Tip: Don't stiff people who serve you

OK, OK — for those of you who drew a goatee on the robbery fugitive and a hat on my picture Monday — and noted the similarities — I didn't do it.

With that taken care of, on Monday I left off with a promise to write about a group of people who blow, and now I will deliver on that promise: People who don't tip blow.

Actually, not all people who don't tip blow. I understand there are extenuating circumstances that may prevent tipping; if you were collecting cans to pay for your meal or drinks, then you don't have to tip.

Director Quentin Tarantino may have brought the act of not tipping into vogue with his cult favorite "Reservoir Dogs." In the film, Steve Buscemi's character, Mr. Pink, refuses to tip, saying, "I don't believe in it."

Too damn many people saw that movie, and it reinforced their tight-ass view on giving gratuity to people who provide goods and services to them as a way of making a living.

Just for the record, the legal minimum wage for waitstaff is somewhere in the neighborhood of $2.80, with the expectation that the person will make up the difference in tips. It must make people feel good about themselves when they leave a restaurant or bar and say, "I stiffed a person who makes $2 less than today's minimum wage."

I don't understand why people don't tip. For the most part, it is a convenience to have drinks and food prepared for you and brought to your table by someone who is smiling and at least pretending to be happy being your pissboy (or girl).

That doesn't mean you should only tip servers or bartenders. Tip everyone — cab drivers, hairstylists and barbers, doormen (if you see 'em), bellhops and especially delivery people.

How can you live with yourself when somebody who hangs out in a greasy kitchen makes a pizza, drives it to your door, gets rained or snowed on and brings the food to you — all because you were too damn lazy to make your own friggin' food? Isn't that worth at least a buck more to you? If it isn't, starve — you schmuck.

At the very least, tipping will possibly improve the service you get, and in better situations, tipping will improve your status in the establishment.

Servers know who does and doesn't tip — and they remember. One couple used to come into the establishment at which I work nearly every day and never tipped. And they had the gall to call themselves regulars. Bite me — regulars tip.

It doesn't matter where you are — some people depend on tips. Even if they don't, it is a good way to show that you appreciate the service you received, which is why it is good to tip hairdressers. Otherwise, the next haircut you get may be something more appropriate, like a butt-cut.

My rule is, you should always tip a server, even if the service kind of blows. If there was a problem — tell the manager, but leave at least 15 to 20 percent. If the service was good, pleasant or entertaining, leave more.

Tipping is sort of like trick-or-treating on Halloween. Remember when you all were kids and you went from house to house collecting candy? And it was cool to get full-size candy bars and not so cool to receive a toothbrush from the neighborhood dentist?

And you all know how it felt when you didn't get anything from the people on the corner. Pretty disappointing that those people chose to ignore an age-old tradition.

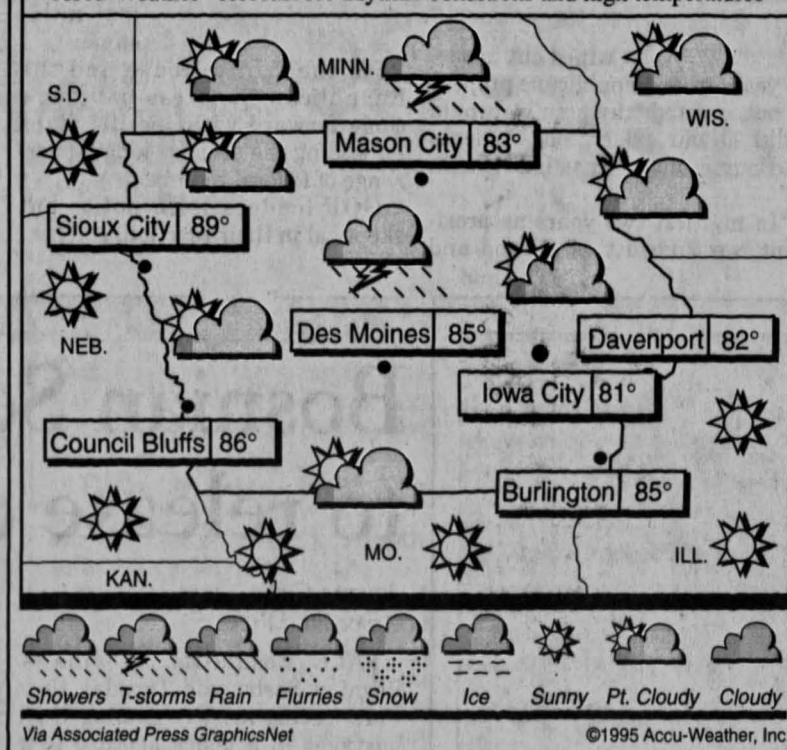

That's how servers feel when they don't get tipped, except that they are busting their asses working and not just having fun dressing up as waiters and hairdressers and cab drivers just to get free stuff.

So, next time you go out for a drink or a burger, just remember to leave a little money for the people who took care of you. People who don't should be punished. Just remember, if you don't tip — you suck.

Rapper Campbell prevents entertainer from taking land

MIAMI (AP) — Luther Campbell filed for bankruptcy protection to keep a fellow rap star from getting his hands on Campbell's property.

Campbell sought protection Monday under Chapter 11 of the U.S. bankruptcy code.

Campbell was ordered last year to pay $1.6 million to fellow rapper M.C. Shy D in a dispute over royalties.

Jones obtained a lien against some property Campbell owns. The bankruptcy filing prevents the forced sale of the land.

Campbell didn't immediately return calls.

Female politicians audition for president role

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — And the Oscar goes to ... Dawn Clark Netsch?

Netsch, who was walloped by Gov. Jim Edgar in last year's election, is auditioning to play the president of the United States in a Jodie Foster movie about extraterrestrial life.

Former Labor Secretary Lynn Martin, once a possible presidential candidate in real life, is also reading for the role.

Netsch "acts like a woman who could be president," casting director Jane Brody said. "Ditto for Martin. They both are very direct, very truthful."

Brody asked the two politicians to read for the small part.

Netsch doubts Warner Bros. will be any more smitten with her than the Illinois voters were.

"I don't expect this to happen," she said. "I don't consider myself a Hollywood anything."

Shooting begins in August.

Queen Elizabeth II to endow Kissinger with top British title

LONDON (AP) — Henry Kissinger won't have to bend when he's knighted by Queen Elizabeth II next week. And don't call him "sir."

The queen will make Kissinger an Honorary Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, one of the top honors Britain can bestow on a foreigner, the Foreign Office said Tuesday.

Because he's an American, Kissinger won't get the title "sir" and doesn't have to kneel before the queen. He can add "KC" after his name if he wants.

The government is honoring Kissinger's "contribution towards Anglo-American relations." As President Nixon's national security adviser and secretary of state, Kissinger was a roving envoy in the 1960s and '70s.

The investiture will be June 20 at Buckingham Palace.

Actor Hanks not expecting honors with new movie part

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If they can put a man on the moon, can

Tom Hanks win his third straight Oscar for playing astronaut Jim Lovell in "Apollo 13"?

"That won't happen," the actor said. "The world is safe."

Besides — he's quick to say — the Ron Howard-directed film is an ensemble work. Hanks stars with Bill Paxton, Gary Sinise, Ed Harris and Kevin Bacon.

"I'm not in a third of the movie because it's Mission Control and we're up in space," Hanks said in a recent interview.

"Apollo 13" tells the story of the ill-fated 1970 moon shot. It opens nationwide June 30.

Diana Ross slated for two Kremlin appearances

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Diana Ross is Russia-bound for the first time in her four decades as an entertainer.

Ross will perform at the Kremlin Palace on Friday and Saturday, her publicist said Tuesday. The two shows are sold out.

The singer, backed by an 18-piece band, will include past hits and new songs from an album due out this fall.

UI enrollment soars for summer session

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

In what UI officials have projected to be the biggest summer session ever, students returned to the classrooms Tuesday, breathing life back into Iowa City after a month-long break.

Doug Lee, an accountant for the UI Office of the Provost, said this will be the first increase in enrollment since fall 1988. Lee said he expects about 10,800 students to enroll by the end of the registration period on June 23.

Michael McNulty, director of the summer session, said the increase was encouraging, especially in light of recent tuition increases.

"We're very pleased," he said. "When you increase the price but still more people enroll, we know things are going well."

McNulty credited a variety of new course options for some of the increase.

"We worked to increase the offerings this summer session, including offering more GER courses," he said. "We worked with the departments and added sections for courses with high demands."

Also new to the summer session are programs in international studies, McNulty said.

"We wanted to focus more on international programs in the summer, both abroad and on-campus," he said.

Although the summer session has not been restricted to Iowa City — an Iowa state Board of Regents program offers trips to Spain, Austria and France — the UI has added the chance to study Yoruba and African culture through a seven-week session at the University of Ibadan, Nigeria. Programs have also been added in Japan, Korea and Italy.

For most UI students, however, the summer session offers non-traditional opportunities — more intense work, with more free time.

UI senior Christopher Wilkins started studying even before his class began.

"I want to learn PASCAL (a computer language)," Wilkins said. "It'll be tough because it's crammed into eight weeks, but summer is also more laid back."

UI junior Valerie Svoboda, using the summer-class option to graduate early, enrolled but was not happy about it.

"I'd rather not be here, but I have to get done on time," she said. "I'm in a four-and-a-half-year program, but I'm going to finish early. So I have to do it."

Summer school's evening courses also allow students who can't take classes during the day an opportunity to continue their education.

"I work full time, but I can get my class done in two nights a week — really quickly," UI sophomore Zuben Bastani said. "I wish I could chill, but I don't mind taking classes too much. There will still be plenty of time to party."

Despite the different nature of the summer session for students, one instructor didn't anticipate much change.

"I've already started TA-ing a class and it's very typical," said UI graduate student Erik Martz. "The class begins at 8 a.m., and the students were kind of comatose."

The 10,000 students taking classes must also feed and clothe themselves, and area merchants were pleased with the students' return.

Sean Smith, a sales associate at Athlete's Foot in Old Capitol Mall, said he has already noticed an increase in sales.

"We always do better when classes are in session, and the students may have more money because a lot of them are working part time," he said.

Circuses differ from those of yesteryear

Sara Teasdale
The Daily Iowan

In the early 1900s, a train transporting 500 horses, 52 elephants, 1,300 performing artists and a big-top tent large enough to hold 10,000 spectators rolled into Iowa City after each summer's harvest to entertain the local farming community.

Today, the circus is still around, but the acts coming through do not compare in size or substance to the Ringling Brothers Barnum & Bailey Circus, which made its first visit to Iowa City via the Rock Island Railroad on July 30, 1897.

A circus is more expensive to run today than 50 years ago, said Shane Johnson, the lion trainer in the Shrine Circus, which performed two shows Monday and Tuesday at the Johnson County Fairgrounds. Companies have had to cut down on their labor forces to save money and as a result, the shows have gotten smaller, he said.

"It was a lot cheaper to run a circus back then," Johnson said. "Money is a lot different now — our salaries are higher. It's more expensive to live now. We're not on the trains anymore. We're expected to pay for all our breakdowns and new tires."

Iowa City historian Irving Weber said that in the old days, the train would pull into town at 5 a.m. The labor force then had all the animals out of the cars and the performers dressed and made up by 11 a.m. for the parade. The route went north on Dubuque Street, across the Iowa Interstate Railroad tracks to Market Street and down a block west on Market to Clinton Street.

"Many found the unloading and setting up of the circus as interesting as the performance or the parade," Weber said.

After the parade, the circus acts performed under the big top in front of 8,000-10,000 people, Weber said, with shows at 2:30 and 8 p.m. By midnight, the circus crew would have everything packed up and ready to go to the next town.

"Nothing ever came to Iowa City for one day that would compare to the circus," Weber said. "When the circus came to town, people called it 'big tent city.'"

The circus acts — which now perform in Iowa City and across the Midwest — have removed the big top from performances, Johnson said, because the elimination cuts down on labor costs.

"We don't use a big top anymore in the Midwest," he said. "A big top is a tradition in the Midwest that started 50 years ago."

New Party concepts launched in I.C. area

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

"Third-party politics." Considering America's staunch, two-party political tradition, the concept can seem unimaginable. But a fledgling political party is attempting to break the political rules and put down roots in Iowa City.

The New Party is attempting to slowly seep into the national consciousness. National staff member Daniel Cantor said the party is in the process of starting small and aspiring to bigger things.

"It's a local-first party," Cantor said. "We want to build the New Party from the ground up. You can't do it in the traditional way most parties try to do it — running candidates for the presidency. These people — like the members of the school boards, the city councils, the state representatives — are the farm team for Washington."

The party's national membership numbers 5,000 people, with a small number — about 50 or 60 — residing in Iowa. The party attracts people from many political views, Cantor said.

"There are people who are unhappy with the Democratic Party and its national stampede to the right," he said. "There are ex-Perot and independent voters. We also have people who feel alienated from the political system in general."

The Iowa City arm of the New Party, which isn't yet a recognized chapter, is concerned solely with getting people involved in local, non-partisan elections like those for the school board and the city council.

John Crabtree, a local New Party organizer, said getting the public involved in local elections is important because city administration affects people more immediately than anything the Clinton administration can throw the country's way.

"You need to find issues that are important to them — like the water rates — and convince them they can do something about it if they get involved," Crabtree said. "You can show them how their everyday lives are affected by the decisions of local government."

Founded in 1992 in Wisconsin and New York, the party is growing the fastest in the Midwest, Cantor said. Tuesday night's New Party meeting to discuss politics roughly coincided with a meeting held in Des Moines.

The party funds itself through membership dues. However, Cantor said funding is important and can sometimes cause problems — compare the New Party's budget of $900,000 over the last three years to the $20 million it takes to run a typical presidential campaign.

"There are many obstacles to a third party in America," Cantor said. "But the ground is more fertile now than ever before for the creation of another party."

The student population is traditionally blamed for much of Johnson County's low voter turnout, but Crabtree said the local levels of education and political activity might make the area prime for a new party.

"Clearly we have to do something on the local level, and that's where the New Party has been successful in the past," Crabtree said. "We've been successful in towns like Madison, Wisconsin, and Little Rock, Arkansas — towns that are a lot like Iowa City."

U.S.-Vietnam link encouraged

Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Warren Christopher is recommending that the United States establish formal diplomatic relations with Vietnam, a congressional official said Tuesday.

A senior administration official said that Winston Lord, assistant secretary of state for East Asia, had told Christopher that normalizing relations would encourage further cooperation from the Vietnamese on efforts to determine the fate of Americans missing since the Vietnam War.

On Capitol Hill, an official said that Christopher accepted Lord's recommendation and had forwarded it to President Clinton. Speaking only on condition of anonymity, the official said Christopher had suggested that a visit to Vietnam be included in a trip by the secretary of state to Southeast Asia in August.

"It's not yet ripe for a decision," said the administration official, who refused to confirm that the question had gone to the White House.

"The intent is for the president to make the decision before the end of July," said the congressional source.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a former Vietnam War POW and a leading advocate of normalizing relations, said two State Department officials told him a recommendation to the White House would be forthcoming.

"They thought there would be a recommendation to improve relations," McCain said. "They didn't specify how that would happen."

Earlier, McCain indicated that Christopher already had made his recommendation. Later, he said he might have overstated how far the process had gone.

When asked for official confirmation, the State Department said it could not comment on internal deliberations or on any advice Christopher may have given Clinton.

The Vietnamese have recently turned over hundreds of pages of documents pertaining to the 1,619 Americans still listed as missing. The documents were being analyzed by Defense Department experts, the administration official said.

Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., who received more than 100 pages of material from the Vietnamese last month, said that "given Vietnam's massive and recent cooperation on the MIA issue, I think it may be time to recognize them."

Relatives of those missing and support groups still oppose such action.

Ann Mills Griffith, executive director of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, said the move "would subvert President Clinton's stated conditions for normalization of relations with Vietnam."

"It is obvious that the president is being heavily lobbied to renege on his many pledges that no further steps would be taken until greater accounting results are obtained," she said.

McCain said a sense of the Senate resolution supporting a normalization of relations with Vietnam will probably be offered in July as part of the State Department authorization bill.

"The White House would need a sense of the Senate resolution to move forward," said the senator.

More than 50,000 Americans lost their lives in a decade-long effort to save the South Vietnamese government from an insurgency led by the communist government of North Vietnam.

The United States withdrew the last of its forces in 1974 and North Vietnam occupied the whole country shortly after.

Improvement of relations between the two countries has hinged on lingering questions about the fate of Americans missing in action or believed held prisoner when the war ended.

As the Vietnamese have become more cooperative in determining the fate of missing Americans, contacts between the two governments have increased.

Clinton opened the way for commercial relations with Vietnam last February, saying the step would encourage further cooperation in discovering the fate of missing Americans.

McCain said last month that Vietnamese cooperation on the MIA issue "is extensive and has increased" since the lifting of the trade embargo.

Quicker method of obtaining DNA test results studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is issuing a test to help criminal and medical laboratories ensure the accuracy of fast DNA fingerprinting.

DNA carries the unique set of genes that determines an individual's physical traits. Scientists use "profiling" techniques — commonly called DNA fingerprinting — to identify portions of DNA and copy it, for everything from biomedical research to identifying criminal suspects.

The National Institute of Standards and Technology in 1992 issued a quality standard to ensure labs do the original method of DNA fingerprinting correctly.

But that method takes six weeks to perform. Now, up to 40 percent of labs use a newer method called PCR that gives results in just hours — and requires so little genetic material that it can identify someone from the saliva left on a cigarette, NIST said.

Although most laboratories analyzing bits of the same material do get the same results with PCR, until now there has been no way to ensure that accuracy, said NIST biotechnologist Dennis Reeder.

Zaire epidemic continues to spread

GENEVA (AP) — The death toll from the Ebola virus in Zaire has risen to 220, with a total of 280 confirmed cases, the World Health Organization said Tuesday.

But the agency remains convinced the acute phase of the outbreak is over.

Thirteen new cases were reported in the past five days, all in Kikwit, the epicenter of the outbreak. All but three are being treated in Kikwit Hospital.

"This slight increase in the number does show that vigilance must be maintained," the organization said in a statement.

The new cases were all people who had been in contact with patients and who developed the disease toward the end of its incubation period. None were health workers, although health workers were the group most affected at the start of the outbreak.

Twenty-one villages are still being monitored for any new cases of infection. An international team of scientists is also trying to trace the origin of the disease, which is believed to be carried by forest mammals or insects.

LEGAL MATTERS.

Photos cause woman to flee from courtroom

Linda Deutsch

Sathyavagiswaran

LOS ANGELES — As a coroner demonstrated how the killing knife plunged into Ronald Goldman's rib cage, an alternate juror suddenly stood in the jury box and bolted from O.J. Simpson's murder trial in apparent distress.

"Excuse me, I think we need a brief time," defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. said. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito hastily called a recess.

It was the second time the trial has been interrupted by a juror sickened at the sight of graphic autopsy photos and re-enactments of the killings of Goldman and Nicole Brown Simpson.

"The stab wound entered the right chest, went through the seventh rib... then the right lung and came to strike the right fourth rib," Dr. Lakshmanan Sathyavagiswaran said, demonstrating on his own body where the knife entered.

Jurors at that point were confronted with a series of pictures they had not seen before — close-ups of Goldman's torso pierced by knife wounds.

The female alternate, a fire department receptionist who has tried to look at the photo display boards as little as possible, ran from the courtroom. Goldman's family couldn't see the photos but also appeared upset at the testimony.

Simpson's attorneys have complained that jurors are being sickened by the display of ghastly autopsy and crime-scene photos.

Deputy District Attorney Brian Kelberg, who has used himself as a model to present dramatic re-enactments of how the murders may have been committed, prodded the coroner into providing more details about Goldman's killing.

The coroner told jurors that after slashing his throat, Goldman's killer may have poked him in the face with a knife to see if he was dead.

"They are all superficial punctures, and I have no way of knowing exactly why they were done," the coroner explained to jurors. "It could have been inflicted to check whether he was still alive or not; that would be one conclusion I would draw, also."

Sathyavagiswaran said Goldman was indeed alive when his face was stabbed, because blood pressure made the wounds bleed.

Using blowups of autopsy reports, charts showing the victim's head and hands and display boards of autopsy photos, Sathyavagiswaran said Goldman's swollen and bruised knuckles could not have come from punching his assailant. He said the injuries were likely caused by Goldman flailing around while under attack, striking tree branches and stumps in the small, partly enclosed area where he died.

Before the day's session opened, defense attorney Robert Shapiro complained that the prosecution was prolonging Sathyavagiswaran's testimony.

"This appears to be an unprecedented marathon, to present evidence that is readily susceptible of reading from a crystal ball," Shapiro told the judge.

"The people continue to talk and press and go into minutia and details most people looking at this are mystified by," Shapiro said. "It's time for your honor to step in and say the jury has enough evidence on the real issues at hand."

DEATH PENALTY MAY BE SOUGHT

Mother indicted for murder after kids perish in vehicle

Michelle Williams

McMINNVILLE, Tenn. — A young mother whose two little boys died after being left in a sweltering car while she partied in a motel room was arrested on murder charges Tuesday and could get the electric chair.

Jennie Bain, 20, began to cry as she arrived by car to surrender at the prosecutor's office, in the company of her parents and her lawyer.

The group had to drive past the motel where Bain went to party a week earlier with four men. A light blue ribbon was tied to the motel's flagpole.

Devin, almost 2, and Dustin, 1, were left in the car with the windows rolled up. The boys died of hyperthermia — or overheating — after spending up to 10 hours buckled in their car seats. The temperature inside had reached at least 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

Investigators believe Bain drank alcohol and then fell asleep.

A grand jury indicted her on charges of first-degree murder. She was held on $75,000 bail. Prosecutors said they have not decided whether to seek the death penalty.

"There is no one in this world more grief-stricken than this little girl," said her lawyer, Michael Galligan.

Galligan said he is still trying to piece together the details of Bain's story.

An hour after she discovered her children, she was found to have a blood-alcohol level of .06 percent, less than the legal limit for driving in Tennessee.

The boys' estranged father, James Ducker, 23, said Bain was a neglectful mother. He lives in Marshall, N.C.

'GETTING TOUGH' ISN'T WORKING

Branstad's son in trouble

Gov. Terry Branstad's son, Eric, is in the news again. He's still having problems with alcohol, and he keeps getting caught — Eric Branstad was arrested again at the end of May. This time, possession of drug paraphernalia was added to his list of charges.

It seems this kid has been in trouble for a long time. He's been hitting the front pages with alarming regularity ever since his involvement in a fatal traffic accident at 16. And our poor governor seems lost on how to handle his son's problems.

Branstad campaigned on a platform of "Family Values" and "Get Tough on Crime." He advocated boot camps for juvenile offenders and even sent his son to military school — a kind of privileged person's equivalent — when it became more than clear that Eric Branstad was out of control.

Apparently family values, getting tough and boot camp (of any type) are not working — at least not for Eric Branstad.

One would think that Eric Branstad's problems and the fact that solutions loudly promoted by conservatives are not making a dime's worth of difference would prove a learning experience for his father.

Obviously, they are not. Branstad insists — at least for other people's kids — that the values, attitudes and courses of action not working for his child will — without a doubt — work for everyone else's. And to back up his argument, Branstad — like conservatives everywhere — is gutting alternatives to the right-wing party line as fast as he can.

It is time to stop this obscene nonsense. When troublemaking kids are nothing but caricatures out of fifth-rate gang exploitation movies, it is hard to defend viable alternatives to the conditions creating the problems.

But now the kid in trouble has a face and a name. His father is Iowa's governor, who is apparently so committed to right-wing dogma that he is willing to let his own child go under before reconsidering his own positions.

For the sake of Eric Branstad — and all the other kids in trouble — Branstad should resign. He needs to organize his own house before he lectures other people on the order of theirs. Branstad needs to tend to his own family, his own values and his own children before he lectures the rest of us on how to tend to ours.

'MELROSE PLACE' IS 'HOTTEST TRASH'

Youth must be considered

Sex. Murder. Lust. What do these things have in common? Not only are they issues that parents would like their teenagers to avoid, but they all can be found on one episode of "Melrose Place," a show that has been dubbed "the hottest trash on prime time television" by The Washington Post.

When its writer / producer, Darren Starr, created the show in 1992, he wanted it to be a "Beverly Hills, 90210" for adults.

"In the beginning," he told Rolling Stone magazine in a May 1994 interview, "our stories were structured like the early '90s' shows, with everybody learning moral lessons about life in each show. But we discovered adults have absolutely no interest in watching other adults go through that sort of thing... Now we try to write the shows as fun, trashy and compelling as we can."

What he failed to realize, however, was that the show attracted teenagers by the thousands. As a spinoff series of "90210," younger viewers tuned in and were easily hooked. They saw their favorite characters engaging in seemingly glamorous casual sex and many were eager to copy.

As a February 1995 issue of The Washington Post pointed out, in a nationwide survey of 10- to 16-year-olds, one-third of them said that they "often" want to imitate things they see on television — while two-thirds said they are influenced by what they see on TV programs. Sixty-two percent said they felt viewing sex on television encourages young adults to become sexually active at too young an age.

Nearly three-fourths feel their peers are influenced by sex on television. That amount is far too high; something must be done to curb the amount of sex alluded to on television.

A 15-year-old who is thinking about becoming sexually active may choose to do so after seeing it glamorized on the screen. Teenagers think they will be adult and alluring if they have sex, because their favorite character on "Melrose Place" (or other similar shows) has sex and gets attention from her handsome male co-stars.

Characters on the program treat sex as if it were "no big deal." In this year's season finale, several characters hopped from bed to bed with no more than a commercial break separating their partners. One woman had sex on her first date with a man she barely knew, and this is what teenagers are watching and wanting to mimic.

Pointing out the negative aspects of the portrayal of sex on "Melrose Place" isn't a call for the all-out censorship of television. It is merely a request for writers and producers to think before they write and air a show. Executives must consider all of the young, impressionable minds that view their programs — minds that idolize and just might mimic their characters.

MIKE BROGAN

Bob Dole, Kenny G: morally reprehensible

"The test of any democratic society lies not in how well it can control expression but in whether it gives freedom of thought and expression the widest possible latitude, however controversial or exasperating the results may be."

That was an excerpt from an op-ed column that Gerald Levin, chairman of the mega-entertainment and communications conglomerate Time Warner Inc., wrote for The Wall Street Journal in 1992 in defense of his company's controversial decision to distribute Ice T's rap song "Cop Killer." Recent events may cause Levin to dust off his laptop computer and crank out a few more of those "In the Defense of Art" columns.

Time Warner has come under attack again by the far right of the Republican party. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., has gone on some sort of moral crusade and has named Time Warner as the enemy and primary attacking point.

In a recent speech, Dole denounced what he considers to be the decay of the American soul. He has taken Hollywood to task for producing and distributing graphically violent movies and music. He has waved his old, wrinkled finger at pop culture and given it a heavy-handed "shame on you."

Dole is not trying to save our souls; he is trying to win an election. With one speech, Dole has become the golden boy of the increasingly powerful far-right faction of the GOP. He's also the hero of all the concerned parents in this country who can't find the time to ask what movie their kid will see or to look at their children's CD collection.

Dole doesn't care about movie violence, and I would bet my tuition that he doesn't care about any of Ice Cube's lyrics, either. Dole needs the far right to sew up the nomination, and attacking the entertainment business will give it to him.

This attack on pop culture is nothing new. Who could forget back in 1992 when Vice President Dan Quayle blasted "Murphy Brown" and instantly became the mortal enemy of every single mother in the galaxy? What really irks me, however, is that it is such a transparent and formulated attack. In all his years in the senate, Dole has never once been a champion of "moral" entertainment.

But now, when he needs the votes, the man who wants to see an Uzi in every household is willing to stand up to "Pulp Fiction" director Quentin Tarantino in order to save our children.

Schwarzenegger is the most popular Republican on the planet, and Dole may need a few bucks and a couple of publicity shots as he makes his charge toward the Oval Office.

Just to make sure that we don't stray from the straight and narrow, Dole has given us a list of some fine films that he considers good, wholesome, family entertainment. The most curious addition to the list, which includes "The Lion King" and "Forrest Gump," is the Arnold Schwarzenegger bloodbath "True Lies."

In this movie, Schwarzenegger's character mows through about 10,000 horribly stereotyped Middle Eastern terrorists. There is also fine family humor like Tom Arnold's character wondering out loud, "What kind of a sick bitch steals an ice tray?" and the running joke of a guy who wets himself every time someone points a gun in his face.

It is no coincidence, though, that a Schwarzenegger movie ended up on Dole's Holy Grail of entertainment. After all, Schwarzenegger is the most popular Republican on the planet, and Dole may need a few bucks and a couple of publicity shots as he makes his charge toward the Oval Office.

The most uproariously ignorant thing about Dole's attack is the fact that he has never seen or heard most of the movies and music that he's attacking. It seems like someone came up to him and said, "Now, Bobby, these movies are bad. Do you understand? Bad. Bad. Bad." Dole then kind of nodded his head like a toddler and had somebody write him a speech denouncing the films and music as "nightmares of depravity."

It is this kind of blind search for morals that — at best — can lead to embarrassment and at worst to witch hunts. We find ourselves in some fairly dangerous times and have to constantly remind ourselves to question these types of calculated, robotic attacks on entertainment.

If we don't, we might find ourselves living in a world where all that's on the tube are Ernest movies, and all that's on the radio is Kenny G. Now that is morally reprehensible.

Mike Brogan's column appears alternate Wednesdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

Hard facts of long-term health care remain

To the Editor:

Are you one of those who watched the progress of health-care reform closely and optimistically? Amid all the uncertainties of American politics — budget deficits, looming elections, congressional bickering, inadequate funding and the ebb and flow of power — many of us waited eagerly to see if a plan would pass.

The possibility of long-term care being covered by a national health plan — or of any national health plan at all — has all but evaporated. As we look back, most of us now realize that it was a forlorn hope. But although that hope has faded, the hard facts of long-term care remain.

Most people in our age group know these facts. The New England Journal of Medicine (Feb. 28, 1991) states that at age 65, we have a 43 percent chance of needing long-term care sometime in our lives. Costs are beyond the reach of most of us. In 1990, the National Association of Insurance Commissioners produced their Shoppers' Guide to Long-Term Care, which found that nursing-home costs at that time ranged from $25,000 to $50,000 per year, depending upon area. What must these costs be now? And what will they be by the time you and I need nursing-home care?

Prudent financial planners, such as Janet Bryant Quinn, agree: We cannot afford a "wait and see" attitude. The time to investigate our options for protecting ourselves against these potentially devastating costs is now. Only reasonably healthy people can obtain long-term care insurance. Can we be sure we will be healthy in two years or even tomorrow?

The government clearly wishes to promote private long-term care coverage and has proposed a tax break on premiums. Whether any such legislation will pass, now or in the future, remains to be seen. What is certain is that we cannot wait around once again for the government to act. It is time to take matters into our own hands.

Long-term care policies are now available that offer a wide range of choices about care — including home care, assisted living facilities and other alternatives to nursing homes. The younger you are when you obtain coverage, the lower the premium will be. Waiting only makes it more expensive and can even mean that if you have a health problem, you cannot get coverage at all.

Nobody wants to worry about going to a nursing home. But those free from worry and uncertainty are those who have long-term care insurance. They know that they will be able to preserve their savings, their dignity and their independence — no matter what happens.

Boycott of 'hate' radio programs called for

To the Editor:

Current talk about talk shows is getting good. The principle point of discussion is: "Does hate talk from these people cause violence like that in Oklahoma City?"

The answer — simply — is yes. Rush Limbaugh and G. Gordon Liddy are responsible for the Oklahoma bombings. They are baby killers and out-and-out murderers — and they ought to be hanged.

At least that's how the men would put it if they heard themselves with my ears but talked with their mouths. Free to speak words and express opinions of their choice, the two choose to incite violence and deny their words have consequences.

So, Limbaugh expresses his negative feelings about powerful women by referring to them as "FemiNazis," but denies any role in violence against women.

There are consequences to hateful words, and braver men would face them. People who wrestle every day to sort right from wrong take direction from what they hear on commercial radio and television. As they struggle to function in society, hearing Liddy say "aim for the head" of law-enforcement officers adjusts their perception of society and primes them for violence.

Indeed, as long as this society makes heroes and millionaires of the likes of Limbaugh and Liddy and other "felons of the airwaves," we need to prime for violence — because this society is loving violence.

It's not the felons' message that caused the bombings; it's their method. Everyone has important thoughts; few stoop to marketing them by tinkering with hate and prejudice like these hate peddlers. They'll say outrageous things to attract attention. It doesn't matter, because — in their view — speech is a privilege free of responsibility.

Everyone who listens to this hate added a chunk to that fertilizer bomb. Every radio station airing the hate poured in some fuel oil. Every company paying advertising on a station carrying hate-radio shows owes a spade full of earth to the graves of those victims.

Remember, if you listen to Limbaugh — you pay Limbaugh. If you advertise next to felons, you amplify the messages and ideas of felons.

An old friend told me: "If you're afloat in a canoe and one end sinks, you're going to get wet."

Well, we're all in the same canoe and we're just beginning to bathe in the hatred spewed by these guys.

If you love peace and tranquility, please boycott hate radio and the stations carrying it.

READERS SAY...

It has been one year since the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. How have your opinions concerning the American justice system changed during the O.J. Simpson trial?

Subhashish Gupta, doctoral candidate in economics

"I've not paid much attention to the O.J. Simpson saga that seems to be going on forever. Because he's so wealthy, he seems to be able to afford big-shot lawyers and make it drag on."

Dave Krummel, post-graduate student in physics

"I think it's kind of ridiculous the way in which they were second-guessing the people doing the lab work, trying to question them without letting them use their lab books."

Mary Wiles, graduate student in French

"It was never good. I think this is the most obsessed I've seen (the media) get. Obviously he's a national figure, but everything's being so media-controlled I believe it's become a sideshow and a circus."

Jon Lauck, graduate student in history

"I don't think it's influencing the judicial system. The guy has three excellent attorneys. The system seems to be working and that's evidenced by the former jurors wanting to declare his innocence."

Animal testing alternatives

To the Editor:

There are alternatives to using animals in research, but such information is usually not available. According to the National Human Education Research Center, the following alternatives have been developed:

- Human studies — includes clinical, epidemiological and some post-mortem investigations.
- In vitro techniques — used to study tissue components in the controlled environment of laboratory containers.
- Mathematical models — describe a biological process in mathematical terms in order to study that system.

- Less sentient organisms — some have pain and suffering, especially plants.
- Physical / chemical techniques — explore chemical procedures, not animals, to study physical and chemical properties of drugs, body fluids and other compounds.

The National Anti-Vivisection Society lists the following alternatives:

- Mathematical and computer models.
- Cell and organ cultures.

Marijuana should be legalized for medicine

To the Editor:

An American Civil Liberties Union-sponsored scientific survey conducted from March 31 through April 5 indicates that 79 percent of U.S. voters believe that it is a "very good" or "somewhat good" idea to "legalize marijuana to relieve pain and for other medical uses if prescribed by a doctor."

Such common sense is not very common in the federal government. Marijuana is a valuable medicine for the treatment of glaucoma, multiple sclerosis and nausea and vomiting associated with AIDS and cancer.

Promises quickly turn into politics

To the Editor:

It's about time for the Clinton administration to score points by ignoring political expediency and taking a leadership stance. Why isn't the Justice Department, on behalf of the president, actively supporting the Colorado Supreme Court decision that overturned a homophobic and blatantly discriminatory referendum denying equal rights to homosexuals?

Three excuses come to mind:

- The gays-in-the-military issue burned the administration and it doesn't have the backbone to pursue the issue further.

- Janet Reno is tired of the lesbian rumors surrounding her and won't touch a gay issue with a 10-foot pole.

- Clinton knows gays won't vote for any of the Republican presidential candidates.

What a disappointment Clinton has been. We had so much hope three movie, Schwarzenegger's character is about 10,000 horribly stereotypical Eastern terrorists. There is also humor like Tom Arnold's character but loud, "What kind of a sick bitch is he?" and the running joke of a character who kills himself every time someone looks at him.

A coincidence, though, that a Schwarzenegger movie ended up on Dole's Holy Land tour. After all, Schwarzenegger is the most popular Republican on the plan. He may need a few bucks and a couple of shots as he makes his charge to the Oval Office.

Unproportionally ignorant thing about Dole is the fact that he has never seen most of the movies and music that he seems like someone came up to him and said, "Now, Bobby, these movies are bad. Bad. Bad. Bad." Dole nodded his head like a toddler and then he wrote him a speech denouncing the music as "nightmares of depravity."

Kind of blind search for morals that can lead to embarrassment and at times to embarrassment. We find ourselves in some serious times and have to constantly ourselves to question these types of caricatures on entertainment.

But, we might find ourselves living in a world where all that's on the tube are Ernest and the radio is Kenny G. Morally reprehensible.

USE?

YOU'RE HISTORY, YOU ADULTEROUS, LEFT-WING WACKO!

Limbaugh and Liddy and other "felons of the airwaves," we need to prime for violence — because this society is loving violence.

It's not the felons' message that caused the bombings; it's their method. Everyone has important thoughts; few stoop to marketing them by tinkering with hate and prejudice like these hate peddlers. They'll say outrageous things to attract attention. It doesn't matter, because — in their view — speech is a privilege free of responsibility.

Everyone who listens to this hate added a chunk to that fertilizer bomb. Every radio station airing the hate poured in some fuel oil. Every company paying advertising on a station carrying hate-radio shows owes a spade full of earth to the graves of those victims.

Remember, if you listen to Limbaugh — you pay Limbaugh. If you divert next to felons, you amplify hate messages and ideas of felons.

An old friend told me: "If you're float in a canoe and one end sinks, you're going to get wet."

Well, we're all in the same canoe and we're just beginning to bathe in the hatred spewed by these guys.

If you love peace and tranquility, please boycott hate radio and the stations carrying it.

Animal testing alternatives offered

To the Editor:

There are alternatives to using animals in biomedical research, but such information is usually not heard of. According to the National Human Education Society, the following alternatives have been developed:

- Human studies — includes clinical, epidemiological and some post-mortem investigations.
- In vitro techniques — used to study tissues, cells or cellular components in the controlled environment of laboratory containers.
- Mathematical models — describe a biological system under study in mathematical terms in order to predict novel features of that system.
- Less sentient organisms — some have less capacity for pain and suffering, especially plants.
- Physical / chemical techniques — exploit instruments and chemical procedures, not animals, to analyze the physical and chemical properties of drugs, body chemicals and other compounds.

The National Anti-Vivisection Society lists the following alternatives:

- Mathematical and computer models.
- Cell and organ cultures.

- Bacteria cultures and protozoan studies.
- Gas chromatography and mass spectrometry.
- Eggs.

Eliminate the test or experiment whenever possible.

Much has gone on that is irrelevant, redundant, trivial and repetitive. Many times the main motivations are curiosity or to have a grant funded or a promotion awarded, with little or no consideration for the suffering of the animals.

There should be much greater efforts made to prevent illness and to prevent accidents instead of finding costly and prolonged cures and drugs which have adverse reactions. I think most of the cancers, heart attacks, strokes, high blood pressure and lots of other ills could be prevented with proper diets and lifestyles, but the problem is that people want to eat and drink what tastes good and live carelessly. I've been through all that myself. About nine years ago, I quit eating meat and other high cholesterol products and recently have quit tobacco and liquor. I should have abstained from those things earlier in my life.

Some researchers argue that animals are killed in pounds anyway. True, but they're put to death in a painless way via injection rather than being subjected to torture and pain in experiments.

Marijuana should be legalized for medicine

To the Editor:

An American Civil Liberties Union-sponsored scientific survey conducted from March 31 through April 5 indicates that 79 percent of U.S. voters believe that it is a "very good" or "somewhat good" idea to "legalize marijuana to relieve pain and for other medical uses if prescribed by a doctor."

Such common sense is not very common in the federal government. Marijuana is a valuable medicine for the treatment of glaucoma, multiple sclerosis and nausea and vomiting associated with AIDS and cancer chemotherapy. Yet, only eight Americans are presently permitted to use marijuana medicinally through an experimental program closed to all new applicants in 1992.

The rest must either suffer or use marijuana illegally and risk arrest.

Many avenues for reform have been exhausted. Recently, the federal government blocked what would have been the first medicinal marijuana research project in more than a decade.

On April 19, the National Institute on Drug Abuse rejected a marijuana request for Federal Drug Administration-approved research to investigate marijuana's effectiveness in treating the AIDS wasting syndrome. (The federal government is the only legal source of marijuana for such research.)

Even the FDA — frequently criticized for taking too long to approve desperately needed medicines — is willing to approve marijuana, pending favorable outcomes of the required research. NIDA's decision to block this research illustrates that the prohibitionist bureaucracies are prepared to do everything possible to prevent the medicinal use of marijuana.

Congress should heed this wake-up call and pass legislation ensuring that patients are not sent to prison for using their medicine.

Promises quickly turn into politics

To the Editor:

It's about time for the Clinton administration to score points by ignoring political expediency and taking a leadership stance. Why isn't the Justice Department, on behalf of the president, actively supporting the Colorado Supreme Court decision that overturned a homophobic and blatantly discriminatory referendum denying equal rights to homosexuals?

Three excuses come to mind:

- Janet Reno is tired of the lesbian rumors surrounding her and won't touch a gay issue with a 10-foot pole.
- Clinton knows gays won't vote for any of the Republican presidential candidates.

What a disappointment Clinton has been. We had so much hope three years ago. Now we've got an administration that is content to muddle through, play politics and hope it wins re-election by default.

Clinton, what if you aren't re-elected? Will you be pleased with the accomplishments of your four-year administration? Will you be able to look Chelsea in the eye and say you did what was best for America — even when that meant being unpopular? Or will you hand her the campaign button most fitting to your record so far: "Vote For Bill, Lesser Of Two Evils"?

I'm 46 and the father of three. You, Clinton, are the first president of my generation. Twenty-five years ago, we all thought we would produce a great leader.

Sad to say — some of us would now just settle for a leader.

Promises, promises quickly turn into politics, politics.

Cruelty not entertaining

To the Editor:

Once again, the circus has come to Iowa City. While circuses can be entertaining for the audience, they are surely not fun for the animals performing the "tricks." Animals used in circuses are forced to perform unnatural and sometimes painful acts.

These acts are no more than demeaning tricks attempting to provide a cheap thrill for humans at the expense of these once-wild animals. The animals are forced to spend most of their lives in small cages used for transport as the animals travel from city to city. They are only allowed out of their cages for short periods of time — when they must practice or perform tricks.

The circus environment is also very different from the animals' natural habitats. The hot summer months can be very difficult for bears, while others — like lions, tigers and elephants — suffer from the cold. Circus animals may be kept in crates, barn stalls and even trucks during the winter off-season. This constant confinement can cause severe psychological and physical problems.

Physical punishment is usually the standard training method for circus animals. During these training sessions, animals suffer from a great amount of stress. Some animals are even drugged to make them more manageable, and others have their teeth removed.

Bears balancing on balls, apes riding bicycles and elephants standing on two legs are animals exhibiting physically uncomfortable and unnatural behavior. The whips, muzzles, electric prods, tight collars and other tools used during circus acts clearly show that animals are being forced to perform.

These performances teach children nothing about how animals behave in their natural habitat. In the circus, the animals' true nature is never seen.

And what happens to the animals after they have outlived their "usefulness"? They are permanently relegated to small winter quarters or sold to zoos, private menageries, game farms

(to be shot) and even research laboratories, where many suffer a fate worse than death. Many — if not all — circus animals end their lives in confinement, coercion, pain and misery.

While circuses can be a good fundraiser for worthy causes, they don't have to involve the exploitation of animals. In Sweden and Denmark, the use of animals in entertainment is restricted or banned. In England, circuses are often denied public space. The elimination of animal exploitation in the circus would simply mean an increased use of human performers for human entertainment — such as clowns, acrobats and magicians. In the United States and Canada, circuses that don't use animals include The Pickle Family Circus, Cirque du Soleil, Nexus Circus, Circus Smirkus and Circus Oz.

By not patronizing circuses that use animals, we can show those who exploit animals that cruelty is not entertaining.

Too proud to get an honest job?

To the Editor:

As I was reading the "Local residents rally against 'Contract'" article in the May 8 issue of The Daily Iowan, I couldn't help but be offended at Alysha Davis' comment when she referred to finding a job: "It would probably be some crap job, like at McDonald's or something."

I'm proud to say that I used to work at McDonald's part-time in Coralville, and I made over minimum wage. That's not a crap job! It's an honest way to make money, which is something Davis should think about doing.

Davis is the type of person who tarnishes the image of welfare recipients everywhere. It's too bad that she isn't willing to get a job to help pay for her personal expenses. A college education — especially one at Georgetown University — costs money, but it is not generally considered a necessity for survival.

Most people I knew when I was in high school — including myself — had some type of part-time job that helped pay for their college education. It developed a sense of responsibility and money management that people without jobs don't seem to have.

I believe that there are honest, hard-working Americans out there who do their best to get off the welfare system, but for certain reasons still require financial assistance to maintain a standard of living. I do not have a problem with my tax money assisting them. As for Davis and those like her — if they are too proud to get an honest job, then I'm too proud to help them out.

Iowa City / Coralville transportation praised

To the Editor:

It seems that lately, whenever I read the public-opinion section of any newspaper, there are always letters complaining of bad service or poor treatment by businesses or companies.

Perhaps this is because those businesses who deal with the public often forget the cardinal rule that the customer is always right. Or, perhaps it is because we have become so impatient and intolerant as a society that we are quick to complain when things don't go our way.

This is a letter of neither complaint nor criticism, but rather one to express my gratitude to the Iowa City / Coralville Transit System for their fast, convenient and friendly service. I have been a customer of the Coralville bus system for three years and have always been treated courteously and with respect.

The buses are always clean and the routes are convenient, especially for those who work at the hospital or downtown. Their ability to maintain an on-time schedule — even during inclement weather — should be applauded. I was especially pleased and even surprised when the buses ran during the flood of 1993.

The systems strive to continually improve their service by adding special routes during busy periods, and have recently acquired a new bus in which it is a real pleasure to ride.

It's unfortunate that more people don't take advantage of the public transportation offered in the Iowa City / Coralville area. It has certainly made my life easier.

Hats off to the Iowa City / Coralville Transit System. Keep up the good work!

Information missing from accounts

To the Editor:

It has been widely reported that a San Francisco man lured a young boy away from home through contact over the America Online computer service.

Media coverage — unfortunately — has played right into the stereotype of gay men as child predators. As it turned out, the "older" gay man in this case was actually another teenage boy. This development has not been widely reported.

Also missing from news accounts has been any serious investigation into this boy's home life. The press was anxious to question how the boy could have been lured from his home by a pedophile, but no one has asked how he could have been driven from his home by homophobic parents. That is, after all, the far more common — and yet, less reported on — situation in the lives of gay youth.

CLINTON

"I'm pleased to see the president has joined the effort to get to a balanced budget. ... It would be very difficult for us to come off our seven-year mark, and I doubt we'd be willing to do that."

Democratic leaders didn't try to hide their opposition.

In a bitter commentary, Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin, ranking

Democrat on appropriations, said, "I think most of us learned some time ago that if you don't like the president's position on a particular issue, you simply need to wait a few weeks."

House Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt said the president had turned Medicare into a political football.

"The real losers will be the elderly and the families that support them," he said.

Gephardt and his Senate counterpart, Tom Daschle of South Dakota, met with Clinton last week in an unsuccessful attempt to persuade him to delay announcing a new budget proposal, government sources said. They argued that Democrats were making political gains by criticizing GOP plans as an assault on the middle class — and it would be a tactical error to put forth specific proposals.

released U.N. hostages crossed into Serbia on Tuesday afternoon, later reaching a hotel about 50 miles northwest of Belgrade. There, British, French and other diplomatic personnel waited to meet them.

Serbs said they had restored full freedom of movement to more than 100 other peacekeepers who had been confined to their facilities for nearly three weeks.

The United Nations initially questioned whether those peacekeepers had actually regained their liberty. However, U.N. officials said late Tuesday that mines and other obstacles to freedom of movement were removed in most cases.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic proclaimed a lessening of tensions.

"We consider this crisis over, and we hope there will be no more crises of this kind," Karadzic said. "We don't want to fight. ... We want peace as soon as possible."

But the Serbs also made clear they would retaliate if the United Nations opted for force — to get aid through Serb-held territory, for example.

"All of us have learned something from this crisis," Karadzic said. "I doubt anyone would or should repeat any hostile action against the Serbs. However, if we are attacked, we have to defend ourselves by all means."

The Serbs took more than 300 peacekeepers hostage after NATO airstrikes against one of their ammunition depots May 25-26. They released most of them earlier.

Bosnian Serb rebel leaders claimed Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic had won assurances that there would be no more NATO airstrikes. Neither NATO nor the United Nations has confirmed that, though U.N. officials have said that more airstrikes were unlikely while hostages were being held.

BIKE RIDE

behind the wheel of the Iowa City Transit bus she's driven for 17 years to participate in the ride, which began May 28.

After a 15-day trek that took the group through the Sierra Nevada, Winder was tired, but enthusiastic about the trip.

"I'm not a strong rider, but determination gets me through a lot," she said. "There were some difficult days, but there were people who helped us along when we needed it."

One of the ride's benefits is the series of minivans driven by 25 volunteers who pick up tired or injured riders at the end of the day, Winder said.

"(The trip to San Francisco) ended up being 20 to 30 miles longer than we expected it to be — and the fog came in, too," Winder said. "Drivers were out until 3 a.m. picking riders up."

Taking time to stop and enjoy the scenery on the bike ride has been the priority for Iowa City resident Meg Baron.

"We're the ones who like to slow down," Baron said. "I'm having a wonderful time. I thought I'd be really sore, but we're not pushing it."

Baron, a teacher at the Iowa Medical Classification Center in Oakdale, said one of the best aspects of the trip has been the opportunity to pitch her own tent each night.

"We're camping as much as possible," she said. "My friend, Pat, and I have a huge tent and cots. We're really making ourselves at home."

As a 17-year veteran of RAG-BRAI, Baron said the cross-country ride offers many views she doesn't have during her treks across Iowa.

"I can see snow-capped mountains through here," she said. "The mountains are beautiful."

The ride through California's mountains offered bikers a taste of winter in June as they held snowball fights on the mountaintops and enjoyed the break from the summer heat, Offenburger said.

The tough 900-mile ride has been exhausting for the bikers, but no one has dropped out or been injured because of the long days.

"We have no riders that have had problems or major accidents," Offenburger said.

NEW PARTY

are not involved in politics organized."

Despite the diversity of ages, professions and political affiliations in the crowd, disgruntled Democrats seemed the majority and Republicans of any type in the extreme minority.

Ed Barker, a member of the Johnson County Republicans central committee, said he doubted a third political party could be a continuously active group on all issues.

"It was interesting," Barker said. "(New Party members) seem like a political organization rather than a full-fledged political party. They won't get a permanent foothold. They might become influential on particular issues as they come up."

Making politicians accountable for their decisions once they reach office is a common problem with the two main political parties, said Iowa City Councilor Karen Kubby. She said a third party might be effective in making politicians more careful when making their decisions.

"If there was a party that would stick by its principles, they could kick some of the elected people in the butt," Kubby said.

Local elections are plagued by low voter turnout, and a locally-based party like the New Party could have the ability to get people involved in Iowa City — where decisions made by local officials have a direct effect on citizens.

"A local organization is more real than an organization on a state or national level," Kubby said. "Local politics affects people on a more immediate level."

Gordon, who led the meeting, had an interesting perspective on American politics due to his Canadian citizenship. Canada has an active three-party political system, and Gordon said having that experience has gotten him interested in the intellectual aspects of politics.

Along with the Canadian model, the New Party took some inspiration from an unexpected source — the ultra-conservative Christian right.

DAVE

"We think that that decision will do nothing but lead to higher ratings for the Letterman show and more success for the folks back at the home office," Engler said.

Birgit Klohs, president of the Right Place Program in Grand Rapids, called the news great.

Mention of Grand Rapids on a nightly basis on Letterman's show has built-in promotional value, said Klohs, who promotes business and industry in the metropolitan area.

"Even if it's whimsical, the city of Grand Rapids and West Michigan has been getting some pretty big national exposure. I think even in New York people are realizing we don't live in tepees here."

The mood was more grim in Sioux City, where city officials and promoters put the "Home Office" in the abandoned and condemned city hall and reserved a parking space for Letterman.

"No matter how many other cities may claim the designation, we'll always be the first since Dave went with CBS," said Bruce Miller, a member of the Sioux City Convention Center, Auditorium and Tourism Board.

"The one regret we have is that Dave never called. Dave never visited. Dave never responded to us," Miller said. "But we'll always remember Dave."

Playoffs approved for new collegiate conference

AUSTIN (AP) — Big 12 chief executive officers on Tuesday approved a football playoff game between the North and South division champions that will bring at least $550,000 to each school in the new league.

During a seven-hour meeting, school presidents and chancellors also agreed to a revenue-sharing formula that allows football powers to keep their gate receipts and rewards schools for first-year NCAA basketball tournament appearances.

The Big 12, comprised of the Big Eight plus former Southwest Conference members Texas, Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Baylor, plans to begin competition in August 1996.

Rose Bowl alliance may be in jeopardy

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Big Ten and the Pac-10, which have maintained their Rose Bowl relationship despite changes in the college bowl landscape, will reexamine the arrangement following the 2000 season.

The conferences, which have a contract with ABC-TV to meet in the Rose Bowl for the next six seasons, have chosen to stay out of the bowl coalition and the newly formed bowl alliance, which begins next season.

Pac-10 commissioner Thomas Hansen said Tuesday that because television contracts with all major bowl games expire following the 2000 season, the top conferences will review their options as that deadline nears.

U.S. advances in World Cup competition

GAVLE, Sweden (AP) — The United States is two wins away from repeating as the champion of women's soccer.

Kristine Lilly scored the two first-half goals, one on a spectacular 35-yard free kick, as the United States routed Japan 4-0 Tuesday and advanced to the semifinals of the Women's World Cup.

Tiffany Milbrett and Tisha Venturini also scored for the United States, unbeaten in the tournament after going 2-0-1 in the first round.

Nation braces for Game 4

DESPITE ONE TITLE...

Rockets playing for respect

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Orlando Magic proved their point by just getting to the NBA Finals. The Houston Rockets arrived carrying heavy baggage and after traveling a much harder road.

After what the Rockets have been through in the last year, it's no wonder they've swept through the finals with such ferocity. What's driving them is the memory of an NBA title that supposedly didn't count and a 32-year-old player who had fallen short every time he had a shot at a championship.

"We are one win away from definitely getting respect," swingman Mario Elie said Tuesday. "If we win the title back-to-back, teams are going to have to respect us."

If the Rockets complete a sweep of Orlando on Wednesday night, they will have done it in the toughest possible way — as a sixth seed and by beating the four best regular-season teams in the league. Three of those teams won 60 games.

"No one's ever done this before," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "If we get this thing closed out, no one's played the 60-win teams, no one's had to come from the sixth spot, no one's won as many road games."

What the series between the veteran Rockets and the youthful Magic has shown more than anything else isn't that you have to pay your dues. It's that the process of paying them makes you stronger.

Now Orlando knows. "We can take something from this," said John Gabriel, the

Knight fined by NCAA

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — The NCAA has reprimanded Bob Knight and fined Indiana University $30,000 for the Hoosier coach's outburst at a post-game news conference during the NCAA tournament in March, athletic director Clarence Doninger said Tuesday night.

Knight, miffed that an NCAA media liaison erroneously said he would not attend the news conference, lashed out at him after the Hoosiers' 65-60 first-round loss to Missouri.

Doninger said the sanctions by the NCAA basketball committee were inappropriate but the university would not appeal.

"Coach Knight is still considering his own administrative and

New Jersey surpasses Philly, 4-2

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New Jersey Devils exorcised the ghosts of a Game 6 failure one year ago and advanced to their first Stanley Cup final Tuesday night with a 4-2 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers.

The organization that Wayne Gretzky once compared to Mickey Mouse won the Eastern Conference final in six games and will play Detroit on Saturday in a best-of-7 series for the NHL title.

"It is so important to get to the next step," New Jersey defenseman Scott Stevens said.

Three times previously New Jersey was a win away from a berth in the finals. The Devils lost Game 7 of the 1988 Wales Conference final Orlando Magic's Dennis Scott pauses before answering a question from the media before the start of practice Tuesday in Houston. The Magic, down 3-0 against the Houston Rockets in the NBA Finals, will play Game 4 Wednesday. The magic lost Game 3 of the finals 106-103, after the Rockets' Robert Horry hit a 3-pointer with under 15 seconds remaining. Orlando missed a desperation 3-pointer at the buzzer.

Olajuwon shadows so-called superstars

It is time to start re-evaluating Hakeem Olajuwon.

It is no longer sufficient to merely compare the Rockets star with today's great centers. He must now be spoken of in the same breath as the all-time greats.

What Olajuwon has accomplished in the post-season in the past two years is phenomenal. Within the next week, the other three great centers in the league, Patrick Ewing, David Robinson and Shaquille O'Neil, will all have fallen victim to Houston's big man.

So after a decade in the NBA, it is time to give Hakeem the Dream his due.

Olajuwon won the MVP last year, but not this year. Still, after watching this year's post-season, it is hard to argue that he is not the best player in the game today.

Robinson? He was this year's MVP winner, but he is no Olajuwon. When it really mattered Olajuwon completely dominated the Spurs big man.

Ewing? While he has been forced to carry the Knicks on his shoulders, he is just not quick enough to match Hakeem. That became obvious in last year's championship series when Ewing was forced to guard Olajuwon one on one.

What about Shaq? Three years down the road, it is hard to imagine how dominating he will be. But he is young, and is still a disciple of Olajuwon's.

OK, so we are agreed that he is the best center in the game.

Drexler adored in Houston

Michelle Koidin

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The lunchtime crowd at Drexler's Bar-B-Q chowed down Tuesday on the usual chicken, beef, ribs, beans and potato salad.

What the growing throngs really hope to see on the menu, though, is an NBA championship ring for the Houston-raised Clyde Drexler.

"It's going to be a sweep, so we wanted to be associated with the winner — Drexler," Jeff Hocking said between bites.

The defending champion Rockets lead the Orlando Magic 3-0 in the best-of-7 series going into tonight's game.

Business has been steady in the 14 years Drexler's mother, Eunice, has been operating the eatery near downtown. But now, since Clyde returned home earlier this year after 11 seasons with the Portland Trail Blazers, all 20 tables are taken before noon.

"A few years ago, you could come in, there'd be maybe three or four tables full and you'd never have to wait in line," said Charles Salat, an electric company manager who frequents the restaurant.

"Once Clyde came to Houston, just Clyde himself brought the crowd in. Now, since the Rockets are in the playoffs, it's phenomenal."

Traffic has picked up by as much as 30 percent since Drexler was traded Feb. 14 for Otis Thorpe, Eunice Drexler estimates.

Years ago, when the restaurant was owned by her brother and called Green's Bar-B-Q, Clyde Drexler worked behind the counter. Now, the 6-foot-7 guard stops by

What about other positions?

Scottie Pippen whines too much, Charles Barkley grumbles too much and Karl Malone loses too much to be compared to Olajuwon.

Yes, it is time to move on and compare him to the greatest in the game's history.

When you talk about great, it is hard not to talk about Wilt Chamberlain. Based on statistics alone, he is far and away the most dominating player in history. Yes, the man averaged 50 points and 25 rebounds one season.

But it is important to remember who the his competition was. The only other great center of the time was Bill Russell. He did not have to compete against players like Ewing, Robinson and O'Neil, not to mention Dikembe Mutombo and Rik Smits. I'll take Olajuwon.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is the only player in history who had a more unstoppable shot than Olajuwon's fade-away: the skyhook. Kareem is the leading scorer in NBA history and won his share of championships.

But remember who Jabbar had feeding the ball to him for much of his career: Magic Johnson. Olajuwon has had Kenny Smith. I give the slight edge to Olajuwon.

What about the Magic man? It is very difficult to compare big men to guards (even if Johnson is about the same height as Olajuwon). As great as Magic was, winning five championships, he had an unbelievable supporting cast to work with (James Worthy, Byron Scott, A.C. Green, Michael Cooper and Kareem).

Finally, we have Michael Jordan. Both players were drafted the same year (Olajuwon #1 and Jordan #3). Let's wait until they are both retired (for good) to compare them.

PRIME TIME PREVIEW

Basketball league starts play Friday

David Schwartz

The Daily Iowan

Just because it's summer doesn't mean there isn't basketball to be played.

The Prime Time Basketball League starts up its ninth season Friday evening and will once again feature current and former Hawkeyes, college players from around the country, high-schoolers and athletes from various other sports.

Play begins at 6:30 p.m. at Iowa City High School.

Eight teams will be featured this season, each one consisting of two high school students and 10 college-level players or above.

The league was started in the mid-1980s by Randy Larsen. However, the Iowa City attorney will do more than just supervise. Larsen will also be player-coach of Team 8, sponsored by Nike.

Among the names you'll encounter are Boston Celtics reserve Acie Earl, three-point specialist Chris Kingsbury and Cedar Rapids native and former Los Angeles Clipper Matt Fish.

For expanded Prime Time rosters, see scoreboard, Page 2B

James Winters, Iowa's MVP for the 1993-94 season, will also be on hand.

For those eager fans unable to wait until fall to see Kent McCausland, a red-shirt on last season's Hawkeye squad, he'll be playing next to Jim Bartels on Team 7.

But you'd better act fast, because McCausland won't be around for the entire season, just for three weeks.

After three weeks of basketball camps, Jess Settles will replace his Hawkeye teammate on the hardwood.

"It's not a guarantee that Jess will play in the fourth week, but we're hoping he will," Larson said. "Until then, Kent McCausland will play on that team."

Larsen said that Jess' oft-injured back has little to do with the junior's three-week absence from the league.

The league will run every Friday, Sunday and Wednesday through July 30, with each team playing 13 regular season games before the playoffs begin July 26.

led the fastbreak, leaving behind the twentysomething Magic players.

"I think he's the guy that's really given them the spirit and the energy to carry team through this whole playoff run," Orlando coach Brian Hill said.

Perhaps if the Magic had been playing another team, one without so much to prove, things would have been different. Now they have a sense of the Rockets' mission, Shaquille O'Neal and his teammates are showing little sign of the exuberance that carried them past Chicago and Indiana.

A deflated-looking O'Neal acknowledged that youth hasn't given Orlando resiliency.

"We haven't played well and I don't think that we have recovered from the first loss," he said, referring to a game in which the Magic led by three with 10 seconds left in regulation.

"That first game, we were explosive and aggressive," point guard Anfernee Hardaway said. "Ever since the second half of that first game, nothing has seemed to go right for us."

To a man, the Magic deny that lack of experience is the main factor in a finals that looks to be much shorter than they figured. They point to poor outside shooting, problems with transition defense and the defensive dilemma posed by Hakeem Olajuwon.

But Orlando's veteran, Horace Grant, sees the look of a champion in Houston's eyes and something else in his team.

"For the younger guys, being down 0-3, they have a tendency to be a little anxious, to play a little tight," he said. "It just comes from being in this situation before."

"I hated to see Hakeem and Clyde get split up."

Bobby Larry said he wanted to treat his four colleagues to lunch at Drexler's during the NBA Finals.

"Since the Rockets are going to win the championship, I thought this was the ultimate time to come," he said.

along with Hakeem Olajuwon made up part of the Phi Slama Jama teams at the University of Houston that went to the NCAA Final Four in the early 1980s.

At least 30 customers stood in line about noon to order from Drexler's simple menu.

Businessmen tucked their ties into their shirts as they devoured the food drenched in barbecue sauce amid the sounds of Clifton Chenier crooning a blues tune from the jukebox.

"It's been crazy," Scott said. "It's been completely packed every day. Everybody's coming in more and more. The phone rings constantly."

"I came here because I have been rooting for him since he was at the University of Houston," said Virginia Dial, 60.

Los Angeles shortstop Jose Offerman looks like he makes the tag on Pittsburgh's Mark Johnson, but umpire Terry Tata saw it differently, and called Johnson safe on the second-inning steal Tuesday.

Braves continue slide

MONTREAL — Rookie Carlos Perez, who leads the National League with a 1.88 earned run average, allowed two runs in seven innings as Montreal routed Atlanta, 11-2.

Perez (6-1), brother of Yankees pitcher Melido Perez and former major leaguer Pascual Perez, matched his career-high with seven strikeouts as he gave up six hits and walked two.

Tony Tarasco, David Segui and Sean Berry each drove in two runs as the Expos won their fourth straight.

Segui, in his first home game with the Expos since he was traded by the New York Mets, went 2-for-2 with three walks and scored twice.

Astros 6, Phillies 5
PHILADELPHIA — Luis Gonzalez' three-run homer highlighted a four-run eighth inning that carried Houston to a 6-5 defeat of Philadelphia on Tuesday night, ending the Astros' six-game losing streak.

The Astros trailed 5-2 and Phillies starter Curt Schilling (4-1) had a three-hitter going into the eighth, but Houston loaded the bases on a walk to Brian Hunter and singles by Craig Biggio and Jeff Bagwell.

Dodgers 5, Pirates 3
PITTSBURGH — Ismael Valdes pitched six-hit ball for seven innings and twice started rallies with singles, leading Los Angeles past Pittsburgh.

Jose Offerman had a two-run triple off Jon Lieber (2-6) in the fourth inning as the Dodgers took a 4-0 lead en route to ending a three-game losing streak. The Pirates' home record dropped to 5-12.

The Dodgers, who finished with 14 hits, led off each of the first six innings with hits, and four of the runners scored as Lieber continued to struggle in Three Rivers Stadium, where he is 0-5 this season. Ten of the 19 Dodgers hitters to face Lieber got hits.

Mets 7, Marlins 3
NEW YORK — Jeff Kent, coming off a 10-game road trip in which he batted .188, had a homer, triple and single and drove in two runs as New York snapped a three-game losing streak by defeating Florida.

Rico Brogna also knocked in a pair of runs with a homer and single to support the pitching of Bret Saberhagen for the Mets.

Giants 8, Cubs 4
CHICAGO — Mike Benjamin had his second straight four-hit game and Mark Portugal pitched seven innings as San Francisco beat Chicago, handing Jaime Navarro his first loss.

The Giants snapped a season-high four-game losing streak, while the Cubs have lost seven of eight, a stretch in which they have managed only 23 runs.

Cardinals 3, Padres 2
ST. LOUIS — Brian Jordan's grounder drove in the winning run in the eighth inning, and Tom Urbani allowed just three hits and a run in seven innings, leading St. Louis over San Diego.

Jordan's grounder drove in Tripp Cromer, who led off the eighth with a single and advanced to third on a one-out single by Todd Zeile.

Tony Fossas (1-0), who got the final out in the top of the eighth inning for the Cardinals, got the victory. Tom Henke pitched a perfect ninth to earn his 13th save in 13 attempts.

Thomas' homer lifts Chicago

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Frank Thomas' homer in the 10th inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 7-6 win Tuesday over the Oakland Athletics, who had tied the game in the ninth on Ruben Sierra's two-run, two-out homer.

Thomas' 11th homer of the season came off Dave Leiper (1-1). It made a winner of Roberto Hernandez (2-3), who blew a save chance in the ninth.

Robin Ventura hit a pair of solo homers as the White Sox broke a four-game losing streak.

Indians 11, Orioles 0
CLEVELAND — Dennis Martinez kept his record perfect, throwing his second shutout in three starts, and Jim Thome and Albert Belle homered as Cleveland won for the 10th time in 11 games.

Playing before 41,927 fans, the largest crowd ever at Jacobs Field, the Indians improved baseball's best record to 32-11. They are off to the best start in team history.

Martinez (6-0) gave up eight hits and walked one.

Yankees 10, Tigers 4
DETROIT — Mike Stanley hit a grand slam and drove in a career-high six runs for New York, with owner George Steinbrenner watching from a seat behind the Yankees' dugout.

The Yankees won for just the fifth time in their last 21 games and ended Detroit's four-game winning streak.

Stanley hit his seventh career grand slam and fourth homer this season to give the Yankees a 4-1 lead in the fourth inning.

Red Sox 11, Blue Jays 7

TORONTO — Reggie Jefferson and John Valentin both homered and drove in four runs as Boston ended its three-game losing streak.

Mike Greenwell, who also homered, was taken off the field in a medical vehicle in the seventh inning after he crashed head first into the left field wall chasing Roberto Alomar's triple.

Valentin, who went 3-for-4 and hit his 11th homer, matched his career-high of 11 home runs.

Brewers 14, Rangers 2
MILWAUKEE — Ricky Bones allowed two hits over seven innings to end Texas' six-game winning streak.

Fernando Vina had three singles and two RBIs, and Jose Valentin had three RBIs as the slumping Brewers took advantage of Rangers right-hander Kevin Gross, who had another miserable outing.

NFL

L.A. threatens move - again

Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Revered by some, reviled by others, Al Davis and his Raiders have stirred as much passion for their play on the field as they have for playing the field in their search for a home.

The chase for the team has raged for 15 years, with California communities alternately pursuing the Raiders or cajoling them to stay put.

Oakland-Alameda County, Irwindale, Sacramento, Los Angeles and Inglewood have either pledged or paid millions of dollars in a sometimes reckless, usually hopeless and always expensive quest for the bad boys of the NFL.

The league itself lost a costly legal battle to keep the team in Oakland in the 1980s and now are offering incentives to convince them to stay in greater Los Angeles and ignore Oakland's latest bid.

The Raiders insist that, far from being crass or opportunistic, they've been victimized as much as anyone in the long, convoluted struggle to find a stadium to their liking.

"I think if you review the situation accurately, a lot of Raider money and effort has been spent, too," said Raiders' executive Al LoCasale.

Perceptions that the team, which cultivates a villainous image, profited at the public's expense are wrong, he added.

"I've never heard that perception, except from members of the media. I've never heard that from anybody in the general public," LoCasale said. "If anybody has been given a difficult route to take in the last 15-20 years, it's been the Raiders."

The Raiders have played at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum since winning the right to move in an antitrust suit and abandoning Oakland in 1982.

But the Raiders are stadium shopping again, citing conditions and lack of luxury suites at the aging L.A. Coliseum.

Davis is considering whether to move the Raiders to a stadium to be built by 1997 at Hollywood Park in Inglewood or returning to Oakland, where the team lived for its first 22 years. Cost estimates are around $250 million.

Damaged by the Northridge quake in January 1994, the L.A. Coliseum underwent $92 million in publicly financed repairs, in time to allow the Raiders and Southern Cal to play there last season.

While it's impossible to detail the thousands of hours of public staff time or expenses devoted to Raiders-related issues, the documented toll remains staggering.

Public entities or their private management groups have spent some $40 million on Raiders-related issues, including $20 million in forfeitures to the team for failing to make good on stadium construction or renovation agreements.

The L.A. Coliseum Commission, anxious to head off a Raiders' departure, allowed the Raiders to play in the coliseum rent-free last season, foregoing revenues of nearly $800,000.

Irwindale was scorched for $10 million when its attempt to lure the Raiders went sour in 1988.

The city, about 20 miles east of Los Angeles, gave the Raiders the money to show good faith and lost the deposit when it failed to deliver a $115 million, 65,000-seat stadium.

"It was a substantial blow to the community," said Irwindale City Manager Dave Caretto, who was not with the city then. "It had a severe financial impact on our redevelopment agency."

You can imagine having to fork over $10 million, plus we had lawsuit costs. As a city, we've become much more careful and cautious. That's a lasting legacy of the Raiders deal."

Oakland, which tried to wrest control of the Raiders through an eminent domain claim, lost the case and at the end of an eight-year battle, was ordered by the 1st District Court of Appeal in 1988 to pay more than $3 million in legal fees.

Oakland paid its own lawyers $1.2 million, which brought its litigation costs in Raiders matters to about $4.5 million.

George Vukasin, president of the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, refused to say how much has been spent in the latest attempt. Negotiations have been under way since last June.

Oakland Deputy City Manager Ezra Rapoport said he knows critics regard the city's dogged pursuit of the Raiders as a waste of time and money.

"I've probably thought that myself at times," he said.

The Raiders have been promised an $85 million modernization of the Oakland Coliseum, including luxury suites. The improvements would be publicly financed, with the bonds repaid largely through ticket sales.

Meanwhile, Inglewood has pledged $35 million in land, cash, and concessions to the Hollywood Park stadium project, according to city manager Paul Eckles. Much of the remaining cost is expected to be financed by bank loans. The Raiders reportedly would be responsible for construction cost overruns.

"It's complicated to pull a project of this scale together," Eckles said. "I think most of the parties are fairly well committed to it, but we're not there yet."

He added that the city has had no problems in dealing with Davis.

"He's a hard-nosed businessman like a lot of other hard-nosed businessmen we deal with," Eckles said. "We're going to try to be hard-nosed people ourselves in the negotiations and make sure we can protect the interest of our taxpayers."

The NFL, anxious to keep at least one team in the nation's second-largest television market since the Rams departure for St. Louis, has promised to give one and possibly two Super Bowls to the Hollywood Park stadium between 2000 and 2006.

In 1989-90, Sacramento, Oakland and Los Angeles waged a three-way battle for the Raiders. Among them, the cities threw $884 million in offers at the Raiders.

Sacramento went so far as to issue bonds totaling $40 million, with the money to be given to the Raiders as a franchise relocation fee. When the Raiders spurned the offer, the money was redirected into construction or renovation of local projects.

Oakland offered stadium improvements, lease concessions and a franchise fee but that too was rejected in favor of the Los Angeles offer, which included dropping a breach of contract suit, forgiveness of a $6.7 million loan and the promise of a $200 million stadium renovation.

Ultimately, the L.A. Coliseum's private managers couldn't deliver on the luxury boxes, and the Coliseum Commission tabled the renovations two years ago after the sale of the premium seating stalled.

Only 1,000 of the 10,000 seats sold, undermining the plan to finance the renovation and leading to the forfeiture of a $10 million construction guarantee and the Raiders' renewed threat to move.
