Pomerantz in the driver's seat

In 5-4 vote, interim regent elected president of board

by Patricia Harris

The Daily Iowan

Mary Pomerantz narrowly won the presidency of the Iowa State Board of Regents Wednesday, according to a 5-4 vote in which she was expected to dominate.

Pomerantz was chosen in a vote by the four former regents of the Board of Regents, including two Republican and two Democratic, who will now make up the 11-member board. Pomerantz is expected to lead the board in the same direction as previous Republican Regent David Leisinger. Leisinger, a former University of Iowa President, died in 1995.

"This is a very exciting time for the university," said Pomerantz, who will take office on July 1. "I look forward to working with the university community to continue the strong academic and athletic traditions at the University of Iowa."

Leaving the campus dust behind and settling into her new home in Bla

"One of the best things about living in Iowa City is the small-community atmosphere," Hobbs said. "I've always been a big believer in the community and how it can help you achieve your goals."

DAY IN THE LIFE

Despite the challenges of balancing school and extracurricular activities, Hobbs has coped well so far. "I'm working on something every day," she said. "I don't have a lot of time to relax and take things easy." Hobbs said she enjoys the fast-paced and exciting atmosphere of Iowa City.

On Monday, Hobbs attended a sorority meeting and then went to practice. "It's a great way to relieve stress," she said. Hobbs is the president of Delta Sigma Theta sorority.

For her senior project, Hobbs is working on a documentary about the history of the sorority. "I'm excited to see how it all comes together," she said.

On Tuesday, Hobbs attended a meeting of the UI Student Government Association. "It's a great way to get involved and make a difference," she said.

On Wednesday, Hobbs attended a class in her major, political science. "I'm really enjoying the coursework," she said.

On Thursday, Hobbs attended a sorority meeting and then went to practice. "It's a great way to relieve stress," she said.

On Friday, Hobbs attended a meeting of the UI Student Government Association. "It's a great way to get involved and make a difference," she said.

On Saturday, Hobbs attended a sorority event. "It was a lot of fun," she said.

On Sunday, Hobbs attended a church service. "I find comfort in religion," she said.

"I'm going to miss Iowa City when I leave," Hobbs said. "But I'm ready to move on and take on new challenges."
Collins approves of head regent choice

Jim Dennis

The Daily Iowan

Although Marvin Pomerantz's election to president of the Iowa Student Press Association was made with some opposition, the chairman of the UI Press Student Association and the University of Northern Iowa Student Senate were looking forward to working with the new regent.

"The problem with the board is that they have had a lot of turnover so it would be nice to have a UI regent who would be in the search process so we wouldn't have to grass root to try to find another UI regent," said UI Regent James Westridge. "We were looking forward to being a part of the transition of our regent board, but with time we may have to look for someone else to bring the experience of his appointment to the Board of Regents.

Now that its presidential search has been ended, the board is now able to get back to the business of regents. Collins said he is looking forward to the involvement of his appointment to the Board of Regents.

DNA test results point to Simpson

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Jurors were shown new video Wednesday how the genetic finger-prints of Bruce Simpson and Ronald Goldman were found on the blood drop at the crime scene, which United States District Judge Lance Ito then showed to the jury to explain similarities between Bruce Simpson's DNA results and Ronald Goldman's DNA results.

The disclosure of DNA results was long-awaited, with the defense preparation to make a case based on DNA. The blood from the crime scene and from Ronald Goldman's body were tested for DNA, and the results were matched to Bruce Simpson's DNA.

The similarity of DNA patterns is consistent and unexplainable, according to expert testimony.

RIO DE JANEIRO — A 12-year-old daughter of the Zamboni Group, with projected sales of about $1 million this year, was kidnapped Wednesday to reinstate a federal court order issued March 25 after a legal dispute over the company’s rights to use the name.

The kidnappers were identified as members of a group of cheering fans who had been participating in a demonstration outside the company’s headquarters in Zaire.

Cops were forced to use tear gas to disperse the crowd, and the demonstration ended peacefully after several hours.

The company said it was investigating the incident and would take appropriate action.

The Zamboni Group is a manufacturer of Zamboni ice resurfacing machines, which are widely used in the United States and Canada to maintain the smooth, level ice surfaces on rinks and arenas.

The company said it had filed a lawsuit against a rival company, Zamboni America, over the use of the name Zamboni in the United States.

The lawsuit alleges that Zamboni America is using the name illegally.

The company said it was seeking a court order to prevent Zamboni America from using the name.

The case is set for trial in October.

Many of us have the moral fiber of dry dirt line

If you have a degree in something other than science, the thought of having to answer questions or discuss topics about which you know nothing is disturbing. This can be true for many people, and the thought of being asked to make decisions that affect others can be stressful. However, for those of us who have chosen to pursue a career in science, the pressure to perform well and make informed decisions is greater than ever. We are often faced with the responsibility of deciding what treatments to use, what experiments to conduct, and what policies to implement. This responsibility can be overwhelming, but it is important to remember that we are not alone. There are many people who care about the same things as we do, and we can rely on them for support and guidance.

This is not to say that everyone has the same moral fiber as we do. Some people may have different values and perspectives, and they may not always agree with our decisions. However, it is important to remember that we are all part of a larger community, and we are all responsible for making decisions that affect others. Whether you are a scientist, a teacher, or a parent, you have the power to make a difference in the world. So, let us all work together to make the world a better place.

The 33-year-old man, who has not been identified by authorities, died when the bomb hit his vehicle.

The bombing occurred at 10:11 a.m. at the corner of Main and First streets in downtown Oklahoma City.

At least one other person was injured.

The Oklahoma City Police Department said it was not immediately clear what caused the explosion.

The area around the site of the explosion was heavily restricted and U.S. Secret Service agents were working to determine what caused the blast.

The explosion caused extensive damage to nearby buildings and vehicles.

McVeigh was a former member of the Army and had served in the Gulf War.

McVeigh had been under scrutiny by federal agents for months, and some reports suggest he may have been involved in other bombings.

In a statement released by the FBI, McVeigh acknowledged responsibility for the bombing.

“I did it,” he said.

“I did it for the cause. I did it because I believed in what I was doing. I did it because I had to do it. I did it because I was afraid of what would happen if I didn’t.
I did it because I was afraid of the consequences.

“I did it because I cared. I did it because I loved.
I did it because I believed in the cause.

“I did it because I was a right-wing radical. I did it because I was a patriot. I did it because I was a believer. I did it because I was a fighter.

“I did it because I was a soldier. I did it because I was a queen. I did it because I was a king.

“I did it because I was a human being. I did it because I was a soul.

CALL YOUR REPRESENTATIVE AND SENATORS. TELL THEM TO THINK BEFORE THEY CUT.

Congress is planning major cuts to Medicare.

Congressional leaders are talking about the largest Medicare cuts in history. Cuts that could directly affect the quality of your health care.

AARP is concerned. We want to reduce the deficit, too. But let’s work on slowing the growth of health-care costs instead of shifting them to you. Before Congress acts, we think your Representative and Senator should answer these questions first:

• How much more will I have to pay?
• Will I still be able to choose my doctor and my health plan?
• How will these cuts affect the quality of my health care?
• Will it be harder to get care from doctors and hospitals in my community?

Severe cuts will force older Americans to pay hundreds of dollars more each year in premiums, deductibles and copayments.

The cuts are real, and they’re coming sooner than you think. AARP urges you to call your Representative and Senator today. Ask them these vital questions. Tell them that deep cuts in Medicare are bad medicine for all of us.

Tyson ranking vexes heavyweight

Hall Buck

The heavyweights have been a nightmare for the undercard since June, 1996. Mike Tyson is ranked No. 1, but his absence has raised the profile of other fighters, including Kevin Johnson.

The New York Post reported that Tyson had been in talks to fight Johnson in a September bout, but other media reports have indicated that a deal has yet to be finalized.

Tyson, who has not fought since his controversial knockout victory over Roy Jones Jr. in November 1999, is reportedly considering several options, including a bout with Johnson or perhaps a return to the ring against another top-ten fighter.

In the meantime, fans and fight enthusiasts alike are left wondering what the future holds for one of the sport's most controversial figures.

Iowa Crew: Teamwork and dedication

Hamton Stevens
The Daily Iowan

It’s 5:30 a.m. on the Iowa River. Coach Mandl and today’s rowing forecast called out to the water and began their training session for two hours.

The team starts out each practice strenuous exercise as they build up their muscles.

"Winter training is really high level of conditioning and it works your whole body," Custar said. "But it’s fun too.

The Hawks began enduring hard practices and adverse conditions as an assisted drill. "When it’s cold and raining, it’s pretty frustrating to have to sit in the heat for two hours," gymnast said. "It’s really challenging and it works your whole body, but it’s fun too.

The team competed during the fall and spring, but also spent more time and improved the overall appearance in the water. Custar said the Hawks had made tremendous progress in their initial season as a novice team. "We think we’re doing something right," Custar said. "We showed a lot of consistency during the Championship by gaining on Winconsin and we’re probably not going any faster.

LARGE ROCK BECOMES TREND AGAIN

‘Pulp Fiction’ craze drives crowds toward The Bent Scepters’ music

By Jake Hansen

The newfound popularity of the movie “Pulp Fiction” recently hit high gear on campus with the release of the soundtrack album. The Bent Scepters, a garage rock band from Eastern Iowa, has found a new audience thanks to the film’s success.

The band’s music, termed “garage rock,” is a term used to describe music that is characterized by a raw, energetic sound. The Bent Scepters have been together for four years and have gained a following by blending elements of garage rock with other genres such as punk and grunge.

“We’re not trying to be anti-establishment or part of a scene,” Roberson said. “We just want to have fun and when we stop to realize that our type of music is supposed cool, even though we most people don’t have turntables or stereo equipment.”

FRENCH KISS: TUNNY & FLUNTY DESPITE FLAWS

Kasdan has a difficult time keeping a lid on Ryan's antics

Tara Robinsen
The Daily Iowan

One sign of a good director is the ability to keep Meg Ryan under control. Ryan has an incredible talent for ethereal, winsome romantic roles, but she also has a tendency to replace subtlety with slapping by the book, over-the-top acting.

(for instance)

from "French Kiss" (hereinafter a more appropriate title is a more easily renounced assessment from Ryan). She's on her way back to France. She's in love. She's on her way back to France. She's in love. She's on her way back to France. She's in love. She's on her way back to France. She's in love.

Kasdan needs to demonstrate with a typically Lawrence Kasdan cachet, but it suffers occasionally when Kasdan doesn't keep control of his stars.

This time out, Ryan portrays a young woman named Kate whose boyfriend relationship is ending. She decides to join her fiancé Charlie (Timothy Hutton) on a trip to France. She's afraid to fly, but she demonstrates with a typically Lawrence Kasdan cachet, but it suffers occasionally when Kasdan doesn't keep control of his stars.

As with most of this season's romantic comedies, there's plenty going on in "French Kiss" that has nothing to do with kissing. Screenwriter Adam Brooks (who makes a snappy cameo appearance as a nerdy, largely forgotten character) has given Kline and Ryan numerous opportunities to play with their roles, and he goes as far as they are guilty.

The only thing really missing that may detract from "French Kiss" (hereinafter a more appropriate title is a more easily renounced assessment from Ryan). She's on her way back to France. She's in love. She's on her way back to France. She's in love. She's on her way back to France. She's in love. She's on her way back to France. She's in love.

Kate's purse. The inevitable high point of "French Kiss" is at once a comedy of manners and a more romantic, graceful, winsome, and elegantly treated romance. It's a charming, delightful, and ethereal piece of physical business.

"French Kiss" is a romantic comedy largely because director Lawrence Kasdan needs to boost his critical cachet, but it suffers occasionally when Kasdan doesn't keep control of his stars.
