Pomerantz in the driver's seat

In 5-4 vote, interim regent elected president of board

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Marvin Pomerantz narrowly won the presidency of the Iowa state Board of Regents Wednesday, scraping by with a 5-4 vote in an election he was expected to dominate.

Pomerantz was contested by regent Nancy Pellett in his bid to lead the board which oversees the three state universities.

He said he wasn't fazed by the narrow margin of victory because he had expected some competition for the seat.

"I knew there was going to be another nominee, and that's fine," Pomerantz said after the vote

"Some of the people who voted for regent Pellett told me they did so to demonstrate the regents are an independent institution that is not controlled by the Legislature or by the governor."

Wednesday. "That's the prerogative of the members of the board."

The board has been criticized in recent months for being too political, but Wednesday's vote crossed the lines of party affiliation. Pomerantz was supported by three Republicans and two Democrats. Pellett was endorsed by two Republicans and one independent and had been nominated by a Democrat.

The split vote sent a message to the state that the board is not a puppet organization for Gov. Terry Branstad, Pomerantz said.

"Some of the people who voted for regent Pellett told me they did so to demonstrate the regents are an independent institution that is not controlled by the Legislature or by the governor," he said.

Pellett said she was asked at last month's regent meeting if she would consider running for the presidency. She said the vote was nonpolitical — like all regent votes in which she has participated.

"In my two years on the board, we've never voted along party lines — never," she said. "There wasn't a whole lot of call for that criticism."

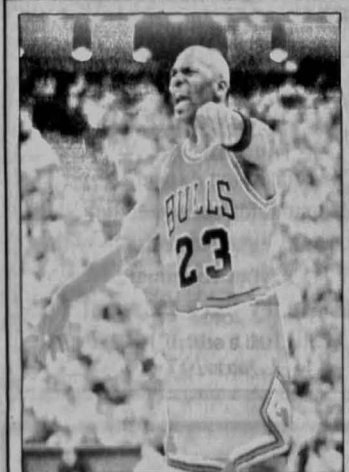

Pellett said she was honored to have been nominated and is concentrating on the future rather than reflecting on the outcome of the vote.

"We were interested in gaining a consensus in the vote. We're interested in the future," she said. See REGENTS, Page 7A

Bush resigns NRA membership

HOUSTON (AP) — Former President George Bush has dropped his lifetime membership in the National Rifle Association in outrage over its references to federal agents as "jackbooted government thugs."

"Your broadside against federal agents deeply offends my own sense of decency and honor, and it offends my concept of service to country," Bush said in a letter to Thomas Washington, president of the firearm-owners' organization.

"It indirectly slanders a wide array of government law enforcement officials, who are out there, day and night, laying their lives on the line for all of us," Bush wrote. "Please remove my name from your membership list."

The letter was written May 3 and released Wednesday by Bush's Houston office.

The Fairfax, Va.-based NRA, which endorsed Bush in 1988 but made no presidential endorsement in 1992, criticized Bush's going public with his decision.

"Surely, a private exchange between us might persuade you to at least reserve a final opinion until all the facts are examined," Washington said in a letter sent late Wednesday to Bush.

Jurors saw that genetic patterns in O.J. Simpson's blood match blood found at the crime scene and in the foyer of his mansion the morning after his ex-wife and her friend were murdered.

Blood found on victim Ronald Goldman's shoe appeared to have come from Nicole Brown Simpson and possibly Goldman, but not Simpson.

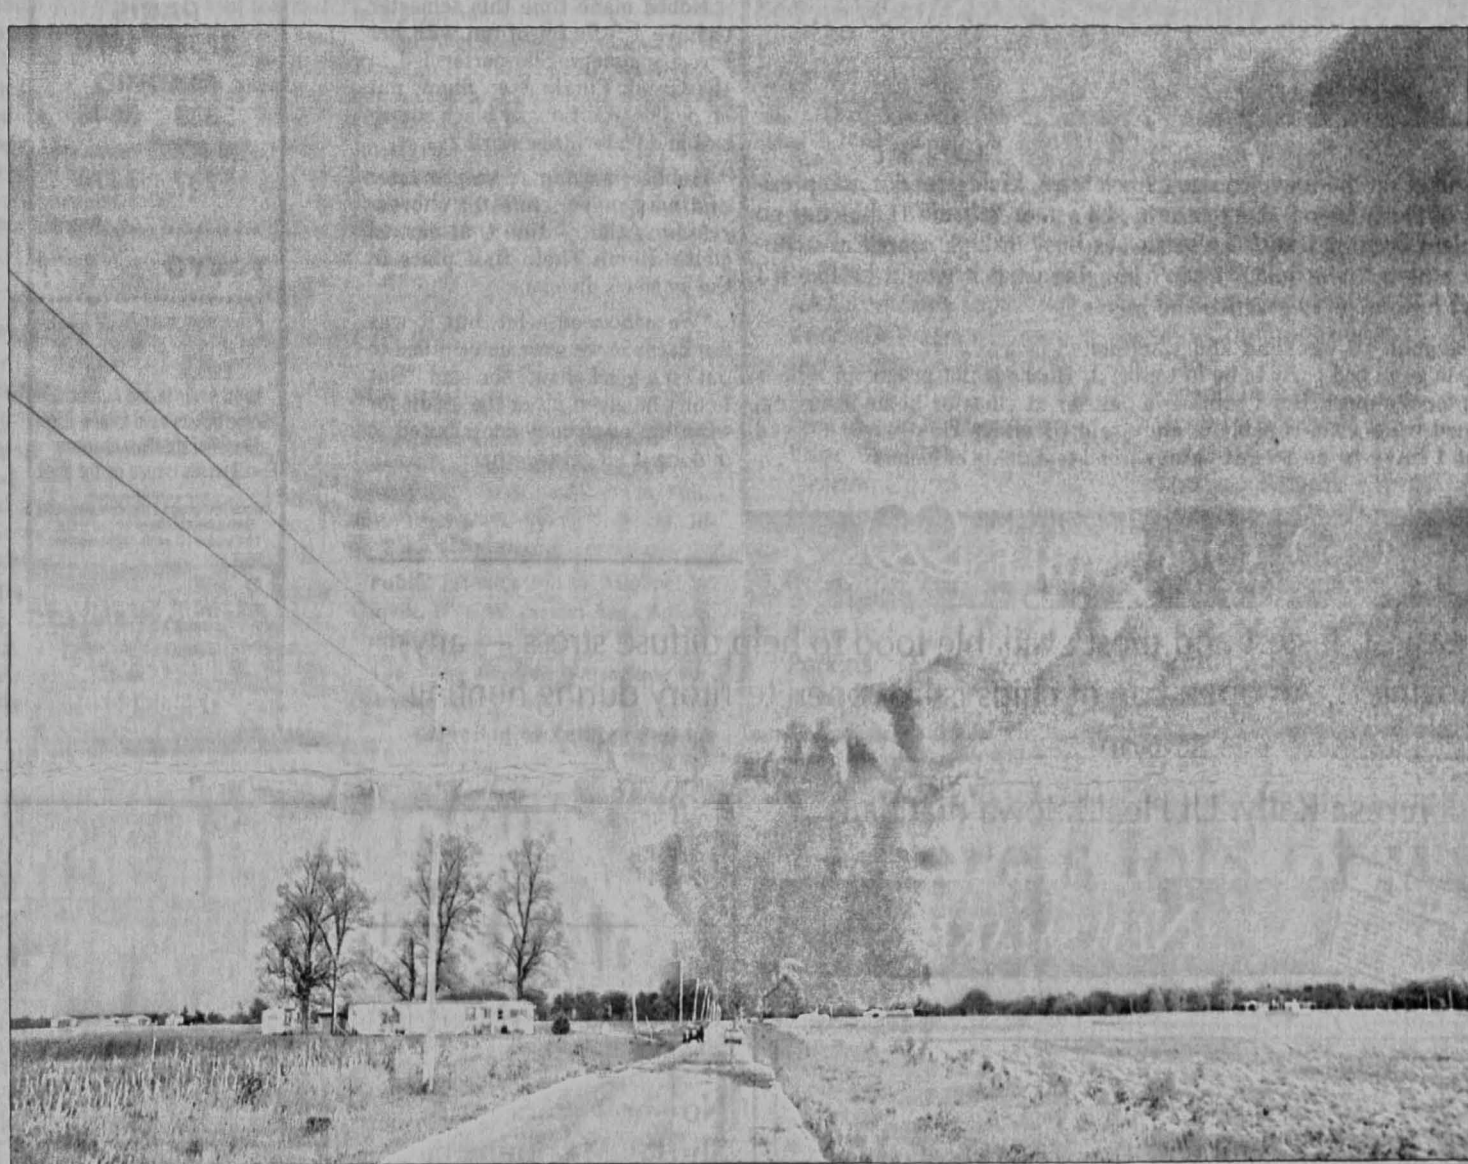

Robert Kardashian, a lawyer and friend of O.J. Simpson, said he never looked inside a garment bag he took from Simpson last June 13 and held until March 28. Prosecutors want Kardashian to testify.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Bailey's dog days as Tennessee's top mutt are over.

Gov. Don Sundquist, who thought the golden-haired animal was a stray and adopted it two months ago, gave Bailey back to 10-year-old Jarrett Sellers after watching dog and boy light up when they were reunited Tuesday night.

"I wouldn't want to deprive a child of his pet," Sundquist said Wednesday.

Returning the dog was "a very emotional thing," the governor said.

"You bond with a dog. Every time I came back, the dog was there and ran and jumped on me. Every time I went in my office, he went in and sat in a chair."

Sundquist took Bailey home from an Italian restaurant at the urging of a waitress who had been feeding the dog scraps. Patrons of Mama Mia's, about a block from Jarrett's home, knew the dog's name but thought he was abandoned.

The sometimes taciturn governor was so smitten he took to carrying the dog across hardwood floors because they scared Bailey, named for the comic-strip character Beetle Bailey. (Sundquist thought the dog was named for a liqueur, Bailey's Irish Creme).

UI students get burned in buyback

Sara Teasdale

Sluggish professors are partially to blame for UI students standing in endless book buyback lines only to walk away with little cash in hand, local bookstore managers said.

All week, angry students have left book buyback stations at the University Book Store and Iowa Book & Supply Co., 8 S. Clinton St., cursing about the small compensation a wad of $2 bills is for books they dished out hundreds of dollars for just four months ago.

"Students need to bring back the student co-op that we had here about

Dental hygiene program ends with last reception

Jill Groenenboom
The Daily Iowan

UI senior Amy Senter expects a lot of tears Friday when the last class of the dental hygiene program celebrates graduation.

Senter came to the UI following in the footsteps of her older sister, Laura Clemen, an alumna of the dental hygiene program. If a federal court ruling stands, the program will close after this semester. Senter and her classmates will be recognized at a reception in the Union Friday.

"I declared my major in January of '91, a couple of months before (the UI) closed the program," Senter said. "I was nervous that I wasn't going to be able to finish. It's disappointing to know that when I graduate from here, my program will be no more."

Last Friday, Chief U.S. Magistrate Judge Celeste Bremer upheld the UI's decision to close the program this month. Her ruling came after UI Associate Professors Beth Pelton, Paula Brine and Nancy Thompson filed a gender-discrimination suit against the UI in 1992, claiming the program would be closed because all students, alumnae, faculty and staff are female. The professors also said the UI retaliated against them when they spoke out against the closing.

A federal jury ruled April 27 that the UI retaliated against the professors and denied them their First Amendment rights, awarding the women more than $200,000 in compensation and $350,000 in legal

WICHITA, Kan. — Terry Nichols appeared in court Wednesday on charges of bombing the federal Nichols and his lawyers declined to challenge the transfer.

Nichols could have asked for hearings and challenged his transfer and detention without bail. Instead, his lawyers agreed to allow him to go to Oklahoma, as long as he's allowed a bail hearing and what is known as a preliminary examination of the charge once he arrives.

Like McVeigh, Nichols is charged under a federal anti-terrorism statute that carries a possible death penalty.

He was ordered transferred to Oklahoma "forthwith" and handcuffed and searched in the courtroom before being taken out. Nichols left the courthouse in a bulletproof vest, got into a U.S. Marshals Service car and drove off in a five-car motorcade accompanied by two police motorcycles. He was taken to McConnell Air Force Base in Wichita.

Officials said Nichols was sent immediately to Oklahoma, but it was not clear whether by plane, helicopter or car. It also wasn't clear where he was held overnight.

He has an 11 a.m. hearing scheduled today in Oklahoma.

Busy schedule keeps UI sprinter up to speed

Leaving the crime and decadence prevalent in her hometown of Miami, UI senior Yolanda Hobbs felt the small-community atmosphere of Iowa City had more to offer.

When the UI offered Hobbs a full-ride track scholarship while she was still in high school, she visited Iowa City and found she liked the area and the friendly people. She accepted the scholarship and moved to the Hawkeye State without a backward glance.

"There was a lot of fighting going on in my neighborhood — people were always getting into trouble," Hobbs said. "There were a lot of guns and a lot of fighting. Iowa just seemed more peaceful, so I came here."

Ever since Hobbs decided to come to Iowa four years ago, her life has been chaotic. She is a sprinter on the UI women's track team, a biology major and president of Delta Sigma Theta sorority.

"I was always busy in high school as a student athlete," she said. "I can't imagine what it would be like if I didn't have to go to practice and meets. And if I'm not at practice, I'm working on something for the chapter. I'm just used to it — I can't see it being any other way."

Year-round, Monday through Thursday, Hobbs trains for the 100- and 200-meter sprint events from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. She leaves for track meets Thursday night and returns to Iowa City Sunday afternoon.

Although her track schedule is tough to manage, Hobbs said she has coped well so far.

"It's hard when you're an athlete to get your studying done because you're gone all weekend and you have to go to bed early to be in top form for the meet. But I think I've learned what I am capable of and what I have to do to get things done." If Hobbs is not practicing, she is either at class or home studying, said UI senior Tina Floyd, a friend and teammate of Hobbs.

"She's a very hard-working person," Floyd said. "She's very outgoing and she tries to get everyone involved in everything."

Hobbs will graduate Saturday with a bachelor's degree in biology and hopes to get accepted to the UI College of Dentistry this fall.

"If I get accepted here, I'll stay," she said. "Otherwise, I'm ready to go. I'm beginning to think that Iowa is a little too slow-paced for me. I guess I'm used to Miami; it was really fast-paced, and I guess I miss that."

As president of Delta Sigma Theta, Hobbs is responsible for arranging public service engagements and meetings.

"But I don't have total control over everything. It's not like what I say goes," she said. "It's more of a group effort."

Hobbs is well-liked by the women of Delta Sigma Theta, said UI junior Carmen Abdullah, one of Hobbs' sorority sisters. Abdullah said Hobbs knows when it is time for business.

"Yolanda is a very personable person; she is very straight when it came down to business, but she isn't a tyrant or anything," Abdullah said. "She was successful at running the chapter, and it takes a lot of time and dedication."

Hobbs made time this semester to have a little bit of fun with her sorority sisters. She performed in the Greek Finale Step Show, put on by the traditionally black sororities and fraternities April 21.

Hobbs was named step master and was responsible for choreographing the routine that earned Delta Sigma Theta first place in the women's division.

"We practiced a lot, but it was fun because we were determined to put on a good show," she said. "But I can't be given all of the credit for winning; everybody contributed to making it all gel together."

No-show stars snub Shirley MacLaine at film society tribute

Why the no-shows? Many had excuses, but the rumor was that they snubbed MacLaine because of what she wrote about them — or their friends — in her new autobiography, the best-selling "My Lucky Stars," the Daily News said Wednesday.

RESTAURANTS OFFER LOW-FAT MEALS

Fast-food evils plague studiers

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Before biting into that slice of pizza — double cheese, extra pepperoni, hold the anchovies — at midnight before an early morning final, it'd be wise for students to muster the courage to check out their fine cuisine's fat content.

Students who are hoping fast food will relieve the strain of a busy finals week should either try ordering foods low in fat and cholesterol or be prepared to see the numbers increase when they step on the scale, said Health Iowa dietitian Teresa Kelly.

"Students will pick up the easiest, fastest and most available food to help diffuse stress — anything to keep their jaws moving," Kelly said. "Suddenly you start thinking about the vending machines downstairs or the open bag of potato chips. An open bag of chips is like open territory during hunting season."

Sticking to the recommended daily intake of 50 grams of fat could be quite a chore for the active student who quiets a grumbling stomach with a bacon-and-cheddar sandwich from Arby's and — for dessert — shovels down a Blizzard at Dairy Queen. The sandwich alone contains 33 grams of fat, while the Blizzard contains about 36 grams of fat.

But some students say they're trying to make an effort to pick foods low in fat and cholesterol.

"I have been trying to order foods in low fat content recently because it's just one thing I can do to make me aware and help me reduce my fat intake," said UI senior Clifford Gentry. "Sometimes restaurants make it

Fat in Foods

People should try to maintain a diet that is less than 30 percent in fat. For most women this means their intake of fat should be approximately 40 to 50 grams of fat daily. For men, the fat intake would be slightly higher.

Most fast-food items do not fit into the low-fat category, but to eat healthy when dining out, these tips are suggested:

■ Avoid ordering appetizers because most are fried and/or high in fat. Instead, share an appetizer or opt for a broth-based soup or side salad with limited dressing.

■ Avoid foods on menus described as "creamed, breaded, cheesy or in a butter sauce." Choose foods described as "grilled, steamed, baked or broiled."

■ Avoid "extras," like sour cream, gravy, special sauce or mayonnaise. Most of these more than double the fat of an entrée.

easy for me to decide what to order because they have pamphlets that tell you the fat and cholesterol content, but most of the time I have to make an educated guess."

More restaurants are responding to a national demand for healthier foods. Fast-food chains are getting the message especially that customers still want their food fast but not stocked with grease, salt and fat.

McDonald's, Taco Bell, Arby's and Burger King have followed the national health-conscious trend and are taking steps to provide nutritional information on all foods sold in their restaurants.

McDonald's has been a trendset-ter in providing more healthy foods as options to fat-conscious customers, said Rich Castleberry, first assistant manager of McDonald's restaurant, 804 S. Riverside Drive.

Low-fat foods on the McDonald's menu include the McLean sandwich, chicken fajitas and two kinds of vinaigrette salad dressing.

"We feel the market and we realize health-conscious people are turned off by all the grease and high fat content you find in most fast-food foods," Castleberry said.

However, UI sophomore Dana Hagers said when making the choice to eat out, she's prepared to gobble down food laden with fat and grease.

"I don't really try to order foods with low fat content," she said. "If you are going to eat out at fast-food restaurants, then you've got to be willing to eat the fat in what they give you."

McDonald's executives are aware many people think like Hagers. The restaurant may be adding salads and low-fat sandwiches to its menus, but it has no plans to turn off the deep fat fryers for good.

"When you are dealing with foods, you have to also cater to those people who want the (fatty) burgers and fries," Castleberry said. "So trying to sell items that satisfies both kinds of customers is like trying to be a politician."

Paul Rogers, general manager at Taco Bell, Coralville, said his restaurant began serving a "Border Lights" menu two months ago to satisfy the older, more health-conscious customers. The foods are cooked with lean meats, fat-free cheese and low-fat sour cream.

'COMMITTED TO EXCELLENCE'

Collins approves of head regent choice

Jen Dawson

The Daily Iowan

Although Marvin Pomerantz's election to president of the Iowa state Board of Regents has been met with some opposition, the chairman of the UI Search and Screen Advisory Committee said he is looking forward to working with the new regent.

"The president of the board is charged by the regents to supervise the search process, so I work directly with the president of the board," search committee Chairman Steve Collins said at the committee's Wednesday night meeting. "I look forward to working with Mr. Pomerantz. He has long been committed to excellence, and that commitment bodes very, very well in the search process," he said.

Based on past experiences with Pomerantz, Collins predicted a strong working relationship between the search committee and the new board leader.

"I expect to work well with him," he said. "He's a pretty straightforward man. He says what he thinks, and I appreciate that. I say what I think, too; it's one of the reasons we've always gotten along."

There have been accusations by some state legislators that Gov. Terry Branstad appointed Pomerantz in an effort to influence the selection of presidents at the UI and the University of Northern Iowa. But Collins said he sees no ulterior motive behind the governor's selection.

"My sense is that the governor has long believed the operation of the regents' institutions should belong to the board of regents," Collins said. "I have no reason to think he's changed that view with the consequence of his appointment of Mr. Pomerantz."

Now that its presidential slot has been filled, the board is prepared to continue with the process of filling the UI's and the UNI's presidential positions.

"We've got a big job ahead of us in choosing a new president for (the UI) and for UNI," said regent

Nancy Pellett, who was the other candidate for the board presidency. "We're ready to move on."

Regent John Tyrrell said former regents president Marvin Berenstein had gotten the ball rolling by pressuring the UI search committee to move its presidential search along, and the new board probably won't have to do more prodding.

"I think the die has been cast, and the schedule is ready to get moving in the search at the UI," Tyrrell said.

Each of the three new regents has been briefed on the current status of the search for the next UI president.

"I've talked to all of the new members of the board of regents in this past week," Collins said. "I've communicated to them some of the information about the search process and the search committee."

The recent appointment of three new regents to the board should not have a significant impact on the relationship between the board and the search committee.

DNA test results point to Simpson

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Jurors at the O.J. Simpson trial finally saw Wednesday how his genetic fingerprint is linked to murder: Dark blots on his DNA X-ray are similar to those from a blood drop found near the slashed bodies of his ex-wife and her friend.

"That pattern is consistent and looks to be the same as the pattern of Mr. Simpson's (DNA)," biochemist Robin Cotton explained as many jurors looked at the DNA results flashed on a 7-foot courtroom screen.

Simpson didn't pay attention to the screen, looking down at a notepad and occasionally talking with his attorneys.

The disclosure of DNA results was long awaited. But Cotton's matter-of-fact delivery — given to a jury that has been sequestered for four months and after 2½ days of dense, scientific explanations about DNA — robbed the moment of dramatic impact.

"It was almost anticlimactic," said Loyola University Law Professor Laurie Levenson, who was in court for the testimony. "It took so long to get there and there wasn't a big fanfare for the announcement of the most compelling evidence in the case."

Cotton, director of Cellmark Diagnostics of Maryland, also testified that Simpson's genetic "markers" were found in a blood drop collected from the foyer of his mansion the morning after the June 12 slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Prosecutors have suggested Simpson cut his hand while slashing the victims, leaving behind blood drops at the crime scene and at his home, which is about two miles away. With no known eyewitnesses and no weapons recovered, prosecutors have built their case around DNA analysis of blood found at the crime scene, in Simpson's Ford Bronco and at his estate.

Cotton said the genetic pattern suggested the blood in Simpson's foyer could not have come from the Simpsons' two young children, Sydney and Justin, who often visited their father.

She also ruled out the possibility

Associated Press

Biochemist Robin Cotton, lab director of Cellmark Diagnostics, displays to the jury X-ray film Wednesday, showing DNA blood typing of defendant O.J. Simpson and murder victims Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman during testimony.

the blood drop at the crime scene came from the children, who lived with Brown Simpson and were asleep in her condominium at the time of the murders.

The defense has vigorously challenged DNA results, contending that evidence sent to Cotton's Maryland lab for analysis was contaminated, mishandled or tampered with by police trying to frame Simpson.

During her presentation, Cotton gave each juror a transparency, or autorad, showing the genetic patterns of blood from Simpson, Brown Simpson and Goldman. As she discussed results, most jurors chose to look at the courtroom screen, where the blots of those blood samples and comparisons to relevant evidence were blown up.

The similarities between Simpson's blood and that of blood taken from the murder scene and his house were obvious even to the untrained observer.

Cotton showed jurors Simpson's genetic pattern in a column on the autorad. It looked like two groups of three hash marks separated by a space, with a lone hash mark near the bottom of the column. She pointed out a seemingly identical pattern in the blood drop found on the walkway of Brown Simpson's condominium and the drop found in Simpson's foyer.

PEOPLE CAUGHT OFF-GUARD

Storms in La. force mass evacuations

Leslie Zganjar
Associated Press

SLIDELL, La. — A second day of torrential rain in the New Orleans area flooded thousands of homes Wednesday in this suburb built on reclaimed swampland, forcing some people to swim out their windows to safety.

The death toll rose to six. New Orleans city workers found the body of a child in water flowing to drainage pumps.

Boats, dump trucks and National Guard trucks carried people to drier ground, cruising Slidell streets filled with rushing, murky water that lapped at window ledges. One shelter had to be evacuated when it, too, was flooded.

Slidell got 14 inches of rain Wednesday on top of 7 inches the day before. Picayune, Miss., about 30 miles to the northeast, got 19 inches by noon. The New Orleans suburb of Metairie got 18 inches Monday night.

"This really caught us off-guard," said Audrey Smith, who awoke to find floodwaters lapping at her front door in Slidell.

Slidell, a popular middle-class community, is built in part on reclaimed swampland at the eastern end of Lake Pontchartrain, about 30 miles east of New Orleans. While New Orleans has canals and huge pumps to suck water from its below sea-level sections, Slidell's drainage systems have struggled to keep up with population growth.

New Orleans landmarks, such as the French Quarter, largely escaped damage, although some hotels had to sweep several inches of water out of their lobbies and some guest rooms were damaged.

The main-floor dining room at Commander's Palace restaurant was closed for cleanup. Street flooding stranded about 250 customers Monday night. Chef Paul Prudhomme's Cajun restaurant, K-Paul's, had only one dining room open Tuesday because half its staff couldn't get to work.

Thunderstorms boiling up along the Gulf of Mexico also flooded suburbs on the north side of Lake Pontchartrain and communities through coastal Mississippi and Alabama into the Florida Panhandle. Mobile, Ala., got up to 10 inches of rain by midday. Water was 2½ feet deep on the streets of Atmore, Ala.

Clinton revamps school gun ban bill to meet high court's terms

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton sent Congress a bill Wednesday to reinstate a federal school-zone gun ban declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

Clinton had announced his intention last week to recast the law to enable it to pass constitutional tests after the high court threw out the existing 1990 law on a 5-4 decision.

The court ruled Congress could not impose a gun ban at local schools unless it demonstrated the action fell under its authority to regulate interstate commerce. The court said it could find no connection with commerce in the law as written.

At Clinton's request, Attorney General Janet Reno drafted new language, adding to the old law a requirement that government prosecutors prove in court that a gun found in or within 1,000 feet of any school has moved in interstate commerce.

Clinton asserted this change would bring the law within the jurisdiction of Congress and meet the Supreme Court's constitutional objections.

Rio de Janeiro police rescue tycoon's kidnapped daughter

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The 13-year-old daughter of a prominent businessman was freed Wednesday after a shootout between police and her kidnappers.

The five kidnappers were Rio de Janeiro policemen, law enforcement agents said. Three were arrested and two escaped.

Paula Zamboni was abducted April 24 in front of her school in the farming town of Alem Paraiba, 120 miles northeast of Rio de Janeiro.

On Wednesday, 40 police officers armed with automatic weapons surrounded the house where the teenager was held on the outskirts of Rio de Janeiro.

TV Globo network footage showed police, some with black masks and bulletproof vests, raiding the house after a brief gunbattle with the kidnappers.

Moments later, the girl — apparently unharmed — was carried out of the house by a group of cheering officers, shouting "victory" and firing their guns in the air.

The girl's father, Alencar Zamboni, is one of Brazil's biggest wholesalers. He is owner and president of the Zamboni Group, with projected earnings of about $310 million this year.

OFFICIALS INVESTIGATE CAUSES

Habitat led to epidemic in Zaire

Paul Raeburn
Associated Press

NEW YORK — An epidemic that has killed more than 100 people in a remote city in central Africa is probably due partly to a deteriorating environment and inadvertent human actions that encouraged the spread of a deadly microbe, researchers said Wednesday.

At the request of the Zairian government, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta prepared Wednesday for the immediate dispatch of a team of medical investigators to the Zairian provincial capital of Kikwit, where the epidemic continues.

CDC biologists were also testing the first blood and tissue samples to emerge from Zaire to try to determine the cause of the epidemic. An answer is expected by the end of today, said Bob Howard, a CDC spokesman.

Ebola virus, one of a family of hemorrhagic fever viruses, was a likely candidate, researchers said. The symptoms of Ebola virus infection include high fever, a "leakiness" in blood vessels and a high death rate.

Army infectious disease specialists at Fort Detrick, Md., readied aeromedical evacuation teams and high-security isolation wards to provide any assistance that might be required, said a spokeswoman, Cheryl Parrott.

Infectious disease experts said that the root causes of the epidemic were environmental and ecological degradation combined with human activity.

"Something happened that made this epidemic," said Dr. Robert Ryder, an infectious disease specialist at Yale University who has lived in Zaire.

"You're probably dealing with people living right at the edge — no running water, no electricity, many people on marginal subsistence. The health-care facility will be overwhelmed. It takes a constellation of events that has to collide, and you've got an epidemic on your hands," he said.

Stephen Morse, an infectious diseases expert at Rockefeller University in New York, said that humans unwittingly encourage the spread of previously unknown viruses.

"HIV (the AIDS virus) is one of the few that has really succeeded. It's been able to take advantage of highways we've inadvertently created for viral traffic," he said.

Human activity creates these highways in two ways, the researchers said. The spread of human populations exposes people to the virus, which in many cases has long infected animals. And medical errors made under trying circumstances often worsen the problem.

"It's man encroaching on turf that has not been encroached on," Ryder said. "It's almost as if the virus is saying to man, 'I'll leave you alone if you leave me alone, but as soon as you step on my turf, I'm going to get you.'"

An epidemic of Ebola virus infec-

Ebola virus

At least 100 people in Zaire have died from a virus believed to be Ebola.

In 1976, 274 people died in an Ebola outbreak in Yambuku, Zaire. The virus is named for the Ebola River. Ebola is spread through body fluids and secretions, but not through casual contact.

At least 10 people in Mosango are infected. Three have died.

The 600,000 residents of Kikwit were placed under quarantine Tuesday.

AP/Wm. J. Castello, Dawn Desilets

tion in Zaire in 1976 was exacerbated by hospital workers who used unsterilized needles when treating the patients, Ryder said.

Zairian health ministry officials say the latest outbreak began April 10 when a surgical patient at Kikwit's hospital contaminated medical personnel. A second apparent outbreak of Ebola — with three fatalities — was reported Wednesday in a city 75 miles west of Kikwit.

Morse noted that Ebola virus and its relatives are not easily transmitted. It usually takes contaminated needles or contact with blood to spread the infection.

He said it was possible that such epidemics would become more common as human beings continue to spread into new areas, clearing land for agriculture and moving from villages to cities.

Kikwit is a city of 600,000. It has doubled in size since 1991, Ryder said. Its main street is unpaved and it has scant reserves of electricity and water.

Once a small colonial outpost, it is now encircled by a vast shantytown, Ryder said.

INFLUENCE IS UNNECESSARY

Pomerantz not favorable

Finals are almost over, and many students are already on vacation. However, the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee still has a big task looming ahead. This final chapter in the term of UI President Hunter Rawlings leaves the committee with the responsibility of combing the academic landscape for a suitable replacement.

To aid in the search, Gov. Terry Branstad has reappointed Marvin Pomerantz as an interim member of the Iowa state Board of Regents. The board then elected him president. A former regents president, Pomerantz was rejected by the Iowa Senate for reappointment to a second term in 1993. Branstad cites Pomerantz's previous experience in finding presidents for the three state universities as the primary reason for the selection. After being denied a position on the board by the Senate, Pomerantz does not belong on the current board of regents and he does not deserve a role in the search for a new UI president.

Pomerantz has had his problems with the UI. He initiated the classroom materials policy which has become a raging issue on the UI campus. Pomerantz also has had problems with Iowa State University because of his stance in favor of selling the school's TV station.

Any person who has a history of creating enemies within a system should not have a leading role in the search for a new leader in that system. Sure, he has experience, but his track record shows that his experience was not positive. Wouldn't the board desire a leader who has demonstrated success? Herbert Hoover had experience with the economy before voters took him out of office during the Great Depression; J. Edgar Hoover had experience in dealing with minorities, but he was never a spokesman for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Branstad has only reappointed him on an interim basis. The board of regents should be made up of people who will serve their entire terms in all aspects of the job, not appear for one purpose and vanish when the job is done. The board will have to work with the new UI president, so do they really want a president selected by a person who will not remain on the board?

The Senate has decided once that having Pomerantz on the board was not in the best interests of Iowa's system of higher education. His influence is unnecessary in the search for a new president for the UI. Branstad should allow the new regents to find the president that they believe is best for the future of the UI.

'Real life' courses popular

Although the most popular undergraduate major at the UI is still business, according to Vance Grant, director of the UI College of Education's statistics branch, students at certain universities are taking advantage of the "real life" courses that are being offered. The UI should follow suit and offer such classes.

Alexander Astin, director of the University of California-Los Angeles' Higher Education Research Institute, said that his agency's annual survey of about 300,000 incoming college freshmen has found that in recent years, students are increasingly interested in courses dealing with quality-of-life issues. He goes on to say, "It tells us that students are interested in things outside themselves, in society and community action, in environmental concerns and helping people in need."

An article written by Nathaniel Sheppard Jr. titled "Popular College Courses Reflect Changing Values" (Chicago Tribune, May 7) included a number of courses that were more unique than the basic general education requirements. For example, the most popular course at Carleton College in Northfield, Minn., is referred to as Visions of California. A spokeswoman for the college described the course in detail by explaining that it is "a look at life, literature and history in the state of fun and sun." Students who were fortunate enough to take the class actually traveled to California for three months and stayed in hotels and resorts.

And this is not the only attractive course popping up at colleges. At Whittier College in Whittier, Calif., The Good Life — which examines what makes life worth living — is popular on campus. Also considered a very popular course is Beethoven and the Beatles, which is taught at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn.

It is wonderful that such courses are being offered at some colleges because it gives students a chance to explore what life is about. Subjects such as death, AIDS and fitness, for example, are extremely important to be aware of and to understand. It is fortunate that many of these classes educate students on such subjects. Why not provide classes that are out of the ordinary? After all, college should be a learning experience.

Allison Russ, a UI senior majoring in sociology, said that schools should provide more programs that are out of the ordinary.

"Professors are so concerned with what is in the book," she said. "Students don't understand a lot of it anyway, and people are so concerned about the grade."

Russ feels frustrated because it seems that teachers don't want to take the time to teach outside of the textbooks.

The "real life" issue courses offered at increasingly larger numbers of universities are the most beneficial for students because they teach students about themselves and give them the skills to survive in our changing world.

Many of us have the moral fiber of dryer lint

Those of you lazy, do-nothing semiliterate Gen Xers who manage from time to time to tune in to the news will have noticed that legal reform is now looming on the congressional horizon.

You realize, of course, what this means. It means that it's time to turn off the "Cheers" reruns and show some entrepreneurial hustle. This may be your last chance to make a fast buck by suing somebody.

Lawmakers are trying to cut down on frivolous lawsuits, which are draining buckets of money out of the American resource pool. They do this by making the people who file lawsuits liable for legal expenses and by capping the amount of punitive damages juries can award to plaintiffs.

Consumer groups are a little ruffled at these proposals, but since anything that hurts lawyers will probably be popular with people in general, I expect that we'll have some kind of legal reform before long.

So if you've ever been tempted to take advantage of a mighty easy way to make some money — one that is marginally more respectable than going on welfare — you should act soon.

You might be thinking, "Gee, I'd like to win a lawsuit or at least get an enormous settlement, but there's no one I can sue." The truth is that everyone can sue someone. It's like playing the lottery — you might not win, but it doesn't cost much to try. All you need to get into the game is a little ingenuity and a lawyer.

If a potential lawsuit hasn't occurred to you offhand, I've come up with a few ideas to get you started. Of course, if you use any of them, I'll be forced to sue you for turning my ideas into a money-making venture — unless you're willing to split the proceeds of said venture with me, in which case I'd probably be willing to let it go.

First, have you seen those pet food commercials that claim cats and dogs can help people live longer, healthier lives? This claim is not altogether untrue; studies have indeed been done showing that petting an animal lowers blood pressure and that pet owners are less likely to suffer from stress and depression than those not owning pets.

And you know that clause on your rent that says you are not allowed to have pets? Probably a good 90 percent of the rental properties in Iowa City specifically prohibit renters from keeping pets. I don't know how local property owners can sleep at night, knowing they are toying with the health of hundreds of stressed-out and depressed students, but clearly it is time someone taught them a lesson.

Then there are the dangerous things people do every day all over the world simply because they are stupid. Your upstanding citizens might think after electrocuting themselves by sticking a fork into a toaster "Boy, am I stupid," and that would be the end of it. On the other hand, your frivolous lawsuit-bringers would think "Boy, am I stupid. Now who can I sue?"

So if you really want to sue someone, take inspiration from the guy who sued the company which manufactured his bicycle for not stating more explicitly that it is dangerous to ride a bike at night without any lights and reflectors (for real).

Following this same line of reasoning, which suggests that the manufacturers of products are responsible for protecting the buyers of those products from using them unwisely, we might expect that skateboards would carry the following warning:

DO NOT USE except in small well-padded room under the supervision of a physician.

In all likelihood, nobody ever skateboarded without falling off at least once. Therefore, it is clearly dangerous to skate on surfaces like cement or brick. Skateboard manufacturers need to be much more clear about this danger, so I suggest someone sue them for not putting a big warning on their products — or at least a disclaimer, like "For Morons Only."

In a country where you can sue somebody else for the results of your own stupidity, there can be no shortage of reasons to sue people.

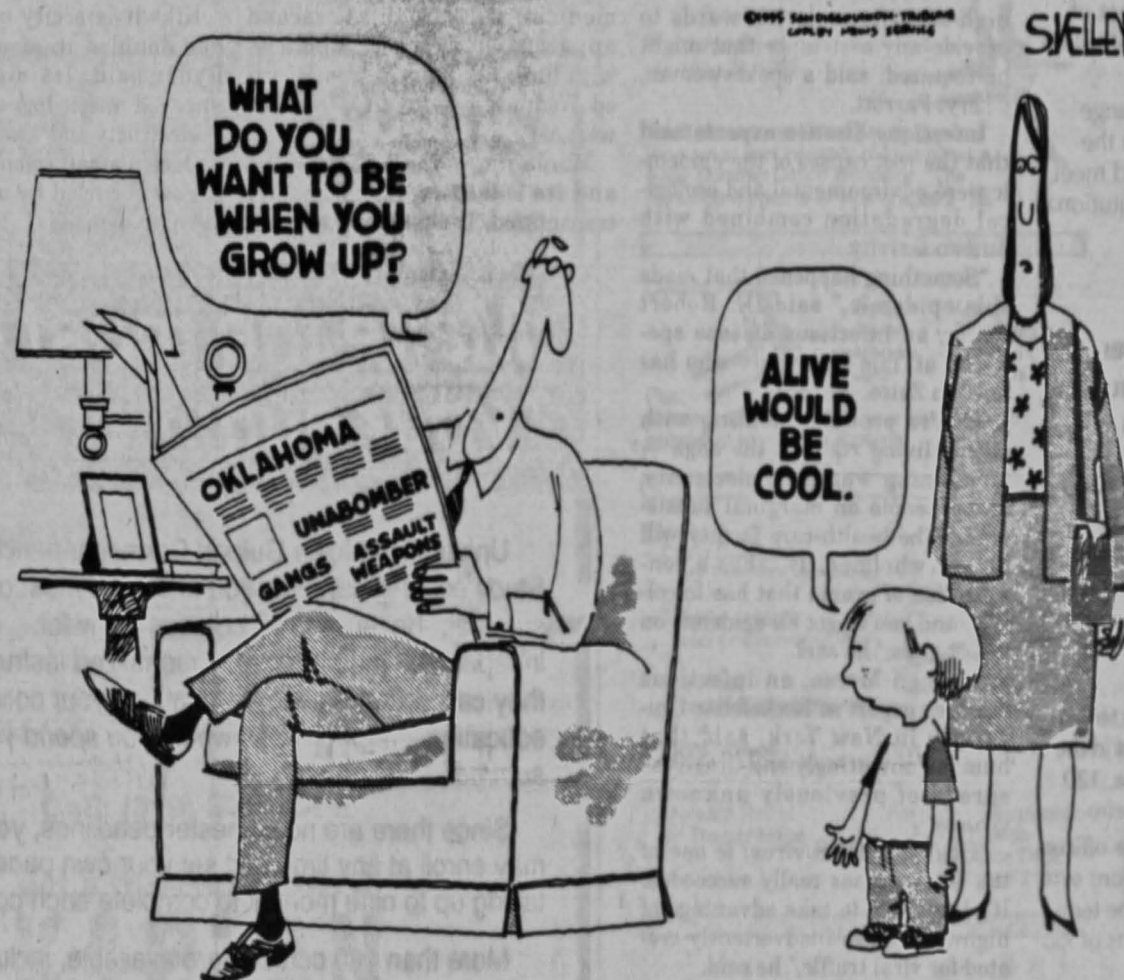

Legal reform may dampen the fun a little bit, but it can't take away the root cause of the problem, which is that many Americans have the moral fiber of dryer lint.

If you are one of those people who has decided to overlook some of the subtler distinctions in life — such as the difference between right and wrong — I imagine you will be able to make out pretty well even after Congress passes a few restraints on lawsuits.

And say when you've successfully accomplished a couple of lawsuits, why don't you sue the pseudo-academic who coined the term "Generation X" for unfairly portraying you as a slacker — you, out there earning your living every day through the all-American method of suing people. It would be a clear-cut case of libel.

Search for a new UI president is moving forward

The search for a new president of the UI is proceeding apace. The committee has received about 250 nominations and has distilled the pool to a short list. We are collecting additional information and contacting references for the prospects on the short list. We are moving forward briskly but prudently, and the process is going smoothly. The committee is proceeding on a timetable that is rather conventional for presidential searches at research universities like ours.

The search committee understands the concerns of those who want us to move ahead. That concern has been cogently expressed by members of the Iowa state Board of Regents, who well understand that having a president in place is important to avoiding the potential problems that can arise during periods of transition and to keeping the UI itself moving ahead.

At the same time, we also believe that it is essential we not act hastily. As I have said a number of times, we need to take the time to do this right. The vast majority of people who have contacted me about this issue agree on that point.

We are pleased to have some very good people in the pool of prospects. Some are definitely interested, while others have expressed tentative interest in the position. That tentativeness underscores one of the major issues affecting the speed of the search.

First, it is important to remember that most of the nominations we have received are not from the prospects themselves. For most of the nominees who make our short list, we must contact them, inform them of the nomination and ask them for more information.

Many of these nominees need to be convinced to send us a curriculum vitae. Even more cultivating is required to assuage their concerns about confidentiality and to convince them to become active candidates. Most shy away from being so identified unless it is likely that they will become finalists. One very good nominee — a president at another institution — told me he was very reluctant to provide even a current vitae. He has been "burned" before by rumors that he was considering another position, and it took a year to resolve the problems that came from those rumors.

The search committee is meeting on a weekly basis as we continue our efforts to identify and recruit the very best candidates possible. As the process unfolds, the committee will be giving some hard thought to the timing of the on-campus interviews. By now, I hope no one is surprised to hear that we may well be considering holding those interviews during the summer session.

The downside of summer interviews is that some interested people may be off campus and unable to participate. Clearly, the search process is most credible when those who wish to participate have an opportunity to do so. The upside of doing interviews during the summer is that we will likely have a president in place several months sooner than if we were to delay till the fall. Importantly, we will also avoid losing good candidates who become increasingly uncomfortable about remaining a candidate the longer the search process continues after references are contacted and off-campus interviews are conducted.

The committee intends to let the timetable be determined by the needs of the process itself. When the time comes, the search committee will carefully weigh the pros and cons of proceeding with on-campus interviews during the summer and will make a decision aimed at attracting the best president possible and that best serves the interests of the students, faculty, staff and supporters of the UI. We will do our best to facilitate participation in the process.

If you have strong opinions one way or the other about the search process, please share them with me and the committee. You have a number of options for doing so:

- You can contact me or a committee member you know in person, by phone, by campus mail or by e-mail.

- You can submit suggestions electronically, using the UI Presidential Search Home Page on the World Wide Web. It can be accessed at URL <http://www.uiowa.edu/pres.search> or via the UI home page.

- If you don't have access to the Internet or are unfamiliar with the World Wide Web, you can get assistance at the Information Arcade in the Main Library, at the Pappajohn Business Sciences Library and at the Pappajohn Business Administration Building.

We look forward to hearing from you.

REGENTS

ested in making friends with the Legislature," she said. "I'm looking forward to working with (Pomerantz). We're all going to pledge to work very hard and work well together."

Pomerantz garnered the votes of regents Tom Dorr, Tom Collins, Beverly Smith and Ellengray Kennedy. He cast his vote for himself.

Pellett was endorsed by regents Owen Newlin, Melissa Johnson-Matthews and John Tyrrell. She also voted for herself.

Collins said he knew Pellett had support from fellow regents before Wednesday's vote.

"Nancy wouldn't have chosen to run if she hadn't talked to people and felt confident she had support," he said. "She and the people who voted for her were, I'm sure, expressing the point of view that the regents are independent politically and will seek the leadership they feel is best."

"It just so happened we felt the candidate pushed by the governor was the best," Collins said.

Dorr consistently has been vehement in refuting rumors that politics play a key role in regent decisions. He said Wednesday's vote further proved his point.

"That's what I've been saying all along — that the regents are not a partisan political board," Dorr said. "I think this vote bears that out."

It would have been a surprise had Pomerantz not won the election, said UI Provost Peter Nathan. Although perceived as a stern leader, Pomerantz has been supportive of the UI and having him in the top regent spot will be beneficial, Nathan said.

"He's a strong leader; he has a strong sense of excellence," he said. "He will push us — but generally, it's been for the good. He has a clear vision of excellence for the regents institutions."

The presidential searches at the UI and the University of Northern Iowa will be the hot topics on Pomerantz's agenda.

"The most important thing the regents will do is select the two presidents of these two universities," he said. "After that, it's a matter of focusing on the centers of excellence of the three state universities and the specialty schools."

Also on the agenda will be an examination of faculty salaries and the role salaries play in attracting quality faculty members, Pomerantz said.

Wednesday's outcome marked the second time Pomerantz has been chosen to head the board. He was president of the board from 1987 until 1993, when he was rejected by the Iowa Senate for another six-year term.

Pomerantz was appointed to the board Monday by Branstad and will serve a one-year interim term as a replacement for David Fisher, whose nomination was rejected by the Senate. Pomerantz has said he will not seek the regular six-year appointment to the board.

DENTISTRY

fees. But the jury was not given the option to rule on the status of the program.

Although the professors won two of their claims, Thompson still can't believe the program will end.

"I don't know when the reality of the closing is going to set in," she said. "I don't think I've dealt with it emotionally; I fear it. The reception is going to be bittersweet."

The trial has not only affected Thompson, but also the 22 seniors who will graduate from the dental hygiene program with the College of Liberal Arts Saturday.

Lisa Miller, co-president of the graduating class, said Friday's reception will be a goodbye to her teachers in the program.

"It's going to be sad. These women have put their hearts and souls into this for so many years," Miller said. "It will be sad to know this is the end for them."

Students could depend on the faculty for more than an education, said Mary Frantz, co-president of the graduating class. As the only dental hygiene student with a child, Frantz found a lot of support from faculty.

"I was in school full time, and the sitter had conjunctivitis — pink eye — and I had patients to see," Frantz said. "I was at a loss about what to do. I brought him (her 4-year-old son) to school, and one of the faculty members watched him while I took care of my patients."

Clemen, who worked for a dental office in Dubuque for 10 years, regretted the program's closing, citing that the UI was the only state university with a baccalaureate dental hygiene program. But now, Clemen questions what tomorrow holds for her field.

"For the future, we're not going to have any educators for the profession. It's a growing field; there's always a demand for dental hygienists," Clemen said.

Although Bremer has ruled with the UI, Kelly McClelland, lawyer for the three professors, said the case is by no means over. He will file a motion on Monday in an attempt to keep the program going. He also will ask his clients be reimbursed for attorneys' fees and expenses by the UI.

"We're going to ask the court to continue the program. We're not going to let this thing die," McClelland said.

UI General Counsel Mark Schantz said he also will file a post-trial motion asking Bremer to reconsider the decision that the UI retaliated against the professors by denying them a salary raise equal to male professors.

"We're going to ask her to change it because we don't think the plaintiffs have experienced any adverse treatment as it is explained by the law," Schantz said. "The evidence shows they did get an average salary raise."

McClelland hopes the Iowa state Board of Regents and Gov. Terry Branstad will take the trial into consideration during the UI presidential search process.

"At the university level, the regents and the governor need to be looking for a new president that supports female faculty members," he said. "Otherwise, Iowa will be known as a place not to go for higher education, equal opportunity, academic freedom and freedom of speech."

BOOKS

ably to keep them in a good mood as they sold back expensive textbooks for pocket change.

UI senior Chris Rase said the candy was an appropriate handout because he felt like a real sucker after he received $8 for a $54 book.

"It's a nice touch, but it doesn't quite make up for getting screwed," he said.

UI senior Jaime Daza sold back his books at the University Book Store Wednesday. He said the amount of money he got back wasn't worth the wait in line.

"I just spent $100 on books this semester and I've gotten $30 back," he said. "I bought a brand-new linguistics book for $52 and I got $14 back."

Despite the barrage of complaints, bookstore managers said UI professors are to blame for the low returns on textbooks.

"If professors wait until the last minute to get their book orders in, it could be too late. After the buy-backs, we place the order for new books," said Joe Ziegler, book department manager at Iowa Book & Supply. "Students end up paying for new rather than used books, and we profit. The students wind up getting screwed."

Professors are asked by both the University Book Store and Iowa Book & Supply to submit summer and fall book orders before book buybacks begin, Ziegler said. The order forms confirm the stores will be able to resell the used books to

"Students have to understand if we don't have book orders from the professors in on time, then we can't offer them the best prices for their books," Ziegler said.

Though it may be little consolation for broke and angry students, University Book Store manager George Herbert said professors have legitimate excuses for late submissions of book orders. Many do not receive their teaching assignments before the buybacks take place, he said.

Whatever the reason for the low cash returns to students, Iowa Book & Supply and the University Book Store are turning a profit.

The bookstores buy used books from students for 50 percent of the price of the book when it was new — unless the book hasn't been reordered by a UI professor. The stores then sell the books for 75 percent of the new price — a 33 percent markup, Herbert said.

"Say you have a book that cost $10 new. If that book is reordered, we give the student half of the new price, or $5," he said. "When we go to sell the used book this summer or in the fall, it will cost students $7.50."

But even if a book hasn't been reordered by a UI professor, the two bookstores still can make a hefty profit.

Iowa Book & Supply and the University Book Store work with book wholesalers who act on speculation, Ziegler said. If wholesalers believe they can sell used books to college bookstores, they will buy the used books from the University Book Store or Iowa Book & Supply at a cheaper cost. In order for the bookstores to maintain a profit margin, they are forced to pay students less for these books.

"This is why students receive a lot less than half of the new price for the book," Ziegler said.

UI senior Frederick Hyland sold back his books at the University Book Store and was happy to get $34 for a $50 computer science book. He was unable to sell a second book, and the cashier recommended he try to sell it again in a week.

"This is the first year that they actually explained to me why they couldn't take back my book," Hyland said. "I'm going to go to my professors and tell them to order the book; maybe then I'll be able to sell mine back."

read a thick paperback book on federal criminal procedures and followed what was happening, looking at the judge and conferring with his attorney.

He answered questions from U.S. Magistrate Karen Humphreys in a low, strong voice, saying he understood what was to happen at the hearing and acknowledging the agreement between his attorneys and prosecutors.

Specifically, Nichols is charged with "the malicious damage and destruction by means of fire and an explosive, a building, vehicle and other personal and real property in whole and in part owned, possessed and used by the United States and departments and agencies thereof."

He is also charged with aiding and abetting an offense against the U.S. government. The affidavit supporting the complaint filed against Nichols remains sealed. The complaint had been filed earlier this week.

McVeigh is being held without bail at a federal prison outside Oklahoma City.

In the past, the government has said Nichols was with McVeigh in Oklahoma City April 16 — three days before the blast that killed 167 people — and that they drove back to Kansas together.

In addition, a law enforcement source in Washington said Wednesday that Nichols took another trip to Oklahoma. "There's some evidence Terry Nichols came down to Oklahoma City with the Ryder truck."

The official refused to describe the evidence. "We're not absolutely certain it's true, but it is credible," he said.

On Tuesday, a federal law enforcement source confirmed the FBI had questioned Nichols' 12-year-old son Josh and that some investigators believe Josh could be the person depicted in the John Doe No. 2 sketches.

"Even though a variety of other leads are being actively pursued in the hunt for John Doe 2, the government is very concerned about this youngster," the source said Wednesday.

his collar. Last week, a neighbor saw Bailey on television with Sundquist during a story on Tennessee's "first dog."

At first, the governor hesitated at giving the dog back. His office told the Sellers family that Sundquist wanted to be sure Bailey was theirs.

Jarrett's mother, Deanna Sellers, said the governor's son Deke called to offer a new puppy and $500 to keep Bailey at the executive residence.

Sundquist invited Jarrett and his mom to the mansion to talk over their dog differences. The governor knew immediately Bailey and the fourth-grader belonged to each other.

"What would have been tough (was) if the dog had growled at him or bit him. But that was not the case," Sundquist said.

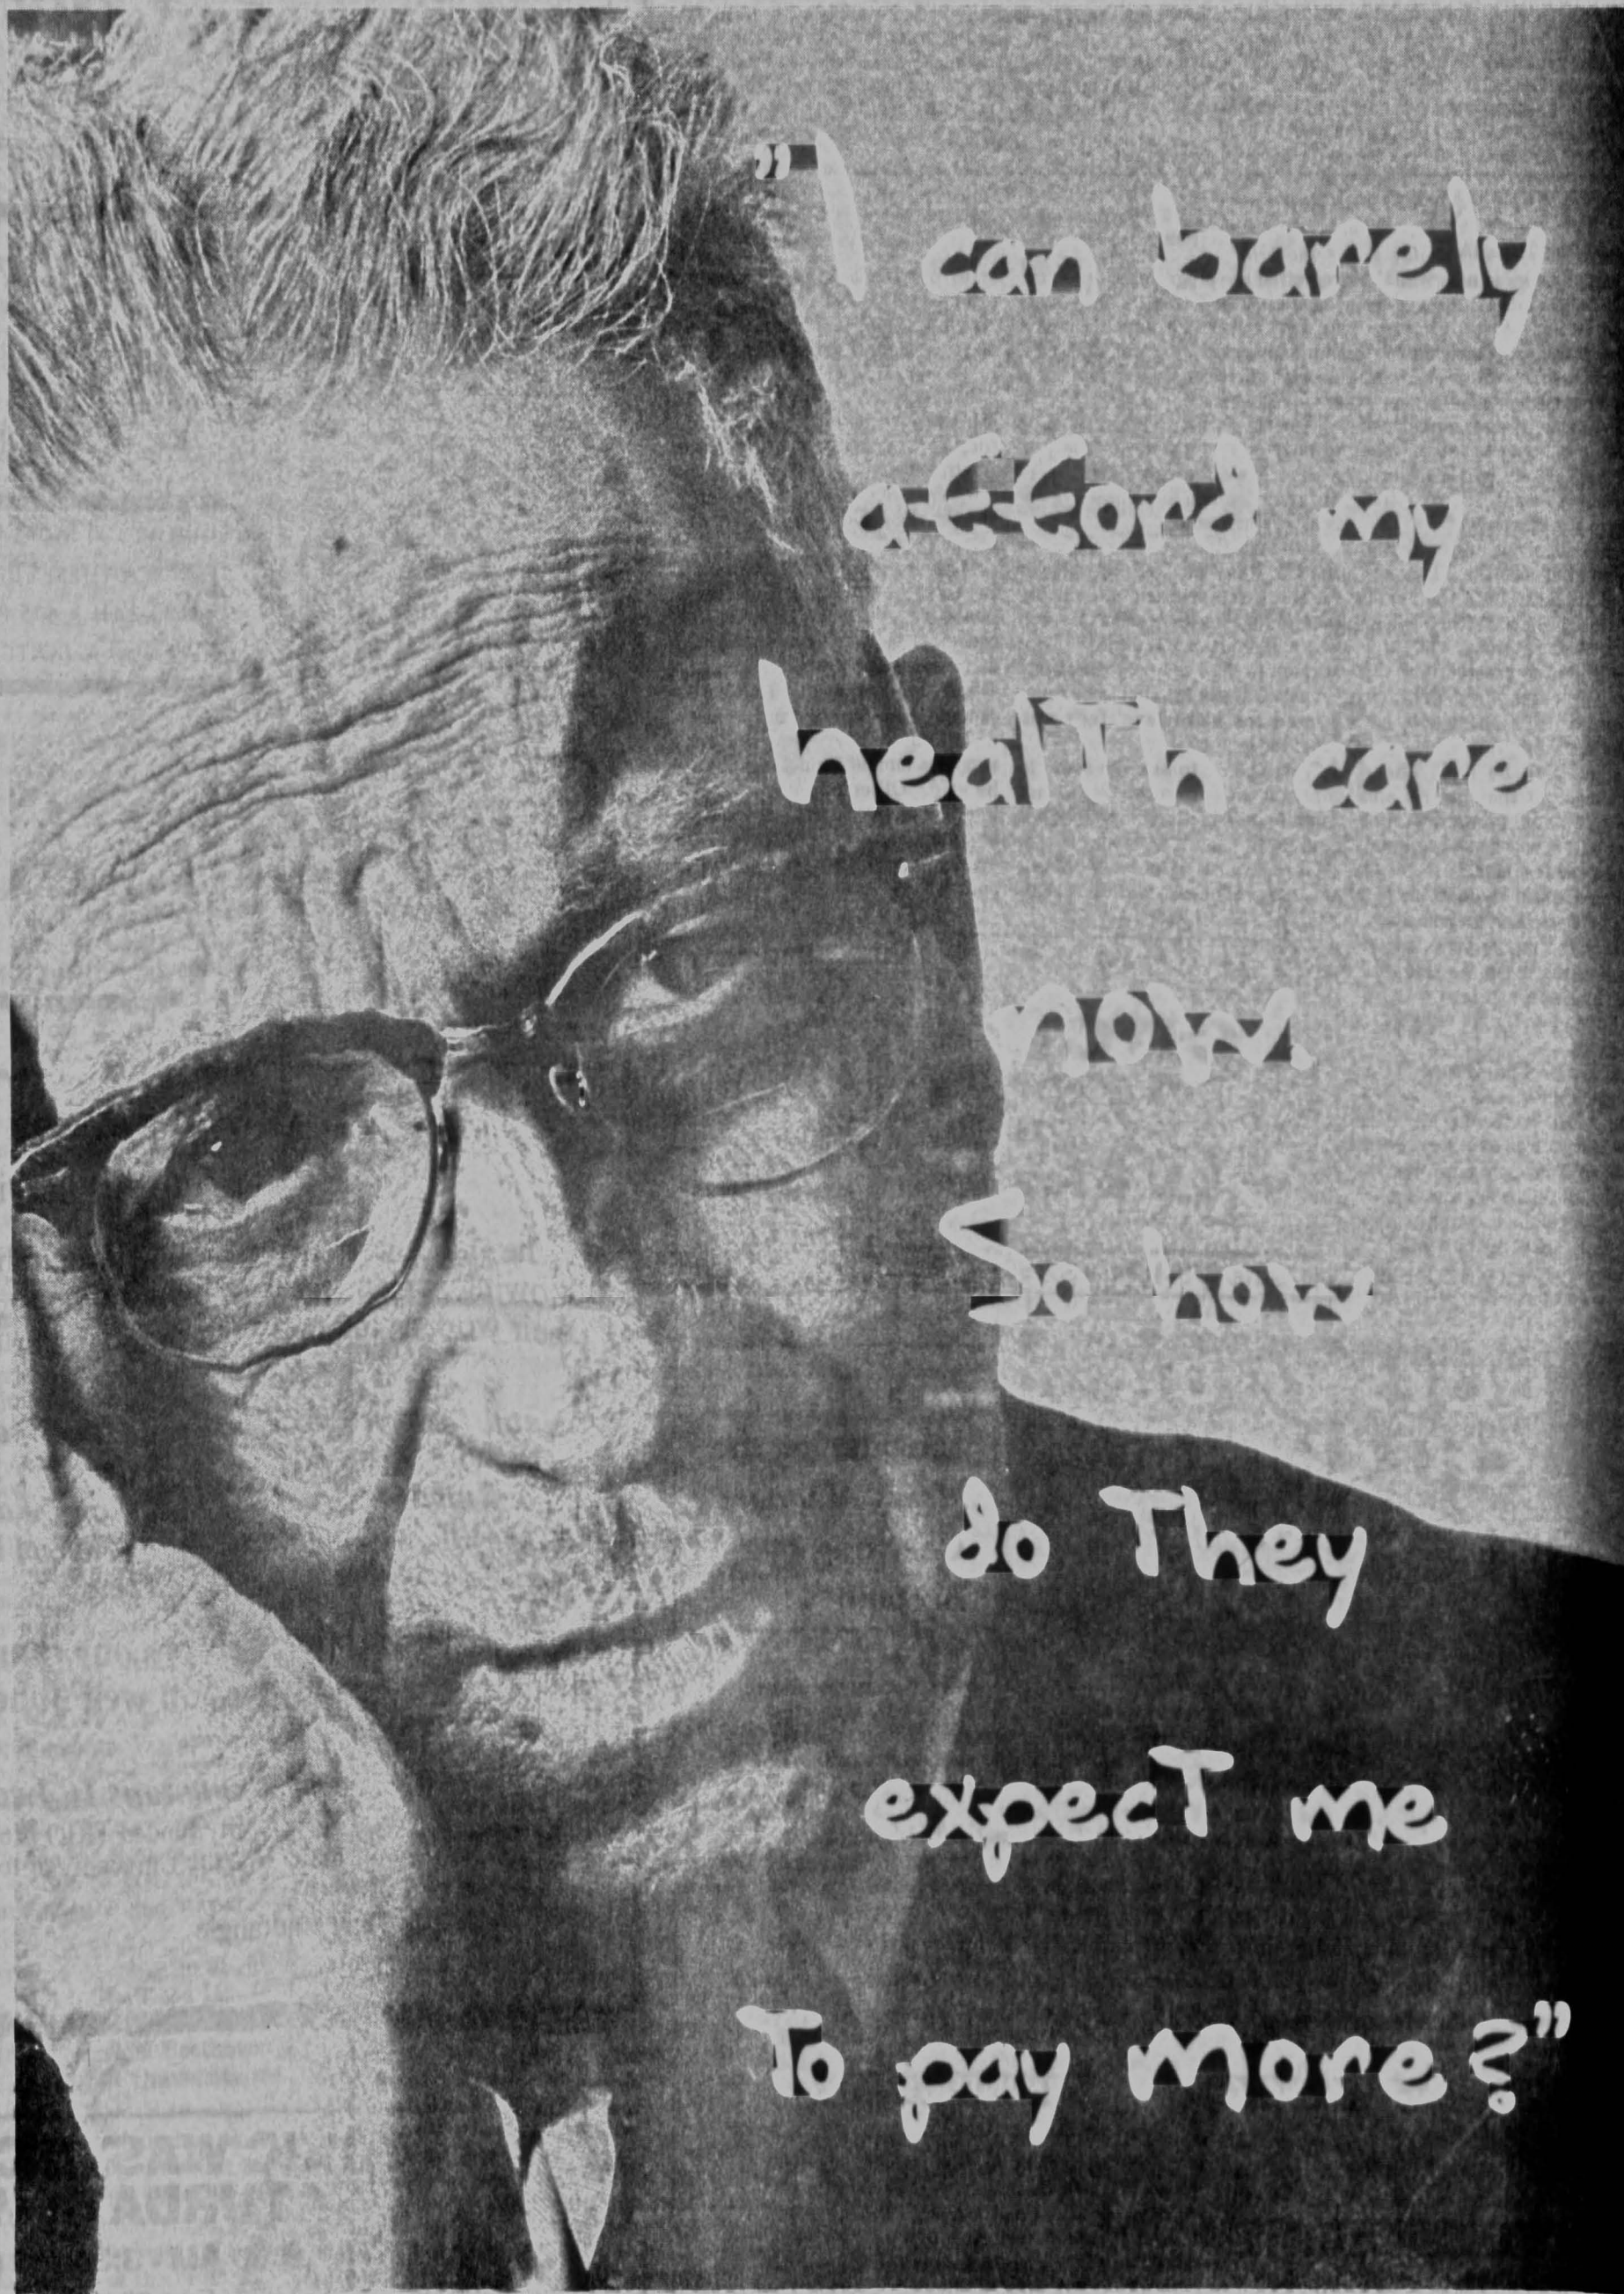

He said he will get another dog: "We don't lack for offers right now."

As for Jarrett, he told reporters Wednesday he never really doubted the governor wouldn't see things his way.

"I knew he was a nice man, and he would give Bailey back to me," he said.

Congress is planning major cuts to Medicare.

Congressional leaders are talking about the largest Medicare cuts in history. Cuts that could directly affect the quality of your health care.

At AARP, we're concerned. We want to reduce the deficit, too. But let's work on slowing the growth of health care costs instead of shifting them to you. Before Congress acts, we think your Representative and Senators should answer these questions first:

- How much more will I have to pay?
- Will I still be able to choose my doctor and my health plan?
- How will these cuts affect the quality of my health care?
- Will it be harder to get care from doctors and hospitals in my community?

Severe cuts will force older Americans to pay hundreds of dollars more each year in premiums, deductibles and copayments.

The cuts are real. And they're coming sooner than you think. AARP urges you to call your Representative and Senators today. Ask them these vital questions. Tell them that deep cuts in Medicare are bad medicine for all of us.

CALL YOUR REPRESENTATIVE AND SENATORS.
TELL THEM TO THINK BEFORE THEY CUT.

Barros easily outdistances Perry as Most Improved

NEW YORK (AP) — Dana Barros, who led the Philadelphia 76ers in six offensive categories, won the NBA's Most Improved Player award on Wednesday.

Barros averaged career highs in points (20.3), assists (7.5), rebounds (2.4) and steals (1.82) per game. He shot a team-record .464 from 3-point range and set an NBA mark by making at least one 3-pointer in his last 58 games.

The 5-foot-11 guard received 50 of a possible 105 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Phoenix's Elliot Perry finished second with 15 votes, while Charlotte's Scott Burrell and Washington's Cheorge Muresan tied for third with eight.

Barros was the only player to finish in the top 20 in five categories. He scored a career-high 50 against Houston on March 14.

Talks focus on pleasing the fans

ITASCA, Ill. (AP) — Baseball players and owners have been holding secret talks to see if they can ensure the 1995 season will be played to conclusion and settle unfair labor practice complaints against the teams.

Owners met for six hours in this Chicago suburb Wednesday to discuss their next move in the labor negotiations, with some advocating a return to the salary cap. They didn't make any decisions, and didn't set a date for the resumption of talks with the union, which broke off March 30.

"We spent most of the day discussing how to get fans back," Colorado Rockies chairman Jerry McMorris said. "We know that getting the labor issue resolved is a large part of that."

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — Lawrence Taylor may be interested in coming out of retirement after 14 months. His former team and coach aren't.

Neither the New York Giants nor former Giants and current New England Patriots coach Bill Parcells sounded excited Tuesday about the prospect of seeing the 36-year-old back in uniform.

Taylor, one of the greatest line-backers in NFL history, retired after the 1993 season after 13 seasons with the Giants.

"No. No. No.," Parcells said through a Patriots spokesman when asked about the possibility of Taylor joining New England.

Added team spokesman Don Lowery: "While we are well aware that Bill and Lawrence had conversations, we have no plans to try to sign him to a contract."

The Giants still own Taylor's rights, and for him to play for any other NFL team, New York would have to waive him or trade his rights.

"I prefer to remember Lawrence the way he was," Giants general manager George Young said. "But he did put on an entertaining wrestling match."

Cards deny Cubs' sweep

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Todd Zeile homered twice in his first start of the season and Ken Hill worked eight strong innings as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 11-1 Wednesday night.

The Cardinals avoided a three-game sweep and handed the Cubs only their second road loss in eight games. Chicago was looking to match its best road start since 1907.

Ray Lankford also homered off Chicago starter Kevin Foster (2-1), who lasted 3½ innings and gave up five runs on six hits. Bernard Gilkey drove in four runs with a two-run double and a two-run single.

The only stumble for Hill (2-0) was allowing Sammy Sosa's third home run with one out in the fourth. He allowed four hits, striking out three and walking one, and allowed only two runners past first base. Tom Urbani pitched the ninth, denying Hill (91 pitches) a chance for the Cardinals' first complete game of the season.

Lankford snapped an 0-for-10 slump with his second home run with two out in the third and the Cardinals chased Foster with three runs in the fourth. Hill had a sacrifice fly for his second RBI of the season and Gilkey capped the inning with a two-run double.

Cubs third baseman Howard Johnson made two throwing errors in the sixth to hand the Cardinals another run. Johnson dropped Jose Oquendo's grounder and then threw wildly to first, and two batters later catcher Rick Wilkins had to dive for his throw to the plate as Oquendo barely beat the tag.

THE OLD MICHAEL

No. 23 carries Bulls to win

Wendy E. Lane

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Wearing his old number, Michael Jordan was back playing like his old self.

Jordan brought No. 23 out of retirement Wednesday night, scoring 38 points and controlling the action in the Chicago Bulls' 104-94 victory over the Orlando Magic.

He hit 11-of-13 shots in the second half to send the Bulls home with a 1-1 split in their best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinals.

"He felt like he had a good rhythm," Scottie Pippen said. "He finally settled in."

Pippen, who combined with Jordan to go 10-of-33 in a Game 1 loss, had 22 points, and Toni Kukoc and Steve Kerr each added 11.

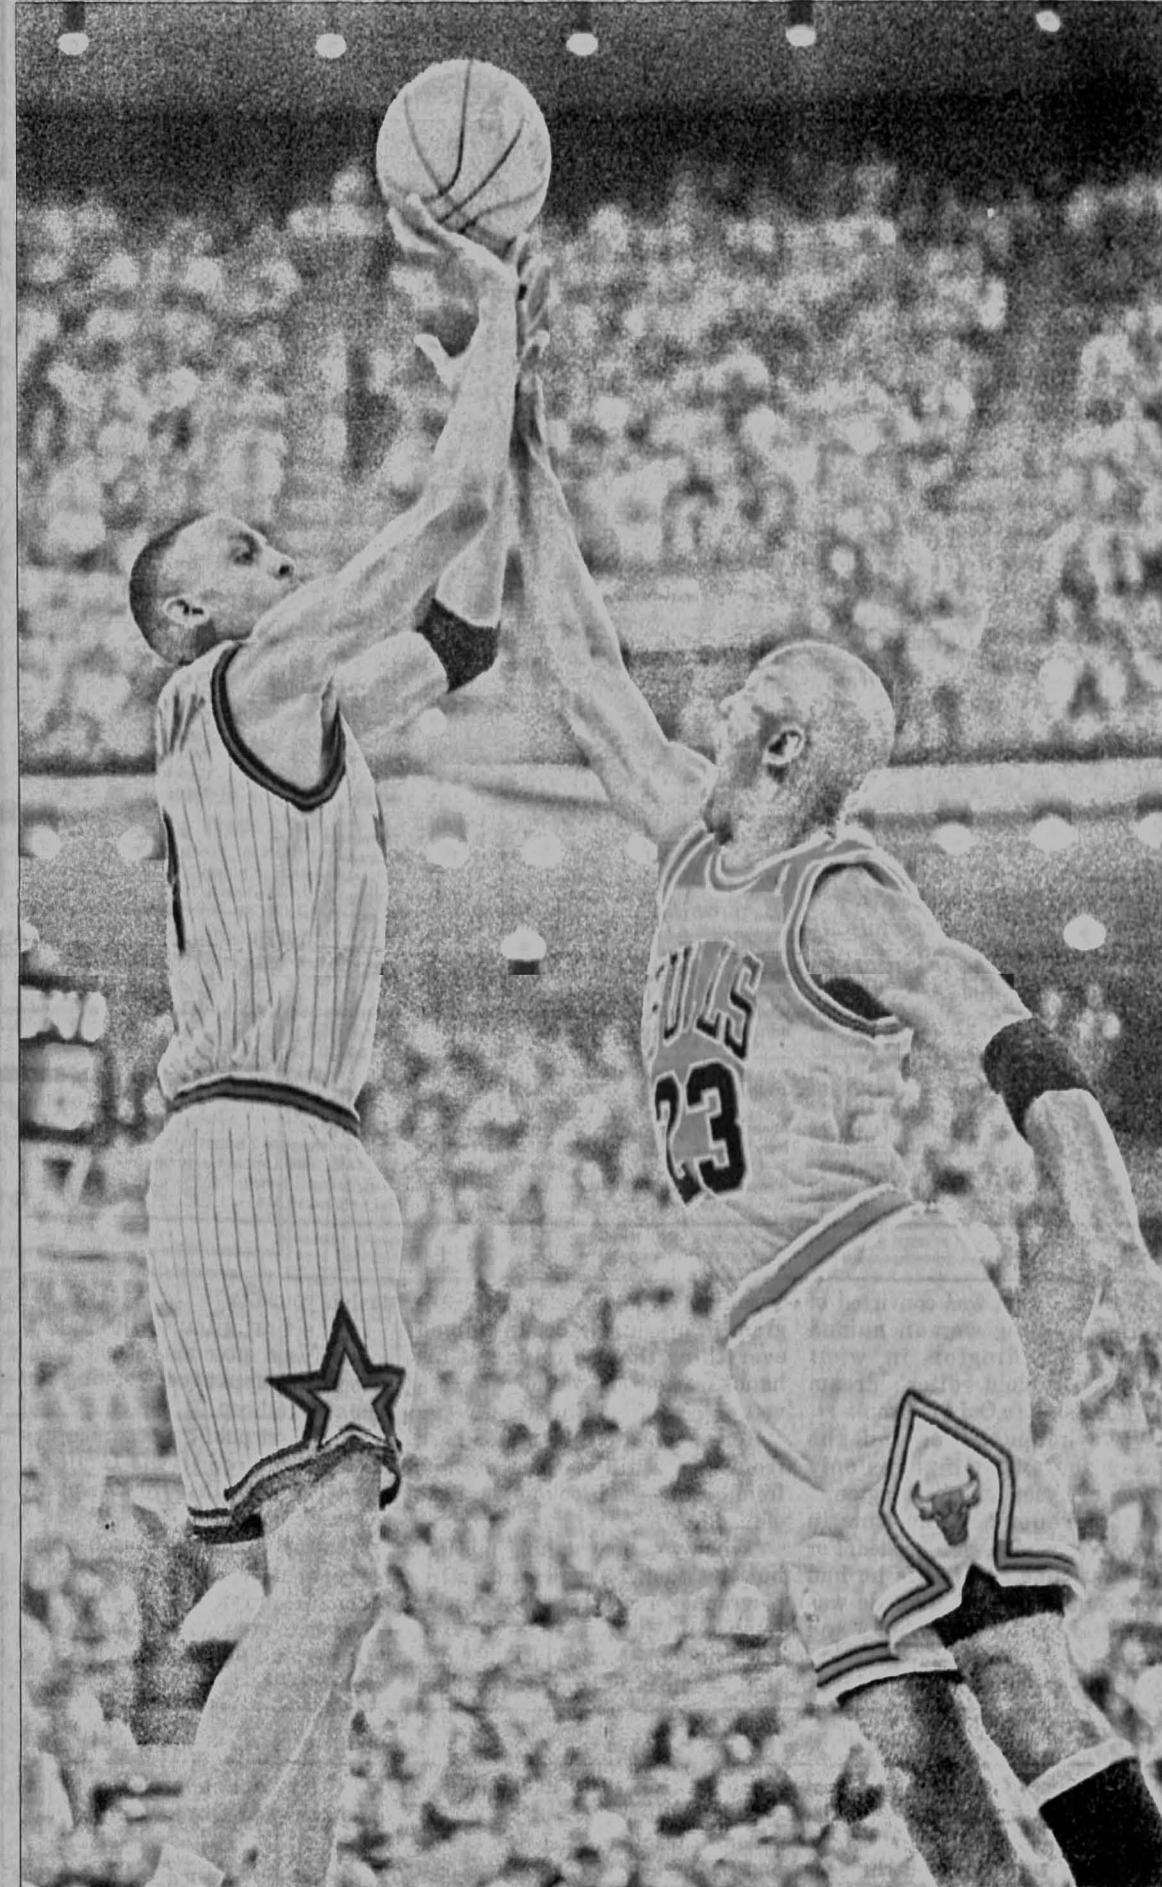

Shaquille O'Neal led Orlando with 25 points and 11 rebounds, and Horace Grant had 23 points and 15 rebounds.

Jordan took nearly everyone by surprise when he walked on the court wearing No. 23. When he returned to the NBA on March 19, Jordan wore No. 45 and said he would leave his old number hanging from the roof of the United Center because it was the last number his father, murdered in 1993, saw him wear.

But after an 8-of-22 shooting night in which he made two crucial mistakes at the end of a 94-91 loss Sunday, Jordan may have thought he needed a change.

However, the switch could be in violation of NBA rules, and league officials were to meet Thursday to discuss the matter, NBA spokesman Jan Hubbard said Wednesday night.

Jordan's first half looked pretty much like his game Sunday, but he came back to score 12 in the third quarter. He hit his first six shots, including a 14-footer that gave the Bulls a 71-62 lead with 4:50 left in the period.

In the fourth quarter, the Magic got no closer than five, and that was early in the period. Jordan continued to hit jumpers and put the finishing touches on the win with a soaring breakaway dunk with 1:34 remaining.

That definitely looked like the old No. 23.

He missed only one shot in the quarter, and Chicago shot 58 percent.

Right from the start, Jordan made it clear this game was his. He took 13 shots in the first quarter alone, made five and scored 11 points.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — A little luck was all Boston needed to solve Martin Brodeur's mastery and breath life back into the Bruins' playoff hopes.

Mats Naslund ended Brodeur's bid for a record-tying third straight playoff shutout, triggering a three-goal second period by scoring on a pass off a Devils defenseman as the Bruins beat New Jersey in Game 3 of a first-round playoff series.

New Jersey leads the best-of-7 series 2-1 with Game 4 scheduled at the Meadowlands Arena on Friday night. The visiting team has won each game so far, with Brodeur providing shutouts on Sunday and Monday in the first two games of the series at Boston Garden.

BOXING NEEDS HIM

Questions surround Tyson's comeback

The world of professional boxing has never been so relieved. At last, Iron Mike Tyson's return to the ring is a reality.

Boxing is in dire need of Tyson to pick the sport off the floor. 45-year-old George Foreman, who was recently outboxed by a mediocre Axel Schulz, is not the answer.

Tyson will begin his comeback trail later this year with a not-so-tough opponent. Eventually, it is hoped, Tyson will meet Foreman for the richest payday in boxing history.

While some of the pieces of Tyson's comeback are beginning to fall into place, countless questions are still swirling around his head.

Will Tyson ever be able to return to his dominating stature of the mid-1980's? Will his newly found Islamic faith last? Will he remain in the clutches of promoter Don King?

But perhaps the most important question is: Exactly who is this man called Mike Tyson?

There have been few person's lives that have been followed by the media as much as Tyson's life has.

Unfortunately, like it does with most boxers, the media has created a stereotypical image of Tyson. He has been portrayed as a stupid, thoughtless, violent, animalistic fighter.

The real Tyson is a walking contradiction. He is intelligent yet he is vulgar. He is sensitive yet he is angry. He is a victim yet he is a victimizer.

Tyson is a man who has been consumed by fear. He has acknowledged his fear of his opponent, and more generally, his fear of failure.

Few scenes are more poignant than that of Tyson with his then-

And then there were four.

Four Big Ten softball teams remain in the hunt for a trip to the NCAA Tournament.

Michigan, Northwestern, Iowa and Minnesota will all compete in the double-elimination conference tournament this Friday and Saturday in Ann Arbor, Michigan, with the winner receiving an automatic bid to the Regional Tournament May 19-21.

Northwestern, the No. 2 seed, will play Iowa, the No. 3 seed, at noon on Friday. Michigan, the No. 1 seed, will play Minnesota, the No. 4 seed, at 2:30 p.m.

The championship of the inaugural conference tournament is scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday. While host Michigan is the favorite, all four coaches agree the each team has a shot at the title.

"We've got four outstanding teams in this tournament and this tournament is up for grabs," Iowa Coach Gayle Blevins said. "You go in having an idea of a certain style of play for your team and you hope to do your best."

All four coaches agree the best preparation is to concentrate on their own team and not the other three.

"We're preparing mainly just to play softball games," Minnesota Coach Lisa Bernstein said. "We're just going to stay focused on doing what we do best."

Michigan comes into the tour-

Northwestern finished the season 37-17, 19-9 in the conference and ranked No. 25 in the nation.

"We're very happy to be in the first Big Ten conference tournament," Northwestern Coach Sharon Drysdale said. "We started the season hoping to be around that fourth spot in the conference. I'm very pleased and surprised with how well the team has responded."

The Wildcats have been led at the plate by catcher Kelly Green and on the mound by Alison Ward and Misty Lanby.

Green is batting .360 with 28 RBIs. Ward is 15-5 on the mound this season, with a 1.36 ERA. Lanby finished the regular season 16-9.

NO. 1 CHALLENGER?

Tyson ranking vexes heavyweights

Hal Bock
Associated Press

The news hit the heavyweights like a thunderbolt. After three years in prison and with no fights since June, 1991, Mike Tyson is ranked No. 1 by the WBC, just behind champion Oliver McCall.

"It just shows how much politics and racketeering play a big part in boxing," said Lennox Lewis, who lost the WBC title to McCall.

"Is he No. 1?" ex-champ Evander Holyfield said, sounding surprised at the news. "Really?"

Really.

"Really, it's not right because you're looking at a situation of politics," Holyfield said. "He hasn't been in boxing in three years. He should have to fight somebody in the top 10 to get ranked. It's sad."

Michael Moorer, who beat Holyfield for the WBA and IBF heavyweight titles and then lost them to George Foreman, wasn't very impressed with Tyson's lofty fight-free ranking.

"Tyson was a force to be reckoned with four years ago," he said. "This is four years later."

Lewis and Moorer launch comebacks with fights on a doubleheader card at the ARCO Arena in Sacramento, Calif. on Saturday. Lewis faces Lionel Butler in a 12-round bout and Moorer is set for a 10-rounder against Melvin Foster.

A week later, Holyfield makes his return at the Atlantic City Convention Center in a 10-rounder against Ray Mercer. Hector Camacho defends his IBC welterweight title against Homer Gibbs on the same card.

All three heavyweights, losers in their last fights, are taking tentative first steps back. The wild card for each of them is Tyson, the golden goose of the division, who was released from prison six weeks ago after serving three years on a rape conviction and became No. 1 shortly after that.

"Tyson is yet to step into the ring," Lewis said. "Before he was incarcerated, his boxing talent was going down. I'm not thinking of Tyson. He's a man to look at in the future."

The ranking, Lewis said, is because the WBC wants to cash in on Tyson's celebrity. "It means the WBC is pushing his name out there," he said. "He's got to prove himself in the ring, to the public and to himself."

Lewis, who is ranked No. 2 by the WBC, said he wasn't frustrated by Tyson's instant No. 1 ranking. "I realize the different things that make it up," he said. "My concern is to keep a positive head and stay focused."

That focus for now is on Butler. After that, according to manager Frank Maloney, the WBC governors had committed to giving Lewis another shot at McCall. "He'll fight for the title before Tyson," Maloney said.

And what if he has to wait for that chance? "Then the WBC and Jose Sulaiman will look bad in all the world bodies," he said. "And the longer I wait, the more I'll improve."

Is Moorer interested in Tyson?

"I'm not invincible," he said. "I'm a man. I don't back down from anybody."

And Holyfield?

"I came back to win the title," he said.

"Tyson? That would be a big fight, as long as it's before '97."

"Tyson? Yeah, that's fine."

INDIANAPOLIS 500

Luyendyk and Brayton have edge on the field

Steve Herman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — There's Arie Luyendyk and Scott Brayton, and then there's everybody else.

Paul Tracy, the fastest among the also-rans, concedes the battle for the pole on Saturday may be all but over, but the Indianapolis 500 on May 28 is still far from over.

"I wouldn't say we're out of range. I'm not giving up," Tracy said. "I've been in the position that they're in with the motor they have. It's nice to have, but race day is really what counts."

A year ago, Tracy was part of the Team Penske brigade that dominated Indianapolis with a specially designed Mercedes engine and finished 1-2-3 in the Indy-car season points. Penske kept Al Unser Jr. and Emerson Fittipaldi this year, and Tracy joined Michael Andretti with the Newman-Haas team.

"For me, I just want to qualify well and be in the first couple rows," Tracy said. "I think on race day things will sort themselves out. Right now, we have a shot at being on the front row, as good a shot as anybody out there."

Luyendyk set an unofficial track record with a lap at 234.107 mph on Monday. Brayton, his Team Menard comrade, has a top speed of 232.859. Both drivers are using Menard V6s, modified Buick engines that are used only at Indianapolis and are allowed extra boost from the turbocharger because of their stock-block design.

The only other drivers above 230 since practice began last Saturday are Tracy, whose top speed is 231.315, and Teo Fabi, who joined the exclusive club on Tuesday at 230.716. On Wednesday, Luyendyk led a rain-shortened session with a lap at 232.468 and Tracy was second-fastest at 229.926. Robby Gordon and Brayton were the only others above 220.

The first crash since the track opened last Saturday sent rookie Davey Hamilton to the Methodist Hospital with a slight concussion and contusions to the left knee. He was admitted to the hospital overnight for observation.

Associated Press

Indy driver Arie Luyendyk of Scottsdale, Ariz., watches practice activities at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Tuesday.

"This was not his fault," said Lee Kunzman, the team manager for Hemelgarn Racing, which owns the car Hamilton was driving. "It was not a driver error. ... Something in the right rear went wrong."

The car of the Boise, Idaho, driver went into a three-quarters spin and into the wall in the fourth turn. He went along the wall 320 feet, made another half-spin and slid backwards 540 feet across the track, stopping at the entrance to the pits.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

well below the announced crowd of 12,620.

Mark Wohlers (0-1), the third of four Braves' pitchers, started the eighth inning by striking out Bobby Bonilla, but a wild pitch allowed him to reach first. Todd Hundley followed with a walk and Carl Everett had a bunt single to load the bases.

Dodgers 3, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Mike Piazza, the NL's leading hitter, injured his thumb while running out an RBI single in the first inning of the Los Angeles Dodgers' victory over the San Diego Padres on Wednesday.

Piazza tripped while rounding first base and put his left hand down to break his fall. He left the game, but the severity of the injury was not immediately known.

Ramon Martinez pitched six solid innings and Eric Karros had two RBIs for the Dodgers, who scored two of their runs against ex-Dodger Fernando Valenzuela (0-2).

Phillies 10, Expos 1

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie Tyler Green pitched six shutout innings and Darren Daulton had a homer and four RBIs as the Philadelphia Phillies extended their winning streak to seven games — the longest in the majors this season — with a victory over Montreal on Wednesday night.

Green (2-1) struck out six, walked four and allowed only three hits in winning his second straight outing. Philadelphia got 14 hits, following up on a 15-hit effort Tuesday.

Montreal's Tony Tarasco was 0-for-3, ending his hitting streak at 11 games.

Toby Borland's wild pitch scored Cordero in the eighth for Montreal's only run.

Rockies 8, Giants 5

DENVER — Joe Girardi had another great Wednesday, going 4-for-4 with two RBIs — including a tie-breaking single in the seventh inning — as the Colorado Rockies beat the San Francisco Giants Wednesday night.

In three games played on Wednesday this season, Girardi is 12-for-16 with nine RBIs and three four-hit games. He is 11-for-38 on the other six days of the week.

Reds 3, Marlins 0

MIAMI — Kevin Jarvis pitched the first complete game in the majors this season, a two-hit shutout for the Cincinnati Reds in a victory over Florida on Wednesday night that kept the Marlins winless at home this season.

Jarvis, making his third start of the season and his ninth career major league appearance, allowed a double to Greg Colbrunn in the second inning and a two-out single to Gary Sheffield in the ninth.

John Burkett (2-2) took the loss for the Marlins.

White Sox 8, Twins 7

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Chris Sabo's two-run homer in the eighth inning Wednesday night gave the Chicago White Sox a victory over the Minnesota Twins that completed a three-game sweep.

Sabo's first career pinch-hit homer, off Mark Guthrie (1-2), followed a single by Ray Durham as the White Sox won for the fourth time in five games. Durham had three hits and four RBIs.

Indians 3, Royals 2

CLEVELAND — Manny Ramirez lined an RBI single to center with one out in the 10th inning, scoring Carlos Baerga on a close play at home.

The victory was Cleveland's fourth straight, including a sweep of three games with Kansas City.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 2

BOSTON — Mo Vaughn and Lee Tinsley each hit two-run homers and Boston extended its winning streak to five games with a victory over Baltimore.

Tinsley, who inherited Boston's center field job when Otis Nixon was traded to Texas for Jose Canseco, has hit safely in every game this season — a 13-game streak that leads the AL.

Tigers 4-2, Brewers 2-13

MILWAUKEE — Milwaukee scored seven times in the fourth inning and whipped Detroit in the regularly scheduled game after Alan Trammell's two-run double lifted the Tigers in a game that was suspended by rain one night earlier.

The suspended game resumed an hour before the regularly scheduled contest, and only a few hundred fans were in the stands on a cold, rainy night.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO — Bernie Williams hit a two-run homer in the 11th inning, powering New York past Toronto and ending the Yankees' three-game losing skid.

Mike Stanley led off the inning with a walk off Woody Williams (0-1). Bernie Williams followed with his second home run of the season, sending a 2-1 pitch over the wall in right field.

Iowa Crew

Early morning practice subjects athletes to extreme weather conditions on the Iowa River. Cold, wet, foggy weather could take a toll on individual members, but the team always rows to the next practice drill without a comment.

UI sophomore Jen Gates gasps for air after completing a 2,000-meter time trial in the basement of Halsey Hall as Coach Mandi Kowal (rear) and teammate Cassie Golden (left) look on in the background. Time trials consist of intense rowing for eight minutes. The time trials give an indication to the coach how strong each member of the crew is. Team members also do a 6,000-meter time trial.

With military precision, members of the UI women's varsity rowing team follow commands from coxswain UI freshman Nikki Truhlar on moving the shell to and from the Iowa River. Moving the shell is very serious because of the shell's value.

Mandi Kowal, coach of the UI women's varsity rowing team, cruises alongside the team, giving helpful performance tips through her bullhorn.

Iowa Crew: Teamwork and dedication

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

It's 5:30 a.m. on the Iowa River and today's rowing forecast calls for a high of 30 degrees with limited visibility and a slight drizzle.

Just another day at the office for the Iowa crew team.

Six days a week the Hawkeye rowers hit the water for two hours of strenuous exercise as they prepare for their next racing regatta. The team starts out each practice by stretching for about ten minutes. Then, the Hawkeyes carry the launch boats and racing shells out to the water and begin their workout.

Junior rower Kelly Custer said the practice sessions provide a constant challenge.

"Each one is different," Custer said. "I find myself more exhausted when we do sprints and higher rating race pieces versus long steady state pieces, but (Varsity) Coach (Mandi) Kowal always provides us with good workouts. The sprinting can tend to get a little tiring, especially when you're gearing up for race season."

Iowa novice coach Lisa Glenn said the most difficult part of the workout for the athletes was keeping their mental focus.

"It's consistent work that requires a continual effort and a really high level of focus," Glenn said. "You're not just focusing on yourself and what you can do at practice, but you've got to blend with eight other people in the boat."

UI sophomore Jen Gates and senior Julie Anderson exchange positions in the middle of the Iowa River's icy cold waters.

The Hawkeyes said enduring hard practices and adverse conditions was an acquired skill.

"When it's cold and raining, it's pretty frustrating to have to sit in the boat for two hours," sophomore Jen Gates said. "It's really challenging and it works your whole body, but it's fun too."

The team competes during the fall and spring, but also spends several months training on dry ground during the winter. On-shore training includes running, weight lifting, and extensive training on stationary rowing machines.

Custer said it felt good to hit the water again in February after being beached since Thanksgiving.

"Winter training gets really stressful," Custer said. "You're inside on the rowing machines and you're not really moving so it's a big relief to get outside. Our spirits are a lot higher when we're out on the water."

Both the varsity team and the novice team will head to Worcester, Mass. for the Championship International Regatta this weekend. The varsity squad is coming off a fourth-place finish at the Midwest Rowing Championships, while the novice team will attempt to duplicate its first-place finish.

Glenn said good rowing technique was the key to Iowa's good times and graceful appearance in the novice races.

"It's a beautiful sport," Glenn said. "If it looks pretty and it looks fluid we're doing something right. If it looks like a lot of hard work we're probably not going very fast."

Custer said the Hawkeyes had made tremendous progress in their initial season as a varsity sport.

"I think we've come along way," Custer said. "We showed a lot of progress at the Midwest Rowing Championships by gaining on Wisconsin which is traditionally one of the top teams."

"She (Kowal) really knows what she's doing and she's really turned the team's overall performance around."

"If it looks pretty and it looks fluid we're doing something right. If it looks like a lot of hard work we're probably not going very fast."

Lisa Glenn, Iowa novice crew coach

Looking down the line, individuals of the UI women's varsity rowing team synchronize to operate as one unit. If one person's timing is off, the mistake is shown in the team's standing at the end of a sprint.

Owners count down to Gunnerz opening

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

After months of work, Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., will open for business Friday at 11 a.m.

Three local men — Warner Anderson, Todd Gefaler and Mark "Gunner" Grulke — are co-owners of the latest live-music bar to open in Iowa City.

After a spring semester that slacked in the live-music department due to the closure of the second live-music bar in less than a year, three Iowa City men are poised to bring the music back.

Mark "Gunner" Grulke, Warner Anderson and Todd Gefaler are set to realize their dream of opening a live-music venue when Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., opens for business Friday.

"Everything has really come together," Anderson, 22, said.

"We've gotten tons of support from everyone."

The three co-owners began plans for the bar less than six months ago, when they were working together as kitchen employees at a local restaurant. Now they hope to expand exposure for live-music acts with their bar.

Although it has been nerve-racking, with adjustments being made down to the wire, Anderson said the bar will be open to the public Friday at 11 a.m.

"The painting is all getting done, the antique bar we have has been refurbished and is in, and the peace sign on the dance floor is done," he said. "Our sound system that was custom-made for this place is done, and the lighting system — which was also custom-made — is ready."

From 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., it will be a sort of "reggae fest" at Gunnerz, Anderson said. The bar will boast specials all day, and then at 9 p.m., local band High and Lonesome will play with opening act New Sun Union from Minneapolis. Those 21 and older will be admitted to the show for a cover charge. Saturday night, Mango Jam will play at the bar, and blues legend Koko Taylor will perform June 15. Anderson said tickets will go on sale May 20 for the Taylor show.

With the main bar open, Anderson said he, Grulke and Gefaler will begin working on plans for the upstairs portion of the bar, which may include an extended game room, a café-deli area and a small performance stage.

Summer Rep features in-vogue playwright

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

This year's UI Summer Rep will ride the crest of a theatrical wave with a festival of plays by red-hot contemporary playwright Tony Kushner.

Kushner

momentum of his critically acclaimed "Angels in America" plays and his recent Pulitzer Prize. The oft-performed "Angels" won't show up on the Rep Playbill, though.

"At first, we thought it'd be wise to have 'Angels' — but then, everyone knows 'Angels,'" Forsythe said.

Forsythe opted to explore the rest of Kushner's oeuvre with a slate of four productions which he calls "Angels International." Each takes place in a different country — "The Illusion" in France; "A Bright Room Called Day" in Germany; "Hydriotaphia, or the Death of Dr. Browne," in England; and "Slavs! (Thinking About the Long-standing Problems of Virtue and Happiness)" in Russia — and each has its own special flavor.

"It sounds like each play was written by a different person," Forsythe said. "They're radically different from each other. It's astounding, the range he has — and each play is as good as the last."

One thing which all of Kushner's work does have in common is a willingness to thoughtfully address broad, profound questions.

"Tony Kushner is vitally interested in important issues: What is happiness? What can be done about the environment? How do we relate to the (spirit) world?" Forsythe said. "What's appealing is he's willing to take on these big issues."

One example is "Slavs!" a piece which addresses both social and political concerns against the backdrop of the former Soviet Union's dissolution. "Slavs!" hasn't been officially published yet, but it still drew a great deal of attention at its 1994 premiere.

"Slavs!" was sold out before it was announced," Forsythe said. "I don't know how that's possible, but it was."

Another unpublished work, from early in Kushner's career, is "Hydriotaphia, or the Death of Dr. Browne." The play takes its name (which means "urn burial") from an epic poem written by a 17th-century scientist.

"Dr. Browne" is a strange play, far more bizarre (than "Slavs!")," Forsythe said. "It involves life and death. Dr. Thomas Browne wrote an essay about urn burial and now he's ready to die and he's contemplating his own urn burial. ... And (while he's on his deathbed) people are trying to get his money. It's a dark farce."

Although Forsythe thinks that "Hydriotaphia" is a rough edges have kept Kushner from trying to get it published, he said that it's still worth seeing.

"My guess is (Kushner) wants to work on it a bit, polish it," Forsythe said. "But it's as fascinating as the others."

In contrast, careful tuning is what allowed Kushner to put his mark on "L'illusion Comique," a script by 17th-century French playwright

UI Summer Rep

The UI Summer Rep will feature a number of plays by Tony Kushner this year. All performances at 8 p.m. in the UI Theatre Building.

The schedule is:

"The Illusion"

June 22-24, 29-30 and July 1

"A Bright Room Called Day"

June 25, 27-29, 30 and July 1-3, 5

July 6-9, 11-12, 16, 18-19

"Slavs!"

July 13-15, 20-22

DI/ME

Pierre Corneille. Kushner changed little of Corneille's story, choosing instead to work with the dialogue.

"It's clearly an adaptation," Forsythe said. "I think in this case, (the appealing aspect) is mainly the language and a perspective and a wit."

The festival is rounded out by "A Bright Room Called Day," a 1991 piece which comments on contemporary politics by setting up parallels with the rise of Nazism.

"He is the writer of today."

Eric Forsythe, Summer Rep artistic director and UI theater professor

"It's a play taking place in Hitler's Germany," Forsythe said. "It's about the response of intellectuals and artists and how that response was obviously inadequate. It's mixed; there's a lot of humor, but it's also rather macabre and poetic. Of all the plays, it and 'Slavs!' are the most political."

Kushner was a natural pick for this year's festival — not only is he the playwright of the hour, but he also has ties to the theater department. He was a visiting artist in the 1991 UI Playwrights Workshop and he discovered and directed workshop student Naomi Wallace's "In the Heart of America." There's even a chance he'll be dropping by for this year's festival.

"He's indicated interest," Forsythe said. "I know he has a commitment to be in London, so that's why we're hedging a bit."

Tickets and subscriptions for the UI's Summer Rep went on sale May 1; individual tickets will be available early in June. Past subscribers should note two of the plays close early in July, which means that it will not be possible to buy a full subscription during the last week of the festival. Forsythe also offered one other strong caveat: three of the plays contain adult subject matter.

"That's something I do want to be clear on," he said. "Illusion" is certainly a play that is fine for all ages, a family play — but the rest are more for adults."

Although UI Summer Rep '95 doesn't open until June 22, it's already generating excitement in the theater department and beyond.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm," Forsythe said. "People have called from around the country, asking, 'How can I be a part of this?'"

UI MEDICAL MUSEUM EXHIBIT CARRIES VALUABLE MESSAGE

'The Facts of Life' covers American reproduction in explicit detail

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

The title "Facts of Life" may sound like the name of a junior-high sex education film, but the subtitle — "Examining Reproductive Health" — is the important part. The new UI Hospitals and Clinics Medical Museum exhibit deals not with sex itself, but rather with the clinical and social concerns that surround intercourse.

The organizers' stated goal in assembling "Facts" was to inform visitors of all ages about reproductive issues, and the exhibit can be aggressively educational at times. One of its major thrusts is sexually transmitted disease.

READ, THEN RECYCLE

"Facts" offers straightforward and thorough descriptions of all major STDs, with a special focus on prevention and self-examination (including take-home instructions). In any print or broadcast media, this crash course would seem like a dull public service message and be ignored. But in "Facts," it gains immediacy from the overall focus on bodily functions. The exhibit's objective tone makes it easier to think of oneself as a biological unit; by the time most visitors reach the STD section, they'll realize that the warnings really do apply to them.

"Facts" is more text-heavy than its Medical Museum predecessor, "The Illuminated Body," but it still contains a wide assortment of visuals and historical items. The photos, charts, video presentations and antiques keep "Facts" from getting too weighed down with words.

The most notable of the artifacts is an incubator used circa 1934 to keep one of the famous Dionne quintuplets alive. Another unusual prize is the museum's collection of sanitary napkins from the 19th and 20th centuries (cleverly accompanied by some comic quotations from a 1905 primer called "What a Young Woman Ought to Know"). The balance of the items, however, are visual aids for the text: condoms; breast implants; and even complete sets of the medical instruments used in each step of vasectomies, tubal ligations and other operations.

The exhibit's illustrations include the obligatory "fertilized egg to baby" photo montage, but this time there's a twist. "Facts" puts an impressive spin on this familiar progression by using scanning electron microscopes to extend the sequence all the way back to sperm and egg formation. The images are visually striking — organs like the cervix and testis look foreign and abstract when magnified 6,000 times — and the detailed captions allow them to be informative as well.

The endorsement of contraception may not sit well with some Catholics, but "Facts" avoids pushing any political agenda. There is a brief look at the history of abortion, but it's couched in relatively noncommittal language. Similarly, the fetal development photo series is too complete to be unduly slanted toward the anti-abortion side. Visceral responses to the photos will actually cut both ways: the 13th- and 17th-week fetuses look precious and delicate, but at eight days the egg looks like a louse burrowing into the uterine wall.

"Facts" is wholly gender-inclusive. While there's more to be said about women's reproductive issues, all important male concerns — from prostate cancer to impotence — are examined as well.

The exhibit is also noteworthy for its examination of multicultural elements. There's an interesting section devoted to minority health issues (including informational posters created by and directed at American Indians), as well as an AIDS awareness story told entirely in Spanish.

This material works because it clearly does belong in the exhibit — that is, it wasn't put there in a studied attempt to be diverse. With a few small exceptions (some overly flowery talk about women's "healing powers," for instance), all the multicultural information is incorporated seamlessly and without excessive fanfare.

"Facts of Life: Examining Reproductive Health" gives a comprehensive and practical summary of reproductive concerns without lapsing into pedantry. It's not quite as much fun as past Medical Museum exhibits, but because of its valuable message, it's arguably more important.

"Facts of Life: Examining Reproductive Health" will be on display in the Medical Museum of UI Hospitals and Clinics on the eighth floor of the John W. Colleton Pavilion through Dec. 31.

GARAGE ROCK BECOMES TRENDY AGAIN

'Pulp Fiction' craze drives crowds toward The Bent Scepters' music

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

With the newfound popularity of garage rock, surf-inspired music due largely in part to the success of the hit movie "Pulp Fiction," members of the Iowa City band The Bent Scepters are finding their music in style once again.

The band's music, termed "high-performance garage rock" and "top-fuel R&B," by lead singer and guitarist Doug Roberson, can be heard tonight at a record release party at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

"Garage rock is a term used to

"We definitely have a snappy beat. If you feel like cutting a rug, you certainly can to the Scepters."

Doug Roberson, lead singer and guitarist for The Bent Scepters

File photo

The Bent Scepters will bring its brand of "high-performance garage rock" and "top-fuel R&B" to Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight.

describe teen-age bands in the '60s trying to emulate bands like the Beatles and Rolling Stones," Roberson said. "It's usually pretty primitive — it's more concerned with spirit than execution. It's a celebration of a love of rock."

The Bent Scepters are inspired by that spirit and celebration of insane rock. The band often takes the stage wearing matching black "Reservoir Dogs"-inspired suits or racing jackets.

"We're not trying to be anti-anything, but we are sort of anti-grunge," Roberson said. "We want to set ourselves apart from other bands. We're more entertainment-oriented."

To add more entertainment, the band will sporadically take off on such things as a three-song surf medley to add a little diversion to the show.

"We definitely have a snappy beat," Roberson said. "If you feel like cutting a rug, you certainly can to the Scepters."

The current band lineup — including Bill Neff on drums, Roberson on lead vocals and guitar, Pat White on guitar and farsifa and Scott Stecklein on bass — has been together for four years.

"We don't take ourselves real seriously," Roberson said. "We like to have fun, and when we stop having fun, we'll stop. With the 'Pulp Fiction' craze, people are tending to realize that our type of music is supposedly cool, even though we were doing it way before the movie came out."

The band has played several shows at the Union Bar & Grill, 121 E. College St., and its out of town gigs have picked up recently.

As for the new record released on 7-inch vinyl, Roberson said a garage rock fan from Ohio put the band on his label, Sonic Swirl.

"Doing a record is fun, but basically we're trying to put out a CD," he said. "As much as I love vinyl, most people don't have turntables anymore. You're pretty much forced to go to a CD to get the average listener."

The average listener can expect an entertaining show tonight at Gabe's.

"Because of finals week, I think people are going to be out to have some fun," Roberson said. "With a few beers down the road, the audience will be inspired to have fun."

The Bent Scepters will play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight with Buick McSnake and Stumbleweed. Doors open at 9 and cover will be charged.

White Zombie
Astro-Creep: 2000, Songs of Love, Destruction and Other Synthetic Delusions of the Electric Head

Astro-Creep: 2000 has the head-rush feel of a Mach-1 slam through the stratosphere or a solid hour of Sit-n-Spin fun. Dizzying, loud and terrifying, White Zombie's newest release is a gyroscopic descent into a scary B-movie soundscape.

Following the band's 1992 major-label breakthrough, La Sexorcisto: Devil Music Vol. One, Astro-Creep: 2000 is not for the shy. Via grain-thresher guitar, loopy sampling and intense production, White Zombie's alloy blend of industrial, heavy metal, death metal and gothic sounds like My Life With the Thrill Kill Kult meets Pantera meets Ministry meets the Hunchback of Notre Dame.

For the spurgey collection of 11 songs, White Zombie co-founders Sean Yseult (bassist) and Rob Zombie (lead singer) kept guitarist J. and added former Testament drummer John Tempesta. Astro-Creep: 2000 starts with the high-energy "Electric Head Pt. 1 (The Agony)" and ends with "Blood, Milk and Sky," an 11-minute heavy grinder. Sandwiched between are little nuggets like "More Human Than Human" that vibrate with the friction heat of raunchy sex on a Naugahyde couch in the middle of an Atlanta heat wave.

Troublemaking demons rub shoulders with lonely sirens in the White Zombie world of agonizing love and death followed by painful resurrection. Astro-Creep: 2000 solidly proves the band plans to stay undead for quite a while.

'FRENCH KISS' FUNNY AND FLUFFY DESPITE FLAWS

Kasdan has a difficult time keeping a lid on Ryan's antics

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

One sign of a good director is the ability to keep Meg Ryan under control. Ryan has an incredible talent for ethereal, winsome romantic roles, but she also has a tendency to replace acting with flailing, bouncing, squinting, wailing and pounding the walls.

Meg Ryan and Kevin Kline star in "French Kiss," a romantic comedy also starring Timothy Hutton.

She gives free rein to all of the above in "French Kiss," a mostly charming romantic comedy that shows director Lawrence Kasdan hasn't quite rebounded from the critical beating he took over "Wyatt Earp." "French Kiss" is inoffensive, fluffy, fun fare and probably just the kind of thing Kasdan needs to boost his critical cachet, but it suffers occasionally when Kasdan doesn't keep control of his stars.

This time out, Ryan portrays a young woman named Kate whose comfortable relationship is suddenly demolished after she refuses to join her fiancé Charlie (Timothy Hutton) on a trip to France. She's afraid to fly (as she demonstrates with a typically over-the-top round of thrashing, twisting, howling and kicking) and instead chooses to stay at home dreaming about the house she and Charlie will buy when he returns home.

Alas, his phone calls become less attentive by the day, and soon Ryan's suffering the fate she forced on another in "Sleepless in Seattle": She's been dumped for a mysterious, magical, perfect person.

Unlike her "Sleepless" co-star, who accepted the breakup with preternatural calm and understanding, Ryan promptly leaps onto a plane to head to France and bring Charlie back. More twisting and flailing seems imminent, but lo, her seatmate's a stubbly, masculine sort who knows just what to say to keep her distracted.

His name is Luc ("A Fish Called Wanda"'s Kevin Kline, who's gradually becoming shorter and thicker a la Robin Williams), and he's on his way back to France with a mysterious package crammed down his pants. Of course, customs doesn't generally approve of this kind of transport, so Luc stuffs the package into Kate's purse. The inevitable high jinks ensue, and soon the happy pair is bounding across France together, trying to snare the package, trying to snare Charlie and trying to come to terms with each other.

As with most of this season's romances, there's plenty going on in "French Kiss" that has nothing to do with kissing. Screenwriters like Adam Brooks (who makes a cameo appearance as a nerdy perfect passenger on Luc and Kate's flight) seem to have taken a cue from "Sleepless in Seattle" and from "French Kiss" (besides a more appropriate title) is a more stable sense of presence from Kasdan. He peeps in from time to time with an impressive vista or a pleasant piece of physical business like Kate's unfortunate inability to nab a view of the Eiffel Tower while in Paris. But he also lets his stars get away with both overacting and underacting.

"French Kiss" is inoffensive, fluffy, fun fare and probably just the kind of thing director Lawrence Kasdan needs to boost his critical cachet, but it suffers occasionally when Kasdan doesn't keep control of his stars.

decided that a little action and a lot of humor will keep audiences' attention longer than a torrid, focused fling. The upshot is a somewhat wandering movie that gives Kline and Ryan numerous chances to play with their roles and be goofy as often as they are gushy.

The only thing really missing

He takes a talent like Jean Reno (the moody assassin of Luc Besson's "The Professional"), sticks him in a minor role and then allows him to remain inappropriately emotionless. And he never seems to assert control over the film.

Of course, given "Wyatt Earp," that may be for the best.
