Overabundance of sex can blur vision

CHICAGO (AP)—If love doesn't blind you, sex might. Vigorous sex can cause tiny blood vessels to break or delicate tissues at the back of the eyeball to tear, suddenly causing blurry vision, researchers say.

The researchers saw half a dozen patients with the problem and reported the findings in the June issue of the Archives of Ophthalmology, published by the American Medical Association.

"Maybe this gives us a physical explanation as to why there were some old wives' tales that certain sexual activities could result in blindness," said a co-author of the study, Dr. Neil Bressler of Johns Hopkins University.

"If that is true, it's temporary, and the prognosis is excellent," he added by telephone Tuesday from Baltimore.

Prosecutors believe they can wrap up their case by the end of next week. They have dropped plans to call more witnesses to discuss domestic violence in the Simpson marriage, and they won't present testimony on the blood preservative EDTA.

A buyer in the shoe department of Bloomingdale's in New York testified he sold shoes to O.J. Simpson several times, but did not specifically remember selling him Bruno Magli shoes, which match the bloody footprints found at the crime scene.

Wednesday, testimony will involve cellular phone calls made from Simpson's Bronco.

Final hostages set free

Russian leaders criticize Yeltsin for handling of situation

Chris Bird
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — Chechen gunmen who attacked a town and held frustrated troops at bay for a week escaped into the mountains Tuesday, freeing their last hostages after winning safe passage out of a besieged hospital and across the rugged terrain of southern Russia.

In Moscow, a wave of criticism crashed down on Boris Yeltsin for his handling of the hostage crisis, including his authorization of two bloody raids on the hospital and government concessions to the hostage-takers.

Several parliamentary leaders warned their parties would cast votes of no confidence in the government in a vote today.

An estimated 126 people who had accompanied the Chechens as human shields on a 30-hour bus ride along country roads were on

"They might agree something today, but as soon as the hostages are freed, they'll start killing us again."

Ali Sarimsultanov, Gronzy resident skeptical peace with Chechnya will last their way home Tuesday night, according to news reports.

Interior Ministry officials said troops had shadowed the gunmen and would try to prevent their escape. There were no immediate reports of any action after the hostage release.

The Chechen gunmen raided Budyonnovsk, a small city about 90 miles north of the separatist region, last week and held about 2,000 people hostage in a hospital to demand an end to the war in their separatist republic.

About 100 people were killed in the June 14 raid, and dozens more died when Russian troops unsuccessfully stormed the hospital on Saturday.

The gunmen released more than 400 hostages over the weekend and agreed in negotiations with Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin to release most of the rest on Monday. See CHECHNYA, Page 5A

U.S. presidential hopeful Maurice Taylor speaks in front of the Old Capital Tuesday. The Des Moines businessman told the crowd he's the best GOP candidate to run against President Clinton in 1996 because running a successful business has made him prepared to manage an efficient national government.

He's not a politician. He's never run for office. But businessman Maurice "Morry" Taylor believes he has a shot at the presidency — and he's taking it.

He's a bit like Iowa's own Ross Perot.

Taylor, a Republican, rolled into Iowa City Tuesday, all six of the 30-foot motor homes he uses as his traveling campaign headquarters parked conspicuously on the sidewalk in front of Jessup Hall. Taylor jumped from the first motor home and eagerly shook hands with the small crowd of about 10 gathered to hear him speak.

Taylor has no political experience, but said he hopes to apply his experience running a multi-million dollar company to the handling affairs at the White House. Taylor is the president and CEO of Titan Wheel International, a company he and a partner built from the ground up beginning in 1983. By 1994, the company had posted $407 million

With the sweltering heat and high humidity plaguing the area this week, many Iowa City residents are turning to air conditioners to keep cool — but extra comfort means higher electric bills.

The electricity rates during the summer months rise just in time for the air conditioning ramp. The current rate is 9.65 cents per kilowatt hour, said Dave Franz, a marketing analyst at Iowa Illinois Gas & Electric Company, 1633 Lower Muscatine Road.

Senate omits measure making cars drive 55

Taking on other emotional safety issues, senators also were debating proposals to eliminate federal requirements for states to impose seat belt and motorcycle helmet laws.

The issues came to the floor during debate over the National Highway System bill, which would provide $13 billion over two years to improve 159,886 miles of roads across the country. The House has yet to consider the measure.

Defenders of the federal speed limit said there was no question that it had saved lives since it took effect in 1974.

Homosexual athletes gaining acceptance

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

Damn, it's hot. When it gets hot, T-shirts are worn en masse. In Iowa City, people wear a lot of interesting T-shirts. Some with band names, some with '70s sitcom characters and some that are just plain stupid.

Yes, even in Iowa City people wear really lame T-shirts. Surely it isn't their fault a marketer came up with a ploy that broke down their cynical, "Gen X" ability to see through stupid ideas.

Stupid as a porter (stupid to wear) is exemplified by a group of tees that make the wearer look like a reject from MTV spring break. The T-shirts in question are Co-Ed Naked, No Fear and Big Johnson. They are all trademarks, which I mentioned in case any of these companies read this column. I don't need another lawsuit threat this week.

There are some benefits to these shirts; I just don't know what they are. I guess one benefit is that a bunch of meateheads with monkey cuts (long in the back, short on the top and sides) who might otherwise run around with no shirt at all have something with which to cover their bodies.

Anyway, the stereotypes about people who wear these shirts are yours to form. But here's why you should form stereotypes about those people.

Co-Ed Naked T-shirts started out harmlessly enough. It began a few years ago when a group of college students made a shirt which said "Co-Ed Naked Lacrosse: Rough, Tough and in the Buff." Ha, ha — sort of funny.

But things have gotten out of hand. I recently saw a "Co-Ed Naked Hunting" T-shirt that seemed to me utterly ridiculous.

Nothing turns me on less than the thought of my girlfriend (who rules supremely) wearing nothing but a blazing orange vest and a garter belt, holding an assault rifle in one hand and a pheasant in the other.

Can you imagine what fun it would be to go out with your lover butt-naked, crawling around in the brambles and thorns in search of snipes?

Dumb — a partially lame idea gone completely, undeniably stupid. Actually, during a visit to Iowa State, that last bastion of high-minded humor, I saw another stupid one: "Co-Ed Naked Flag Line." I thought back, and in high school there wasn't a single flag corps member I would have seen naked in my worst nightmare.

Just when you thought it couldn't get any dumber, No Fear comes along. My favorite (sarcasm, smart guy) slogan of the company's is "Second place is the first loser."

Can you imagine what fun it would be to go out with your lover butt-naked, crawling around in the brambles and thorns in search of snipes?

Unless the winner is wearing a No Fear T-shirt, second place is the second loser.

It doesn't seem reasonable to teach kids that if they don't win, they suck. These shirts have a somewhat reasonable underlying message: Try your best. Unfortunately, the shirts seem to breed an attitude not unlike that of the evil Sensei in "The Karate Kid."

Who needs a T-shirt to give testosterone-charged messages about sportsmanship? Not that testosterone is bad. In fact, I have nothing against it, besides the fact that because of it, I have to shave every day.

It's just that No Fear could get out of hand, like Co-Ed Naked has. Slogans like "Only wussies get alcohol poisoning — keep drinking," or "Most STDs are curable — get on it. No Fear." Okay, maybe that's a little extreme, but hey.

Speaking of extreme, how about Big Johnson? Have you seen that guy's package? It's almost as big as Bill Murray's on that old "Saturday Night Live" skit, when Murray stuffs his pants with paper towels. The only other guy whose package got that much publicity taught my rock-climbing weekend class.

Just like on the skit, where Bill gets all the chicks, Big Johnson T-shirts let people know that with a big penis, you can do anything — or anyone. Nothing like capitalism and sexism combined.

It's pretty healthy to let people know that you don't need skill, intelligence or a sense of humor to accomplish anything; you just need a big Johnson, which obviously has a mind of its own.

And you gotta wonder about the guys that wear the shirts (sorry, Dan). If you've got something to be proud of, why not just walk around with your Johnson out, and see what good it does for your social life.

There is no mystique involved with Big Johnson shirts. I doubt people look at a guy with a BJ shirt and say, "You've heard about guys with Big Johnson shirts, haven't you?"

Anyway, it's not what you've got, it's how you use it.

Actor Rourke accused of ending argument with violence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police are investigating actor and boxer Mickey Rourke in connection with a fight that left a man injured outside a gym in Hollywood.

Charges haven't been filed over Saturday's incident, which police said began as an argument and ended with Rourke hitting a man.

Police wouldn't identify the victim, but the New York Post said it was Jeff Kober of TV's "China Beach."

The tabloid quoted unidentified witnesses as saying a jealous Rourke gave Kober a black eye after he spoke with Rourke's wife, model Carrie Otis.

David Wood, Rourke's attorney, refused to comment.

These and some 17 other fantasies will be fulfilled for a price. They will be sold next week at a Sotheby's auction to benefit four AIDS-related organizations.

"There's no way to put a price on some of these things or say how much they might sell for because in everyday terms, they normally would never happen," said Sotheby's spokeswoman Mallory May. "That's what makes them priceless."

Mike Nichols will offer a role as an extra in his upcoming movie "All the Pretty Horses,"

Pop star adds dance club to recording studio

CHANHASSEN, Minn. (AP) — Commoners are being allowed to party like it's 1999 at the studio used by the artist formerly known as Prince.

The pop star who wrote and recorded "1999," "Purple Rain" and other hits opened his Paisley Park Studios to the public last weekend as a recreation center with late-night dancing and music videos.

In its trial run Saturday, Paisley charged a $5 cover and offered a performance by the Purple One himself, who changed his name two years ago to an unpronounceable symbol.

Paisley Park officials won't say how active its sound stage and music studios are these days. But they say the rec-center nights won't interfere with business.

PROFESSOR BRINGS HISTORY OF HONORS

Shawn Cole
The Daily iowan

UI officials have chosen David Johnsen, UI alumnus and professor at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, as the new dean of the UI College of Dentistry.

Johnsen, who served as interim dean of the Case Western Reserve dental school in 1993, is a professor and chairman of pediatric dentistry there. He will replace James McLeran on Sept. 15.

Henri Manasse Jr., UI vice president of health sciences, said he was extremely pleased to have brought someone as qualified and nationally respected as Johnsen to the UI.

"Dr. Johnsen will bring a depth and breadth of experience and talent to his role as dean," he said. "As dental science and practice continues to change, I am confident that Dr. Johnsen will effectively lead our College of Dentistry into the next century."

Johnsen said moving to Iowa City will be a welcome homecoming, as he received his master's degree in pedodontics from the UI dental school in 1973.

"Iowa City is a lovely town," he said. "I'm excited to return to the university, and am really looking forward to working with a school with such a rich history of teaching, research and helping Iowa."

Johnsen said he hopes to bring certain experiences with him from Case Western.

"Dentistry is traditionally knowledge- and technique-oriented," he said. "I have a strong belief in teaching critical thinking, and I would like to build that into (the UI's) curriculum."

Johnsen said he also is excited about the UI decision to restructure the health sciences professional schools, making them more interdisciplinary.

He has not been away from the UI long enough to be forgotten by several staff members. Charles Kremenak, a professor emeritus in the dental school who served on Johnsen's thesis advisory committee more than 20 years ago, said Johnsen was an exceptional scholar.

"He was a really bright, very serious student," Kremenak said. "He wrote his thesis on an extremely difficult subject — it was as if he looked for the toughest thesis topic he could find."

Johnsen's thesis was chosen as the best pedodontics thesis in the nation by the American Academy of Pedodontics, said Kremenak, and Johnson has continued high-caliber research since.

Kremenak said Johnsen will be an effective leader in a changing industry.

"Even as a master's student, he had leadership capability," he said. "I don't even think about health care policy, but Dr. Johnsen has an exceptionally broad understanding of the changes affecting health care delivery."

Johnsen, who has been at Case Western since 1980, has won public and private grants — including two from the National Institute of Health — to research dental care for children and individuals with disabilities.

Park train returns to track

Christie Midthun
The Daily iowan

A group of about 15 people anxiously held their breath Tuesday afternoon while the red train at Drollinger's Carnival in City Park, Park Road, was placed onto its track for the first time in two years.

Many little ones and some not-so-little ones eagerly waited to be the first to board the train since the flood of '93 derailed it.

The train has been an attraction at City Park since 1952, when Gladys and Charlie Drollinger owned it. Around 1970, the Drollingers turned the train and other rides over to their son, Lyle. After the flood, Lyle's son, Guy, and Guy's wife, Sue, took on the repair and reopening of the carnival.

After the flood damage was assessed, the Drollingers were skeptical whether the carnival would reopen.

"The flood was pretty devastating," Sue Drollinger said. "Even after the other rides were repaired, it took two years of work to finally get (the train) on track."

The Drollingers said the man responsible for getting the train back on track was Jim Farr, of Iowa City.

Al Goldis/The Daily iowan

The train at Drollinger's Carnival in City Park, Park Road, is back on track after a two-year hiatus due to the 1993 flood. However, after two spins around Tuesday, the famous train experienced technical difficulties.

Farr said, and the engine was completely rebuilt. Farr said the train was underwater for about three months, which packed dirt and sand into every crevice of its parts.

"It was truly a challenge," Farr said. "Every bolt has been taken out of it, fixed and put back in."

Farr, a maintenance manager for Schweinfurth Transfer Inc., 3001 Industrial Park Road, said he's been riding the train since he was a little kid. The Drollinger's train was something he didn't want his kids to miss out on.

"My main push was that my kids and other kids would get to ride on it in the future," Farr said.

Riding the train in City Park seems to be a tradition for many Iowa City families. One family had three generations anticipating a ride around the train's 1/4-mile track.

Patricia Frederick said she used to ride the train when she was a little girl. Even after she moved to Virginia, she would visit Iowa City and always bring her daughter, Twila Davis, to City Park for a train ride. Tuesday was Frederick's granddaughter's first ride.

"I was happy the train wasn't gone for good," Frederick said. "This train is one of the few things from my childhood that's remained a constant. And now I can pass those memories on to my granddaughter."

The carnival is open seven days a week, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tickets for each ride are 75 cents.

With the train chugging along its track and all of its passengers laughing and waving, Guy Drollinger can't help but smile.

"Even when (the carnival) doesn't make money, it still makes me feel like a million bucks," he said.

Murder trial changed after defenses differ

Associated Press

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa — A judge has separated the first-degree murder trial of Burt Smith, 16, from that of three other Missouri teenagers in the shooting death of Rebecca Hauser of rural Union, Iowa.

Marshall County District Court Judge Carl Baker on Tuesday said that Smith's trial would begin 9 a.m. July 5 at the Webster County Courthouse in Fort Dodge, Iowa.

The trial for Smith's twin Derek, Jayson Speaks and Blake Privitt is set to begin Aug. 8 in Fort Dodge. All four youths are 16 and are from the Kirksville, Mo., area.

"A separate trial for Burt Smith is necessary because the defense has asserted conflicts with the defense presented by other defendants to the point of being irreconcilable and mutually exclusive," Baker said in the order. Smith has filed a defense notice of diminished responsibility.

The judge decided that a .22-caliber rifle that was discovered by Marshall County officers after they interviewed the four youths is inadmissible and may not be used as evidence. Baker said the rifle was recovered as a result of statements the youths made during their second interviews with officers. The judge had previously declared the statements made by the teens during that interview inadmissible because interview procedures violated Iowa and Missouri law.

Baker denied a request to continue the trials until later.

In addition, Baker granted extended media coverage. Defense attorneys had objected to expanded coverage allowing two video cameras, two still cameras and one audio system in the courtroom during trial.

Each of the four teens is charged in adult court with first-degree murder and first-degree robbery.

Des Moines teens find body

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Police on Tuesday identified the man who was beaten to death and found in a local park.

An autopsy found Yuval Kedem, 23, of Des Moines, died of massive head injuries, probably early Monday. Polk County Medical Examiner Francis Garrity said that his injuries likely came from a person's fists.

Police said three teen-agers found Kedem's body Monday in a remote section of Waterworks Park. He had been bound and gagged and was at the edge of a lagoon used to store lime to soften water.

Police said they were looking for a black, four-door 1988 BMW in connection with the slaying. The car bore Iowa license plate UYL 510.

Kedem was probably an intravenous drug user, police said, judging from the condition of his arms. He wore a black-and-blue bandanna, a golf shirt and jeans.

Officers said Kedem probably was killed elsewhere and his body was taken to the park.

Adam Smith, 16, a junior at Des Moines' Roosevelt High School, was one of the teens who discovered Kedem's body.

"(The body) was all dirty and at the bottom of a small hill, like he'd been thrown down there," Smith said. "He was all tied up with duct tape — real tight — all the way up to his knees. His hands were tied up real tight, too."

Former coach tackles director job

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Assistant UI football coach Robert Elliott will go from tackles and interceptions to money management and public relations when he leaves his position with the Hawkeyes to become the executive director of the UI Alumni Association July 1.

Elliott

Elliott, coach of the defensive secondary, said he was contacted by the director search committee late last winter and was asked to be a candidate for the position.

Although he was happy with his position as a coach, Elliott said he saw the position as an opportunity to make an impact in a wider variety of areas at the UI.

"My whole adult life has been centered around the University of Iowa, and I have a broader view of things than just football," he said. "I wanted to make a difference for Iowa on a grander scale than I had previously."

Elliott said the change is not indicative of any dissent with football.

"I really love the players and coaches," he said. "This was just an opportunity to go in a different direction and make a mark in a different way."

Elliott said his experience as a coach will enhance his work at the association because he's used to long hours and hard work.

"I didn't put a lot of hours into football because I had to — I did it because I wanted to," he said. "The same will be true here. If it takes a lot of hours to make the association successful, so be it."

As director, Elliott said his main duties will be to handle budget matters, oversee staff members and be a visible spokesperson for the 46,000 member organization. He said he will also work with staff to choose — and possibly change — the spending priorities of the association.

For now, however, Elliott said he's just trying to learn the ins and outs of the association and will be cautious in making any big changes.

Ann Rhodes, vice president for university relations, said she is very excited to work with Elliott, who will report association activities to her.

"Robert is just what the association needs," Rhodes said. "He's very good at external relations, and I think he'll bring leadership and vision to the group. It's really important to the association that the director be very visible, very credible and have a long track record with the university."

Elliott said he feels a great loyalty to the UI, and sees his position as a way to give something back to his alma mater.

"I came to the UI because it was a great fit for me as an individual," Elliott said. "Iowa is a very warm university compared to other schools. And once I was here, I developed a great loyalty to the school. This is my school, and many alumni feel the same way. Iowa gave us a lot of opportunities to be successful in our lives, and there are many ways to pay that back. This is the way for me."

INNOVATIVE LEADER RETURNS FROM OHIO STATE

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

A new director will be in charge of the UI Alumni Association July 1, but another leadership role has already been filled.

On June 2, Lois Harper Eichacker was named the 1995-96 president of the Alumni Board of Directors.

Ann Rhodes, vice president for university relations, said she is looking forward to seeing Eichacker in the presidential position.

"I'm very impressed by how bright, intelligent, compassionate and energetic Lois is," Rhodes said. "I think she'll make a wonderful president. She has tremendous leadership skills, is a very active member and is very good at motivating people."

Eichacker previously represented the UI Black Alumni Association on the alumni board. She has also served on the executive committee and the program committee for the association. She was inducted into the Iowa Women's Hall of Fame in 1994.

Eichacker said her main duties will be presiding over board meetings and setting the agenda for the meetings. She said she is also excited to work with new executive director Robert Elliott, the new UI president and the construction of a new building that will house the association.

Over the course of her presidency, Eichacker said she would like to increase UI staff involvement with the association and work to expand the Iowa City and Johnson County I-Clubs. She said she would also like to expand the Career Information Network and get in-state UI alumni more involved with legislative advocacy for the UI.

Although Eichacker transferred to Ohio State after three years at the UI, she said she feels strong ties to the UI and is proud of its diversity efforts.

"For many years, when someone spoke of beacons of integration and progress in the Midwest, the University of Iowa was always mentioned," she said. "There have been times where I've felt the university has not lived up to that, but by and large it is a beacon, and it's someplace I want to be associated with."

BUCHANAN NOT THREATENED

Specter requests debate

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Pennsylvania Sen. Arlen Specter on Tuesday challenged Republican presidential rival Pat Buchanan to a series of debates, saying the two represent the major ideological forces in the GOP.

"I think it would be a grabber," Specter said in an interview. "I'm not opposed to including the other candidates, but I think it is crisper if you have a two-way confrontation."

Specter is running for the party's presidential nomination as a pro-choice moderate while Buchanan courts anti-abortion conservatives.

At a news conference, Buchanan rejected the suggestion and said Specter was just trying to draw attention to his own lagging campaign.

"We don't plan right now to schedule any separate series of debates with Senator Specter," said Buchanan. "I think Senator Specter wants to get into a debate situation to help his campaign, which has not made great progress."

Buchanan said that Specter's challenge shows "he believes I am the frontrunning conservative."

Though the two differ on abortion, Specter said the debate also could cover foreign policy, trade and defense issues where the two represent major differences in GOP thinking.

Specter said the first debate should be held in Iowa, which has the first test of presidential strength in precinct caucuses next February. Another clash should then be held in New Hampshire, which has the first primary election, Specter said.

Specter said he's sent a letter to

"Arlen Specter and Pat Buchanan are the only two candidates who are speaking from the heart."

Pennsylvania Sen.
Arlen Specter

Buchanan's campaign and staffers have discussed the idea. "I know they're considering it because they haven't said 'no,'" Specter said.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole is the early frontrunner for the GOP nomination, and both Specter and Buchanan are seeking to carve out places for themselves.

Specter conceded the move is self-serving. Buchanan and Specter trail Dole in the polls and a debate would draw attention to their campaigns.

The GOP field is crowded and the candidates have tried to position themselves in relation to Dole. Scheduling debates allows Specter to portray himself as the moderate alternative to Dole, while setting up Buchanan as the conservative alternative.

Asked what he would say to those who would call the debates self-serving, Specter said, "I'd say they're right. But I would say it's also in the public interest to hear Arlen Specter and Pat Buchanan."

He said the two have long articulated the moderate and conservative Republican positions, and voters would gain from hearing a debate over the competing ideologies.

"Arlen Specter and Pat Buchanan are the only two candidates who are speaking from the heart," Specter said.

"I'm prepared to debate anybody in the field, but I think you have the clearest difference of views between the two of us," Specter said.

Specter said the clash could focus on "core Republican values," saying conservatives such as Buchanan divert attention from that debate by raising volatile social issues such as abortion.

"If we have the divisive social agenda on the Senate floor, I can guarantee you we'll never get to the core issues," Specter said.

Taylor asserts he's the best candidate in the swarm of Republican set to face off with President Clinton in 1996, because he's a political outsider and won't bow to special interest groups.

He compared running for the nomination to climbing a mountain and said special-interest groups and political action committees entice candidates with campaign money in exchange for future political favors.

prits), and someone with air conditioning can expect to pay twice as much for electricity now than during December or January.

Franz used his own centrally air-conditioned home as an example. He said the average number of kilowatt hours used by his household during the summer is 1,375 per month. Multiply that by the summer electricity rate and his bill comes to about $132.68 per month. During other seasons, however, Franz said his average usage is about 900 kilowatt hours, making his bill about $72.54, or almost half the summer bill.

The usage numbers for most apartments should be about half the numbers for his home, Franz said.

"For apartments, I'd say the average usage is about 400 to 450 kilowatt hours per month," he said. "Adding in the air conditioning that goes to between 600 and 800 kilowatt hours per month."

As more gay and lesbian athletes go public, the initial shock is certain to shatter the stereotypes, both athletes and homosexuals.

Venedo — Basayev's home town — was recently taken by Russian troops, but Chechen rebels continue to wage guerrilla war from the mountains around it.

The hostages freed Tuesday night were returning on the seven buses to the nearby republic of Dagestan, according to the Interior Ministry. The gunmen released 123 hostages at about 8:30 p.m., according to the NTV television network.

The buses left Monday afternoon from Budyonnovsk and headed for Chechnya along winding steppe backroads. The buses spent much of Tuesday just over the border in Dagestan while the Chechens sought additional safety guarantees from the government.

ITAR-Tass said the Russian government provided the guarantees, but Moscow would not confirm the report.

He compared running for the nomination to climbing a mountain, and said special-interest groups and political action committees entice candidates with campaign money in exchange for future political favors.

"Let's take (Kan.) Senator (Bob) Dole. When he starts climbing the mountain, all these strings will start coming down and attaching themselves to him in the form of special-interest groups and lobbyists," Taylor said. "I have no strings attached to me. I don't owe anyone in the government anything."

Taylor vowed not to accept campaign contributions from political action committees; he's financing his campaign with $5 million of his own money.

Four main planks in Taylor's political platform include reducing bureaucracy, restoring the United States' manufacturing base, cutting taxes and taking power away from political action committees and special-interest groups.

Despite Taylor's entry into the political fray only two months ago, Marlys Popma, political director of the Iowa Republican Party, contends Taylor is being treated on the same level with the Doles, Pat Buchanan and Phil Gramms of the world.

"As for this office, we treat every candidate who walks in the door — walks into the race — as a legitimate candidate," Popma said. "Four years ago, this kind of timing was not unusual. It's not that he's so late but that everyone else started so early."

"Dark horse" is probably a flattering way to describe Taylor's campaign, said Peverill Squire, chairman of the UI political science department.

"It's really a long-shot candidacy," Squire said. "He has no natural base of support within the party and no strong constituency."

Taylor is often compared to another businessman-turned-presidential hopeful, Texas billionaire Ross Perot. While both are successful businessmen from humble origins, Taylor said he doesn't believe a third party could survive in the United States and that the Democrats and Republicans are the only players in the political game. He's urging former Perot supporters to throw their votes behind him.

Taylor insisted he is a viable candidate and has all intentions of winning the Republican nomination and the presidency.

"If you take the word 'American,' the last four letters of that word spell 'I can,'" Taylor said. "I believe I can."

Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., called estimates of a sharp rise in deaths "ludicrous." He said the bill does not raise speed limits but merely allows the states to set them.

"I'm concerned about safety," he said. "I just happen to think that the state of Oklahoma and the state of Virginia are just as concerned about safety as the federal government."

The Senate voted 65-35 to table an effort to restore the federal limit for cars to the highway bill. Just before that, the senators voted by a narrow 51-49 to keep the limits for trucks.

Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., pressed for the truck provision.

He said that on a recent trip home, he realized that "we were doing the wrong thing by lifting the speed limit for all vehicles." Trucks go fast trying to meet deadlines carrying huge loads, he said, and "by slowing these trucks down we're going to have less fatalities."

The limit would still apply to trucks weighing 26,000 pounds or more and for buses that carry 16 or more passengers.

Under federal rules, states that do not adopt these safety requirements have to use some of their highway funds to set up education programs instead of building or maintaining roads.

Smith termed such requirements "coercive."

"For apartments, I'd say the average usage is about 400 to 450 kilowatt hours per month," he said. "Adding in the air conditioning, that goes to between 600 and 800 kilowatt hours per month."

In other words — bills are about $34.25 in the winter compared to $67.55 in the summer.

Another factor adding to the cost of air conditioning is buying the unit itself, if necessary. Central air conditioners, the larger units that cool entire buildings, cost a lot more than smaller window units. Central units start at about $1,400 and can reach prices of more than $2,000.

For people living in apartments, the window unit is often the cooling method of choice, with the unit generally cooling only one room.

Tony Yazdi, a department manager at Wal-Mart Discount Cities, 1001 Highway 1 West, said the various types of room air conditioners at the store range in price from $247 to $497.

Although the room-cooling models are generally less efficient — or energy-saving — than central air conditioners, Franz said using the room-type units can be less expensive.

"To a certain extent, room air conditioners can be less costly to operate than central air conditioners, depending on how often you use it and how you use it," he said.

Of course, there are a lot of people willing to empty a little more out of their wallets in the search for comfort from the searing heat.

UI senior Dana Good said he hasn't seen his electric bill since the heat wave started, but he and his roommates try to keep the air conditioning for extreme heat emergencies.

"I don't know what it's going to cost, but we try not to run it if the heat's bearable," he said. "Unbearable ... is probably when you come home with a film of sweat on you and it's still on you 15 minutes later."

However, Good said he's willing to make the emptier wallet / cooler apartment tradeoff.

"It's better than suffering," he said. "I'm willing to shell out the extra cash rather than suffering with it."

"I would just say that that's my personal business and it's no one else's business at all," Daniel said.

The possibility of losing endorsements was not a concern, she said, adding, "I just don't feel like whether I'm gay or not should be an issue to people. I want people to watch me play golf for my golf skills ... I find it hard to believe that someone is standing on the other side of the rope, going, 'Is Beth Daniel gay or is she not gay?'"

Last month, CBS golf commentator Ben Wright caused a flap when a newspaper reporter quoted him as saying that widespread lesbianism on the LPGA Tour was hurting sponsorship.

The furor that ensued — with Wright summoned to New York and statements of support and denial flying from both sides — illustrates the passion, fear and ignorance that the very idea of gay athletes engenders, said the Women's Sport Foundation, which urges education.

It has been "kept under the table for a long time by physical educators and athletes who fear the allegation of lesbianism and by leaders of women's sports who would rather not be controversial," said foundation executive director Donna Lopiano.

There is also a generation gap among gays and lesbians. Younger homosexuals are generally more comfortable being "out" than their elders, a factor likely to carry over to young athletes in college and professional sports.

Older, more established gay athletes and coaches, meanwhile, fear coming out will make them pariahs. They point to Dave Kopay, a running back for the Green Bay Packers and Washington Redskins in the 1970s. Kopay, the first pro athlete to publicly acknowledge his homosexuality, sells linoleum in Los Angeles after futile efforts to coach. He believes pro football blacklisted him after "The David Kopay Story: An Extraordinary Self-Revelation" hit bestseller lists.

LICENSES WON'T STOP UNDERAGE DRINKING

Fighting the impossible

For years, underage drinking has been a huge problem in the United States. College students, perhaps the most common age group to participate in this trend, have been able to obtain alcoholic beverages by altering their IDs and changing the birthdates on their driver's licenses so they are legal.

On June 13, The Daily Iowan did a follow-up to a January story about changes being made to Iowa driver's licenses. Plans have been finalized to make it "nearly impossible to effectively alter the IDs."

A quick glance over the DI's police section will quickly prove that the number of people who are charged with possession of alcohol under the legal age far exceeds the number of people who are charged with possession of altered identification.

According to the story, additions to IDs include a state seal, the date of the person's 21st birthday printed in red and a color-coded border to designate that the person isn't 21.

This, however, really won't make much of a difference in Iowa City. As Chris Graham, a manager at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., pointed out in the DI's Jan. 18 story, "It's not necessarily that people are altering the ID themselves, but they use someone else's."

It is very easy for an underage drinker to find a friend who looks similar to them and borrow their ID for the evening. In this case, the IDs are perfectly legal and the new licenses won't really make a difference.

Another factor to consider — especially in Iowa City — is that many of the bars admit patrons 19 and 20 years old. If they bring along a friend who is over 21, it is very easy to get an alcoholic beverage. If the bar is extremely crowded, as most Iowa City bars tend to be, it is too difficult to check every table for legal IDs. Older friends can merely order drinks for their younger companions.

A quick glance over the DI's police section will quickly prove that the number of people who are charged with possession of alcohol under the legal age far exceeds the number of people who are charged with possession of altered identification. It seems that altered IDs aren't the problem; the problem is merely people getting the alcohol.

The new Iowa driver's licenses also won't affect a third of the UI community: the huge number of people with out-of-state IDs. With over 10,000 students coming from places other than Iowa (whether other states or other countries), changes in Iowa driver's licenses won't mean much.

It seems that no matter what new legislation against underage drinking is developed, there is always a way around it.

It is virtually impossible to curb underage drinking. Legislators have been trying for decades. There will always be an older friend to buy for those who cannot, or an acquaintance who will loan their ID for the evening. It seems that no matter what new legislation against underage drinking is developed, there is always a way around it.

Although the new Iowa driver's license will surely prevent alterations, it won't erase the countless other means that those under 21 have of obtaining alcohol.

Act offers protection for homosexuals

To the Editor:

Ten years ago, as a graduate student at the University of Utah, I was lucky to have a summer internship in an architect's office in Salt Lake City. One day, my boss asked me about the firm's other intern, "Is Bob gay?" He continued, "I think he is. I'm going to fire him."

How could I tell my boss that I was gay — and did not know anything about Bob — without risking my own job? I doubted Bob was gay, but there were no state or federal laws that protected the civil rights of people from discrimination based on sexual orientation. Speaking up could have cost me my job, gotten me expelled from graduate school and cost me my career. I am ashamed to say that I remained silent.

I cannot remain silent any longer. There still are no federal laws that protect the civil rights of gay Americans. Only nine states offer that protection. Republican Sen. Jim Jeffords of Vermont has introduced an Employment Non-Discrimination Act to protect gay Americans from discrimination at work. Co-sponsors include 118 representatives and 30 senators, including Tom Harkin of Iowa.

I agree with civil rights activist Coretta Scott King who says that ENDA offers "long-overdue protections."

Speaker misquoted concerning 'Contract'

To the Editor:

I am writing to defend Alysha Davis, the 15-year-old who spoke at the "Contract Against America" rally on May 6. She has been misquoted and thus, maligned. Davis did not say that she was unwilling to work at McDonald's. What she said was that the system prevents her from holding any kind of job with the goal of saving for school.

Even though Davis is only 15 and is not the head of her household, any money that she earns for herself is deducted from her family's AFDC and Food Stamp allotment. This guarantees that she can neither gain work experience nor save money toward her college education.

This ensures that Davis will have to apply for financial assistance if she wants to go to college. I have known Davis for only a few months, but an unwillingness to work toward goals or work on her own behalf is not a trait that I have seen in her. I believe that the person who misquoted her was hearing Davis' words with her own bias rather than hearing what Davis really had to say.

U.N. legacy: Taking care of the 'Bosnian problem'

There is a man standing over her. He is not her father.

You can tell because his face shows no pain, just the same tired horror that mirrors your own. He has wandered upon her — you presume — and bent to help, though the blood-soaked dress makes evident the uselessness of his efforts. His whole body is bent over her, but his eyes are locked on the camera, frozen. He is saying something to the photographer — yelling an urgency — but the words are trapped in the dreadful moment as the shutter snaps shut.

I have only seen this photograph once — in the summer of 1992 inside the front section of The Oregonian — but its image is burned into my mind. I see it every time I hear about another death in Bosnia, the way my parents see a running napalm-burned child at the mention of Vietnam. It lives in me.

It is a photograph I would like to have tattooed on the foreheads of several politicians, who have mastered the art of hypocrisy to a level that would make even Oliver North blush. Our shifting policy toward Bosnia has reflected so many different agendas that I can no longer decipher any logical progression of thought.

Recently, the United Nations agreed to three conciliations set forth by Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic in return for the release of the U.N. hostages: an end to U.N. efforts to confiscate Serb heavy artillery, the release of four Serbian prisoners caught after killing two French peacekeepers (the United Nations denies that this one was part of the package, insisting it was "just a coincidence") and that the United Nations pull out from Sarajevo, Bosnia's beleaguered capital city, and from all weapons collection sites.

His whole body is bent over her, but his eyes are locked on the camera, frozen. He is saying something to the photographer — yelling an urgency — but the words are trapped in the dreadful moment as the shutter snaps shut.

The morning after the withdrawal, seven senior citizens were killed waiting in line for water in a suburb outside Sarajevo. If we are exercising a "moral imperative" by placing peacekeeping troops in Bosnia, caving in to Karadzic's blackmail by surrendering Sarajevo to the Serbs is nothing more than an immoral act.

The Bosnia we have left behind is not the same one that we blew into during our tidy, peacekeeping uniforms in 1992. Thanks to the United Nations-enforced arms embargo, the Bosnian Muslims have practically no weapons while the Bosnian Serbs are toodling around in sporty Russian tanks. Food is desperately scarce and it is said that fuel will run out by the end of the month.

If the United Nations is going to evacuate its 22,000 troops completely by the end of the year — as the political talking heads seem to suspect — the least they can do is lift an arms embargo that has been unfair to the Muslims from the start. If we're not going to protect those seven senior citizens, at least let someone. If brain dead American hicks can carry semi-automatic hand guns, civilians living in a war zone should have that same option.

The little girl in that photograph has been dead three years this summer. Since it is once again "open season" for children in Sarajevo, I expect the image to be recast and replayed again and again — a child dead in the street; a helpless bystander, a photographer content to record the event while taking no action. It is a U.N. legacy that will live long in the hearts of the people of Sarajevo and one that, as an organization, the United Nations may never be able to politically live down.

As Karadzic recently announced that the government was now under the control of the military and that all young men over 17 were to report for duty, it is also a legacy that may take care of the "Bosnian problem" once and for all.

MIKE ROYKO

Question of sexism is in the eye of the beholder

Mike Royko

I have a question about sexism and male insensitivity, one of the great social issues of our time.

Perhaps those of the female persuasion can answer my question and save me from embarrassing lapses of insensitivity.

Here is my question: Let us say a female has a figure that, by conventional standards, is pleasing to the eye. Let us also say that she wears garments such as tight shorts that serve to call attention to her physical attributes.

Is it sexist for a male person to silently admire those parts of the female person's body that the female person apparently chooses to put on public display?

I raise this question because I might have inadvertently written something that was insensitive, which I'm prone to inadvertently do whenever I inadvertently open my mouth.

Last week I wrote about women golfers and said that they have better manners, play faster and are not nearly as obnoxious as male golfers.

This was a foolish article advising women golfers not to have temper tantrums on the course, when everybody knows male golfers are much more inclined toward hysterics.

Without boasting, I thought the views I expressed in that column were sensitive and enlightened and could not offend anyone but loudmouthed male duffers.

But I have heard from several females who found something in that column offensive.

One of them, Michelle DeFalco of Burbank, Ill., summed up their complaints this way:

"In my opinion you severely damaged your credibility when you included two very degrading and sexist remarks."

"1. They believe that as lesser creatures they must stand aside."

"2. Women can be more civilized golf companions, especially those who look good in tight shorts."

"How can you explain this?"

Well, as to point one, I thought it was clear that I wasn't saying that females are lesser creatures. But in the context of the column, I meant that many insensitive and insecure male golfers try to make them feel like lesser creatures.

So I believe that DeFalco misunderstood my well-intentioned observation and I forgive her.

As to point two, I have to plead confusion.

I would be dishonest if I said that — everything else being equal — I did not enjoy the company of a woman who looked good in tight shorts a bit more than one whose girth might block out a setting sun.

It isn't that I would not enjoy the company of the latter. But, all else being equal, a perky or willowy figure would do more to enhance my enjoyment of the game.

I don't see why that should offend anyone. It has always been my impression that if a female person with a fine figure wore tight shorts in a public setting, it was because she took pride in how her bottom and her legs looked in tight shorts — and she did not object to restrained but admiring glances so long as they were not accompanied by leers, whistling, panting, slobbering sounds, pinching or other crude displays.

And if this female person did not appreciate restrained but admiring glances, she could pin a sign to the back of her shorts that said something like: "Stop staring, creep."

Or she could simply wear a more demure garment, such as a skirt or baggy slacks, which are always in fashion.

Let me put my reasoning another way:

For the sake of argument, we'll imagine that through some strange twist of evolution or culture, the most attractive physical attribute a male person could have was a naturally bald head.

We'll imagine that the sight of a naturally bald male head, gleaming in the sun, was sure to attract admiring glances from female persons. And even inspire yearning, longing and thoughts that might be considered wicked.

What could a male person do if he knew that the sight of his bald head was having this erotic effect on red-blooded females?

If he welcomed such attention, he would proudly display his scalp — maybe shave off any gray fuzz and smear on some goose grease to add luster.

But if he was a modest, proper sort — as many of us are — he'd wear a hat, a cap or a beanie.

And, under those circumstances, if a female columnist wrote that she enjoyed the company of bald golfers, I doubt that any males — fully clothed or scantily-clad — would object.

Especially if she looked good in really tight shorts.

I guess I can't help myself.

Recurrent enzyme linked lung cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An enzyme that allows cells to endle reproduce — already found in many types of cancers — was discovered in 80 percent of lung cancer tumors in recent testing.

The study suggests that the enzyme, telomerase, plays a central role in cancer and that blocking its effects could possibly control many malignancies, said Dr. Jerry Shay, researcher at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas.

Shay said that laboratories — including his own — already are looking for chemicals or genetic engineering techniques to neutralize telomerase. He said that some compounds may be tested on humans within two years.

In a report to be published today in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, Shay and his co-authors report that although telomerase is present in most of the lung cancer cells removed from patients, they could not find the enzyme in non-cancerous tissue removed from the same patients.

Thus, said Shay, the finding suggests strongly that lung cancer, along with most other solid cancers, depends on telomerase to proliferate endlessly. Earlier studies had found telomerase in breast, stomach, colon, uterine, liver, ovarian and other types of solid tumors and some have suggested that it may be the universal element that makes cancer so deadly.

Study shows vitamin E lessens heart disease danger

CHICAGO (AP) — New research adds to the evidence that taking vitamin E can reduce the risk of heart disease.

In a study of 156 men with existing heart disease, researchers found that taking daily doses of vitamin E for two years appeared to slow the development of fatty deposits — called plaque — in heart arteries. Such deposits can lead to chest pain and heart attacks.

Dr. Howard Hodis, director of Atherosclerosis Research Unit at the University of Southern California, said more research is needed to prove whether vitamin E can actually slow or even block heart disease.

"It's hard to say that it's preventive — that's what we hope is going to be the bottom line," said Hodis, whose study appears in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

In research funded by the federal government, Hodis and colleagues examined data from subjects in another heart disease study.

Though not a requirement of the study, many of the subjects decided on their own to take vitamin E. The USC researchers compared angiograms — heart X-rays — from those subjects before and after the two-year period.

Those who reported taking an average of 100 to 450 units a day showed less plaque buildup than those who took lower doses.

Simpson prosecution hurries to finish case

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's prosecutors on Tuesday dropped plans to present more evidence of domestic violence between Simpson and his slain ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson, racing to wrap up their five-month-long case next week.

"We're ready to rest with a mountain of evidence against this guy," Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden said after an abbreviated court day.

Later, at a televised news conference, he challenged defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. to "put up or shut up" about allegations of a police conspiracy and evidence contamination.

In an unusual testimonial, lead prosecutor Marcia Clark beamed as she extolled the case as "beautiful" and "overwhelming."

"We have already presented an extremely compelling case," she declared. "It's time to get the case to the jury."

Legal analysts, however, suspected other reasons for the altered schedule, among them a feeling that jurors were unimpressed with talk of spousal battles in the Simpsons' relationship.

Peter Arenella, a law professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, noted that some ex-jurors saw such evidence as "simply an attempt to smear Mr. Simpson's character without establishing his motive for murder."

Ousted juror Willie Cravin, for example, said in an interview after his dismissal: "I think in every marriage there are ups and downs, so that's just part of life. It doesn't mean that someone is guilty because they're just being human."

Darden said prosecutors will also pass up the chance to tell jurors that DNA analysis of blood on a pair of socks found in Simpson's bedroom and on a back gate at the crime scene showed no traces of EDTA, a preservative used in blood samples at the crime lab.

Defense attorneys have suggested that the presence of the preservative would show that Simpson's blood, and possibly the blood of his ex-wife, was planted on evidence as part of a conspiracy to frame Simpson.

"There is no EDTA in the gate samples, no EDTA in socks," Darden declared.

Asked why the prosecution was bypassing this evidence, Darden said it was up to defense attorneys to try to prove EDTA contamination in their case since they had made the allegation.

The tactical shift came as a surprise. As late as Monday, a sidebar transcript showed that Clark was talking about domestic violence evidence and a plan to "revisit the gloves."

Darden left the courtroom Tuesday carrying a fistful of new leather gloves similar to the ones prosecutors have sought to portray as the murder gloves. One of the evidence gloves was found near the bodies, the other on Simpson's estate.

Simpson dealt the prosecution a blow last week when he tugged and grimaced while trying to pull the bloody gloves over protective latex gloves and muttered to the jurors that they were too small. Darden then scrambled to try to show that the gloves — when new — would have fit Simpson and that the blood caused them to shrink.

Darden, who was widely criticized for allowing Simpson such a dramatic moment before the jury, said the importance of the glove demonstration was exaggerated.

"I think the jury understands that a latex glove, in addition to some poor acting by the defendant, contributed to the glove not going on his hand completely," Darden said. "When I look at the videotape ... I see a glove on O.J.'s hand."

Asked if he regretted his decision, he replied, "We're trial lawyers. We're paid to take risks and that's what we did."

Cochran wasn't at the news conference, but Darden seized the opportunity to challenge the skilled attorney who has been his nemesis throughout the case.

"Mr. Cochran," he said, "you've been mouthing off for the past 12 months. OK, Johnnie, these are baseless allegations of conspiracy and contamination. ... Now's the time to put up or shut up."

Cochran didn't immediately respond to Darden's comments. But earlier, he said he was surprised by the shift in prosecution strategy. Asked why he thought prosecutors were dropping witnesses, he said, "I don't know. Maybe they've gotten smart."

Darden said remaining evidence includes records from the cellular phone in Simpson's Bronco, hairs and fibers, and testimony from a statistician who calculated the likelihood of Simpson's blood type matching samples at the crime scene and at his estate.

Until Tuesday, they had planned to call at least four more domestic violence witnesses: two limousine drivers, a baby sitter and a personal trainer.

The decision also canceled the anticipated appearance of Keith Zlomoswitch, a former boyfriend of Brown Simpson who last year told a grand jury that Simpson stalked his ex-wife and once spied on the couple having sex on her couch.

Prosecutors have also been trying to get the testimony of Simpson's former wife, Marquerte Simpson Thomas, who has resisted a subpoena.

On Tuesday, jurors heard from a Bloomingdale's shoe buyer from New York City and a DNA expert from the state Department of Justice crime lab.

The shoe buyer, Samuel Poser, said he sold shoes to Simpson about five times beginning in 1990 but couldn't remember the brands. He said Simpson preferred dress casual shoes and wore a size 12. But when he was shown a pair of Bruno Magli shoes linked by the FBI to bloody shoe prints at the crime scene, Poser could not tie them to Simpson.

FILIBUSTER THREATENED

Senate vote planned for Foster nomination

Nita Lelyveld
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After four months of talk, the Senate is finally about to decide what to do with the surgeon general nomination of Dr. Henry Foster.

With a filibuster assured and all the arguments well-known, the Senate will take up the nomination and then debate for just three hours today before voting on a proposal to cut off discussion. Supporters need 60 votes to prevail, and Phil Gramm, the senator threatening the filibuster, says they don't have them.

Foster's nomination has been under attack by anti-abortion groups and conservative lawmakers ever since President Clinton put his name forward in February. The Nashville, Tenn., gynecologist-obstetrician — whose efforts to combat teen pregnancy earned him a "Point of Light" from President Bush — says he has performed 39 abortions in four decades as a doctor.

If today's debate closure vote fails, another will take place Thursday. If that one fails, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole has said he will take the nomination off the floor, with no indication when or if it might be brought back. Foster has enough support to win confirmation if the filibuster can be broken. But the Senate's 46 Democrats must persuade at least 14 Republicans to vote with them.

Dole and Minority Leader Tom Daschle agreed to the voting schedule Tuesday afternoon. Dole opposes the nomination; Daschle supports it.

Gramm, like Dole, a contender for the Republican presidential nomination, said he believes he can sustain a filibuster and kill the nomination.

"We're working very very hard on it. I believe that we have 41 votes as of today," Gramm said Tuesday, before the leaders announced their final decision.

If Foster supporters can put together the 60 needed votes either today or Thursday, the Senate would then proceed to a final vote on the nomination.

Dole agreed to schedule a vote on Foster after meeting with the doctor on Monday.

So far, eight of the Senate's 54 Republicans have said they will support Foster. They are John Chafee of Rhode Island, Ben Nighthorse Campbell of Colorado, Jim Jeffords of Vermont, Bill Frist of Tennessee, Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, Bill Cohen of Maine, Bob Packwood of Oregon and Alan Simpson of Wyoming.

Some Republicans who do not support Foster believe nonetheless that the Senate should vote on his nomination.

NEGOTIATED SETTLEMENT DESIRED

Srecko Latal
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A few rare hours of respite from war yielded to familiar gunfire and explosions Tuesday night even as the Bosnian government and rebel Serbs hinted they might talk peace again — with some conditions.

U.N. spokeswoman Maj. Myriam Sochacki said fighting began south of Sarajevo about 6 p.m. after a quiet day. Sirens sounded a general alert as artillery battles erupted anew. Two civilians were killed and seven — including a child — were wounded, the government said.

U.N. observers were not able to provide further details on the fighting because of restrictions on their movement.

Bosnian Serb media reported that government forces renewed artillery attacks around Serb-held Hadzici southwest of Sarajevo and launched infantry attacks in several locations. Three Serb civilians were slightly wounded in shelling of the western Serb-held suburb of Rajlovac, Serb TV reported.

Bosnian government sources claimed the army made "significant" gains in heavy fighting around western suburbs.

A three-day blitz by Bosnian government forces last week heralded the start of a summer-long offensive to try to crack the three-year Serb siege of Sarajevo. The Muslim-led government army hopes to capture strategic heights around the city, thus severing Serb supply routes.

The city has not had electricity, water or regular food aid for the last month.

Tuesday's fighting came as Russian envoy Vitaly Churkin met Serbian and Bosnian Serb leaders on a peace initiative masterminded

Associated Press

Smoke from an impacting mortar shell rises in Sarajevo Tuesday, as heavy fighting resumes between warring factions along most front lines in and around the besieged capital. The sudden outburst of fighting came as Russian envoy Vitaly Churkin met Serbian and Bosnian Serb leaders on a mission that appeared to be part of a wider peace initiative.

by France, Russia and Serbia.

Churkin met in the Serbian capital of Belgrade with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic for the second day Tuesday. Monday night, he held talks with Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic.

In Paris on Tuesday, French Foreign Minister Herve De Charette met with his Bosnian counterpart, Muhamed Sacirbey.

Both the Muslim-led Bosnian government and the rebel Serbs have indicated they might be willing to return to peace talks if conditions are right.

"I think we both understand that peace in Bosnia is dependent on a negotiated settlement," Sacirbey said.

He added that the government's only condition was the "lifting of the siege of Sarajevo" — ending bombardment of the city and the blocks on aid coming in.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic made it clear over the weekend that the military offensive to crack the siege would continue unless those conditions are met.

Government forces made substantial gains around Sarajevo last week, according to U.N. officials, and at least temporarily cut two Serb supply roads. The Serbs apparently regained control of the road between their stronghold in Pale and the Serb-held Lukavica suburb.

Under intense pressure from Milosevic and Churkin, the Bosnian Serbs may be edging closer to accepting an international peace plan they have rejected for a year.

The plan — proposed by Russia, Britain, France, Germany and the United States — would divide Bosnia, giving 49 percent to Serbs and 51 percent to a Muslim-Croat federation. The Bosnian government has accepted the plan, but Serbs, who now hold 70 percent of the country, have not.

Nelson tells Knicks he's not interested

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks, looking for a coach to replace Pat Riley, met with Don Nelson and his lawyer said he's interested in the job, The New York Times reported Wednesday.

The newspaper said Knicks general manager Ernie Grunfeld spoke in Milwaukee with Nelson, former Milwaukee Bucks and Golden State Warriors coach and former Iowa player.

The Knicks also are reportedly interested in speaking with former Detroit and New Jersey coach Chuck Daly about the opening.

Wallace works out for Warriors

MORAGA, Calif. (AP) — In competition to be No. 1 in the NBA draft, Rasheed Wallace is making no concessions.

"No one sees themselves or puts themselves second," Wallace said after working out for the Golden State Warriors, who have the first pick in next Wednesday's draft. "Everyone in the draft, every workout they do, they're running for that No. 1 pick or that first pick by a club. You have to go out there with the attitude that 'I'm No. 1.'"

On Tuesday, the 6-foot-10 center-forward from North Carolina had the Warriors' undivided attention. With Warriors general manager Dave Twardzik and coach Rick Adelman looking on, Wallace went through an hourlong series of 1-on-1 drills against assistant coach Rod Higgins at St. Mary's college gym.

Iverson's felony conviction is repealed

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A Virginia appeals court today reversed the conviction of Georgetown basketball star Allen Iverson on three felony counts in connection with a 1993 brawl.

The Virginia Court of Appeals set aside Iverson's convictions on three counts of maiming by means of a deadly weapon, stemming from a melee at a Hampton bowling alley that involved about 40 people and several injured.

Prosecutors said during Iverson's trial in August of 1993 that he and his friends initiated the chain of events leading to the fight. He and two teenage friends were found guilty by Hampton Circuit Judge Nelson Overton in connection with the Feb. 13, 1993 fight.

In its ruling, the appeals court said there was no evidence that Iverson joined in any mob that might have formed during the ruckus.

Why Stringer can't leave Iowa

I had never even seen C. Vivian Stringer in person before last fall when I began covering the Iowa women's basketball team. And I certainly don't claim to be an expert on her.

But the opinion that she can't walk away from the University of Iowa is staring me right in the face.

Everything I know about Stringer is based on a couple of months worth of press conferences, a few off-to-the-side conversations and legend.

As far as I can tell, her legend is based on two attributes: her ability to win and her relationship with her players. And those are the reasons why I feel she can't leave Iowa.

Not now.

When Stringer walked into a press conference after a loss (which happened more often than not last season), I could see the frustration in her face. I could see the confusion, the disappointment and sometimes the anger she felt as she experienced losing for the first time in her 23 years of coaching.

For 22 years C. Vivian Stringer was at the helm of a winner and now the rumor mill is suggesting that she might walk away after her first losing season.

I find that extremely hard to believe. After watching Iowa come so close in a dozen losses last season, I couldn't wait to see Iowa turn things around in '96.

Neither could freshman Tiffany Gooden.

"We are so hungry to kick everybody's butts that kicked ours," Gooden said immediately following Iowa's season-ending loss to Penn State in March.

Everybody had next season on their minds. Junior point guard Karen Clayton, who was obviously excited at the thought of returning to a team that was losing just one full-time starter couldn't wait.

Senior Simone Edwards and freshman Malikah Willis, who had to watch the season from the sidelines thanks to torn knee ligaments, couldn't wait.

Gooden, Willis and the other five "sensational" freshman couldn't wait to see what was possible once they got an extra year of experience under their belts.

And certainly their leader couldn't wait to show the Big Ten what this team is really made of.

Or so I thought.

It is possible that Stringer is just as excited for next season as anyone else is — she hasn't commented on the idea of taking the job at Rutgers. But the fact that she's being quiet is uncomfortably suspicious.

One thought that keeps running through my mind as the rumor gains momentum is, what do last year's recruits think of this?

Before last season I spoke with all of them and they all seemed to agree that Stringer was one of the top reasons for their decision to come to Iowa.

"I was so impressed with her when she came on my home visit," Shannon Perry said. "She was so natural and I really appreciated that. She was like a mother figure."

Stringer responded to the comments of Perry and others that day by saying, "Young people really want to know that we care about them."

C. Vivian Stringer's players do see her as a mother figure and they do see how much she cares about them. It is Stringer that they need to guide them as they try to put their troubled season behind them.

And just as a mother wouldn't turn away from her family in a time of need, Stringer can't turn away from hers.

New Jersey wins 4-2 in Detroit

Mike Nadel

DETROIT — The New Jersey Devils can win the Stanley Cup without ever returning to Detroit.

Jim Dowd, who missed most of the season with a shoulder injury and didn't even play in the opener of the finals, scored with 1:24 to play Tuesday night and the Devils defeated the Red Wings 4-2 to go up two games to none in the NHL championship series.

"We showed that we can skate with them and play smart," Devils coach Jacques Lemaire said. "Our guys were physical and we nearly played a perfect game."

New Jersey, which has a league-playoff record 10 road victories, can wrap up the Cup by winning at home on Thursday and Saturday nights. The Devils were in a similar situation in the previous round but Philadelphia won twice at New Jersey. The Devils then won the next two games.

"We can't take it for granted," the Devils' Bill Guerin said. "We just have to keep going and can't let it slip by us. The series isn't over."

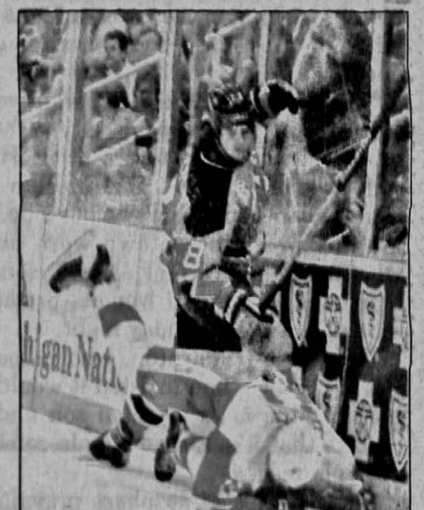

The Red Wings, trying to win the title for the first time in 40 years, will attempt to become only the third team in finals history to prevail after dropping the first two games at home. Detroit was the loser — to Toronto in 1942 and to Montreal in 1966 — on those occasions.

The Red Wings, who went into the series with an 8-0 home record and a 12-2 playoff mark, led 2-1 midway through the third period but gave up goals to Scott Niedermayer, Dowd and Stephane Richer in the final 10:13.

"We got a lead," Detroit coach Scotty Bowman said. "I thought we played with a real sense of urgency, being down a game, and the flow of the game seemed to go with us. But you have to be able to protect a lead."

On the winner, Detroit defenseman Paul Coffey blocked a shot by Guerin and lay on the ice even as the Devils passed the puck around Detroit's zone.

Tommy Albelin got the puck to the right point for Shawn Chambers, whose slap shot was blocked by goalie Mike Vernon into the slot. Dowd then backhanded the puck into the vacated net.

Charger dies in car crash

Steven Wine

MIAMI — David Griggs, a starting linebacker last season for the AFC champion San Diego Chargers, died when his speeding Lexus slid off an expressway ramp and slammed into a large sign pole.

Griggs, who also played for the Miami Dolphins, was 28.

He apparently lost control of the car late Monday on a ramp linking Florida's Turnpike with three other roads west of Fort Lauderdale. The car traveled across another ramp and grassy median before slamming into the pole, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

Griggs was taken to Broward General Hospital and pronounced dead on arrival.

"It just hasn't sunk in yet," Chargers general manager Bobby Beathard said Tuesday. "I don't know if it will until we're all together and he's not there."

Griggs was the only person in the car, which was traveling substantially faster than the 30 mph speed limit, the highway patrol said. There was no evidence of drug or alcohol use, a trooper said.

The tragedy was the third to hit the Chargers this year. Quarterback coach Dwain Painter's ex-wife killed herself hours after San Diego won the AFC championship game in January. Less than three weeks later, Painter's daughter was swept to her death by a wave as she scattered her mother's ashes along a rocky ocean coast.

6-FOOT-10 FRESHMAN

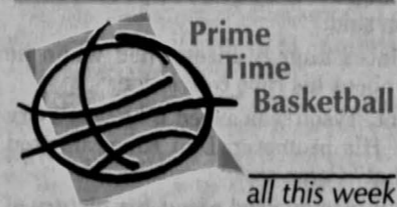

Hawkeye recruit is eager to learn

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Last season, Big Ten Conference basketball experts said Iowa was too small to contend for the conference championship. They were right.

The Hawkeyes, traditionally one of the most fierce Big Ten teams crashing the boards, were out-rebounded by conference opponents in 10 of 18 games.

Iowa's leading rebounders were 6-foot-7 Jess Settles and 6-foot-5 Jim Bartels, which meant having to focus on Indiana's Alan Henderson and Penn State's John Amaechi drained from Iowa's offensive game.

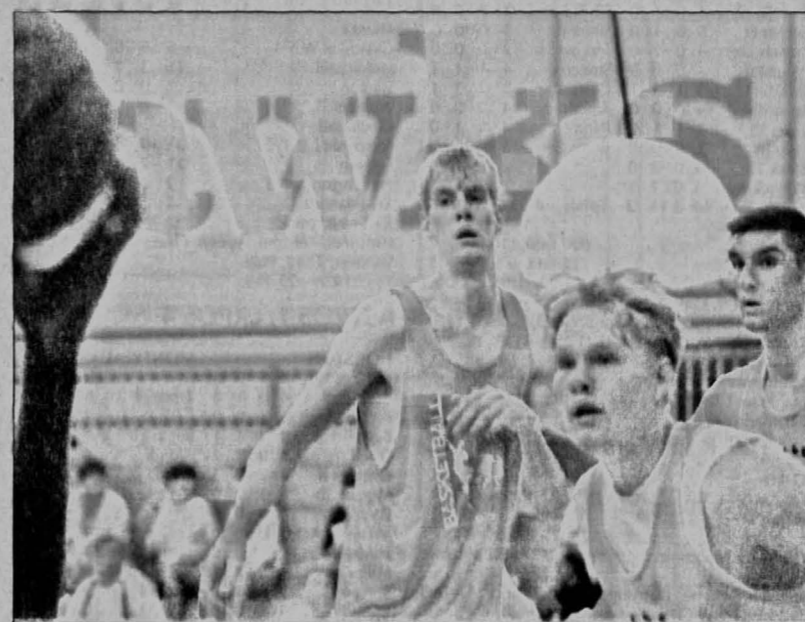

Coach Tom Davis desperately needed to find someone to help off the glass, as last season dragged on, during every press conference Davis emphasized Iowa's lack of rebounding more emphatically, searching desperately for a solution.

Enter the Hawkeye recruiting class.

Iowa signed four players for the 1995-96 season. One is an off guard for the future in 6-foot-5 Trey Bullett. The rest are all skyscrapers.

Alvin Robinson, a 6-foot-9 star out of Chicago, should provide ample backup for forwards Settles and Russ Millard.

And then there's J.R. Koch, a lanky, 6-foot-10 forward out of Morton, Ill.

"He looks like Ryan Bowen," one Prime Time fan said from the stands.

There are similarities between Bowen, a sophomore and Koch. Both came to Iowa with questionable bulk for Big Ten play, a feature which limited Bowen's playing time last season.

Both have decent post games, but are questionable from the outside. Koch recognizes the need to improve his outside game.

"I'm still not shooting good from outside. I've just got to get out there a little more and keep shooting," Koch said.

The Prime Time league is an ideal place for a young player to develop his game, league director Randy Larson said. Even though Prime Time is just a seven-week summer league, Koch has already begun making comparisons to high school play back home.

"These games are a lot more competitive, a lot more height," Koch said. "I was the tallest guy back in high school, so this gives me some experience."

Experience, Koch said, is the 'most beneficial aspect of the Prime Time league.

"This experience is helping me get more confidence," Koch said. "It's helped me realize that I have some work to do and this is the place to do it."

If it's experience that Koch wants, he's been matched with the ideal Prime Time teammate: fellow Hawkeye Kenyon Murray.

Murray, a senior, can offer some of the guidance a young player needs making the transition from high school to college, Koch said.

The new Iowa recruit has already managed to pick out Murray's greatest strength: defense.

"Kenyon's a great defensive player," Koch said. "He's really got down team defense; the team concept. It's not just one guy, it's got to be a team, and he's helping me with that."

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Boston falls to best in baseball

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Rookie Chad Ogea allowed one run in eight innings Tuesday night and Kenny Lofton drove in four runs as the Cleveland Indians beat the Boston Red Sox 9-2.

Carlos Baerga, leading the American League in hits, had three hits and drove in two runs, and Eddie Murray singled home a run with his 2,990th career hit.

The Indians, winners of 14 of 17 games, improved baseball's best record to 36-13, including 21-6 at home. The Red Sox have lost eight of 11 overall and five straight against Cleveland. They haven't won in six games at Jacobs Field the last two seasons.

The 24-year-old Ogea (3-0) has won each of his three starts since replacing Jason Grimsley in the Cleveland rotation. He blanked the Red Sox on three hits until the eighth, when Mike MacFarlane doubled and eventually scored on Lee Tinsley's single.

But Ogea also remembers bouncing back and forth between Cleveland and the minors several times last year and again this year. He started 1995 in Buffalo, came to Cleveland for one game, went back to Buffalo for a couple of appearances and then rejoined the Indians — perhaps permanently — in late May.

"The yo-yo string taught me to be patient, to take it day by day and start by start," he said. "When I go home now, I don't read the papers, and I don't watch ESPN. I just go about my daily business. But when I'm at the field, then it's all business."

The Red Sox have lost eight of 11 overall and five straight against Cleveland. They haven't won in six games at Jacobs Field the last two seasons.

As 5, Twins 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — When Scott Brosius returned to the Oakland dugout after leading off the bottom of the first with a homer, Rickey Henderson was one of the first to shake his hand.

"Only 65 more to go, and you catch me," kidded Henderson, who has led off games with homers a record 66 times.

Brosius added another solo homer and an RBI single, and Steve Ontiveros allowed one run in seven innings, as the Athletics defeated the Minnesota Twins 5-2 Tuesday.

Brosius, a surprise leadoff hitter in place of the slumping Henderson, homered on the first pitch from Pat Mahomes (0-4), singled in a run in the second and hit his fifth homer of the season in the fifth. It was the third time Brosius has homered twice in a game.

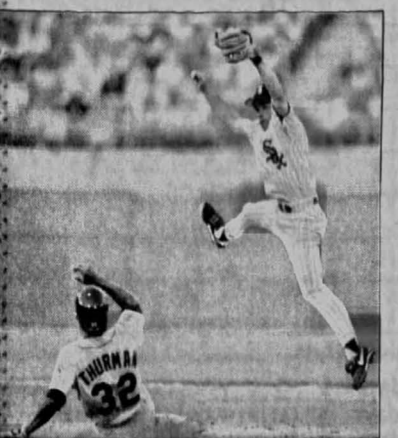

Brosius, who usually bats sixth to eighth in the order, didn't know he'd be leading off until he saw Tuesday's lineup card. Henderson, hitless in his last 13 at-bats, is getting a few days off.

Brewers 5, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Rookie Sid Roberson scattered three runs and seven hits in seven innings and Darryl Hamilton drove in the go-ahead run with a fifth-inning double Tuesday night, lifting the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-3 victory over Toronto.

It was the longest major league outing for Roberson (3-2), who went six innings in his last start, a 4-2 win over the Texas Rangers on June 14. Mike Fetters pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

The Brewers have won five of six road games, while the Blue Jays lost in their fifth attempt this season at winning three games in a row.

Associated Press

Seattle Mariners' Gary Thurman steals second base as Chicago White Sox' Craig Grebeck leaps for a high throw from catcher Ron Karkovics during the third inning Tuesday.

Associated Press

Montreal's Tony Tarasco runs into Houston Astros catcher Scott Servais while trying to score in first inning action in Montreal Tuesday.

With the score 3-3, Jose Valentin led off the fifth with a single and came home one out later on Hamilton's double. Kevin Seitzer, who went 4-for-5 to increase his average to an AL-leading .374, followed with a single, but Hamilton was thrown out at the plate by right fielder Shawn Green.

Rangers 8, Tigers 6

DETROIT — Rusty Greer and Juan Gonzalez homered on consecutive pitches in the fifth inning as the Texas Rangers ended a slugging slump Tuesday night by defeating the Detroit Tigers 8-6.

Ivan Rodriguez also homered for the Rangers, who ended droughts of 31 innings without an extra-base hit and 62 without a home run.

Bobby Higginson homered for the second straight night and Travis Fryman connected for the first time since May 24 for the Tigers.

Darren Oliver (4-2) went 5 2-3 innings, allowing seven hits and striking out eight for the victory.

Mariners 9, White Sox 5

CHICAGO — Randy Johnson allowed five hits and struck out 10 in seven innings in Seattle's 9-5 victory over Chicago on Tuesday night, improving his record to 10-2 against the White Sox.

Johnson (7-1) is unbeaten in six starts in Chicago, where he's allowed only 14 earned runs in 47 innings.

Johnson, who gave up a first-inning homer to Frank Thomas, walked three and pitched out of a predicament in the seventh.

Ron Karkovics' sinking liner was dropped by right fielder Gary Thurman and ruled a hit, and Norberto Martin followed with a single.

One out later, Tim Lincecum hit a liner off Felix Fermin's glove at second and was thrown out, with Karkovics scoring to cut Seattle's lead to 5-3.

Orioles 8, Yankees 7

BALTIMORE — Jeffrey Hammonds had a career-high four RBIs as the Baltimore Orioles rallied from a five-run deficit to defeat the New York Yankees 8-7 Tuesday night.

Jeff Manto and Chris Hoiles homered for the Orioles, who have won two straight after a seven-game losing streak. Baltimore trailed 7-2 before mounting its biggest comeback of the year.

Hammonds had a sacrifice fly in the third, an RBI double in the fifth and put Baltimore ahead with a two-run double in the sixth.

Gerald Williams hit a grand slam and Danny Tartabull added a solo shot for the last-place Yankees, who have lost three of four.

Phillies 8, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Tyler Green pitched his fourth complete game of the year and lowered his ERA to 2.87 Tuesday night and the Philadelphia Phillies pounded four Mets pitchers for 12 hits in an 8-2 victory over New York.

Green (6-4), who leads the NL in shutouts and complete games, scattered eight hits, walked one and struck out two. He had a single and double in four at-bats, giving the Phillies pitchers a .500 average (4-for-8) in the first two games of the four-game series.

Charlie Hayes had a pair of RBI singles, Mariano Duncan and Kevin Stocker had two-run singles and Darren Daulton went 2-for-4 with an RBI.

The Phillies, who won their fourth straight game and improved the NL's best record to 33-17, scored three runs in the third for a 4-1 lead and broke the game open in the eighth with three more.

Pirates 5, Giants 3

PITTSBURGH — Mark Johnson hit a tie-breaking homer and Don Slaught, just off the disabled list, had a two-run double to carry the Pittsburgh Pirates past the San Francisco Giants 5-3 Tuesday night.

The Pirates, who have been outscored 24-8 in the first inning at home, took a 2-0 lead on Slaught's double in the first against Mark Leiter (3-4) en route to beating the Giants for the second straight night.

Mark Carreon's second homer of the game and Robby Thompson's RBI single tied it in the sixth against Esteban Loaiza (3-3), but Johnson homered with one out in the bottom of the inning.

Astros 7, Expos 4

MONTREAL — Shane Reynolds pitched six strong innings and Houston scored five runs in the first as the Astros beat the fading Montreal Expos 7-4 Tuesday night.

Jeff Bagwell hit his 100th career homer as Houston handed Montreal its fourth straight loss. The Astros are 6-2 on the current road trip and have won 10 of their last 12 road games.

Reynolds (3-5) allowed two runs on eight hits, struck out five and walked two. In his last four starts, Reynolds has posted a 2-1 record and a 2.04 earned-run average. He has worked at least six innings in eight of his last nine starts and has allowed more than three earned runs just once in 11 starts.

Braves 10, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — The Atlanta Braves won their seventh straight game Tuesday night behind Greg Maddux, who pitched six shutout innings to extend his scoreless streak and beat the Cincinnati Reds 10-2.

Chipper Jones added four hits, including a two-run homer, and drove in three runs as Atlanta moved 10 games over .500 (30-20) for the first time this season.

Maddux (6-1) allowed six singles — one of them a comebacker off his lower back in the fifth inning — didn't walk a batter and struck out eight as he extended his scoreless streak to 15 innings and lowered his ERA to 1.77. The right-hander was coming off a seven-hit shutout of Montreal last Thursday.

The Braves' rotation has been sensational lately, allowing just three runs in the past 51 innings. The entire staff has given up just seven runs in the last 59 innings.

Cardinals 7, Dodgers 0

ST. LOUIS — Mark Petkovsek threw his first career shutout and Brian Jordan had four RBIs after moving to the leadoff spot in the batting order as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-0 Tuesday night.

Petkovsek, a 29-year-old rookie, extended his string of scoreless innings to 17 to end the Dodgers' three-game winning streak. He allowed eight hits, three strikeouts and two walks for the Cardinals' first complete game of the season.

In his last start, Petkovsek (3-1) allowed four hits in eight innings June 15 against San Diego.

Jordan singled and scored in the first, hit his eighth home run with a man on to chase Pedro Astacio (1-6) in the fifth and had a two-run single in the sixth. Jordan, who had been hitting third, had been penciled in at cleanup before manager Mike Jorgensen decided to give leadoff hitter Bernard Gilkey, in a 1-for-23 slump and nursing a sore left wrist, a night off.

Scott Cooper added two doubles — his first extra-base hits in 21 games — and an RBI, and Jose Oquendo added an RBI double in the Cardinals' 11-hit attack. St. Louis had totaled four runs and 12 hits in its previous three games, all losses.

The Dodgers had four runners thrown out either trying to steal or take an extra base, and ran into double plays in the second and sixth innings.

BOSTON'S FLEET CENTER

Garden sequel far from finished

Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — There are holes in the walls and ceilings, dust is everywhere, and the whole place could use a coat of paint. One hundred and two days from completion, the new Boston Garden is pretty much in the same shape as the old one.

But sometime before it opens on Sept. 30, the future home of the Boston Bruins and Celtics will get its coat of paint. The championship banners will be transferred to their new rafters, the air conditioning will be turned on and the building will be ready for business.

"Every time I walk in here I get a little jump," project point man Larry Moulter said Tuesday after giving the media a tour of the Garden's replacement, known corporately as the FleetCenter. "I wonder: Are we going to make it?"

The answer, he says, is yes. The finishing touches are being put on the $160-million, 19,600-seat arena going up just nine inches from the former home of the Celtics and Bruins. When it's done, no one will confuse it with the old one.

"I think there will be a lot of tears shed over that building in September," Moulter said, gesturing toward the 67-year-old edifice. "But if we can operate this building the way we want to, I don't think there will be too many tears shed at the end of a year."

In fact, while the designers of the old Garden left the concourses cramped, the views obstructed and the ventilation as natural, the FleetCenter seems prepared for anything.

There are three tiers of seats instead of two; 36 concession stands instead of 14; five levels of parking instead of none; 104 luxury suites, 2,516 leather club seats, 13 escalators, 34 bathrooms and a $4 million Jumbotron scoreboard with 9-by-12 foot Jumbotron video screens on each side and a speaker system with quadrophonic sound.

Entry to the Celtics locker room — which contains a Jacuzzi so big they had to bring it in two years ago and build the walls around it — is eased by an eight-foot high door.

Darryl Strawberry signs autographs for spring training fans in Port St. Lucie, Fla. on March 26, 1990.

Reactions to signing vary

Associated Press

Los Angeles Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda suggests that Darryl Strawberry belongs in prison stripes and not pinstripes.

Lasorda says Strawberry definitely shouldn't be in the major leagues, playing for the New York Yankees.

"When they caught that guy Pete Rose, didn't they put him in jail? When they caught that lady in New York (Leona Helmsley) did she go to jail?" Lasorda asked. "Why didn't that guy go to jail?"

Instead of going to jail for tax evasion, Strawberry was sentenced to a $350,000 fine, 100 hours of community service and house arrest. On Monday, he agreed to a contract with the Yankees that's worth $850,000 guaranteed. He will be eligible to play on Sunday when a 60-day suspension from baseball for cocaine use ends.

In an interview with the Los Angeles Times on Monday, Lasorda said he was "very surprised that somebody would sign someone who was just suspended for taking drugs. Guys that are breaking the laws and the rules of this country, and breaking the rules of taking drugs, I don't think they should be playing."

Strawberry agreed to a $20.25 million, five-year contract with the Dodgers in November 1990, but in April 1994 was suspended when he failed to show up for an exhibition game. He then entered the Betty Ford Center for a substance abuse program.

The Dodgers paid a $4.8 million settlement to Strawberry last July after they released him, including $2.5 million for half his scheduled 1995 salary. Strawberry then signed with the San Francisco Giants, who released him Feb. 6 after he tested positive for cocaine.

"I'm for giving people chance after chance, but not in the industry that they're in," Milwaukee Brewers general manager Sal Bando said. "I think you've got to give him a chance in life, but why to we keep opening our doors and let someone take advantage of an industry that they've abused."

Bando said he would like to see baseball adopt a policy similar to that of the NBA, which provides for treatment but also stipulates, basically, that after your third strike, you're out permanently.

Van Slyke finds life in Philly

Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Andy Van Slyke hated baseball, hated it so much that he dreaded going to the ballpark.

Actually, who could blame him? The three-time All-Star and five-time Gold Glove hadn't had much to celebrate lately.

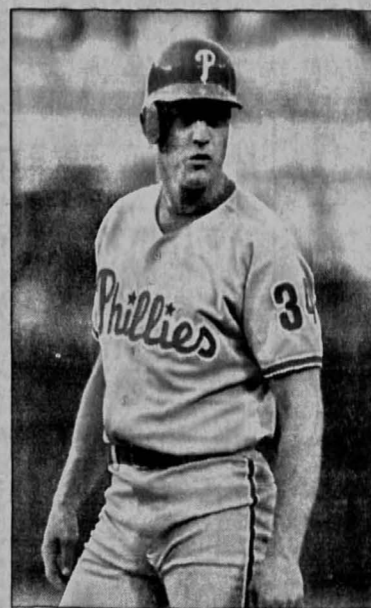

Whether it was his departure on poor terms from the Pittsburgh Pirates, his two weeks of spring training limbo at the free agent camp in Homestead, Fla., his $2.75 million pay cut or his two months of sporadic action with the Baltimore Orioles, everything was going bad for the 12-year veteran.

It all changed very suddenly. Van Slyke was dealt from Baltimore to the Philadelphia Phillies on Sunday and was the starting center fielder Monday night against the New York Mets. He went 2-for-4 with a two-run homer, hit a sharp single in his first at-bat and made a nice shoestring catch in a 6-3 victory.

In a span of less than 48 hours, he went from being an unhappy .159 hitter on a last-place team to a jubilant .500 hitter on a first-place team.

Afterward, he sat at his locker and described how good it all felt.

"This is probably the first time in two years I've had fun. I felt like a rookie out there tonight," Van Slyke said. "From being nine games out and in last place, going to a first-place club, it makes it fun again. I can look forward to going to the ballpark again, and quite Phillies' center fielder Andy Van Slyke is happy in his new home honestly, I couldn't do that in Baltimore."

Associated Press

Van Slyke, who made $3.3 million with Pittsburgh in 1994, signed with Baltimore on April 21 for $550,000 and the chance to make $150,000 more in bonuses. His time with the Orioles was marked by two stints on the disabled list, 17 game appearances and plenty of bad karma.

"You would think that after 12 years in the majors, a player would have a certain level of confidence that you wouldn't lose," he said. "But maybe I did there, and maybe I started doubting myself. I always felt I was trying out for the Orioles every day."

When Van Slyke was told that catcher Matt Nokes had been cut by the Orioles, hinting on his way out the door that he was leaving a team in disarray, Van Slyke nodded his head.

"I'm not going to say I disagree with that statement," he said. "He has made a pretty good assessment of that situation."

Mended Canseco returns to Red Sox

Chuck Melvin
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Jose Canseco rejoined the Boston Red Sox Tuesday night after missing more than a month because of abdominal and groin injuries.

Manager Kevin Kennedy immediately inserted Canseco into the lineup against the Cleveland Indians at designated hitter, batting fourth.

Catcher Rich Rowland was designated for assignment to open a roster spot for Canseco, who had been on the disabled list since May 18.

"For me, it's going to be spring training all over again," Canseco said before the game. "I'm hoping I can contribute. We're looking for me to be 100 percent, to where I can fully contribute, after the All-Star break."

Canseco said he has completely recovered from the partially torn abdominal muscle and strained groin.

Courier falls as Connors advances

Associated Press

HALLE, Germany — Jimmy Connors defeated an opponent 20 years his junior Tuesday, and Jim Courier was ousted in the first round of the ATP tournament in Halle.

Courier was beaten by fellow American Richie Reneberg, 6-7 (7-5), 6-3, 7-6 (12-10) in a match that drew enthusiastic applause from the spectators.

But, the 42-year-old Connors was the one who really stirred the crowd as he sauntered onto the grass center court to face Canadian Sebastien Lareau, 22.

Both held serve until Lareau broke Connors in the fifth game to go ahead 3-2.

Connors pulled even, breaking Lareau in the eighth game, held his serve, then broke the Canadian again in the 10th to win 6-4.

With the crowd cheering on the veteran of 109 career singles titles, Connors looked fit, sometimes playing back, at other times charging the net to put on the pressure and score.

Lareau broke Connors in the first game of the second set and pulled to a 4-2 lead. Connors pulled even, breaking Lareau again in the 8th game with both holding serve to go to the tiebreak.

Connors won the first four points, gave up the next two on a double fault and high return that the Canadian slammed to pull to 4-2.

The next point went to Connors when Lareau double-faulted, and the American held his next two serves, including an ace, to win the tiebreak 7-2 and the match.

WIMBLEDON

Graf gets tough draw

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Once again, the Wimbledon draw has been less than kind to one of its greatest champions.

Top-seeded and five-time champion Steffi Graf was paired Tuesday against 14-year-old Swiss sensation Martina Hingis in the opening round. Hingis was last year's Wimbledon junior champion and is ranked No. 19 in the world.

Last year, Graf became the first Wimbledon defending champion to lose in the first round when she was ousted by Lori McNeil. Many of Graf's supporters later argued that McNeil, a grass-court specialist, should have been seeded.

Hingis, who was named after nine-time champion Martina Navratilova, doesn't have McNeil's pedigree. But the Czech-born Swiss has established herself as one of the most promising players on the tour just nine months after turning pro.

To Graf's advantage, Hingis won't be playing on her preferred surface, clay. Graf won their only previous meeting 6-2, 6-3 in the quarterfinals of the Paris Open indoor tournament in February.

In the men's draw, top-seeded

Andre Agassi and No. 2 seed Pete Sampras both could face troublesome opponents in early rounds.

Agassi, the 1992 champion who is coming off a hip injury suffered at the French Open, starts against a qualifier and would face either Richey Reneberg or Patrick McEnroe in the second round.

Agassi's third-round opponent could be American grass-court expert David Wheaton, with 15th-seeded Andrei Medvedev looming in the fourth round.

Two-time defending champion Sampras faces Germany's Karsten Braasch, ranked No. 119, in the opening round. He could meet either Guy Forget or Greg Rusedski in the fourth round.

Forget, seeded No. 16, lost to Sampras in the Queen's Club final on Sunday. Rusedski, now playing for Britain, has the fastest recorded serve on the tour this year.

In an intriguing first-rounder, No. 3 Boris Becker faces Spanish clay-court expert Alberto Berasategui, making his Wimbledon debut. Berasategui is ranked No. 12 but is unseeded.

If the draw goes according to form, the quarterfinal matchups would be: Agassi vs. No. 7 Wayne Ferreira, Becker vs. No. 5 Michael Chang.

FAST STRIP, LONG DROP
Two politically charged, angry meditations on drugs and sexual identity which complicate conventional documentary form by adding fictional elements to the price of one! THE DARKER SIDE OF BLACK, directed by Isaac Julien, deals with controversial issues embedded in hip-hop and Jamaican dance hall music. FAST TRIP, LONG DROP is a commentary by writer-performance artist Greg Bordowitz on his various identities — Jew, AIDS activist and patient, gay son, etc.

How to succeed academically (or die trying)

For incoming students, the UI can seem very intimidating. However, just keeping a few things in mind can make the Hawkeye experience slightly easier to take.

The UI is a very, very big school. Freshmen lectures sometimes exceed 3,000 students, a situation that resulted in 234 deaths by asphyxiation last year alone. (That's not to mention the occasional Powerbook accidents.)

Because academic life often means living on the edge of danger, it comes as little surprise that some students don't exactly work up to their full potential.

Luckily, however, you will be the exception. You will be happy, well-liked and an academic genius because you are naturally wonderful.

Having said that, I've got a few tips you can pass on to your slightly dull freshman cousin.

There are a whole lot of bars in Iowa City. There are more bars than there are big dogs, which is saying quite a bit. You will want to go to these bars and you will tell yourself that you can read your Spanish textbook while you're there or maybe practice your Spanish on the cute bartender. This will not happen. You will be too bor-racho. Accept it. Move on.

There. Now you are ready to move to the next level: How to get away with not doing your homework. The most popular excuse you will hear over and over again around campus is "Duh, my printer broke." This is the "My dog ate my homework" of the '90s. It is overused, boring and completely uncreative. I think you can do better.

The foolproof excuse is to convert to a religion that prohibits doing homework. (If you have trouble finding one, try looking in the back pages of Rolling Stone.) This is airtight because the state cannot make you do anything that is against your religion. If they do, you can get the American Civil Liberties Union to sue their ass and then you will be able to drop out of school and will never have to do homework again.

Also, don't be afraid to use this slacker stuff to the fullest. No one really understands exactly what it means or how powerful the urge to slack can be. Try wearing a flannel shirt and telling your professor that not studying is "a generational thing." They might accept that it is beyond your control and leave it at that.

If neither of these work, find a UI building that is named after its benefactor and change your name to match. Like Samuel L. Becker, for instance. Just add a "Jr." to the end of your new name and constantly make references in class to your kindly old grandfather. Not that being related to a wealthy donor ever has any effect on how you are graded. I'm sure that none of the UI professors have ever let family connections sway their red pen.

On that note, there is always the old-fashioned approach: sucking up. This is not for amateurs. Sucking up is a very delicate process that requires a fine-tuned appreciation for the fragile balance between flattery and pathos. It will take you years to perfect your own personal method and it is best not to rush it. Find someone older who seems especially adept and apprentice for a while. Watch the way they pucker up, how they stay after class every single day to talk to the professor and how they always go to office hours.

Remember, sucking up may be time consuming and arduous, but when it is done right, it can be beautiful.

Should any of these methods not prove useful, it is always good to make friends with a good computer hacker so you have some backup. (Transcripts are, of course, kept electronically.)

I suggest getting close to the people at the Weeg Computing Center help desk. Stop by a few times with vague questions about a computer you claim to own. For instance: "Is it supposed to make that loud grinding sound when you save?" "Is it possible to upgrade a monochromatic monitor to color?"

Get to know a few of them by name and start dropping in from time to time just to say hello. If nothing else, you will learn about all sorts of computer repairs you can make with a paper clip.

Well, I hope some of the suggestions will help you — mean, your dull freshman cousin — out this fall. Don't take them too seriously. After all, the only skill you really need in life is making a good espresso. If you can do that, you will always be employable.

Chelsea Cain is a DI columnist.

5,000 STUDENTS EXPECTED

College 101 taught at orientation sessions

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

This summer, an estimated 5,000 new UI students and their parents will come to campus for a crash course in college life.

Over spring and summer, 19 groups of incoming freshmen, transfer students and international students will flock to the UI to see just what they got themselves into.

"The primary orientation groups are the freshmen students," said Tom DePrenger, assistant director of orientation for Pre-enrollment Services at UI Admissions. "They come in June and July and they show up for a two-day program."

About 3,500 of the 5,000 new students will be freshmen, dotting the UI campus with their shiny black-and-gold folders this summer, DePrenger said.

During the sessions, incoming students will learn about academic life at the UI and will have the opportunity to place out of several General Education Requirements.

"It's really an academic focus," DePrenger said. "We test both math and foreign language placement."

Students will also have scheduled appointments with their advisers to discuss academic plans. After adviser meetings, students will have an opportunity to register for fall semester classes.

Coordinators of the program

"We think that new students relate better to people their own age. We find it's very effective to orient new students with current students."

Tom DePrenger, assistant director of orientation for Pre-enrollment Services at UI Admissions have also scheduled time to focus on the social aspects of college life, including roommate problems, homesickness and other common pressures.

"We have a half-hour play called 'A Day in the Life,' and it goes over a lot of important issues," DePrenger said. "It covers things (students) come into contact with when they go to college."

Discussions about campus life for students with special needs and special interests are also scheduled.

"We have sessions for nontraditional students, students with disabilities and minorities," DePrenger said.

The second day of orientation includes an activities fair developed to acquaint students with more than 30 university offices and organizations.

But students aren't the only ones receiving the royal treatment during their stay in Iowa City. Pre-enrollment Services strongly encourages parents to accompany students and learn about college life at the UI. The service offers programs specifically geared toward parents.

"It's important for parents to understand where (students) are going and what it's all about, so they can be prepared for letting go," DePrenger said. "We also find that most parents want to come. We have one of the best participation rates (of parents) for any Big Ten school."

Sessions for parents include meetings with deans, department directors and current UI

"It's important for parents to understand where (students) are going and what it's all about, so they can be prepared for letting go."

Tom DePrenger, assistant director of orientation for Pre-enrollment Services at UI Admissions students and parents. Other activities include meetings with representatives from residence halls, campus safety and the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

This year, the program for parents will include several new sessions, including alternatives to using the phone and the post office.

"We're going to have an Internet session that will introduce Internet to parents and how they can communicate with students through e-mail," DePrenger said.

Organizers have also planned "parents only" aerobics sessions to invigorate weary participants in the morning.

The UI also offers nine orientation sessions throughout the spring and summer for transfer students. Because transfer students are already familiar with many aspects of college life, the sessions are held for only one day and focus more on academics, DePrenger said.

Just prior to the beginning of the school year, the service provides special orientation sessions for students who were unable to attend the program and two sessions designed to acquaint foreign students with life at the UI.

Participants in the orientation programs will be guided by 23 orientation student advisers — current UI students trained to answer almost any question students and parents might have.

Student advisers will guide program participants through the process of choosing courses, registering and finding their academic advisers.

"We think that new students relate better to people their own age," DePrenger said. "We find it's very effective to orient new students with current students."

PRESIDENTS/
VICE-PRESIDENTSHunter Rawlings III,
UI president

Hunter Rawlings was appointed president of the UI in May 1988, after serving as vice president of academic affairs and research, and as dean of the system graduate school at the University of Colorado for four years. Rawlings will again switch employers when he leaves the UI on July 1 to become the chancellor of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

Rawlings has been known to occasionally step into the classroom and teach, especially for the UI's Unified Program. In his position, Rawlings is responsible for overseeing nearly every aspect of the UI and making final decisions on university policies and procedures.

Peter Nathan, UI provost

Peter Nathan is the chief academic officer of the UI, overseeing the quality of instruction and teaching. The provost is also responsible for the hiring of deans and holds them responsible for their faculty members.

Nathan

Nathan was trained as a psychologist and is considered an international authority on the study and effects of alcoholism. In coordination with the dean of students, Nathan is responsible for all student activities. He is also the most likely choice for interim president if a replacement for Rawlings is not found before July 1.

David Skorton, vice president of research

Skorton

David Skorton came to the UI in 1980, and became the UI's vice president for research in 1982. Skorton is also a professor of internal medicine in the College of of electrical and computer engineering in the College of Engineering. Skorton received a bachelor's degree in 1970 and his medical doctorate in 1974, both from Northwestern University.

John Colloton, UI vice president for Statewide Health Services

John Colloton has been at the UI since 1958, when he became a staff member of the UI Hospitals and Clinics. He served there as an administrator until his appointment as director in 1971. He served as director of the UIHC from 1971 until 1993. He served as chairman of the Association of American Medical Colleges in 1988, becoming only the second non-physician to serve in that capacity in the association's 112-year history.

Douglas True, UI vice president for finance and university services

As vice president of finance and university services, Doug True is responsible for the UI's budget planning and control, accounting, banking and investment, personnel, facilities management and other business-related functions within the UI.

True

True has been the vice president of finance and university services since June 1993. True was hired by the UI in 1988 as the UI treasurer, after which he was promoted to assistant vice president and treasurer in January 1991.

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for university relations

Ann Rhodes has been the UI's vice president for university relations since January 1991. Rhodes acts as spokeswoman for the UI, participates in crisis management, oversees UI Athletics and has a number of other responsibilities. Rhodes is the UI's resource for just about any type of information available to the public.

president for health sciences

Manasse became the UI's first vice president of health sciences in September 1993. The position was created to ensure coordination and cooperation between the Colleges of Dentistry, Medicine, Nursing and Pharmacy; the UIHC; and the Statewide Health Service Units. In terms of budgets and staffing, Manasse said he is responsible for about 60 percent of the UI's resources.

Manasse

R. Edward Howell, director of UI Hospitals and Clinics

Howell was made director of UIHC in August 1994, after serving as executive director of the Medical College of Georgia Hospital and Clinics in 1986. He serves as the chairman of the Council of Teaching Hospitals of the Association of American Medical Colleges. Howell is also an adjunct associate professor in the UI Colleges of Medicine and Business Administration.

DEANS

James McLeran, College of Dentistry (retiring)

McLeran has been dean of the College of Dentistry since July 1974, after a two-year stint as associate dean and a professor of oral surgery in the college. McLeran received his master's degree and doctorate in oral surgery from the UI. He will retire from his position in August.

David Johnsen, College of Dentistry (incoming)

Johnsen will assume the leadership of the College of Dentistry after August 20.

when current dean James McLeran retires after more than 20 years as head of the college. Johnsen is a professor and the chair of pediatric dentistry at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. He is also the director of the pediatric dentistry residency program and served as an interim dean of Case Western's dental school in 1993.

Robert Kelch, College of Medicine

Kelch was made a UI professor of pediatrics and the dean of the College of Medicine in 1994 after serving as the assistant dean for clinical affairs at the University of Michigan Medical School for three years. Kelch received his undergraduate degree from Wayne State University in 1963 and graduated as valedictorian from his University of Michigan Medical School class.

Geraldene Felton,
College of Nursing

Geraldene Felton came to the UI in 1981 after serving as dean of the Oakland University School of Nursing in Rochester, Mich., for six years. She also served on the Board of Directors for the American Red Cross from 1990 to 1993 and for Mercy Health Services from 1991 to 1994.

Gilbert Banker, College of Pharmacy

Gilbert Banker became dean of the College of Pharmacy in 1992 after teaching pharmacology and heading the College of Pharmacy at the University of Minnesota for seven years. He received his bachelor's degree in pharmacy from Union University, and a master's degree and doctorate in industrial pharmacy from Purdue University.

Judith Aikin, College of Liberal Arts

A specialist in early German literature, Aikin has been at the UI since 1975. She became the dean of the College of Liberal Arts in 1993 after serving as interim dean for one year. She received a bachelor's degree and a master's degree from the University of Oregon in 1968 and 1969, respectively. She received her doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley in 1974.

Gary Fethke, College of Business Administration

Gary Fethke received his bachelor's degree and doctorate in economics from the UI in 1964 and 1968, respectively. He has been a faculty member of the College of Business Administration since 1974 and became the dean in 1993. Fethke has taught at the London School of Economics and headed the planning of the Pappajohn Business Administration Building.

N. William Hines,
College of Law

Hines has been at the UI since 1962 and became dean of the College of Law in 1976. A specialist in environmental and agricultural law, Hines was a professor at Baker University, 1968, and assumed his position at the University of Kansas and Harvard University. He is a member of both the Iowa and Kansas Bar Associations.

Leslie Sims, Graduate College

Leslie Sims has been at the UI as a professor of chemistry and the dean of the Graduate College since 1991. He received most of his higher education at state universities in Illinois, but attended both the University of Michigan and Harvard University. Sims has taught at Michigan State University, University of Arkansas, Indiana University and North Carolina State University.

Richard Miller, College of Engineering

Miller, who holds postgraduate degrees from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the California Institute of Technology, came to the UI in 1992 as dean and a professor of civil and environmental engineering. He also served as associate dean and professor at the University of Southern California.

Steven Yussen, College of Education

A specialist in child education and development, Yussen has been a professor and the dean of the College of Education since 1991. After receiving a bachelor's degree from Swarthmore College and a doctorate from the University of Minnesota, he taught at the University of Minnesota and the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Hunter Rawlings resigned as president of the UI on Dec. 10, 1994, setting in motion an exhaustive nationwide search to find a new leader for the university.

Following about three weeks of both rumors and speculation that he would be leaving the UI, Rawlings announced in December he would become the chancellor of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., on July 1.

Rawlings leaves the UI after eight years as president. He was named president May 1, 1988, and assumed his position on July 1, 1988.

The Iowa state Board of Regents wasted no time beginning the search to replace Rawlings' replacement. On Dec. 1, 1994, the regents named UI professor Steve Collins as the chairman of the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee.

His first duty was to establish a committee of UI faculty, staff, students and alumni to determine how the search process should proceed. The committee was selected by Collins and UI Faculty Senate President Richard Hurtig from a large pool of applicants.

The committee members were announced Jan. 18, 1995, at the regents meeting and the list was unanimously approved. The committee contains nine faculty members — including Collins and Hurtig — one dean, two alumni, three students, three staff members and three regents appointees.

The 21-member committee began its search by establishing a set of criteria by which to choose a new president. The list emphasized the importance of diversity in the nominating and selection process and hints that a background in health science administra tion would be a desirable quality in a nominee. The committee solicited nominations for the position by sending out letters notifying faculty and staff here and at other institutions of the position.

The committee has been aided in the search by Korn / Ferry International, a Dallas, Texas-based executive search firm. The search firm helps solicit candidates and review applications, but will have no say in the final selection of a new president.

If the search isn't completed by Rawlings' official resignation, there will be an interim president appointed, most likely from within the UI.

The chances of finding Rawlings' replacement by July 1 are not good, said Steve Collins, chairman of the committee and a professor of electrical-computer engineering and radiology.

"The search will be continuing during the summer," Collins said. "It's uncertain at this time. There's a very good chance it will not be completed, but there is a slight chance that it will be."

In May, Collins announced a short list of candidates for the position had been determined. From that list, candidates would be chosen for off-campus interviews, although those names were not released to the public.

Rawlings

Collins had said that number would be around 12 candidates, six of whom would be brought to campus for further interviews. The names of the six finalists will be made public and Collins has said he is considering holding public discussions with the candidates so the UI community can ask questions of possible future UI leaders.

Computer purchases save money and hassle

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

UI students who have plenty of work to do on computers but don't want to travel around campus looking for an open terminal may find buying their own computer a better solution.

The Personal Computing Support Center, located in room 229 of the Lindquist Center, is where students can buy their own computers.

Students can purchase a personal computer at the university for below retailers' cost, said Marilyn Drury, manager of the center.

"Having a computer of your own would definitely help with doing work and assignments," she said. "It makes life easier to buy one."

UI sophomore Reina Whitmer said her life has been much easier after getting her Macintosh last fall.

"I bought my computer so I could write papers for school and so I could use e-mail in my room," she said.

Whitmer never thought of buying a computer before, so she was timid when she entered the center, she said. However, Whitmer had no problem getting what she was looking for.

"It was easy," she said. "I just didn't know what to expect."

Two computer brands - Macintosh and IBM - are sold at the center, because they can use almost every program that exists, Drury said.

In addition to computers, students can also buy printers and software from the center, she said.

Not all students can afford to pay for the computers at once, so the center also allows students to take out loans from the UI, Drury said. There is 8 percent interest on the loans, and students can borrow up to $3,000, which will automatically appear on their U-bills.

In previous years, students had to venture to Jessup Hall to get a loan form signed. Now, however, all the work is done at the center.

"We handle the loans up here, so there's no running around with signing forms," she said.

A computer fair will be held on Oct. 17 in the Main Lounge of the Union, she said. Students there can see all types of computer retailers and get information about many different brands of computers, including Macintosh and IBM.

For students who may be interested in buying a computer but don't know how to work them, the center also features a help desk and offers training courses which last about two hours, Drury said.

Students can buy one desktop computer and one laptop computer per year, although most students prefer to buy laptop computers, Drury said.

PROGRAM ALLOWS FLEXIBILITY

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

Toward the end of each semester, UI students can be seen clutching the brightly colored Schedule of Courses and scurrying to Instructional Technology Centers as they attempt to register for their next semester of classes.

This rite may seem unusual to some, but veterans of the UI registration system are familiar with the process of getting the perfect classes.

Every UI student eventually becomes knowledgeable of the Iowa Student Information System, which allows registration through a system of menus on the computer.

"We use this form of registration because we think it's the easiest and most accessible to students," said UI Registrar Jerald Dallam. "It's designed to be user friendly."

Registration is spread out over a 12-day period. The first four days of registration are reserved for students who have earned 72 or more hours; the remaining days are open to all other students. The UI determines registration order by using the last three digits of student identification numbers and assigning certain codes for computer access during specific registration days and times.

A four-digit number, available from the student's adviser, is necessary to obtain registration access to ISIS. Accompanying the number is the student's registration date and time.

Dallam said making the registration number available only through the adviser is the UI's way to confirm students are consulting their advisers about course decisions.

Also necessary in the process is the Schedule of Courses, which often becomes a student's best friend during registration. The Schedule lists course numbers, times and locations of all classes taught at the UI; important registration deadlines; and final exam schedules.

Its companion newspaper, Guide to Courses, provides descriptions of many UI courses, including the number of exams and papers required for a class.

Once in the computer system, students can move through ISIS' screens and menus. The Schedule includes instructions on how to use ISIS.

In addition to providing step-by-step instructions on how to use ISIS, the Schedule of Courses outlines the process of dialing in through a modem and lists the centers where ISIS can be used.

The system can be accessed through menus on IBM and Macintosh computers at most UI computer labs as well as through a modem at home.

"Our registration system is part of the UI's information service and is a process where students can register themselves at 23 or 24 spots on campus," Dallam said. "At all of these locations, a student can print out a hard copy of their schedule."

New students are introduced to the system during orientation sessions, during which orientation and registration staff members are on hand to answer questions for first-timers.

"We take them to one location and there's an orientation staff there," Dallam said. "The registrar's office has three or four people circulating in that area to help students."

Once students have entered the system they can view screens that list course numbers and times as well as whether the course has been closed.

If a student needs a class that has been closed, a waiting list can often be formed to fill possible vacancies, Dallam said. But the UI has developed a system to reserve seats for those who register late.

"What we have done is taken course most freshmen need and we've saved a certain number of classes for the student entering from high school," Dallam said.

Students can use ISIS to change their registration by dropping or adding courses before the beginning of the semester. After classes start, schedule changes aren't as easy.

"Once classes start, if they change courses they have to go to the instructor and notify the instructor of their plans," Dallam said.

Both instructors and academic advisers must sign an add or drop slip and return it to the Registration Center in room 30 of Calvin Hall before a schedule will be officially changed.

Although most students are limited to taking a maximum of 18 hours per semester, there is no minimum. Dallam warned students against taking too few hours.

"If a student takes 12 hours every semester, they'll never graduate," he said.

SYSTEMS CATER TO CLASSWORK

Computing sites respond to student needs

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Almost every student will not be able to make it through college without having to use a computer these days. However, some students are unable to afford their own computer.

Fortunately for them, the UI has plenty of computers ready to use around campus. These computers are located at Instructional Technology Centers.

There are 24 buildings on the UI campus which have ITCs. Five of these buildings are residence halls, which are Burge, Stanley, Quadrangle, Hillcrest and Mayflower.

Students can go to any of the ITCs on the UI campus and use the facilities, said Virginia Drake, Weeg Computing Center consultant.

"All the ITCs are networked," she said. "You can do the same work at almost every site."

There are three kinds of computers at most of the ITCs: Macintosh, IBM with Windows or Viewpoints computer terminals, Drake said. Most students will have no problem finding the type of computer they need to do their work.

The idea of ITCs began in the 1970s, said Dave Sealey, senior system analyst.

"It's been kind of an evolutionary process," he said. "Terminals were connected around the campus, and in the late '70s (and) early '80s, PCs came in and it turned into what we have today."

Currently, a little less than 800 work stations exist at the 24 sites on campus, Sealey said. However, students may still have to wait sometimes for a spot to open up.

"Most of it is timing of the semester," he said. "At the end of the semester, there are a lot of students waiting in line wanting to use projects."

Sealey said that he and other Weeg programmers are always looking to improve the system to keep students happy.

"Whenever we get complaints, we use them as challenges to try and improve ourselves," he said. "We respond to the needs of the students and that's what really drives our decisions."

For example, one of the main issues Weeg has had to deal with is that there are no monitors on the second floor of the library, Sealey said. However, on a part-time basis, a monitor works and helps answer students' questions.

"We want the system to work as smoothly as possible, and when it doesn't we try to fix it to the best

UI junior Jen Burke lived in Stanley Residence Hall last year and has spent many hours in the Stanley ITC working on assignments.

"They're very convenient because now I have a lot more papers to write," she said. "I can just go downstairs to the ITC anytime."

Burke said she realized how good the ITCs on campus were when she heard how other universities ran computer labs.

"My friends that came to visit me were impressed," she said. "It's a good deal. They're excellent have on campus."

Union supplies something for everyone

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

The Union's called the "heart of campus life" at the UI, and it offers a wide variety of activities and services for students.

Besides providing places to shop and eat, the Union houses 350 student organizations as well as a movie theater, a hair stylist, and the Recreation, Arts and Craft Area.

The ground floor of the Union is a place where students can eat, drink and meet with friends. The Union Station and the Union Pantry offer coffee, snacks and sandwiches, and the Union Market supplies groceries.

To enjoy their food, students may utilize dining areas in the Hawkeye Room or the Wheelroom, which offers live music from time to time.

The Recreation, Arts and Craft Area is also located on the ground floor of the Union. Students can relax there with a game of pool or pinball. Supervisor Blanca Lipisch Bailey also invites students to participate in noncredit art classes or to utilize the craft space, which has matting equipment, a printing press and a darkroom.

The offices of a number of student groups, from minority student organizations to UI Student Government, are located in the Student Activities Center on the ground floor.

Up the stairs and to the left on the first floor, students can enjoy a different dining atmosphere in the River Room. The River Room has a buffet-style cafeteria and dining room.

For that special occasion, the State Room on the second floor has been described as one of the best restaurants in town. Wine, candles and tablecloths create a fitting ambiance for the best food the Union has to offer.

The business offices of the Union, located on the first floor, have staffs which can assist students interested in applying for jobs and answer questions for students whose U-bills show a "code three."

Student Legal Services is located in room 155 on the first floor. Co-director William Taylor said any currently registered UI student is eligible for legal advice.

Advice is given by a licensed attorney and disseminated through UI law students.

Along similar lines, the Tenant-Landlord Association in room 211 of the Iowa House advice to students in the often problematic world of rental housing.

If housing is not a concern, but a good foreign film is, the Bijou Theatre is the answer. Located next to the University Box Office on the first floor, the theater offers films from around the globe as well as many American subculture movies.

Bijou tickets can be purchased at the box office, which also supplies tickets to other area events and attractions.

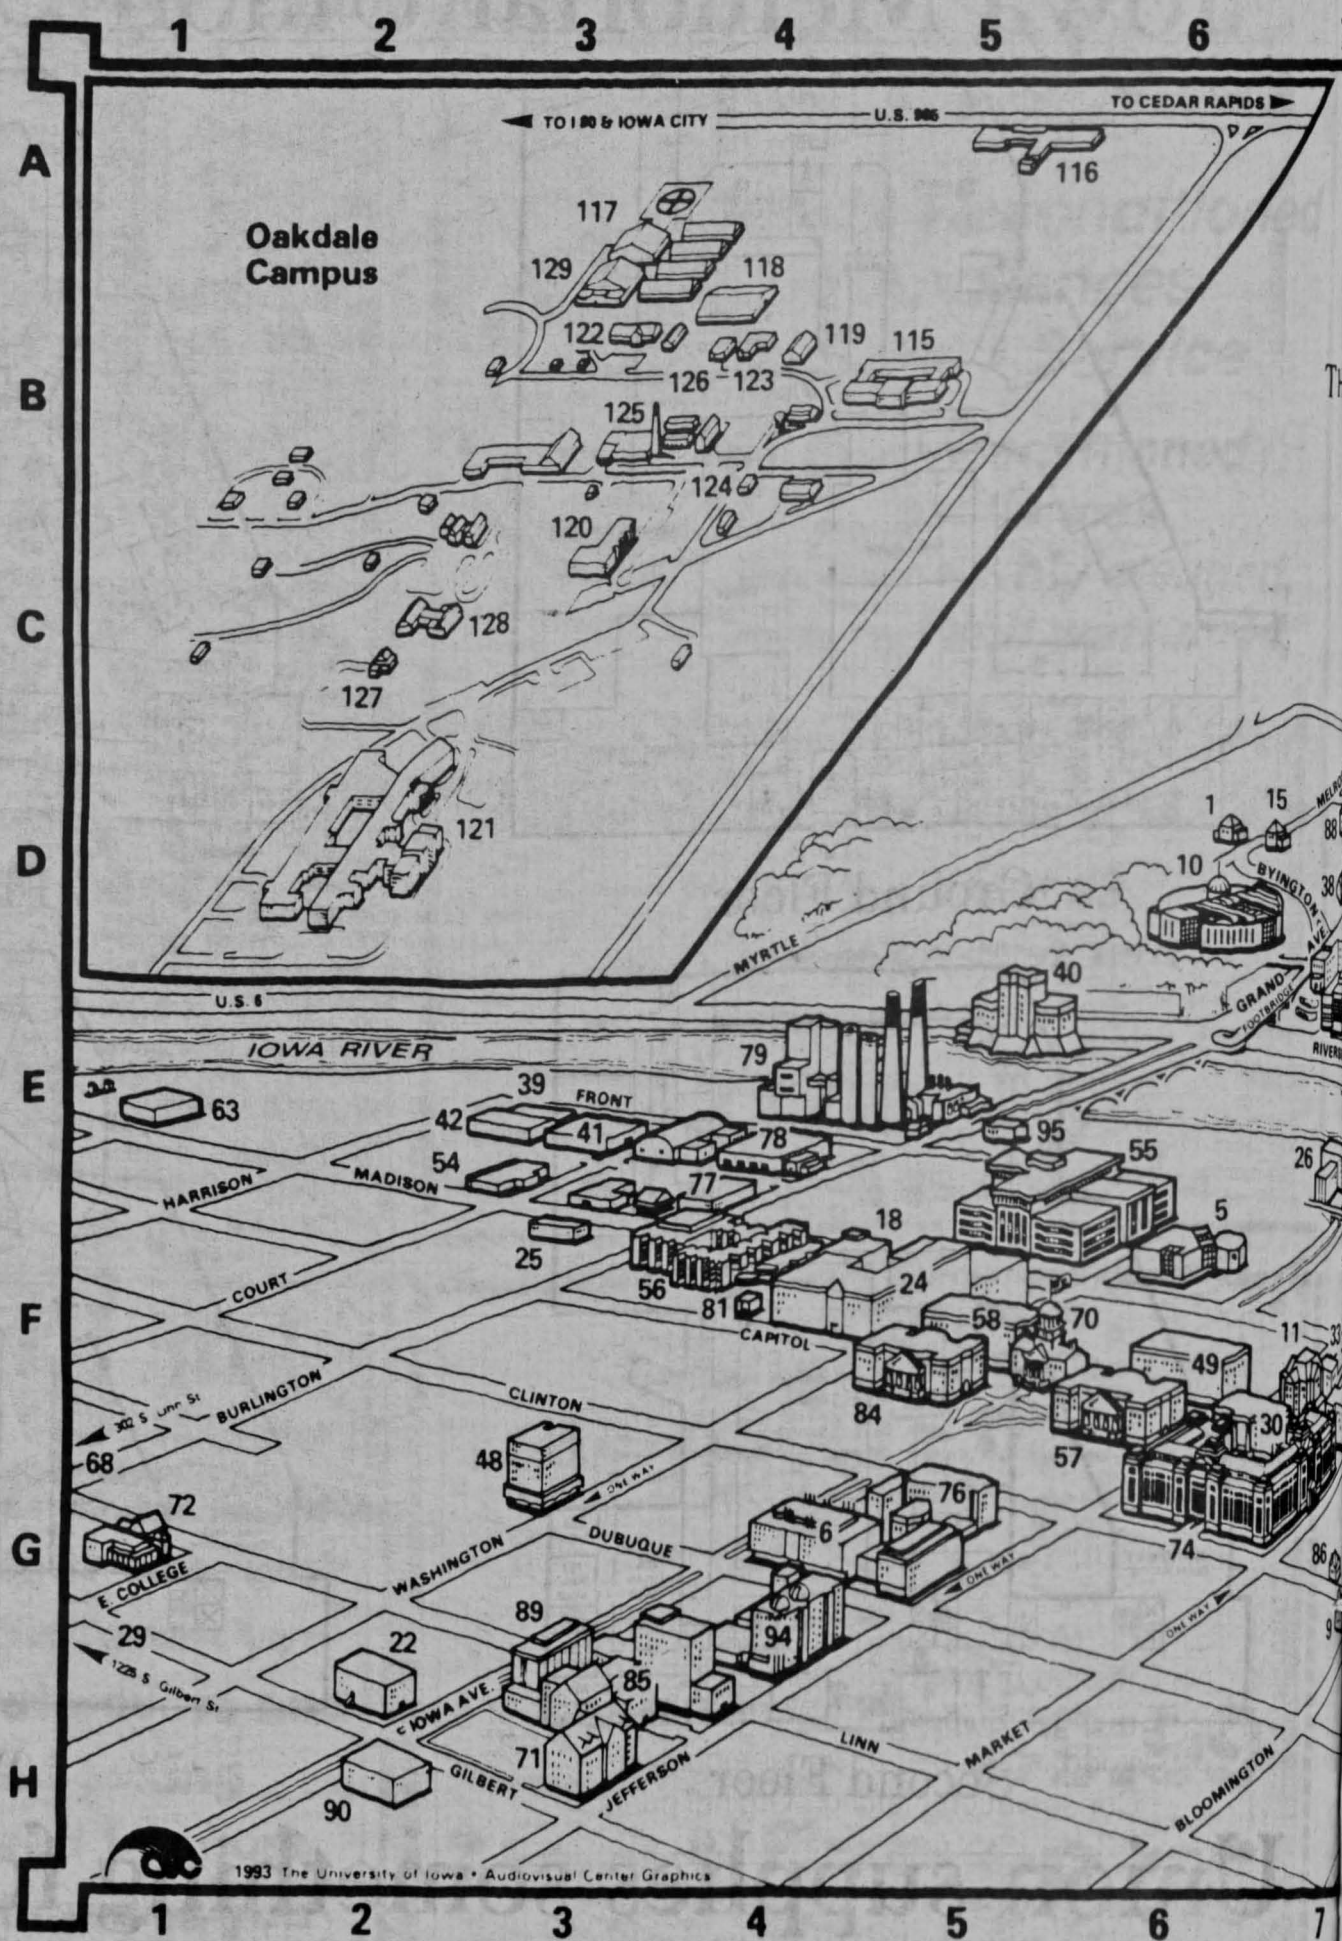

In addition, the box office offers check-cashing services to UI staff and students and is a U.S. Postal Service substation.

Speaking of handy, it's nice to have Felipe "Pepe" Penza, the Union's hair stylist on the third floor, for the weekends when the P's decide to come to town and the old hair is getting wild and shaggy — especially since he accepts student ID charges.

When parents do come to visit, they can stay in the Iowa House, the Union's answer to Howard Johnson.

So the Union may truly be the heart of campus life. With food, entertainment and lots of places to study, students may never need to go home. But if they try to kick you out, pay a visit to Taylor in room 155.

Regents provide long-term focus for Iowa state universities

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa state Board of Regents is a group of nine people you may never meet, but they make all major decisions for the UI — from tuition rates to overseeing the search for the next president of the university.

Board President
Pomerantz

The regents make decisions for the three state universities — the UI, Iowa State University in Ames and the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls. The members of the board are all graduates of Iowa colleges or universities and are appointed by the governor to six-year terms. All appointees must be confirmed by the Iowa Senate and must receive a two-thirds majority of the Senate's vote. The members' terms rotate so there are three new members appointed to the board every three years; the board must be balanced in terms of political affiliation and gender.

The regents appoint their own president from their ranks each time a president's term expires. Currently, Marvin Pomerantz is serving as the interim board president. The president runs the monthly regents meetings and acts as an unofficial spokesperson for the regents.

The other regents for the 1995-96 school year are Tom Collins of Cedar Rapids; Tom Dorr of Marcus, Iowa; Ellengray Kennedy of Bancroft, Iowa; Melissa Johnson-Matthews of Cedar Falls; Owen Newlin of Des Moines; Nancy Pellett of Atlantic, Iowa; Beverly Smith of Waterloo; and John Tyrrell of Manchester, Iowa.

Smith, an African-American, is the only minority member. She replaced another African-American woman, Betty Jean Furgurson.

The regents meet to discuss and decide on the major issues surrounding Iowa's higher education system. In the past year, some of the issues they've tackled include tuition rates (which increased), four-year graduation rates (regents approved a plan to help incoming freshmen get classes and recruit high school students in their freshman and sophomore years) and began not only one, but two, university presidential searches.

UI President Hunter Rawlings will become the chancellor of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., on July 1. UNI president Constantine "Dino" Curriss will also head east to assume the presidency of Clemson University in Clemson, S.C., on or before July 1. During the searches for their replacements, the regents approved criteria for the candidates, will interview finalists and will give the final okay on both appointments.

This year's regent vote by the Senate was not without its share of contention. Nominee David Fisher, a Des Moines businessman, was rejected by the Senate in April. Kennedy and Smith were Fisher's fellow nominees, but both women won easy Senate approval.

Fisher lost his confirmation bid amid controversy. He is currently involved in a $20 million federal lawsuit in which he and his former business associates are charged with making bad loans when they ran a now-failed savings and loan association in the mid-1980s. Iowa Governor Terry Branstad nominated Pomerantz in Fisher's place.

Pomerantz is slated to serve only a one-year term on the board.

The regents themselves represent many areas of life. For example, Johnson-Matthews is the student representative — she is enrolled at UNI. Dorr is a lawyer; Smith is the principal of a middle school. There is always one student on the regents; the student member is a full member and has full voting rights on all issues at meetings. Most of the highest-ranking members of the UI administration — such as the president, provost and vice-president of finance and university services — attend the meetings to give reports on specific issues or projects happening within the UI.

COMPUTERS NAVIGATE DATA BASES

Library resources unravel maze of information

Jill Groenenboom
The Daily Iowan

From the outside, the 5-story UI Main Library may seem huge and imposing. However, on the inside, it can provide a wealth of knowledge and information to students.

"It is overwhelming; we realize that. I think that given all the services offered, our goal is to eliminate some of the barriers and make students more comfortable," said Janice Simmons-Welburn, head of the reference department.

The first step in doing research at the Main Library is to go to the information desk, Simmons-Welburn said.

"It's a place to come and find where (students) can get direct information if they're not sure where to go," she said.

With more than 184 librarians and staff members, Simmons-Welburn said the libraries' staffs are among their best resources.

"Librarians go into classes and explain what sources are available and how to use them," said Marsha Forsys, coordinator of user education. The UI libraries also work closely with rhetoric Teaching Assistants.

"We're here to support the curriculum and facilitate independent learning — to help (students) succeed in their coursework. Over time, they'll know where to go," Simmons-Welburn said.

Information desk workers can direct students to the right location, and librarians can also target a research topic and help gather specific information.

"Students say, 'I know this is a dumb question.' We say, 'No, that's not a dumb question; we're here to help you find the answer,'" Simmons-Welburn said.

Answers can also be found using two supplemental computer programs. The Main Library provides two interactive computer programs — Library Navigator and Library Explorer — available through computers located near the library reference desk and in Instructional Technology Centers.

Library Navigator provides an introduction to UI libraries, focusing on the Main Library. Almost a year old, Library Explorer is a more in-depth program and offers an easy-to-use book format and more interaction for the student.

Because of its book format, Library Explorer is a good instructional source, Forsys said. In addition to simulated database searches, it also provides instruction on how to use OASIS, the online library catalog and information system.

Sixty-five percent of the Main Library's collections is indexed on OASIS.

OASIS also provides databases such as the Wilson Periodicals Index, which contains periodical references, and the Periodical Abstracts Data Base, which contains abstracts and indexes for more than 1,600 general journal publications. More specific databases include the psychological and behavioral science information and the recently installed Hispanic American Periodicals Index, indexing Latin American journals and journals related to Latin American topics.

Classes are also available to help students learn how to use OASIS and to teach students how to access the Internet.

"Help is available here to ease your anxiety," Forsys said.

Electronic, print and human resources are all available at the Main Library, and more specific research may be done at the 11 satellite libraries and the Law Library, all located on campus.

CENTERS COMPILE CAREER INFORMATION

Services help students with employment aspirations

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

In a 1994 survey of entering UI freshmen, 76 percent said they wanted help in developing their career plans. UI students scrambling to find an internship or a job after graduation can find help right on campus.

Students can start by going to the Center for Career Development and Cooperative Education in room 315 of Calvin Hall. Jim Seyfer, a center associate, said the second semester of a student's freshman year is a good time to set up an appointment with an adviser.

"We do career advising and help with locating internships or professional work experience," Seyfer said. "We help students develop a career and to focus their career goal. We help in exploring and focusing career plans and gaining professional work experience."

The center also has a career library and computer assistance to help students decide on a career. Seyfer said students in any major can go to the center for help at any stage in their education. Many times, people wishing to change their careers visit the center.

"We have students at all levels," he said. "It's a real diverse group that uses our office."

When students receive an internship, they should arrange it with the center, Seyfer said.

"We offer official recognition," he said. "The experience goes on each student's permanent record. They can maintain student status."

The center compiles internship information for students to peruse.

"We screen possible internships to make sure they are professional," Seyfer said.

The center also helps students with résumés, cover letters, interview preparation and job searches.

"I think almost all students want to find work that is personally satisfying when they graduate," Seyfer said. "We are a major source of assistance for that effort."

When students begin their junior year, they should make an individual appointment at the Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office in room 24 of Phillips Hall, said director Deanna Hurst. In addition, each professional UI college has its own placement office.

"The employment cycle starts a lot earlier than most students realize," Stupp Hurst said.

About 300 employers visit the campus each year, and the placement office helps students prepare for prospective interviews.

The office, which also has a resource library, helps with résumé writing, interviewing and job search skills as well. The difference between the center and the placement office is that the center prepares students to move on to the placement office, Seyfer said.

The placement office also offers 45 to 50 workshops and seminars each semester to help students with career preparation.

The placement office has the National Employment Wire Service and the Department of Employment Service, which has computer listings of professional jobs available.

The placement office also has software available for purchase. Students can purchase Résumé Expert, a program that helps with the writing of résumés, for about $20.

Hurst said students can bring in their résumés on computer disks and include them in a database.

When employers want résumés of a particular group of students, the placement office can retrieve them for the employers.

Stupp Hurst said about 75 to 85 percent of business students receive professional employment, while others go on to graduate school or continue looking for jobs. She said placement statistics for liberal arts students vary depending on each major.

RESEARCH FACILITIES SUPPORT PATENT PROCESS

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

Starting new companies and the marketing of technology and research come together in full swing at the UI's Oakdale Research Campus.

Oakdale, located about seven miles east of Iowa City in Coralville, has grown rapidly since its inception as a tuberculosis hospital in 1923. Since 1984, Oakdale's campus, consisting of 500 acres, has been the home and drawing board to more than 24 technology-based businesses.

"Not many places at the UI physically grow," Oakdale campus director Bruce Wheaton said. "Oakdale offers an attractive alternative for expansion with a 10- to 15-year terrain-based physical plan."

Although Oakdale does not offer student courses or require undergraduate involvement, its expansion has advantages both for the UI — because it implements and markets UI research — and for the city of Coralville, which reaps the economic benefits.

What launched Oakdale's success was the passing of the Bayh-Dole Act in 1980, which gave universities the rights to their own government-funded research. However, it wasn't until the mid-1980s when universities became aware of the act's benefits and America saw an explosion of patents by universities.

In 1984, the UI also jumped on the patenting bandwagon by establishing its own Technical Innovation Center at Oakdale. The center is where the patenting and marketing of UI research is done, and is described by Wheaton as the UI's "business incubator."

"A business incubator is a sheltered environment used for the growth of new companies," Wheaton said.

Usha Balakrishnan, associate director of the UI Research Foundation, and David Ritchie, licensing associate, are the two key staff members at Oakdale who work with the licensing and patenting of applicants' ideas. They — along with a patent committee — listen to inventors' ideas and decide whether the concept is both patentable and marketable.

"We enable people to use results of academic research, but human use of research means that somebody has to make it and sell it," Ritchie said.

In the past, the majority of Oakdale's patents have been in the area of biosciences, but more recently there has been a strong upsurge in the inventing and marketing of computer software.

"Combining academic strength and business exchange was a very key concept in the establishment of the park."

Tom Bauer, associate director of the UI Oakdale Research Campus

"Some researchers are licensed to start up their own companies, or segue their product into other areas we manage," Wheaton said. "One function (of Oakdale) is to help new businesses get going."

Presently, the Oakdale

Research Park has 14 tenants — small companies working under the supervision of the center — and 10 graduates — those companies who were once under the center's supervision, but now stand as companies on their own. All the tenants occupy the research park, as well as many of the graduates.

"Combining academic strength and business exchange was a very key concept in the establishment of the park," associate director Tom Bauer said. "There's a thread which weaves through it all and stems from the university's interest in becoming a better university and a service. One way to become a better university is to strengthen partnerships with businesses by strengthening partnerships both intellectually and financially."

Oakdale's acclaimed relationship between intellectual and financial sources has been quite successful, considering invention disclosures have gone up 50 percent in the past three years and the center has maintained its goal of graduating one company each year.

Oakdale and its companies have also been successful at a financial level, considering there are only 60 UI-paid employees compared to the 600 employees who are paid through Oakdale's profits. Wheaton said the private money against Oakdale's budget is 20-to-1 — a figure he is proud of because it makes Oakdale less dependent on federal funding.

"It would be very nice if our institutional strategy embedded in our nation's strategy for growth," Wheaton said.

As for Oakdale's future, plans have already been made to construct a public bicycle path through the research park, as well as to build new roads to make Oakdale more accessible. At a business and educational level, Bauer said the area will be the site for academic research and a service unit for more than 20 research-based companies.

However, Ritchie stressed that although Oakdale's growth is at the industrial level, the research park is environmentally safe.

NOTABLES DRAW LARGE CROWDS

Lecture Committee guests enlighten UI audiences

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

Poet Maya Angelou, former presidential candidate George McGovern and Olympic runner Jackie Joyner-Kersey have one thing in common — they've all treated the UI community to their words of wisdom.

The UI Lecture Committee, a group of students appointed by the UI Student Government, is in charge of bringing speakers to the UI community throughout the school year.

The committee sponsors various lectures which have drawn some of the nation's most notable speakers.

"There are a couple of lectures we have every year," said UI senior Andy Peebler, chairman of the lecture committee. "We have a distinguished lecture and Martin Luther King Jr. lecture every year."

This year's Distinguished Lecturers were Angelou and McGovern, and the Martin Luther King Jr. lecturer was Morris Dees, the co-founder of the Southern Poverty Law Center and the 1991 recipient of the Martin Luther King Jr. Award.

"The biggest lecturer we had was the Maya Angelou lecture. We had about 2,500 people in two different locations," said Peebler.

Peebler said the committee strives to bring in speakers from all walks of life — including Joyner-Kersey, who spoke at "Welcome Week 1994."

In addition, the UI welcomed several independent filmmakers during the 1994-95 school year.

"What we started trying to do this year was to look at the different potential audiences on campus," Peebler said. "What we tried to do is not limit ourselves, (and we are) trying to meet as broad a range of interests as possible."

But bringing in big names means shelling out big bucks for the committee, which spent $5,000 to bring Angelou to the UI last fall.

"With the carryover our budget was $72,000," Peebler said. "Next year it's going to be bigger."

Controversy is commonplace at the UI when the lecture committee sponsors political figures.

In April, UI graduate Joseph Gaylor — now an aide to Newt Gingrich — was met by a group of 50 protesters when he came to speak in the Union.

The speech was delayed 45 minutes as members of six student organizations waved signs and interrupted Gaylor as he attempted to begin his lecture.

Peebler said conflict of opinions is normal when outspoken public figures come to campus.

"Because of the people we're dealing with — people who are on the cutting edge of their fields — it's natural that people are going to be offended," Peebler said. "It's part of our job to spark debate. We do like to have people come in who will challenge people's views."

Although the committee invites a broad spectrum of lecturers to campus, there are some speakers who don't make the cut.

"... we had someone calling to book Kato Kaelin," Peebler said of O.J. Simpson's famous houseguest. "I don't think Kato will be coming to campus anytime soon."

Although the committee put on an estimated 15 lectures during the 1994-95 academic year, the summer schedule is limited to one speaker.

Students who have suggestions for the committee can participate in two ways.

"They could call our office with a suggestion or drop a letter," Peebler said. "But I would really encourage a person to apply for the committee. I would say the more people that apply, the better."

Applications for the committee are accepted each April.

Individual departments are also active in soliciting speakers from professional settings.

The College of Business Administration brings in between 25 and 30 speakers each year, said Sharon Scheib, the director of communication and external relations.

The business school recently

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

Poet Maya Angelou spoke at Hancher Auditorium in October 1994 as part of the UI's lecture series. The UI Lecture Committee brings artists, politicians and other luminaries to speak to UI audiences throughout the year.

hosted Ron Pearson, president of Hy-Vee Food Stores, for a discussion with UI faculty and students and area business leaders.

"Not only did he speak, but at every table there were students and business people sitting together," Scheib said.

Because guests at the lectures are often prominent members of the business community, the events offer students an opportunity to network with possible future employers.

The department's lectures are organized with the intention of informing students as well as helping them to make valuable connections.

"If we don't bring people in to speak to our students we really miss out," Scheib said. "That kind of networking opportunity is not to be overlooked."

Services help incoming minorities adjust to UI life

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Minority students can discover opportunities and fight feelings of alienation at a predominantly white university with the assistance of two UI organizations that emphasize cultural diversity and minority concerns.

Opportunity at Iowa has been striving to increase minority enrollment and retention rates since its establishment in 1987. The organization works to reaffirm the UI's stance that the best universities include people from the broadest spectrum of backgrounds, cultures, viewpoints and disciplines.

As well as coordinating the recruitment and retention of under-represented faculty and students, Opportunity at Iowa also develops and supports a variety of initiatives to sustain an environment conducive to minority students and women.

Organizations such as Opportunity at Iowa and Special Support Services are important in any college setting because they symbolize that school's commitment to diversity — something that should be found on every campus — said Nancy Barcelo, interim director of Opportunity at Iowa.

"It's important for (new minority students) to know that there is a place for them to go to should they encounter concerns or want to seek information about how to improve their opportunities to do different things on this campus," Barcelo said. "It is so critical for them to know that they then can make contacts with individuals who are like them or who are sensitive to their different cultures or different languages."

Opportunity at Iowa scholarships, which total $20,000 over four years, are the UI's highest scholastic awards for entering minority freshmen. The scholarships support qualified minority students and are based on academic achievement. Last fall, 58 students received the scholarships — the highest number since the program's inception and nearly twice as many from the year before.

UI sophomore Latoya Buchanan said she appreciated the personal attention she received from Floyd Akins, associate director of Opportunity at Iowa.

"Floyd Akins is great because he assisted me with trying to get to school," Buchanan said. "Besides that, he really cares, and you can tell he cares. He'll tell you to come back and he'll check up on you. I can give up a thousand times and say, 'I can't handle this anymore,' but he'll keep telling me a thousand times, 'No, there is nothing that isn't worth trying.'"

"It's important for (new minority students) to know that there is a place for them to go to should they encounter concerns..."

Opportunity at Iowa administrators believe it is not enough to recruit minority students, but continued support must be available to nurture and maintain diversity by providing centers, programs and organizations that unite the campus community and create a multicultural environment. One example of this is Special Support Services.

For the past 25 years, professional counselors and administrators from Special Support Services have encouraged a racially diverse group of students to develop their potential and reach their degree objectives. The office serves as a resource for students who have culturally and socially different backgrounds.

Esther Materon-Arum, coordinator of academic support programs for Special Support Services, said anytime students are taken from a homogeneous culture — where most people in the community share the same values, ideas and ways of life — and exposed them to a university environment, anything can happen.

"It's no different than having a farm kid or a student from Chicago coming in," Materon-Arum said. "It can be easier for the farm kid because they can lose themselves in the crowd. But it becomes more difficult when skin color makes you stand out in a crowd."

The service takes students who come from different social backgrounds and prepares them for what they will encounter at the UI — culturally and economically diverse people, UI bureaucracy, roommates — anything the student may need help with. Materon-Arum said the program doesn't make the product; it only makes it better.

"When you come in and you tell us that you are going batty because your roommate has never known someone like you before and you didn't expect that much ignorance, how you feel singled out in class, we understand," she said.

Nonminority UI undergraduate students who participate in the trio programs — including the Talent Search, Upward Bound, Educational Opportunity Center — may also receive assistance from Special Support Services.

Volunteers, colleagues, community residents and fellow students who become helpful resources and friends to newcomers reinforce Special Support Services goals. This develops an atmosphere conducive to the personal, social and intellectual development of students from all racial, ethnic and cultural backgrounds.

Students are offered individual attention with mentors and referrals to tutors through New Dimensions in Learning. Student volunteer peer assistants, who have previously attended the UI, familiarize new students with the UI and Iowa City communities.

STUDENTS BENEFIT FROM 4-YEAR PLAN

Despite rising tuition, UI remains best bargain in Big Ten

After scanning the myriad of brochures, it might seem the UI is something of a Never-Never Land under a golden dome. Yet, three inevitable evils lurk on the dark side of the UI — parking tickets, Add Sheets and tuition increases.

Keep buckets full of meter change and butter up the meter maid in order to avoid the golden tickets placed under the windshield wipers.

Run like hell to class every Wednesday morning to escape overzealous strangers on street corners who shove yellow Add Sheets in students' face.

But make no mistake about it. After 11 years of tuition hikes, the increases seem as definite as the black and gold of Herky's feathers.

In October 1994, the Iowa state Board of Regents voted to increase tuition at the three state universities for the 11th year in a row. Despite fierce student lobbying efforts preceding the vote, tuition was raised 4.2 percent for in-state students and 6 percent for out-of-state students. The boost tacked on an extra $144 to the approximately $1,049 for residents.

Despite the steady increases, the hike is below the median price of other Big Ten Conference schools, said regent Tom Collins.

"Tuition at our state universities is reasonable and competitive with the other universities in the Big Ten," Collins said. "No matter how much or how little we raise tuition in a given year, there will be people who complain."

Collins said the UI is a bargain for students who can make it through in four years.

"Obviously, the longer a student stays in school, the more it will cost them. If students could graduate in four years, they could be earning an income sooner and saving the money they would spend on school," Collins said. "Focus should not be on fighting tuition increases, but on graduating on time."

In 1995, Collins proposed a tuition rebate as an incentive

for students who could graduate in four years, but his proposal was defeated.

Tuition increases are a necessary evil to maintain quality higher education, said former regents President Marvin Berenstein.

"I've voted for tuition increases each year and would do it again in the fall if I were still on (the board)," Berenstein said. "The increases are necessary, and the cost of an education at the UI and the other two state universities is still a bargain."

In past years, United Students of Iowa — a student-run organization that lobbies state legislators and maintains relations with the board — rallied for lower tuition. However, the UI Student Government dramatically cut funding to the organization for the 1995-96 school year, and the organization disbanded.

UISG President Tim Williams said the organization is no longer needed because he and other members of UISG will be more involved with lobbying efforts than in years past. He said persistence is key to stopping the increases.

"We're still exploring different ways to approach the regents and legislators, but lobbying will still be of great importance," Williams said.

"Instead of going and giving a speech once a year, we'd rather approach them on a regular basis. They definitely will know our names by the end of the year," Williams said.

According to UISG Vice President Jeremy Johnson, the best way for students to battle budget cuts and tuition increases is to become active in fighting the increases.

"The more people we can get to help us, the bigger impact it'll make," he said. "So if you want to make an impact, join us."

While he commended students for caring about the price of their education, Berenstein said their battle is wasted.

"Even with increases every year, (the UI) is still the biggest bargain in the Big Ten," he said.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION AT THE UI

UI community diversity upheld by inclusive hiring goals

Sara Kennedy
and Patricia Harris

Affirmative action — a controversial and hotly contested issue — is used in all job categories and levels at the UI, a requirement by law because the UI holds federal contracts.

The UI Affirmative Action Office is responsible for the day-to-day implementation of the UI's affirmative action policies, educating the UI community about affirmative action laws and ensuring compliance with statutory and regulatory requirements. The office reports directly to the UI president and the Iowa state Board of Regents.

Although the office deals mostly with full-time employees of the UI, Director of Affirmative Action Susan Mask said the office seeks to educate students about affirmative action and diversity.

"We provide educational training about sexual harassment, diversity, disability awareness and sexual orientation — among other areas," Mask said. "For students, a larger question on campus is 'What is diversity?' (The) Affirmative Action (Office) is a tool to help achieve diversity on campus."

Mask said there are a number of offices and programs on campus working together to make the UI more culturally diverse, including Opportunity at Iowa, a program for minority students.

Students who may have come from a non-diverse background may especially benefit from the services offered if they remain receptive to new ideas, Mask

"Affirmative action is the basis for expanding the diversity of students on campus."

Phillip Jones,
UI Dean of Students

said. Being open to new ideas can reap long-term benefits, and Mask said students don't need to do much planning to come to a campus as diverse as the UI's.

"If they bring an open mind and realize differences are not a threat, the appreciation of difference is something that helps us grow," she said.

A written affirmative action plan is required of all federal contractors holding contracts of $50,000 or more and employing 50 or more individuals. The plan helps measure the UI's progress in equal hiring practices and work force diversity, and can identify the need for different implementation strategies. Groups that are protected by the affirmative action plan include women, minorities, disabled persons, veterans and people of an alternate sexual orientation.

The UI uses hiring goals — not quotas — in its hiring practices. The goals are designed to achieve a greater inclusion of previously excluded or underutilized individuals. The goals are based on the percentages of women and minorities available for positions. Ideally, the percentage working in UI departments would be the same as the percentages available.

UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones said affirmative action is a part of life at the UI thanks to both legislative mandates and executive orders from the civil rights era.

"Affirmative action is the basis for expanding the diversity of students on campus," Jones said. "It's a process of being affirmative in seeking out qualified applicants and promoting the equality of opportunity in admissions."

Affirmative action could include broader recruitment of students on the basis of both merit and need, Jones said. However, special consideration is not given to students with disabilities or students of color, he said. "Students are not admitted who are not qualified," he said.

"That is key when it comes to affirmative action in higher education."

The numerous physical education classes offered by the UI Physical Education Skills Program range from racquetball to weekend excursions in rock climbing, guaranteeing even sports fanatics a new experience.

Students in the College of Liberal Arts are required to have four P.E. credit hours before graduating.

Students have the option of enrolling in half-semester one-hour P.E. classes, going on one-credit-hour weekend trips, taking full-semester P.E. classes for two credit hours or testing out of the P.E. requirement by taking written and physical tests.

Some of the classes offered in the fall are Ballet I, Tae Kwon Do, Badminton, Racquetball, Tennis, Weight Training, Volleyball and Jogging.

Students in other UI colleges may enroll in special-permission courses such as Ballroom Dance, Bicycle Touring, Basic Canoeing, Latin Dance and Rowing.

P.E. classes that entail weekend trips are in popular demand by UI students wanting to gain one credit in two days. This is the first year all weekend treks have been located in Iowa.

Spots in the weekend classes fill up fast, especially by seniors needing P.E. credits to graduate, said Bernadine Fairchild, a secretary with the P.E. program.

"Students like getting it all done in one weekend," Fairchild said. "We have about 2,000 per semester enrolled in weekend trips."

Each of the five weekend courses offered — Basic Canoeing, Rock Climbing, Mountain Biking, Bicycle Touring and High Ropes Course — are available on three different weekends and are limited to 15 students per session. There is a $40 registration fee. Information and sign-up sheets are located in room E220 of The Field House.

Dance classes taught by the All Iowa Dance Club meet for eight weeks and have a $25 fee. Ballroom Dance, Country Dance and Latin Dance are available. Instructors start with the basics and give students with new lifetime social skills. Opportunities are also available for more advanced dancers, including a chance to compete in national competitions.

Students with physical disabilities have the option of taking two adapted classes which are customized to students' needs. Special permission is required from the Student Disability Services office in room 3101 of Burge Residence Hall.

Most P.E. classes are taught by Teaching Assistants with different backgrounds in order to provide diverse activities.

"We do try to have a varied program to give kids a lot of choices," Fairchild said. "Other instructors are coaches for women's athletics, so everyone is very experienced."

A list of P.E. classes and registration dates can be found in the Schedule of Courses. More information is available from room E220 of The Field House.

Residence halls pave change to UI lifestyle

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

New students may be able to make an easier transition into the UI environment if they spend their first couple of years in the residence halls.

Many choose to live in residence halls because they are convenient and economical and provide opportunities to meet people and develop friendships.

UI sophomore Jeff Lentz lived in Slater Residence Hall during his first year. Lentz said living in a residence hall with so many other people was an experience for him because he realized that what he did or how he behaved directly affected the people on his floor.

"It helped me meet new people and get accustomed to college life," he said. "If you lived off campus, you wouldn't have the same opportunity to meet as many new people or get involved with the activities in your hall. You can do intramurals, have a barbecue or a movie night with other floors; it just helps you learn how to relax."

The residence halls on the east side of the Iowa River, near the main campus area, include Burge, Currier, Daum, Mayflower and Stanley. Hillcrest, Quadrangle, Rienow and Slater residence halls are located on the west side of the river, near the UI's athletic facilities and UI Hospitals and Clinics. Dining rooms in Burge provide food service for the residence halls on the east side of the river, while Hillcrest and Quadrangle provide for the residence halls on the west side of the river.

The UI residence hall complex is the third smallest among the Big Ten universities. During the 1994-95 academic year, UI residence hall populations ranged in size from 1,018 Mayflower residents to 319 Quadrangle residents. The residence halls also vary in atmosphere, from modern high-rises like Slater and Rienow to the more traditional architecture of Quadrangle and Currier.

More than 5,500 students — about 20 percent of the UI population — live in the residence halls. Among incoming freshmen, more than 90 percent choose to live in the residence halls, but students of all classes — including upperclassmen and professionals — also choose to live there.

Others living in the residence halls include Resident Assistants. RAs are sophomores, juniors, seniors or graduate students who are each assigned to a residence hall floor to help students become accustomed to the UI lifestyle.

In addition to RAs, hall coordinators also help students in the residence halls. Hall coordinators are full-time professional staff members who run the daily operations of

Residence Halls

There are nine Residence Halls on the UI campus. Each offers a unique setting:

■ Burge Residence Hall

Burge Residence Hall houses 905 residents. An Undergraduate Academic Advising Center is located in Burge, as are the UI Department of Residence Services, the UI Housing Office and a computer lab. Most rooms in Burge are doubles, but there are some singles and triples. Some rooms are air conditioned. Students who wish to live in a quiet environment can opt for "quiet houses" — floors where quiet hours are enforced from 7 p.m. to 10 a.m. Other Burge specialties include accessible housing for students with disabilities, a sun deck, a copy machine, an ATM and a kitchenette on each floor.

■ Daum Residence Hall

Daum Residence Hall is connected to Burge by an underground walkway. Residents share Burge's dining and study facilities. All the rooms in Daum, which are double and single occupancy, are air-conditioned. Nearly 350 students live in the residence hall. One of Daum's main attractions is the basketball and volleyball courts located behind the building.

■ Currier Residence Hall

Currier Residence Hall — built in 1914 — was the first residence hall constructed at the UI. The building houses 663 students in mostly double and single rooms. No rooms are air-conditioned. Currier residents have access to a kitchenette; a weight room with benches and free weights; and an aerobics room with treadmills, Stairmasters and bicycles.

■ Stanley Residence Hall

Stanley Residence Hall, which is connected to Currier, offers its residents a lounge and a kitchenette on each floor, a view of the Iowa River, an Instructional Technology Center and mostly double rooms, some of which are air-conditioned. Eight of the 10 floors are quiet houses. The 402 Stanley residents dine in Burge.

■ Hillcrest Residence Hall

Students who remember the agony they experienced at the beginning of the school year may recall it had little to do with classes, but a lot to do with making it up the intimidating hill which leads to Hillcrest Residence Hall. Hillcrest, which has a dining room overlooking the Iowa River, houses 841 students in mostly double and single rooms. Hillcrest is home to the Foreign Language House, where students who share an interest in foreign languages and cultures can live. A grand piano, a kitchenette and an ITC are located in Hillcrest.

■ Quadrangle Residence Hall

Quadrangle Residence Hall, more commonly called "Quad," houses 319 residents in mostly double rooms, some of which are air-conditioned. The residence hall has a dining room for its residents and a public cafeteria. Quadrangle offers an automatic teller machine, a copy machine, an ITC, classrooms and study areas, and a baby grand piano. The residence hall also remains open for occupancy during winter break.

■ Rienow Residence Hall

Rienow Residence Hall is one of two 12-story high-rise residence halls on the west side of the Iowa River. Rienow's 511 residents share Quad's dining facilities; Rienow is connected to Quad by a tunnel. The mostly double rooms are all air-conditioned, and a quiet house option is available.

■ Slater Residence Hall

Slater Residence Hall — like its companion, Rienow — is the other high-rise named in honor of a former UI football player who became a federal judge: Fred "Duke" Slater. More than 500 residents live in mostly double rooms, all of which are air-conditioned. There is an adjacent outdoor basketball court, a main lounge with a piano and a quiet house option.

■ Mayflower Residence Hall

Mayflower Residence Hall, which houses more than 1,000 residents, combines the homey atmosphere of apartment life with UI residence hall convenience. Two double-occupancy rooms with air conditioning share a kitchen and a bath, giving students the option of cooking their own meals or purchasing a board plan at another residence hall's dining room. Special floors are set aside for upper-class and graduate students. Mayflower services include automatic teller machines, laundry facilities on each floor, a piano room, a copy machine, parking for a limited number of students and occupancy during interims. City Park is located across the street.

the halls; advise student government; and encourage recreational, social and cultural programming.

Returning upperclassmen gave varied reasons why they chose to return to the residence halls. The most common responses included location, social activities, easy walking access or a free Cambus ride to classrooms and recreational facilities, building security, study areas, access to computer facilities, all-you-can-eat meals, laundry facilities and friends.

UI senior Brian Fritz has lived in Hillcrest Residence Hall for three years. He said living in a residence hall is a matter of convenience and it allows him to spend more time studying.

"I don't have to clean the bathroom, do dishes, spend time going to the grocery store to buy food or spend time cooking it," Fritz said. "It's an interesting social environment. I probably have met a lot more people (in Hillcrest) than I would have if I had lived in an apartment."

Each residence hall provides laundry facilities, vending machine areas, study space, TV lounges and free Cambus service. Rooms are furnished with beds, desks and chairs, sinks, mirrors, a telephone, wastebaskets and cable TV access. Residents share a bathroom unless they opt for rooms with adjoining bathrooms. All halls are coed.

RAs help students find comfort in new home

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

No matter what the problem may be — roommates, classes or parents — students living in UI residence halls can turn to their Resident Assistants for advice.

Cheryl Hoogerwerf-Reardon, Burge-Daum hall coordinator, said an RA's job is to help students feel comfortable at the residence halls — the students' home away from home.

"An RA's basic job is to help facilitate a community atmosphere on the floor, to help make the floor seem like a warm place to come to instead of a sterile room."

The 110 RAs at the UI's nine residence halls are prepared to assist a diverse group. They are trained to deal with a variety of problems, including roommate conflicts and personal affairs, Hoogerwerf-Reardon said.

UI sophomore Ginger Reed said she talked to her RA throughout the year when she had a problem or just needed to talk with someone.

"I felt my RA was there no matter what happened," she said.

"I felt like I could trust her and rely on her whenever I needed."

Along with helping residents on a personal level, RAs also conduct educational programs and help to maintain an environment conducive to study and sleep.

UI junior Heather Weems, an RA at Hillcrest Residence Hall, said conducting programs is an important part of her job.

"I think the biggest part of being an RA is approaching residents," she said. "We are responsible for making them aware of opportunities that deal with social and cultural diversity. We act as a resource more than anything."

However, their primary responsibility is to assist freshmen, said Celine Hartwig, education program coordinator of UI Residence Services.

"An RA's role is to help freshmen connect with the environment and feel that they have a place to turn to," she said. "We want our incoming students to feel comfortable and to get to know other students on the floor."

Students should be able to turn to their floor RA at any time, Hoogerwerf-Reardon said.

"An RA's job is to be a helper, a friend, a resource — someone who cares that a floor member is at the university," she said. "Forming good relations with all the residents on the floor is a key to being an RA. Students should feel they can approach an RA at any time with any problem. That's what they are there for."

This year's RAs were selected during the spring semester and will receive training through August. As part of their job, RAs receive free room and board.

JASON DRAUTZ

Life in Iowa City: It's a whole new world

On the brink of a new experience, it is inherently human for one to attempt to craft a vision of what lies ahead.

For instance, before I began writing for this newspaper, my vision entailed working in a musty, smoke-filled newsroom where everyone present had a thin mustache of perspiration beading on their upper lip — the dual result of impending deadlines and a steady diet of cigarettes and bad coffee.

I also had an idea that my editor would be a high-strung sort, having some type of unusual physical trait that would serve to define his or her persona (whether it was a facial tic or an ever-present, soiled, chomped-on cigar, I hadn't yet decided).

As it turned out, my editor happens to be as calm as a lake on a breezeless day, with no sign of any unnerving physical quirks. She even smells nice. Likewise, the rest of the folks in the newsroom are pleasant; the only one who ever seems to strain against a deadline is me. And the environment here is usually clean and — alas — smoke free.

So it happens that the visions that we foreshadow for ourselves are usually inaccurate, even backwards. Students who are about to immerse themselves for the first time into the UI and Iowa City landscape have no doubt conjured such visions. Yet, what awaits them in this university town is one of the most backward places imaginable.

Here you have the UI, a Big Ten institution, educational pacesetter in the fields of medicine, physics and writing. With such a glowing résumé, an incoming student might easily envision that UI administrators at the UI have fostered a learning environment of unparalleled integrity. One quickly learns, however, that this is not uniformly true.

Consider for a moment the case of physical education requirements. Our fine administration has deemed it necessary that students in the College of Liberal Arts hoping to graduate from this institute of higher learning must first complete four credit-hours of P.E. These classes, while dressed in the guise of a serious academic endeavor, generally amount to a glorified version of the same gym classes you took in elementary and high schools.

I remember taking softball, as a UI freshman, for my first P.E. credit. Our instructor spent the first four class periods, one-and-a-half-hour yawners each, lecturing on the rules of the game and the different strategies that we would be employing when we finally were groomed for "game" situations.

When we did take the field, this teacher — she wanted us to call her "coach" — continually interrupted the contests. She would storm out of the dugout to berate someone for a cardinal foul-up, like not covering the correct base or missing the cut-off man on a throw from the outfield. The victim, usually an unsuspecting woman, was usually left with a crestfallen look after weathering the tirade.

So, for just a few hundred bucks, a mind, body and soul-enhancing experience like this will be yours. It's required. And it's ridiculous.

I am not faulting my instructor for her enthusiasm, nor am I decrying the necessity of offering these gym classes. I understand, after all, that the future of P.E. teachers in America rests on these breeding grounds of whistle blowing.

What I fail to comprehend is why college-aged students are forced to be subjected to such inane activities. I honestly believe that someone who is of voting age, and thus old enough to be imprisoned for life, should be responsible for their own choices regarding physical fitness. Yet UI administrators see it fit to keep the requirement, as if hitting the cut-off man is integral to molding a well-rounded student.

Even without mentioning the UI's infamous "sex-act" policy or the impersonal and inaccessible nature of academic advisers — topics which themselves could fill a whole column — it is safe to say that the UI fails to meet the vision that it sets forth to the unsuspecting.

So much for unparalleled integrity.

While incoming students may feel the frustration that accompanies the unmet expectations of the UI, they are bound to find a pleasant surprise awaiting them in Iowa City. One who has never been here may have misgivings about the town as a colorless black hole of vibrancy.

For those of you who don't understand how Iowa City could possibly be construed this way, consider for a moment what constitutes newsworthiness in this area. A sample of any given local evening newscast would provide the answer.

The lead story will usually consist of a local event, often something entirely shocking — like the theft of a Hershey bar from a convenience store. The report is — of course — accompanied by live coverage from the crime scene, with dramatic footage of the allegedly stolen bar's empty wrapper lying motionless in the parking lot. Following that report is a weather update, after which we break to a commercial denouncing either a local liberal politician, abortion or both.

Upon return, we get an extended weather forecast — complete with meteorological diagrams and explanations. After another commercial break (local used car salesmen), we return live to the scene of the "Hershey Heist" for reaction from eyewitnesses. ("I can't believe that something like this could actually happen in Iowa!")

Coverage of important global events that shape and define our lives is next with "World in a Minute," which is followed by a recap of temperatures on this date in the past ten years. Finally, the show is a wrap with warm banter among the anchor persons, but not before we receive a final forecast and a promise of all the latest breaking weather developments on the news at 10.

From these programs, it is easy to see why preconceptions of Iowa City are so often misplaced. Yet what one finds upon living here is that this town is surprisingly unpredictable. In fact, it is rare to find another place where you can encounter so many diverse groups of people, for this town truly contains all representations of characters. It's hip, not just for Iowa, but for the whole Midwest.

Because of this dynamic confluence of folk, Iowa City is a place where your perspective can be unendingly broadened — if only you choose to look. And there is no tough prescription for meeting people here. Simply arm yourself with an honest smile and a friendly hello, and you are bound to meet someone who will stimulate your mind and your soul.

It all may sound difficult to believe if you haven't yet been indoctrinated into Iowa City life, especially if you envisioned hayseed spittin' and bass-ackward people. But remember ... it is almost always the expectation that is ass-backward.

FREEDOM SOUGHT

Communal living annoys many residents

Moir Crowley
The Daily Iowan

Whether it be an apartment, a house or a residence hall, UI students have discovered comfortable places to hang their backpacks and take shelter from the storm.

UI sophomore Mary Zgonina lived on the sixth floor of Slater Residence Hall last year. She said her experience living on the west side of the Iowa River was a positive one and that the greatest advantage was the social atmosphere.

"It's a wonderful way to get to know people," Zgonina said.

Her biggest peeve about living in Slater was having to share a bathroom with the other residents on her floor.

"I hate public bathrooms in general, and I hate having to share one every day," Zgonina said.

The opportunity to make friends was the only redeeming factor of residence hall life UI sophomore Kelly Capista could think of. After living in Burge for a year, she was ready for an apartment, she said.

"If I had to pick a residence hall, it would be Burge," she said. "But it's too small, too noisy and the food is terrible."

Early last fall, tasteless dinners and loud radios were the least of Capista's problems.

"I had two psycho roommates who moved out," she said. "Luckily, I got a great roommate who's my best friend."

Capista said even though the first year in the residence halls can be a rough one, incoming freshmen will benefit from life in residence halls.

"When you first get here, it's a great way to meet people and orient yourself with the campus," she said. "Afterwards, you want to get out and do your own thing."

The only problem UI sophomore Mary Fike had with living in Mayflower Residence Hall last year was the lack of parking spaces.

"Mayflower is kind of far away, but the buses are cool and it's never a problem to get downtown," she said.

Transportation is a small inconvenience, Fike said. She said living in Mayflower was very positive. With her own bathroom and kitchenette, it was like living in a little apartment.

"But without the responsibility of having to pay the bills," Fike said.

Many who choose to move out of the residence halls discover that with newfound freedom comes newfound responsibilities.

UI senior Derrick Felt lived in Hillcrest Residence Hall when he was a freshman. For the past two years, he has been living in an apartment.

Felt said the greatest advantage of living in an apartment is the privacy, which is hard to come by when living in a residence hall.

"If you need privacy or study time, you can always escape to another room," he said.

But privacy doesn't come cheap or easy, Felt said. No longer are the bathrooms cleaned or the food kept warm on the table.

"There is so much more responsibility," he said. "Bills to pay, cooking and cleaning — all that on top of schoolwork."

Still, if he had to do it all over again, Felt said he would spend his first year living in a residence hall.

"Having an apartment right away is too much responsibility and living in a dorm is an easier transition into college life," he said.

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

Moving is as much a part of living in Iowa City as deciding where to live. "At least I don't have to do it twice this year," said David Lieb, father of UI freshman Annie Lieb and UI junior Dan Lieb, as he waited for the final load last spring.

SEVERAL ACTS MAKE STOPS DOWNTOWN

Iowa City's live music venues offers variety

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Whether you like your grunge sweaty, your rock poppy, your funk groovy or your folk mellow, there is bound to be a local live music scene for you.

Although large-scale acts are somewhat rare in Iowa City, music fans are sure to find strong local acts with avid followings and enough bars that provide live music to satisfy most every musical need on most every night of the week.

Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St.

The newest live music bar to hit Iowa City is Gunnerz, which opened in May. The three owners, Warner Anderson, 22, Mark "Gunner" Gruhlke, 26, and Todd Geffaler, 28, started up the bar because they felt a need to continue and improve the presence live music has in Iowa City.

"We're attempting to bring the best available music talent into Iowa City, regardless of style," Gruhlke said. "It can be alternative grunge, blues, jazz — whatever. We're not concerned with musical style, so much as the talent of the band."

This summer, look for Slim Dunlap, former guitarist of the Replacements; Chucklehead, a ska-funk band from Boston; Rex Daisy, a Minneapolis-based group recently named one of the best up-and-coming bands by Rolling Stone; and Miss Universe, headed by Michelle Ruhl — named one of the best female singers at this year's South By Southwest Music Conference in Austin, Texas.

Gunnerz also features a Monday night blues jam lead by Kevin B.F. Burt of the Blues Instigators for a $1 cover charge.

You have to be 21 or older to get into Gunnerz, and cover ranges from $3 to $5 for most acts, but may be more for larger acts.

Gabe's, 223 E. Washington St.

One of the most popular bars to catch both local and larger touring acts is Gabe's. The dark, sweaty, smoky atmosphere is very conducive to moshing to your favorite alternative bands. The bar has boasted a number of larger acts, including Wilco and blues legends Bo Diddley and John Hammond, in addition to playing home to area bands like House of Large Sizes and High and Lonesome.

This summer, music lovers can look to Gabe's to see acts like Sheltering Sky — local favorites and winners of last spring's RiverFest — on June 24 and SubPop Recording artists Red Red Meat on June 28.

Tuesday night is a big night at Gabe's for the hip-hop crowd when it features its Club Hangout Hip-Hop Dance Party, complete with various DJs and lots of dancing.

To get into Gabe's, you must be 19 or older. Cover ranges from $3 to $5 for most acts, but may be more for bigger acts.

Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave.

The management down at the Que is set to pick up any live music slack caused by the recent closing of two local live music bars. While the downstairs area remains a great place to shoot pool and play darts or pinball, the upstairs area offers a large stage and dance floor. The bar has played host to local favorites like Dagobah and Sheltering Sky and if the mass of sweaty bodies filling the dance floor is any indicator, the bar is likely to bring in bigger acts.

The Que also hosts a Monday night blues jam for a $1 cover charge.

You must be 19 or older to get into the Que, and cover ranges from around $3 to $5.

Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St.

For a more laid-back, mellow atmosphere without sacrificing musical talent, check out The Mill or the Sanctuary. Both usually offer live music on the weekends for a small cover fee. Most acts are acoustic, and local favorites are often spotlighted.

Union Bar, 121 E. College St.

While the Union is mostly known for its dance music and DJs, the large bar does occasionally bring in musical acts such as the Jayhawks and Fishbone. Also, the Union offers free live music each Wednesday night in the front section of the bar. Performances range from the blues-inspired rock of High and Lonesome frontman David Zollo to the rap / funk of Mudbone to the country rock of the Tom Jessen Band. You must be 21 to attend the Wednesday night shows.

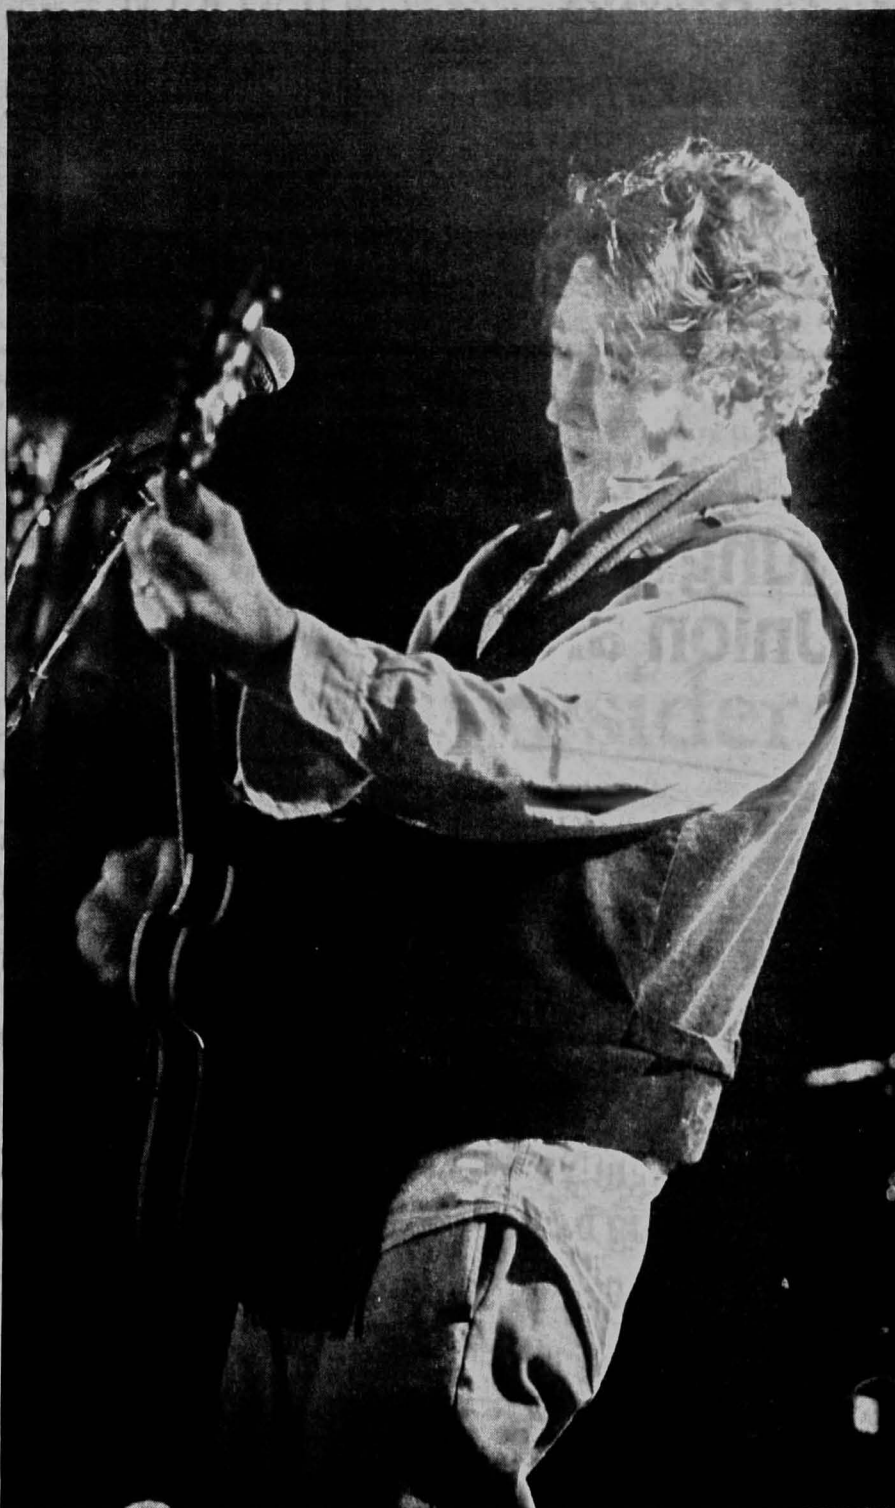

Friday night concert series

Live music fans who like to hear their tunes for free should check out the weekly Friday night concert series held near the Dubuque Street fountain on the downtown Pedestrian Mall. The concerts, which began in May, run through Sept. 1 from 6-9 p.m.

Lisa Barnes, executive director of the Downtown Association, said the idea for the free performances began three years ago when local business owners, professionals and employees decided to improve the family environment of the downtown area.

The series has proven valuable for not only families and downtown businesses, but also to bands seeking exposure. Top priority for the shows, which drew more than 4,000 fans last year, is given to local bands.

The remaining Friday night concert series schedule includes: June 23, Lincoln

MOVING TOWARD GREATER DIVERSITY

UI tops state universities in minority enrollment

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

As a campus with nearly 9 percent minority representation, the UI is the only one of the three Iowa state Board of Regents universities to meet the goal of 8.5 percent minorities.

This number does not include the number of foreign students, which made up 6.5 percent of total UI student enrollment during fall of 1994, said Michael Barron, UI director of admissions.

"The UI has seen an increasing number of minorities," Barron said. "It is very culturally aware."

UI sophomore Amy Tasker said coming to the UI was a learning experience.

"I'm from a really small town in Illinois," Tasker said. "We only had one minority family (in town) so I didn't have much exposure to different cultures. It's really different here. Everybody is here. You can find people of all different types at the university. It has made me more open because I learned about all different cultures."

Of the 2,413 total minorities enrolled at the UI during fall of 1994, 741 were African-American, 95 were Native American or Alaskan, 1,038 were Asian or Pacific Islander and 539 were Hispanic. The UI also had 1,739 foreign students from all over the world.

"We are certainly more diverse today than we were 25 years ago — both racially and culturally," said Rusty Barcelo, interim director of Opportunity at Iowa. "We are moving in that direction in both a positive and consistent way."

Female students now make up

Michael Barron, UI
director of admissions

more than 50 percent of total UI enrollment. Students from all 50 states and from both rural and urban areas can also be found at the UI.

Students of all ages, both undergraduate and graduate students, can attend the UI — more than 2,000 people over 25 years old were enrolled in the UI undergraduate program during the 1994-95 school year.

Keeping the UI a diverse environment is important for students to learn and grow, Barron said.

"We must be a diverse group of people," he said. "Diversity adds to educational richness of the university environment. It would be irresponsible for a university like Iowa to not want to provide a rich environment."

To keep the UI a diverse place, UI Admissions has been actively recruiting minorities for years, Barron said.

"Maintaining a growing sense of diversity is important because Iowa graduates will be working with more of a variety of people, whether they are working in Iowa, elsewhere in the country or abroad."

However, Barron said the UI still has a long way to go before it reaches its goal.

"It's not perfect. It's not necessarily where we want to be. It doesn't mirror the country, but we're certainly working on it," Barron said. "In terms of Iowa's population our campus is definitely a diverse place, but in terms of the rest of the population we certainly have a ways to go."

A wide variety of churches, along with mosques, synagogues and religious organizations — ranging from the western Judeo / Christian traditions to the Eastern mystical religions — can be found in Iowa City.

Religious diversity is common to the UI campus, said Chris Johnson, course coordinator for Judeo / Christian Traditions and Quest for Human Destiny in the UI School of Religion.

"When it comes to religion, there is quite a diversity in Iowa City," he said. "People tend to identify themselves in lots of different ways. They will describe themselves as coming from a wide variety of traditions."

Festivals and ceremonies of all religions are held throughout the year and people representing nearly every religion can be found at the UI.

A countless number of Christian churches ranging from A to Z can be found listed in the Iowa City White & Yellow Pages.

There is a great variety among Christians at the UI, said Kirk Johnson, UI campus director of Campus Crusade for Christ.

"There is definitely a diversity among Christians," he said. "There are Christians who would hail from all kinds of denomination backgrounds. Sometimes the only common thing they share is the relationship with Jesus Christ."

The Aliber / Hillel Jewish Student Center, 122 E. Market St., is another UI religious organization. Of the 800 Jewish students at the UI, more than 350 participate in activities sponsored by the center, said Elliot Zashin, director of the Aliber / Hillel Jewish Student Center.

"We provide students with a place to come to for help," Zashin said. "It's more of a cultural and social organization. We appeal to people who relate on both a religious and a non-religious basis to the Jewish culture."

Zashin said the center sponsors a variety of educational, religious and social activities and also celebrates many Jewish holidays.

The Islamic Society of Iowa City, 114 E. Prentiss St., and the Agudas Achim Congregation, 602 E. Washington St., are also prominent places of worship for many UI students and Iowa City residents.

Part-time jobs produce padded bank accounts

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

From selling music to selling beer to selling blood, UI students will do pretty much anything for a buck.

Iowa City has myriad local businesses which are anxious to employ students. However, openings for most jobs are usually rare. Therefore, a student interested in obtaining a job must be persistent and have a knack for being in the right place at the right time.

Although finding work may be difficult, most employed students enjoy their jobs because they're manageable and provide them with spending money.

Lack of money was UI alumna Sadhna Palondikar's motivation for finding a job as a hostess and waitress at Mondo's Tomato Pie in Coralville.

"I wanted to get a job so I wouldn't have to rely on my parents for extra spending money," she said.

When waitressing, Palondikar only makes a standard $2.75 plus tips, but she said the tips can be highly profitable.

"Tips can range anywhere from $40 at lunchtime to $100 at dinner," she said.

Palondikar said she makes $6 an hour as a hostess seating customers and estimating the length of time customers have to wait to be seated.

"Hostessing is knowing the floor plan really well, knowing where to put people and dealing with stressful situations," she said. "You learn to keep a smile on your face because not everyone is a happy customer."

Palondikar said despite the stress that comes from dealing with lunch and dinner crowds, working at Mondo's is enjoyable because of her co-workers.

"Because most employees are students, you're working but it's also a social time," she said. "It's not the job that keeps me working

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

Gallons of coffee and occasional jokes from the evening regulars help Marcia Davidson keep up with orders as a late-night waitress for Country Kitchen, 1402 S. Gilbert St. Also, several UI students turn to restaurant employment as a means of earning quick cash.

there; it's the people — they're great." However, since 95 percent of Mondo's employees are students, Palondikar said getting time off for holidays can be difficult.

"(Mondo's) is pretty flexible with scheduling because there are so many people working there," she said. "Getting time off for vacations is hard because most people working are students. You learn to sacrifice a little bit."

For UI sophomore Alan Micek, going to bars is no longer a recreational activity — it's his job. Micek is a bar back at Vito's, 118 E. College St., and hopes the job will lead to a bartending position. "It's a good job to have," Micek said. "It's the next best thing to going out."

As a bar back, Micek's duties include setting up the bar by stocking it with alcohol and washing all the glasses. He also makes sure the liquor is flowing throughout the night and that nothing in the bar gets destroyed by customers.

"It's extreme work at points throughout the night, and sometimes it's straight-up busting your ass," Micek said.

About three bar backs work Thursday through Saturday and one works during the week. They start between 8 and 8:30 p.m. and leave a little after 2 a.m. On week-ends, bar backs usually work until 2:30 a.m., Micek said.

Micek said he works between 20 and 24 hours a week, earning $4.65 an hour plus a share of the tips.

"I work a lot of hours so I can get promoted to bartender," he said. "Some people only work one or two days a week just to hold a job."

Micek said although he wants a promotion, his original motivation for seeking a bar-backing job was to stack up his bank account.

"I hate going home in the summer with nothing in my account, then work all summer long to fill it only to spend it all by the next summer," he said. "It's like a vicious cycle: drain, fill, drain, fill."

Bar jobs are extremely popular, Micek said. Therefore, available jobs fill up quickly.

"It's a job that's normally full and it's pretty much luck to get it," he said. "You need to get in at the right time when they need somebody."

However, Micek admitted a bar job is not for everyone.

"You need to be relaxed with people," he said. "If really drunk people are going to annoy you, then it's not the job for you."

While Micek watches people party all night, UI junior Juniper Gahn listens to music all day. Gahn is assistant manager of Co-Op Records of Iowa City, 119 E. Washington St.

"It's fun because you get to listen to music," she said. "If you're going to have a retail job, music retail is the best."

UI senior Chris Jones makes money by selling a little part of himself: plasma. Twice a week Jones goes to Sera Tec Biologicals, 408 S. Gilbert St., where he is hooked up to a machine that filters blood from veins in his biceps to remove the plasma.

When giving plasma for the first time, clients are required to receive a full physical done by qualified Sera Tec employees.

Jones said it takes between 10 minutes and a half an hour to get screened and about 45 minutes to give the plasma.

"They stick you, tape you down and observe the process," he said. "The little finger prick and the injection are exactly the same. It doesn't hurt that bad."

For a little pain, Jones makes $30 a week in cash — $10 for the first day and $20 for the second.

"All you do is pump your hand," he said. "You can watch TV, read or talk to the guy next to you."

ON-CAMPUS OPENINGS OFFER FLEXIBILITY

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

If a job search around town isn't successful, then either a trip to either the Union's Campus Information Center or accessing Jobnet through ISIS will reveal what university jobs are available. UI jobs are displayed with many titles, ranging from personal secretaries to book management.

Although most UI jobs start employees at minimum wage — $4.65 — they allow for raises after an evaluation. However, UI jobs are rarely available during the semester because those who have them usually keep them.

UI senior Gary Homolka holds two UI jobs. One is at the Visitors Center, where he answers questions people have about the UI. His other position is a UI tour guide, where he gives hour-long tours to prospective UI students and their parents.

Homolka has had both jobs for nearly a year. Despite only making minimum wage, he said being able to help future students makes the job worth it.

"I like both jobs, but the tour guide (job) is fun because it's a great opportunity to meet with parents and prospective students," he said.

Homolka said he likes UI jobs because they work around his class schedule.

"They're always flexible at the office," he said. "If you let them know ahead of time, they'll switch schedules around. What's good about a university job is that they realize we're all students first, which is something you might not get working at the mall."

"Normally when I had a few hours between classes I would do nothing, but now I can work."

Mark Grochowski,
UI senior

However, at most, a tour guide gives five tours a week because there is a staff of 30 guides.

Many other types of jobs are available. UI senior Kevin Walsh has been working in shipping and receiving at the University Book Store for the past two years. His job consists of checking in the daily shipment of textbooks and trade books to make sure the entire shipment is there. Walsh then checks the books into the computer and prepares them for shelving.

"Some books go to the Iowa Book & Supply, but most come to us because we have the most variety," Walsh said.

Walsh, who works four hours a day Monday through Friday, said his job works around his schedule and isn't time consuming enough to interfere with his schoolwork.

UI senior Mark Grochowski's job as a Cambus driver takes a different route than bookstore jobs. Grochowski works 18 hours a week driving UI students and other bus passengers around.

"Once you've been doing this for a few months it gets easy," Grochowski said. "When you know where you're going it's pretty much like driving around in circles."

Grochowski said the job does not crunch his school time, but actually helps him to keep busy.

"Normally when I had a few hours between classes I would do nothing, but now I can work," he said.

While many UI jobs involve providing services to other students, others — such as the job of UI senior Miranda Sienknecht — involve direct interaction with professors.

As a personal secretary for biological science Professor David Soll, Sienknecht works 20 hours a week answering phones, cleaning his office, typing forms and setting up travel arrangements.

Although she didn't have much secretarial experience when she was hired, Sienknecht, who is paid through Soll's grants and not by the UI, said it was easy to learn.

"I've had to do a few odd jobs which were pretty difficult, but overall it was easy to figure out what to do," she said.

Union cinema features novel and vintage films

Whether the Bijou Theatre is showing the classic "From Here to Eternity" or the flaming "Paris is Burning," UI students and faculty flock to see movies for only a few bucks.

Josh Golin — UI graduate student, research assistant and co-director of the student-run film board — said the Bijou prides itself on screening movies soaked with nostalgic senior Cathlin McCullough.

"I always get the schedule and check out what is playing," McCullough said. "You can only see those kinds of movies if you rent them, but it is better to see them on the big screen."

In fact, McCullough said she saw her all-time favorite movie at the Bijou.

"I saw 'My Life as a Dog.' It's a Swedish movie," she said. "It is the funniest movie I've seen in my life. I would have never even thought to see it if it didn't come to the Bijou."

The Bijou receives a small allotment of funding from student fees, but mostly supports itself through ticket sales. The prices are tailored to fit students' limited budgets: old movies cost $2.50 and newer films are $3.50, Golin said.

"The Bijou brings movies I wouldn't normally see," said UI junior Ingrid Pohl. "There aren't any drawbacks; it's close and it's cheap."

Though the Bijou suffered some financial difficulties last fall, the theater's attendance increased substantially, said Sally Shaffo, UI graduate student, Teaching Assistant and co-director of the film board. She said she hopes next year's schedule will draw comparable crowds.

"We already are working on the schedule for next year," she said. "We are going to show five films by Tomás Gutierrez — the most well-known director from Cuba — including 'Strawberry and Chocolate,' a film about gays in Cuba."

Andy Warhol's "Chelsea Girls," a documentary about the Rolling Stones, and a late-night horror-movie series are other highlights, Shaffo said.

"We do try to bring in films that are somewhat provocative, that represent groups that are not represented in mainstream theaters."

sentiment as well as those that stir up a little controversy.

"We do try to bring in films that are somewhat provocative, that represent groups that are not represented in mainstream theaters," Golin said. "We show many gay and lesbian films, films written by women and films by minority screenwriters."

The Bijou, located on the first floor of the Union, prints free calendars each semester with descriptions of the movies showing. About 65 different films are featured during the fall and spring semesters, with 30 films running in the summer.

Going to the Bijou is more exciting than sitting at home and watching movies on a little portable television set, said UI

Superb shows to enhance Hancher Auditorium season

Tracy Naden
The Daily Iowan

The world-class events offered at Hancher Auditorium captivate audiences while adding culture to the lives of UI students.

A variety of ground-breaking and educational programs are available throughout the 1995-96 season. Performance categories include the concert, jazz, vocal, family and chamber music series; Innovation Afoot; Broadway; and special events.

Students can order tickets from the Hancher Auditorium Box Office Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and until 8:30 p.m. on performance nights. Call Hancher for more weekend sales opportunities.

Ticket sales are already booming for Broadway shows "Grease" and "Tommy," said Wallace Chappell, director of Hancher. Tickets sales began April 19.

The popular Broadway musical revival "Grease" will immerse students in the world of poodle skirts and drive-in movies during the weekend of Oct. 6-8.

Peter Townsend and his British band, The Who, introduced "Tommy" as a rock opera in 1969. The story tells the tale of a traumatized boy who becomes a pinball wizard, and provides exciting visual imagery and sound to help UI students break from reality.

"My hope is that any given year will present a wide spectrum of performance arts," Chappell said. "I'm really pleased with 'Angels in America'; it will be an entertaining and smashing weekend at Hancher."

Often called the most heralded American play, "Angels in America" is divided into two parts: Millennium Approaches and Perestroika.

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

The father of Aleko's wife sings during a performance of "Aleko". The Russian opera was translated into English for the performance at Hancher Auditorium.

The vaudeville revue "Stomp" is back by the wildest popular demand in Hancher's history, Chappell said. The special event will be held Nov. 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. and at 3 p.m. on Nov. 19.

Students can order subscription series, which offer the largest discount, or they can choose their own series of special events. Depending on the seating, prices for UI students range from $20-$40.

MORE THAN 100,000 TICKETS ISSUED BY UI

M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

UI students displaying a B, J, R or S parking permit on their car could be given an additional $10 ticket if they park in the new parking development near The Field House before 3 p.m. Parking is a notorious problem for Iowa City residents, simply because there are far more vehicles than available parking spots.

Parking woes plague drivers

Jami Peterson
The Daily Iowan

For many students coming to the UI, it may be best to leave their cars parked in the garage at home.

"There's not enough parking places at all," said UI junior Pauley Reveiz. "It's overcrowdedness."

Due to a lack of spots on campus, parking is — at best — hard to come by.

"If you can possibly get along without a car, don't bring it (to the UI)," said parking control supervisor Ellie

"It's more or less a hassle to have a car here. Students should be able to get used to the bus system."

Pauley Reveiz,
UI junior

Horning. "We have very little space and a lot of cars trying to cram into it."

Students violating parking policies may have to pay the price — literally. The UI Parking and Transportation Department gives out between 100,000 and 120,000 tickets every year and tows 12 to 15 cars each month, said Horning.

Many students choose to avoid the parking problem by leaving their cars at home.

"It's more or less a hassle to have a car here," Reveiz said. "Students should be able to get used to the bus system."

The parking crunch on campus will not be a problem for students who apply for university lot permits early, said Linda Elliot, a secretary at the parking department.

"It's not too difficult if you come right away," Elliot said.

The early bird may get the parking permit, but be prepared to be the very early bird.

"I got in line at 7 a.m. and had to wait in line for five hours to get parking," said UI junior Sonya Lane.

Residence hall students can pay $72 for a permit to park in the South Clinton Street lot or Hawkeye Storage lot. The Hawkeye lot, which is three miles away from campus, can be accessed by Cambus or Iowa City Transit routes, said Elliot.

Students who will be commuting from outside of Iowa City can get permits to park in either the Finkbine or the Hancher Auditorium commuter lot for $38.25 per year.

These spots may be the most difficult to get, Elliot said.

"We have a waiting list from last fall of people we couldn't get in (to the lot)," Elliot said.

"If you can possibly get along without a car, don't bring it (to the UI). We have very little space and a lot of cars trying to cram into it."

Parking services also offers free permits that provide other parking options. An A permit allows students to park in the lot behind the Main Library for 30 cents per hour, while a J permit simply registers students' cars.

Parking elsewhere may be more costly. Those looking to park in other metered lots on campus and in Iowa City will pay 50 cents per hour.

Students may also be able to find private owners willing to rent spaces, but they should be prepared for the cost. Elliot said she has heard of someone paying $75 per month to rent a spot.

While a car may make life a little easier, the problems with parking on campus may outweigh the convenience.

"It's nice to have a car down here, but I wouldn't depend on it," Lane said. "It's such a hassle. It's easier to walk."

'SAFE VEHICLES USED'

Cambus ferries passengers around campus

Jill Groenenboom
The Daily Iowan

Getting from Mayflower Residence Hall to Rienow Residence Hall can take half an hour and a lot of leg power or 15 minutes and a bus schedule. A free service since 1971, Cambus provides a quick way to get across the UI campus.

"What it does for most people is provide service between residence halls and campus facilities to anybody. It's highly visible and readily accessible with frequent service," said Cambus coordinator Brian McClatchey.

Cambus offers nine different routes that cater to students' needs. The entire UI campus is serviced — including the Oakdale Campus, which is five miles away.

The Red and Blue routes encompass the main campus, with stops at all residence halls and several main campus buildings, including Student Health Service, Carver-Hawkeye Arena and Hancher Auditorium. They follow the same loop around campus but travel in opposite directions. The Interdorm route provides services between all the residence halls and the main campus.

"If you know Red, Blue and Interdorm, that is probably going to take care of all of your needs," McClatchey said.

Schedule times vary depending on whether it is a weekday, weekend or holiday. Taking care of students' needs is part of Cambus' service. Cambus also provides employment opportunities for UI students.

"We're a student-run operation. That's what makes us unique," McClatchey said.

The 20 Cambus vehicles require 125 drivers among the 150 student employees who make up the Cambus team. From the beginning, drivers are provided with training. After passing a driving skills test and obtaining a Class B commercial driver's license, intense training begins.

"Most people have 40 hours of training before they drive a bus by themselves," McClatchey said.

Starting next January, drivers will have to undergo drug testing, as required by the federal government.

Cambus has also had to deal with accidents — though not often.

"We've had a couple of noticeable ones, but I would say that Cambus is extremely safe," McClatchey said.

Despite getting new drivers each year, McClatchey is confident drivers' training prepares them for the job.

He said the biggest safety concern is people slipping or sliding around if a Cambus comes to a sudden halt.

"As far as passenger safety, we have very few incidents of anybody getting injured on a bus. They are safe vehicles to be transported on," McClatchey said.

NONMAJOR PARTICIPATION ENCOURAGED

Assorted bands supply music for everyone

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Whether they are playing in front of 70,000 football fans in their shiny black-and-gold uniforms or are performing in black for a sold-out show at Hancher Auditorium, members of UI bands know they are part of one of the finest music programs in the nation.

UI students can participate in a number of different bands, including the marching, symphony and concert bands. In many instances, students are involved in more than one.

The most visible UI band is the Hawkeye Marching Band, which performs at home football games in Kinnick Stadium.

Marching band director David Henning, who came to the UI two years ago, said he loves being with the students.

"I think it's a very good band with great traditions," he said. "It's almost like a fraternity or sorority."

Members of UI bands do not have to be music majors, Henning said. Eighty percent of the marching band's members are nonmusic majors.

The marching band also played for some halftimes of National Football League games and will perform Nov. 12 at Soldier Field, home of the Chicago Bears.

Last season, the marching band performed at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis during a Vikings-Jets football game, and Henning said everyone in the stadium took notice.

"We did so well (at the game),

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Members of the Hawkeye Alumni Marching Band blow the cobwebs out of their instruments at last fall's Homecoming parade. The band marches in the parade before the Homecoming football game and again during the halftime show.

they asked us to come back — all expenses paid — to perform at a playoff game," he said.

However, the band did not perform because the playoff games were during winter break, Henning said.

When the winter sports season begins, the pep band makes its presence known at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. This group is reserved for only the most enthusiastic musicians and Hawkeye fanatics. The pep band performs at home basketball games and wrestling meets.

Members of the pep band are chosen midway through fall semester from the marching band. Selected members of the pep band also accompany the basketball teams to post-season NCAA tour-namment games.

UI sophomore Susan Chaney is a member of the marching, pep and university bands and plans on participating throughout her college career, she said.

"It's fun for the people who want to play but don't want to major in it," she said. "It gives them an opportunity to play and it's a great place to meet people."

If students want to do something a little different than marching in front of 70,000 screaming Hawkeye fans or playing in a packed arena, the UI School of Music has plenty of other bands in which students can participate.

The symphony band is composed of the UI's top players and performs a full schedule of concerts, including local and national tours.

The concert and university bands also perform a large variety of traditional music for concerts.

"We have a place for everybody," UI band director and music Professor Myron Welch said. "We don't turn anybody away from concert bands."

Anyone — regardless of their major — can participate in a number of different bands, he said.

"The big thing we emphasize is that too often people come and don't think they can contribute," Welch said. "Bands take a lot less time than what students are used to in high school."

For students into jazz, the UI jazz program has produced many successful jazz musicians. Many of these musicians form groups such as the Pat Williams Trio, who are regulars in the Iowa City area.

"There's been some real good people to come out of (the program)," said trio leader Pat Williams. "It's the nature of the school and the UI to get all these people together."

No matter what area of music students are interested in or what subject students have for a major, they are encouraged to participate in the UI bands, Welch said.

"Don't take no from your adviser," he said. "Talk to us."

DISPLAYS UNCOVER PAST

Exhibits weave cultural tales in UI museums

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

When most incoming freshmen hear the word "museum" they probably wince, remembering elementary school field trips and having to follow a tour guide in single file.

In college, you don't need a school bus and the buddy system in order to be exposed to culture. Help yourself to exhibits and history at a few of the UI's finest.

The UI Museum of Natural History

Lions and tigers and bears — oh my! — are what you'll find in Mammal Hall, but the rest of the museum, located in Macbride Hall, is also a taxidermist's dream as it's filled with platypuses and vultures.

No tour guide is necessary because with the push of a button, a prerecorded voice is piped in to describe the exhibits.

Iowa Hall, which was built 10 years ago, takes tourists back to a time before buildings separated cornfields, said program coordinator David Brenzel.

"It's got a fine blend of natural habitat and is a naturalistic-appearing diorama representative of Iowa's past, supported by the fossils," Brenzel said.

Compared to other regional museums, Iowa Hall is rather new, he said. It's also a mark of excellence for the entire museum.

"Iowa Hall is 10 years old, and consistently what I keep hearing from people is point for point, inch for inch, square foot for square foot, it's one of the best museums in the world," Brenzel said.

Both guided tours and self-guided push-button tours are available 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 12:30-4:30 p.m. Sunday.

The UI Museum of Art

Jackson Pollock, Henri Matisse, Max Beckman and Pablo Picasso are just a few of the big-name artists featured at the Museum.

Jo-Ann Conklin, curator of graphic arts, said the museum's permanent collection is surprisingly rich.

"We really stress how good the permanent collection is," she said. "We have some outstanding works like the Pollock mural, which is just amazing to have here."

Throughout the year, exhibits can range from African masks and sculpture to Fauvism, Cubism and any number of other "isms."

The museum is also known for its monthly "Music in the Museum" series and traveling exhibits. In the past, even tattoo art has been featured.

In 1995-96, the museum will feature a number of traveling series, which include:

- Robert Rahway Zakanitch's "Big Bungalow Suite" — which Conklin describes as an enormous mural work — will run Aug. 15 through Oct. 22.
- African-American artist Carrie Mae Weems' exhibition "Sea Islands Series" will run Sept. 9 through Oct. 29.

- Prints of contemporary artist Stuart Davis will be on display in September and October.

- Alan Sonfist's work will be shown Nov. 4 through Dec. 31.

- Rudolf Koppitz's exhibition of Viennese pictorialist photography will run from March through May 1996.

"There is a lot of diversity in our exhibitions," Conklin said. "We try to always keep a good mixture of things."

The Old Capitol

Don't feel too bad about not getting accepted to the University of Notre Dame — the UI has a gold-plated dome of its own.

And under the dome lies oodles of history.

The Old Capitol was used as the third territorial capital of Iowa in 1842. It was deeded to the UI when the state government moved to Des Moines in 1857 and the Old Capitol became the first permanent UI building.

From 1857 to 1863, the Old Capitol housed the entire UI, said Stacey Nelson, UI junior and tour guide. Under the Old Capitol's roof were not only classrooms and offices, but also a chapel and gymnasium. Imagine listening to a lecture on American politics and then walking three steps to get to your aerobic exercise class. It would beat walking across the Burlington Street bridge in the middle of January.

"One of the things people seem to enjoy is the reverse spiral staircase, which is self-supporting," Nelson said.

Tourists learn these facts and more as a guide leads them through the old Senate chambers and the UI president's office from the 1920s, she added.

Tours are given 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon on football game Saturdays and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday.

PHILANTHROPIC EVENTS ADD TO EXPERIENCE

Greek community supplies more than a social life

Paul Michas
The Daily Iowan

Many students coming to the UI feel that the college experience should not only result in a degree, but should enable one to gain valuable leadership and time management skills as well.

Joining a greek organization, better known as a fraternity or sorority, can be one way to gain such knowledge and experience which students can carry with them into the real world.

"The greek system has provided me with a lot of opportunities that I probably wouldn't have had if I hadn't joined my house," said Kristen Carlstedt, president of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. "I gained valuable leadership skills and have had the opportunity to get involved with community service."

The most common way students show interest in the greek system is by going through formal rush, held a week before classes begin in August.

Students are introduced to each chapter in order to get a good perspective on which house may be best for them. The final decision is a mutual one between the prospective chapter and member so that everyone can be confident about the decision. This selection will ultimately affect the next four years of a student's life.

Once a student picks — or pledges — a chapter, the greek experience is what one makes out of it, said Bob Kendall, president of the UI Interfraternity Council.

"The general stereotype of an animal house isn't the only thing that exists," he said. "Besides the partying there is an emphasis on scholarship and community service as well."

The Interfraternity Council is a body of students elected to various positions from different chapters on campus to oversee the greek system and make sure it is operating smoothly.

The council attempts to integrate the entire system as much as possible while allowing the various chapters on campus to retain their own identity, said Kendall.

In addition to supplying students with a social atmosphere and a support group, greek organizations provide an opportunity for students to get involved in philanthropic events and other forms of community service, he said.

One example is the annual Greek Week Blood Drive sponsored by the UI greek community. The blood drive is the largest in the state of Iowa and is a good example of how greeks reach out to the community around them.

"(The greek community is) not just a bunch of meat heads drinking beer 24 hours a day," Kendall said.

Students are encouraged to go through rush to find out what the greek system is all about, but this doesn't mean they are obligated to join, Carlstedt said.

"Here at the UI, about 20 percent of undergraduates are greek. It's a personal decision," she said. "There's so much opportunity in the greek system. But if it's something that's not for you, it's cool on this campus."

The council encourages interested UI students to give formal rush a try and make their own decision, Kendall said.

"By going through rush, you're giving a house a good honest look," he said. "I believe you will benefit by giving to your house and your house will benefit you in return."

INFORMAL RUSH RECRUITS MEMBERS

UI minority chapters foster cultural diversity

Paul Michas
The Daily Iowan

Minority students who come to the UI find that joining a greek organization is one of several opportunities available to provide support and friendship to those who share similar backgrounds.

Although minority chapters are an integrated part of the greek system at the UI, some minority students find that they join a house for a support group more often than their white counterparts.

"It's offered a lot of outlets to improve my leadership and community service," said Nellie Nevarez, president of Sigma Lambda Gamma sorority. "It's a lot more like a support group."

Minority chapters are not involved in formal rush with the traditional chapters in August. Instead, they depend largely on informal rush to recruit members.

Informal rush involves an individual member of a house introducing friends, acquaintances or other interested people to the chapter.

"Most minority houses don't have a (live-in structure) at all," said Eugene Malone, president of the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity. "We are forced to rush out of the Union sometimes."

Owning a structure, which is a mainstay for traditional houses, is not part of the experience for minority chapters. These students are more attracted to the support and leadership aspects, he said.

"(The fraternity) offers me brotherhood, scholarship and service," Malone said. "I looked at other organizations and found that Phi Beta Sigma offered more."

Minority chapters are integrated into the rest of the greek system as much as possible, and the door is open to all aspects of greek life in which they wish to be involved in, said Bob Kendall, president of the UI Interfraternity Council.

"We've done a lot with (minority relations) compared to other schools. All meetings are joint, and there's more than one president," said Kendall. "There is still room for improvement, though."

Three chapter presidents head the Interfraternity Council, the governing board for UI fraternities; the Panhellenic Association Council, the governing board for UI sororities; and the National Panhellenic Council, or the governing board for UI minority chapters. The three councils work together to ensure the UI's greek system is running as smoothly as possible and that it provides more than just a party atmosphere for all members.

PHONES AND FRIENDS MAKE CAMPUS SEEM LESS INTIMIDATING

UI finds ways to keep its students safe

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

As incoming students familiarize themselves with the UI and Iowa City community, many may have concerns about safety in their new environment.

SAFEWALK, a student-run nighttime volunteer escort program, and the UI Department of Public Safety's blue cap phone

"If students are worried and don't know their way around or have a feel for how to take the quickest and most well-lighted route to get from place to place, SAFEWALK can help put their minds at ease about what's out there."

Patti Ferrell, UI junior and a SAFEWALK program coordinator service are two parts of a multifaceted campus effort to increase safety awareness on campus and provide an additional measure of security for men and women as they travel the UI campus at night.

Students living in UI residence halls can use SAFEWALK as a safe alternative to walking around campus alone late at night.

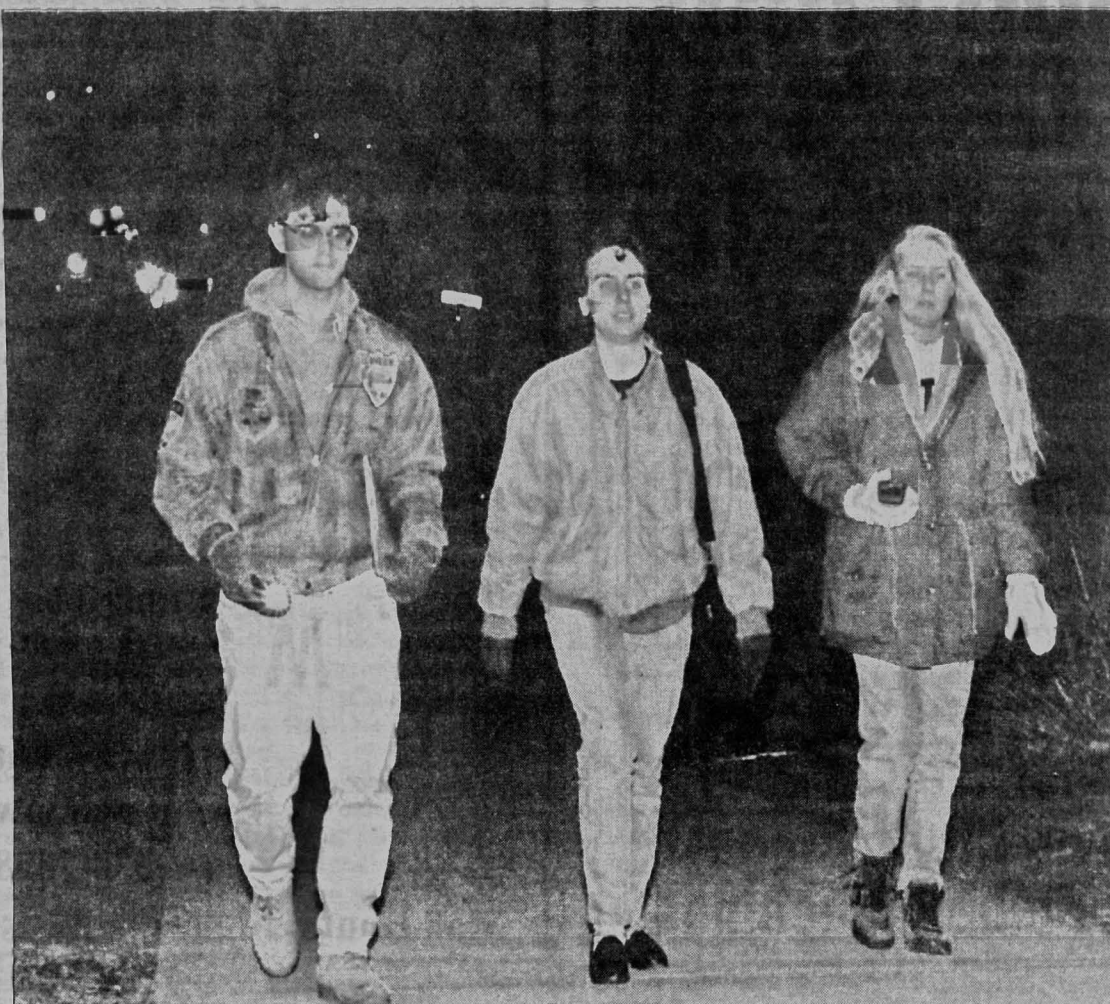

Trained SAFEWALK volunteers walk students to UI Hospitals and Clinics, fraternity and sorority houses, parking lots, athletic complexes and to downtown Iowa City businesses from 7 p.m. to midnight Sunday through Wednesday and 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. Thursday through Saturday. The program is housed in a central place on campus — the Women's Resource and Action Center, 130 N. Madison St.

SAFEWALK can provide peace of mind for many students, UI junior Patti Ferrell, one of the program's coordinators, said.

"If students are worried and don't know their way around or have a feel for how to take the quickest and most well-lighted route to get from place to place, SAFEWALK can help put their minds at ease about what's out there," she said.

Wearing red jackets and carrying flashlights and walkie-talkies, two volunteers — one male and one female — accompany students to their destinations. Escorts maintain constant audio contact with an operator stationed at headquarters, relaying their positions and arrival times at various checkpoints during the walk.

"Personally, I think it's scary

T. Scott Krena/The Daily Iowan

to walk places that are poorly lit or where there aren't a lot of people around," said Amy Zeitz, a UI senior who worked as a SAFEWALK volunteer last spring. "People living in Iowa City have this sense that it is safer than it really is. A program such as SAFEWALK has the potential to raise people's awareness of safety consciousness."

Public Safety does not directly monitor the escorts' activities. However, if the escorts encounter problems, they transmit a code through their walkie-talkies to the operator on duty at WRAC. The operator then contacts Public Safety.

Students can arrange for escorts to pick them up from classes, jobs or anywhere within the destination parameters by calling the office.

Those who use the service are told beforehand who their escorts will be, and a password is exchanged so students can identify their guides. If students have a conflict with an escort, the operator on duty will contact the SAFEWALK committee member on call to arrange for a different volunteer.

Approximately 55 volunteers work as escorts and phone operators. For those who wish to become involved with the program, applications are available at all residence hall front desks. The UI Student Government Safety and Anti-Violence Education Commission funds SAFEWALK.

In addition to SAFEWALK services, the blue cap phone system also can offer a sense of safety on campus.

Since November 1992, fifteen blue cap phones have been installed in dark and isolated areas around campus to provide pedestrians with a 24-hour direct line of communication with Public Safety should they need assistance during emergencies.

The blue cap emergency alarm is activated when a person pushes the phone's button. A person can then talk directly with a Public Safety officer and describe the situation at hand.

Even if the person is unable to speak, an officer can still place the caller's location through the computer system.

An officer is then dispatched to investigate the emergency and determine specific needs. Public Safety responds to all calls. The time it takes for an officer to respond depends on the distance between the officer and the blue cap phone's location.

The phones were effective means in alerting campus security of someone falling into the river and an automobile accident. Other calls included people in need of medical assistance, gasoline and directions to UI buildings.

MINORS CONSUME

Residents defy alcohol policy

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

While underage drinking is illegal in UI residence halls, some students have found a way around the rules.

David Coleman, assistant director of residence life for the UI Department of Residence Services, said drinking in the residence halls is a major concern because so many incoming UI students celebrate their newfound freedom by boozing it up.

"It is a terrible image that is painted of what college is all about, but it is true," said Coleman. "You can tell how much drinking goes on here by the number of bars in the community."

Coleman said the UI residence hall drinking policy states that students 21 and older — as well as their roommates, suitmates and guests who are 21 and older — are allowed to drink in their rooms. For students under 21, possession and consumption of alcohol is prohibited.

If a student is caught violating the rules, the alcohol is disposed of and the student must meet with the hall coordinator. The amount of alcohol and the number of people involved are the main factors in determining punishment, Coleman said.

"Discipline ranges from referral to Health Iowa alcohol education programs to probation," he said. "If a person violates probation, it is likely they would be kicked out of the residence halls."

UI sophomore Mark Blume was written up and put on probation during the fall 1994 semester when he lived in Mayflower Residence Hall. He said the incident did not curb his drinking.

Blume said he and his friends drank twice a week in their rooms for more than a semester without being caught. They successfully sneaked a keg up the side stairs and transported innumerable cases of beer.

"If you don't draw attention to yourself, you don't get caught," said Blume. "If you don't have large quantities or lots of people and keep your door shut, you can get away with it."

He said music and incense are giveaways.

"Literally, 12 people without music will get by while five with music will get busted," said Blume.

of Naperville, Ill., and Johnson of Bettendorf were sworn into office April 1 as president and vice president, respectively.

The legislative branch of UISG is made up of senators and Professional Student Senate.

The Undergraduate Collegiate Senate's legislators represent student academic concerns. There are 30 scholastic units: four from the College of Business Administration, two from the College of Nursing, two from the College of Education, two from the College of Pharmacy, four from the College of Engineering and 16 from the College of Liberal Arts (four from the natural sciences, four from the humanities, four from the fine arts and four from the social sciences).

The Undergraduate Activities Senate's legislators represent student housing concerns. It also includes special contingencies to represent minority groups.

There are 26 residence units to be filled by students: 14 from off-campus housing, six from the residence halls, five from at-large housing and one from family housing. Each student is selected through petition and election.

Representatives from independent groups select eight additional students for the Undergraduate Activities Senate: one Asian, one disabled, one international, one Chicano-American, one American Indian, one from a black student union, one from the Interfraternity Council and one from the Panhellenic Association Council.

The Graduate and Professional Senate's legislators represent the academic and nonacademic concerns of post-graduates. The senator seats are filled from the set contingents.

The judiciary board is comprised of students from the Student Activities Board, the Student Judicial Court, the Student Elections Board and the Student Traffic Court. Members are selected by recommendation and interview.

THEY CURE WHAT AILS YOU

Student Health Service focuses on awareness

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

There's no place like home — especially when you're sick — but when students get sick at the UI, they have their own doctor's office.

The Student Health Service, located in the Steindler Build-

"It's a much more pro-active program. We're not waiting to see them (students) when they're sick. We provide information and knowledge that will perhaps steer them away from problems they may get into."

ing on the west side of the Iowa River, offers confidential health services covered by a $42 health fee charged to each student's U-bill.

"We provide general care (students) receive at home," said Dr. Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Service.

Khowassah said women's health, mental health, allergy shots, physicals and immunizations are some of the many services offered. With the laboratory facilities at the center, lab tests and X-rays can be done, although there is an extra fee charged for those.

"We are the health service for the students," Khowassah said. "We have a good clinic — not only staffwise, but the kind of care we provide we feel is excellent."

Student Health Service — which has 10 physicians, including a psychiatrist — is separate from all other medical units, including UI Hospitals and Clinics. It is accredited by the Joint Commission Accreditation of Health Care Organizations, the group that credits clinics and hospitals across the country.

Another service Student Health Service offers is the Health Iowa program, an educational branch of the center, Khowassah said.

Pat Ketcham, director of Health Iowa, said education on alcohol and substance use and abuse, fitness, nutrition, stress and sexual health is provided.

"It's a much more pro-active program," Ketcham said. "We're not waiting to see them when they're sick. We provide information and knowledge that will perhaps steer them away from problems they may get into."

Health Iowa, which is located on the second floor of Student Health Service, offers seminars, a support group and after-care services for students with substance abuse problems, Ketcham said.

Fitness assessments and individual consultations can also be arranged through Health Iowa. Students can address questions about body fat, strength and flexibility.

Sex and drug education also is promoted through a theater group that tours the UI residence halls. Each year, they present a show called "Sex, Drugs and Remote Control."

Ketcham said students have many misconceptions about alcohol, drugs and sex. She said they often come to college thinking everyone goes out, drinks and has sex.

In a 1993-94 survey of UI residence hall residents, students thought 80 percent of the student body had been arrested in the last six months on charges including operating while intoxicated, public intoxication, possession of alcohol under the legal age and vandalism. The actual number was 4.6 percent.

Students also thought 89 percent of the student body had missed class or work because of a hangover. The number was actually only 27 percent.

"There's a huge gap in what is actually occurring and what the perception is," Ketcham said.

Student Health Service is well-utilized, Khowassah said. In the 1993-94 school year, there were 39,000 visits. Health Iowa reached out to 16,000 students that year.

Student Health Service is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. Khowassah said evening hours may be added.

When classes are not in session, the center is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1-4:30 p.m.

SELECTION INCLUDES ETHNIC CUISINE

I.C. restaurants tantalize taste buds

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

One of the best things about college life is the food served in the UI residence hall dining rooms — or maybe not. If tater tot casserole doesn't make your mouth water, there are plenty of dining alternatives in Iowa City.

Students may choose from a wide variety of cuisines and an equally large price range — from pocket change to "only when my parents are in town."

Since the average UI student is on a tight budget, a quick tour of the less-expensive eateries may be in order. Many Iowa City establishments offer lunch specials that make it possible to eat for $2 to $5.

Cheap eats

North Linn Street offers some of the least-expensive grub in town. Hamburg Inn No. 2 Inc., an Iowa City classic, shares the block with Pearson's Drug Store and Chill and Grill.

The Hamburg Inn, 214 N. Linn St., offers homemade soups, fresh burgers and home-cooked breakfast items all day long. Daily specials often include hot beef sandwiches and fried chicken dinners.

Chill and Grill, 206 N. Linn St., offers daily lunch specials — ranging from spaghetti to tacos — for under $2.

The lure of the lunch counter is what makes Pearson's Drug Store, corner of Linn and Market streets, so unique. Its specialties are sandwiches ranging from peanut butter and jelly for 65 cents to chicken or egg salad for around $1.30.

In addition, a Campbell's soup vending machine serves up something good and hot. To cool off, a Pearson's malt is just the thing.

If Linn Street is out of the way, Joe's Place, 115 Iowa Ave., is a closer-to-campus alternative for the budget gourmet. Its lunch specials include three tacos for $1.50 and a sloppy joe and chips for $1.25. Joe's also serves salads and sandwiches as well as homemade soups.

Tasty bites

For those who have a bit more money to spend, downtown Iowa City offers good food and atmosphere at fairly reasonable rates.

Jim Mondanaro has a big share in the Iowa City dining scene. Mondanaro owns Mondo's Sports Cafe, 212 S. Clinton St.; Micky's, 11 S. Dubuque St.; and Givannis, 109 E. College St.

Mondo's is the sports bar where burgers, chicken wings and dinner salads are the fare,

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Pearson's Drug Store, corner of Linn and Market streets, is the home of an old-fashioned lunch counter. Along with soups and with a plethora of TV sets showing — what else? — sports. Expect to pay about $10 for a meal.

Givanni's serves up Italian fare. The decor is new wave, with bare brick and neon lighting. Waiters and waitresses clad in black bring marinara; alfredo; and my favorite, Capellini Neapolitan, to the table. Italian drinks and desserts complete the experience for $15 and up.

When people walk through the door of Micky's, they are transported from Iowa City to Ireland in a flash. With essentially the same menu as Mondo's, the restaurant is set up around a fantastic oak bar. The food is good, but the TV sets detract from the atmosphere. Expect to pay $10 per person.

Ethnic fare

For an Asian experience at mealtime, Masala Indian Vegetarian Cuisine, 9 S. Dubuque St.; Yen Ching Cafe, 130 S. Dubuque St.; Sahara, 320 E. Burlington St.; and India Cafe, 227 E. Washington St., provide their services.

Masala and India Cafe offer Indian cuisine, Sahara serves Middle-Eastern fare and Yen Ching dishes out Chinese meals.

Masala serves only vegetarian cuisine, while Sahara and India Cafe offer food for omnivores. Shwarmas, gyros and other dishes take the place of burgers and fries for about the same price: $5 and up.

Yen Ching is a good choice for inexpensive Chinese eating. For $4, one gets an appetizer, a bowl of soup and an entrée. The food is good, and for the price, it shouldn't be missed.

Super subs

Since Iowa City gets hot in the summer, a nice cool sub can really hit the spot. Since everyone knows no two sub shops make the same kind of sandwich, Iowa City offers four downtown locations for subs.

Big Mike's Super Subs, 20 S. Clinton St., may look familiar to those who have eaten at Jimmy John's — Chicago's take on Big Mike's — because Jimmy and Mike are brothers. The subs are long, skinny and served with a lot of lettuce, but they taste good.

Subway of Iowa City, 130 S. Dubuque St., and Blimpie, on the Pedestrian Mall, are national chains, and the sandwiches there are the kind one could get anywhere else in the country. The benefit is that everyone knows what to expect for the money.

sandwiches, Pearson's serves shakes, malts, "real" cherry Cokes and other old-fashioned flavored soft drinks.

For the best value and the best sandwich in town, Sub Shop, 19 S. Dubuque St., offers enormous sandwiches piled high with meat, cheese and vegetables for $3.50. Just half of these behemoths is more than a meal.

South of the border

Speaking of enormous food, Pancho's Authentic Mexican Food, 32 S. Clinton St., is known for its giant burrito. The "home of the 2-pound burrito" was voted as having the best food overall at 1995's "Taste of Iowa City." An Iowa City legend says someone once weighed a Pancho's burrito and it topped 4 pounds.

Although a recent Mexican visitor contested Pancho's authenticity, the restaurant draws throngs of hungry students — drunk as well as sober — looking for tacos and quesadillas in addition to the burrito as big as your head. Pancho's serves both vegetarian treats and meat-based meals.

Pizza possibilities

OK, OK, here's the pizza section. Gumby's Pizza, 702 S. Gilbert St., is the least expensive. The Pokey sticks rule, and Gumby's takes credit cards.

Pizza Pit, 214 E. Market St., has the spiciest sauce and the thinnest crust. Paul Revere's Pizza, 325 E. Market St., delivers both spaghetti and pizza.

Sit-down pizza restaurants offer the best fare, though. The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., serves both New York-style and Chicago-style pizza and is a perennial contender for the best pizza in town.

The fare at Pagliai's Pizza, 302 E. Bloomington St., costs a lot but is worth the money. Crisp crust, fresh toppings and a long tradition make the pizza tasty, but don't ask the waitresses for Parmesan.

Pizza and beer, a time-honored tradition, come together beautifully at the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St. More than 115 imported brands of beer and nearly that many toppings make the Sanctuary a great bet. Live jazz and folk music certainly help the ambiance, too.

Although this list is long, it certainly doesn't include all the places where students can eat in Iowa City. When you're feeling bored or blue, cheer yourself up with a treat at one of the many fun places to eat. And when the Ramen noodles get boring, remember there are alternatives.

DOWNTOWN FEATURES SEVERAL PARTYING OPTIONS

Bars serve more than ale to discriminating revelers

From dance bars that cater to underage students to laid-back local bars and places just to have beer, Iowa City has no shortage of pubs.

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

College is supposed to be about broadening one's horizons, expanding one's mind and finding oneself. However, many UI students end up finding themselves knee-deep in sweaty, drunken peers in area bars.

Luckily for some, not every bar in Iowa City is always packed, and not all bar patrons are sweaty. Iowa City offers a wide variety of drinking establishments for the adventurous partier.

One of the benefits of going to Iowa City bars is that there are many that admit 19-year-olds. Many of these pubs are the knee-deep, sweaty kind with typical college-bar scenes: students bumping and grinding on the dance floor to overplayed Top 40 tunes while guzzling gallons of beer and watching juvenile fights.

These bars include The Field House bar, 111 E. College St.; The Union Bar & Grill, 121 E. College St.; and One-Eyed Jake's, 18-20 S. Clinton St. These are the big three bars for the younger crowd.

At The Field House bar, the big attraction is free-beer night, where a $5 cover is charged at the door and patrons may drink as much as they want until 2 a.m.

If the drinking bores you, there is always dancing. The Field House plays a lot of Top 40 but on a good night, "My Sharona" may come through the speakers.

For dancing, the Union is the place. Its big draw is '80s Night. Here, students of all ages gather to pay homage to the pop gods and goddesses of yesteryear. In addition, a frequent drink special is 2-for-1 Sex on the Beach, a pink beverage and a "fru-fru" drink for those who haven't yet learned the joys of beer.

RT Grunts, 826 S. Clinton St., and One-Eyed Jake's are two more hide outs for dancing queens and kings alike and princes and princesses as well, since they allow underage revelers into their confines. Jake's also sponsors a Wednesday night Comedy Night, which is one of the best in town.

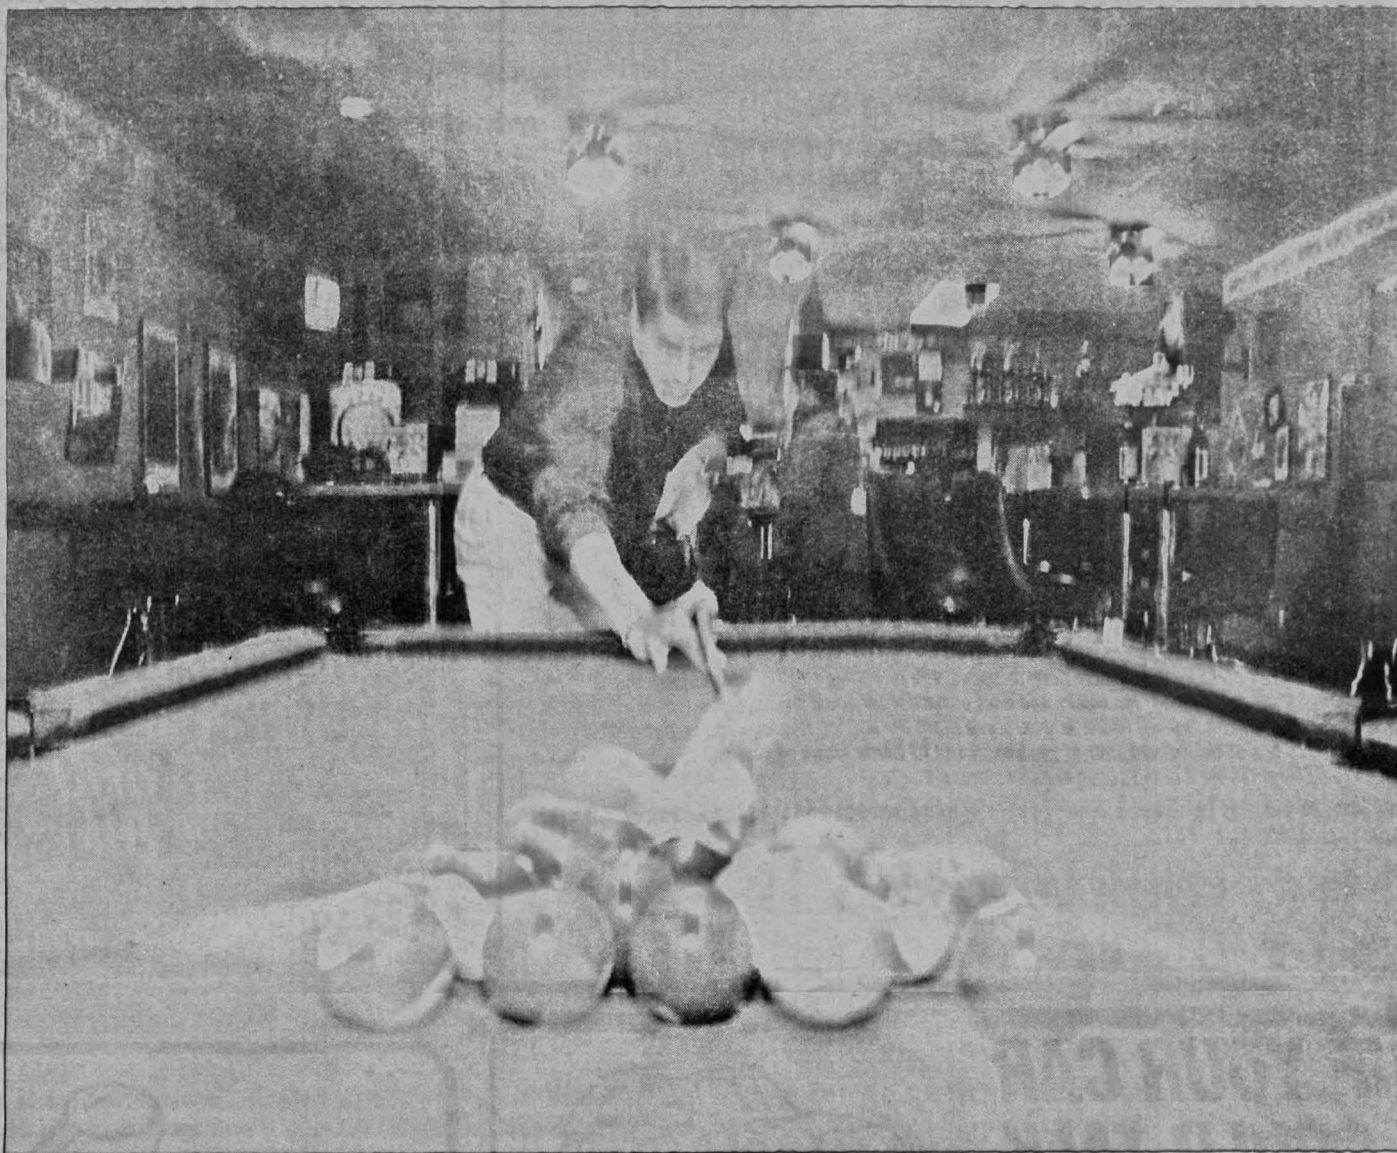

For those who don't want to dance but like to party and haven't been lucky enough to acquire a fake ID — the Sports Column, 8 S. Dubuque St., will take the underage under its beer-soaked wing. The Column is big and serves the best late-night slice of pizza in town for $1.

A more relaxing atmosphere for young people who are "bad to the bone" is the Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave. It boasts cheap burger baskets and the most pool tables in town, along with live music in the upstairs part of the bar.

Live music is a big part of nightlife in Iowa City. Being a college town, many big-name bands come through. In 1994-95, Live, Weezer, James Taylor, Nine Inch Nails, The Poster Children and The Jayhawks played various venues in Iowa City.

Local bands that draw good crowds include High and Lonesome, Dagobah, Blues Instigators and Sheltering Sky.

Photos by Joe Murphy and M. Scott Mahaskey/The Daily Iowan

City is Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., which draws a variety of music from folk to alternative.

If drinking with underage masses doesn't appeal to the older student, have no fear. Iowa City has a number of bars for students 21 and up.

Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., a new bar which opened in May, hopes to provide live music in a good atmosphere, picking up slack from the now-defunct Iowa City Yacht Club and The Metro.

Vito's, 118 E. College St., takes patrons back to the age of bell bottoms and butterfly collars with its '70s night, a tribute to the dinosaurs of disco. Don't forget your leisure suit or your 21 ID.

The Deadwood tavern, 4 S. Dubuque St., is known for its friendly atmosphere and pinball. Jim Bell — who owns the bar with his wife, Holly, welcomes all ages until 7 p.m. to study, drink coffee or whatever. But after 7 p.m., underage partiers aren't allowed.

Students interested in studying journalism would be wise to acquaint themselves with Joe's Place, 115 Iowa Ave. But not without ID, because besides having the most pinball machines in town, Joe's also cards harder than anyone else.

If the best pint of Guinness in town is desired, try The Dublin Underground, 5 S. Dubuque St. It is a family-run pub styled like a true Irish drink hall. The unique decor and books to read add to this joint.

For the discriminating drinker, the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., is the place. With more than 115 foreign beers in stock, one can drink the world over without leaving town.

A block down the street stands Fitzpatrick's, 525 S. Gilbert St., Iowa City's best known brew pub. Home-brewed wheat beer, stout and lager are popular with professional students, while domestic pints fare well with undergrads, says owner Gary Fitzpatrick.

There is nothing like a cold beer after a long walk. A trek to The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St., offers both to students. The cold beer is served in 33-ounce mugs, which are $2.75. A great complement to the mug is a dozen buffalo wings, The Vine's specialty.

Another specialty in Iowa City beer halls are old bars loaded with tradition. George's, 312 E. Market St.; Dave's Fox Head Tavern, 402 E. Market St.; and The Airliner bar, 22 S. Clinton St., are all old staples and completely different from one another.

The Airliner is an Iowa City institution, having been here since 1944. Traditionally a favorite of the greek community and children of alumni, its best-known party is pint night. A new addition is "flip night," where carousers flip a quarter to determine the price of their drinks.

George's serves up big pitchers and the best cheeseburgers, and also has one of the best jukeboxes in town. Other than that, the Hamms beer signs with flowing water add spice to the 66-year-old bar.

If college is all about studying hard, learning a lot and graduating in four years, the UI offers many opportunities to better oneself. But if a social life is important to personal development, Iowa City gives the opportunity to better oneself on a new level.

and Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Many UI students may wonder the campus and wonder about their future and what it holds. Will they leave their mark and become another accomplished alumnus? The list of Pulitzer Prize winners, famous actors and corporate giants the UI has produced grows longer each year.

Journalism

• Margaret Walker Alexander, author, director and professor. Alexander is the former director of the Institute for Study of History, Life and Culture of Black People, professor at Jackson State University and author of "Jubilee" (preceded "Roots"). Alexander received her doctorate from the UI in 1965.

Brokaw

• Mildred Wirt Benson, author and journalist. Benson wrote the first Nancy Drew book, "The Secret of the Old Clock," and other Nancy Drew novels under the pen name of Carolyn Keene.

• Tom Brokaw, NBC Nightly News anchorman.

Despite a poor academic record, which led him to quit school after his freshman year at the UI in 1958-59, Brokaw is not forgotten as a UI alumnus.

• Marquiw Child, author and journalist. Child won a Pulitzer Prize while working at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She wrote many books, including, "The Farmer Takes a Hand."

Gallup

• Paul Conrad, editorial cartoonist. Conrad is a former editorial cartoonist for the Denver Post. He is now a cartoonist for the Los Angeles Times.

• George Gallup, creator of the Gallup opinion poll. Gallup founded the Quill and Scroll Society (international fraternity for high school journalists). He developed opinion survey techniques while at the UI that led to the establishment of the American Institute of Public Opinion (the Gallup Poll) in 1935.

• Jean Brown Kinney, author and vice president. Kinney was the former vice president of Benton & Bowles advertising firm and was inducted into Printers' Ink, the magazine Hall of Fame.

Fine Arts

• Robert Bly, poet, writer and founder of the men's movement

• MacDonald Carey, actor. Carey was an actor on the soap opera "Days of Our Lives" from its beginning more than 25 years ago until his death last year. He also held roles in "Wake Island" and many other films.

• Darrah Cloud, reknowned playwright

• Michele Crider, opera singer

• Rita Dove, poet

• Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre, a comedy troupe which has appeared on TV, radio and film. Duck's Breath was formed in 1974 by five UI theater arts and playwriting program students, including Jim Turner, Merle Kessler, Dan Coffey, Bill Allard and Leon Martell.

• Paul Engle, author and educator. Engle was the founder of the UI Writers' Workshop and the UI International Writers' Workshop.

• Simon Estes, bass-baritone opera star. Estes ended seven years of study in pre-med, theology and social psychology at the UI when he was accepted to the Juilliard School of Music in 1963.

• Norman Felton, producer. Felton was nominated for Academy Awards for "Dr. Kildare," "The Eleventh Hour," "The Lieutenant" and "The Man From U.N.C.L.E."

• Mary Beth Hurt, actress, starred in The Big Chill.

Jarreau

• John Irving, author of the best-selling books "The World According to Garp" and "Hotel New Hampshire."

• Al Jarreau, jazz vocalist. A five-time Grammy award winner, Jarreau received a master's degree in psychology in 1964.

• Barry Kemp, TV producer and creator of "Newhart" and "Coach." Kemp received a bachelor's degree in communications and theater arts in 1971.

• W.P. Kinsella, author of "Shoeless Joe," the basis for the 1989 Oscar-nominated film "Field of Dreams." Kinsella was a Writers' Workshop student from 1976 to 78.

• Shirley Rich Krohn, casting director. Crone directed casting for several Broadway shows and Hollywood films, including "Kramer vs. Kramer."

• Richard Maibaum, script writer. Maibaum received both his bachelor's and master's degrees at the UI and wrote scripts for all of the James Bond films from "Dr. No" through "The Spy Who Loved Me."

• James McPherson, fiction writer and Pulitzer Prize winner for his novel "Elbow Room." McPherson received his master's degree in fine arts in 1971.

• Nicholas Meyer, film director: "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Kahn," "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country" and "Time After Time."

• Flannery O'Connor, author. O'Connor wrote "Wise Blood" and numerous short stories.

• Hope Ryden, filmmaker and author. Ryden made documentary films on animal life in Africa. She also wrote a book titled "America's Last Wild Horses."

• Jane Smiley, novelist

• W.D. Snodgrass, winner of the Pulitzer Prize for his 1960 novel "Heart's Needle."

• Wallace Stenger, author. A 1972 Pulitzer Prize winner, Stenger was acclaimed for his writings about the American West.

• Mark Strand, former U.S. poet laureate, received his master's degree in 1962.

• Margaret Walker, poet and novelist, who received her master's in 1940 and her doctorate in 1965. Walker was inducted into the Iowa Black Alumni Hall of Fame in 1985, but was highly critical of the UI for what she considered to be a racist snubbing of her and her achievements. Walker said the UI never asked her to speak or teach.

• Robert James Waller, author. Waller penned the popular success "The Bridges of Madison County" and attended the UI for a year on a basketball scholarship.

Wilder

• Gene Wilder, actor, producer, director and screenwriter. Wilder starred in "Young Frankenstein," "Blazing Saddles," "Woman in Red," "Hanky Panky," "Stir Crazy" "Willie Wonka and the Chocolate Factory."

I.C. forecast calls for unpredictable weather

Jami Peterson
The Daily Iowan

An old joke says if you don't like the weather in Iowa, just wait a minute and it will change.

Iowa City's weather is no exception. Springtime temperatures can be 60 degrees one day and 30 the next. The rest of the seasons aren't any easier to forecast.

"It's unpredictable at best," said UI senior Paul Godwin. "You're either freezing your ass off or sweating your ass off."

The rapid changes in weather are nothing new to the area, said state climatologist Harry Hillaker.

"Iowa ... would certainly be known for having variable weather," said Hillaker. "Our weather is much more changeable than the coastal areas."

If there is anything predictable about Iowa City weather, it is the weather's unpredictability.

"There is a much greater variability in the course of the year," said Hillaker.

"It's always something different," said UI sophomore Jason Hunter.

The changing weather gives

Iowa City its infamous scorching summers and frigid winters.

"Most of the year it's pretty nice," Hunter said. "But there are those times of year when it's not nice."

Winters in Iowa City are mild by Iowa standards but can still get bitterly cold.

"The worst thing about the weather (in Iowa City) is the wind in the winter," said UI senior Kristie Ouverson.

Students returning to the UI in August will get a taste of Iowa's summers, if they haven't already. Although it is not the hottest month of the year, the average high in August is 85 degrees, said Hillaker.

"It can still get plenty hot," he said.

Some students enjoy the variable weather and the distinct seasons.

"I like the change of seasons," said Ouverson. "I couldn't imagine living someplace without seasons."

For some, the changing weather is a sometimes bitter reminder of the calendar.

"I never forget what time of year it is," said Godwin.

The unseasonably warm spring weather that Iowa City sometimes enjoys, with mercury often rising up to the mid 70s in early March, is also a plus.

"You get to wear shorts in March," said Godwin.

Despite the complaints about the weather, there are actually times when students wish for greater weather extremes.

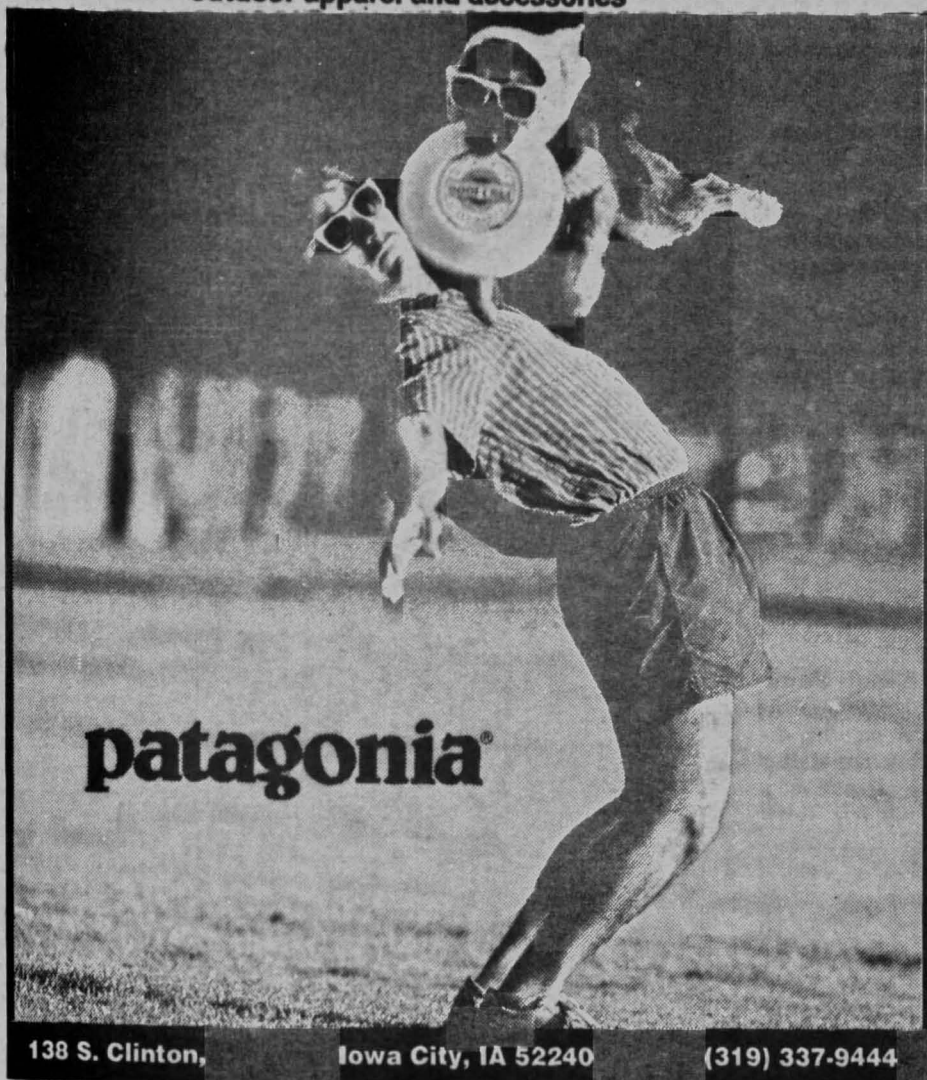

"It's never bad enough that they cancel classes," said Godwin.

Generally, though, students seem to like the weather in Iowa City.

"Overall, it's pretty nice," said Hunter.

Unique landmarks animate local atmosphere

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

A green Fiberglass dinosaur, an ominous grave marker and a peculiarly shaped fountain are three outlandish points of interest in the world of Iowa City oddities.

One site receives a constant stream of midnight visits from several UI students and thrill-seekers. The decapitation of another landmark evoked public outcry, and Iowa City police still commemorate the retrieval of its big green noggin. The third landmark, situated in the middle of Iowa City's downtown Pedestrian Mall, has been nicknamed "Three Ladies Peeing."

The Sinclair Dinosaur

Three Sinclair Marketing stations grace the Iowa City/Coralville area. The businesses in Coralville and at 2153 ACT Circle and 731 S. Riverside Drive in Iowa City boast the big green Fiberglass dinosaurs that symbolize the Sinclair Oil Corporation.

The huge, AstroTurf-green brontosaurus made its debut in Pennsylvania as the company's trademark in 1930 or 1931, said Wendell White, director of the corporation's human resources department in Salt Lake City, Utah.

The 6-foot-tall, 10-foot-wide green dinosaur in front of the ACT Circle station is a popular local attraction, said station manager Brian Bazyn.

"People stop by a lot — it's pretty frequent," he said. "You always get tourists stopping by, taking pictures of their kids on it. The kids think they're riding Dino or something."

The mascot is bolted to a cement slab to deter would-be thieves. However, the dinosaur lost its head on March 24, 1993, when pranksters sawed it off. The corporation flew in a new head and experts from California to repair the mascot.

The original head was found in a muddy field after the new head had already been attached. Since then, the original head has become a trademark for the Iowa City Police Department, said Sgt. Craig Lihs.

"By the time the case was done, the station had already repaired the dinosaur," Lihs said. "One of the officers — on a whim — decided it would be fun to mount."

The head has made the rounds of all the offices in the station, Lihs said.

The Black Angel

In Oakland Cemetery, 1000 Brown St., stands one of Iowa City's most popular, eerie and "off-the-beaten path" landmarks: the statue known as the Black Angel.

Standing about eight feet tall, the angel's wings are outstretched, and her downturned face seems to look upon the grave of Rodina Feldevertova. The black stone monument was erected in 1918.

Local lore about the ebony angel's mystical power abounds.

One popular myth says anyone who kisses the angel at midnight will die instantly. Another claims anyone who looks in the angel's eyes will die an untimely death. Still another claims anyone who kisses the angel's lips will die within one hour.

Most legends agree a man who had committed a horrible crime purchased the angel as a marker for his wife's grave. Tales say the husband's shady past and possible infidelity caused the statue to have supernatural and deadly powers.

Local legend asserts the angel was brought from Italy and fell into the sea during transport, changing the exterior from shiny bronze to jet black. However, cemetery maintenance worker Bob Deatsch said the statue has a more humble, domestic origin.

"It was made in Chicago; it's not from across the seas like many stories say," Deatsch said. "It's printed right on the thing."

Touching the infamous angel made UI junior Roman Antolic believe in its "magical powers."

"I touched it and we felt cold winds come down the hill. One guy put his head underneath the wing — he got a little singe on his head and he burned some hair," Antolic said.

The Pedestrian Mall Fountain

During cold winter months, the fountain in the Pedestrian Mall is dry and looks like a piece of modern art. In the summer, however, it comes alive with children splashing in the water flowing around the structure commonly known to UI students as "Three Ladies Peeing."

The fountain evokes fond memories for UI junior Louise Bierig, who said she liked the fountain a lot better before she knew the slang terminology for it.

"One night, it was raining and lightening and thundering, and some of my friends and I danced in the fountain," she said.

The fountain's official name is The Governor Lucas Square Fountain, in honor of former Iowa Gov. Robert Lucas. Completed in 1979, and Recreation.

The confusion surrounding the fountain's name is common, said Terry Trueblood, director of the Iowa City Department of Parks — people saying, "What is the real name?" Most people refer to it as the Ped Mall fountain or just "the fountain," she said.

FIELD HOUSE MEETS RECREATIONAL NEEDS

Students bulk up at The Field House

Tracy Naden
The Daily Iowan

Aerobics, jogging, weightlifting and a variety of intramural activities are only a few of the recreational opportunities provided by The Field House to help students stay in shape and relieve stress.

Keeping people physically active is a top priority said Ray Beemer, director of The Field House.

"The opportunities available are wide-ranging," Beemer said. "It gives kids who used to be in sports a chance to carry on by joining some sort of sport."

The Field House, located next to Rienow and Slater residence halls, is open from 6:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. during the week and from 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. on weekends.

The recreational facilities provide a wide variety of rental equipment for students looking for challenges on the court.

Ten basketball / volleyball courts, 22 racquetball courts, and badminton and squash courts can be reserved at the Division of Recreational Services office in The Field House. Volleyball court reservation fees are $5; racquetball and squash court fees are $2. The basketball courts are free.

The Fitness Loft, located on the fifth floor of The Field House, is a high-quality fitness center with cardiovascular and weight-training equipment. The Fitness Loft boasts rowing machines, stationary bikes, treadmills, Stairmasters and 13 pieces of strength and conditioning equipment. Fees are $4 per workout or $50 for a semester pass.

Since many students have tight budgets, runners have free access to the indoor track and can check out volleyballs, basketballs and weight pins with a UI ID card.

The fee for The Field House's Olympic-size swimming pool is $1 per use. Semester and annual passes are also available.

Aerobic exercise programs are designed to meet the needs of people at all fitness levels. The one-hour aerobics classes are $3 for walk-ins, $25 for 10 workouts or $50 for 20 workouts. A 75-minute super workout, hi / lo step training, aero pump, cardio-funk, body sculpting and combination classes are offered to meet the needs of all students.

Noncredit university sports lessons offered throughout the year provide diversified recreational activities for a small registration fee. Clinic and private tennis lessons are available on various days, depending on the type of instruction. Classes meeting twice a week include gymnastics and a variety of martial arts classes, such as tae kwon do and aikido.

Students looking to perfect their strokes or just to stay fit can enroll in the Master Swimming Program, which is offered to those who can swim continuously for 20 minutes.

Fifteen different intramural sports — ranging in cost from about $1 to $40 — are offered during the fall semester. Students can participate in basketball, volleyball, flag football, tennis, canoe races and golf. Teams can sign up in room E216 of The Field House.

Spring intramural sports include wrestling, table tennis, darts, softball, floor hockey, Frisbee golf, volleyball and racquetball.

'ENTHRALLED WITH RADIO' AT YOUNG AGE

Stefanie O'Reilly
Special to The Daily Iowan

UI sophomore Justin Quagliata doesn't worry about falling asleep when he's working "Under the Covers," his morning show on KRUI.

Quagliata's disc jockey shift runs from 4-7 a.m. Fridays. For Quagliata, it's an adrenaline rush.

"People always ask me if I fall asleep," he said. "I stay up because I'm high off this. This is what I want to do for the rest of my life."

Quagliata, a native of Shamong, N.J., said he came to the UI in 1993 because of its journalism program and its radio station.

"I knew we had a radio station and I said, 'I want to be on it,'"

"I stay up because I'm high off this. This is what I want to do for the rest of my life."

Justin Quagliata, KRUI DJ with a 4-7 a.m. shift

Quagliata explained as he grabbed the microphone to plug a performance by House of Large Sizes at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

Quagliata said he became enthralled with radio the first time he visited his mom, Sarah Davies, at WNCN, a classical radio station in New York City where she was a program director.

"I was completely captivated," he said. "I just remember being in the booth and seeing the guy whose voice was being transmitted. All the flashing lights, all the buttons, all the people listening — I was in awe."

Surrounded by the control panel and the other electronic equipment at KRUI, including CDs and turntables, Quagliata said he still gets the same feeling when he broadcasts his own show.

"I would never be up at this hour for any other reason," he said.

Quagliata said there is also a feeling of power in being on the radio because he can basically play whatever he wants from the KRUI music library. However, DJs must keep a log of what songs are played and requested during a show.

"Radio is not random at all," Quagliata said.

He explained that every CD in the studio is coded with a colored sticker depending on what type of music it contains. The stickers correspond to a KRUI play log that dictates the order in which the CDs must be played.

For example, CDs with bright red stickers are played the most because they are topping alternative charts or are being played by other college radio stations, Quagliata said. Orange and green stickers denote rare, old or odd music the station uses to beef up its collection. Gold stickers indicate classic alternative music that laid the foundation for what Quagliata terms "modern alternative music."

"We have freedom here (at KRUI) that most stations don't because we don't have a play list per se. We just play colors we're supposed to," he said.

Even though Quagliata applied to work at KRUI last fall with the intention of getting his own show, he wound up writing and reading the news, which has been good experience for his journalism and English double major, he said. Quagliata said leading the news at 5 p.m. every Wednesday and having his own shift gave him the best of both worlds.

"People don't understand why I do it since I don't get paid, but I absolutely love it," he said.

UI sophomore Joe Skala, Quagliata's friend and roommate, said since it is Quagliata's dream to be on the radio, the early time slot hasn't interrupted his academic or personal life.

"Academically, (the show) doesn't seem to affect him that much," Skala said. "He still seems to have plenty of energy to go out Friday night."

Quagliata agreed.

"I think it relieves stress because when I'm (at KRUI), I feel this calm," he said. "It's an escape for me."

Amy Alpert, UI junior and KRUI news director, said Quagliata has improved since she hired him in the fall.

"I definitely feel I made a positive decision in hiring him," she said. "He's very ambitious. He still enjoys what he's doing, and that is what's most important."

Alpert said Quagliata was given a shift because he is responsible and sounds very professional on the air.

"This is the only aspect of my life that I prepare in," Quagliata said. "That's why I think this is the job for me."

VARIETY OF JOBS INCLUDED

Students tune in to hands-on experience at KRUI

Sara Teasdale
The Daily Iowan

Students interested in public broadcasting have the opportunity to be a disc jockey or a news or sports reporter for KRUI 89.7, "the sound alternative" of the FM dial.

"It's one of the best student broadcasting facilities in the nation, run completely by students," said John Barker, general manager of KRUI. "And it's a good source of music and entertainment in Iowa City that students can be part of."

The primary goal of KRUI is to teach students to use broadcasting equipment properly, Barker said.

"The major goal of KRUI, in general, is to afford the students with broadcast equipment so they can learn about the broadcast industry and the technical aspects of the equipment," he said. "We also provide the students in the Iowa City community with a broadcast alternative in music, news and sports, and they can enjoy themselves in the process."

KRUI plays alternative and modern rock 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Currently, there are 75 DJs, who work four-hour shifts. The weekend anchors have added theme shows to their routine, including "Toast to the Boogie," a funk show; "Midnight Mix," a dance show; "Swinger's Club," a disco show; and "Blues Explosion," a blues jam.

Megan Stumph, a UI junior majoring in communication studies, has worked for KRUI since she was a freshman. She was originally hired as a volunteer to work in the studio doing filing and typing. Now Stumph works as a DJ every Tuesday afternoon from 2-6 p.m. She is also the administrative director for KRUI.

"(KRUI) is my life," she said. "These are my friends, my family. I don't know what it would be like if I didn't have this station. It's fun — you meet a lot of people, and you get exposed to a lot of new music."

There are also 25 news reporters on staff who write and deliver news reports over the air five times a day, five days a week.

KRUI has become a professional student organization in the last two years, said Amy Alpert, KRUI news director and UI senior majoring in journalism and political science.

"The number of people on staff has increased," she said. "We do more of our own reporting; we're not just getting news over the wire anymore. We're a lot more serious now than we were before."

National and international stories released over The Associated Press wire are added to local stories written by UI students to produce a five-minute news broadcast.

Ten sports writers cover UI home games. They also travel with the Hawkeyes to selected games. Sports reporters obtain press passes that allow them to cover events free of charge, and they learn something in the meantime, Barker said.

There are currently nine student directors at KRUI. Students applying for the position of director must go through an interview process with the UI Student Government. Positions are available at the end of the spring semester.

Iowa City City Council

Local government encourages student involvement

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

As members of the Iowa City community, UI students are led by more than just the student government. The Iowa City City Council and the Johnson County Board of Supervisors both hold meetings in Iowa City — which are open to the public — and make decisions that affect UI students.

City Council regulations that impact students include control of the city's public safety organizations — including police and fire services — as well as housing rehabilitation. The council has also been concerned with the development of the downtown district, and that area's economic development has been one of the council's key issues.

"The lines of communication have been established and nurtured."

Susan Horowitz,
Iowa City Mayor

"This is a community / university city and we realize that," Mayor Susan Horowitz said. "Maintaining the health of downtown Iowa City helps the city and benefits the students."

The City Council also became involved in UI Student Government last November, when the two groups held a joint meeting during which UI students were able to ask the council questions about policies and past decisions. Horowitz said the meeting was a great way to open the avenues of communication between the council and UI students.

"The lines of communication have been established and nurtured," she said. "A lot of people came in asking questions and they already had prejudged answers. And they ended up being surprised, because there are rational reasons for the way things are done."

Other major issues with which the council has been concerned recently are the installation of new water and wastewater facilities and the addition of more affordable housing to the city, Horowitz said.

The council appreciates the students' points of view, Horowitz said, and would like them to attend meetings and get all sides of an issue before making a judgment. Council meetings are held in the Civic Center, 410 E. Washington St., at 7:30 p.m. on alternate Tuesdays, with work sessions at 6:30 p.m. on alternate Mondays. The meetings are also televised live on the public-access cable channel.

Councilors Ernie Lehman, Karen Kubby, Naomi Novick, Jim Throgmorton, Bruno Pigott, Larry Baker and Horowitz are the current members. The next council election will be held in November 1996.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors also makes some decisions which affect UI students, but is more involved in issues like secondary roads, the county budget, zoning matters and data processing renovations.

Don Sehr, vice chairman of the board, said the board controls taxes, which affect rent for students, and also runs social programs for the county.

The board consists of Chairwoman Sally Stutsman and

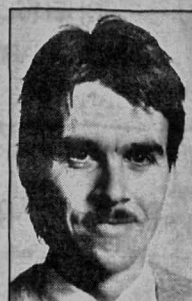

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Debbie Hassman, a UI third-year pharmacy major casted her vote in the UI Student Government elections last March. Only 3 percent of students voted in the election. Despite low turnout for university elections, community government officials urge students to participate in city and county government.

Chairmen Charles Duffy, work sessions on Tuesdays at 9 a.m. — at 913 S. Dubuque St. and Sehr. Meetings are held on Thursdays at 9 a.m. — with on the public access station.

UI offers support network

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Three local resources that deal with such issues as rape, domestic abuse and sexual discrimination are available for students seeking counseling, advocacy or information.

Rape Victim Advocacy Program

The Rape Victim Advocacy Program, 17 W. Prentiss St., was one of the first comprehensive rape crisis centers in the country, said Ashley Sovern, director of education at RVAP.

"We support, advocate and give information to victims of sexual abuse and their significant others," Sovern said. "And all services are free of charge."

The program provides one-on-one counseling, support groups and a resource library, she said. This year, RVAP also began providing free, 12-hour self-defense workshops.

The approximately 130 volunteers at RVAP provide services to victims of sexual harassment, incest and domestic abuse, as well as rape, Sovern said. RVAP also sponsors the group People Out Working to End Rape, which educates the Iowa City community by presenting workshops.

Domestic Violence Intervention Program

The Domestic Violence Intervention Program started as a 24-hour crisis hot line in 1976 and grew to include a shelter in 1978, Director Cris Kinkead said.

The program's purpose is to serve battered women and children and to act as an advocate in court, law enforcement agencies and hospitals. The organization also provides support groups, counseling services, outreach programs, referrals and shelter for abused and homeless women and children, Kinkead said.

She said the shelter houses about 60 people a month and has personal contact with 1,500 women a year.

Women's Resource and Action Center

The Women's Resource and Action Center, located across from the Union at 130 N. Madison St., started as a volunteer effort in 1971 and is now a part of student services, Director Monique DiCarlo said.

The center works toward the elimination of all forms of oppression, said DiCarlo.

"Our mission is to create a community that affirms all people and acts as a catalyst for social change and women's collective growth," she said.

WRAC provides counseling, information, referral services and advocacy on behalf of women at the UI and throughout the state, DiCarlo said.

Rape prevention tactics reduce risk

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Reports of rape to the Rape Victim Advocacy Program jumped from 29 during last July, August and September to 42 during October, November and December, Director of Education Ashley Sovern said.

She attributes this rise to new students coming to campus eager to make friends quickly, before really getting to know acquaintances.

Sovern suggests several risk reduction strategies, but stresses that whether they are followed or not, sexual abuse is never the victim's fault.

• Attend the awareness workshops sponsored by RVAP that are held in every residence hall during the first few weeks of school.

• Contact RVAP about its free self-defense training sessions.

• Think about how alcohol and drug intake affect your judgment.

• Support your friends and their safety. Go to activities in groups and make up code words for when you're uncomfortable in

"If you feel unsafe or don't know who to trust, trust your gut instinct."

Ashley Sovern,
Director of Education for the Rape Victim Advocacy Program

a situation.

• Most importantly, Sovern said, is to trust your instincts:

"If you feel unsafe or don't know who to trust, trust your gut instinct," said Sovern. "A lot of women think they're just being paranoid or silly and that the guy's probably fine. But the definition of paranoid is being afraid of something that's unlikely to happen, and sexual assault is not unlikely to happen."

The phone numbers for the Rape Victim Advocacy Program hot lines are: 335-6001 and 1-800-284-7821 and for the Domestic Violence Intervention Program hot lines are 351-1043 and 1-800-373-1043, respectively.

DI staff seeks out best locally delivered pizza

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Face it, if you're a student at the UI you're going to end up eating pizza eventually. Whether you're living off residence hall food or trying to cook your own mac 'n' cheese in an apartment, there's just no industry in Iowa City that caters to fast, hot filling food like the local pizza emporiums.

And so, completely out of a sense of altruism and concern for you, the pizza eaters of Iowa City, we at The Daily Iowan took it upon ourselves to try all the local delivery places in town and see how they compare.

To be fair, we waited until a busy Friday night, then ordered the same thing from each of a dozen places — a medium, regular crust pizza; half pepperoni, half-mushroom. Then we sat down in a too-hot room with a few gallons of Coke and a dozen lean 'n' hungry Arts & Entertainment writers — again, only thinking of you.

Each pizza was rated in five categories:

•Appearance: Too much grease on top? Was the cheese congealing? Did it look like they forgot to put toppings on half the pizza?

•Crust: Too thin? Too thick? Too rubbery? Too dry?

•Sauce: Too much? Not enough? Bland? Overpowering?

•Toppings: Were they generous? Were the mushrooms fresh? Was the pepperoni greasy? Would the cheese choke a goat?

•Value: Was it a good pizza for the price we paid? Was it big enough, hot enough, delivered fast enough?

Some of the results surprised even us. But here's what we came up with. In descending order of overall points earned:

1) Godfather's Pizza (338-0691)

What we paid: $10.40

How long we waited for it: 55 minutes

Best current deal: Friday / Saturday night, medium one-topping pizza for $5.

Extra charges: $1 charge for delivery.

Special quirks: Godfather's also runs a pizza and extras buffet at 207 E. Washington St. on the Pedestrian Mall. If you want to test our rating, this is an inexpensive way to do it.

What we thought: The clear winner, Godfather's got high overall ratings in all five categories. Taste testers praised the pizza's thick toppings, earthy crust and zesty sauce. "Aromatic and wheaty, like Sandy Duncan," one of the rating sheets said. "The best pizza in the group."

2) Secret Pizza (337-6776)

Price: $7.10

Wait: 90 minutes

Best deal: Half-price deal — ask for details.

Extra charges: 25 cents if you pay by check. Delivery fee only outside Iowa City.

Quirks: Secret Pizza's location is, well, a secret. Tipping the delivery person gets you clues to its location; if you come to pick up your pizza, you win two free liters of soda. Secret Pizza is a small local operation which results in a long turn-around time but means you often get your pizza delivered by the same man who took the order and baked it himself.

What we thought: Secret Pizza's unique whole-wheat crust and thick cheese won acclaim, but the moderately low price and unique presentation boosted the pizza to second place.

3) Mazzio's Pizza (338-4429)

Price: $9.96

Wait: 35 minutes

Best Deal: Two medium pizzas for $9.99

Special quirks: The Mazzio's Pizza dispatcher informed us that they "don't like delivering to those wacky college students," so order with care. Also delivers sandwiches and pasta.

What we thought: Mazzio's thick cheese and uncommon lack of excess grease especially pleased reviewers; their pizza got the highest rating for appearance of any pizzas we tried.

4) Sam's Pizza IC (337-8200)

Price: $10.20

Wait: 30 minutes

Best deal: Two 9-inch one-topping pizzas for $6 or two calzones for $10

Extra charges: $1 delivery on 9-inch pizzas, subs and calzones only. Sam's may add a charge for check payment soon.

Special quirks: Getting through to Sam's was a hassle; judging by the busy signal tone, this may be Iowa City's most popular pizza emporium, so call early and often. Sam's also delivers salads, desserts and beer. (No beer delivery to residence halls.)

What we thought: We were expecting a long wait, considering how busy Sam's was, but we got our pizza amazingly quickly. Reviewers were effusive in their adjectives: "angelic, ground breaking," "bold, zesty," "homemade taste." However, they were stingier in their ratings, especially in the appearance category.

5) Happy Joe's Pizza and Ice Cream Parlor (351-6900)

Price: $9.37

Wait: 45 minutes

Best deal: Check for coupons.

Extra charges: 20 cents for writing a check.

Special quirks: Sandwiches also delivered.

What we thought: Happy Joe's got mixed ratings; the freshness of the cheese and other toppings was praised, but various reviewers claimed the crust or the entire pizza was too dry. A splinter of wood was found in one slice that scared off some tasters as well.

6) Gumby's Pizza (354-8629)

Price: $5.75

Wait: 55 minutes

Best deal: Two large, two-topping pizzas for $10.50.

Extra charges: 50 cents for writing a check.

Special quirks: Offers fresh tomatoes as a topping. Free garlic and extra sauce available.

What we thought: Gumby's surprisingly low price gave it a boost in the value category — several writers said their problems with the pizza were easily outweighed by its cheapness. The sweetish, garlicky sauce impressed some reviewers but annoyed others. The crust was described as everything from "thick, chewy and tasty" to "soggy."

7) Pizza Hut (351-5117)

Price: $9.43

Wait: 25 minutes

Best deal: Buy a pizza at a regular price, get second large pizza for $6, medium for $5 or small for $4.

Special quirks: Pizza Hut surprised us all by delivering while we were still ordering from other places. Amazingly fast.

What we thought: Pizza Hut's grease level was a problem for several writers, as was its saltiness. "Turgid," "flaccid" and "soggy" were common complaints.

The Best Pizza in Town

A taste test by The Daily Iowan Arts reporters has revealed the best pizza that Iowa City has to offer. Twelve pizza delivery restaurants were judged on their pizza's crust, sauce, toppings, appearance and value. The winners are:

1. Godfather's

19.9 out of 25 points. Looks like homemade. Thick crust; fresh, heaping toppings; and lots of cheese.

2. Secret Pizza

19.2 out of 25 points. Rich whole-wheat crust and a presentation that can't be beat.

3. Mazzio's

18.3 out of 25 points. Rated high in everything. A good-looking, all-around above-average pizza.

How pizzas were scored: Pizzas were graded on a scale of one to five and rated in five categories. The scores in each category were added together for the final score.

How to read the chart: Higher numbers and darker shades are better.

■ Top score ■ 90%-99% of top score ■ 80%-89% ■ 70%-80% ■ 0%-69%

DI/ME

8) Little Caesar's Pizza (337-9555)

Price: $7.33

Wait: 45 minutes

Best deal: Two large pizzas with one topping for $10.

Special quirks: Always cheaper in bulk. This is the pizza to order if you're catering a large party.

What we thought: The Little Caesar's pizza was cold when it arrived, giving rise to a number of complaints about grease, sponginess and rubbery cheese. The low price and heavy use of Parmesan cheese won some followers.

9) Paul Revere's Pizza (354-1552)

Price: $8.95

Wait: 30 minutes

Best deal: Two-topping Terminator for $12.45 and 12-inch one-topping pizza, bread sticks and two drinks for $8.40 (with tax).

Extra charges: 50 cents for writing a check.

Special quirks: Home of the "Wedgie" (a big pizza pocket). They also deliver spaghetti, lasagna, barbecued ribs, sandwiches and salads.

What we thought: The fast delivery was a bonus, but the opinions were generally negative: "flat," "greasy" and "if it were warm it would have been the best one of the evening."

10) Domino's Pizza (338-0030)

Price: $9.25

Wait: 50 minutes

Best deal: Buy a large three-topping pizza, get a medium one-topping pizza free.

Special quirks: "It's almost always there in 30 minutes."

What we thought: Several reviewers agreed that the Domino's pizza was overdone, too salty, too oily, and was a somewhat scary orange color. Some praised the doughy crust, but others proclaimed it was "way too soft."

?) Pizza Pit (354-1111)

Pizza Pit managed to evade our critique by sending the wrong pizza — a small cheese number that we couldn't rate for value or toppings. A few reviewers liked the sweetish crust and the spicy smell, but to be fair, we couldn't rate this pizza with the others.

And finally: Those few writers who managed to continue eating through all 12 pizzas unsatisfied complained about the nondelivery places we didn't try. Recommendations for the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., Pagliai's Pizza, 302 E. Bloomington St., The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., and Mondo's Sports Cafe, 212 S. Clinton St., were bandied about. So consider yourself warned — we've done part of the work, but picking a place you can live with will require some testing of your own. Have fun. Just don't invite us. We're full.

SHAYLA THIEL

DI editor drops hints on decoding course guide

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

It's the dreaded question that will be asked ten zillion times before the Tuesday of finals week: "What classes are you taking?"

Shriek! (Violins from the "Psycho" movie soundtrack screech in the background.)

As you quickly flip through the Schedule of Courses, your head is swimming in a virtual septic tank of digits and abbreviations while you attempt to decode the magical meaning behind "GER" and all those darn colons.

Calm down. Take a deep breath. You are about to read a brief compilation of words of wisdom and anecdotes that you can hold close to your heart as you begin your deep relationship with the god ISIS.

Everything you need to know about registering for classes by one who has been there and survived:

1. Despite what those perky freshman orientation advisers tell you, the Schedule is NOT your friend. The burgundy booklet is actually the sequel to "The Anarchist's Cookbook" and was penned for the UI by a wayward Borg-for-hire using a secret combination of course numbers to hypnotize freshmen into signing up for five classes per semester and then paying for them for the next millennium or so.

Even if you don't understand my nerdy "Star Trek" references, know that you too will be assimilated.

2. Short Anecdote: A friend of mine (who shall remain nameless) signed up for 16 hours of classes with "basic" and "elementary" in the titles his first semester and wound up with a 1.2 grade-point average. Elementary Numerical Analysis, Basic Athletic Training and Basic Quantum Physics will get you every time.

3. Ditto the warning on class titles starting with the words "introductory," "fundamentals of" and "beginning." Usually, they are anything but.

4. And save "methods of" and "readings in" until you've declared your fifth new major and are ready to become the turtle-neck-wearing intellectual you always knew you were cut out to be.

5. Freak out Grandma when she asks what you're planning on doing now that you've reached the higher echelons of academia and answer, "Just studying sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll, babe." Learn just how mind-altering LSD and marijuana are in the psychology department's behavioral pharmacology class.

6. Rebel against the UI's "unusual or unexpected" classroom materials policy by taking Literature and Sexuality or Sexual Topics in Art History where pornographic Picassos abound. And, of course, prove you ain't nothin' but a hound dog by taking the only in-depth course on "the King" in the nation — Elvis as Anthology.

7. Anecdote No. 2: Another student — who also shall remain anonymous — went to class until midterm believing her instructor was named Professor Staff, and that she taught about 100 other classes. Before making the mistake of calling campus information for Staff's office number, remember not to take the Schedule too literally.

8. Who says the word "blammo" isn't found in great literature? In Popular Arts and Entertainment in the United States: Comic Books in American Culture, students analyze the Spandex-clad heroes with whom they grew up. If you'd rather spend a few bucks on a paperback comic than $80 on a dry, 3-inch-thick book without pictures, sign up.

9. Don't take classes you can't pronounce. While you can probably avoid referring to the class title aloud all semester, it can get embarrassing if you have to call the instructor to explain an absence by saying, "Hi. This is Joe from your morning section of Hairy Died Tongues (Herodotus)." For those of us who have mush mouth if asked to speak before noon, sections of Labination, Colegium Musicum and Periodontology also are out.

10. The "Lazy / Uncoordinated Student's Guide to Overcoming the Physical Education Requirement" will land you in Relaxation Techniques (coed massage required), hatha yoga, tai chi (without sword) and bicycle touring. While the weekend biking class does involve a good deal of physical exertion, remember to take it the weekend Mother Nature decides to dump 10 feet of snow on your Huffy after only a few thousand feet of peddling and your four required hours will be taken care of.

11. Just as there is no free lunch, there is no such thing as an easy A. "Rocks for Jocks" is a myth purported by the Geology Association of America's underground to trick unsuspecting freshmen into learning a million types of sedimentary rocks. And Modern Astronomy has nothing to do with nightly star gazing or knowing whether you're a Scorpio or a Libra.

There you have it. With this list, you can impress both the folks back home and friends in party situations with your awe-inspiring schedule.

But you must promise to never give the secret away to your orientation advisers. They just wouldn't get it.

FESTIVAL WELCOMES SPRING

RiverFest showcases local arts

Michele Kueter

The Daily Iowan

The UI has celebrated the Iowa River and the spring season for 18 years. RiverFest, a tradition that began as a three-day event, has evolved into a nine-day festival held the last week of April in Hubbard Park.

Kevin Jansen, UI alumnus and director for RiverFest 1995, said the ritual was started by a few students who wanted to commemorate spring. Many activities for UI students and the Iowa City community are offered throughout the week, but the biggest day is Super Saturday, Jansen said.

The Battle of the Bands is a showdown of six regional bands that perform for prizes such as recording time, guitars and cash. Besides the music of local bands, there are three stages that offer entertainment. It is held on the first day of RiverFest, and bands compete to be the sole group that plays on Super Saturday. The music of Mainstage is geared more toward college students and hosts many bands, said Jansen. Two years ago, the Blues Travelers played Mainstage.

The sound stage has more varied music, Jansen said. The third

"I like the different art aspects. You see everything there — the students' work and local artists."

Bonnie Bone, UI junior

stage is the multicultural stage, where various student and ethnic groups can perform traditional dances and music.

Multicultural food also is available in tents around Hubbard Park throughout Super Saturday.

Spread out around the park are tents of various student groups promoting their organizations. UI junior Bonnie Bone said this is a good way for students to get involved in activities.

"I think it's a good idea to go to RiverFest just to see all the things that go on on campus," she said.

Another big event on Super Saturday is the Riverbank Art Fair, Jansen said. Local artisans display and sell their goods, such as homemade sweaters and beaded necklaces. The fair is set up along the bank of the river behind the Union. Bone, who grew up in Iowa City, has gone to the fair many times.

"I like the different art aspects," she said. "You see everything there — the students' work and local artists."

Other RiverFest events include a comedy act and a lecturer invited by the UI Lecture Committee. Comedian Henry Cho was the 1995 RiverFest comedy act and journalist Hunter S. Thompson was the scheduled lecturer, but he did not show due to a bout with the flu.

The annual RiverFest River-Run is in its 16th year, said Jansen. It includes 5K and 10K races as well as wheelchair races. The event is routed across downtown and the UI campus.

The Sunday following Super Saturday, Acacia fraternity hosts its "Taste of Iowa City" in Hubbard Park, Jansen said. Local restaurants sell their food and compete to carry the honor of having the best food in Iowa City, according to "Taste of Iowa City" judges.

In the last six or seven years, Jansen said RiverFest has had a new friend: Elliot the duck, the official RiverFest mascot. Every year, Elliot can be found on RiverFest T-shirts.

Elliot the duck is a big part of RiverFest. He is loved by everyone, especially those he surprises with gifts.

UI SOPHOMORE SLATED AS STARTING QUARTERBACK

Hawkeye football anticipates revamped strategy

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

For the past three seasons, the Iowa football team has been a poster child for mediocrity.

The Hawkeyes have compiled a three-year record of 16-16-1, one of the main reasons Coach Hayden Fry has instituted the slogan "Think Big" for the 1995 season. Fry, who led his squad to three Rose Bowl appearances in the 1980s, is looking to jump-start an Iowa team that has been spinning its wheels in the 1990s.

The most immediate effect of the new slogan will be changes in the plays called on the field. In order to contend in today's college football arena, plays must have a heavy impact, Fry said.

"If you analyze football ... it's no longer based on taking the ball and being able to drive 80 or 90 yards with consistency," Fry told reporters before the annual intrasquad spring game last April. "Teams can't do that today. Most of your games are won today with big plays — big plays on offense and big plays on defense."

To help Fry stay true to the new slogan, the Hawkeyes will put one of the Big Ten Conference's premier offenses onto the football field, and leading the show will be quarterback Matt Sherman. The UI sophomore displayed flashes of brilliance in limited playing time last season.

Sherman threw for 736 yards, six passes will be four primary targets. Wide receivers Demo Odems and Willie Guy return for what will be their final seasons in Hawkeye uniforms.

Also returning is tight end and all-American candidate Scott Slutzker. The UI senior was hampered with several injuries early in the 1994 season before returning to help the Hawkeyes to a 3-0-1 stretch to end the year.

Slutzker has been Iowa's second leading receiver each of the past two seasons during which he's combined for 56 receptions, 686 yards and four touchdowns.

The final piece to the offensive puzzle is also the biggest question mark: Tim Dwight. Iowa City's newest favorite son saw limited action in the backfield last season, but sparked attention returning kickoffs.

With the emergence of backfield stars Sedrick Shaw and Tavian Banks, Fry felt Dwight's potential was being smothered, so the UI sophomore was moved to the wideout position during the off-season.

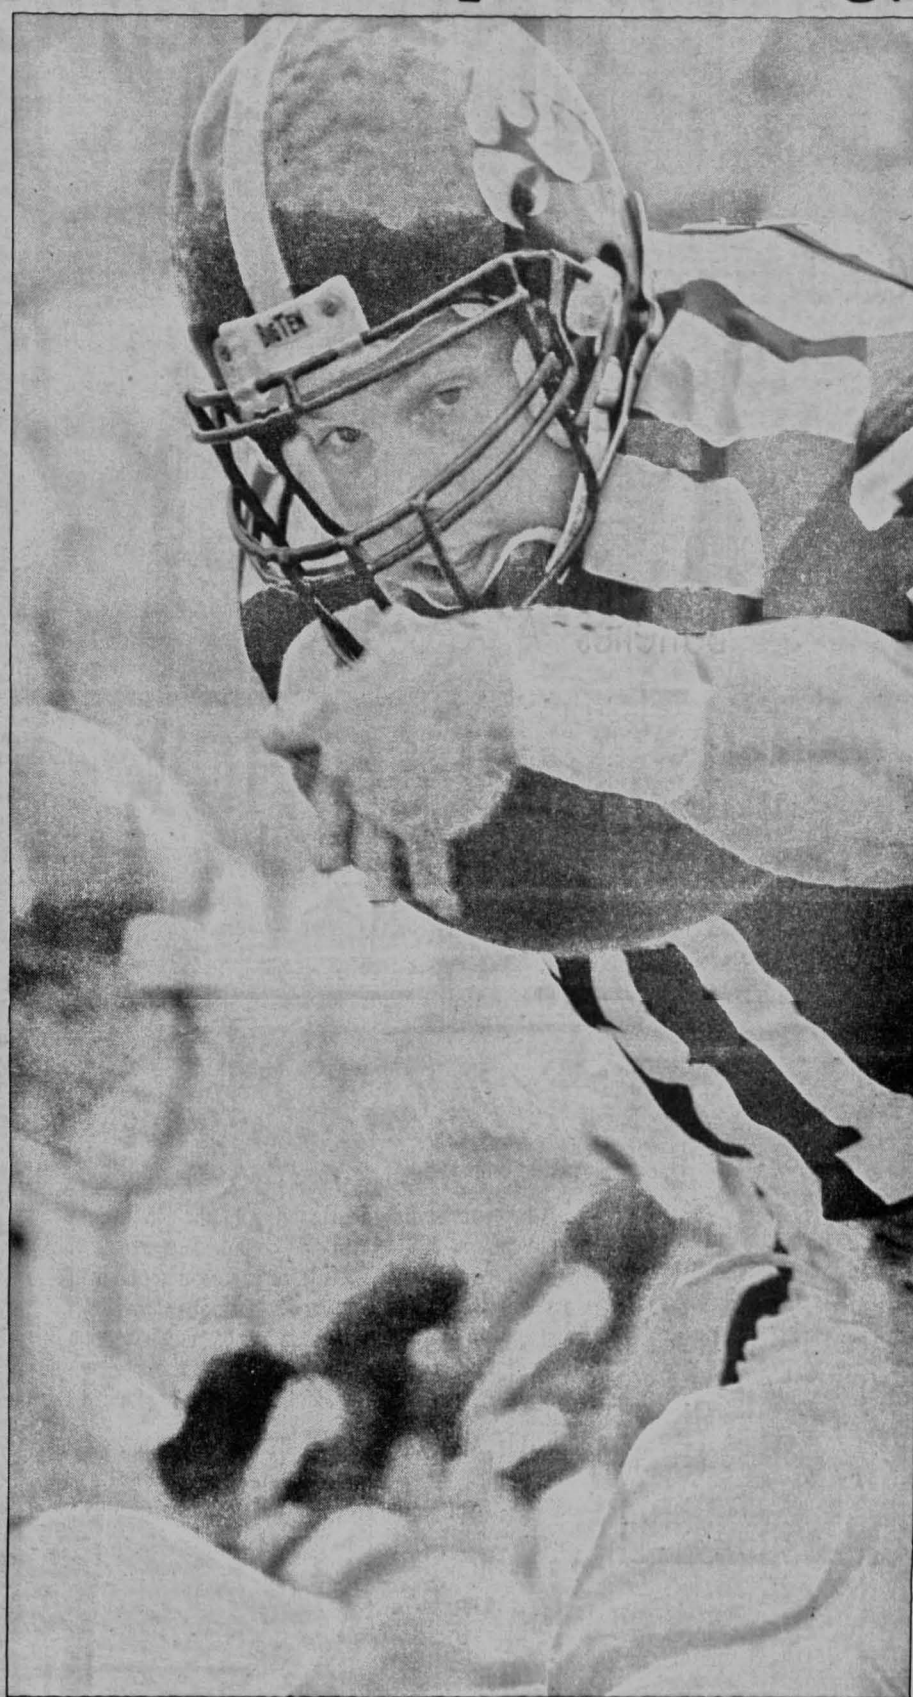

"He will be everywhere we can put him. The little guy gets mad when he's not out there because he knows he can help us win," Fry said. "If you just had a few Tim Dwights, you could darn near predict a national championship."

Even with three more experienced players jockeying for Sherman's attention, Fry said Dwight will be more active than last season.

"You're going to be surprised at how many times Tim Dwight touches the football next fall," Fry said. "One way or the other, we're going to get him the football."

Complementing the Hawkeye air attack is a potent running game led by Shaw. The junior running back came within 999 yards of Iowa's all-time rushing record after just two seasons, while racking up over 1000 yards during his sophomore campaign.

Joining Shaw in the backfield will be Banks, a UI sophomore, and UI junior fullback Rodney Filer. Banks, a native of Bettendorf, exploded onto the scene last season as a redshirt freshman and led the Hawkeyes with a 7.3 yards-per-carry average.

"We're trying to get our most explosive, big-play potential players on the field at the same time — in the kicking game and everything else," Fry said. "In order to do that, you've got to have big-play people."

Iowa football season kicks off Sept. 9 when the Hawkeyes host the University of Northern Iowa at Kinnick Stadium.

RECRUITS FILL HEIGHT GAP

Standout starters and new players anchor mens hoops

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Following a season filled with heartbreaking losses and an impressive run down the stretch, the Iowa men's basketball team hopes to make a run for the Big Ten Conference title in the 1995-96 season.

Four one-point Big Ten losses in five games set the tone early for a Hawkeye squad that finished seventh in the conference with a 9-9 record.

The Hawkeyes (21-12 overall) will be returning four starters:

junior guards Andre Woolridge and Chris Kingsbury, senior forward Kenyon Murray and junior forward Jess Settles.

Woolridge played his first year of college ball at Nebraska, where he was named 1993 Big Eight Freshman of the Year. He then transferred to Iowa and sat out the 1993-94 campaign in ordinance with NCAA regulations.

In his first year as Iowa's point guard, Woolridge collected 190 assists — second in the Big Ten. Woolridge was named Third Team All-Big Ten by The Associated Press.

Kingsbury gained national recognition last year for his three-point range. He was honored with the AT&T Long Distance Shootout Award for most three pointers made during the last 10 games of the season.

In addition to being named Ohio's Mr. Basketball during his senior year of high school and breaking Iowa's all-time three-point total in just two years,

Davis

Kingsbury was named Second Team All-Big Ten in the AP and Coaches Poll after averaging just under 17 points per game.

Murray will be Iowa's lone starting senior. He won Michigan's Mr. Basketball title the year after Chris Webber — a member of the Fab Five from the University of Michigan — and has consistently been one of the Big Ten's top defensive players.

Settles is what makes the team tick. The junior standout collected Big Ten Freshman of the Year honors in 1994, beating out heavy pre-season favorite Wisconsin's Rashard Griffith.

A back injury sidelined Settles last year midway through the Big Ten season. He returned to lead the Hawkeyes to an National Invitational Tournament bid, but never returned to early-season form.

"Jess has had a tough time with this back thing," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "He means so much to this team and he hates having to sit out."

Picking up the slack during the 6-foot-8-inch forward's absence were sophomore Ryan Bowen and senior Russ Millard.

Bowen emerged last year as Iowa's top freshman. Big Ten play was a trouble spot for the young forward, but Davis said the improvement in Bowen's game was noticeable.

"Ryan's struggled a little, but he's starting to find his legs and work his way up," Davis said.

Going into his senior season, Millard hasn't even played four full semesters. His plans to red-shirt freshman year were cut short by the death of forward Chris Street.

Citing a lack of depth underneath the basket, Davis took the redshirt off Millard in early spring 1993. Millard played his entire sophomore year and showed signs of greatness. A 25-point effort against Duke helped to bring Millard to the forefront.

However, Iowa learned that Millard would not be eligible for the first semester of his junior year because he failed to meet academic standards.

He returned second semester but fell prey to pneumonia and missed most of the last half of the spring semester.

Iowa's other returning players include Kent McCausland, a red-

The Hawkeyes will add four top recruits to their squad next season in the area they need it the most: height.

Iowa's lack of an inside presence was obvious last year during Big Ten play. To help fill the gap, the Hawkeyes signed the 6-foot-11-inch Guy Rucker, 6-foot-10-inch J.R. Koch, 6-foot-9-inch Alvin Robinson and 6-foot-5-inch Trey Bullet.

TOURNAMENTS DRAW HUGE TURNOUTS

Sports complexes feature arena of action for spectators

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Maybe it's something about Michigan State.

When the Spartan football team came to town in October, Iowa beat 'em, and thousands of Hawkeye fans stormed the field at Kinnick Stadium to celebrate.

Five months later, the No. 8-ranked Spartan basketball team came to Iowa and were beaten, and the floor at Carver-Hawkeye Arena was covered with swarming fans.

Then again, things like this don't just happen when Michigan State comes to Iowa City. On any particular day, you'll find someone having a good time at an Iowa sports event.

"I'm not from Iowa, but the Hawkeyes have really grown on me," UI sophomore Andy Garman said. "I've gone out to watch football games, men's and women's basketball games — and I've had so much fun. I've turned into a Hawkeye fan."

Field hockey fans watched the Iowa team put together a Final Four season at Grant Field. The Big Ten conference cross country championships were held at Finkbine Golf Course. Baseball fans cheer on their Hawkeyes at Iowa Field in the spring, while softball fans head to the Hawkeye Softball Complex. Tennis enthusiasts gather at Klotz Tennis Courts and swimming buffs watch their Hawkeyes in The Field House pool. Or, fans may be spotted enjoying gymnastics in the Field House gymnasium.

The UI has several hot spots for anyone, ranging from die-hard sports fans to people just looking for something to do. However, of all the places on campus, you'll have the best luck finding a crowd at Carver-Hawkeye or Kinnick.

"When we beat Michigan State at the last second, that place was louder than I've ever heard," UI sophomore Clint Zimmerman said. "That was one hell of a game."

Carver-Hawkeye opened in January 1983. It seats 15,500, but packed in 22,157 fans when the Iowa women's basketball team played Ohio State in 1984.

Carver-Hawkeye was full earlier this year when the Iowa men's basketball team hosted a pair of National Invitational Tournament games, bringing postseason basketball to Carver for the first time.

During the NCAA wrestling championships, Iowa took the national title in front of the home crowd.

The women's volleyball team had an impressive showing under the Carver-Hawkeye roof as well, finishing third in the Big Ten after being predicted to finish last.

Kinnick has had its moments, too. The Hawkeyes have squeezed in more than 70,000 fans to watch a Saturday afternoon football game. The stadium, which opened in 1929, is one of the 15 largest university-owned stadiums in the nation.

The Iowa football team has had eight undefeated home seasons — the last in 1985 — and the upcoming season could be No. 9. With a solid nucleus returning, the Hawkeyes should make a run at the conference title in front of a stadium full of fans.

Students have an advantage when it comes to cheering on their fellow classmates. The UI Athletics Ticket Office offers terrific discounts on home sporting events.

Ticket manager Pam Finke said it's hard to pass up the deals available to UI students.

"We're offering season football tickets at $54 ($9 per game). The public is paying $132 this year," she said.

Students can also purchase basketball tickets for $6 per game or a Goal Card for all women's events, which costs $20.

All other sports charge admission at the gate.

If anyone is interested in receiving ticket information or order forms, contact the UI Athletics Ticket Office, located at the north entrance of Carver-Hawkeye Arena, at 335-9327.

TEAM POSSESSES INGREDIENTS

Women's basketball shoots to regain top position

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Thanks to its first losing season in 12 years, the women's basketball team has revenge on its mind.

"I think we are so hungry to kick everyone's butts that kicked ours," sophomore Tiffany Gooden said just minutes after Iowa's season-ending loss to No. 8-ranked Penn State in the second round of the Big Ten tournament.

The 11-17 Hawkeyes did have their butts kicked a few times during a very trying season. Coach C. Vivian Stringer came into the season with seven freshmen and four seniors and ended the season with four freshmen and three seniors.

The anterior crucial ligament injury was probably the biggest demon for the Hawkeyes in the 1994-95 season. Senior Simone Edwards and freshman Malikah Willis, who happened to be two of Iowa's four tallest players, both went down for the year with knee ligament tears.

Senior Tia Jackson, who sat out the 1993-94 season with an ACL tear, was plagued by a not-fully healed knee all season.

She missed only two games in her final season, despite admittedly playing with constant pain. In her final game, Jackson scored 25 points and pulled down 11 rebounds despite being knocked out of the game for five minutes after taking an elbow to the side of the head.

Jackson scored 1,160 points in her career, the 8th best total in Iowa history. She added to that figure with a team-high 357 points in 1994-95 and led the team with a 13.7 point-per-game average.

Gooden was the team's second leading scorer. The Big Ten Freshman of the Year averaged 12.5 points per game. She led the team with 15.3 points per game in Big Ten play and scored a season-high 36 at Michigan State. Gooden was named National High School Player of the Year by Parade magazine.

The highly touted freshmen group never performed up to its capabilities in its rookie season, but all seven will return as sophomores. Willis should be healthy after a year of rehabilitation. Angela Hamblin and Timicha Kirby will return from time off due to eligibility problems. And Shannon Perry, Tangela Smith and Nadine Domond will join Gooden as returning sophomores with starting experience under their belts.

Smith was also a candidate for Freshman of the Year after scoring 9.4 points per game in Big Ten play, along with her 8.2 rebounds and 2.7 blocks.

Two seniors and two juniors will provide the Hawkeyes with some extra experience. Edwards, a 6-foot-4-inch center from Kingston, Jamaica, will return from injury and attempt to fulfill her dream of dunking in a game.

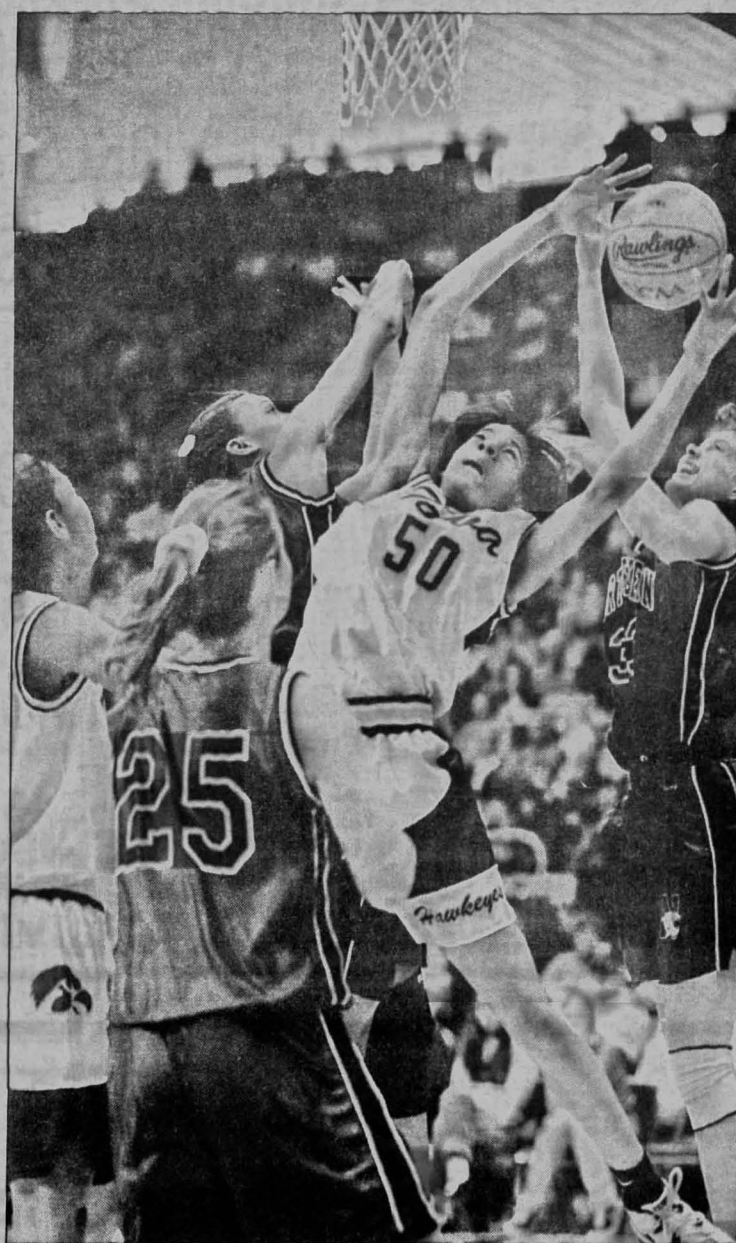

Senior point guard Karen Clayton will resume her starting role, where she tallied over three assists and nearly five points per game.

Junior Jenny Noll now has two years of experience to go with her 6-foot-4-inch frame. Those two ingredients should make her a force in the middle. Susan Koering will also return for her third year with the Hawkeyes.

Iowa will also return Stringer, who — despite the 11-17 season — still has ten 20-win seasons under her belt.

Iowa certainly has the ingredients to return to Hawkeye form in 1995-96. Now, according to Gooden, all the team has to do is play up to its capabilities and anything is possible.

"If we play at a certain level throughout the year," Gooden said, "we'll know that we're going to be in the NCAA tournament and we'll be the main contender for the national championship."

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Tangela Smith works for a rebound against Northwestern at Carver-Hawkeye Arena in January. Smith, a UI sophomore, will be a strong member of the Hawkeye team this season.

Tennis team survives tough season

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team only managed to post a 9-13 record and a seventh place finish at the Big Ten Championships, but the statistics don't tell the whole story.

At least half of Iowa's losses could be attributed to a murderous schedule that featured several ranked teams and a five month road trip.

The team was led by senior Laura Dvorak. Dvorak posted an 11-8 singles record at the No. 1 position and was named to the all-Big Ten Conference team for the fourth straight year.

Iowa's other senior Cara Cashion teamed up with newcomer Kristen Campbell to post a 11-2 doubles record. The pair was almost unstoppable in Big Ten Conference play during the regular season. They had a 9-1 record in the conference.

Dvorak and Cashion were lost to graduation, but Iowa will be aided by the return of seniors Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette. Boros produced an 11-7 singles record while Willette finished at 6-13. Campbell should also make an impact as she returns for her sophomore campaign.

Six runners to pace cross country

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's cross country team never hit full steam during the 1994-95 campaign, but the Hawkeyes still managed to make some noise.

Senior Erin Boland led the Hawkeyes to an eighth-place finish at the Big Ten Cross Country Championships. Boland's sixth-place performance in 17:39 was good for all-Big Ten Conference honors. Boland was only the ninth runner in Iowa history to be named to the all-Big Ten team.

Kiersten Pauling and Becky Coleman also ran well at the Big Ten Championships. Both athletes finished in the top 40.

Next season's team should be even stronger. The Hawkeyes will lose Boland to graduation, but a strong nucleus will return.

Juniors Briana Benning, Coleman, Pauling and Jennifer Schoonover will join senior Shawn Fleck to round out Iowa's top five. Sophomore Nicole Brown will provide depth. The team is coached by Jerry Hassard, who will begin his 20th season as Iowa's head coach.

Swimmers battle odds

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

In a year when it was looking for its 100th win since 1974, the Iowa women's swimming team had a rough go of it in the 1995 season, finishing 1-7 in dual meets.

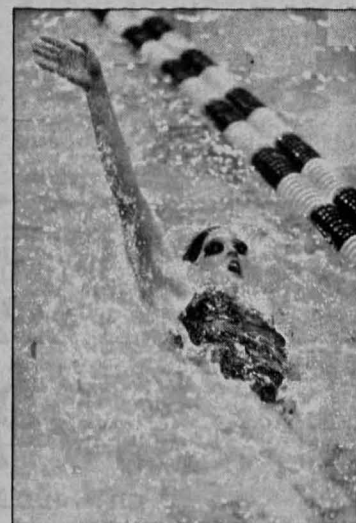

The Hawkeyes lost their final dual meet of the season on February 3 to Southern Illinois, 169-124. However, Iowa coach Pete Kennedy's squad wasn't exactly running at full strength.

Three sophomore Hawkeye swimmers, Kristen Belleson, Sonja Statham and Jami Strauss, were out with the flu.

"We go out and swim tough, but it seems like we can't catch a break," Kennedy said after the loss.

"I'm not saying having those swimmers would have won the meet, but I think it would have made a difference."

NINE FINISH AS ALL-AMERICANS

Wrestling team keeps up winning tradition

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa wrestling team started and finished its last season in the same position: the driver's seat.

Iowa entered the season as the top-ranked team in the country and never relinquished the role champion title. The Hawkeyes mopped up their opponents en route to an undefeated season, their 22nd consecutive Big Ten Conference title and the team's 15th national championship.

Coach Dan Gable's slogan for the season was "zero tolerance," and the Hawkeyes demonstrated that they don't tolerate losing. They opened the season with an impressive road flurry, including a 33-6 thrashing of No. 2 Penn State.

In January, Iowa returned to Carver-Hawkeye Arena and continued to wreak havoc on the competition. The Hawkeyes finished 5-0 at Carver-Hawkeye with victories over No. 11 Clarion (40-3), No. 3 Arizona State (29-7) and No. 5 Oklahoma State (29-10). Iowa also recorded its first shutout since 1992, when it pounded Northwestern 40-0. Iowa won its dual meets by an average margin of nearly 30 points.

Iowa's only scare at home came when Minnesota recorded four victories in a dual meet in February. But the Hawkeyes had no intention of losing to the No. 9 Gophers two years in a row and held on for a solid 24-12 victory.

Erik Stroner, UI junior and heavyweight, said the home crowd was a great motivation for the team.

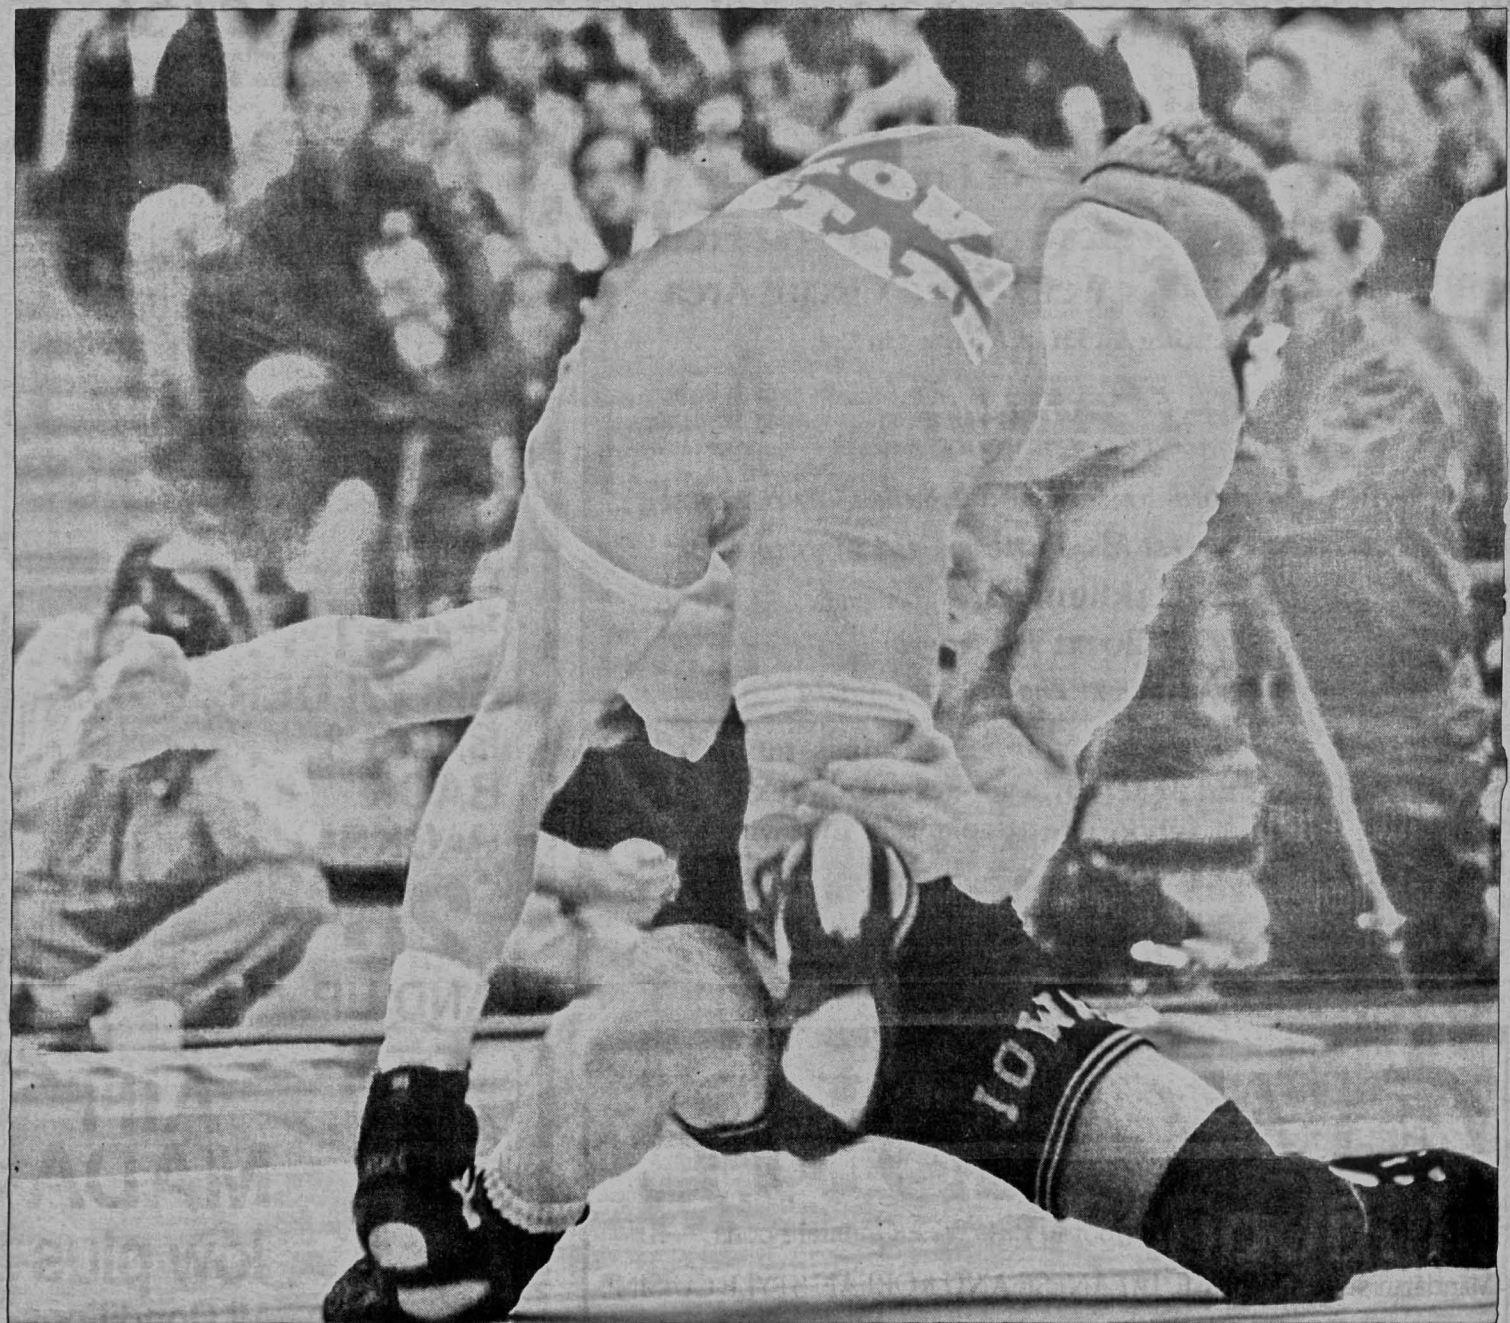

"Iowa has some of the greatest fans in the sport," Stroner said. "Iowa has the biggest crowd support of any college wrestling program. When I wrestled at Northwestern, we were lucky to get 200 people for a dual meet. I think the lowest attendance we had here for a dual meet was 4,000."

Iowa also produced a few more highlights during the regular season. The Hawkeyes routed intrastate rival Iowa State 32-3 and defeated four nationally ranked opponents to capture the National Duals title in Lincoln, Neb.

After the regular season, Iowa traveled to Bloomington, Ind., for the Big Ten Conference Championships. The Hawkeyes ran away with the team title, outdistancing second-place Michigan State by nearly 80 points. Six Hawkeyes won Big Ten titles. Winners were UI freshman Jeff McGinness (126); UI sophomores Mike Mena (118), Mark Ironside (134) and Lincoln McClavy (150); and UI seniors Ray Brinzer (177) and Joel Sharratt (190). Four other Hawkeye wrestlers placed at least fifth at the tournament.

Iowa concluded the season at home in Carver-Hawkeye with the NCAA Championships. The Hawkeyes captured their 15th national championship in front of a sellout crowd of 14,064. Iowa blew away the competition, finishing the tournament with 134 points. Oregon State placed second with 77.5, followed by Michigan State with 69.5. A record 81,028 fans attended the four-day tournament.

However, the Hawkeye faithful were nearly brought to their knees when Iowa stumbled in the championship round. Top-seeded McClavy and Sharratt both lost their only matches of the season in shocking upsets. Two-time NCAA champion McClavy lost a 13-10 decision to Steve Marianetti of Illinois, while defending NCAA champion Sharratt fell to Oklahoma State's J.J. McGrew, 8-6.

Iowa's lone national champion was McGinness. He won the 126-pound title over Penn State's Sanshiro Abe, 6-4, to finish 30-0 for the season. Nine Hawkeye wrestlers finished as all-Americans by placing in the top eight spots at the championships.

Gable, who has coached the team to 13 of its 15 national titles, said it was hard to celebrate the national championship following the disappointing losses.

"When you're a team that has won as much as Iowa and you have some things that are negative at the end, it's hard to really stand up and cheer because it hurts," he said.

Despite having only one individual champion, Gable said he was pleased with the team's overall performance.

"When you've got nine guys in the top six, it's not a bad tournament," he said.

Mena said the Hawkeyes did a good job of continuing Iowa's tradition of excellence in wrestling, although they failed to produce many individual champions.

"On the whole, it's hard to make the argument that we had a bad season. I think we had a great season; it's just that it could have been better if we would have won more individual championships," he said.

This year's team looks to be just as sharp.

Sharratt, Brinzer and all-American Matt Nerem have been lost to graduation, but seven starters — McClavy, McGinness, Mena, Ironside and UI seniors Bill Zadick and Daryl Weber — will return.

MEN'S ATHLETICS

Cross country marked by experience

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Iowa men's cross country Coach Larry Wiczorek said season long that experience was one of his team's strengths.

So following a disappointing ninth place performance at the Big Ten Cross Country Championships, the Hawkeyes responded like true veterans rebounding to finish 10th out of 32 teams at the NCAA District Championships.

Wiczorek

Iowa was led by senior Matt Gerard, who finished 35th with a time of 32:03.

Senior Troy Hollatz also ran well finishing 56th. The freshmen trio of Jared Pittman, Mike Bakker and Chad Feeldy rounded out the Hawkeye scoring by finishing 51st, 60th and 75th respectively.

The 10th place finish matched Iowa's best district finish ever under Wiczorek. Iowa finished with 270 points and was only two points behind eighth-place Central Michigan.

Wiczorek said he was pleased with the team's strong efforts.

"It's a real credit to the team that they bounced back," Wiczorek said. "They could just gone through the motions, but instead they rose to the occasion."

Despite losing four seniors, the team hopes to receive further recognition during the 1995-96 season. Pittman, Bakker and Feeldy will return for their sophomore campaigns. Seniors Chris Peters and Rod Rerko will join junior Dave Novotny to provide added depth.

Swim team dives into next season with four all-Americans

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Although the Iowa men's swim team lost depth and leadership of the team to graduation, it should remain a Big Ten Conference powerhouse in 1995-96.

Patton

Gone are the Polish duo of Rafal Szukala and Krzysztof Cwalina, along with team captains B.J. Blair, Jim Mulligan and Erik Marchitell, who led the Hawkeyes to a perfect 8-0 dual-meet record last season.

And gone are over 30 NCAA all-American honors. But returning are four all-Americans, including UI senior Jose Hidalgo, sophomore Jory Blauer, junior Tim Schnulle and Marco Minnone, along with a talented group of sophomores.

Hidalgo, an all-American diver, will pace Iowa's top-notch group of divers who — despite the loss of Blair — will still be a force.

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Rod Rerko (218) and Matt Gerard (211) compete at the Hawkeye Invitational last October. Iowa also hosted the Big Ten Cross Country Championships.

"Diving will be one of our strongest areas, with Jeff Stein — a redshirt freshman — to take B.J. Blair's place," Coach Glenn Patton said.

Along with Hidalgo and Stein, the Hawkeyes have a superb junior in Tete Gil, who narrowly missed a trip to the NCAA meet last season.

The Hawkeyes should also be very strong in the breaststroke.

"The breaststroke is in good shape with Marco Minnone coming back and Brian Brinkley, Ian River and Todd Hamer backing him up," Patton said.

Blauer, who really stepped up his performance level late in the 1994-95 season, will be back to defend his all-American status in the backstroke. Schnulle will once again compete in the freestyle sprint events.

Patton also feels his sophomore class will add some strength next year.

"They'll be very, very important," Patton said. "We have some fine young swimmers who competed in the shadows this year. Next year, swimmers such as Brian Brinkley, Tyler Holcomb and Brad Quindt will have to step forward and reach that next level."

The Hawkeyes will begin their 1995-96 season in early November.

Iowa men's golf team comes to the force

Jon Basso
The Daily Iowan

After a strong fall 1994 season, the Iowa men's golf team was ready for a repeat performance in the spring.

The Hawkeyes got off to a quick start in the first 1995 tournament.

Iowa finished fifth overall in the 16-team Dr. Pepper Intercollegiate Tournament in Lake Tacoma, Texas.

The Hawkeyes were led by UI senior Sean McCarty, whose strong showing carried over to the beginning of the spring. McCarty racked up a tournament best: a 7-under-par 65 on the final day of the Dr. Pepper tournament.

"Sean McCarty had a superb fall," Coach Terry Anderson said. "He is the No. 1 player in the district and is ranked 25th in the country."

Another top performer was UI senior David Sharp. Sharp provided experience and leadership for the Hawkeyes.

"Sharp played in almost every tournament while he was here," Anderson said. "He had very high expectations for himself."

Anderson said he always has high expectations for the golfers.

"Individually, you just have to take care of your own game," he said. "They have to take care of business, and if they do it the right way, then the team things work."

Iowa's golf competitions are held at the Finkbine Golf Course. All of the Hawkeyes' tournaments in 1995 were away from home.

Jon Basso
The Daily Iowan

The expectations for the Iowa men's gymnastics team were certainly high heading into the 1994-95 season. The Hawkeyes did not disappoint.

With only one senior on the squad, the Hawkeyes might have been lacking a bit in experience, but they made up for it with loads of talent.

Heading into the NCAA regionals, Iowa was on top of the men's gymnastics poll. The Hawkeyes showed their toughness against two former top-ranked teams on the road by defeating New Mexico State March 4 and tying Nebraska March 17.

"I think we're one of the top (teams) in the nation, though I don't want to say the best," said UI senior Hugh Lau. "Our only goal is to win the NCAA."

At the Big Ten Conference Championships, Iowa managed to finish second, behind the surprising Minnesota team. Still, Iowa finished with its second-highest score of the year and kept its top ranking.

In the 1994-95 season, the Hawkeyes were led by then UI juniors Aaron Cotter and Jay Thornton.

Thornton followed up a strong sophomore season — during which he was an all-American on the floor exercise and the horizontal bar — with a superb junior year.

"My ultimate goal is to win all-around at the nationals," he said. "I think I have a lot better shot at it this year than I did last year."

As far as the team is concerned, Thornton said he could not have asked for a better season.

"It's been great," Thornton said. "Our team is kind of like a little family. Everybody works together — sticks together — and it has been a great experience."

Iowa's home meets are held in the North Gym of The Field House. The Hawkeyes are led by Coach Tom Dunn, who has been at the UI for 14 years.

Men's track and field takes Big Ten lead

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa track and field team is hoping for another banner season in 1995-96.

After sprinting to the top of the Big Ten last season, the Hawkeyes look to move ahead of the Big Ten pack this year.

Despite the loss of star sprinter Andre Morris to graduation, the Hawkeyes should remain a Big Ten powerhouse in the sprint events.

Three of the four members returning — who led the 4 X 100 and 4 X 400 relay team to the top of the conference — are senior George Page and sophomores Chris Davis and Ed Rozell.

Another talented sophomore, Dion Trowers, will lead the way in the 110-meter high hurdles. Trowers finished second in the high hurdles at the Drake Relays last season.

"We'll have a lot of strength in the sprints again," Trowers said. "We're not freshmen anymore. We're more mature and we understand how the system works."

The Hawkeyes should also be strong in distance events this year.

Eight-hundred-meter runner Dave Novotny, 1,500-meter runner Chad Feeldy and 5,000-meter runner Jared Pittman all held team-best times last season. All three will return this year.

"Our distance is coming along," Davis said. "They'll be in real good shape next year."

Other key returnees include middle distance runners Peter Eischeid and Regi Hawkins, along with hurdler Jonathan Tullett. Junior Rod Rerko returns in the steeplechase.

HAWKEYE WOMEN'S SPORTS

Field hockey team sticks to game plan

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The UI field hockey team hopes to start the 1995-96 school year the way it finished 1994-95.

Last year, the Hawkeyes struggled early in the season but found their stride near the end. In jeopardy of missing the NCAA tournament entirely, Iowa won the Big Ten Conference tournament to gain an automatic bid.

From there, the overachieving Hawkeyes cruised all the way to the Final Four, where they were finally defeated by No. 1 North Carolina.

With the loss of only three seniors, the Hawkeyes hope to continue their success this year.

The team's goals include a Final Four appearance, a Big Ten championship and a national championship. The Hawkeyes, who lost their first game ever on Grant Field last season, will also be looking to go undefeated at home this season.

Leading the Hawkeyes into action will be a talented group of UI seniors, including Jessica Enoch, Kristen Holmes, Nancy McLinden, Ann Pare and Emily Smith.

With the graduation of leading scorer Debbie Humpage, the Hawkeyes will be looking for a more balanced attack this season.

"We've been working this spring on cohesiveness, on playing together as a unit," said Jessica Krochmal, UI senior and all-American goalkeeper. "We're not relying on one person to be the star."

The Hawkeyes will begin their journey to the Final Four in early September. All home games are played on Grant Field, located just southwest of Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Volleyball team serves up stellar year

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Big Ten Coach of the Year Linda Schoenstedt guided the 1994 Iowa volleyball team to an incredible finish.

Picked to finish dead last in the Big Ten, Iowa finished third in the conference, winning 24 games and a spot in the NCAA tournament.

"I knew we would be better than expected, but third place is past what I could have hoped for," team member Jennifer Webb said. "Considering where we've come from, this is awesome. The last two years have been hell, but now it's paying off."

Webb, who was named to the Big Ten's first team last fall, is one of six players who will return to the team as a junior in 1995. UI junior Katy Fawbush, who led the Hawkeyes in kills, was named to the honorable mention squad.

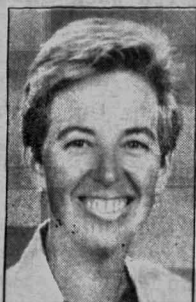

Iowa's season ended when Pittsburgh knocked the Hawkeyes out of the tournament in the first round, coming from behind to defeat Iowa 5-15, 16-14, 4-15, 16-14, 15-10.

"For most people, winning the conference is a dream year," Schoenstedt said. "After where we've come from, a third-place finish is a dream year for us."

This year, however, Schoenstedt will probably extend the team's dreams. With all but one player returning, Iowa should be a conference favorite in '95.

Junior outside hitters Fawbush, Webb and Jill Oelschlager will lead the Hawkeye squad in '95. Also returning will be UI senior setter Lisa Dockray, UI senior middle hitters Shawna Moskalik and Tiffany Meligan, UI juniors Heather Calomese and Teri Fleming, UI sophomore middle hitter Jennifer Bell and UI sophomore setter Carie Simonian.

Iowa redshirt freshman Katie O'Brien will see her first action in '95 as well.

Women's golf looks to improve game

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

It has not been all bright sunshine and green grass for the Iowa women's golf team. Bad weather prevented the team from getting in as much work as it would have liked to early last spring.

The lack of outdoor work translated into a slow start for the team.

Coach Diane Thomason said she was not overly concerned.

"We still have a long way to go, but I feel we are about where we should be at this point in the season," Thomason said.

Leading the way for Iowa in the spring were UI junior Jennifer Baker-Nodland, UI senior Jennifer McCullough, UI sophomore Candy Schneekloth and UI senior Lynette Seaton.

Baker-Nodland finished 26th at the World University Golf Championships in 1994 and has been a reliable performer for the Hawkeyes. Still, she said she was not content with her performance.

"I haven't performed as well as I would like," Baker-Nodland said. "I feel like I need to work on my short game. Still, it is early and hopefully things will get better."

Baker-Nodland said she is confident the team will continue to improve.

"We're seeing that we can be a good team," she said. "We still have to put it all together on the same day. I think we know we can be one of the better teams, but we just have to all come together."

Iowa's home tournaments are held at Finkbine Golf Course, although the Hawkeyes had no home tournaments in 1995.

Women's gymnastics team loses balance

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

It was a roller-coaster ride for the Iowa women's gymnastics team in 1994-95.

The Hawkeyes entered the season with high hopes but were decimated by injuries throughout the year.

Iowa lost key performers and UI seniors Kim Baker, Amy Bolton; UI junior Shelly Burns; UI sophomore Molly O'Conner; and Cathy Terrell to injuries throughout the season.

Perhaps no injury was more disheartening than Baker's.

Baker led the Hawkeyes all year in virtually every event. She qualified for the NCAA regionals but was forced to miss it due to a wrist injury.

The surgery on her wrist was successful, and Baker should be ready to go this year.

"With Kim Baker being out of the lineup, it is a major shakeup," Coach Diane DeMarco said. "The margin of error becomes much smaller."

Despite the injuries, Iowa pulled together for a successful season. In addition to Baker, UI senior Jodie Gray and UI sophomore Grace Lee also stood out.

Lee performed admirably in her rookie season in every event. Gray was outstanding on the balance beam and in the floor exercise.

"We've had some really great team efforts as well as individual efforts throughout the season," DeMarco said.

Iowa softball backed by long string of successes

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Under the leadership of Coach Gayle Blevins, the Iowa Hawkeye softball team has grown into a national powerhouse.

The Hawkeyes have finished either first or second in the Big Ten Conference each of the past six seasons, and finished No. 9 in the nation three times.

"We have all come with a dream of making Iowa softball the best it can be," Blevins said. "No one can ask any more than that, and yet we ask no less."

Blevins' commitment to excellence at Iowa earned her the 1991 National Softball Coaches Association Division I Coach of the Year and Midwest Region Coach of the Year honors.

In 1989, the Hawkeyes had advanced to their first NCAA post-season tournament and captured their first Big Ten Conference title. The next year, they made it back-to-back Big Ten crowns.

"The dream — to be the best we can be — is quickly unfolding," Blevins said. "Iowa softball has risen to national prominence, and yet I firmly believe our best is yet to be."

The softball season begins in early spring, with all home games played at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

Crew team proves itself in first year

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

1994-95 marked the first season for women's crew as a varsity sport at Iowa. The squad was split into two levels of ability: novice eight and varsity eight.

To say that the team's maiden voyage was a success would be an understatement. In their final competition of the year, the novice team bested 40 other represented universities and colleges at the Champion International Collegiate Regatta.

With UI sophomore Marni Levinson as coxswain, the novice eight claimed first place, with fellow Big Ten Conference colleague Ohio State coming in second. Boston College finished in third place. The varsity eight squad also came away with some success. In the second level final Iowa finished in third place.

But it was the novice eight that stole the spotlight. The Hawkeyes dominated from the get go, never showing signs of sluggishness throughout the regatta.

"We had a fantastic showing," said novice Coach Lisa Glenn. "We were by far the fastest team out there."

The eight-member crew comprising the victorious novice squad included UI sophomores Molly Manternach, Karen Kazmerzak, Anne West and Jennifer Bucklin; UI juniors Shelly Ehrmann and Shari Sekenske; and UI seniors Jennifer Wessen, Angie Petty.

Women's crew, which often holds practices before dawn, had been a club sport for several years before being granted varsity status last season.

Track team marked by standouts

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Daily Iowan female Athlete of the Year Yolanda Hobbs didn't let the end of the school year subdue her exceptional performance during the 1995 season.

At the Big Ten Conference Track and Field Championships, the senior advanced to the finals of the 200 meters after posting a time of 23.29 seconds, a personal best. Also qualifying for the finals was UI sophomore Tanja Reid, who topped even Hobbs with a 23.57.

In the finals, Hobbs and Reid made strong showings by finishing second and third, respectively.

Hobbs also came in third in the 100 meters, tying Indiana's Phynice Kelley at 11.74. Hobbs qualified for the finals with a time of 11.64.

Also making waves for the Iowa black and gold was Rebecca Kaza. The freshman high jumper leaped 5 feet, 7-1/2 inches; good for sixth place.

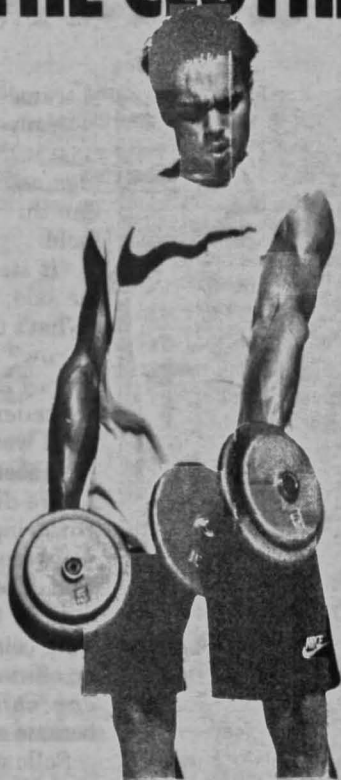

Iowa finished ninth overall at the championships, with only Penn State finishing with less points. The Hawkeyes had been in last going into the final day of competition. Illinois came in first.

Despite Iowa's ninth place finish, Coach Jerry Hassard was pleased with his team's effort.

"This was not a tremendously dynamic weekend for us, but we did place a number of our athletes," Hassard said. "We did not cover a lot of events that we did run."

"That was the brighter side of things."

TEAMS APPEAR AT PUBLIC EVENTS

UI spirit squads commit to more than cheering

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

They may not hit the winning shot or kick the winning field goal, but the Iowa cheerleading and pompon squads are a large part of the UI's athletic tradition.

Much like Iowa sports teams, the squads spend most of the year training. They practice two hours a day for five days a week during the school year. The squads are also present at every Iowa football and basketball home game, where they attempt to fire up and entertain thousands of spectators.

Members of both squads said they have to do a lot more than just look glamorous for Hawkeye fans.

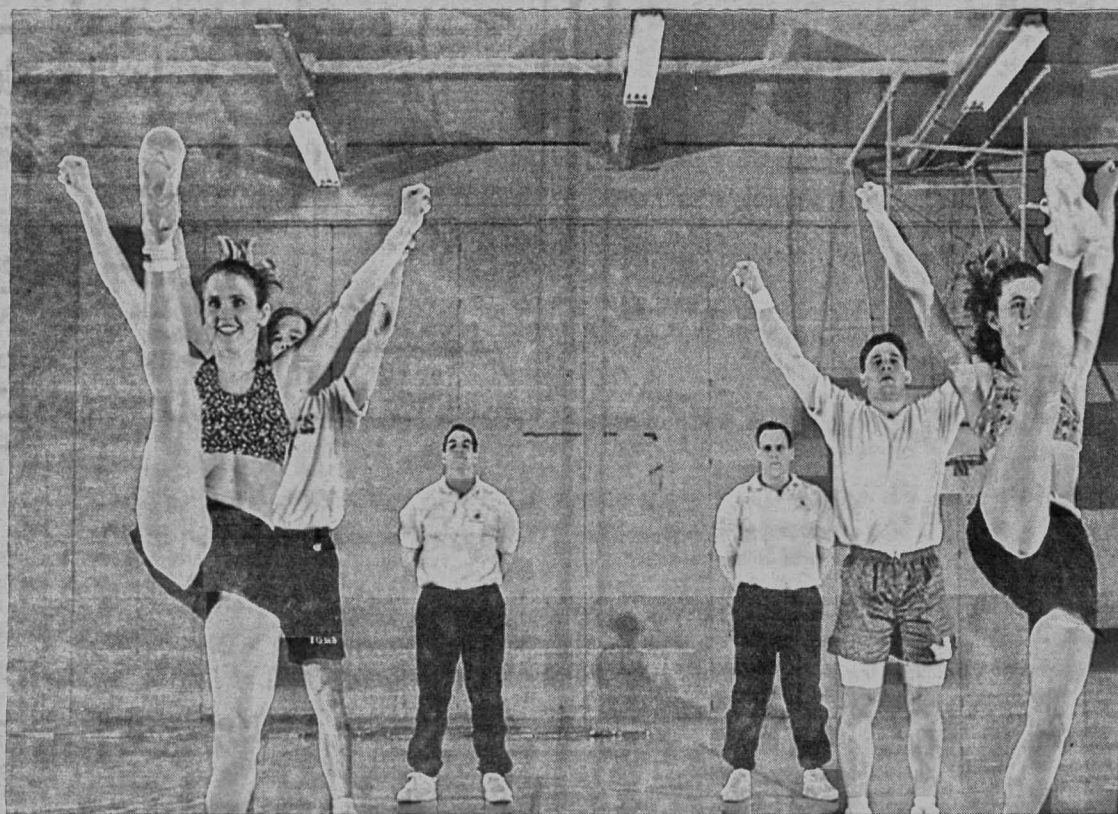

"We definitely see it as more of a sport than most people realize it is," UI junior and cheerleader Trisha Steuer said. "We work out basically year-round because of football and basketball. There is a lot of athletic ability involved, so I would never consider it as just an activity."

Michele Anderson, who coaches both squads, agreed a lot of hard work is involved.

"I can't say that it's a sport because they don't have competitions on a weekly basis, but I don't look at it as an activity, either," she said. "They're treated like athletes by the university, but they don't get scholarships."

Both squads are run by UI Athletics. Team members must follow academic eligibility guidelines set up by the Big Ten Conference and the NCAA.

The two squads have tryouts each spring, but beginners are at an extreme disadvantage. Most of the pompon squad members have strong dance backgrounds in several areas, such as ballet, funk and jazz. Cheerleaders must be able to do basic tum-

UI junior Megan Mourek, UI freshman Chad Beardsley and UI junior Jen Welzenbach do their best to impress judges during tryouts for the 1995-96 UI cheerleading team in The Field House North Gym in April. bling, jumps and stunts.

In addition to regular practices and games, the squads also take part in several community activities each year. They visit nursing homes, hospitals and local schools and participate in parades and other nonprofit events.

UI senior Vu Nguyen said community service is one of the bonuses of being a cheerleader.

"The university considers us athletes, but we do a lot of things that are not required of athletes," he said. "The community looks at us like we're celebrities, so it's kind of neat to do that kind of stuff."

Steuer said the biggest thrill is performing for fans.

"It's a great feeling when you're out there and you get your job done and everyone starts to respond to your cheers," she said. "Especially in tournaments in (Carver-Hawkeye Arena) when the fans were on fire and everyone was yelling. It feels great to know that we started such great fan support."

Anderson said injuries are rare, but emphasis is placed on safety. She said dance and cheering routines must be executed to perfection in practice before she will allow the squads to perform them for audiences. The squads also have a full-time trainer who deals with injuries.

One member of the pompon squad hoped she could affect the outcome of a sporting event.

"I wish we could alter the outcome of the games, but we're more for the crowds," UI junior Krissie Kaufman said. "We're trying to get the crowd into the game and to entertain them during halftime or time-outs."

Although nothing unusual happens at most sporting events, both squads said things occasionally get out of hand during football season. Rowdy Hawkeye fans have been known to bombard the field with projectiles during Iowa home games, and members of both squads often became inadvertent targets.

Nguyen said he'll never forget last season's Homecoming game against Indiana, during which a fan threw a raw chicken onto the field.

"It started to become a joke," he said. "It was like people said, 'What's the craziest thing we can throw?' I think that chicken topped it off."

Steuer said she didn't think fans were purposely targeting the cheerleaders.

"We didn't feel like they were throwing things at us because we were the cheerleaders," she said. "We felt that no matter who was in that end zone, things were being thrown. When a player, official, security guard or anyone came down there, they became a target for the fans."

Following the Indiana game, security guards carried video cameras at home games to catch throwers in the act.

Anderson said things got better after fans realized the harm they could cause by throwing objects.

"When one of the girls is 6 or 7 feet up in the air doing a stunt, even something as small as a marshmallow can cause a serious injury," she said.

Despite those incidents, Anderson said fans are starting to gain respect for both squads.

"A lot more people are starting to realize that (the squads are) not just out there for the attention that they get or being in the spotlight," she said. "People are starting to realize that they are athletes and how much practice time it takes to get at the level they're at."

The cheerleading and pompon squads also attend a summer training camp in Milwaukee to work on basic skills. Both squads are planning to compete in national competitions this year.

HERKY IS THE BEST!

UI fraternity brothers wing it as lovable Iowa mascot

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Roaming the sidelines of Kinnick Stadium, diving across the parquet of Carver-Hawkeye Arena and showing up just about anywhere else you can imagine is Iowa's favorite son.

No, not Tom Brokaw; it's Herky — Iowa's faithful mascot.

UI sophomore Rob Peterson is one of four members of Delta Tau Delta fraternity, 322 N. Clinton St., selected each year to don the yellow and black tights and 30-pound mask and receive the attention of thousands of screaming Hawkeye fans.

"You're just out there in front of everybody and you're like a hero," said Peterson.

"You're just out there in front of everybody and you're like a hero. Sometimes I can't even describe the rush."

Rob Peterson, UI "Herky"

"Sometimes I can't even describe the rush."

Peterson said Herky makes more than 80 appearances around campus each semester and the job can take a physical toll.

Children are the main perpetrators of Herky abuse. Peterson said events attended by large groups of children involve the most abuse.

"Kids like to beat on your head a lot, which sucks," he said. "Nobody realizes how much that hurts. But when they come up to you at games and ask for your autograph, that's when you really know what Herky means to Iowa."

During football games, Herky portrayals trade off after every quarter to cope with the intense heat. During an early season game, the temperature in the costume can get up to 115 degrees.

Peterson said while he enjoys the football crowd, basketball is where the action is.

"There's nothing like a basketball crowd," he said. "You're out there in front of more than 15,000 screaming people taking center stage. The feeling is just awesome."

Peterson said the most rewarding aspect of playing Herky is the chance to work with small children. The Iowa mascot makes numerous appearances at local schools and hospitals doing charity work.

A vast amount of Peterson's time as Herky is dedicated to appearances for charity.

"The best thing to do is go into a day care center and look at all the smiling faces," he said. "They just look up at you, and you realize how great this job is."

Peterson said when it comes down to performing in front of Iowa fans or small children, he'll take the children.

"Making the kids smile — that's what it's all about," he said. "I love the crowds and all, but crowds can't compare to kids."

PLANNING RELIEVES PRESSURE

UI athletes balance time between sports and studies

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

Athletic competition is only half the story for student athletes at the UI; they must also fight a battle with the books.

There is no denying that sports take up a major chunk of student athletes' lives. Division I athletics is a major business.

Still, student athletes must find a way to keep up with considerable academic workloads.

"I think it can be difficult for a lot of people," UI senior and Hawkeye baseball player Matt Austin said. "But if you take pride in your work — be it on the field or in the classroom — then it is not all that tough."

Austin said it is important to always have one's priorities straight when trying to balance sports and academics.

"Academics definitely come first for me," he said. "I couldn't imagine college without baseball, yet it wouldn't be college at all without the schoolwork and everything I put into that."

Strategies differ among athletes on the best way to succeed in sports and school.

Many athletes choose to take lighter courseloads during the season in order to make things easier.

"I try to focus on gymnastics more during the season because I'm taking fewer (semester) hours," UI senior and gymnast Jay Thornton said. "During the off-season, I focus harder on school and on keeping my grades up."

For other athletes, sports are a

"A big difference in college from high school is finding tutors and making use of those things that they offer to us. You get free tutoring which helps to get that extra help. It is important to make sure you use those resources that they have available."

Cindy Terrell, UI alumna and former Hawkeye gymnast supplement to academics and do not dictate their courseloads.

"Baseball definitely takes up a lot of time, but there is usually plenty of time left over for studying," Austin said. "I try to take advantage of the time I have."

The academic requirements mandated by the NCAA do not pose many problems for most Iowa athletes.

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Yolanda Hobbs was the first individual Iowa sprinter to win all-American honors. Hobbs balanced her commitment to excellence on the track with a commitment to scholastic excellence.

"I think (the requirements) are fair," Thornton said. "I haven't come across any problems with them. I don't think it's too difficult. You just have to balance your schedule and make sure you know what you're doing."

The UI offers several services to student athletes in order to take some of the pressure off them. Each student athlete is assigned an academic adviser who helps plan the athlete's schedule. Free tutoring is also offered.

"A big difference in college from high school is finding tutors and making use of those things that they offer to us," said UI alumna and former Hawkeye gymnast. "You get free tutoring which helps to get that extra help. It is important to make sure you use those resources that they have available."

Still, most student athletes in college have dealt with the conflict between sports and academics for many years and have already have developed methods to deal with it.

"Since I grew up with (the conflict), I was pretty much used to it in college," Terrell said. "You pretty much develop a set schedule. You usually have classes in the morning and practice usually three or four hours in the afternoon. Finally, you study at night."

Of course, by putting so much time into sports and academics something is inevitably lost. Most often time for socializing and relaxing is pushed aside.

"One of the hardest things for me was finding time to relax or to spend time with other friends at home," Terrell said. "You don't realize how hectic your days are like until you have a day off."

Still, Terrell said the positive aspects of her experience as a Hawkeye gymnast outweighed the negative ones.

"I'll always have the friendships (with teammates) no matter what," she said. "They were in the gym with me every day, and we all got along in my four years (at the UI)."

INFLUENCED BY FAMILY

Tennis prodigy serves success

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

When Tom Derouin decided to play tennis for Iowa, he might have been wary of playing in one of the top conferences in the country and facing hard-nosed opponents match in and match out.

Derouin

But how much could it faze a guy who brought a 146-14 record career record, a state title and three all-state selections with him to college?

Probably not a whole lot.

The junior from Moline, IL, has adjusted just fine and

"There are some days I just don't have the time. But I manage to get things done because I know that my schoolwork is just as important."

Tom Derouin, UI sophomore tennis standout played some of his best tennis of the spring for the Hawkeye men's team. Derouin has posted a 4-0 mark in Big Ten singles play and has an equally impressive 3-1 mark in doubles.

It isn't surprising since Derouin has been around the game since age 7.

"I came from a family of six and we all played tennis," Derouin said. "My dad played tennis in college and my older brother plays a lot of tennis, so that's what really motivated me to keep with it."

Derouin played tennis under his father, who was the coach at Moline High School, and blossomed from there. He also kept busy in the off-season by playing basketball for four years at Moline.

"It was good to have my dad there for me as the coach of the team and my personal coach. It really helped me develop my game quicker and better."

Derouin finished third in the state his sophomore and senior years and won it all his junior year. He lost only six matches his last three years of high school and lead Moline to the team title his senior year.

When it came time for Derouin to pick a college, he said it was a pretty simple choice.

"West Virginia, Kansas, Illinois and Michigan recruited me, but I really liked the program at Iowa," he said. "I knew a lot of the guys on the team and Coach Houghton impressed me, so those combinations made the choice pretty easy," Derouin said.

Men's tennis Coach Steve Houghton said he was equally impressed with Derouin.

"Tom is probably one of the hardest workers I've ever coached. He's competitive and has played good, consistent tennis for us the two years he's been here," Houghton said. "The scary thing is he's only getting better."

Derouin had no trouble adjusting to the collegiate level as he posted a 12-2 singles and a 5-4 doubles record in the fall of 1993. His 12 wins led the team. Derouin claimed the championships at the Iowa State and Ball State invitations and finished second in the No. 3 singles match at the Midwestern Intercollegiate.

"My freshman year gave me a lot of experience," Derouin said. "I was lucky enough to be on the team when we had five seniors."

Houghton said he knew Derouin could be a factor at the highest level after his freshman year.

"Tom had a real solid first year and I knew that he could compete with anybody in the Big Ten," Houghton said.

Derouin kept on rolling, compiling a 13-6 singles record and a 5-3 doubles record in fall 1994 and spring 1995. He also recorded one of the biggest upsets of the season when he defeated defending Big Ten singles champion Peter Pusztai of Michigan.

Derouin has had success not only on the court but also in the classroom. In high school, he was a member of the National Honor Society and has continued his academic success in college. Derouin said it's sometimes tough to balance his time between academics and athletics.

"There are some days I just don't have the time. But I manage to get things done because I know that my schoolwork is just as important," he said.

Tennis team plagued by injuries

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team probably wishes the University of Illinois didn't exist.

The Hawkeyes had put together a respectable 7-6 record before they lost a 4-3 decision to the Illini. After that the roof caved in, as Iowa lost its last seven matches to finish 7-13 overall and 1-9 in the Big Ten Conference.

To add to its misfortune, Iowa spent most of the season without the services of UI seniors Bryan Crowley and Bob Zumph. Crowley returned during the season, but was bothered by a bad shoulder and couldn't do much to help the Hawkeyes down the stretch.

Iowa finished ninth at the Big Ten Tennis Championships with no Hawkeyes advancing to the second round.

The team hopes to bounce back next year with the return of senior Mattias Johnson and junior Tom Derouin. Johnson was 22-9 in singles play and 12-8 in doubles action. Derouin finished at 18-13 in singles play and had a 13-7 doubles record.

The team is coached by Steve Houghton.

Baseball looks to replace strong hitters

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

If the Iowa baseball team had never played a Big Ten Conference opponent on the road, it would have been set for a run through the Big Ten tournament.

As tough as the Hawkeyes were on their conference rivals while playing at Iowa Field, they were equally tormented on their opponents' home fields.

Iowa compiled a combined record of 9-3 against Big Ten opponents while playing at home, but fell to 5-11 on the road, a trait that would eventually keep the Hawkeyes from postseason play.

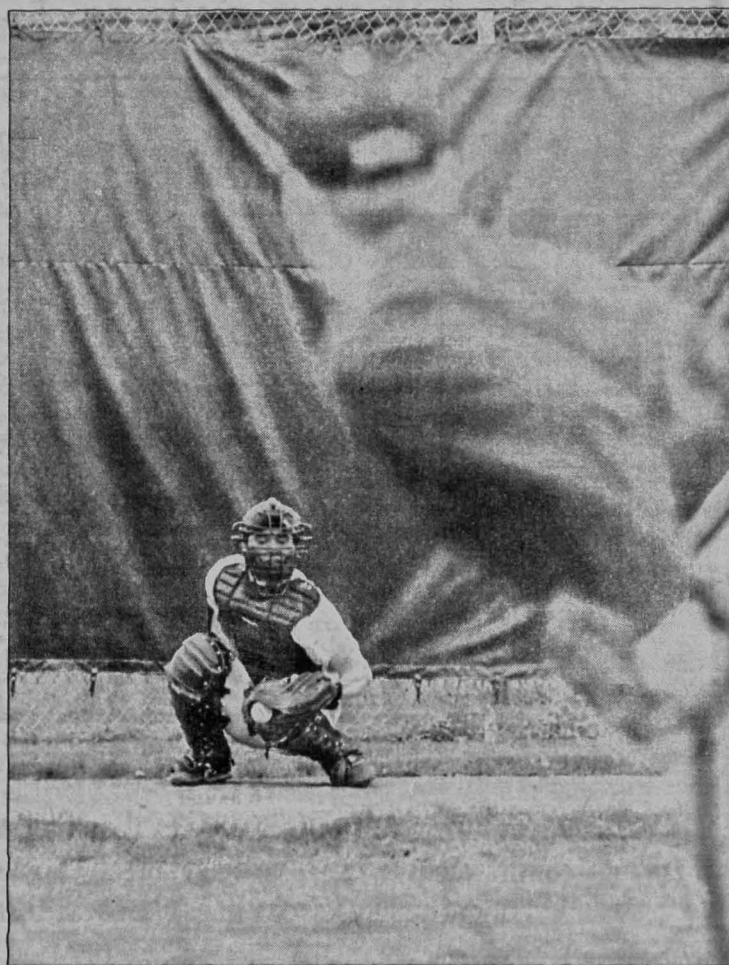

A .500 record kept Iowa from making the Big Ten tournament. Since only the top four teams advance, Iowa's final series of the year — against Penn State — was the end of the road for three key Hawkeye seniors.

Tri-captains Steve Fishman, catcher and Jeremy Lewis and Matt Ostrom, outfielders, made up one-third of Iowa's starting lineup and accounted for nearly 75 percent of the team's home runs.

That means Coach Duane Banks will have to fill some gaping holes in the 1996 season, which is not to stay that a few stitches haven't already been laced.

Returning will be designated hitter Jeff Schley, who earned second-team all-conference honors. Schley finished the 1995 season with a .314 batting clip and 19 RBIs.

Also making his way back to Iowa Field will be UI senior Kurt Belger. The ace reliever finished with 12 saves — a Hawkeye record — and struck out 28 batters en route to becoming Iowa's first, first-team all-Big Ten selection since 1992.

CHRIS SNIDER

Iowa: the true home of the superfans

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

It starts on the first Saturday of September, when you and 70,000 of your closest friends pack into Kinnick Stadium for a football game.

The next weekend, you wake up a little earlier and join the tailgating scene. Then you swing by Melrose Market and pick up a bag of marshmallows to join an Iowa tradition and pelt the band, the law and anybody else (except, of course, the cheerleaders) who looks at you wrong.

Maybe the next game you paint a huge "I" on your chest and work your way into the front row, only to lose your three friends who are now spelling "OWA" amidst the crowd of people.

Once or twice, you find yourself actually leading the chants of "asshole" as someone lays a cheap shot on one of our heroes in gold and black.

You've made your first futile attempt to make a name for yourself in the world of the Kinnick faithful. You'll soon be a

Before you know it — you're hooked! You've caught "Hawkeye fever." And as anyone who grew up in Iowa will tell you, once you catch it, you're a fan for life.

But you don't stop with football. In a manner not unlike Kevin Costner in "Field of Dreams," you are drawn to Grant Field for a field hockey game.

Shortly after that, you actually begin to understand what is going on at a field hockey game, and have become excited about a sport you had never before seen — or possibly heard of — in your life.

Then you skip out on studying to spend a day watching the tennis team terrorize their opponents or a night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena watching the volleyball team spike all over the competition. And before you know it — you're hooked!

You've caught "Hawkeye fever."

For me, it began while watching the likes of Steve Carfino, Chuck Long and Gerry "Sir Jam A Lot" Wright.

And as anyone who grew up in Iowa will tell you, once you catch it, you're a fan for life.

One thing that has made the UI athletic program unique for many years is the support it receives from its fans.

Just ask the football team. Despite a drop-off in the team's record the last couple of seasons, 70,000 fans still pack into Kinnick Stadium to cheer on the Hawks every game.

Better yet, ask Michigan State. Possibly the two greatest shows of fan support for the Hawkeyes came against Michigan State last year, first in football and again in basketball.

When the 2-5 Hawkeyes played host to the 2-4 Spartans midway through the 1994 grid-iron campaign, it wasn't exactly the ABC game of the week. But someone forgot to tell that to the Iowa fans.

The Hawkeye faithful simply would not let the Hawkeyes lose, helping them to a 19-14 upset (if you will) over the Spartans.

Former Iowa offensive lineman Hal Mady summed it up best after that game: "This is the only place in America where we're going to beat Michigan State and the fans are going to rush the field."

UI football Coach Hayden Fry was also quick to point out the importance of the fans.

"Thank God for Iowa fans and Kinnick Stadium. That was one of the more electrifying crowds since I've been here," Fry said.

"It seems to be typical or traditional that the Iowa fans get into the ball game. There's no question that inspired our players."

Then came basketball.

Every college in America will tell you that it has the greatest fans in America, but unlike most universities, Iowa can back its claim.

The Spartans came into Carver-Hawkeye Arena looking to capture the Big Ten title, while the Hawkeyes were trying desperately to get to the NCAA tournament.

The Hawkeyes looked at the game as a "must-win" and so did their fans.

Both teams played well, but the fans shook the roof off of Carver-Hawkeye Arena. In what could have been a scene from "Hoosiers," Iowa came out victorious on a last-second shot.

Every college in America will tell you that it has the greatest fans in America, but unlike most universities, Iowa can back its claim.
