UMass hockey players arrested for rape, assault

DARTMOUTH, Mass. (AP) - A 22-year-old college student has accused four men of sexually assaulting her and a fifth man of raping her after she tried to hide from them in a bathroom.

Three members of the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth bockey team face assault charges and a fourth has been charged with rape and sodomy in the alleged attack in an apartment Thursday.

suspect, Sgt. Michael Belloni said.

The men are accused of lining up outside a bathroom where the woman was hiding from their grabs and suggestive comments. When she emerged, four of the men sexually assaulted her before the fifth man raped and sodomized her, campus police said.

Friends of the athletes said the woman had consented to have sex with all five men after spending the afternoon drinking alcohol and watching a pornographic video in their apartment.

The woman's roommates said she was upset when she returned to her apartment in the same complex Thursday evening. The roommate noticed bruises on her friend's wrists. The woman told the roommate what had happened and they called campus police.

Branstad reappoints Pomerantz

Former board of regents president will begin interim term immediately

The Daily Iowan

After the Iowa Senate turned down his nominee for an Iowa state Board of Regents position last month, Gov. Terry Branstad responded Monday by appointing a former regent who was rejected by the Senate two years ago.

Marvin Pomerantz's experience in presidential searches, not politics, was the primary reason for his interim appointment to the board, the governor's office said.

As regents president from 1987 to 1993,

Pomerantz also came under scrutiny from a delegation at ISU for voting in favor of selling the school's TV station, WOI, and upset some people at the UI by calling for regents institutions to construct an explicit materials policy -

The interim appointment sends a clear message about the governor's priorities, Martin

"The governor will not be deterred by political game playing of the Legislature," she said. "He will support the people who are most qualified, committed and willing to serve the state."

Local artists are charging censorship after officials at the UI ordered the removal of nine pieces of artwork depicting human genitalia from the side of a university building, but administrators say the paintings simply violated policy.

The artwork was removed this weekend from the Becker Communication Studies Building. While the artists were infuriated by the decision, UI officials said the art was removed only because it violates UI policy to hang anything from the walls of university property.

The artwork was part of a celebration of local art Saturday called "Exquisite Community." The event also included literary readings and

Bernard and Jarrod Gatlin have no desire to be in a gang, although they say as African-American males, they often feel pressure to "be down."

Waterloo fisherman keeps trying for the big one

Tom Schoenberg The Daily Iowan

The sky is overcast, the Iowa River is running fast and Rudy Jones is trying his damnedest to catch a fish.

Jones, 34, is a Waterloo resident who comes down to the Coralville Reservoir every three weeks to try and catch the "big one." Although the river has a variety of fish species,

Day in the Life

ranging from channel catfish to crappie to walleye, Jones said Saturday he was fishing for striped bass.

"There's mostly striper biting now, he said, referring to striped bass. "When the weather's warmer, I'll fish for walleye. Striper seem to be attractive now coming off the rapids."

Jones said he began his fishing season about a month ago and is still trying to find the right type of lure to use. He's also exploring the terrain.
"Even though I'm fishing, I'm just kind of studying today to get the feel," he said. "I want to spend more time in the water rather than putting new lures on every few minutes. Today, it's a sport for me. But later on in the year, it'll be an art."

Jones said he caught his first walleye last year in the Iowa River and attributed the catch to knowing the rock formation, which he stressed is very important to successful fishing.

"One of the key things about fishing is trying to locate the rocks and then trying to avoid them," he said. "Last year, a guy pulled out a walleye every 15 minutes because he knew what he was doing."

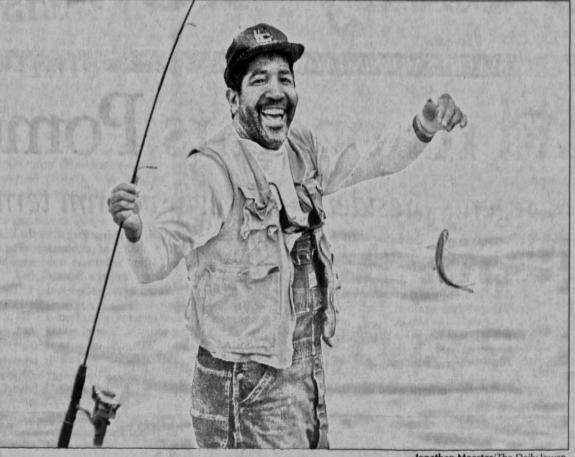

Jones said he tries to improve his fishing skills and frequents local bait shops to talk to owners about where where not to fish," he said. Mary Kallaus, owner of Funcrest DX And Bait Shop, 3981 W. Overlook Road N.E., agreed with Jones that fishing is a sport that takes skill.

Although Jones had only one striped bass on his string, he had bigger plans for the summer.

"I expect to catch many large fish this year and I got the lures to do it,"

Jones said he spends winters catching new lures rather than fish and were only ponds and lakes, so there was no river fishing," he said. "River fishing is throwing out your line, then reeling it in."

Jones said the best times to fish are usually in May and June when some of the fish are spawning, but he said whether the fish are biting.

"A day like (Saturday) when it's overcast, the fishing is not so good. If it were warmer, the fishing would be better," he said.

Jones, who works for the Department of Commerce in Waterloo, said he considers fishing a relaxing hobby that takes his mind off occupational

"For me, fishing is therapeutic," he said. "It's relaxing, challenging and I enjoy fresh fish."

Jones said he prepares the fish he

As Jones packed up his gear for the the weather has a larger effect on day, he remarked on the one striped bass he did catch.

"That's a sandwich," he said. "On a good day, I'll get a 5-gallon bucket full of them. I caught this in the first 20 minutes and thought I'd catch 100 of them, but one is better than none.'

Of course, Jones could not leave without telling a good ole fish story.

"Last week, I was fishing on the Cedar River in Cedar Falls, and right below the spillway, I hooked a 3-foot musky," Jones said. "It would have been my first legitimate catch for the year, but I let too much slack out of my line and he got away."

Downtown Iowa City will get a new twist on the old parking ramp design when a multiuse parking facility is built in the near future. The only question is where it will

At Monday night's work session, the Iowa City City Council, which is unanimously in favor of the parking facility, discussed the location of the ramp. The facility will hold 250 to 500 cars and will include recreational facilities, a child-care center and an adult day-care program on the first level.

The parking facility is in conjunction with the near southside urban revitalization plan the City Council passed in 1992. That plan is to promote commercial and highdensity residential growth in the Gilbert Street to the east, Madison

PROFESSOR SHOWS MALE, FEMALE PERFORMANCES COMPARABLE

UI study disputes Penn. law school findings

Prasanti Kantamneni The Daily Iowan

Although a study done at the University of Pennsylvania College of Law may show male law students are outperforming their female counterparts, this isn't the case at the UI.

According to a recent study, which compares the academic success of men and women who entered the UI College of Law in 1991, UI female law students are performing just as well as

"For some reason, we are seeing a new national trend that males are outperforming women," said UI law Professor Jean Love, conductor of the study. "I don't know why this is happening nationwide, but I am certainly glad it's not happening in Iowa."

Love said she decided to conduct the study after reading two articles that reported women nationwide were not performing as well as men in law

"I didn't think the reports were descriptive of the experience of women law students here," she said.

N. William Hines, dean of the UI College of Law, said he was astounded when he heard about the study done at the University of Pennsylvania.

"I was surprised because it was my impression, based on experience at Iowa, that women and men are virtually indistinguishable with respect to their academic performance in law school in the 1990s," he said. "Love's study confirmed what I believed to be true at Iowa. We have a large number of women who are academically out-

According to the UI College of Law study, women enter the college with nearly the same undergraduate gradepoint average and Law School Admissions Test scores as their male peers and they graduate with law school GPAs identical to their male peers.

Love also did a head-to-head comparison of the UI and the University of Pennsylvania law schools. In the comparison, Love found that the top half of the UI class was composed of almost the identical proportion of men and women as the overall gender composition of the class. However, at the University of Pennsylvania, men were significantly over-represented in the top half of the class.

Lois Cox, associate dean for the UI College of Law, said Love's study is "Our women are not outperformed Sheba Wheeler by men," she said. "The study is accurate, at least in my perception. Hopefully, it will deflect perceptions that may flow from the Pennsylvania study that men are outperforming women in law schools generally."

A reason for this contradiction between the studies may be due to the atmosphere at the UI, Love said.

"Iowa is a great school," she said. "The environment is very positive. If I were a woman applying to law school today, I would come to Iowa." Although the study shows that women and men at the UI College of Law are performing equally, Cox said this does not mean that it is gender-"I would like to think that the atmosphere at our law school is not hostile, but gender bias runs very deep," she said. "It would be premature to conclude on the basis of this sort of evidence that our institution or Currently, 44 percent of those any other institution is completely free enrolled in the UI College of Law are of gender bias."

UNION FOOTBRIDGE WILL BE CLOSED

Pedestrians might have trouble using the footbridge through Aug. 15. The repairs will cost the UI more by the Union this summer; it will be closed June 1 than $590,000 to bring the bridge up to code.

Repairs mean detour for walkers

The Daily Iowan

This summer, pedestrians won't be able to use the Union footbridge that connects the east and west sides of campus because of construction that will cost the UI almost $600,000. Representatives from the Union and UI Architectural / Engineering Services, Orientation Services, the Parking and Transportation Department and Cambus met in North Hall Monday afternoon to discuss ongoing structural plans and potential problem areas which the construction scheduled June 1 through Aug. 15

Ed Hawks, head of Architectural / Engineering Services, said talk of refurbishing the bridge has been happening for three years. Total cost of the construction is estimated at

"Three years ago, we decided that some minor structural work needed to be done to bring the bridge up to 1995 structural codes," Hawks said. "The bridge also carries steam through campus, and groups that coordinate this wanted to make some changes. The telecommunication people also wanted to make some changes with their fiber optics. So the UI decided to go ahead with construction." Although main construction is expected to be complete by Aug. 15, organizers said further refurbishing will continue through September.

Fences will be put up to restrict pedestrians, and signs to restrict parking may be posted.

Hawks said he is aware pedestrians use the railroad trusses near Danforth Chapel to get to the west side of campus, but since this is illegal, he and other coordinators do not want to encourage further use of the railroad tracks. Instead, they want people to use the Hancher footbridge and the Cambus routes.

"Already I'm beginning to hear some ominous signs," said Alexander, wrapping up a twoday campaign swing through the state which holds the first test of presidential strength with precinct caucuses next February.

"My greatest fear is not that the Republican House would go too far, but the Republican Senate would be too timid," Alexander said.

Alexander was in the state to meet with farm group leaders, but he took time for shots at rivals - many of whom sit on the U.S. Senate - and issued a warning that Clinton may not be as vulnerable as many Republicans believe.

"I think he's going to be tough to beat," Alexander said. "Our attitude in the Republican Party is going to change dramatically in the next few months. Right now, too many Republicans look at President Clinton and think he's a pushover."

Oregon state workers set up picket lines

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — About 12,000 state workers went on strike Monday, shutting driver's license bureaus and disappointing job-seekers, after last-minute contract talks broke down.

The strike by the Oregon Public Employees Union, which represents one-third of state workers, began just after midnight and is due to last for three days.

Picket lines went up at state mental hospitals in Wilsonville and Salem. Hundreds of striking workers carried signs outside office buildings on the Capitol mall in Salem, and about 100 people marched in picket lines outside the State Office Building in Port-to two murders. Robin Cotton, director of Cellmark Diagnostics in Germantown, Md., was the first prosecution witness on the crucial subject of DNA. With the even, nononsense tone of a biology teacher, Cotton used charts and her own drawings to explain how genes passed to a child from mother and father form the genetic blueprint of the body.

"If a blueprint contains all information on how to build a house, the DNA contains information on how to build you," she said.

Under questioning by Deputy District Attorney George "Woody" Clarke, Cotton, a DNA specialist on loan from San Diego County, tried to make the highly technical aspects of DNA accessible to jurors by using elementary metaphors.

"DNA has four basic components," she explained to the jury, which has only three college graduates in it. "They are referred to as bases — spelled b-a-s-e-s — so there are four bases that make up all the DNA. And they have the names adenine, guanine, thymine and cytosine. And they are abbreviated just by their first letter: A, T, G

At the defense table, Simpson yawned at one point.

The jurors' comprehension of the concept of DNA testing is vital to the prosecution, which hopes to show that the genetic blueprint in blood samples at the scene of the June 12 murders of Simpson's exwife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman match the genetic blueprint of Simpson's blood.

Cotton gave no results of the DNA analysis of blood in the Simpson case. Instead, she focused on familiarizing jurors with the technology, explaining such terms as "gels" and "autorads," showing them small black bars on pieces of film.

Simpson is on trial for the slashing deaths of Brown Simpson and Goldman. Because there were no known eyewitnesses and no murder weapons recovered, prosecutors are relying on analysis of blood, hair and fibers to prove they have arrested the right person Defense lawyers have suggested a conspiracy theory in which police framed the former football star by planting traces of his blood, and perhaps his ex-wife's, at the murder scene and at his estate.

The defense also has waged a pitched battle to show jurors that scientific evidence - no matter how incriminating - is too flawed to be

ROYAL OAK, Mich. - A 78-yearold retired minister died Monday with Jack Kevorkian at his side, the first death the suicide doctor has attended since the nation's highest court refused to shield him from prosecution.

The Rev. John Evans, who suffered from pulmonary fibrosis, a lung disease, died in a "manner consistent" with other deaths Kevorkian has attended, said the doctor's lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger. He would not elabo-

Evans and his family "had a right to decide at the end of his life how much suffering he had to undergo," Fieger said. "They reject such attempts by those in government ... who would make them suffer."

Michigan's Supreme Court ruled in December that there is no constitutional right to assisted suicide. While Michigan's 1993 ban on assisting a suicide had expired at the time, the court found that doing so is illegal under common law.

The U.S. Supreme Court last month refused to hear appeals of that Kevorkian, a 66-year-old retired pathologist, has long said he does not feel bound by court rulings or laws against assisted suicide, calling it a fundamental right for a suffering person to decide to die.

Police are investigating Evans' death, spokesman Don Novak said. He said authorities were called to his home in this Detroit suburb Monday morning by his wife and were unaware Kevorkian was involved until reporters began calling.

The death was the 22nd Kevorkian has attended since 1990. Most of those who committed suicide with Kevorkian's help breathed carbon monoxide through a mask from a canister. The most recent suicide before Monday was Nov. 26 in Royal Oak, in which a woman inhaled carbon monoxide.

Kevorkian faces charges of murder and assisting a suicide in five other Michigan cases, four of them in Oakland County.

MEETING WITH YELTSIN

Clinton's crucial moment

President Clinton will be in Moscow this week to meet with Russian President Boris Yeltsin. This summit carries the same weight that made President Reagan's meeting eight years ago with former Soviet Union President Mikhail Gorbachev such a nail-biter. The Cold War lent that summit an air of dire importance, and the world watched as Reagan and Gorbachev unsuccessfully tried to demarcate the limits of nuclear expansion. Now Clinton is faced with a situation that is much less clearcut, and perhaps has more to lose than Reagan ever did.

Consider the state of the world eight years ago. Reagan had only to consider the importance of maintaining a healthy relationship with the former Soviet Union, and the basis for that was arms reduction. Now Clinton is faced with a Russia that has splintered, is selling a nuclear reactor to Iran and is fighting a brutal and unpopular war in Chechnya. As these factors have upped the ante at this summit, the meeting has taken on a much more important role in determining how Clinton's effectiveness as a president will be viewed by the world.

While Moscow has used the example of our efforts to build reactors in North Korea as a justification for their move to sell nuclear technology to Iran, the comparison is not a fair one.

The most evident problem is the recent trade embargo against Iran that went into effect last week. Not only are our allies in NATO opposed to the idea, but Moscow has been highly critical of the embargo and has vowed to go ahead with its planned sale of a light water reactor to Iran. Clinton acted correctly in condemning the sale, but whether or not he can convince Yeltsin of the dangers of such an act is yet to be seen. There is no good reason for Iran to have a nuclear reactor.

While Moscow has used the example of our efforts to build reactors in North Korea as a justification for their move to sell nuclear technology to Iran, the comparison is not a fair one. There are only two reasons to have a light water reactor. One is to generate energy and the other is to reprocess plutonium for nuclear weapons. In the case of North Korea, a nation without a natural energy source, a light water reactor is a justifiable need in the country, but Iran - with its vast stores of crude oil has no need for nuclear energy.

The trade embargo has been severely criticized from all sides. American companies, particularly oil companies (like Conoco, which has given money to Republican Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's presidential campaign), feel an embargo will just give foreign companies a leg up on trade with Iran. Nuclear technology expert Najmedin Meshkati of the University of Southern California wrote a letter to The New York Times, saying, "The United States' deal with North Korea for developing light-water reactors is a step in the right direction and an example of a new paradigm in foreign policy that should be duplicated elsewhere." Whatever his critics may say about the embargo, Clinton is correct in his assertion that Iran is a volatile nation with a history of supporting terrorism and as such should not have Whatever his critics may say about the embargo, Clinton is correct in his assertion that Iran is a volatile nation with a history of supporting terrorism and as such should not have nuclear technology.

Whether Clinton can get past the stumbling blocks of the Iran deal and Chechnya and have a real discourse with Yeltsin about the direction the fledgling Russian democracy will take is going to be the most important moment in his foreign policy career.

Be wary of American Association of Retired Persons commercials To the Editor:

The American Association of Retired Persons recently has been airing commercials concerning the possible reform of the Medicare program. The announcer describes how shortsighted politicians are, threatening severe cuts to Medicare which will force individual senior citizens and their children to pay for their own health care. The announcer states that the association supports controlling health-care costs to maintain the long-term viability of Medicare. As the ad continues, the tone of the announcer's voice becomes increasingly more foreboding, while in the background, the sound of an approaching freight train grows louder. The announcer claims the association supports rational debate about needed reforms in the Medicare program, but the style of the ad completely belies that statement. The ad clearly is designed to create an irrational fear that this country will not honor its obligations to our senior citizens as we seek to preserve the financial security of Medicare.

Next year, the Medicare hospital insurance program will begin spending more money than its earmarked tax revenues bring in. The difference will come from a trust fund of past surplus revenues. Without changes to the program, the trust fund will be depleted in seven years. Containing health-care costs is a vital part of the solution, but alone, it will only buy us a few more years. Structural changes must be made in the program (copayments, eligibility, etc.). If not, when baby boomers begin retiring we will have no choice but to raise taxes massively, to borrow billions more from our grandchildren to foot the bills or to just scrap the program entirely. If the association were serious about discussing ways to solve Medicare's problems, it would be attempting to educate both its membership and the general public about the impending insolvency of the program and about possible alternatives necessary to save it.

It is difficult to identify whose interests the association is protecting. Most of its members will still be with us in seven years. They surely will want a viable Medicare program without borrowing from their grandchildren to pay for it. As our leaders in Washington reluctantly address the issue and cast blame on one another for having to think about it, the role of citizen organizations in raising awareness becomes critical. If you dislike negative advertising, call 1-800-424-3410, extension 4, and tell the association to give us facts, not fear.

All but dissertation: committed to having a life

here. For most graduate students, finals week means no more teaching, fewer scheduled activities and the completion of take-home exams and seminar papers. I handed in my last paper on Mon-

My last paper ever because this week marks my official transition into the hallowed domain of ABD (all but dissertation). ABD status comes upon completion of all graduate coursework (four years of it, in my case); the attainment of a master's degree; and finally, passing those eight-hour exams known as qualifying, or more scaringly, comprehensive exams. Because I have done all of these things, I now have been given permission by my department and by the UI Graduate College to write a doctoral disserta-

The word "dissertation" is a scary term. It has four syllables and is only used in the context of a doctoral degree. The word "thesis" is less daunting because I have seen this word before in phrases like "thesis statement," "master's thesis" and "this paper has no thesis."

People ask me, "So now all you have to do is write your dissertation and you're done?" "Yes," I tell them, but I also inform them that a dissertation is not exactly a book review. Supposedly, a dissertation must be both original - which means that one can't simply replicate some previous study with a few variations - and a significant contribution to one's field. So it's a big deal.

Lots of people dread and fear the dissertation process because it is so daunting. I am looking forward to it actually, even though I do find it somewhat overwhelming. I feel ready to try to give something to my field that no one else has researched before because I think I can do it and I think that I have things to say. After four years of listening to professors and reading articles, I am finally invited to join the ranks of these faculty and scholars and put my own 2 cents into the discussion. I get to disagree with Foucault or make a claim about Marx; I get to take an academic risk and see where I land

When the process is all over, the dissertation committee will listen to the public defense of my written tome. Then they will send me out of the room; discuss me; and when they are done, call me back into the room and say (if I am lucky), "Congratulations, Dr. Haravon." Then I am one of them: a doctor, a scholar, an academic. I imagine that this moment of congratulation is a proud one for faculty. Perhaps they feel that they have birthed another doctor, whom they have been nurturing, training and finally weaning to the point where the student can respectfully disagree and make their own strides in the field that they now share on more collegian terms with their adviser.

One piece of advice given to me when I began graduate school was to "make sure you have a life." It is very easy for me in graduate school to get caught up in the pressures, politics and workload until I become an automaton of the UI, doing exactly what is required of me without deciding whether or not it is good for me or if I even want to do it. For example, it is entirely possible to never be finished working for one's classes. Even if I finish the reading assignment, I could read it again, I could read critiques of it, I could read it again, I could type up my notes on the readings, I could read it again, I could discuss them with colleagues or the professor or I could read it yet again. It is easy to be a graduate student and have what some disparagingly call "no life" - a problematic, yet somewhat accurate phrase

There are two main ways to have a life in graduate school. One way is to broaden one's own definition of that phrase to include those of us who love what we are studying. That way, the person who stays up late on Friday night to read can be having a life just as much as the one who drinks beer with friends. Both are doing what they want to do; both are enjoying themselves.

The other way to have a life is to engage in a fun activity or two which have nothing to do with graduate school. For my part, I feared becoming a mono-dimensional academic; while I wanted to be in graduate school, I did not want to be a graduate student only. While I thought that other activities might take away from my graduate school experience, I found that they actually enhanced it. Taking a break from the critical debates in sport sociology and cultural studies often made me readier and more willing to return to them. While I may not be as well-read as I could be had I been a completely devoted graduate student, doing other things has made me happier here and more able to broaden and enrich my graduate school experience. And I had

While I am here at the UI to get a degree, I am here for other reasons, too, one of which is to have fun. As I handed in my last paper and finally became an ABD graduate student, I remained committed to having a life, which means that I will enjoy the work of writing and research and will also continue to have nonacademic, nonschool-related

It's not Hollywood, but Otto's on a roll

It's wonderful the way problems seem to work themselves out.

Only three days ago, Otakar "Otto" Kirchner, the proud sperm father of Baby Richard, took legal possession of the sobbing boy.

But Otto didn't have a job, which meant that the family would have to scrape by on wife Daniela's earnings from giving facials.

Suddenly, that's changed. Otto still doesn't have a job, but the money is beginning to roll in. By a strange coincidence, Otto and Daniela have a $20,000 deal to appear on one of those TV tattle-tabloid shows. I say it is a coincidence because they received half of the fee shortly before yanking Richard from the arms of his adoptive parents.

Now I understand why Otto was miffed that cameras and reporters were on hand for that poignant scene. All that drama, and it was being given away absolutely free.

Well, that freebie stuff is clearly going to change. We don't know how long Richard will be a hot media commodity, but that $20,000 indicates that Otto won't come cheap.

So far, Hollywood hasn't nibbled, according to their lawyer, Loren Heinemann.

But it hasn't been because Otto and Heinemann haven't been trying for a deal.

I have obtained a copy of what appears to be an outline for a movie script, prepared by a Chicago production company that was retained months ago by Otto and Heinemann to peddle the story.

If some studio executives would look closely at the outline, they would see that the story has terrific movie possibilities.

Believe it or not, it even has some potential comedy scenes.

For example, there was that pivotal period when Daniela was pregnant, the baby was almost due, but Otto was in Europe visiting relatives, and Daniela didn't know if he was serious about marrying her.

As the outline put it:

"The events that take place during this trip will forever change his and Daniela's life. Otto arrives in Czechoslovakia and fails to call Daniela from the airport as she requested. He finally phones her two days later but sounds cold, distant and emotionally removed. Daniela continues to worry about Otto's motives and commitment to her.'

Why was she worried? As the outline says, "At the same time Otto is in Czechoslovakia, so is Maria." Ah, the beautiful gypsy woman Maria, Otto's not-so-old flame from Chicago, who just happens to be in Europe, too. And what is going on between Otto and Maria while Daniela, her tummy distended, worries and frets back in Chicago?

This is how the outline tells it: "Maria asks Otto to come to her house and act like her boyfriend, since she still has not told her parents they broke up. "As a favor to an old friend he agrees."

What a guy. What a favor. What a story. You don't have to be Steve Martin to see the potential in that episode

"Otto, this is Daniela, your pregnant girlfriend, calling. What you do there with Maria?" "What I do? I do a favor; that is what I do."

"What kind of favor you do?" "I move in house and act like I am boyfriend; that is what I do." "You move in house and act like you her

"Sure. I am old friend. She is old friend. What are friends for, huh?" The outline goes on: "Daniela would buy none of Otto's excuses. ... Daniela hangs up the phone and refuses to answer any of Otto's repeated And that was when Daniela figured that Otto might be a wild and crazy guy who wasn't eager to get married. Which their very own story out line virtually concedes. ... Otto is in no hurry because according to their culture, marriage is defined by a personal commitment and not by a legal certificate."

Their culture? They say they are Catholics, and the last I heard, the pope thought highly of people getting hitched.

But all's well that ends well. And now they are married, and Otto has regained title to Richard and will bank $20,000 for starters. So Hollywood could have a happy ending, assuming the little boy doesn't sob hysterically in any paid TV appearances. But don't be surprised if Otto and his store; front lawyer come up with something them; selves. As lawyer Heinemann has said: "There is no book deal pending; there is no movie deal pending. But I wish that there were because I'd like to get paid."

Of course. Isn't that what it's all about?

Is society able to discuss anymore?

I've already heard speculation from right-wingers (Oops! Make that fringe groups claiming to be right-wing but actually having nothing whatsoever to do with the GOP, the National Rifle Association or other staunch supporters of American values as espoused by God-fearing and levelheaded talk radio hosts) that the massacre in Oklahoma City was done by the U.S. government to erode support for true patriots in militia movements. That's insane! It really disturbs me that our rhetoric has turned so nasty. That's what triggers rage and anger. It's sensationalistic and purely intended to play on people's emotions, not their intellects. I can't bear to listen to hate radio or even Rush Limbaugh (and some consider him mild). It's just plain nasty. It sickens me. I listened to Limbaugh for five minutes once, long enough to hear him say that Amy Carter was no longer the ugliest first daughter we've ever had. How can it possibly serve to better our country for a grown man to insult the physical attributes of an emotionally vulnerable

13-year-old girl? Won't the human race ever transcend that sort of vindictiveness and name calling? Where is common

I'm afraid that violence will escalate because our society seems to have lost its capacity to engage in sensible discussion. Because finger pointing, political posturing and devotion to ideological causes have replaced reasoned debate, because our leaders are small men who are more concerned with personal power than with government, violence will escalate because we will allow it to. We don't vote; we don't attend meetings of school boards or city councils; we don't give a damn for anyone but ourselves. We talk at each other rather than with each other because we don't know our neighbors, because we hate and fear what we don't understand, because we have no sense of unity, because "God told us to" and because we're going to take back what is rightfully ours.

Endorsement incorrect

To the Editor:

Although Kim Painter acknowledges the perverse role of individuals and their media in prematurely suggesting that the perpetrators of the Oklahoma City tragedy were "Middle Eastern" (DI, April 24), she unhesitatingly calls for a backlash against members of these militias. What scares us more than the demonizing strategy here is the solution she offers.

For all the anti-gun and anti-violence rhetoric in her editorial, we findit ironic that Painter's solution is the extension of the "freedom" for coercive agencies of the federal government to use guns and violence in a crackdown on these groups. These are the agencies that brought you the Randy Weaver fiasco, in which Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents murdered Weaver's wife and child while trying to apprehend him for failure to appear in court. These are the agencies that brought you the Waco Armageddon.

If Painter truly endorsed an end to the "weapons culture," she would condemn the arbitrary use of deadly force, whether exercised by militant radicals or the federal government. Painter's endorsement of federal agents' use of "means outside the Constitution" reveals the statist mentality that justifies the formation of citizen militias. Painter argues that the solution lies in "increased freedom for law enforcement." Painter should immediately realize that freedom exists in human beings, not in "stockpiling groups"

'Leaky boat' rumors don't hold up

Religious right political hacks like columnist Cal Thomas try to portray the use of condoms and safer sex as a liberal eft political plot. Yet Surgeon-General Antonia Novello, appointed by Republican President George Bush, issued a statement pubished in the June 9, 1993 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association strongly supporting condom use for prevention of HIV transmission. Similar statements were ssued by her predecessor, Surgeon-General C. Everett Koop, who was appointed by Republican President Ronald Novello claims that 20 percent, 40 percent or 80 percent of all new HIV seroconversions in the United States will be avoided if 25 percent, 50 percent or 100 percent, respectively, of people use condoms consistently and correctly.

As to the question of pores in condoms, which has replaced the medieval question about how many angels can stand on the head of a pin in the minds of modern day religious zealots, she cites a National Institutes of Health study which found no holes even at 2,000 times magnifica-

Acknowledging that holes can occur, Novello refers to quality control testing by the Food and Drug Administration which has found an average condom water leak rate of 0.3

percent. If the failure rate of a batch of condoms exceeds four per 1,000, the condoms are recalled and barred from sale. This is a far cry from the 33 percent failure rate hysteria mongers like Thomas proclaim Novello says that there are further obstacles to passage of HIV even through a microscope hole. A free virus, which is nonmotile, would pass through a hole only if it were associated with a cell that moves or if it were moved by hydrostatic pressure through a hole.

However, monocytes and lymphocytes that may carry HIV are too large to pass through microscopic holes detected by routine testing. And an FDA study simulating free HIV in fluid under pressure found that most condoms leaked no fluid at all and that "even the worst-performing condom reduced estimated viral exposure ten thousandfold."

The statement cites condom effectiveness during actual use evidenced by contraceptive failure rates ranging from less than one per 100 to 16 per 100 users per year. Novello illustrates the importance of proper condom use by results from a British study of married, more experienced users with condom-user failure rates for pregnancy as low as six

The leaky boat rumors about condoms spread by the religious right do not hold water. But condoms do hold water and hold back HIV, too.

Rubin said the nine paintings are a collage of artwork created separately by four local artists. Each artist created pieces representing the human body.
"The art used parts emblematic of

Richard Gibson, director of UI Planning and Administrative Services, saw the paintings hanging on the wall of the Communication Studies Building Saturday afternoon and Gibson said he didn't even notice the content of the paintings when he called to have the sheets removed. The issue is clear-cut, he said: The UI tion has a policy prohibiting attachment of banners to the side of UI buildings without permission. And the artists did not have permission, Gibson said.

To help with studying, Ketcham recommended planning breaks to

Mason named league's best reserve

NEW YORK (AP) — Anthony Mason, a muscular forward who consistently gave the New York Knicks a lift this season, Monday won the NBA Sixth Man Award.

Mason received 47 of a possible 105 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Charlotte's Dell Curry, who won the award last year, was second with 18 votes, followed by San Antonio's Chuck Person with 12.

The remaining votes went to Seattle's Nate McMillan (9), Orlando's Dennis Scott (7), Indiana's Byron Scott (6), Utah's Antoine Carr (3), Golden State's Chris Gatling (2) and New Jersey's Armon Gilliam (1).

Mason, who was suspended for five games in March after a dispute with coach Pat Riley, came off the bench in 66 of the 77 games he played, averaging 9.9 points, a career-nigh 6.4 rebounds and 3.1 assists. He led the Knicks in field goal percentage at .566 on 287-of-507.

Atlanta manager denies he assaulted his wife

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves manager Bobby Cox, who was jailed briefly after his wife called police to their home, appeared with her at a news conference Monday to deny he had assaulted her.

Cox said he planned to continue managing the club. General manager John Schuerholz, who attended the news conference, said he agreed it was not necessary for Cox to take time off.

Pamela Cox sat next to her husband of 18 years at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium and supported his account. She said police over-reacted to her request that officers break up an argument Sunday night. She said she did not sign an arrest warrant and that Cox was jailed despite her request he be allowed to remain

"There was no hitting of any sort," Bobby Cox said.

Luyendyk turns in fastest Indy practice lap ever

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - After turning the fastest practice lap in Indianapolis 500 history, Arie Luyendyk said he could have gone faster.

"I think there's more in it," the 1990 Indy 500 winner said Monday after his unofficial record lap of 234.107 mph. "If I could have run more today, I would have gone 235."

That might be necessary to win the pole Saturday in the first of four days of qualifying for the race May 28. The qualifying session is foremost in the Dutchman's mind.

'Right now, we're not even thinking about the race, just qualifving," he said with a note of caution. "You always have to be careful because the competition might come up with a surprise."

He sank two free throws with 1:14 remaining when Elden Campbell fouled him and left the game.

Rodman tied it 83-83 with a field goal with 26.2 seconds remaining in regulation. Then Rodman collected his sixth foul and sent Divac

After Divac botched both shots, the Spurs inbounded with 4.1 seconds left. They got the ball to Robinson, whose 12-footer slammed off the backboard.

In a ragged, sloppy affair, the Spurs had led from midway in the first period. But the Lakers hung ball after he missed a shot and in and regained the lead on a 25-15 run in the third quarter and early in the fourth, keyed by Campbell's 12 points during the spurt including his go-ahead dunk with 9:39 left in the period.

San Antonio tied it again, 81-81, on a layup by Johnson with 1:45 remaining, but he couldn't convert the three-point play, and Divac's two free throws put the Lakers on Spurs' Dennis Rodman attempts top 83-81 until Rodman tied it with a reverse layup Monday night.

LET'S BE REALISTIC

Jordan was off because the NBC fix was on

A fixed Bulls-Hornets series? Maybe. But that's nothing compared to the NBC-choreographed scenario that took place Sunday in Orlando.

When Charlotte's Alonzo Mourning complained that Chicago advanced to the second round of the playoffs because NBC and the NBA wanted it to happen, I was a little skeptical. But Sunday night, I saw with my own eyes what power NBC actually held over the NBA and its players.

If the NBA wasn't fixed, Chicago would sweep through everyone in Late Monday morning, the 6-foot-6 All-American from North Carolina said he would follow the lead of teammate Rasheed Wallace, forfeiting his final two years of eligibility to enter next month's NBA draft. Wallace announced last week that he was leaving.

Coach Dean Smith said Stackhouse will go to the pros if he's a top five draft pick. The people Smith has talked to - nine of the 11 lottery teams - have told him that will happen, and Stackhouse said he can handle the challenge.

"I definitely feel that I am ready to move on to the next level," Stackhouse told reporters at a news conference in the Educational Foundation building next to the Smith Center on the UNC campus. Stackhouse said he didn't know for sure that

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Penguins had 20 minutes to save the game, the series and their season. They're one of the few teams in hockey where so little time is more than

Down two goals and about to go down two games, the Penguins revived their big-gun offense on third-period goals by Luc Robitaille, Jaromir Jagr and Kevin Stevens to rally past the Washington Capitals 5-3 Monday night in the Eastern Conference playoffs. The Penguins, on the verge of trailing 2-0 in the series, salvaged a split in Pittsburgh by scoring three times in 3:14 early in the third period to turn a 3-1 deficit into a 4-3 lead.

"I told the guys between periods, if you're frustrated, don't leave it in the dressing room," coach Eddie Johnston said. "Turn it into a positive. Turn it up a little bit and play with some emotion. Once we started to do that, we started whose victory over the Buffalo Sabres Monday

BOSTON — This one was tougher. The first one was more fun. Martin Brodeur has the rare luxury of two consecutive playoff shutouts to compare and contrast.

Brodeur stopped 23 shots on Monday night to shut out Boston for the second game in a row, leading New Jersey to a 2-0 lead in their Eastern Conference playoff series.

"The big difference is the goaltending," said Devils forward Tom Chorske, who had an assist and an empty-net goal in the final 90 seconds after New Jersey protected a one-goal lead most of the game. "Martin is just closing the door." Flyers 3, Sabres 1

PHILADELPHIA - Ron Hextall toned down his energy level to tune up for the playoffs.

As a result, Hextall turned in a second strong performance in goal for the Philadelphia Flyers, to a victory over the Quebec Nordiques Monday night, leveling their Eastern Conference playoff series at 1-1.

Messier stormed into the Quebec zone on a power play, took a pass from Pat Verbeek and slid the puck inside the far post behind Stephane Fiset to give the Rangers a 4-1 lead at 12:41 of the second period.

The 34-year-old Messier is only the third player to score 100 goals in the postseason.

At that point Jordan probably laughed, recalling that television viewers and sports fans are, in fact, him, it would just be a couple of extra days' work before heading on to face New York.

Yeah, New York will beat Indiana. That whole eight points in 10 seconds thing was a hoax, too. Those NBC guys may be dishonest, but man, can they write a story

Anyway, Jordan decided to put a little black brace on his wrist to make the fans believe he was injured, you know, too be a little not that bright. So he agreed. For more realistic. Then he missed twothirds of his shots, again it was purely for show.

gories, best book and best score, for acting awards "Sunset Boulevard" was declared the winner since there were no spinster of "Indiscretions," other nominees.

Only two new musicals opened this season - "Sunset Boulevard" and "Smokey Joe's Cafe," a rock 'n' roll revue. Both were nominated for best musical.

And just two nominees filled the musical-revival category: "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" and "Show Boat."

Glenn Close, who plays Norma Desmond in "Sunset Boulevard," faces only Rebecca Luker of "Show Boat" for the best actress in a musical award.

Matthew Broderick, as a young executive climbing the corporate ladder in "How to Succeed," leads the field of contenders for best actor in a musical. His challengers are Alan Campbell of "Sunset Boulevard" and two "Show Boat" performers, Mark Jacoby and John McMartin.

"Indiscretions," Jean Cocteau's black comedy about a dysfunctional family, also received nine nominations, including best play. It goes against "Arcadia" by Tom Stoppard, "Having Our Say" by Emily Mann and "Love! Valour! Compassion!" by Terrence McNal-

Four of the five performers in "Indiscretions" were nominated

Eileen Atkins, the love-starved received a nomination for best actress and will compete against Mary Alice of "Having Our Say," Cherry Jones of "The Heiress" and Helen Mirren of "A Month in the Country." Atkins' co-star Kathleen Turner was not nominated.

Ralph Fiennes, the star of "Hamlet," was nominated for best actor and faces Roger Rees of "Indiscretions," Brian Bedford of "The Moliere Comedies" and Joe Sears of "A Tuna Christmas.

The Tony nominations were made by a 17-member panel of theater professionals. The winners will be announced June 4.

AGE DOESN'T AFFECT FILM

'From Here to Eternity' holds up well

Jonathon Gourlay The Daily Iowan

"From Here to Eternity," like "Casablanca," is one of those movies saddled with the unfortunate responsibility of living up to its most famous scene. From Here to Eternity

Fred Zinnema Daniel Taradash

In "From Here to Eternity," Burt Lancaster and Deborah Kerr's semiclad romp on the beach amid the crashing waves is one of the most powerful images of raw sensuality that Hollywood has produced. This one scene has stuck in our cultural consciousness, while the rest of the film has faded from memory.

This is too bad - "From Here to Eternity" has aged well. The fine acting and powerful story more than make up for the cheesiness that is a trademark of early films from the 1950s.

The star of the show isn't Lancaster's Sgt. Warden, but Montgomery Clift as Pvt. Prewitt. Prewitt has just transferred to Schofield Barracks in Hawaii where he hopes to get on with his life as an enlisted man. Instead, he enters testosterone hell as his captain and fellow privates use every means possible to persuade him to join their prize boxing team. Clift is wonderful as Prewitt. While the barrel-chested Lancaster oozes hungry manliness, Clift represses his masculinity beneath a calm exterior. When Prewitt finally breaks, Clift makes us realize that he has lost not just his pride, but is obvious that theirs is the true attack. It is a rare movie from the at 6:45 and Wednesday and Friday love story. This might explain why the women's roles are so underwritten as to seem superfluous

Director Fred Zinnemann ("High Noon," "A Man for All Seasons") uses the strict censorship imposed at the time to his advantage. He keeps the movie awash in eroticism by suggesting more than he ever shows. Because of this restraint, the entire movie crackles with repression and desires that are never spo-

Another brilliant example of Zinnemann's style is the cut from the crashing waves of Lancaster's love scene to the swirling smoke from Clift's cigarette as he has his own tryst in a local brothel. These images together speak volumes about the two characters' approaches to making love.

Also making appearances in the movie are a lanky Frank Sinatra and a beefy Ernest Borgnine. Sinatra is extremely adequate as the feisty Angelo Maggio. Borgnine uses his hairy heftiness to his advantage to create a particularly nasty of its eroticism a bleak film. This is corrupt and petty. Lancaster and Clift are the per- the movie where the ending, not fect couple. By the end of the film, it beginning, is the Pearl Harbor at the Bijou tonight and Thursday
