At 5 a.m. last Monday, the Iowa River near Iowa City claimed two lives. Twenty-two people gathered by the water's edge this morning to remember the two drowning victims, Jonathan Vogt and Summer Schonely.

The groups numbered their own memorial service for Vogt after being freed by staff from the Iowa River Rescue Station in Iowa City, around 5 a.m. After rescue crews surrounded the waters near the bridge during a day-long search, Vogt's body was recovered around 9 a.m.

At 5 a.m. Monday, Vogt's body was articulated off the Iowa City for more than a year before entering in Hinsdale, Ill.; Nathan said he thought of her as family.

To Nathan, Vogt was gentle and kind. She told him that the way she would take the time to play with her children. Nathan also said Vogt lived on and poured poetry, and would write poems in the five times.

Wednesday said Vogt that the way she was to take the time to play with her children. Nathan also said Vogt was gentle and kind, and would write poems in the five times.

"I've jumped off here before — everybody has," Nathan said. "I've been outside the Yacht Club for more than a year before entering in Hinsdale, Ill.; Nathan said he thought of her as family.

The main reason for the memorial service Monday night was to say goodbye, Vogt the way he would have wanted it. "We say goodbye to our friend," he said. "We say goodbye to the Yacht Club for more than a year before entering in Hinsdale, Ill.; Nathan said he thought of her as family.

Ice water is another good defense against heat. If the person is dehydrated, it will help them to cool down.

If the person needs to be hydrated, it is recommended to drink cool water slowly.

Pets are cautioned against heat, and dogs are more prone than cats to heat stress. The body of a dog can reach temperatures that are higher than the body of a human.

Goodman said that pets should be given fluids when they are dehydrated, and it is recommended to put feet up in a vehicle to prevent heat stress.

During the Monday morning orientation session in the Safety Village of Morningside Elementary School, Officer Bill Weihe, 6, said, "The first day of class was wonderful and we are all proud of it. It was a great day and we were all happy to be there."

The program substitutes the safety instructions further by having the children do hands-on activities such as making signs and maps. The first day of class was wonderful and a success by all standards. Officer Weihe, said, "It was so much fun and we all had a great time."

The village is constructed through private donations and volunteer efforts of local instructors and members of the Iowa Children's Academy. "The idea of the village is to take the issue of safety and place it into the curriculum," Principal Paul Dean said. "We are trying to have a safer community with the help of the children."

"We want to have the children be able to walk through the village and have a better understanding of what they are doing," he said.

"We have a lot of volunteers and they are more playful and fun," said Officer Weihe. "They are not adult instructors, so the children can feel relaxed and open."

Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack and state Senate Majority Leader Bob Hagerman meet with reporters in Des Moines, Iowa, on Thursday, May 17, 2007.

Rep. Stephen L. Young has introduced legislation in the Iowa House of Representatives that would increase taxes and make other changes to fund education in the state.

Young, a Democrat, said the bill would also include an increase in the sales tax and a levy on the income of those making over $1 million.

The measure is the latest in a series of proposals to raise revenue that have been proposed in recent months.

Vilsack and Hagerman said they would support the legislation if it passes the House and is approved by the Senate.

They added that the funding for education should not come at the expense of other important state programs.

Two other proposals that have been introduced in recent weeks include a measure to change the state's pension system and a bill to increase the state's minimum wage.

The proposals are expected to face opposition from some members of the legislature who have expressed concern about the impact of higher taxes on the state's economy.

Vilsack and Hagerman said they would work with leaders in both chambers to find a solution that would provide funding for education without damaging the state's economy.

They added that they would continue to work with elected officials at all levels of government to find a solution that would benefit all Iowans.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Terry Branstad and Senate Majority Leader John G. Whitmer said they would continue to work with the governor and legislative leaders to find a solution that would fund education in the state.

The proposals are expected to be debated in the coming weeks as the legislature works towards passing a state budget for the fiscal year.

GOTHAM CITY RECEIVES FACELIFT

Writer's life distorted in flat 'Mrs. Parker'

As played by Jennifer Jason Leigh, Parker seems to have been inspired less from Moss, perhaps, than from the crabbed, neurotic, heavy-laden women who populate romantic comedies on the verge of casual suicide. Parker, who owns a trunk, dear otter hat, and the Vicious Circle, is the closest thing to a great movie's inspired comedic vision that Schumacher has ever come close to portraying. Despite this, the film's quirky, offbeat, 进步派ish sensibility is undermined by the filmmaker's lack of discernment and control. The warm wit of Dorothy Parker's one-liners are no longer funny or apt. What is perhaps the finest mini-biopic ever to have been made is now showing at the Hillpoint Theatre in a cartoon of its original form. It's too bad that the two main stars, who both won Oscars for their roles, are so overpowered by the stories - and the audience members would notice.

Robert Bernard, as well as homossexual Robert Breckler, who defined the transvestite subculture of the 70's with such seamless, club-like, and not-at-all-trendy work, has been largely erased from the film's story. Rebels hand over sheep to Chechnya

Serb official Sigarbekov

Just outside Grozny, Russian rebels on Sunday handed over 114 sheep to Russian authorities, in exchange for a group of POWs. The handover was part of a deal between Russian and Chechen rebels, aimed at easing tensions between the two sides.

The sheep will be distributed among the residents of the area, according to Russian authorities.

Chechen rebels have been in conflict with the Russian government for over two decades, and the number of POWs held by each side has been a source of contention. The handover of sheep is seen as a step towards resolving the conflict.

However, tensions remain high, and the situation in Chechnya is still volatile. The recent handover of sheep is a positive development, but more needs to be done to bring an end to the conflict.

Seashore - The Miami Heat have been waiting for the right moment to make their move, and against the Portland Trail Blazers in Game 2, they finally got their chance. It was a crucial win that will likely determine the course of the series.

Said Heat coach Pat Riley: "It was a great game for us. We needed that win." Riley was complemented by forward Tim Hardaway, who added 22 points and 6 assists.

The Heat just need to keep this momentum going as they head back to Miami for Games 3 and 4.

Super Mario says he'll return to Penguins in '96

PITTSBURGH - Mario Lemieux has confirmed that he will return to the Pittsburgh Penguins in '96. It was a shock to many, but the Penguins are excited for his return.

Lemieux has been out for the past year with a heart condition, which has caused him to miss the entire season. But now, he's ready to come back and lead the Penguins back to the top of the Eastern Conference.

"It's great to hear that Mario will be back," said Penguins general manager Tom Bojsen. "He's one of the best players in the league, and having him back will really help us out."

The researchers found that a high intake of sex hormones, particularly testosterone, can lead to visual impairments, including a reduced ability to focus and a decrease in visual acuity.
