'InQueery' sponsorship costs UI

State Legislature cuts $100,000 from university's operating budget

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The UI was stripped of $100,000 in funding by the Iowa Legislature Thursday, but lawmakers can't agree why.

The $100,000 cut came as a result of the UI's sponsorship of the "InQueery / InTheory / InDeed" North American Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Conference in November, said Rep. Charles Hurley, R-Fayette.

Hurley sponsored an amendment Tuesday to the $753 million higher-education funding bill that would have banned state universities from using state money to "promote" homosexuality or bisexuality as a "positive alternative lifestyle." That amendment passed the House but was defeated by the Senate late Wednesday.

However, Hurley claimed victory Thursday, saying the budget cut was a reaction to his amendment.

"Maybe money speaks louder than words anyway," he said. Hurley said he was "profoundly disappointed" that university officials plan to continue offering programs on gay rights issues.

The "InQueery / InTheory / InDeed" conference, held Nov. 17-18, was a gathering of gays, lesbians and bisexuals from around the world. It focused on homosexual and bisexual theory and the reading of academic papers.

The controversy surrounding "InQueery" isn't over yet, said UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes.

Statehouse Fights Back

TUESDAY
An amendment to the higher education funding bill banning Iowa universities from using state money to "promote" homosexuality is approved by Iowa House of Representatives.

WEDNESDAY
At around 8 p.m., the Iowa Senate removed the amendment from the bill, unanimously approved it and sent the bill back to the House for further debate.

THURSDAY
The House accepts the bill without the amendment with a vote of 77-17. However, the UI gets $100,000 less than expected, reportedly because of the sponsorship of the "InQueery / InTheory / InDeed" conference in November.

The Senate adjourns for the year at 12:57 p.m. The House adjourns at 1:30 p.m.

Hawkeye charged with giving false reports

Marcus "Tex" Montgomery, UI junior and Hawkeye middle line-backer, was charged with providing false reports to law enforcement officers after he allegedly claimed to be someone else, court records show.

According to reports, Montgomery was stopped by Iowa City police at 10:37 p.m. April 22 when officers checking IDs at The Airliner bar, 22 S. Clinton St., noticed passengers in the car he was driving had open containers of alcohol.

Colleen Riordan, Justine Sleezer and Kelly Kams were each charged with possession of an open container. Montgomery allegedly used the expired ID of UI junior Alfred Lloyd Bickham and was charged that night with not having a valid driver's license, said Sgt. Craig Lih of the Iowa City Police Department.

On May 1, when police investigators realized Montgomery had used Bickham's ID, they charged Montgomery with providing false reports to law enforcement officers.

All charges filed in the case are simple misdemeanors and are punishable by a fine of up to $100 and / or up to 30 days in jail, Lih said.

"But I've never seen anyone go to jail on a simple misdemeanor," he said.

Tan now, pay later: melanoma cases up

ATLANTA — The deadliest of skin cancers has gotten deadlier.

The number of people diagnosed with melanoma rose about 4 percent a year from 1973 to 1991, according to the national Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. That was faster than any other kind of cancer.

And the rate of melanoma deaths rose by 34 percent, from 1.6 per 100,000 people in 1973 to nearly 2.2 in 1992, the CDC reported. Melanoma causes about three-quarters of all deaths from skin cancer.

Researchers blame the increase on the popularity of outdoor recreation and tanning, despite the recent proliferation of sunscreens and increased knowledge about the sun's dangers, said Barbara Bewers, a public health educator for the CDC. As few as three severe sunburns during childhood appears to raise the risk of melanoma, she said. See CANCER, Page 10A

Serbs suffer defeat at hands of Croats

PAKRAC, Croatia — Hundreds of Serbian rebels fought Thursday to escape being trapped by the Croatian army, then raised white flags and laid down arms in their biggest surrender of the Croatian war.

The surrender followed an intense fire fight in which both sides used tanks, mortars and rockets.

Tensions also soared on front lines in the east and south of Croatia as opposing forces moved into U.N. buffer zones, threatening to reignite all-out war after three years of uneasy peace monitored by U.N. peacekeeping troops.

Jittery residents of the capital, Zagreb, rushed for shelters when air-raid sirens wailed just before noon. But there was no repeat of the rocket attacks that killed six people and wounded 185 the previous two days.

Just 15 miles north of a portion of the Zagreb-Belgrade highway that the Croats seized from the Serbs in a surprise offensive beginning Monday, Pakrac became a trap for flee-

Police chemist Gregory Matheson said a more advanced genetic test suggests that the blood found under Nicole Brown Simpson's fingernails was her own. Early tests did not indicate a match, but he said the blood may have degraded.

Matheson said nearly a quarter of O.J. Simpson's blood is missing from a sample he voluntarily gave police the day after the murders. That amount could have provided as many as 150 blood swatches. The defense contends the missing blood was used to frame Simpson for the murders.

Daughter visits on day dad is fired

Associated Press

MILFORD, Ohio — Marisa Means expected to see how her father made his living on Take Our Daughters to Work Day. Instead, he got fired, and the two of them were escorted from the building.

Bill Means, a systems engineering manager for two years at Structural Dynamics Research Corp., was called in to talk with his supervisor the morning of April 27 and was unexpectedly fired, said his wife, Dailen Means.

After the meeting, he and Marisa, 8, were escorted from the building, she said.

Company employees had been sent an electronic mail reminder that they were free to bring in their daughters for the day, company spokesman Donald Newman said.

"The timing of the dismissal of Mr. Means was regrettable," he said.

OKLAHOMA CITY — Attorney General Janet Reno insisted Thursday that the trail hasn't gone cold in the hunt for John Doe No. 2. At the bombed-out building, crews moved closer to giving up the search with 14 still missing.

Workers began sifting through the last 6-foot pile of unsearched rubble. They planned to work through the night if necessary and then finally accept that some victims may never be found.

"I had wanted to find everybody," said fire Capt. Richard Bell. "But I realize now a lot are just gone."

The death toll climbed to 156, including 16 children.

Once the rescuers quit, families will be allowed to gather at the site for one last, private remembrance.

2, the second suspect in the bombing, has not been identified or taken into custody.

But she said the FBI is following thousands of leads in the April 19 bombing, the deadliest domestic terrorist attack in U.S. history.

The arrest and release of two drifters originally believed linked to bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh, the only person charged so far, demonstrate that "it is also important that people who are not guilty, who are not implicated, are quickly clarified as such," Reno said.

"And so I'm glad that that process worked where those very unusual coincidences took place," the attorney general said.

Triathlete marked by love of grueling sport

Matthew Brown
The Daily Iowan

UI alumnus Matt Christiansen's upper left arm is imprinted with a tattoo that shows his devotion to what seems more like a prison escape plan than a sport. The tattoo shows a stick figure swimming, biking and running — components of the triathlon.

DAY IN THE LIFE

Christiansen said the grueling sport attracts superfit rebels and a band of fans known as "weekend warriors" who enjoy the camaraderie and unconventional scene surrounding it.

"Competitors are going out there for pure enjoyment, and the race is almost an afterthought for a lot of these people," he said. "They have parties after the event with kegs in the outdoors. There is a rebellious attitude in there."

The three-part event, in which racers go directly from swimming to biking to running, started in Hawaii in the mid-1970s and will be an Olympic event for the first time in Sydney, Australia, in 2000.

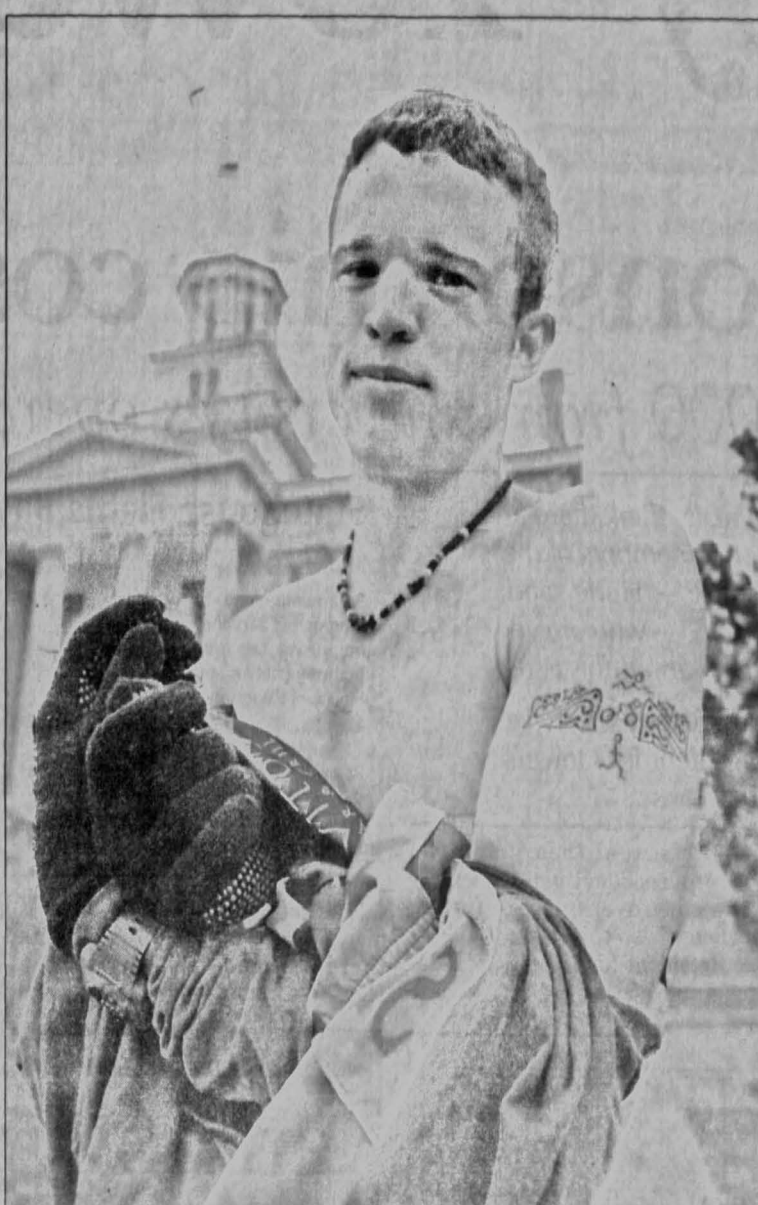

The contest starts in the water, and athletes then get straight onto a bike. There are only a few equipment changes between the stages.

"You're just putting on bike shoes and a helmet — which is required — and sunglasses," Christiansen said.

Christiansen is sponsored by Iowa City Spoke & Ski, 700 S. Dubuque St., and provides publicity for the store when he competes in state triathlons.

He was runner-up in the Heart of America races in Cedar Rapids last year and now is race director for an event in Lake View, Iowa.

A swimmer since he was 3 years old — his mom was a swimming coach — Christiansen has been a triathlete since the age of 15. A native of Nebraska, his interest in

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

"I'm either very dedicated or crazy," said triathlete Matt Christiansen of his fascination and involvement in the triathlon. To show his love, he recently got a tattoo depicting the three triathlon events: running, swimming and biking. Having just returned from a competition in Florida, he's now training for the next one in Memphis, Tenn.

the sport was sparked after seeing coverage of triathlons on the sports pages of the Omaha World-Herald.

Christiansen, who was originally a psychology major, switched to health promotion because it's closer to his involvement in sports.

At 5 feet 9 inches tall and with a slender build, he does not fit the image of a big-time jock.

"You'd never suspect," he joked.

Christiansen said that the muscle development encouraged by the activities involved does not build bulk, so his body type is not unusual in the competitive field. With three different disciplines to master, he said he can't pinpoint a particular area in which he needs improvement.

"I don't really have a weakness," he said reflectively, but he admits a lack of experience in cycling.

Christiansen is the top nonpro triathlete in the state now that two Cedar Rapids brothers, Tim and Tony De Boom, have turned professional.

"In the 20-to-24 age group, I would say I am in the top 20 to 30 in the country," he said.

Will Christiansen go pro? "That is a way down the road," he said.

The typical day for Christiansen is hectic. He rises at 6:30 a.m. and either runs or swims for an hour and a half.

"It's a little nippy to get on the bike in the mornings," he said.

Christiansen goes to work at 8:45 a.m. at Mercy High School, where he monitors schoolchildren. From 3:30 to 5 p.m., he works out on a bike — usually on a stationary bike at Mercy. Later, he does an hour of weight training at home.

Christiansen sticks to a "high-carbohydrate, very low-fat" diet. He drinks wine and beer but said his education in health promotion has equipped him to make informed decisions about the damage alcohol can do to a body.

He has made a similar decision about caffeine, carefully incorporating the stimulating buzz into his training day to lift him from midafternoon doldrums.

Christiansen recently competed in a St. Petersburg, Fla., triathlon and plans to race in Chicago in June. These events will give Christiansen a chance to qualify for the world championship in Cancun, Mexico, in August.

Madonna donates classic car to support museum exhibit

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Material Girl maybe, but she knows what she likes.

Madonna

Madonna is giving up a classic Mercedes-Benz convertible to help the Philadelphia Museum of Art honor a photographer she admires.

The car, a 1969 model 280SE, will be sold at Sotheby's in New York in a June 10 auction of Hollywood and rock 'n' roll memorabilia. Sotheby's estimates the car's value at $40,000 to $60,000.

Proceeds will help pay for an exhibit of the late Tina Modotti's pictures from Sept. 16 to Nov. 26.

Madonna, who collects modern art, has long admired Modotti, an Italian-born photographer who worked in Mexico in the 1920s and '30s. The leftist activist became known for her photos of Mexican workers and women. She died in 1942 at age 46.

Soon-to-be father Neeson doesn't know what to expect

NEW YORK (AP) — When Liam Neeson met Natasha Richardson

two years ago, it was love at first push.

"She pushed all the right buttons," Neeson said in Sunday's Parade magazine. "Certain people push one or two. But she pushed buttons I didn't even know I had."

The couple hooked up while performing on Broadway in Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie."

Neeson, 42, and Richardson are expecting their first child next month. Neeson, who starred in "Schindler's List," isn't sure what to expect.

"All you know of your child is a little bit of you and your lady," said Neeson. "You've created a brand-new soul unlike anyone else on the planet. That's the miracle of life. What's it going to be? Who's it going to be?"

R.E.M. drummer ready to roll again

ATLANTA (AP) — R.E.M. is ready to resume its 1995 world tour two months after drummer Bill Berry had brain surgery.

"We put off going out until we felt he would be 100 percent," guitarist Peter Buck said Wednesday. "He wanted to go out earlier than this, and we had to try to restrain him."

The Athens, Ga.-based band rehearsed a week ago and plans more rehearsals next week, he said.

Berry suffered a cerebral hemorrhage on stage in Lausanne, Switzerland, during a March 1 concert.

The tour will resume May 15 in Mountain View, Calif.

Singer cashed after surgery complications

LONDON (AP) — A bad reaction to facial surgery forced Johnny Cash to postpone his European concert tour.

The country singer suffered discomfort during the opening concert Wednesday night, said Joe O'Neil, a spokesman for Cash's record company, American.

Cash, who had surgery last month for damage to a facial nerve, had shows scheduled in Ireland, Germany, Holland, Switzerland and Austria.

He returned to California for treatment, and the tour will be rescheduled for September, O'Neil said Thursday.

Former Beatle's son injured in auto accident

LONDON (AP) — Paul McCartney's 17-year-old son suffered a slight ankle fracture after he flipped his Land-Rover taking a short cut home.

"There are many other kids in this country who have suffered much worse injuries in accidents," McCartney said Thursday in a statement, appealing to the media to leave his son, James, alone.

The teen-ager was airlifted to a hospital Wednesday night after the crash close to his father's farm near Rye, 50 miles southeast of London.

"James suffered a slight fracture to his ankle when his Land-Rover rolled over after it hit some tractor ruts while he was taking a short cut home," McCartney said. "He was very lucky, but he is fine and in good shape."

All eyes were on James McCartney two years ago after he disappeared in heavy seas while surfing with friends. He was found, exhausted, on the shore near Rye.

McCartney also has two daughters and a stepdaughter.

Holocaust survivors' stories collected by Spielberg foundation

NEW YORK (AP) — Videotaping the stories of 75,000 Holocaust survivors is going to be a long haul for Steven Spielberg.

"This is a work that will never be over," says the director of "Schindler's List," the Holocaust film that won seven Academy Awards in 1994. "This is a once-in-a-generation chance to rescue the truth about the Holocaust."

Survivors of Shoah, a foundation Spielberg started 10 months ago, has already conducted more than 1,300 interviews. Its goal is to speak with one-fourth of the 300,000 survivors worldwide in the next two years.

Spielberg, who says the idea came directly from the survivors, recently called the project "the most meaningful thing I've ever done."

Iowa Legislature session comes to a grinding halt

Mike Glover
Associated Press
DES MOINES — The Legislature settled a fight over gay rights as it put the finishing touches on a $3.8 billion state budget and ended this year's legislative session Thursday.
Republicans and Democrats immediately declared this year's 116-day session a whopping success and said its signature will be a $100 million tax cut signed into law earlier this week.
"The tax cut, I think that's what they'll remember," said Senate President Leonard Boswell, D-Davis City. Boswell did say that tough anti-crime measures also will give legislators a political boost.
"It's been a session of tremendous accomplishment," House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs, said. "When we come back next year, we'll look at tax reductions again."
After four months of bitter partisan warfare at the Statehouse, the Legislature wrapped up its business with flowery speeches praising each other for cooperating.

The Senate closed its session at 12:57 p.m., and the House followed suit at 1:30 p.m.
There was, however, a warning that legislators face an even tougher task for the next election-year session.
"Next year when we come back, the stress level will be much higher," warned House Democratic leader David Schrader of Monroe.
Boswell conceded that the Legislature would again face a tax cut debate when it returns next January.
The end of the session also marked the beginning of the effort by both parties to claim credit.
There was growing momentum all week to end this year's session. Thursday was the 116th day lawmakers have been in session. Daily expense payments they receive ended last Friday.
Legislative budget staffers said the cost of this year's session would be $2.9 million, including a little more than $70,000 for this week.

7 NOMINEES ADDED TO LIST

Presidential pool widens

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan
Although calls are still pouring in for Steve Collins, chairman of the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee, the flow of nominations submitted for the next UI president is diminishing substantially.
Collins said he has been receiving telephone calls from people with questions about the confidentiality of the search process.
"It's been very clear to me that people I talk to on the telephone are very concerned about confidentiality," he said. "I'm doing my best to convey to people I talk to that we are doing our best to maintain confidentiality."
"We now have a total pool of 252 prospects," Collins said at the committee's Thursday night meeting. "It appears the rate at which nominations are coming in has decreased considerably."

The number of nominees announced Thursday night was seven more than the number presented at the committee's last meeting April 27.
Collins addressed the announcement made by the University of Northern Iowa's search committee Monday that the pool of candidates to replace UNI President Constantine Curris had been narrowed to six prospects.
The UNI search was initiated almost one month after the UI committee began its process.
"I think that most people understand there are just big differences between the two institutions," Collins said.
"The issue is not hasty vs. an appropriate timetable," he said. "It's a conventional timetable vs. a delayed timetable. Our goal is to complete the search as quickly as we can and to determine the very best candidate we can."

Bikes head for police auction block

Jill Groenenboom
The Daily Iowan
While a brand-new bicycle can carry a price tag of about $500, the Iowa City Police Department will try to unload about 200 abandoned or stolen bikes for an average cost of $50 each at an auction Saturday.
Last year, prices for the bikes ranged from $4 to $270. Police Capt. Donald Strand said he expects between 200 and 300 people to attend the auction at 1 p.m. in the parking lot next to the Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St.
"There are good bikes and not-so-good bicycles," Strand said.
New this year to the auction is the assistance of the Mayor's Youth Employment Program, 410 Iowa Ave., which received a grant to buy tools and hire a project coordinator to lead about 15 boys ranging from 8 to 17. The boys have been repairing about 25 to 30 bicycles for the past six months.
"The profits will go back into the project and to buying parts, and we'll give kids money for their time," said Ben O'Meara, director of the program. Proceeds from the sale of other bicycles will go to UI Public Safety.

The bikes ready to be auctioned off were either stolen and recovered or abandoned. Strand said every effort has been made to locate the owners.
"What we do is, first of all, we look for serial numbers and go into the computer to see if we have anything listed as stolen. Then we go back into the computer and find items that match the description of items listed as stolen," he said.
Evidence and lost-and-found items that are unclaimed also will be sold. For items seized under a search warrant, hearings are held to try to locate owners. Ownership is sometimes proven, but it is difficult.
"Unless there is a positive way to identify the item — like a serial number or Social Security number carved into it — there is no way you can say that is your TV. ... This is how a lot of it is accumulated," Strand said.
"We have items of merchandise we have seized as evidence during searches which nobody has come forward and claimed, not even the bad guy," he said.
The "bad guy" doesn't usually help the police determine who owned the

Bike Auction

The Iowa City Police Department's Bike Auction will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday in the parking lot next to the Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St.
There are about 200 abandoned or stolen bikes up for auction, and the average price is expected to be about $50.

Woman, children furnished with organization's generosity

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Within one month, Jean Martinolich went from a full-time UI graduate student to a substitute mother trying to provide a home for three children.

Martinolich's niece needed a place for her children — ages 12, 10 and 8 — to stay while she went into drug treatment, and Martinolich, 48, was given temporary custody.

"I was a graduate student enrolled at the UI last fall and I was already going through a transitional period in my life," Martinolich said. "But I decided to take them instead of placing them in a foster home, where they were likely to be separated."

Temporarily raising three children was a problem for Martinolich, who, like many other UI students, lived in a small, crowded apartment, which she shared with a roommate. But the Department of Human Services provided her with a new three-bedroom house which was in desperate need of furnishing.

After trying to scrounge up furniture from yard sales and pick up items people discarded and left out on the road, Martinolich called The Furniture Project, 1147 S. Riverside Drive, to see if she could receive donated furniture.

The Furniture Project is a nonprofit organization run by volunteers who distribute donated furniture to low-income families and former shelter residents in Iowa City and surrounding communities.

The service quickly delivered beds, a sofa and a love seat, dressers with mirrors and chests of drawers for each child, Martinolich said. The furniture was "very decent stuff," and the respect volunteers gave her when they delivered the furniture erased any feelings of embarrassment, she said.

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

David, 8, and his sister Molly, 10, sit beside their great-aunt, UI graduate student Jean Martinolich, on the sofa bed they recently received from The Furniture Project, 1147 S. Riverside Drive.

"The children were very traumatized before, but this is the first real furniture they've had to sleep on in two years," she said. "They feel like average kids again. The stabilization of the children was quick, and they were able to resume their normal lives again."

In an effort to help more people like Martinolich, The Furniture Project will hold a used-furniture donation drive through May 20, accepting whatever is needed to furnish a home comfortably, including appliances, televisions, blankets, rugs, carpets, and cribs and related children's furnishings.

The project wants to gain access to the UI student population for furniture donations and possible volunteer work. At this time of year, instead of throwing away used furniture, students can donate it for a good cause, said Cynthia Kay, project coordinator and AmeriCorps VISTA worker.

"We don't have access to the university unless it's through (the Women's Resource and Action Center), the student organization that represents us," Kay said.

The project works with other local organizations — such as the Crisis Center, 321 E. First St.; the Emergency Housing Project Inc., 331 N. Gilbert St.; and the Domestic Violence Intervention Program — to provide services. Just recently, the city of Iowa City matched $10,000 worth of funds from within the Solid Waste Division to support the project.

However, the project still lacks needed donations, Kay said.

"We probably have three needs to every two donations," she said. "For example, we have 75 requests for dressers, which don't come in often enough, and we get 10 dresser donations. Or we have 142 kitchen tables and chairs requested and we only receive 76 donations. The needs come in constantly, where the donations are seasonal."

Most of the people in need of furnishings are single parents, women and children below the poverty line and victimized women who lost all their belongings when they fled from violent homes, said Cris Kinkead, director of the Domestic Violence Intervention Program.

Ellen McCabe, director of the Crisis Center, said the project fills a glaring need and more community support for its continued success is necessary.

"There was no place for people to get free household projects," McCabe said. "If this community wants to help fight homelessness and help get these people back on their feet, they should have a mattress to sleep on at night."

As of February, 69 men, 158 women and 186 children — or 2.16 children per family — have received furniture through The Furniture Project, which was started in August 1993. The project has also garnered $2,100 in cash donations. Although it serves the entire Johnson County area, nearly 95 percent of those helped are from Iowa City.

Items in demand include dressers, kitchen tables and chairs, and mattress sets and bed frames. The items must be clean and in good condition, and the project reserves the right to refuse donations. There are some size limitations; for example, no large appliances, queen- or king-size beds or sofa beds are accepted.

Donation hours are 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. the second Saturday of every month. You can also make an appointment by calling 338-1129, extension 24.

Foster appears closer to clearing committee confirmation hurdle

Nita Lelyveld
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Dr. Henry Foster's chances of becoming surgeon general seem to be rising rapidly following a two-day confirmation hearing at which he bluntly confronted critics' charges on subjects such as abortion and the sterilization of retarded women.

By the end of the hearing, a moderate Republican, Sen. James Jeffords of Vermont, had declared his support — convinced that his concerns about Foster had been addressed.

Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee Chairwoman Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., who has not announced how she'll vote, said she thinks Foster deserves a vote on the Senate floor — despite Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole's earlier suggestions that he might stand in the way.

"I certainly will want to see this nomination go to the floor," Kassebaum said. "There probably are votes to overcome a filibuster because my guess is that most people at that juncture would feel there should be a vote."

But she hedged slightly, saying she hadn't yet spoken with Dole, R-Kan., and shouldn't forecast his plans.

The committee of nine Republicans and seven Democrats is expected to vote on Foster within three weeks. It has four options: to send the nomination to the floor with a favorable recommendation; with an unfavorable recommendation or with no recommendation; or to send the nomination back to the president, effectively killing it.

Foster's nomination raised the ire of conservative groups and lawmakers soon after President Clinton put his name forward to replace Dr. Joycelyn Elders, whom Clinton fired. Recently, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, a presidential candidate, threatened to filibuster. Then rival candidate Dole raised the stakes, threatening not to call the nomination up for a vote.

The first problem was the fact that Foster had performed abortions. The second was that he and the White House gave different answers about how many.

On Tuesday and Wednesday before the Senate committee, Foster explained that he initially relied on memory to say how many abortions he had performed and later checked his records to determine that he had been the physician of record on 39 cases, some of which may have been done by residents.

On other key issues of concern:

- He repeatedly denied allegations that he had been informed before 1972 of a government study in Tuskegee, Ala., in which poor black men with syphilis were left untreated.

- He asserted that it was within the norms of medical practice when he performed hysterectomies on severely retarded women in the '60s and '70s.

Some Republican senators still were clearly not swayed after two days of questioning.

"I still believe there are unresolved questions, and a lot of it comes down to Dr. Foster's words vs. a number of documents that have been submitted to the committee, particularly in reference to the syphilis experiment," said Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind.

Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., said, "There are still some issues out there that weren't really resolved."

After Jeffords' announcement, which portends an 8-8 vote, supporters were looking to Kassebaum and Sen. Bill Frist, a fellow Tennessean and doctor, as the best Republican bets for a Foster victory on the panel.

Officials block huge heroin delivery

MILTON, Ontario (AP) — Authorities say it's the largest shipment of heroin to Canada they have intercepted yet — 132 high-grade pounds destined not only for Canada but also the East Coast of the United States.

U.S. and Canadian narcotics officers seized the heroin in Seattle, where it arrived in 25 wooden crates filled with vases and Buddha statues from Bangkok, Thailand.

The heroin was flown to the Canadian Forces Base in Trenton, Ontario. From there, it was reintroduced to the illegal drug network — this time with police watching, said Tom Brown of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Officers followed the drugs to a Toronto-area residence, leading to the arrests late last Friday and Saturday of a Toronto man and three others from Singapore. Police said more arrests are possible.

Bank robber receives jail time despite noble motive

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A man who told authorities he robbed a bank to pay for his wife's cancer treatment was sentenced Thursday to four years and three months in prison.

Larry Eugene Archer, 23, fell to his knees and wept as U.S. District Judge Eljane Roy imposed the sentence.

Roy said medical bills that Archer submitted for a presentencing report gave no indication that his wife had been treated for cancer. The judge said the report indicated she had been treated with antibiotics.

Archer's attorney, Val Price, said his client did not want details of his wife's medical condition to be considered in sentencing. Price would not say whether she has cancer.

Archer faced a maximum penalty of 20 years and a $250,000 fine. Price asked the judge to sentence Archer to a federal boot camp program. However, Roy said he did not qualify for the program because of his past criminal background.

The judge lowered the possible sentence under federal guidelines, saying Archer's 1989 forgery conviction didn't accurately represent the seriousness of the crime. He pleaded guilty to forging five $25 checks.

Kent State honors victims with vigil

Rich Harris
Associated Press

KENT, Ohio — Kent State University remembered with the tolling of a bell, a chalk message in a parking lot and silence.

There were peace signs and people dancing barefoot. Peter, Paul and Mary sang "Blowin' in the Wind." Some lit candles.

About 3,000 people showed up Thursday to mark the day 25 years ago when a cluster of National Guardsmen opened fire and killed four students during an anti-war protest.

Some in the crowd weren't born back then. Others remembered all too well.

In the hilltop parking lot where the slain students fell, silent candle bearers stood vigil from midnight until a bell tolled at exactly 12:24 p.m., the moment the shooting began.

Around them, people chalked peace signs, flowers and messages into the blacktop. "Has anything in the way of change become real? HAVE WE LEARNED?" one said.

The school's victory bell rang 15 times — once for each of the 13 students killed or wounded and once for each of two students killed at Jackson State University in Jackson, Miss., 10 days later.

Around a stark granite memorial to the dead, near 58,175 daffodils decorating the hillside — one for each American killed in the Vietnam War — students, former students and others paused to remember Allison Krause, Jeffrey Miller, Sandy Scheuer and Bill Schroeder.

Mary Ann Vecchio, whose moment of agony kneeling near Miller was frozen in a Pulitzer Prize-winning photograph, stood on the spot where he died. The photo, taken by student photographer John Filo, was distributed worldwide by AP.

Vecchio was a 14-year-old runaway when she knelt, her arms upraised in horror, over Miller as he lay dying.

"Teach love and compassion," she said in an impromptu speech at the candlelight vigil. "I ask all the people who are teachers ... to step back, take a breath and think about it."

It was the first time Mary Travers of Peter, Paul and Mary had seen the memorial, which was dedicated in 1990. Many have criticized it as too little, too late. Travers said it suits its purpose.

"As a memorial, as a physical thing, it's enough," she said. "The real memorial, of course, and the responsibility of the university is to infuse the student body with the moral questions that it produces."

Kent State undergraduates find it difficult to relate to a generation they know best as their parents. Travers, whose father was a merchant seaman during World War II, said she understands their struggle.

"I've read about the second World War. And I imagine this generation is going to have to read about the Vietnam War," she said.

"But there's a lesson to be learned, and it's an old lesson: That liberty requires vigilance. Vigilance in the sense that governments will lie from time to time, and it's your job as a citizen to catch them and make them honest," Travers said.

Fox Television still under fire following favorable FCC ruling

Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rupert Murdoch emerged a winner Thursday in his battle with federal regulators to preserve a Fox Television network that brought the world "The Simpsons" and "Married With Children."

The Federal Communications Commission ruled 5-0 that Fox did not mislead the commission a decade ago about its ownership structure when it sought permission to acquire six TV stations that made up the backbone of the network.

But the commission also determined that Fox's parent, News Corp., is not an American company, a finding that reverses a 1985 FCC decision.

However, Murdoch will be given a chance to convince the FCC that it is in the public interest for him to be granted a waiver to a law that generally limits a foreign company from taking more than a 25 percent stake in a U.S. broadcasting company.

Iran to hand over nuclear power plant byproduct

Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Spent fuel from Iran's Russian-made reactors, potential raw material for nuclear bombs, will be returned to Russia for safeguarding, an Iranian nuclear official said Thursday.

The transfer would meet one of Washington's objections to the Moscow-Tehran deal.

"We don't have any use for it," Mohammad Sadeq Ayatollahi said of the plutonium-laden byproduct of nuclear power production.

Ayatollahi, Iran's envoy to the International Atomic Energy Agency, also denied reports by U.S. officials that his country is seeking gas centrifuges from Russia, equipment that could enrich uranium to levels usable for nuclear weapons.

The Vienna, Austria-based diplomat is in the United States for a monthlong global conference to extend the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, the 25-year-old pact designed to halt the spread of atomic weapons.

The U.S. government, contending Iran harbors secret intentions to produce nuclear weapons, has pressured Russia to scrap its $800 million deal, signed in January, to complete an Iranian nuclear power plant at Bushehr, on the Persian Gulf. President Clinton cited Iran's alleged nuclear ambitions last Sunday when he announced a U.S. trade embargo against Iran.

The Iranians counter that U.S. interference violates Article IV of the Non-Proliferation Treaty, which guarantees signatory nations the right to energy technology.

A draft of the conference's final document will underline that guarantee, reaffirming "the inalienable right of countries to have access to nuclear technology and material for peaceful uses," conference President Jayantha Dhanapala said Thursday.

The Clinton administration has raised various objections at various times to the Russia-Iran deal.

Early this year, Deputy Defense Secretary John Deutch indicated the disposition of the Bushehr plant's spent fuel was a prime concern. Independent specialists also warned of the dangers of leaving Russian-supplied uranium rods in Iran once they are used, since they could be reprocessed — if Iran obtained the proper equipment — to produce plutonium for weapons.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark argues against introducing a knife found in O.J. Simpson's neighborhood after the murders of his ex-wife and her friend during Simpson's double-murder trial Thursday in Los Angeles. Defense attorney Robert Blasier, right, listens.

Defense theory quashed by results of DNA tests

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — DNA tests suggest that blood under Nicole Brown Simpson's fingernails was hers, a police chemist testified Thursday, debunking a defense theory that she clawed a mysterious killer in a fight to save her life.

Earlier, assistant crime lab director Gregory Matheson testified that less-sophisticated tests he performed showed the blood was type B, which didn't match Simpson's or the victims'. The defense tried to seize on his testimony that his results could point to another killer.

But Matheson, who isn't a DNA expert and didn't perform the more-sophisticated genetic tests, said under prosecution questioning that the DNA test confirmed what his serological test didn't.

"Mr. Matheson, are you aware that the items 84A and 84B were, in fact, sent out for DNA testing and came back with the result consistent with Nicole Brown?" prosecutor Hank Goldberg asked, referring to the fingernail blood scrapings.

"That's my understanding, yes," Matheson replied.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito sustained a defense objection but didn't tell the jury to ignore the exchange, saying, "Well, I assume we'll get to that later." The defense is expected to fiercely challenge the DNA results.

Under rigorous cross-examination about another defense theory that Simpson was framed, Matheson testified that nearly a quarter of Simpson's blood is missing from the sample he voluntarily gave police the day after the murders.

The missing blood, he acknowledged, could have provided prosecutors with as many as 150 blood swatches of the type sent to DNA laboratories for testing.

The defense claims that the small amount of blood — estimated at 1.5 to 2 milliliters — was enough for a frame-up and could have been planted at the murder scene and Simpson's house.

Matheson, trying to account for the blood, explained to jurors that some is lost every time a sample is drawn (blood is left in the tool used to transfer the blood) and every time the vial is opened (blood around the inside of the lid is wiped off).

Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman were slain June 12 outside her condominium, their bodies awash in pools of blood. With no eyewitnesses or murder weapon recovered, prosecutors have relied on analysis of blood to make their case against the football Hall of Famer.

The defense is fighting back with its own experts, test results and scientific sleuthing. A surprise centerpiece of defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr.'s opening statement was that blood under Brown Simpson's nails pointed to a killer other than her ex-husband.

The defense pressed Matheson on those test results Thursday. He testified that preliminary tests showed the blood doesn't match Simpson's or that of either victim and that the tests could point to another killer. But he said the type B blood might have degraded from a type that would match Brown Simpson's blood analysis and more sophisticated tests — such as DNA — might produce a different result.

Asked by defense attorney Robert Blasier whether he was saying his tests were wrong, Matheson said, "I believe all my tests are accurate. ... I'm not stating this test is inaccurate. I'm just saying there is an alternate explanation."

Later, Goldberg used scientific journals and books to elicit Matheson's explanations of the ways blood can degrade while being tested by a process known as epiallopregnanalone.

"Every one of them indicates the EAP enzyme degrades and can lead to mistyping," Matheson said. "So you have to be careful about EAP results."

He said he believes the blood under Brown Simpson's fingernails is hers, but he warned, "I cannot totally eliminate that it's a B."

Shortly after that testimony, Goldberg sprang the question about the DNA results.

Blasier's cross-examination may have mystified jurors at times with its focus on scientific jargon and genetic banding patterns. But it provided the framework of the entire defense case, using real evidence as well as hypothetical situations to create reasonable doubt that the prosecution has charged the right man.

Blasier lost one battle Thursday that if won could have confused matters further. He sought to put in evidence a knife found outside Simpson's estate in July. The knife contained a trace of type B blood.

BOARD HAS NO LEADER

Reforming the regents

Since April 29, the Iowa state Board of Regents has had no leader. Under normal circumstances, this means that the regents simply do not have any people in specific slots. Given that the board is comprised of adults with years of experience in various leadership positions and that the situation is temporary, this should not be a problem. Surely experienced, intelligent adults can cover for each other for a while.

But it doesn't look as if the situation is normal — at least not this time around. Because this time, the regents are not only lacking a leader, they are also lacking sense.

It seems that the regents may have gotten into the habit of letting former President Marvin Berenstein make too many decisions and become too much of a leader. As a result, the universities are now stuck with regents going into a panic because they can't figure out how to organize a meeting. Regent John Tyrrell said, "With no president, who would run the meeting? We need a spokesperson — someone to elucidate to the press why decisions are made."

This is all rather disturbing. Did Tyrrell mean to say that the regents cannot function without an officially designated nanny?

Actually, it may indicate something else. For years, people concerned about what's happening with the regent universities have complained that the board of regents is a closed system — that it is virtually impossible to get through to the regents unless one is a member of a group officially designated as allowed to speak to them.

Virtually all requests to speak to the board have to be funneled through executive director Wayne Richey. Inevitably, those university representatives granted permission are people in the administration, UI Student Government or Faculty Senate — individuals engrossed in the structure of the institutions the regents are supposed to govern.

This is all quite efficient in that it limits discourse to a small and manageable group of familiar people.

But it is undemocratic and, in the long run, destructive to the schools.

These universities have some very serious problems which cannot be dealt with if those running the schools have no way of finding out about them and no way to discuss them in any sensible way. The closed and authoritarian modes of governing that the regents have developed are at least partly responsible for the circuslike atmosphere surrounding the "unusual or unexpected" classroom materials policy.

The policy is nuts. But trying to get the regents to listen without screaming, yelling, pounding the floor and throwing fits has been next to impossible. This is unnecessary and demeaning to the board, students and faculty. People who have been around for a while can doubtless point to other insane situations — including the arbitrary sale of Iowa State University's television station, WOI-TV, and the subsequent destruction of one of the best broadcast-journalism programs in the nation. Right now, the UI has to come to terms with a similar situation with the dental hygiene program.

The board apparently does not understand that the dictatorial way it does things can only lead to confrontations, lawsuits, and a lot of disillusioned, cynical and very unhappy people.

On the other hand, chickens do have a habit of coming home to roost. And right now, the board of regents looks silly as it runs around like a chicken with its head cut off.

Perhaps the people of this state and of these regent institutions should take this as an opportunity to reform the board.

Neighborhood evaluates assessment

To the Editor:

In response to the recently released Melrose Avenue Environmental Assessment, the Melrose Avenue Neighborhood Association has prepared a statement of its position on the bridge and street reconstruction project, which is as follows:

- Neighborhoods are worth preserving.
- No single alternative solves the problem.
- Wider alternatives exacerbate the problem.
- We support a true three-lane bridge.
- We support a true three-lane road.
- We support the assessment on walkways for pedestrians and lanes for bicyclists.

What the neighborhood supports is an improved, functional "city street" that does not threaten the character of the neighborhood and maximizes the safety of vehicles and pedestrians.

We believe that an actual three-lane street is the best alternative for the following reasons:

- It is less costly than a four-lane road striped for three.

- It will require less land and less clear-cutting of the adjacent landscape.
 - It would be only slightly wider than the current two-lane road.
 - It preserves the aesthetic quality of the neighborhood.
 - It may allow space for bus bays to ensure the free flow of traffic and the safe discharge of passengers.
 - It means a narrower, less-dangerous road for pedestrians to cross.
 - It will not significantly add to the existing congestion at intersections.
 - It allows for ample bicycle lanes.
 - And it offers an efficient roadway that does not promise to become at some future time a disruptive thoroughfare.
- We believe that a true three-lane bridge and three-lane road — especially when paired with a new roadway that provides direct access to UI Hospitals and Clinics and its parking facilities — will create an efficient roadway that preserves and even enhances the historic and fragile Melrose neighborhood.
- The public is encouraged to become a part of the assessment process by sending written comments to Jeff Davidson, Iowa City Planning Department, by May 8.

Return to peaceful discourse while we are able

A harsh, sometimes even violent, tone seems to be all the rage in discourse in today's America.

• G. Gordon Liddy prompts people to embrace his militant idea of self-defense killing of federal agents, such as agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. On the futility of shooting at government opponents who are clad in bulletproof vests, Liddy advised his listeners to take "head shots."

• Often-ballyhooed reactionary talk show host Rush Limbaugh decided to belittle a caller who earlier had criticized his stance on race-related issues. Limbaugh chose his best faux African-American impersonation while discussing the confrontation with another caller, correcting the caller's pronunciation of the word "basketball."

"No, no — it's 'bassaball,'" Limbaugh advised in his exaggerated racist accent.

"Bassaball," the chuckling caller agreed.

• During the Persian Gulf War, a few local bigots seeking to portray themselves as patriots began harassing people of Middle Eastern descent — in many cases targeting fellow American citizens — with the epithet "rag head."

What the hell is going on here, anyway? When did the terms "conflict" and "disagreement" become synonymous with lethal opposition?

It's possible that this is all simply part of some temporary hypermacho trend in American society, but whatever the case, it must be seen for what it is and gotten under control — fast.

Somehow — and I am truly not certain how — we as a people must get the chip off our collective shoulder before we become some monstrous hybrid of the armed society conceived by the National Rifle Association and Liddy's envisioned nation of people who simply murder their opponents.

Maybe it's to be expected of a nation fed a constant stream of megaviolence — a sort of numbing spawned by the saturation that results in a comedy such as "48 Hrs." transmuting into its bloody, megaviolent sequel, "Another 48 Hrs." Maybe all of this is to be expected when our greatest market demands tend toward such slaughter as entertainment.

Certainly it's a combination of influences. But the end result is growing ever more evident. Today, we're increasingly willing to take a shot at the jerk who cut us off in the passing lane out on the freeway, the policeman who comes by to tell us to turn down the music or even gun someone down from a passing car.

And what happens when the call goes out for civil discourse?

The rather silly — and, today, completely impossible to define — charge of political correctness is made.

So it comes to this: Ask someone not to be racially derogatory and prepare to be dismissed as politically correct. Disagree with the advocacy of deadly violence from those such as Liddy or an unfortunately sizable portion of Operation Rescue and prepare to be billed a censor.

Somewhere, it has to collapse to common sense. At some point we must ultimately filter the reasonable from the unreasonable and, today, even the murderous. In the end, it all comes down to personal responsibility, and that relies upon the ability of the individual to discern such messages.

Should slack-jawed troglodytes like Limbaugh and Liddy be stripped of their public soap boxes?

No.

At this point, I believe that we still can argue that they have the right to belch their fear and loathing if they wish to do so. I believe that such misinformed and misleading refuse is still protected free speech.

But it is also increasingly clear that such demagoguery is deeply affecting the collective American mindset. We're becoming a people deeply influenced by messengers who tell us who our scapegoats are and how to deal with them.

If we cannot, in the final analysis, discern for ourselves the need for peaceful discourse, we will eventually fall, splintered into a broken nation of armed, killing factions, each clinging to its particular dogma. And that's a vision of America I'd rather not see come to pass.

DAVE BARRY

Avoid that middle stall and move your toothbrush

If you were to ask me how I came to set my toilet seat on fire, I would answer you in two simple words: Reader's Digest.

I am referring specifically to the February 1995 issue of Reader's Digest, which was sent to me by alert reader Jeff Jerrell, who had spotted a startling article originally written for Health magazine

by Mary Roach.

The article is about germs, which are extremely tiny organisms — many of them smaller than the artist formerly known as Prince — that can be found in huge quantities virtually everywhere. To get an idea of what I mean, conduct the following scientific germ experiment:

Get a microscope and some spit. Put the spit on a glass slide and put it under the microscope lens. Now look through the eyepiece. You'll notice, if you look closely, that you can't see anything because you have no idea how to operate a microscope. But while you're looking, billions of germs, which were left on the eyepiece by the previous microscope user, will swarm onto your eyeball — which to them is a regular Club Med — and start reproducing like crazy via wild bacterial sex. You'll probably need surgery.

Getting back to Reader's Digest, The February article concerns leading University of Arizona germ scientist Chuck Gerba, who is a serious student of bacteria found in bathrooms. Consider the following absolutely true facts:

- He routinely goes into public rest rooms — unarmed — and takes bacteria samples from the toilets.
- His son's middle name is "Escherichia," after Escherichia coli, also known as E. coli, which is a common type of fecal bacteria.

Needless to say, I had to call this man.

"You named your son after bacteria?" was my opening question.

"He finds it a good conversation starter," Gerba replied. "If we had a girl, we were going to name her 'Sally Salmonella.'"

Gerba told me that there are definite hazards associated with his line of study.

"When you spend a lot of time taking samples on your knees in the stalls of public rest rooms, people tend to call the cops on you," he said. "I've had to do some fast talking. I tell the cops, 'It's OK! I'm a scientist!' And they say, 'Yeah, right, we arrested a couple of scientists in this stall just last night.'"

Gerba told me that in the course of his studies he's learned some amazing toilet facts:

Toilet fact No. 1 — Based on scientific measurements of the holes in public toilet seats, "Americans have the biggest butts in the world."

Toilet fact No. 2 — In any group of public toilets, the first stall is likely to have the least bacteria, and the middle ones are likely to have the most because more people use them. (In determining the rate of usage, Gerba went into public toilets and numbered the toilet paper squares.)

Toilet fact No. 3 — The cleanest public toilets are found in national chain restaurants; the worst are found in gas stations.

"I'm surprised that no new life form has ever evolved from a gas station toilet," Gerba said.

Toilet fact No. 4 — Every toilet user leaves a unique bacterial pattern; we know this thanks to a breakthrough technique Gerba developed called (I am not making any of this up) the Com-mo-de-A-Graph.

"If there's a crime committed on a toilet, I can tell you who did it," Gerba said.

(Asked if this technique could be a factor in the O.J. Simpson trial, Gerba replied, "Not unless he washed his hands in the toilet.")

Toilet fact No. 5 — When you flush, a process called "aerosolization" takes place, in which the toilet shoots out an invisible cloud of tiny germ-infested water droplets that get all over everything. In Reader's Digest, author Roach quotes Gerba as saying that if you keep your toothbrush within six feet of a commode, "you're basically brushing your teeth with toilet water."

So we see that a toilet is really nothing more than — to use scientific parlance — a Yuck Bomb. The question is, what can you do about it? Is there any way to get a toilet really clean? This brings us to the truly fascinating part of Roach's article, wherein Gerba and his family, demonstrating the only way to kill all the bacteria, put laboratory alcohol on their commode bowl — and this is right on page 64 of Reader's Digest, if you don't believe me — set it on fire.

Let me stress right here that Gerba is a recognized toilet expert, he had a fire extinguisher ready and toilet-torching is very dangerous. You, the layperson, would be an irresponsible idiot to try it.

Fortunately, I am not a layperson; I am a trained humor columnist, and if there's one thing I enjoy, it's a clean toilet. So I tried Gerba's technique, and I have to say that in a darkened room, a flaming toilet has a strange kind of beauty that can only be described as "a strange kind of beauty."

I'm tempted to speculate here on whether it might be possible to use this same technique to kill bacteria on other surfaces — such as the bodies of Tobacco Institute scientists — but I think I'm already in enough trouble as it is. So let me leave you with these important toilet health reminders:

- No. 1 — Avoid those middle stalls.
- No. 2 — Move that toothbrush.
- No. 3 — And above all, don't sit down until the bowl has completely cooled.

Rally to be held against the 'Contract'

To the Editor:

Much media attention has been given to the Republicans' efforts to rush their "Contract With America" through the House. Not surprisingly, very little media attention has been devoted to the numerous grassroots fight-backs that have been organized across the country.

Students, workers, women, environmental activists, gays and lesbians, and minorities have joined together in coalitions with a common goal: to make clear to policy-makers that the "Contract With America" does not represent our interests and cannot be rammed through Congress in our names. We recognize that the proposed legislation is in fact a "Contract on America" which would accelerate the transfer of wealth from working people to the rich. As students, we will suffer directly due to the "Contract" 's threatened looting of federal programs such as guaranteed student loans and work-study to subsidize big business through capital gains tax cuts and the like.

Now is the time to unite with others who are building a united movement against the "Contract." May 6 has been declared a National Day of Action by a growing coalition of more than 400 organizations nationwide. I urge those of you who are angry about the "Contract" 's explicit proposals and its implications, as well as those of you who want to know more about how it will affect you, to come to the rally planned by the Coalition Against the Contract on Saturday, May 6 on the Pedestrian Mall at noon. Together we can defeat the "Contract With America."

Coalition Against the Contract

Victim-blaming becoming epidemic

To the Editor:

This week, the Iowa House of Representatives passed a resolution barring state universities from spending tax dollars on programs that "promote homosexuality as a positive alternative lifestyle." Fifty-five House members co-sponsored this disgraceful legislation, which was attached to a bill appropriating funds to state universities and schools.

Fortunately, the measure was defeated in the Senate.
Nonetheless, it is deeply disturbing that it passed the House at all - let alone by a margin of 50-21. Like the Iowa state Board of Regents' classroom materials policy, this vote represents a state-sanctioned attack on academic freedom and a blatant endorsement of homophobia.

The May 4 Daily Iowan reported that majority Democrats in the Senate, "leery of being forced to vote against the anti-gay rights provision," used procedural maneuvers to circumvent a direct vote on the measure. At a time when scapegoating and victim-blaming are epidemic, those of our legislators who do not embrace bigotry outright apparently lack the courage to take a stand against it. This is why it is vital that we not rely solely on elected representatives to defend our rights but organize a movement to defend the rights of gays and lesbians, women, minorities, the poor, and other oppressed groups.

For these reasons, the Campaign for Academic Freedom endorses the May 6 rally sponsored by the Coalition Against the Contract at noon on the Pedestrian Mall. Unless we fight back now, these legislative attacks are only the beginning.

Campaign for Academic Freedom

Union formation is the only clear alternative

To the Editor:

Will the gutless, lying, anti-intellectual pieces of human garbage who stole the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students' logo and created phony COGS posters have the courage to identify themselves? I doubt it. Anyone so low and unethical to create fake posters like this probably doesn't crawl out from their septic tanks long enough to have a name.

For the last two years, COGS has been struggling to improve the conditions of the hard-working men and women who do 40 percent of the teaching at the UI. More than 700 graduate students agreed with us and asked for union representation. In the past, our opponents have never been willing to debate us fairly, preferring to make up false data about the union at the University of Wisconsin and out-and-out lie about the motives and consequences of unionization. But up until now, they have always had the decency to identify themselves so that graduate employees can make up their own minds about the validity of the source.

But now the worthless scum have revealed their true nature. They have resorted to theft and personal attack by creating a false poster claiming to advertise a fictitious COGS meeting.
The poster shows how well-appreciated graduate students are at the UI and even more the need for unionization.
While I will not give these lies any more publicity here, I want to say that COGS has never received a dime of taxpayer money. (I wonder if the hypocritical soil-sucking maggots who created this poster can say the same?)

Additionally, the poster is indicative of the hate and bile that pass for political debate these days. When lying and insulting become the norm for making a political point, can blowing up buildings in Oklahoma City be far behind?

If the creators of these posters turn out to be graduate students, their lack of ethics demonstrates their unworthiness to educate the best students Iowa and the Midwest have to offer. As for COGS, such tactics only prove that if graduate students want any respect at the UI, they are going to have to fight for it themselves. A union is now the only clear alternative.

Campaign to Organize Graduate Students

Organization devoted to goals

To the Editor:

We would like to respond to some recent stories about the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students printed in The Daily Iowan. We will be continuing our efforts over the summer and into the upcoming academic year as we seek to build a sense of community among graduate students and win a certification election allowing us to represent ourselves in collective bargaining. It is through a legally recognized union that graduate employees are best able to win real improvements in health care; have some authority over our own working conditions; and benefit from a standardized grievance procedure, among other gains.

We regard the anonymous fliers posted around campus
the week of April 24 purporting to be authorized by COGS as a misguided and unsuccessful attempt to discredit all graduate students, especially those in the humanities and liberal arts.

Finally, at its April 18 general meeting, COGS voted not to join the student groups that comprise the Coalition Against the Contract. Some individual members of COGS are active in this coalition. However, the organization as a whole will devote its energies to achieving the goals listed above. The success of our cause depends on the willingness of many graduate students to become involved. If you would like to do so, please call 339-4370.

Iowa City

Neighborhood feels betrayed by the city

To the Editor:

Two years ago, my neighbors and I attempted to downzone our neighborhood. Our neighborhood is basically the downtown residential area between Jefferson and Market streets.

We felt somewhat satisfied with the results. We went from an apartment-permitted zone down to a single-family and duplex-permitted zone. We were told that we should compromise with the developers in the area, and the duplex-permitted zone was the compromise.

The developers were then permitted to build a five-bedroom five-bath building behind the original single-family residence on the property. We were not pleased. It appeared to be a boarding house to us, but we felt we were compromising and accepted the five new cars that were added to our alley.

This was a sacrifice to our neighborhood because our alley is our only sanctuary. There is very little street parking. We are surrounded by one-way traffic. According to the Iowa City traffic department, approximately 4,000 cars a day pass through our neighborhood. The speed zone is 25 mph, but most traffic is closer to 40 mph, and according to police reports, some cars even pass through at 65 mph. The alley helps us keep our sanity.

On April 7, these same contractors broke ground to build the second half of a duplex behind the second original house. They own two lots on our block, which they have now divided into three. To my uneducated mind, a duplex has always been one building divided in half, with two front doors and a little architectural integrity.
However, in Iowa City, a duplex is a new three-bedroom building butted back to back against a more than 90-year-old house. This new building faces the alley, whereas the old building faces the street. There will also be another parking lot built off the alley for three or four additional cars.

A question raised at the time of the downzoning was that if houses are allowed to be built on the alley, will the alleys then be turned into streets which will necessitate paving? The Iowa City City Council at the time seemed opposed to this idea. Why then is this duplex considered legal?

At the same time we were down-zoned, we became a conservation district. However, even this has not appeared to help us in our attempt to stabilize our neighborhood.

The neighbors and I feel rage - rage and anger which is settling into a sadness that I imagine will eventually move into acceptance. Three neighbors in the passion of that anger have expressed the desire to move.

We worked very hard two years ago to salvage our neighborhood. We feel betrayed by the city which for some reason chose not to live up to the original intent of our downzoning.

because of "InQueery."
"I have not heard anything about that," Nathan said. "It's ironic

"I don't think that had anything to do with it; he's hallucinating. He just doesn't realize that he doesn't run the country and he doesn't run the state."

Rep. Minnette Doderer,

because we actually made money off of the conference."

But Hurley is incorrect in assuming that "InQueery" was the reason for the funding cut, said Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City.

"I don't think that had anything to do with it; he's hallucinating," Doderer said. "He just doesn't realize that he doesn't run the country and he doesn't run the state."

Rep. David Millage, R-Davenport, is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, the group in charge of allocating state funds. He said the homosexuality/bisexuality issue probably played a role in the funding decision but wasn't sure how much effect it had. "It may have had an impact, but I can't say for sure," Millage said. "It certainly has been mentioned over the course of the legislation."

Although $100,000 is a figurative drop in the UI's funding bucket, the loss sets a harmful precedent, said Rhodes.

"I think it's a discouraging principle," she said. "I'm disappointed that we were not able to communicate with Representative Hurley on what the issues were on this and have a discussion about it."

Rhodes said she wasn't particularly surprised "InQueery" caused such a commotion.

"I guess we have known that since the conference that it was controversial," she said. "We thought there might be some repercussions."

Although the funding of "InQueery / InTheory / InDeed" sparked Hurley's anger, one of the co-chairmen of the conference said Hurley is off-base about the its funding.

"The conference was self-supporting through registration fees," said conference Co-chairman Brett Beemyn, a doctoral candidate in the UI African-American World Studies Program and a Teaching Assistant in the Department of English. "There were no state funds involved."

The conference was academic in nature; did not center around specific homosexual acts; and primarily emphasized the culture of gay, lesbian and bisexual lifestyles, said

"I guess we have known that since the conference that it was controversial. We thought there might be some repercussions."

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for University Relations

Nancy Barcelo, interim director of Opportunity at Iowa.

Barcelo also said the conference was completely supported by registration funds, from the booking of rooms for conference guests to the payment of speakers.

said.
"Clearly, if folks continue to get sunburned and continue to get exposed to the sun, we won't see the rate drop off anytime soon," Bewerse said.

The disease strikes hardest among men and Caucasians, the CDC said.

Twice as many men die from melanoma as women. A 48 percent jump in the rate of men who die from melanoma accounted for the biggest increase among all cancers in men from 1973 to 1992, the CDC said.

About 98 percent of deaths from melanoma occur among whites, the CDC said.

About 34,100 people will be diagnosed with melanoma this year, and 7,200 will die of it, the American Cancer Society said.

Melanoma is most common in middle-age and elderly people with pale skin and blond or red hair who were exposed to sunlight for many years or were severely sunburned in childhood.

The CDC urged people at risk for skin cancer to check their skin periodically for changes in color or size of any moles or lesions. Such changes should be examined by a doctor.

BOMBING

official said in Washington.
That was done as a precaution, said the official, who demanded anonymity. The penalties for lying to a grand jury are greater than those for lying to the FBI, and the grand jury can issue warrants to search either of the men's possessions or property, the official noted.

On a sunny and warm day,

"We are all going back much better people than we came because of this experience. You have given us so much."

Audrey Connor, Orange County, Calif., search-and-rescue team member about 50 firefighters worked through one last pile of rubble in the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

"Most of the piles have been reduced to their original ground level — except this one," said fire Maj. John Long.

Once the search ends, dogs will be sent in one last time to check for bodies. The FBI, which has been going through the rubble for evidence, expects to finish its search at about the same time, said spokesman Dan Vogel.

After that, federal officials in Washington will decide whether to rebuild at the site. Sentiment is strong in Oklahoma City to raze the site and put up a memorial to the victims.

"It could be kind of like the Unknown Soldier, except this one is the grave of the missing," said Mayor Ron Norick.

Federal agents moved through the shell of the building, looking for confidential files and other paperwork from the Drug Enforcement Administration; the Secret Service; and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

File cabinets leaned precariously on piles of rubble. Papers from exploded drawers drifted by, sometimes briefly catching fire from sparks as searchers used blowtorches to cut steel reinforcement bars.

The last out-of-town search-and-rescue team, a unit from Orange County, Calif., made a side trip to an elementary school before flying home.

"We are all going back much better people than we came because of this experience," Audrey Connor told children at Tinker Elementary School who had sent the team a big packet of letters. "You have given us so much."

In other developments:
• A law enforcement source said the FBI is studying videotape from an Oklahoma trooper's car to check a witness report that a brown pickup truck stopped ahead of McVeigh's car when he was arrested after the bombing.

• In Wichita, Kan., a federal judge granted a joint request from prosecutors and defense lawyers to delay the movement of Oklahoma City bombing material witness Terry Nichols from Wichita to Oklahoma.

U.S. Attorney Randy Rathbun said Thursday afternoon that authorities expect to move Nichols sometime after May 10. The 40-year-old Herington man had been scheduled for transfer any time after noon today.

"The delay is because we want to ensure an orderly transfer of Mr. Nichols," Rathbun said, then refused further comment.
• An unidentified employee of True Value Hardware Store in Kingman, Ariz., told the FBI Wednesday that he saw a former employee sell McVeigh two 50-pound bags of ammonium nitrate, said store manager Paul Shuffler. Ammonium nitrate and fuel were used to make the Oklahoma City bomb, and a mysterious explosion at a house outside Kingman on Feb. 21 is being investigated as a possible practice bomb.

Shuffler said the transaction was a cash sale and there are no records. McVeigh worked at the hardware store from February to April 1994.

Serb-held northern Bosnia. But Serbs further north, around Pakrac, found their way south cut off by the Croat capture of the highway.

The cease-fire negotiated Wednesday by the United Nations said Serbs who wished to flee south into Serb-held northern Bosnia could exit through Pakrac, 55 miles southeast of Zagreb, and travel south from there.

But U.N. spokeswoman Susan Manuel said the Croats did not want U.N. troops on the corridor leading south to Bosnia.

A joint defense council of rebel Serb leaders from Croatia and Bosnia demanded that the United Nations ensure the "liberation" of thousands of civilians and soldiers surrounded in Pakrac. Otherwise, they would use "all available means" to take back territory lost to the army offensive, they said.

Pakrac was bitterly contested during the 1991 Serb-Croat war, and U.N. peacekeepers deployed there in early 1992 to patrol a cease-fire that ended the conflict divided the town into Serb- and Croat-held parts.

Family members of the trapped Serb soldiers waited 22 miles to the south in the relative safety of Serb-held northern Bosnia. They worried that the Croatian army would kill their men.

"I've already prepared my children that they may never see their father again," said 41-year-old Mica Draca, mother of sons ages 13 and 17. "I did what I could."

Maca Kulesko, 45, waited for her 21-year-old son, Darko. "I'm afraid for him because he would rather die than hand in his weapons," she said tearfully.

Pakrac exploded with mortar, tank and rocket fire for 90 minutes when talks on a U.N.-sponsored evacuation broke down Thursday.

Then five leading officials of the region, known as Western Slavonia, were brought down to a Croatian checkpoint. Croatian Interior Minister Ivan Jarnjak said the five were suspected war criminals.

Croatian special forces fighter Gordan Sebalj, 26, said when army units reached Serb positions after the fire fight, "we already found white flags hanging on the houses. There was no resistance."

Serb official Obrad Ivanovic estimated about 5,000 people, including 1,000 fighters, surrendered on the Serb side.

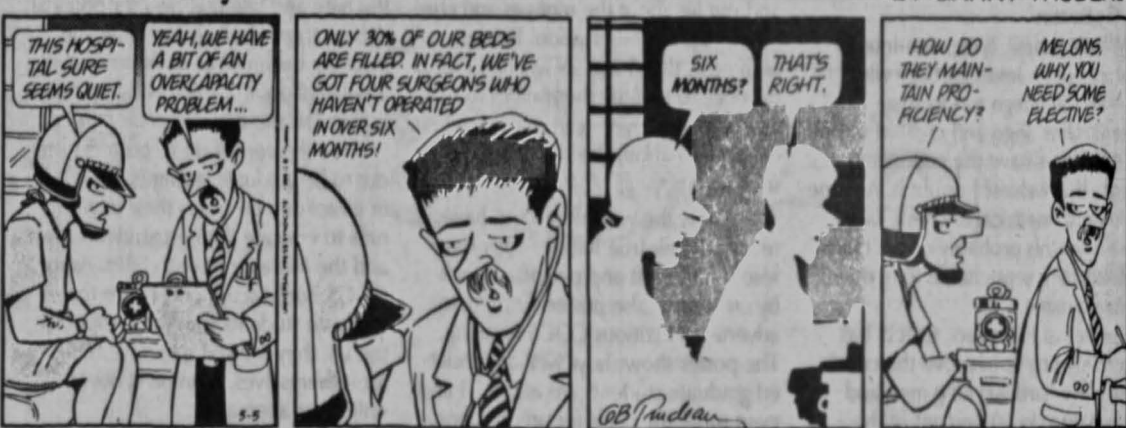

Croatian television later reported that all of the Serb fighters had surrendered and showed footage of Serb soldiers walking with their hands behind their heads. A U.N. source in Zagreb said the Serbs had turned over five truckloads of weapons to the United Nations, including 300 rifles and two anti-aircraft missile launchers.

Miami fires coach after missing playoffs

MIAMI (AP) — A late-season slump that cost the Miami Heat a berth in the NBA playoffs cost Alvin Gentry his coaching job Thursday.

Gentry, 40, compiled a 15-21 record after replacing Kevin Loughery during a shakeup 10 weeks ago. Overall, the Heat finished 32-50, three games out of the last playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The team lost six of its final eight games.

"I felt we were at a point where we were very stagnant," Heat executive vice president Dave Wohl said of Gentry's dismissal. "The team wasn't moving forward, and what we needed to get out of that plateau was a new approach."

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Canisius guard exits early, but not for NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Smith, Corliss Williamson, Chris Young, Chris Young?

The names of underclassmen who have made themselves available for the NBA draft reads like a who's who of the college game, especially with the addition of Rasheed Wallace on Thursday.

Along with Smith of Maryland, a first-team All-America and college player of the year, and Williamson of Arkansas and Wallace of North Carolina, both second-team all-Americans, comes the name Chris Young of Canisius.

Before the NBA scouts start traversing the information super-highway for data on him, Young didn't mean to be on the list that now stands at nine.

"My coach's brother lives in Maryland and he called to say he saw a story in the papers down there that had my name in a sentence with Corliss Williamson and Joe Smith as players who have declared for the NBA draft," Young said Thursday from Buffalo, N.Y. "Hey, that's pretty good."

It's really good for a 5-foot-10 guard who averaged 7.2 points per game as a junior, starting 21 of 34 games as Canisius reached the semifinals of the NIT and improving his career scoring average from 4.2 to 5.4.

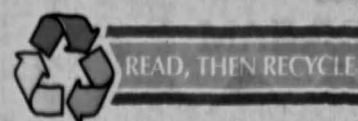

It's also a mistake, Young, who played one year at the University of Akron before transferring to Canisius, is leaving the Golden Griffins with one year of eligibility remaining. It's just not the NBA that's his main goal.

"To tell you the truth," he said, "I'm not figuring on working for the NBA, more for the likes of PaineWebber."

Young's brush with basketball greatness started last month when the school's sports information office sent out a release saying he would forgo his final year of school. The NBA draft was never mentioned in the nine-paragraph release.

Young has a 3.8 grade-point average and will graduate with a degree in management.

But what about the NBA? "Like I said, I'm flexible," Young said.

On the way out Moeller resigns after drunken incident

Harry Atkins

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Gary Moeller was a tough man in the business of toughness.

Yet his resignation Thursday as Michigan's football coach, after a humiliating drunken episode, left his players and assistants almost in tears. They used words like "love" and "void" in describing the loss of their leader.

"This is one of the saddest days of my life," defensive coordinator

Lloyd Carr said, his voice choked with emotion. "A man I respect, have the utmost admiration for, is no longer here. I would not be honest if I say we are not wounded or feel great pain."

Moeller has been placed on a leave of absence will continue receiving his $130,000-a-year salary indefinitely, athletic director Joe Roberson said.

Moeller is entitled to a year with full pay.

Carr has been named interim coach while Roberson looks for a replacement to Moeller, who was the handpicked successor to Bo Schembechler in 1990.

"I can't tell you what a terrible experience it was to see this proud man defeated," said Carr, whose son, Jason, is a backup quarterback for the Wolverines. "But he's tough. He will rebound."

It will be the task of Michigan athletic director Joe Roberson to find a new coach. The search will be difficult, made all the more so

THIRD BASEMAN COULD JOIN HAWKS OR MINOR LEAGUES

City High star faces dilemma: College or pro ball?

David Lee

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City High senior Brian Mitchell has to decide what pitch to take in the next few weeks.

Should he play baseball as a Hawkeye, a Cyclone or take a chance on the major leagues?

Mitchell, a third baseman for the Little Hawks, is regarded as one of the top high school baseball players in Iowa. In his junior year, he hit .450 with nine home runs and shattered the City High RBI record of 43 by driving in 59 runs. In the process he led the Little Hawks to a 30-9 record.

"He's one of the best high school hitters I've seen since I've been in coaching," City High coach J. Chelf said. "He's got a quick bat and he's also got a lot of power."

"He's been the MVP of the team two years in a row."

After he graduates this spring, Mitchell must decide between attending college to play baseball or turning pro by joining the minor league system and trying to work his way up to the majors.

He already has been scouted by representatives from the Colorado Rockies, Montreal Expos and Minnesota Twins.

Mitchell, who holds a 3.1 grade point average, said he doesn't want to pass up an education. But when he'll get it is the question.

"If you go to the pros you can get your education anytime, but you can't play baseball anytime," he said.

Mitchell said he will not make any decision until after he finds out where he has been drafted on June 1, the day of the Major League Baseball draft.

One reason he's skeptical about playing baseball in college is because it's a non-revenue sport, coming in behind other high-profile sports like football and basketball, he said.

But unless highly-regarded players like Mitchell get drafted early, like in the first round, they should play baseball in college, Iowa baseball coach Duane Banks said.

"We try and show a high school kid his chance of making it to the majors," Banks said. "It's much smaller coming out of high school than college."

Although Banks cannot comment specifically on Mitchell or any other prospective baseball recruits because of NCAA policy, he said most players who try and play professional baseball right after high school have a slim chance of going to the show.

"I don't think you're going to see the high salaries and bonuses given out to young prospects," he said. "The prospective pro baseball players have to realize the money isn't there right now. The average salary of a million or two won't happen."

Actually the league minimum for minor leagues, where any baseball player will start, is from $900 to $1,000 a month, said Chris Holvoet, general manager of the Quad City River Bandits, a Class A farm team of the Houston Astros.

Mitchell's family is supporting him no matter what he decides to do. His parents, Diane and Bob Mitchell, are two of his biggest fans, attending as many games as they can.

Diane Mitchell said a college education can wait if he can play

Bulls tell Hornets to buzz off, 85-84

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan shook off a poor shooting performance to score seven of Chicago's final nine points Thursday night as the Bulls survived a third-quarter collapse and advanced to the second round of the playoffs with an 85-84 victory over the Charlotte Hornets.

Jordan scored 24 points on 8-of-21 shooting but made two free throws with 1:07 to play for the Bulls, who won the series 3-1.

Scottie Pippen also had 24 points and Toni Kukoc added 21 for Chicago, which awaits the winner of the Orlando-Boston series. Orlando leads 2-1 with Game 4 Friday at Boston Garden.

Alonzo Mourning had 20 points and 13 rebounds for the Hornets, who had several chances to force a decisive fifth game in Charlotte but couldn't connect down the stretch.

Since falling to Detroit in the 1990 Eastern Conference semifinals, the Bulls have won 13 consecutive playoff series with Jordan in the lineup — including the 1991, 1992 and 1993 NBA Finals. Jordan retired after the '93 title but returned for this season's final 17 regular-season games.

Larry Johnson missed a 17-footer with about 8 seconds left, but Charlotte grabbed the rebound and called time out.

Johnson's 20-footer was short of the basket, and Hersey Hawkins grabbed the ball, but his reverse layup fell short. Dell Curry put in the rebound, but time already had expired.

When the final horn sounded, Johnson lay face down on the United Center court. He slowly got up and walked to the locker room, shoving a television cameraman out of his way en route.

The Bulls led 54-44 at halftime, but Charlotte scored the first 12 points of the second half and the game remained close the rest of the way.

Chicago was 4-for-18 in the third period and was outscored 24-11. It was the lowest-scoring playoff quarter ever for the Bulls, who went into the final period trailing

Neither team scored a basket in the fourth period until Bill Wennington's dunk 4 1/2 minutes in pulled Chicago to 70-68.

Charlotte maintained a slim lead until Jordan, who had missed six of seven second-half shots, scored on a drive, was fouled by Mourning and made the free throw for a 79-78 Bulls edge. Jordan also hit a 20-footer down the stretch.

How does a team that made the NAIA World Series a year ago match up with a Division I baseball team with a winning record?

Not bad, if St. Ambrose's 6-1 victory over Iowa Thursday night is any indication.

The Hawkeyes (25-22) were no match for the Fighting Bees (30-20-2) in Davenport, Iowa. The game, which was held at John O'Donnell Stadium, home of the Class A Quad City River Bandits, was practically over with one swing of the bat in the fourth inning.

Two good goaltenders are usually better than one — except when it comes to the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Then, it's preferable to follow one hot goaltender, as most teams have discovered. Unfortunately, the New York Rangers have a problem in this regard as they begin defense of their Stanley Cup championship Sunday.

Will they start Mike Richter or Glenn Healy against the Quebec Nordiques in Game 1?

"It would be the perfect world if we had a goalie playing in the last eight games and winning seven of the eight," Rangers coach Colin Campbell said. "We just hope we pick the right guy."

Richter, who led the Rangers to the NHL championship last year, was regarded as the Houston rallies to knock off St. Louis

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Consecutive doubles by Dave Magadan and pinch-hitter Tony Eusebio produced three runs in the eighth inning Thursday night as the Houston Astros rallied for a 6-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Magadan, who entered the game in the sixth, hit a ground-rule double off Rich DeLucia (0-1) to tie the score 4-4. Eusebio followed with an opposite-field double down the right-field line off John Habyan for two more runs.

The crowd of 12,626, which showed up despite 53-degree weather at game time, rained boos on the Cardinals after Eusebio's hit.

St. Louis took a 4-3 lead in the seventh on two walks, a fly ball and a wild pitch by Todd Jones. Jones (1-0) went on to get credit for the victory, allowing one hit in 1 1/2 innings. John Hudek pitched one inning for his second save.

Scott Cooper homered and had two hits and a walk for the Cardinals, making him 10-for-20 in his last five games.

Mets 5, Expos 1, 10 innings
MONTREAL — Pinch-hitter Todd Hundley hit a grand slam in the top of the 10th inning Thursday night to give New York a 5-1 victory over the Montreal Expos as the Mets avoided a three-game sweep.

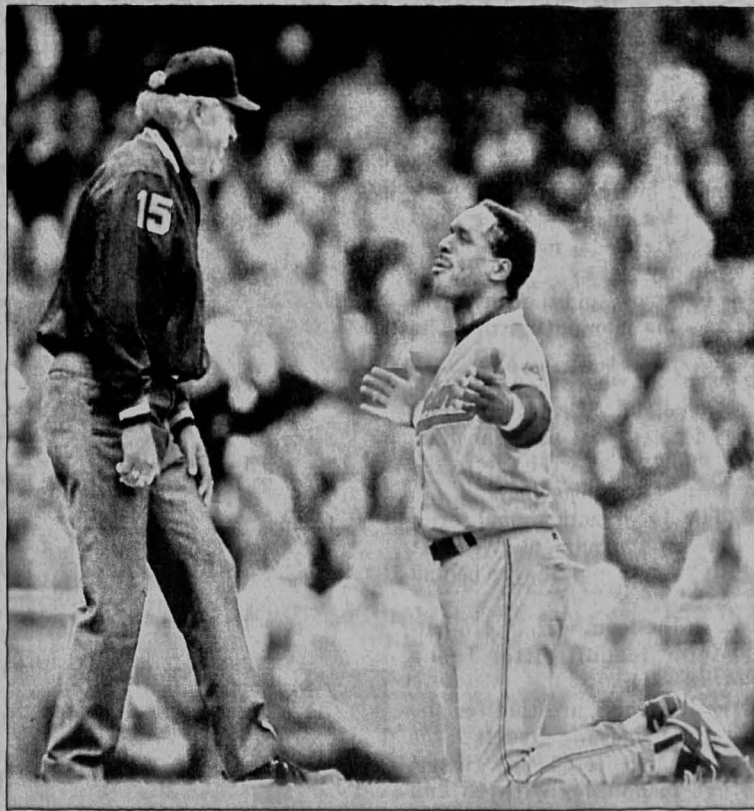

Hundley hit the first pitch from reliever Bryan Eversager into the left field seats for his third career grand slam and his second this season.

John Franco (1-0) pitched 1 1/2 innings for the victory.

Tigers 4, Indians 3
DETROIT — David Wells (1-1) allowed all three runs and six hits in 7 1/2 innings, and Kirk Gibson and Bobby Higginson homered as the Detroit Tigers beat the Indians.

Cleveland had seven hits, its first time under 10 this season. Orel Hershiser (0-1) allowed a solo homer to Gibson in the second and a two-run homer to Higginson in the third, his second homer in as many days.

Kenny Lofton and Omar Vizquel hit RBI doubles in the eighth. Mike Henneman struck out Eddie Mur-

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Appier pitched seven scoreless innings and struck out 10 or more for the 10th time in his career, and Greg Gagne and Phil Hiatt hit two-run homers.

Appier (3-0) struck out 12, one short of his career. He allowed five hits in seven innings, lowering his ERA from 0.71 ERA 0.46.

The game drew a paid attendance of 11,935 after crowds under 9,000 the previous two nights.

Rookie LaTroy Hawkins (0-2) came into the game with a 37.80 ERA after his major league debut, and he surrendered two runs in the first inning. But he lasted 5 1/2 innings, giving up four runs — three earned — on six hits. That lowered his ERA to 12.27.

Orioles 5, Brewers 2

BALTIMORE — Harold Baines drove in two runs and Baltimore rallied by taking advantage of nine walks.

The game drew 30,019, the second-smallest crowd in the four-year history of Camden Yards. It was the second straight non-sellout after a streak of 46 in 47 dates.

Down 2-1, the Orioles took the lead against Jose Mercedes (0-1) in the seventh. Mercedes walked the first three batters he faced, Baines hit a sacrifice fly and Chris Hoiles followed with a run-scoring fielder's choice.

Alan Mills (1-0), who allowed one run in 2 1/2 innings, got the victory in relief of Sid Fernandez. Doug Jones pitched a perfect ninth for his second save.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 3

NEW YORK — Paul O'Neill and Don Mattingly hit eighth-inning homers to rally the Yankees.

The Red Sox, playing for the second straight game without injured Jose Canseco, led 3-2 after home runs by Mo Vaughn and Tim Lincecum.

O'Neill opened the eighth with a line drive homer to tie it and Mattingly gave the Yankees the lead one out later off Joel Johnston (0-1).

Tony Fernandez added an RBI single with two outs.

Joe Ausanio (1-0) threw only one pitch and wound up with the win. John Wetteland closed for his fourth save.

Braves 3, Marlins 3 (suspended)
MIAMI — The Atlanta Braves rallied for three runs in the ninth inning Thursday night against Florida, tying the score 3-3 as a downpour began that forced the umpires to suspend the game.

It will be completed when the Braves visit Miami in September. When play resumes, Atlanta will have a runner at third base with none out in the ninth.

Angels' Davis apologizes, inks deal

Ken Peters
Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Less than 24 hours after accusing the California Angels of racism, designated hitter Chili Davis reached agreement with the club Thursday on the $11.4 million, three-year deal he sought, and apologized for his comments.

Both Davis and Angel officials denied that his remarks to a reporter on Wednesday hastened the agreement.

"I think it's been used against me at some point," Davis was quoted as saying in Thursday's editions of the Thomson L.A. News Group, referring to the fact that he's black.

"They've taken care of all the white players in this organization, they always have."

Davis, at a hastily called news conference Thursday afternoon at Anaheim Stadium before California's game against Oakland, said his earlier comments grew out of frustration rather than any reality of racism by the team.

"It wasn't directed as a fact. I was merely stating that I was wondering if that was an issue," Davis said. "No one likes to apologize. This is not an up time for the game with the strike and everything, and that really didn't help at all."

IOWA SOFTBALL

Hawkeye seniors set for home finale

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa softball team will have its last chance for fine tuning before the Big Ten tournament as they host Indiana this weekend.

The Hawkeyes and Hoosiers will battle four times in two days, twice on Friday and twice again on Saturday at the Hawkeye Softball Complex. Friday's games will begin at 3 p.m. Saturday's doubleheader will start at 1 p.m.

Barring a miracle first-place finish in the conference, this weekend will mark the final home games in a Hawkeye uniform for four Hawkeye players: Stacey Harrison, Katy Morgan, Meg Appleget and Dawn DeVore.

Harrison, a nursing major from Waterfront, Michigan, has been the starting Hawkeye catcher for the past three seasons. She has given the Hawkeyes a quality team leader behind the plate.

Harrison is batting .250 this season, with nine doubles, three triples and 29 runs batted in.

Morgan, a physical education major from Muscatine, Iowa, has started 45 of Iowa's 52 games in the outfield this season.

She comes into this weekend's games hitting .288 with nine doubles, 18 runs batted in and is on a six-game hitting streak.

Appleget, an early childhood and elementary education major from Oelwein, Iowa, has given Iowa another speedster on the base paths since joining the team as a junior.

She is batting .250, with 11 runs scored in only eight at-bats this season.

DeVore, a mathematics major from Rock Island, Illinois, started all 54 games at third base for the Hawkeyes as a freshman, but has settled into a utility role this season.

In 36 games, she is batting .281, with 18 hits and seven runs batted in.

Over the past four years, these four athletes have helped the Hawkeyes to a record of 140-77-1, including three second-place Big Ten finishes.

The Hawkeyes come into the games against Indiana with a record of 32-19-1, 16-8 in the conference. They are in third place in the Big Ten behind Michigan and Northwestern.

The top four teams in the conference will compete in the Big Ten tournament next weekend.

Overall, the Hawkeyes are pleased with how they have been playing lately, especially considering their emotional leader and starting third baseman, Melissa Wielandt, missed three games with a back injury.

But Wielandt is back now, and the Hawkeyes are ready to take some momentum into the tournament.

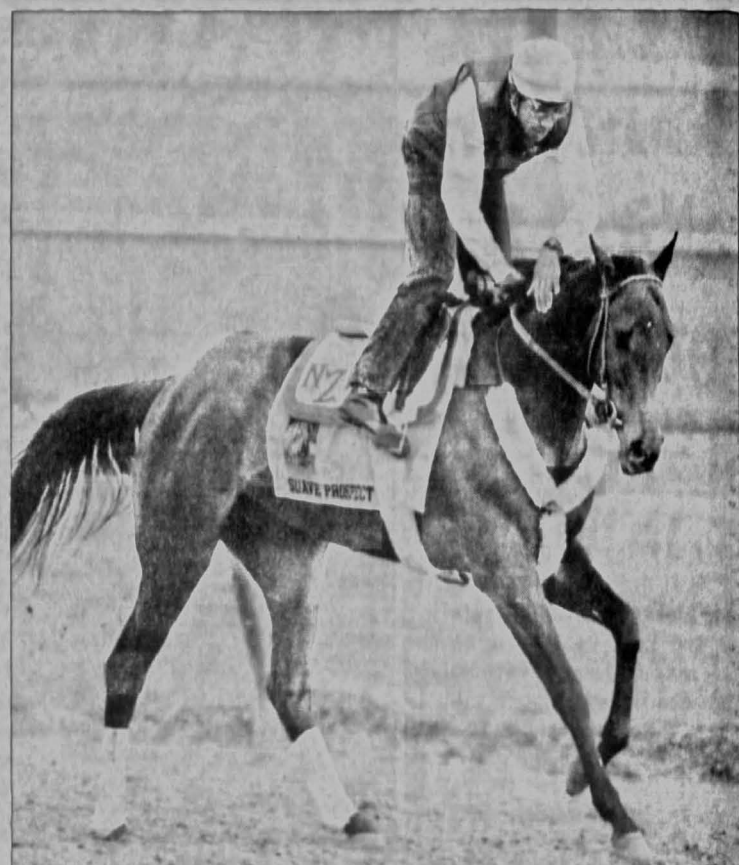

"I think we're just about where we want to be. We ended the series against Ohio State (last weekend) on a good note," first baseman Kari Knopf said. "We know what we have to do. Right now, we're looking for consistency."

"This is going to be a real motivational series going into the Big Ten Tournament. We can't take Indiana lightly even though they're behind us in the standings."

Knopf is second on the team with a .415 batting average, behind leadoff hitter Tasha Reents, who is hitting .424.

Knopf and Brandi Macias are tied for the team lead with three homers. Reents leads with five doubles. Sophomore Christy Hebert has the advantage in doubles with 13 and Knopf leads in runs batted in with 35.

The winner of the Big Ten tournament will earn an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

Derby entry Suave Prospect trots at Churchill Downs Thursday.

Derby favorites draw disappointing posts

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Although the speedy Serena's Song and her champion stablemate Timber Country drew outside posts for the Kentucky Derby, trainer D. Wayne Lukas was more concerned about where they finish than where they start.

"You never know if you drew a good post position until the race is over," Lukas said Thursday, after Serena's Song drew the No. 13 post and Timber Country drew No. 15 in the field of 19 3-year-olds for the 1 1/4-mile Derby Saturday at Churchill Downs.

"I thought I had a great post position with Tabasco Cat, but he got hurt at the start," Lukas said. Tabasco Cat was forced into another horse after breaking from the No. 9 post in the 1994 Derby. He lost all chance of winning and finished sixth before going on to win the Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

While Lukas put the best face possible on the post positions for Serena's Song and Timber Country, and that of his other starter, Thunder Gulch (No. 16), rival trainers could barely suppress a smile.

"I wouldn't want to be Wayne," said trainer Tony Reinstedler, whose Knockadon will start from the No. 2 hole and race as part of the six-horse mutual field.

The entry of Serena's Song and Timber Country was made the 52 early choice. They will be coupled in the betting because Robert and Beverly Lewis own Serena's Song and co-own Timber Country.

Two other leading contenders are Canadian-bred Talkin Man at 7-2 and Afternoon Deelites at 9-2, both of whom like to race on or near the lead.

Iowa can take it easy in tune-up

The Iowa men's golf team will get a chance to take it easy this weekend at the Bruce Fossom Invite in East Lansing, Mich.

The Hawkeyes have all but wrapped up a spot in the post-season regional tournament. The top six teams in the district advance to post-season play. Iowa is currently ranked fourth and should finish no lower than fifth.

Iowa will be playing for pride and as a tune-up for next week's Big Ten Championships.

"We're going into this tournament without any pressure on us to prove ourselves," Coach Terry Anderson said. "We're just trying to start peaking and trying to make sure we're ready for the Big Ten Championships."

The competition in the 20-team tournament will basically consist of the same teams the Hawkeyes have faced all season.

Anderson said that he is excited about his team's postseason possibilities. "I think this team is good enough to be a Big Ten champion," Anderson said. "This team can make it all the way to the NCAA finals."

Iowa is coming off a third-place finish at the Kent Invitational last weekend with a three-round score of 867. Kent State defeated the Hawkeyes for the second consecutive tournament with a score of 849. Northwestern finished second with an 865.

Both Northwestern and Kent State will be competing in the Bruce Fossom Invite, giving Iowa a chance at redemption.

Junior Sean Rowen heads into Michigan as the hottest Hawkeye golfer. He fired a three-round score of 214 last weekend, good for a fifth place finish.

Play begins Saturday and concludes on Sunday.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Men's track and field

Members of the Iowa track team will go their separate ways this weekend, but all roads will lead to Columbus, Ohio.

Hawkeyes George Page, Chris Davis, Ed Rozelle, Andre Morris and Dion Trowers will compete in the Jesse Owens Meet on Sunday, while the rest of the team runs in the Badger Open on Saturday.

Four months into the season, Coach Ted Wheeler is trying to put his team in a position to peak at the Big Ten Meet in two weeks.

"I think we are being conservative and are moving in a direction so that we expect to maximize our efforts in two to three weeks," Wheeler said.

At the Owens Meet, Page, Davis and Rozelle will all compete in the 200-meter dash. Morris will run the 400-meter dash and Trowers will run the 110 high hurdles.

The usual team of Page, Davis, Rozelle and Morris will also team up for the 4-by-100 and 4-by-400 relays.

Wheeler has been extremely pleased with the performances of his sprinters this season.

"I think we are one of the best sprint groups in the Big Ten, if not the best," Wheeler said.

Other Big Ten teams competing in the Owens Meet this weekend will be Purdue, Ohio State and Penn State.

Men's tennis

It may be true that with age comes experience, but the Most Valuable Players on the Iowa tennis team are not veterans.

Sophomore Tom Derouin and junior transfer Mattias Jonsson shared the MVP honor at the UI men's tennis awards banquet Wednesday.

Another Swedish junior transfer, Marcus Ekstrand, received the Hawkeyes' award for Outstanding Attitude.

baseball as a professional right after he graduates.

"I think in this situation, if you get drafted at a high enough place you can go back and get your college education," she said. "I think that's in his long range plans."

High school players who decide to play professional baseball with intentions of getting their college degree either in the off-season or after they retire usually don't get the job done, Banks said.

"When they go into the majors, schooling isn't important to them," he said. "It's a great idea and a great thought, but it usually doesn't happen."

Most kids who go directly into the majors end up playing in fall instructional leagues and then winter leagues, he said.

"By that time they're married and have a family and their priorities change," he said. "They have no incentive to go to school by then."

While Mitchell waits for the draft, he can still commit to a college, but does not have to honor it, depending on where he gets drafted, he said.

"I feel bad (not honoring a commitment), but in the same token I need to do what's best for me," Mitchell said.

by Roberson's affection for Moeller.

Roberson compared this dark day with the death of his wife a few years ago.

"This has been a most difficult time for me," Roberson said. "I guess Monday (when news of the incident broke) was darker than today. It became so public."

Moeller, 54, was arrested on misdemeanor charges of disorderly conduct and assault and battery after an incident at a restaurant Friday.

According to the Southfield police report, Moeller was intoxicated and punched a police officer in the chest. He has not commented since the arrest.

"He always preached you have to be able to handle things," senior linebacker Steve Morrison said. "We all respect him. We all love him. We spent five years with the man."

Roberson and Moeller spent the early part of the week together at Big Ten meetings in Orlando, Fla. They talked frequently.

As the week wore on, Roberson said he began to realize the incident was larger than he at first believed.

When it became apparent to Moeller that the school's reputation might be tarnished, he began to consider resigning. When he decided to do it, Roberson was ready to accept.

"It's a devastating kind of a thing," Roberson said. "I'm sure it's part of what Gary considered as he had to make a decision. I don't think the image is tarnished to the point of no return."

Reaction to Moeller's resignation was generally shock and sadness. Everyone who knows him said it was out of character for Moeller to cause a disturbance. He wasn't known as a drinker.

"I think his record speaks for itself," Ohio State coach John Cooper told The Associated Press by telephone from Phoenix. "He's an outstanding football coach. What kind of person was he? I've never seen Gary get out of line in public. I've never seen him intoxicated. "No question, this speaks to the pressures that's on college football coaches."

Carr also mentioned pressure.

"A lot of you people write about pressure and talk about pressure," Carr told reporters at the news conference. "But you have no idea what pressure is. Trust me."

Nick Saban, who was named Michigan State coach earlier this year, said his first reaction was one of compassion for Moeller.

"He's done a lot of good things professionally for football and football players," Saban said. "I think it's too bad that right now he's being remembered by one unfortunate incident. But that's the way it is."

Michigan running back Tyrone Wheatley, who recently was a first-round pick by the New York Giants in the NFL draft, said he felt coaches and athletes should be allowed to have private lives.

"After six o'clock, the block M comes off," Wheatley said.

"I am Tyrone Wheatley, he is Gary Moeller. We have a personal life."

But there is a higher standard for college coaches, Roberson said. He said the double standard might be harsh, but it was necessary for the integrity of a large institution like Michigan.

"The difference, I guess, is that those other people don't work at the University of Michigan," Roberson said. "This is an issue that became much bigger than the athletic department."

Recent recruits, who now won't get to play for Moeller, expressed regret. But most said they still intended to enroll at Michigan.

"He's just a kind, lovable guy who was placed under an extreme amount of pressure," said Pat Kratus, a defensive lineman from four-time defending Ohio big-school champion Cleveland St. Ignace. "It's unfortunate that this would happen."

SATURDAY BOOK SIGNING SCHEDULED

Poet divulges uncanny writing techniques

Greg Stump
The Daily Iowan

Dave Morice is the kind of artist who'll go to any lengths looking for a creative breakthrough in writing poetry — around a city block, for example, or across a football field.

Those are just a couple of the suggested locations for poems from the "Environmental Poems" section of Morice's latest book, "The Adventures of Dr. Alphabet: 104 Unusual Ways to Teach Poetry in the Classroom and the Community." He will be appearing at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., Saturday for a book signing from noon to 2 p.m.

Morice, who currently teaches a class at the UI on children's literature, first tried out his unorthodox experiments in the 1970s while teaching a poetry class for people over the age of 60.

"With the typical assigned topics, like their earliest memory, I felt we were getting into too much of a routine; we needed more variety," Morice said. "I started going to Ben Franklin's and Woolworth's looking at various objects and asking myself, 'How can these be used in writing poetry?'"

The result of Morice's quest was a plethora of games and devices for creating poetry that comprise the bulk of "The Adventures of Dr. Alphabet." His suggested activities help spark ideas for combining a student's work in different ways — by playing "poetry poker," for example — and creating new kinds of poetry experiences by writing on chairs or balloons.

"It seems as though something as obvious as writing on rocks or whatever generates a whole different aesthetic that nobody's really explored," Morice said. "Poets write stuff to get published; they have a hard enough time getting their work in print as it is."

But if traditional poets are unlikely to pursue Morice's methods, the children and senior citizens he worked with responded with enthusiasm.

"With kids, they didn't have enough experience to form opinions about the way things are supposed to be done, so they were more creative in that way," Morice said. "And the senior citizens had been told so many different ways of doing things that they didn't care anymore. I was amazed at how open they were (to the exercises). ... One woman called it an 'adventure' to do this stuff."

Other topics of discussion in his new book include writing poetry in comic-strip form, a subject which Morice himself is quite familiar with. His second collection of cartoons, "More Poetry Comics," showcases a wide range of drawing styles in wry and humorous interpretations of works by poets such as Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson. When he could get permission, Morice included contemporary poets as well. He said that "almost all of them really liked it; the one exception was Denise Levertov."

"She wrote a letter back saying that putting poems done in a serious mood in a comic book form would completely ruin anyone's experience of it."

Later, when Morice sent her a comic-strip interpretation of her work that he'd already done, she changed her mind.

On the whole, Morice's work displays an unabashed zeal for exploring new and thought-provoking ways of looking at poetry. And anyone who wishes to experience his work firsthand can do so Saturday with a complimentary Dr. Alphabet token that's "good for one free poem."

END-OF-SEMESTER SCREENING SET FOR TONIGHT

Film students get chance to preen at show

Erica Gingerich
The Daily Iowan

Before George Lucas and Steven Spielberg became kings of the movie world, they might have been lowly film students trying to make a residence hall room look like the Temple of Doom or the Millennium Falcon.

Lucas and Spielberg may have to face some new competition tonight, when a fresh crop of movie world underlings enter the filmmaker fighting ring at the "Student Film and Video Show."

The show provides a semester-end forum and an enthusiastic audience for student projects created in several UI communication studies classes, including Electronic Field Production, Sound Design for Media Production, Film Production II, an advanced Media Production Workshop and an optical printing class. Aspiring film and video auteurs will get a chance to see their work on the big screen after arduous hours of planning, shooting and editing various mediums.

Every second of film or tape represents hours and days of work, said communication studies Professor Franklin Miller, who has been teaching and in charge of film and video production for the department since 1970.

"Five minutes of anything that's finished around here — you're looking at a lot of work," he said. Despite all the work, though, he said the shows definitely have a party atmosphere.

The finished projects vary in both length and subject, but most run four or five minutes in length. The quick succession of films is a way for students to show off their efforts to classmates and friends.

Jamie Shapiro, a UI senior majoring in broadcasting and film, decided to document his experiences as a KRUI disc jockey for his final project. Better known as Dr. Funk of the "Dr. Funk and Rudy Show," which Shapiro has co-hosted with UI sophomore Keith Butters since 1994, he wanted to condense the weird events of overnight radio into a 5 1/2-minute film. His film is called "326" after the show's original time slot.

"I thought of all the funny and strange true stories that happened to us and I twisted them around to write the film," he said. Several weird episodes of radio life included a caller who insisted he played guitar with King Crimson's Robert Fripp, unexpected visitors and drunk coeds from nearby residence halls.

Another KRUI DJ and communication studies major, UI junior Craig Amundson, produced a video called "Emu and Dog" for the show and suggests that people arrive early to get a seat.

"It's a great chance for everyone to see what's going on in the film department. Definitely check it out," he said.

The "Student Film and Video Show" begins at 7 tonight in room 101 of the Becker Communication Studies Building. There is no admission, and the show is open to the public.

ACTOR YEARNS FOR 'LAZY MAN'S HEAVEN'

Eric Stoltz manages to pump out films without distraction of TV

Ric Leyva
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Eric Stoltz has priorities: washing machine yes, television no.

The mellow actor has gotten along "just fine, thank-you" without a television since 1979.

"It doesn't take much will power when there's no set to turn on," he says innocently, sounding like a teetotaler at an AA meeting.

The redhead who first made a name for himself in "Mask" has appeared in no less than six films over the past year, most recently in the Scottish epic "Rob Roy." A handful more are on the way.

At the invitation of close friend Helen Hunt, he's also shot three guest appearances for NBC's "Mad About You."

So it's not surprising that Stoltz, now working on the movie "Grace of My Heart," is dreaming of days off.

With his feet up on a desk at MGM offices in Manhattan, he pines away for the less-hurried lifestyle of acting on stage, which allows him precious time for the finer things in life — like washing his own dirty clothes.

"You have your whole day free to eat, see your friends or do your laundry," the Broadway veteran says, pulling at his short coppery goatee. "It's a lazy man's heaven."

A movie star doing theater? Sure. But fluffing and folding?

"Why not?" he says. "I call up my sisters for help with laundry problems."

So much for celebrity glamour. It's fairly early the morning after the New York premiere of "Rob Roy." Stoltz seems a little hung over and immediately asks for hot tea with lemon to soothe a sore throat. A hacking cough punctuates conversation.

"I don't really care that much how I'm perceived," he says, perhaps explaining why he's a dead ringer for Maynard Krebs, down to the uncombed monk's mop and flapping flannel shirttails.

An actor without vanity? Maybe, but Stoltz's conviction weakens when it comes time to take pictures.

"I'm stuck with this hair," he whines, blaming the cut on the movie role he's doing. "Spomed to be sort of a beatnik thing."

Stoltz may call himself lazy, but the facts say otherwise. Forget the wannabe slacker act and grunge rock costume. At age 33, the hard-working actor has hit full stride.

In 1982, he debuted in "Fast Times at Ridgemont High." "Mask" followed in 1985. By 1990, he'd appeared in more than a dozen films, including "Some Kind of Wonderful," "Say Anything" and "Memphis Belle."

In 1992, he made "The Waterdance," a critically acclaimed portrayal of a man faced with life in a wheelchair. He produced and starred in "Bodies, Rest & Motion" the following year.

He recently produced "Sleep With Me" and before "Rob Roy" appeared in "Naked in New York," "Killing Zoe," "Little Women" and "Pulp Fiction."

Stoltz plays an angel in "God's Army," due out in August. He's also in the upcoming family fantasy "Fluke," a mystery called "Blow" and Noah Baumbach's "Kicking and Screaming."

"I can name them all," he says grinning. "I'm not one of those guys who has forgotten his lover's names."

The lengthy list of roles has taken Stoltz all over the globe. He's played an airman, a drug dealer, a Victorian-era tutor, a safecracker, a house painter, a troubled newlywed, a happy-go-lucky teen and a heroin-pumped murderer.

"I remember, growing up, my grandfather telling me stories of how he survived in the Depression," Stoltz says. "And he had 12 different jobs: He was a railroad engineer and a teacher, a construction foreman, a locksmith, a farmer."

"I remember being fascinated by that eclectic, varied lifestyle and I think it made a profound impression on me. It instilled a need to experience different lives."

Stoltz has accomplished just that, but don't ask him how he did it.

"I operate in a very odd way," he says. "I don't feel like I have a key or a plan or even an idea of what I'm doing or how to pursue a career."

"My game plan is a lack of a game plan. It seems chaotic." Feigning nonchalance, Stoltz tries to demystify his persistent success.

"I do look at this period of my life as being a rather fervent time. It's certainly high tide," he says. "But I'm also quite sure that it'll be low tide soon enough and I won't be working so much."

Stoltz has had some tough breaks. Early in his career, he was replaced in "Back to the Future" by Michael J. Fox after shooting had begun. And like any actor, he still laments the roles that got away.

"I wanted to do Thomas Jefferson," he says of the "Jefferson in Paris" role nabbed by Nick Nolte. "He was one of the great re-heads in history."
