Distinguished UI alumnus dies of heart attack

The flag atop the Old Capitol will fly at half-staff today in honor of a UI benefactor and historian who raised and lowered the U.S. and Iowa flags for 13 cents a day when he was a UI student in the 1930s.

Homer Calkin, 83, died of a heart attack June 5 at his home in Arlington, Va. He retired in 1977 as deputy director of the research and reference division of the U.S. State Department historian's office.

A native of Clearfield, Iowa, Calkin was a 1935 graduate of the UI, where he also received a master's degree and doctorate in British history. He was a supporter of the UI Foundation for nearly 40 years.

Calkin returned to the UI in 1976 and assisted with the dedication of the restored Old Capitol. He raised the U.S. and Iowa flags at the ceremony — the same task he performed as a student.

Dr. Lakshmanan Sathyavagiswaran told jurors the exact time Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman died may never be known. The coroner said the deaths occurred between 9 p.m. on June 12 and 12:45 a.m., but said it would be medically impossible to be much more specific.

Court will be abbreviated Thursday so a juror, a 60-year-old gas company worker, can have her hip examined.

UIHC to slash 170 jobs

Nursing department will sustain half of intended cuts

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Hundreds of job eliminations will occur over the next four years at UI Hospitals and Clinics, but UIHC officials say no layoffs for current employees are planned.

UIHC Information Director Dean Borg said the elimination of 170 jobs is part of a program started last year called "Managing Value," which was designed to increase efficiency by expanding staff in growing areas while eliminating it in others.

In addition to the 170 jobs being eliminated, 34 other jobs will be reclassified to lower grades, Borg said. Cost-cutting efforts in all areas of the UIHC — including the staffing cuts and supply cost cuts — have saved the hospital $18 million, he said. The four-year program calls for $60 million in total cuts, Borg said.

"We have not had any layoffs and that is our goal," he said. "We're putting people where the need is as the need in health-care delivery changes."

Borg said there has been a decrease in UIHC stays and the number of days patients remain at UIHC. He also said there is a growing shift toward outpatient care and managed health care, which involves hospitals contracting health care to private businesses.

"Outpatient care has changed the patterns in which health care is delivered," Borg said. "For example, a heart patient comes into the hospital the night before for tests, then goes to a hotel and doesn't even come back until the morning of the surgery."

To accomplish the cuts without layoffs, many UIHC positions will not be refilled when employees retire or leave the UI, Borg said. To cut other jobs, employees will be reassigned to different positions.

Borg said he could not comment on whether the reassigned positions would result in decreased salaries.

When the job cuts were first announced last March, a number of union organizations expressed interest in representing the nursing staff. Half of the jobs being eliminated are in the nursing department, Borg said.

The president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 12, Steve O'Donnell, said his organization — as well as the Minnesota See UIHC, Page 8A

Brian Yagel, a UI senior majoring in journalism, while putting off work Wednesday evening. "I sipped a beer and enjoyed the ambiance of the beer garden at Fitzpatrick's, 525 S. Gilbert St., had work to do, but I couldn't do it inside," Yagel said.

Revelers animate beer garden scape

When the mercury rises, Iowa City residents thirsty for liquor and good conversation flock to the local beer gardens, where anything but flowers and vegetables bloom.

On any given night, tables, chairs and pitchers of cold beer can be found littered on the flagstones surrounding several area bars.

Fitzpatrick's, 525 S. Gilbert St.; Chauncey's, 210 S. Dubuque St.; and Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., all provide outside seating for people who want to take in the night air while they drain their glasses.

Alicia Price, manager of Chauncey's, said the bar's beer garden has been in operation for three years — each of them a success.

"We have a prime downtown location," she said. "This is the only place with an outside patio. We've been so busy, we've had to bring out extra chairs from the hotel."

One of the attractions is the live music of the Friday Night Concert Series, which is every Friday evening from 6-9 p.m. Bands playing by the fountain usually draw a large crowd of music and beer lovers to the outside part of the bar, Price said.

Gabe's uses another tactic to draw a crowd: cheap drinks. Gabe's bartender Ginger Walsh said the beer garden is open all day — every day — from 4 p.m. to 2 a.m.

"We're usually busier during the summertime," she said. "Although the normal nights — Thursday, Friday and Saturday — are always busy."

Iowa City resident Justin Tinkle said he frequents the beer garden at Gabe's twice a week, even though he doesn't drink alcohol.

"I'll hang out there after the bands play and talk with them," he said. "Gabe's has the best beer garden."

THREE-WEEK PERIOD APPROVED

UI unveils new summer sessions

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

UI students who think spending eight weeks in summer school takes too much time away from fun in the sun will have the option of taking shorter sessions next year.

The Iowa state Board of Regents recently approved a UI decision to offer three different sessions next summer, including the traditional eight-week session, a six-week session and a three-week session to be held in May.

The changes are in response to requests by UI students and faculty, said UI associate provost John Folkins.

"We are going to start the eight-week summer session a week earlier," Folkins said. "Many felt that the break in August wasn't long enough — people wanted more time for vacation."

Because the earlier eight-week semester will conflict with local community school districts' schedules, the UI will also offer a six-week session — with courses targeted toward high-school students and educators.

But the biggest change will be the three-week May session.

"The session is for students who want to take more course work in the summer, or take a class and then go home," Folkins said. "Students will take just one class — for three or four hours a day."

The total number of classroom hours for a course would be the same, but the format has its own particularities.

"There are some courses that "I prefer the eight-week session. Sure, you can crank through a textbook in three weeks, but I think there is a certain amount of time needed to assimilate information."

UI student Terry Braun

lend themselves to the three-week format, such as discussion-intensive courses," Folkins said. "However, it would be difficult to offer lab courses or classes that require daily problem-solving."

Tuition will continue to be charged according to the total number of semester hours taken, and students can take up to 12 hours over the summer. Students will be able to register for both the May and summer sessions at the same time.

Although the three-week program's enrollment is likely to start low, Folkins said it may improve over time.

"I'm not yet aware of which courses will be offered next year; it depends on the demand," he said. "If it does make an impact, it will take a long time."

Tavern owners maintain liquor law needs revision

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa law requiring bars to pay a special insurance rate before being issued a liquor license may save owners some hassle in case of an accident, but the "dramshop" law needs some revamping, some local bar workers say. Under the dramshop law, bar owners are liable if their bar serves liquor to a person who is already intoxicated and that person gets into an accident causing injury or damage.

One-Eyed Jake's, 18-20 S. Clinton St., is being sued by the Muller family of Brooklyn, Iowa, after they were hit on Interstate 80 by a driver who was allegedly drinking at Jake's last fall.

Jake's owner, Mike Porter, said the law needs revision.

Money

Students go to great lengths for quick buck

Lisa Blaney

The Daily Iowan

Between the ever-increasing costs of living and tuition, many students are left with no spare change, but — in moments of need — they have managed to find activities to swing some extra cash.

When the going gets rough, aluminum cans can always be turned in for a five cent deposit per can.

In a moment of desperation, UI senior Charlie Gehring went to work collecting cans after a fraternity party. In two hours, he managed to fill six trash bags, and Gehring returned them for close to $50. However, it is not one of his favorite memories.

"It was gross," he said. "Now that I don't need the money I can't imagine doing it again. It was a one-shot deal."

Various research experiments conducted by the UI are another popular tactic students employ to increase their cash flow. Projects range from writing in journals to using experimental drugs.

One UI student attempted to do a dermatology experiment that paid $500 for using experimental medication.

"I went in for the initial screening," he said. "You had to have a certain amount of white-capped zits to get the job. I was two zits short so they gave me a week to get the other two. I took pepperoni off of pizzas and smeared the oil on my face. I put Vaseline and Carmex all over and slept with a nylon on my head — all in attempt to get the two zits. When I went back a week later, I was still short and didn't get the job."

Other students have been more successful. UI senior John Ridder made an easy $16 an hour by participating in a project during which he played computer games. A week-end in the park for an allergy study left UI senior Don Shumate $225 richer.

But not all experiments are fun and games. Shumate also participated in a grain-dust study for $250. After breathing in dust, a small piece of his lung was removed for study. He said the experience is one he doesn't care to repeat.

Another UI senior, Sharon Falasco, just signed up for her first experiment. For $10 an hour, she

"I need money bad. If the experiment isn't bad, I'll do it again."

UI senior Sharon Falasco

will participate in an asthma study in which an asthma attack is induced and then a drug administered to record its effects.

"I need money bad," she said. "If the experiment isn't bad, I'll do it again."

Falasco also recently made a trip to the Gilbert Street Pawn Co., 319

S. Gilbert St., to pawn her mountain bike. Students come in every day, manager Kevin Bigger said. The items are held for a 30-day period in which students can buy back their belongings.

"Students are always looking for cash. TVs and VCRs give them a quick $50 or $100," Bigger said.

For those who have a little extra time on their hands, the option of donating plasma is always available. A trip to the plasma center involves giving blood that is spun to separate the plasma from the red blood cells. The red blood cells are then returned to the donor's blood stream.

There are no risks involved and the plasma is used in dozens of procedures ranging from burn treatment to heart transplants. Most donors are unaware that donating is a humanitarian thing to do.

UI students are 80 percent of the donors at Sera-Tec Biologicals Center, 408 S. Gilbert St., said manager Chris Dorman.

"Students have the time," she said. "They can study while they donate and they need the money. They also get the satisfaction that they are helping others."

UI senior Amy Owens is a donor. "When I need money, I need money," she said. "It's no big deal. It doesn't hurt at all."

But for those who can't stand the sight of blood, selling back CDs is a painless option.

UI students are regular clients at the Record Collector, 4 1/2 S. Linn St., manager Brad Meister said.

"Every day, many students come in to sell back their old CDs," he said. "We give $3 to $5 for each one."

Lorena Bobbitt accused of failing to pay bill

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Lorena Bobbitt is due back in court next week, this time in a fight with an auto body shop.

The shop claims in a lawsuit that Bobbitt failed to pay a $920.61 bill to repair front-end damage to her white 1991 Mercury Capri convertible.

An insurance check to cover repairs was made out to both Bobbitt and the body shop. The lawsuit said she forged the second signature and cashed the check.

Her lawyer, Elden Sodowsky, said the dispute was a misunderstanding and the bill has since been paid.

Both sides said the lawsuit will likely be settled before a June 23 trial. That's two years to the date since Bobbitt cut off her husband's penis with a kitchen knife.

Bobbitt, 26, was found innocent but insane in the attack on John Wayne Bobbitt as he slept. John

Imprisoned rapper defaults on lawsuit for shooting cop

ATLANTA (AP) — Tupac Shakur failed to respond to a lawsuit filed by a police officer he allegedly shot and must pay him damages, a judge has ruled.

The rapper and actor, who is behind bars in New York, had 20 days to respond to the April 4 lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge Clarence Cooper ruled Monday that Shakur was properly served with the suit and defaulted. A hearing to determine the amount of damages wasn't immediately scheduled.

Clayton County police Officer Mark Whitwell and his brother, who is also a police officer, were off duty with their wives and crossing a street in downtown Atlanta when they were almost struck by two cars. The suit claims they got into an argument with the occupants of the cars — including Shakur — and were hit by gunfire.

Shakur, 23, was charged, but Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton declined to prosecute. Whitwell sued Shakur for medical costs and lost wages. He didn't specify an amount.

British royal decides to hang up clubs

LONDON (AP) — Sir Denis Thatcher has given up one of his loves: golf.

"It's arthritis — old age," said the 80-year-old husband of former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. "I've had physiotherapy but it doesn't work."

Sir Denis's passion for golf was made famous in Private Eye magazine's fictional Dear Bill letters. The spoof letters are from him to Lord Bill Deedes — his close friend, golfing partner and former editor of The Daily Telegraph.

Country music benefit to raise money for presidential candidate

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mr. Guitar will be pickin' and Lamar Alexander will be grinnin' on tonight.

Chet Atkins will join Crystal Gayle, Lisa Stewart and other country singers for a picnic at the outdoor Starwood Amphitheater to raise money for the Republican presidential candidate.

At $250 a ticket, Alexander hoped to raise about $1 million.

Princess Diana's son to attend prestigious boarding school

LONDON (AP) — Prince William will board at the exclusive Eton College just across from grandma's place.

The 12-year-old son of Prince Charles and Princess Diana passed the entrance exams recently and will start school at Eton in the fall, said a spokesman for St. James's Palace, Charles' London home.

Diana's father and brother attended Eton, 25 miles west of London. The school is opposite Windsor, the favorite weekend home of Queen Elizabeth II.

"Prince William will be a 13-year-old schoolboy when he starts at Eton. We hope that the media will respect his right to continue his education without intrusion," a palace spokesman said Wednesday.

Eton was founded by King Henry VI in 1440. William is the first future British monarch to attend.

UI staff members awarded for excellence

These people, along with nine others who have made outstanding contributions to the UI, will receive either a Staff Excellence or an Iowa State Board of Regents award during the August commencement ceremony.

The UI Staff Council sponsors the awards to increase the community's awareness about UI staff workers and honor staff who go beyond normal duties. A 12-member committee composed of council members reviewed dozens of staff members, who were nominated by their coworkers.

Although many of the 12 recipients had already won numerous awards, Belgium said this award carries a special meaning.

The annual UI Staff Excellence Awards recognize six staff members who have made significant contributions to the UI's goals through outstanding performance. The winners are:

Katherine Belgium — Executive Law Librarian, Law Library
Bonnie Bender — Secretary, Rhetoric Department
Mary Kundert — Pharmacy Technician, Ambulatory Care Services
Dinette Myers — Secretary, Campus Programs and Student Activities
Mary Peterson — Associate Director, Campus Programs and Student Activities
Sandra Schultdt — Program Associate, College of Medicine

The Iowa State Board of Regents Awards annually recognize staff at the three regents university for outstanding accomplishments and contributions to the institutions as well as the state of Iowa. The winners from the UI are:

Gerene Denning — Assistant Research Scientist, Internal Medicine
Nancy Williams — Executive Assistant, Office of the Vice President for Health Sciences
Richard Potter — Program Associate, Medical Scientist Training
M. Celine Hartwig — Program Coordinator, Education Program, Department of Resident Services
Marilyn Holland — Director, Radiology Technology Program, Department of Radiology
Brenda Moore — Advanced Practice Nurse, Child Health Specialty Clinics

"I was very pleased to win the award, particularly when I realized it came from the staff," she said. "It's an honor to know they hold me in such high regard."

The winners came from departments all over the UI, and Billie Townsend, a member of the selection committee, said she was very impressed with the recipients.

"It's wonderful to know we have so many people on campus doing so many unusual and great things," she said. "They really have been doing wonderful things for the students."

Two women from UI Campus Programs and Student Activities, the only department from which two winners were drawn, have provided outstanding professional and personal assistance to the UI student body, said Sylvia de Salme, administrative assistant for the office. The organization oversees student programs and the greek community and helps students on a personal basis.

Peterson, winner of the Staff Excellence award, travels the country to speak on motivation, for which she has received national recognition.

She also helped found Sigma Lambda Gamma, the first Latina sorority, and Sigma Lambda Beta, the first Latino fraternity, in the nation.

And when the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity nearly burned to the ground in January 1994, Peterson sprang into action, providing accommodations, food and clothing for dozens of displaced students.

"If Mary Peterson were to leave the University of Iowa, it would take two people to replace her," said leadership study associate Professor Robert Engel. "And they would have to be an unusual two people."

Dinette Myers, also a Staff Excellence award winner, is a secretary in Campus Programs. She was chosen for her hard work and her ability to stay calm "in crisis situations."

"A student will come in the office really excited and worried, and Dinette will calm her down," de Salme said. "She has received many awards for outstanding service, volunteers her time in the Student Disability Services office and took personal vacation to serve as executive secretary for a professional organization."

Construction error leads to oxygen lapse in hospital

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — Someone closed the wrong valve on a hospital's oxygen line, cutting off some patients' oxygen supply for 10 to 15 minutes and leaving one woman in critical condition today.

The 55-year-old patient, whose name was withheld at her family's request, was among 56 patients at Holmes Regional Medical Center whose supplementary oxygen supply was interrupted early Monday.

"At this point, her prognosis is not good," Valerie Davis, a Holmes spokeswoman, said today. "We don't necessarily anticipate a recovery, but it's too early to tell."

Nurses alerted by an oxygen pressure alarm immediately distributed portable oxygen units, but the woman went into cardiopulmonary arrest, said Mike Means, Holmes chief executive officer.

The other patients suffered no adverse effects, Means said Tuesday.

Staff members had planned to shut off oxygen only to the hospital's east wing early Monday during a routine construction project. Instead, a valve was closed that shut off oxygen to the east and west wings, hospital officials said.

Military homosexual guidelines upheld by U.S. District Court

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — The "don't ask, don't tell" policy on gays in the military is an appropriate and constitutional attempt to preserve military readiness, a federal judge ruled.

U.S. District Court Judge Claude M. Hilton ruled the Clinton administration policy does not violate service members' free speech or equal protection guarantees. Hilton threw out the case of a homosexual who is being forced out of the Navy.

Lt. Paul Thomasson's lawsuit said the policy is based on prejudice and cited his sterling service record as evidence his sexuality has no effect on his fitness as an officer.

"The policy, however, is not based on prejudice but on the military's need to address the legitimate concern that service by homosexuals in the military will adversely impact upon unit cohesion and military readiness," Hilton wrote.

The ruling Friday is at odds with a New York federal judge's ruling in March that the policy is unconstitutional. In both cases, service members declared their homosexuality and asked the courts to bar their ouster.

Both cases are under appeal and one or the other is expected to reach the U.S. Supreme Court.

Testimony fails to set murder times

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The exact time Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman died may never be known, a coroner told jurors Wednesday. His broad 3-hour, 45-minute time range was unsuccessful in undermining O.J. Simpson's alibi.

The testimony of Dr. Lakshmanan Sathyavagiswaran dragged into an eighth day with no end in sight as prosecutor Brian Kelberg tried to anticipate every possible avenue of defense attack.

When Sathyavagiswaran said neither he nor any other coroner could fix an exact time of death, Kelberg led him into a lengthy dissertation on how time of death is established, the complications of taking a corpse's liver temperature and the differences between algor mortis — which is body cooling — and rigor mortis, or body stiffening.

Using the liver temperatures and other medical factors, the coroner estimated Brown Simpson and Goldman died between 9 p.m. on June 12 and 12:45 a.m. on June 13.

Those times are so imprecise that they include times when the slashed victims were known to be "One has to worry about losing the jury in all this minutia."

Stan Goldman, Loyola University law professor still alive.

"We can only give an estimated range," Sathyavagiswaran said. "We cannot give any precision."

The coroner explained, however, that the range could be narrowed by taking into account such non-medical factors as the time the bodies were found — just after midnight; a phone bill showing Brown Simpson's last conversation with her mother at 9:35 p.m. June 12; and witness statements that Goldman left work at 9:50 p.m.

Prosecutors contend the murders were committed about 10:15 p.m., basing their theory on a wailing dog heard by Brown Simpson's neighbors. The defense contends the deaths could have occurred much later, perhaps while Simpson was en route to the airport for a red-eye flight to Chicago. He left his estate in a limo about 11:15 p.m.

"Everybody knows it's an important issue in this case," Loyola University law professor Stan Goldman said. "The more general the time line, the better for the defense. ... By 11, O.J. Simpson has an alibi."

Goldman said the elaborate details pursued by Kelberg may be boring and confusing the jury.

"One has to worry about losing the jury in all this minutia," Goldman said.

Jurors were attentive at the start of the day, studying charts flashed on a 7-foot-high screen.

They took a few notes on the time of death testimony but appeared to lose interest when the questioning drifted into the details of temperature measurement.

At one point, Kelberg read aloud excerpts from a medical textbook on time of death in which a team of German and British scientists concluded, "accuracy remains beyond our grasp."

"The opinion of any doctor who offers a specific time of death must be viewed with suspicion," the text said.

Defense attorney Robert Shapiro objected to the reading, but the judge allowed it. Sathyavagiswaran said he had referred to the text in forming his opinion.

Kelberg, who had promised to conclude his direct examination of Sathyavagiswaran Wednesday morning, apologized to the judge for continuing into the afternoon but suggested the time of death was too important a point to rush.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito gently chided Kelberg, saying, "We spent a lot of time on relative minutia. I just want to express my concern about undue consumption of time."

Kelberg then brought out a pile of charts on the features of algor mortis.

"The prosecution is intentionally doing this," Goldman said. "They want to cover every imaginable detail. It's been their desire to be preemptive. ... Almost their entire direct examination is a defense-driven approach."

Simpson's attorneys have mounted a defense based on police sloppiness and conspiracy to frame their client. Among other things, they have criticized police for failing to summon the coroner to the murder scene immediately after the bodies were found.

Another focus of defense attack will likely center on Dr. Irwin Golden, Sathyavagiswaran's deputy who performed the mistake-riddled autopsies on Brown Simpson and Goldman.

Prosecutors have decided not to call Golden to the stand. But through the coroner, they have outlined dozens of mistakes by Golden. Simpson's attorneys have said they will call him to the stand during their case.

Golden's only appearance at the trial came Tuesday, when Kelberg showed jurors a videotape of the deputy coroner being pursued across a parking lot by ABC News journalist Sam Donaldson.

Kelberg told the judge that section of tape, in which Donaldson could be heard pressing Golden about reports he had brandished a gun at the coroner's office after his appearance at Simpson's preliminary hearing last summer, was shown by mistake.

The judge had earlier ruled the gun incident irrelevant and inadmissible at the trial, and after brief arguments Wednesday he upheld himself — despite Shapiro's argument that prosecutors had opened the door to questions about Golden and the gun.

WASHINGTON — Americans may find it harder to see raunchy movies on television, view nude pictures on their computers and talk dirty over the Internet under plans either adopted or being contemplated by the Senate.

As a bill overhauling the nation's telecommunications laws moved toward final passage Wednesday, senators were looking to add provisions aimed at restricting children's ability to access indecent or pornographic material on television and computers.

In addition to the anti-smut measures, senators were to consider an amendment tempering the cable deregulation provisions in the bill — the most sweeping rewrite of telecommunications law since the 1930s.

The bill would let local telephone, long-distance and cable companies intervene into each other's businesses and free the biggest electric utilities to provide an array of telecommunications services.

As currently written, the bill also would substantially deregulate cable television rates.

The bill would lift longstanding limits on how many TV and radio stations one company may own nationally and would remove an 83-year-old restriction on foreign ownership of telecommunications companies as long as other countries remove theirs.

The anti-smut provisions that have been added to the bill represent the most aggressive effort by the Senate to combat smut on television and computer services in years.

In addition, the lawmakers were considering a number of other proposals, including amendments that would:

- require on-line computer services to restrict children's access to so-called indecent materials like chat lines or photos by requiring users to verify their age with a personal identification number.
- require cable operators to keep indecent programs off the "basic" tier — the lowest level of service all subscribers must buy in order to get any other level of cable service.

Suspected accomplice found unrelated to bombing

Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After a nationwide manhunt, agents investigating the Oklahoma City bombing have found the man they believe is John Doe No. 2 but have concluded he wasn't involved, the Justice Department said Wednesday.

The FBI is still trying to determine if a second man helped rent a truck believed to have carried the bomb.

Federal officials, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said the man who resembles the three John Doe No. 2 sketches is Army Pfc. Todd Bunting of Fort Riley, Kan.

A terse Justice Department statement, which did not give that name, said the man interviewed by the FBI "resembles the sketch previously circulated as the second of two men who rented the truck on April 17 and who had been called John Doe No. 2."

This man "was in Elliott's Body Shop in Junction City, Kan., on a day other than the day (April 17) that the truck that contained the explosive that damaged the Murrah building was rented," the department said.

"The bureau has determined that the individual who has been interviewed was not connected with the bombing," it added.

The Justice Department said the FBI "is continuing to investigate whether there was a second man who participated in the rental of the Ryder truck on April 17."

Officials said the statement left open the possibility that the chief defendant in the case, Timothy McVeigh, was accompanied by another man — of whatever description — on the day he rented the truck.

The Florence, S.C., Morning News, which first reported that Bunting, 23, was believed to be the man depicted in the sketches of John Doe No. 2, said he is heavy set with dark hair and a tattoo on his upper left arm. Those elements are in the FBI's description of Doe No. 2.

Citing Bunting's wife, Denise, and two federal sources, the Florence paper reported that Bunting returned a truck to the Ryder rental office the day before McVeigh's appearance there and was mistakenly associated with McVeigh when descriptions of another possible suspect were given to the FBI.

When asked the real identity of the man referred to as John Doe No. 2, a law enforcement official pointed out the Florence newspaper story. A second official said the man is an Army private at Fort Riley, Kan.

Stephen Jones, attorney for McVeigh, the chief defendant in the case, said the elimination of Doe No. 2 as a suspect would strengthen his defense.

"If they have decided John Doe No. 2 is innocent, what does that say about the witnesses that claim to have seen him with John Doe No. 1, my client?" Jones asked. "Obviously, either the witnesses or the government are confused or perhaps both."

In the eight weeks that Doe No. 2 has been hunted nationwide, he has been variously considered an AWOL soldier in California, a drifter in a Missouri motel, an Arizona fugitive and numerous others stopped because of resemblance or coincidence.

Some were held briefly until authorities concluded they were not the person depicted in three FBI sketches based largely on the Ryder rental agent's description.

But until June 1, John Doe No. 2 was always publicly described by officials as a conspirator in the worst act of terrorism on U.S. soil.

At a news conference that day, Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick raised the possibility that Doe No. 2 may not have participated actively in the April 19 bombing.

At the end of the investigation, she said, "We will know who John Doe No. 2 is (and) whether he was a participant in this event."

Gorelick spoke a week after FBI agents began interviewing Denise

Bunting in South Carolina on May 24 and Todd Bunting at Fort Riley on May 25, the Florence paper reported. Denise Bunting lives in Timmonsville, S.C., and her husband also lived in South Carolina before he was stationed at Fort Riley.

The paper quoted Denise Bunting as saying the FBI "told Todd that the person who gave them the description (of John Doe No. 2), that he or she might have gotten confused and that it turned out to be a mistake, that he (Todd) had nothing to do with it."

McVeigh, 27, and Terry Nichols, 40, are the only ones charged in the bombing. They are being held without bail under a federal anti-terrorism law that could bring them the death penalty.

BILL MAY AFFECT CABLE

Lawmakers consider anti-smut measures

Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans may find it harder to see raunchy movies on television, view nude pictures on their computers and talk dirty over the Internet under plans either adopted or being contemplated by the Senate.

As a bill overhauling the nation's telecommunications laws moved toward final passage Wednesday, senators were looking to add provisions aimed at restricting children's ability to access indecent or pornographic material on television and computers.

In addition to the anti-smut measures, senators were to consider an amendment tempering the cable deregulation provisions in the bill — the most sweeping rewrite of telecommunications law since the 1930s.

The bill would let local telephone, long-distance and cable companies intervene into each other's businesses and free the biggest electric utilities to provide an array of telecommunications services.

As currently written, the bill also would substantially deregulate cable television rates.

The bill would lift longstanding limits on how many TV and radio stations one company may own nationally and would remove an 83-year-old restriction on foreign ownership of telecommunications companies as long as other countries remove theirs.

The anti-smut provisions that have been added to the bill represent the most aggressive effort by the Senate to combat smut on television and computer services in years.

In addition, the lawmakers were considering a number of other proposals, including amendments that would:

- require on-line computer services to restrict children's access to so-called indecent materials like chat lines or photos by requiring users to verify their age with a personal identification number.

- require cable operators to keep indecent programs off the "basic" tier — the lowest level of service all subscribers must buy in order to get any other level of cable service.

Many amendments had been filed to restrict the electronic dissemination of smut, said Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., author of the bill. But he said in an interview that he believed only a handful would be debated.

"The subject is very much on senators' minds and the public's mind," Pressler said.

While sympathetic to parents who may want to control their children's exposure to indecent images on television and on computers, Pressler said he is no advocate of government intervention in this area.

"It is dangerous for the government to get into the regulatory business," he said.

The bill already contains a controversial provision that would ban indecent and obscene materials on computer services and the Internet global computer network.

It has been the subject of intense negotiations among senators who either want to weaken or toughen it.

Citing potential First Amendment violations and privacy invasions, the provision is opposed by the Clinton administration, the American Civil Liberties Union and computer user groups.

Computer groups say the proposals to restrict smut are too broad.

"They dumb down the content of the entire media to make it acceptable to children," said William Godwin, staff counsel to the Electronic Frontier Foundation, a civil liberties group for computer users.

Unlike television, which carries programs into people's homes whether they want them or not, computer users choose to bring information into their homes by plucking things from vast streams of data.

The computer — Godwin said — requires a different, less restrictive way of handling smut.

"The Senate has gotten into a panicky frenzy about computer communications," Godwin said. "The problem is many of the people who have crafted these provisions have never logged on."

Indecent speech, unlike obscenity, is protected under the First Amendment. But courts have permitted indecent speech to be regulated to protect the interests of children.

Blues diva to scorch local stage

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Staking claim to the title "Queen of the Blues" takes some guts. But few would argue Her Highness — veteran blueswoman Koko Taylor — is anything but gutsy through and through.

Tonight, Iowa City will get a taste of Taylor's Chicago-style blues as she and her band, The Blues Machine, take the stage at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington.

And even after 30 years in the Blues biz, coming out with such self-congratulating album titles as Queen of the Blues, I Got What it Takes, The Earthshaker and her latest, Force of Nature, her reign is supreme. After all, she's outlived peers Willie Dixon (who wrote her first hit "Wang Dang Doodle"), Albert Collins, Albert King and a host of others. She has won 14 W.C. Handy Awards while

Not only is Taylor a force of nature; she's a force to be reckoned with on her latest album, Force of Nature. Bursting forth in her powerful, growling voice, Taylor's delivery is sexy and confident throughout the album. From the horn-heavy Las Vegas style of "If I Can't Be First" and "Fish in Dirty Water," to the bumping and grinding "63 Year Old Mama" and "Mother Nature," Force of Nature — released on Alligator in 1993 —

Koko Taylor, winner of 14 W.C. Handy Awards, will play to a sold-out crowd tonight at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St. Taylor has been a mainstay on the male-dominated blues scene for 30 years.

also demonstrates Taylor's talent for transforming pentatonic scales into screaming manifestos. Characteristic guts in place, Taylor sounds more like Willa Mae "Big Mama" Thornton than Elvis Presley performing her own funky version of the ubiquitous "Hound Dog," which she dedicates to the late performers.

However, Taylor's true power cannot be conveyed on disc. Those who have seen Taylor on stage know her as a virtual hurricane of sound who isn't afraid to get down and dirty at the mike for a couple hours. While Taylor's gutsiness may be shining through on most of her efforts, for no holds-barred, balls-to-the-walls blues, nothing can beat the "Queen of the Blues" in the flesh.

Koko Taylor will be performing live at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., tonight. Tickets for the event are sold out.

Robotic cast clouds flashy 'Mnemonic'

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan

Believe it or not, "Johnny Mnemonic" is something of a landmark film — certainly not because it's a groundbreaking piece of cinema, but because it marks a number of firsts.

It marks director and avant-garde auteur Robert Longo's first feature film and science-fiction author William Gibson's first foray into Hollywood screenwriting. It is arguably the first true "cyberpunk" film. And perhaps it's the first movie in which leading man Keanu Reeves is not singularly annoying.

That's not to say Reeves has suddenly blossomed into a fine actor capable of subtlety, grace and a wide emotional range. Rather, the film's characters are so robotic that none of the traits are a prerequisite for acting in "Johnny Mnemonic," and the lead role is perfect for Reeves.

"Johnny Mnemonic" is a future world on-screen is characteristic of a Gibson setting on paper. Corporations are omnipotent, information is priceless and living is dangerous for those involved with any of the above. The near-ubiquity of mind- and body-enhancing technology has generated "Nerve Attenuation Syndrome" — a disease that threatens to wipe out humanity — and a band of rebels called LoTeks are fighting it.

"Johnny Mnemonic" is a plotline could be the genetically-enhanced spawn of "The Fugitive," "Blade Runner" and "Smokey and the Bandit." Johnny is a mnemonic courier — one of a rather masochistic bunch — who opted to have his brain partially carved out to make room for hundreds of gigabytes of digital storage space. During an age in which information is the key to ruling the world, mnemonic couriers are human carrier pigeons entrusted with information that would be insecure in any other channel.

After Johnny assumes a routine assignment at the beginning of "Johnny Mnemonic," he discovers the assignment requires him to carry twice as much information as he can safely store, which may lead to death. Also, someone is adamant that he never deliver his goods.

As if that wasn't enough to overcome, the code to unlock the data in Johnny's head is split into two pieces, which are each held by different people. And if he doesn't download the information within 24 hours, he's dead.

The next two hours are a deluge of fight sequences and chase scenes fused together with impressive computer graphics that prove an action flick can be sophisticated without being clichéd or excessively gory. Henry Rollins, Ice-T and Dolph Lundgren add unnecessary star power to the film, but their unique talents throw some color into the film's numerous dark corners.

Thanks to genetic augmentation that makes them tougher than the men, the few female characters in the film — including leading lady Jane (Dina Meyer) — are the ones throwing many of the punches.

However, the women show little emotion while they beat the hell out of each other. Similarly, Reeves' only possible Oscar clipping-moment is a pitiful scene in which he whines, "I want room service!" Gibson's characters are so devoid of any human traits that Longo might have better spent Reeves' fee on a computer simulation of the entire cast. "Blade Runner" captured the moral ambiguity and dark spirit of cyberpunk a decade ago but without the Gibsonian touches that many believe define the genre. With Gibson by his side and '90s special effects at his disposal, Longo had the opportunity to do it right this time. Instead, he crafted a film as lacking in substance as Reeves' flat character, Johnny.

With so many missed opportunities for character development — and general neglect to mention the dehumanizing effects of technology — "Johnny Mnemonic" fails to be anything but a flashy action film. Considering the talent of its creators — what a shame.

"Johnny Mnemonic" is showing at the Coral IV Theatre through this weekend.

Johnny Mnemonic: Music From the Motion Picture
Various Artists

More frightening than all the Tank Girls, Terminators and Mad Maxes combined, it's the music Hollywood uses in futuristic movies that makes you glad you won't be around.

The future — according to moviemakers — is a scary place with musical choices reduced to either glitzy synthesizer muzak — such as that in "Star Trek" or "Blade Runner" — or post-apocalyptic heavy metal a la Guns 'N' Roses from "Terminator 2."

The Johnny Mnemonic soundtrack follows the formula with a meticulous balance of techie-synth trajectories peppered with requisite blasts of high-gravity heaviness. It's smooth and highly produced with a little bit of bite — Cheez Whiz with jalapeños — and the collection of artists seems carefully chosen from a master list of alternative-music darlings du jour.

A strong lineup of bands including KMFDM, Cop Shoot Cop, Helmet and Rollins Band makes the soundtrack immediately likable and listener-friendly. However, the selection of popular MTV Buzz-Clip songs in lieu of more unique works will swiftly date Mnemonic.

The eight-minute "Sad But True" by Orbital and shorter "Alex Descends into Hell for A Bottle of Milk / Korova 1" from Bono and the Edge are part of an ambient / techno / industrial groove interrupted by a Rollins Band tirade. Also notable is newcomer God Lives Underwater.

Despite its many strengths, Mnemonic's fate is sealed with a schmaltzy death kiss with "Send it Out" by Brad Fiedel, who is credited with doing the movie's music. ELO returning from the '70s to do a revival concert with covers of Nine Inch Nails songs might be worse, but I doubt it.

The Johnny Mnemonic soundtrack has all the components of a good soundtrack while lacking the great soundtrack's ability to make moviegoers rush out to buy it the minute the movie ends.

Riverside production ponders life's profundity

Ian Corwin

The Daily Iowan

It's tough to say which is more impressive: Riverside Theater Company's commitment to bursting the bounds of conventional theater or actor Jody Hovland's magical ability to hypnotize an audience with nothing but her talent and a soliloquy about an imaginary vibrator.

Hovland's chaotically brilliant and frenetically funny performance of playwright Jane Wagner's "The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe" marks a distinct trend in the choice of 1995-season source material for the Riverside Theater Company, 213 N. Gilbert St. As with last spring's production of "Dog Logic," Hovland and company seem to be forsaking traditional theater in an admirable attempt to goose this community into reflective meditation on life's profundities.

But the Riverside production of "Search" — like "Dog Logic" — succeeds mainly because it never takes itself too seriously. From lyrical speeches on the suicide of beloved friends to rape and social disintegration, "Search" sparks emotion with the mere mention of these topics. Hovland lets the context do the talking rather than wallowing in the emotive impact of the concepts themselves.

Every thought in "Search" is tied to something else; ideas flow naturally and without pretense. A topic is raised, discussed, joked about and dismissed — only to be brought up later in a different context and usually with mind-bending implications.

Playwright Jane Wagner builds the framework for "Search" around the character Trudy, a street person whose wisdom is only surpassed by her charm. After losing her mind — a subject she discusses flippantly, but with startling lucidity — Trudy acquires a psychic tie-in to a visiting group of aliens who are, of course, searching for signs of intelligent life on Earth. The aliens use Trudy to enter the minds of other people, drawing out a wide variety of human — with particular attention to women — experience.

Don't be put off by the spaced out premise: "Search" is one of the most grounded and earthy shows to come along in quite a while. Its sense of speculative wonder is matched by a sharp sense of humor, which wouldn't mean much on its own if not for Hovland's whirlwind performance.

Whether she's a frigid housewife singing the praises of pocket-sized dildos on public-access television or an ex-hippie struggling to be a conscientious capitalist in a world gone mad, Hovland breaks the boundaries of the stage effortlessly. Performing to an audience that surrounds her on three sides, she draws us into her world and closer to the human truths that bind us.

That's what "Search" is all about. It unfolds at the edges of human consciousness — a self-reflective play-within-a-play. But in "Search," the play is ultimately life itself, and the audience is forced to take an active role in its existence. Trudy's aliens may come in search of intelligence, but they leave with wisdom and heart — humanity's gift to the cosmos — made tangible with nothing but talent and an imaginary vibrator.

"Search" is playing through June 18. Call 338-7672 for ticket information.

POCAHONTAS IS POLITICALLY CORRECT

Disney film combines history with romance

John Horn

Associated Press

BURBANK, Calif. — John Smith nearly lost his shirt courting Pocahontas.

In early drawings for the Disney animated musical, artists sketched an embrace between the English explorer and the young Indian woman. Pocahontas was dressed in sexy buckskin, Smith bare-chested. They moved to kiss.

"The sexual energy was there," said John Pomeroy, Smith's supervising animator. "And they (Disney) got a little fearful of that. They didn't want it to go too far."

So Smith quickly regained his shirt. And "Pocahontas" quickly regained its family values. As Hollywood is under attack for its celebration of sex and violence in a mind-numbing summer of R-rated action films, the G-rated "Pocahontas" arrives in selected theaters this weekend as one of the most intentionally politically correct films of recent years. It opens nationally June 23.

"I remember when nobody cared what we did," said Glen Keane, the lead animator for the Pocahontas character and a 21-year Disney veteran of "The Little Mermaid," "Beauty and the Beast" and "Aladdin."

"Now it's like — wow — I'm constantly dealing with these kind of questions: What kind of image are we portraying? What will the impact be on children?"

Although Disney took some (often broad) liberties with its first history-based animated movie,

"Pocahontas" labors to communicate positive messages about peacemaking, greed, the earth and racial tolerance.

Some critics say the movie frivolously handles such issues and loses credibility by turning Pocahontas from a plain-looking 12-year-old into a man-hungry knockout. Others, however, say that the film viewed as a history lesson is not all that bad.

The Disney animated musical is the most profitable entertainment franchise in the world. "The Lion King" will bring the company some $1 billion in profits, and "Pocahontas" is expected to rival that staggering figure. Some analysts conservatively estimate the movie will earn no less than $750 million when all theatrical, video and merchandise proceeds are tallied.

With all that popularity comes strict scrutiny. Disney appreciated that in tackling a historical figure — even though it was just a springboard for a fresh "Romeo and Juliet" story — it opened itself to examination.

No one will tell you how a teapot is supposed to talk, but many have strong opinions about American history. Remember Disney's abortive theme park near Civil War battlefields?

"We took a little license so we could focus on the romance. That's the whole key to the story," Pomeroy said.

"Everybody has their own idea of what the facts actually are," said Mike Gabriel, the co-director of "Pocahontas."

Sarajevo's mayor, Tarik

Kupusovic, was more blunt.

"It is time to act after three years of siege," he told reporters. "We are ready for the liberation of the city."

Bosnia President Alija Izetbegovic went further Wednesday, saying he might ask U.N. forces to leave the shattered republic if peacekeepers try to stand in his military's way.

Peacekeepers "cannot act against the interests of the Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina," Izetbegovic told The Associated Press. "If that became the case, their stay here would be terminated."

Lt. Paul D'Orsonnens, a Canadian peacekeeper based at Visoko, said 15,000 men or more had gathered around Ilijas, some seven miles north of Sarajevo, and were fanning west toward Visoko.

"(Still,) we do not see any immediate sign of a beginning of operations," D'Orsonnens said.

Preparations for a major military offensive would be difficult to track. The government force buildup is occurring in hilly, densely wooded country that makes troop movements and concentrations hard to spot.

Even the warring sides often cannot see what the enemy is doing, though Serb and government lines are often no more than 100 yards apart. Additionally, much of the deployment takes

GOP hints at including Clinton ideas in strategy

Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican leaders of Congress said Wednesday they would negotiate with the Clinton administration over balancing the budget and might be willing to incorporate elements of the president's proposal into the GOP spending plan.

Clinton, meanwhile, has sharp words for Democratic critics of his plan. "I don't believe it's right for the Democrats to kind of overreact to the last election," he told reporters at a photo session.

He said that while "I'm sympathetic to the Democratic position" of taking swipes at the GOP plans to end the deficit, "I do not believe that's the appropriate position for the president."

"I know there are those who think that it's the wrong time or the wrong thing, and they're free to express their opinion. But I still feel very good about it," he said.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., told reporters Clinton "made a serious effort to be conciliatory" by accepting the principles of balancing the budget by a set date, cutting taxes, limiting Medicare and domestic spending and preserving defense spending.

He said Clinton's push to balance the budget in 10 years — instead of seven as Republicans propose — was "a non-starter." But, he said, Republicans might be able to find, "10, 15 or 20 good ideas" from Clinton's plan and include them in their own budget.

"It would be both irresponsible and irrational for us to reject that opportunity," he said. "Maybe we can put together a Republican and moderate Democrat coalition with the president."

Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said they had asked the chairmen of the House and Senate committees overseeing the budget and taxes to meet today with White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta and Budget Director Alice Rivlin.

After that, "we can go to the next step," Dole said. "I think the president ought to be a player."

Democrats, particularly liberals, reacted more bitterly to Clinton's proposal to pull $1.2 trillion in savings out of Medicare, Medicaid and dozens of other programs.

SUSPECT HASN'T BEEN QUESTIONED

New lead discovered in Adam Walsh slaying

Evan Perez
Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Authorities plan to interview a suspect in the 1981 Adam Walsh murder, a grisly unsolved case that helped raise awareness about missing children.

"There is new information and there is a suspect. The suspect is a stranger," Adam's father, John Walsh — host of the TV show "America's Most Wanted" — said Tuesday in a videotaped statement. "That's about all they've told us."

Joel Cantor, a lawyer for the Hollywood Police Department, said that Detective Mark Smith identified a main suspect in the past six months. Smith planned to interview the person, whom investigators have not yet talked to, and he also was examining one or two other possible perpetrators, Cantor said.

Cantor suggested an arrest could be imminent. He said the person who police plan to interview is not considered a new suspect.

Police believe more than one person is responsible for the killing, Cantor said.

Six-year-old Adam was abducted from a Sears store in a mall across from Hollywood police headquarters. His severed head was found two weeks later in Vero Beach, 120 miles north of Hollywood. The body was never found.

Police continue to investigate hundreds of leads. They even interviewed the late serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer in a Wisconsin prison because they had information revealing Dahmer had been in the Hollywood area, Cantor said.

After the murder, Walsh became host of "America's Most Wanted," which profiles fugitives, and set up the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

"We have always prayed that Adam's killer would be caught and brought to justice because I believe my family and I need that closure," Walsh said in the statement.

The Walsh family also helped persuade Congress to pass the Missing Children's Act in 1982 urging local police to start searches more quickly.

John Walsh also lobbied Congress to create an FBI computer database to track missing children; President Reagan signed the bill into law Oct. 12, 1982.

A movie about the case, starring former "Hill Street Blues" star Daniel J. Travanti as John Walsh, was broadcast in October 1983.

Meanwhile, a judge ruled Monday police can keep the Walsh case file sealed from the public because it is still an active investigation.

Three newspapers — The Mobile (Ala.) Press Register, the Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale and the Palm Beach Post — had asked the judge to force police to open their files.

den in Iowa City."

UI sophomore Lisa Marcus said she has only been to two bars in Iowa City, and enjoys the outside ambience of Gabe's.

"I hated the inside," she said. "There was inadequate seating and poor ventilation. It was really scary, but I enjoyed sitting outside."

Iowa City resident Jamie Swedberg said once every couple of weeks she will venture out on a summer evening and drink at a beer garden.

"I've gone to Gabe's and Fitzpatrick's," she said. "The beer is better at Fitzpatrick's, but Gabe's is more interesting. The last time I was there, there were people painting their bodies and doing sidewalk art."

Even though the attraction of simultaneously drinking a beer and swatting away mosquitoes is a strong one, bars without gardens say their business has not been hurt by the popularity.

Brad Vokac, manager of Vito's, 118 E. College St., said this summer is the bar's most successful yet. The tavern's abolition of the $2 cover charge keeps people coming back, he said.

"The beer gardens have not hurt our business at all," he said. "This has been our greatest summer, and it's too bad we don't have a garden to supplement it, but we're not hurt by the ones in operation."

to the fall semester of 1988.

Policano, reached while on UW business in Shanghai, China, said he considered the presidential nomination carefully before finally deciding to decline.

"I have a background at the university — I was there for 12 years," he said. "It was a very difficult decision to say no. I love Iowa City and I love the university."

Policano said his nomination for the presidency came from someone at the UI, but the name of the person who nominated him was not disclosed.

This is the second time Policano has been involved in a UI presidential search, but it's the first time he's been on the candidate's end of the process. Policano was part of the team that interviewed Rawlings and other candidates for the UI presidency before Rawlings was appointed president in 1988.

Policano said the move from college dean to university president is an important and challenging one, and becoming president would have meant considerable time and energy given to the UI and the surrounding area.

The wish to avoid uprooting his family was another factor in the choice to remove his name from consideration, Policano said. He has two children, ages 10 and 15, and said the small amount of spare time he has now belongs to his family.

"The position of president is a very intense one," Policano said. "You have to give 100 percent of yourself to the university and the community all the time. It's just not the right time, considering the ages of my children — my kids deserve that much. It's very, very tough to catch people at the right time in these kinds of searches."

Policano's last contact with the search committee was about three weeks ago, he said. He had considered staying in the candidate pool for about a month prior to pulling out of the search.

Policano said the UI shouldn't have trouble finding a suitable replacement for Hunter Rawlings, who will take over as chancellor of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., on July 1.

"The University of Iowa is one of the top public universities in the country," Policano said. "It has a lot of strength and a great future."

Policano's interests reach outside the business world and he would have made an exceptional replacement for Rawlings, said Robert Forsythe, an associate dean of faculty and development in the College of Business Administration and a professor of economics.

"He was one of the broadest people we've ever had in this job," Forsythe said. "He spanned much more than the business world."

ting 400 to 500 people every night."

Porter said his bar turned over the Mullen suit to its insurance company. He said that according to investigators, Johnson allegedly left the bar at 12:30 a.m. and allegedly picked up a 12-pack of beer afterward. The accident occurred at 7:30 a.m.

"Apparently, Johnson had no insurance and the family had very little insurance and needed someone to pay for the hospital bills," Porter said.

Holly Bell, who owns The Deadwood Tavern, 6 S. Dubuque St., with her husband, Jim, agreed the law might need to be changed.

"It (the law) could be more fair," Bell said. "The way the law is set up goes back to Prohibition, and it hasn't been changed much since then."

Not all Iowa City bar managers and owners felt the law was unreasonable, however. Jeff Semones, a manager at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., said he agreed with the law.

"It's a vague law, because without a chemical test it's hard to say if a person is legally drunk," Semones said. "If it's not abused, a law of this form should exist."

SUMMER SCHOOL

Some UI students said the changes seem ideal.

"I think it's good to offer different options," said Lisa Thompson, a UI alumna. "I was in a student-teaching program, and a lot of seniors in the program had to take just one more class, which just wasn't offered. It would be great if they could take that class in three weeks and get out of here."

However, UI graduate student Terry Braun said the program might not be a good idea.

"I prefer the eight-week session," Braun said. "Sure, you can crank through a textbook in three weeks, but I think there is a certain amount of time needed to assimilate information."

Nurses Association — both contacted a number of UIHC nurses and received support for unionization.

"I've talked to a number of nurses and they hate what's going on," O'Donnell said. "If you have outside representation, you can prevent layoffs — or reclassifications — from happening."

The jobs being eliminated were closely scrutinized so that quality would not be compromised, Borg said — adding there would not be a reduction in the number of bedside caregivers."

Bid made to keep Jets in Winnipeg

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — A group of local businessmen agreed Wednesday to pay $32 million to buy out Winnipeg Jets majority owner Barry Shenkarow and his partners in a deal aimed at assuring the NHL team will stay in the city.

The sale to Spirit of Manitoba Inc. hinges on a $10 million deposit being made by Friday, and other conditions being fulfilled by mid-August.

These conditions include league approval, raising an additional $20 million for an endowment fund to cover any future Jets losses and a Revenue Canada ruling on the status of contributions to that fund.

Nebraska against playoff system for new conference

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska may be a powerhouse in college football, but it appears the defending champion Cornhuskers can't flex their administrative muscles in the new Big 12 Conference.

Nebraska Chancellor Graham Spanier cast the lone vote against a proposal before the league's chief executive officers for a conference football playoff and revenue sharing plan.

The CEOs approved a playoff game at the end of the season over the objections of Spanier, Nebraska Athletic Director Bill Byrne and the 12 conference football coaches, including NU's Tom Osborne.

Osborne was on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

The conference — the old Big Eight plus Southwest Conference schools Texas, Texas Tech, Texas A&M and Baylor — begins play in most sports in fall 1996. The Big 12 has $120 million in television contracts with ABC-TV and Prime Sports for football and ESPN and ESPN2 for basketball through 2001.

Chance of lockout draws both sides to table

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiators for the NBA and its players association were to meet for the third straight day today as a lockout loomed.

Commissioner David Stern has said that if a new collective bargaining agreement is not reached by the conclusion of the playoffs, the league would lock out the players. Houston, leading Orlando 3-0 in the best-of-7 NBA Finals, plays the Magic in Game 4 tonight, and Stern was to have a "press availability" at 8:15 p.m. EDT, league spokesman Jan Hubbard said.

"I can't characterize the details of our negotiations," said Simon Couridine, executive director of the players association. "But it's safe to say if we had eight hours of meetings on Monday and 10 1/2 yesterday, that speaks for itself."

Houston devours Orlando 113-101 for second straight title

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

HOUSTON — No more talk of one-title wonders. The no-respect Rockets must now be included in that elite group of back-to-back NBA champions.

With 35 points and 15 rebounds from its elite player, Hakeem Olajuwon, Houston completed the unlikely of championship repeats, sweeping the Orlando Magic with a 113-101 victory Wednesday night.

Clamping down on defense, the Rockets pulled away in the final period from the Magic, whose youth and inexperience overshadowed their considerable talent in this series.

Olajuwon capped off the night with a 3-pointer — another unlikely occurrence — with 11.5 seconds left.

When the buzzer sounded Houston joined such consecutive title winners as the Bulls, the Lakers, the Pistons and the Celtics.

Those teams had Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Isiah Thomas and Larry Bird.

HOUSTON
Elie 9-11 0-0 22, Horry 6-14 5-9 21, Olajuwon 15-30 4-5 35, Drexler 4-13 7-8 15, Smith 2-7 0-0 5, Cassell 3-11 6-7 13, Brown 0-1 0-0 0, Jones 1-1 0-0 2. Totals 40-88 22-29 113.

3-Point goals—Orlando 14-31 (Hardaway 5-8, Shaw 5-11, Scott 2-6, Bowie 1-2, Anderson 1-4), Houston 11-27 (Elie 4-6, Horry 4-9, Olajuwon 1-1, Smith 1-3, Cassell 1-4, Drexler 0-4). Fouled out—None. Rebounds—Orlando 51 (Grant, O'Neal 12), Houston 64 (Olajuwon 15). Assists—Orlando 24 (Hardaway 5), Houston 28 (Drexler 8). Total fouls—Orlando 26, Houston 18. Technicals—Orlando illegal defense; Houston illegal defense. A—16,611 (16,611).

The Rockets have Olajuwon, who topped 30 points in each game of the series and in 16 of his 22 playoff games.

Unlike last year, Olajuwon shared this championship with his college teammate and the city's hometown hero, Clyde Drexler, who after 12 seasons in the NBA savored his first taste of a title.

Drexler, who missed winning the 1983 NCAA championship with Olajuwon at the University of Houston and made two unsuccessful trips to the NBA Finals with Portland, had 15 points, nine rebounds and eight assists for the Rockets after returning to his hometown in a Feb. 14 trade.

"How sweet it is!" Drexler said as the trophy was presented to the Rockets by NBA commissioner David Stern.

Mario Elie added 22 points and Horry 21.

For the Magic, whose joyride through the playoffs ended in a jarring fashion in the finals, Shaquille O'Neal and Anfernee Hardaway had 25 points each.

The Rockets led by one at the end of the third quarter.

Houston got two big 3-pointers from Elie early in the fourth, and Olajuwon scored six straight points to stretch the lead to 101-89 with 3:16 to play.

It was the first sweep since 1989, when Detroit blanked the Lakers, and made Houston the fourth team in the last nine years to win back-to-back titles.

They won just 47 regular-season games, making them a sixth seed in the power-packed Western Conference.

To get here, they upset Utah, Phoenix and San Antonio.

Each had at least 59 wins and each with the home-court advantage.

All three teams were considered to have legitimate shots at winning it all. Not Houston, though.

Not only were the Rockets the lowest seed ever to win the title, they also won an NBA record nine times on the road along the way, including seven straight.

"Don't ever underestimate the heart of a champion," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said.

Underestimating the Rockets might have been just the problem for the Magic, who never recovered from a 120-118 overtime loss in Game 1.

Their season ended the way their last one did, with a sweep.

Last year it was at the hands of Indiana in the first round.

After winning 57 games and the Houston Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon, left, strips the ball away from Orlando Magic center Shaquille O'Neal during the first quarter of Game 4 of the NBA Finals Wednesday in Houston.

Atlantic Division title, the Magic entered the playoffs without having even won a postseason game but beat Boston, Chicago and Indiana.

But in the finals, it was clear the Rockets' experience gave them too big an edge for Orlando to overcome.

The Magic's hot shooting in the playoffs suddenly deserted them.

In this game, Orlando started well and tied a finals record by hitting 14 3-pointers.

But the Magic went cold in the fourth quarter and were hurt even more by 19 turnovers, which Houston's fast break turned into 25 points.

Trailing by four at halftime, the Rockets relied on its inside-outside game to keep it close.

There were 11 lead changes and three ties in the period, which ended with Houston up by one.

Orlando made 9-of-14 3-pointers in the first half to help make up for a 2-of-6 effort from O'Neal. The nine treys tied the finals record set by Houston in the second half of Game 1.

After trailing 18-7 early, the Magic outscored the Rockets 14-3 to end the first quarter, getting seven points from Dennis Scott.

In the second quarter, seven of Orlando's 10 field goals were from behind the arc to give the Magic a 51-47 halftime lead.

In addition to their outside shooting, the Magic's defense was much improved, especially on the perimeter. The Rockets were 18-of-46 in the half.

Tyson not welcome in New York

Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Yes, Mike Tyson, you can go home again — but don't expect a hero's welcome.

A planned New York "Welcome Home" bash for the Brooklyn native and convicted rapist, three months out of prison, has left protesters howling, politicians spin-doctoring and organizers backpedaling.

The response to the planned June 20 homecoming — which reportedly was to take the form of a gala festival — was instant and angry.

"Be Like Mike?" asked the Wall Street Journal in an editorial. An ad hoc Harlem group, the Committee for Rational African-Americans Against the Parade, complained fiercely. Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, an ex-prosecutor, condemned the celebration.

And on Wednesday, a coalition of African-American leaders — including two City Council members and a former deputy mayor — turned out on the steps of City

Ex-champ Bowe itching to get at next opponent

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Riddick Bowe and Jorge Luis Gonzalez dislike each other so much they were forced to have separate news conferences Wednesday to discuss their 12-round heavyweight fight.

The Nevada Athletic Commission ruled Bowe and Gonzalez could not appear together at the MGM Grand or at Thursday's weigh-in following an April 20 incident in which the fighters almost came to blows.

When they meet in the ring Saturday, the fight will be a culmination of a feud that began after Gonzalez outpointed Bowe 3-2 in the super heavyweight semifinal bout eight years ago in the Pan American Games at Indianapolis.

"There's a lot of hate that goes back to 1987 in Indianapolis when I was there with the Cuban team and Riddick Bowe came in and said what he was going to do to me," said Gonzalez, who defected from Cuba in April 1991.

Although the decision was only 3-2, Gonzalez knocked Bowe down twice. He also made Bowe take a standing 8-count in the first; Gonzalez took one in the third.

Bowe recalls being knocked down once and taking a standing 8-count while forcing Gonzalez to take two standing 8-counts.

"Only three more days, his butt is going to be nicely kicked," Gonzalez said through an interpreter.

"I'm going to kill him, make him bleed from his mouth," said the 6-foot-7 fighter, wearing a black suit with no shirt, with a gold medallion dangling from a chain around his neck. "I'm going to do it. It's not just talk."

Hall to condemn any plans for a pro-Tyson party.

"The negative message here is that he is a hero," said Jill Nelson of African-Americans Against Violence. "The man is convicted of rape and has a history of violence and abuse on African-American women."

Tyson is now slated only for a pair of news conferences in Harlem. The first, at a local restaurant, will announce the undercard at his Aug. 19 comeback fight; the second, at the Apollo Theater, will be about the formation of The Mike Tyson Charitable Program.

On the eve of the twin news conferences, Nelson and scores of others plan a candlelight vigil in Harlem for "African-American women and children victimized by violence and abuse."

The Rev. Al Sharpton, one of the Tyson organizers, downplayed the original plans.

"Contrary to unconfirmed rumors of a gala event, there were never any plans for a parade in Harlem," said Sharpton.

But two weeks earlier, a June 3 headline in The Amsterdam News read: "Stars, a parade, street festival for the champ." The paper quoted organizer Sylvester Leaks,

"You also have to put in there a good mind game and that requires a lot of imagination. This is the type of course where you need to be able to control the height of your shots. You have to be able to handle bad holes, because you will have them."

That certainly is Faldo's game and this seems like Faldo's course. And he wants it. He showed up last week and spent three days learning the lay of the land at Shinnecock.

New York perusing Strawberry

Associated Press

NEW YORK — If Darryl Strawberry is coming back to play again in New York, Yankee owner George Steinbrenner isn't ready to announce it yet.

Steinbrenner said Wednesday that he and Strawberry's agent have discussed the situation, but said reports that the Yankees are prepared to sign him are premature.

"We have talked, but that's not a deal," Steinbrenner said before the Yankees played at Detroit.

"That's all I'm going to say on the matter," he said.

The Record of Hackensack, N.J., reported Wednesday that Steinbrenner is expected to finalize a deal with Strawberry, the outfielder who is serving a 60-day suspension from baseball for testing positive for cocaine.

"I don't know if you give up on someone at the age of 33," Steinbrenner said. "If I can help him get on with the rest of his life, I want to help him."

Yankees general manager Gene Michael said he isn't involved in any talks between Steinbrenner and Bill Goodstein, Strawberry's new agent.

"He's told us he's going to handle it," Michael said of Steinbrenner.

Strawberry's suspension ends June 23, but the newspaper said Steinbrenner reportedly wants Strawberry to play a few games in the minors before joining the Yankees.

"It's a done deal," The Record quoted a source as saying. "All they need to do is work out the money."

Steinbrenner showed up in Detroit on Tuesday, and The Record said he informed manager Buck Showalter he decided to give Strawberry a one-year deal, bypassing Michael.

Goodstein refused to confirm anything had been set with the Yankees.

"I have not an iota of doubt that Strawberry will be signed by the weekend," Goodstein was quoted as saying.

Steinbrenner met with Showalter for about 90 minutes before Wednesday night's game. The Yankees, favored to win the AL East, began the day with a 17-25 record after losing 20 of 27 games.

"What is going on is not Buck Showalter's fault in any way," Steinbrenner said.

A grievance hearing is scheduled for Monday on Strawberry's release from the Giants. San Francisco cut him loose after he tested positive.

By that time, the team had already exchanged salary arbitration figures. The Major League Baseball Players Association claims Strawberry still is owed his salary for 1995.

AL ROUNDUP

Appier first nine-game winner

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Kevin Appier became the major leagues' first nine-game winner and struck out a season-high 11 Wednesday as the Kansas City Royals won their fifth straight, beating the Seattle Mariners 2-1.

Appier (9-2) had a shutout until the seventh, when Joey Cora singled in a run. Appier then walked Edgar Martinez, loading the bases with two outs, but Billy Brewer relieved and got Tino Martinez on a flyout.

Appier gave up six hits, walked four and lowered his ERA to 2.06. Jeff Montgomery got three outs for his 11th save as Kansas City won for the 16th time in 21 games since starting the season at 9-13.

Tim Belcher (3-1) lost for the first time since Seattle acquired him from Cincinnati on May 15. He allowed seven hits in 8 1-3 innings.

Brewers 4, Rangers 2
MILWAUKEE — Matt Mieske broke a fifth-inning tie with his first homer of the season, leading Milwaukee past Texas.

With the score tied 2-2, Mieske connected off Darren Oliver (3-2) for his first homer since last July 21.

Mieske is 3-for-6 with three runs and three RBIs since replacing right fielder David Hulse, who fouled a ball off his right leg during the Brewers' 14-2 victory Tuesday night.

Rookie Sid Roberson (2-2) gave up just four hits, walked three and struck out five in six innings as the Brewers won consecutive games for the first time this month. Texas has lost two straight following a six-game winning streak.

Indians 5, Orioles 2
CLEVELAND — Albert Belle homered and Eddie Murray moved within 12 hits of 3,000 in his career Wednesday night as the Cleveland Indians beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-2 for their fourth straight win.

The Indians improved baseball's best record to 33-11, extending the best start in team history. They have won 11 of 12 games overall and eight in a row at Jacobs Field, where they are 18-4 on the year.

Baltimore, swept by the Indians in a three-game series for the first time since 1988, have lost four in a row.

Rookie Chad Ogea (2-0) won his second consecutive game since replacing Jason Grimsley in the Cleveland rotation, giving up two runs and six hits in six innings. The right-handed Ogea has a 1.66 ERA in five career appearances at Jacobs Field, the previous four in relief.

Yankees 12, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Melido Perez allowed just four hits in 6 2-3 innings, and the New York Yankees hammered Pat Ahearne in the major league debut Wednesday night, routing the Detroit Tigers 12-3.

With owner George Steinbrenner watching again from a seat behind the dugout, home runs from Paul O'Neill, Mike Stanley and Bernie Williams helped the Yankees to consecutive wins for the first time this month.

However, they stayed tied with Toronto for last place in the AL East.

New York, which beat Detroit 10-4 Tuesday, last won two straight May 20-21 against Baltimore.

Perez (4-3) had a two-hitter and a 10-1 lead until the seventh, when Luis Polonia lost Chris Gomez's fly ball in the lights for an RBI double, and Chad Curtis hit a run-scoring single. Steve Howe finished the inning, then combined with John Wetteland to retire the last seven Tigers in order.

The right-handed Ahearne, 25, was called up Tuesday from Toledo after going 7-1 for the Mud Hens.

But his major league debut lasted just 25 pitches, just long enough for the Yankees to rock him for five runs on six hits, including the homers by O'Neill and Stanley. Ahearne was relieved without retiring a batter in the second.

Polonia led off the game with a single. One out later, O'Neill homered before Ahearne escaped further damage by striking out Danny Tartabull and getting Don Mattingly on a grounder.

Rockies clobber Reds, 10-4

Associated Press

DENVER — After watching Andres Galarraga and Dante Bichette excel at the plate the night before, Vinny Castilla said, "What about me?"

Earning some highlight-reel time of his own, Castilla had four hits, including a pair of home runs, and the Colorado Rockies beat the Cincinnati Reds 10-4 Wednesday.

Castilla, who drove in three runs with his 11th and 12th homers, had his third two-homer game of the season. He extended his hitting streak to a career-best 13 games, and tied Dante Bichette's team record with 11 total bases.

"I feel good at the plate," Castilla said, "but I especially feel good that we could win this series. Cincinnati is in first place, too, and this gives us a lot of confidence."

Marlins 4, Mets 0

NEW YORK — Chris Hammond pitched Florida's first complete game of the season Wednesday night, striking out eight as the Marlins beat the New York Mets 4-0.

Hammond also scored twice as the Marlins posted their first shutout of the season. Chuck Carr went 2-for-4 and drove in two runs.

Hammond (3-1), the only left-handed starter ever to win a game for the Marlins, allowed seven hits, but only two after the fourth inning. He walked three.

The eight strikeouts — all swinging — tied his career-high reached twice before, and he got 13 other outs on ground balls.

Dodgers 8, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — Hideo Nomo struck out a major league season-high 16 in eight innings, pitching the Los Angeles Dodgers past the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-5 Wednesday night.

Nomo's 16 strikeouts set a Dodgers' rookie record, and were two short of the major league rookie mark of 18 by Montreal's Bill Gullickson in 1980.

Mike Piazza homered twice, including a two-run drive estimated at 441 feet in the third inning.

Nomo (3-1) won his third in a row and his first in five road starts. He struck out the side four times and had a two-hit shutout going until Jacob Brumfield's two-run double and Al Martin's RBI single in the eighth.

Giants 4, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Who is this guy? Mike Benjamin is a stand-in, a backup, a utility infielder and a role player. And now, he's a major league record holder.

"I've been around some great hitters — Aaron, Cepeda, Ralph Garr, Rico Carty, Steve Garvey, Reggie Smith — but I've never seen a finer three days than Benjamin has had," said San Francisco Giants manager Dusty Baker.

Benjamin, filling in for injured Matt Williams and Steve Scarso, went 6-for-7 and drove in the winning run in the 13th inning as the Giants beat the Chicago Cubs 4-3 Wednesday.

Associated Press

San Francisco Giants' Darren Lewis scores on a single by Mike Benjamin as Chicago Cubs catcher Todd Pratt awaits the throw.

Astros 9, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA — Brian Hunter, promoted from the minors a day earlier, hit a tiebreaking, two-run triple in the eighth inning Wednesday night that sent the Houston Astros over the Philadelphia Phillies 9-5.

Craig Biggio had four hits, including two doubles, and tied a Houston record by scoring four runs.

The Astros won their sixth straight road game, making them 14-7 on the road while just 7-15 at home.

Padres 3, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Joey Hamilton pitched a two-hitter and Tony Gwynn's two-run homer in the ninth inning broke up a scoreless game as the San Diego Padres beat the St. Louis Cardinals 3-0 Wednesday night.

The Padres won for the seventh time in nine games, and ended the Cardinals' season-high three-game winning streak.

Braves 7, Expos 3

MONTREAL — John Smoltz settled down from a shaky start to pitch his first complete game of the season, helping the Atlanta Braves cool off the Montreal Expos 7-3.

Mike Kelly, who began the game in a 1-for-19 slump, drove in two runs and scored twice. The Braves stopped a three-game losing streak and ended Montreal's four-game winning streak.

Smoltz (5-3) struck out eight, walked four and gave up nine hits.

COLLEGE HOOPS

Recruit unphased by hype

Nekesa Mumbi

Moody

Associated Press

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. — To look at 6-foot-2 Stephon Marbury, nothing really shouts out that he just might be the next BIG THING in college basketball.

The star point guard from Abraham Lincoln High School in Brooklyn is not much bigger than most high school seniors. Soft-spoken and well-mannered, perhaps the most noticeable aspect of Marbury is the large black panther tattoo etched on his right bicep.

But once he steps onto the basketball court, he is transformed.

With the grace and agility of players beyond his teen-age years, with his smooth passes and fierce slam dunks, Marbury brings an excitement to the game that can stir any crowd.

Marbury's game is about more than just finesse, though.

It's about scoring and winning. At Lincoln, he averaged 26.7 points, eight assists and three steals per game. He shot 61 percent from the field, 42 percent from 3-point field-goal range, and 78 percent from the free-throw line.

It's that kind of skill that led Lincoln to city and state championships this year, earned Marbury player of the year and other awards, and the unofficial title of the top high school basketball player in the country.

"I think he's the finest high school guy I've seen. He's a complete player, and more importantly, he's a wonderful person," said Abraham Lincoln basketball coach Bobby Hartstein, who has known Marbury for 16 years.

Georgia Tech recruit Stephon Marbury, in white, gets around Christ the King High School's Eric Barclay on Saturday, March 25.

Hartstein also has coached Marbury's three older brothers and will continue to coach a younger brother still at Lincoln.

"Stephon is one of the best high school players I've ever seen," said Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins, who in May received Marbury's commitment to play at the Atlanta school. "He's very, very talented. He has what I call a God-given gift."

Yet Marbury seems to take everything in stride. He's determined to make sure his hoop dreams don't drift too far from the realm of reality.

"Some kids, they let basketball take over them, as far as like, they don't do their schoolwork, they just want to play basketball," said Marbury, who plans to be a pre-law student at Georgia Tech. "You can't let the basketball use you, you have to use the basketball."

That's precisely what Marbury has done, using his skills to take him around the world as a member of the U.S. national junior team.

All Marbury has to do is take a walk through his Coney Island neighborhood in Brooklyn to see what dangerous roads others have traveled, others who have not had the opportunities he's had.

"It's rough. There's drugs being sold in my neighborhood. But if they (drug dealers) know that you're trying to do something positive, they don't interfere with you," said Marbury, who led Lincoln to the state championship.
