping redefinitions of rape, feminists echo the Victorians in declaring male lust the root of all evil," Denfeld states, referring to the central argument of her book. Feminists today have adopted the same image of women as chaste, fragile creatures and bastions of morality that the Victorian society did, she claims. These "New Victorians" are pushing women into martyrdom and powerlessness, she says, rather than encouraging women to use existing channels to gain the power they

Denfeld's examination of inflated rape statistics is one of the book's most compelling sections. In a chaptions with men, citing the National ter called "Victim Mythology: Rape and the Feminist Agenda," she traces occupation with lesbian issues; some the widely publicized one-in-four radical literature on campus rape; rape statistic to studies by researchers Diana Russell and Mary MacKinnon, Sheila Jeffreys and others that seem to be pushing for the questionable manner in which they did their research and illustrating the fallout in the popular media.

What Denfeld doesn't adequately show is why inflated rape statistics are such a horrible thing, given that the shock from such numbers may make a complacent public actually think about rape. And while she makes a strong case for fighting a resurgence of Victorian morality, she never really creates a convincing argument that such a trend exists.

In fact, virtually all of Denfeld's claims are supported by a handful of highly publicized writings that have more to do with their press-hungry authors than mainstream feminism. She also combs through the syllabi of women's studies classes across the country, including those of the UI. and assumes that the presence of writings about goddess religions and articles by Dworkin and MacKinnon means that their ideas are taught as dogma, not read critically. She even calls for an end to women's studies based on a few incidents of male bashing and intolerance in the class-

In her unbending pragmatism, Denfeld not only assumes that goddess religions and an alleged antiheterosexuality campaign are major tenets of feminism, but she seems to think that such ideas have no value simply because they work toward more theoretical goals.

It is true that questioning the basis of heterosexuality may not raise women's wages, but questioning the status quo is what created feminism, and assuming that only easily attainable goals are worth fighting for is more dangerous than the most radical academic theories.

It is often difficult to wade through Denfeld's constant generalizations to find the good arguments within, but feminists and anti-feminists alike should find "The New Victorians" the perfect kindling for more heated

"The music is everything from Kronos to Shel Silverstein's poetry," she said. "We have quite a large variety." Included in that variety will be a work by UI freshman Laura Derosier titled "Sirens." It's unusual to have a freshman in the concert and it should be interesting to see how Derosier's work matches up with pieces by older, more experienced dancers and choreographers.

Other works to watch for include solos by UI Dancers in Company members Laura Gates, a junior, and Jing Hong Kuo, a senior. To add to the musical diversity of the show, Gates is dancing to "Baker, Baker" by Tori Amos.

The year-end Space / Place performances are usually a good indicator of where the dance department is heading in terms of young talent being recognized and cultivated. Watching choreography by everyone from Humphrey to a UI freshman should make for an interesting motley show of young upstarts and dance department staples

The Space / Place performance will be performed Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. Tickets are $4.
