AT&T patrons connect with sultry surprise

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It wasn't the "True Reward" AT&T customers had in mind.

In a mailing to 175,000 True Reward customers, AT&T Corp. mistakenly provided the toll-free number to a sex chat line.

Callers expecting to reach an AT&T operator were greeted instead by a sultry, breathy voice saying: "Are you ready to get naked? ... If you want hard-core, uncensored, explicit sex now ... then come and — ummm — take it!"

The number AT&T meant to provide allows customers to turn points earned by using long-distance service into free airline tickets and Disney merchandise.

But two digits were transposed in a printing error, yielding the number to a $2.98-a-minute sex chat line operated by Los Angeles-based Amtec Communications. Callers are billed only after listening to the introduction and entering a credit card number.

Simpson trial update

Wed., June 21, 1995

See trial story . . . . . Page 5A

Prosecutors had O.J. Simpson try on a new pair of leather gloves the same make and model as bloody gloves found at the murder scene and at his estate. The gloves fit him more comfortably than the gloves he tried on in court last week.

In Kansas City, a judge refused to order football star Marcus Allen to go to Los Angeles to testify. The defense had wanted Allen to testify that, even though he'd confessed to an affair with Nicole Brown Simpson, Simpson had continued their friendship, without jealousy. Allen, however, denies the affair.

UI unveils 4-year plan

The UI will guarantee freshmen a space in classes needed to graduate in four years — or their money back.

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

On Wednesday, the UI became the first Big Ten school with a money-back guarantee.

UI administrators pitched their new four-year graduation plan to incoming freshmen and the public for the first time Wednesday, three months after the Iowa state Board of Regents approved it.

UI Provost Peter Nathan said if students are denied entry into a class needed to graduate in four years, the UI would not charge them for the course.

"We have a variety of mechanisms (to hold up the UI's end of the agreement) — waiving a requirement, changing a requirement, making certain that the courses are available," he said. "The final remedy is we will return tuition for those courses or that course. We don't foresee that happening often."

Under the plan, incoming freshmen will be provided increased undergraduate advising. In addition, more UI outreach programs will be sent to high schools and elementary schools to prepare students for university life, Nathan said. He said the plan could help save parents and taxpayers money and allow more students to flow through the UI.

"If we graduate students in four years rather than five, they enter the job market a year early," he said. "Their parents will be saving

The UI's new 4-year graduation plan

The plan aims to get students into the job market earlier than the 5-year average, to help save tuition costs and to serve more UI students at a reduced cost to Iowa citizens. The new plan was unveiled to the public Wednesday. Features include:

- Increased advising of freshmen.
- More outreach programs in high schools and elementary schools to prepare students for university life.
- Tuition reimbursement for courses required for graduation that are unavailable to a student.
- Option of changing majors provided that the student chooses another 4-year major and attends summer school.
- Average course loads of 15 hours per semester.

Donald Seydel loves his pigeons just like people who love their dogs. However, the lawsuit filed by Seydel's neighbor about Seydel's pigeon coop may force him to close the facility he built in the backyard of his home at 1345 E. Davenport St.

Neighbors file complaint over 'noxious' bird coop

Fast fowl raced by pigeon breeder

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

Although an Iowa City man and woman are suing their neighbor over his pigeon coop, the woman said she hopes for an out-of-court settlement.

The couple, Mary Ann Rasmussen and Stephen Vlastos, stated in a petition filed this week that Donald Seydel's 10-by-20 coop constitutes a nuisance under Iowa state code and should be shut down or operated in a non-offensive manner.

The petition said the coop, located within 5 feet of the plaintiff's property, creates noxious odors and that pigeon droppings and airborne fungi trigger asthma attacks in Rasmussen.

Seydel declined comment on the lawsuit on the advice of his attorney.

Rasmussen's attorney, Bruce

"This is the kind of case that is clogging up our judicial system. This doesn't belong in the court system — it belongs in a real-estate 'for sale' office.

Attorney Karen Harris

Nestor, also declined comment, but Rasmussen said she was "hoping and praying for a neigh-borly, out-of-court settlement."

Rasmussen and Vlastos reside at 1346 E. Bloomington St., and Seydel lives at 1345 E. Davenport St.

Some neighbors were supportive of Seydel and his birds.

"Mr. Seydel keeps the coop immaculately clean — I don't see why he should be bothered," said neighbor Ruth Rittenmeyer. "There are people on the same side of the street (as Seydel) who are allergic to everything and it's never bothered them."

Karen Harris, an attorney, also said the case is inappropriate.

"This is a stupid case," she said. "This is the kind of case that is clogging up our judicial system."

KIDNEY DONATED

Death of student gives life to cousin

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Jefrie White wanted to donate one of his healthy kidneys to his ailing cousin, Drew Hager, but doctors wouldn't use a live donor, even though White's kidney closely matched Hager's.

Through a bittersweet twist of fate, White's death in a weekend traffic crash gave him his wish — his healthy kidney is now helping Hager live a better life and is keeping the former UI student's memory alive.

White, 21, was a UI sophomore and an English major. He was killed Saturday in a truck accident in Dorchester, Iowa. Sunday, one of his kidneys was transplanted into Hager's body.

Hager, 20, said it took some prodding for him to accept his cousin's kidney, but finally relented when he realized what his cousin and friend would have wanted.

"The reason why I took (the kidney) is because I know that's what he would have wanted me to do," Hager said. "He was a nice all-around guy. Everybody who knew him liked him."

Friday, just one day before White's accident, Hager was placed on the transplant waiting list with an expected 11-month delay. Along with what is now Hager's kidney, White's heart, liver, pancreas and other kidney were donated to people awaiting transplants.

Hager is recovering at UI Hospitals and Clinics from the operation; he is expected to be released within a week. On Wednesday he was awake, alert and walking.

PARTIES SPLIT OVER NOMINATION

Foster rejection prompts criticism from supporters

Nita Lelyveld

WASHINGTON — Dr. Henry Foster lost a crucial Senate vote in his bid to become surgeon general Wednesday — a defeat President Clinton laid to an abortion "stranglehold" on the Republican Party. Clinton pledged to keep fighting before a second vote Thursday that could be the final blow.

"This was not a vote about the right of the president to choose a surgeon general. This was really a vote about every American woman's right to choose," Clinton said, appearing with Foster in the Rose Garden just after the effort to break a Republican roadblock fell three votes short.

Foster

The Tennessee gynecologist-obstetrician has said he performed 39 abortions in four decades.

"Because he cannot pass the political litmus test that has a stranglehold on the other party, they cannot even allow a simple vote," Clinton complained.

In three hours of contentious debate, Republicans argued they were not just opposing abortion but felt Foster was not the right candidate for the job — especially after

Health

Personality disorder continues into adult life

Sara Teasdale
The Daily Iowan

After analyzing about 70 social misfits 30 years after their initial hospitalization, a UI doctor found that the former patients still experienced problems conforming to social norms as adults.

"We were looking to see what had become of their lives — had they improved or had they changed in any way," said Donald Black, researcher and associate professor of psychiatry at the UI College of Medicine. "We basically found that they experienced continuous ongoing problems throughout life. This suggests that over a 30-year period, the personal characteristics are relatively stable."

The case studies suffer from anti-social personality disorder, which affects about 2 1/2 percent of the population. The disorder is eight times more common among men than women.

Black, who conducted the study, evaluated men ages 55-80 with the disorder from 1986 to 1990. His final analysis — completed in 1994 — concluded that men and women who begin suffering from the disorder at a young age will experience similar symptoms as adults.

"What this study shows is that adults with ASPD — 30 years later — are still antisocial," Black said. "This may be obvious to you, me and others, but there was no data to support that."

Black said four men he interviewed for the study were in prison. One man was a serial killer, and

"If I asked you what antisocial meant to you, you probably thought 'shy,' but that has absolutely nothing to do with it."

Donald Black,
researcher and associate professor of psychiatry

another man was guilty of attempted murder, but Black could not recall what crimes the other two studied had committed.

"Attitudes during my research ranged from complete cooperation to none at all," he said. "Some were cooperative and others were very rude. One tried to assault my research assistant by pushing her against the wall and burning her with a cigarette. This is why very few people research (the disorder)."

Eric Devor, a UI assistant professor of psychiatry who was not involved with the study, said Black's data is important for physicians who are unaware of what happens to affected men several years after being diagnosed with the disorder.

"I don't think this is something that everyone knows about," Devor said. "Most of the people that we see are young men diagnosed with ASPD around their early 20s, but I don't know what happens to these men when they are in their 40s. This case would be interesting because I don't know that too many people know what happens to them later in their adult lives."

According to the Diagnostic Manual, which doctors use to identify various disorders, seven basic symptoms are common among men and women experiencing the disorder, Black said. To be diagnosed with the disorder, the patient must fit three of seven categories:

- Failure to conform to social norms with respect to lawful behaviors
  - Deceitfulness
  - Impulsiveness or failing to plan ahead
  - Irritability and aggression
  - Reckless disregard for the safety of others
  - Consistent irresponsibility
  - Lack of remorse
- "What makes them so dangerous to the community is that they have no insight, they have no remorse, they don't think they have the problem," Black said. "They don't feel bad for people. This is what makes people like Ted Bundy able to kill without feeling any type of remorse."

The term antisocial is misleading to many people, Black said. Society believes people with the disorder are timid. But the term 'antisocial' means the individuals are against society and its rules and regulations. "If I asked you what antisocial meant to you, you probably thought 'shy,' but that has absolutely nothing to do with it," he said. "What the term means is they are anti-society, so they violate society's rules."

People with the disorder lie, cheat, steal and sometimes kill during their lives, and many of them end up in prison, Black said.

"These people have a life-long pattern of misbehavior so that most have been in prison at some point in their lives," he said. "They have difficulty getting along with others, they experience trouble with their jobs, they generally have had multiple marriages and they often get drummed out of the military. The worst ones wind up incarcerated."

'Home Alone' star's father accused of being bad dad

NEW YORK (AP) — Macaulay Culkin's mother is seeking sole custody of him and five of his siblings, alleging their father left the family home alone and is threatening their acting careers with erratic behavior.

Patricia Brentur said Christopher Culkin moved out of their New York City home in March and is trying to pull the plug on 12-year-old son Kieran's participation in the movie "Amanda," scheduled to begin filming next week.

Brentur said in court papers filed Tuesday that agents and movie people "have informed me in no uncertain terms that if (Christopher Culkin) deliberately botches up this deal, no one in Hollywood will want to work with our children again."

Christopher Culkin, who has a reputation in Hollywood for being difficult, couldn't be reached for comment. Brentur, who lives with the children, said he has refused to reveal his whereabouts.

The couple "have been separated in the past due to his excessive drinking, physical abuse and unfaithful behavior," she said. Culkin's "selfish and erratic behavior has been in direct contravention of the best interests of our children."

Brentur and Culkin, who never married, also have an 18-year-old son.

Actor Quinn divulges romance tidbits in autobiography

NEW YORK (AP) — Anthony Quinn has joined the tell-all book crowd, writing an autobiography that details an affair with Rita Hayworth, a dalliance with Carole Lombard and an unwanted advance from George Cukor.

"One Man Quinn Tango" is due in stores next month, detailing the 80-year-old Quinn's rise through the Hollywood ranks as he appeared in more than 300 movies. Excerpts were published Wednesday in the Daily News.

When he danced with Hayworth, "We moved like lovers — which, in fact, we were, by the time we wrapped the picture 'Blood and Sand,'" Quinn wrote.

As for Lombard, he said regretfully, the relationship "never progressed beyond healthy indiscretion."

Cukor, director of "The Philadelphia Story," came on to Quinn following a night of drinking and studying girlie magazines, Quinn said.

When Quinn rebuffed Cukor, the director told him, "We all have girls, Tony. That's no reason to leave."

"Cukor screamed after me, 'You'll never be an actor again!'" Cukor died in 1983.

Designer Vanderbilt strives to resolve debts

NEW YORK (AP) — Poor little rich girl Gloria Vanderbilt has sold her New York City townhouse, put her Long Island mansion up for sale and moved into her son's two-bedroom apartment to settle tax bills and pay off other debts.

"I am living comfortably in an apartment that is not inappropriate to my feelings about sunlight and beauty and so forth," the 71-year-old heiress and fashion designer said in Wednesday's New York Post.

The IRS obtained a $2.5 million lien on the Long Island property for back taxes, and the state got a lien for $191,682.

The debts already have been reduced substantially with help from the $3 million sale of her five-story townhouse, said her lawyer, Jerome Walsh. He wouldn't disclose how much Vanderbilt owes but said she hopes to pay off all debts through the sale of the Southampton mansion.

Vanderbilt was known as "the poor little rich girl" in the 1930s, when she was the subject of a custody battle between her mother and her aunt.

Deadheads displace assembly members from hotel rooms

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Call it a Grateful Deadline.

The state Assembly planned to recess Wednesday for the rest of the week, in part because fans of the Grateful Dead bumped the politicians from hotel rooms all over town.

The Grateful Dead are performing Wednesday and Thursday at Albany's Knickerbocker Arena, down the hill from the Capitol.

Assemblyman Richard Brodsky said he and several colleagues were told they wouldn't be able to stay in their hotel past Wednesday because Dead fans had booked all the rooms.

Patricia Lynch, spokeswoman for Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver, said the concerts were a factor — but not the deciding one — in the break.

The speaker has a family commitment, and the Senate isn't meeting at all this week, Lynch said.

GRADUATE STUDENTS NOT IN

Plagiarism ru

Robyn Rappaport
The Daily Iowan

Although not written in the student life code at either institution, officials at both Iowa State University and the UI said they have the authority to revoke a degree from any former graduate student who is found guilty of plagiarism.

Judith Graham, a former ISU doctoral student, is being charged with plagiarizing part of her dissertation. Graham's dissertation cited the work of a University of South Florida faculty member who now claims that Graham did not give her work sufficient attribution.

Morton Adler, Graham's attorney, said he doesn't believe the university has the authority to revoke a degree. He also said Graham denies any accusation of plagiarism.

"There are always two sides to a story," Adler said. "She will have a chance to tell her side of the story once they have a hearing."

A hearing conducted by ISU officials will determine whether Graham is guilty of plagiarism. The Iowa state Board of Regents has authorized ISU to revoke Graham's degree if she is found guilty.

Plagiarism is forbidden by The UI Code of Student Life, a set of regulations published every summer and distributed to new students at orientation.

Kushner plays to anchor Rep festival

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

The 1995 Iowa Summer Rep festival of plays kicks off tonight with the opening of "The Illusion," Tony Kushner's free adaptation of 17th century playwright Pierre Corneille's 1636 play "L'Illusion Comique."

Kushner — who won a Pulitzer prize, a Tony Award and national acclaim with his play "Angels in America" (coming to Hancher Auditorium this fall) — will be the featured artist in the Summer Rep lineup. The festival's unique format, which spotlights the work of a single playwright each season, has won national acclaim; past festivals have included work by masters Tennessee Williams, David Mamet, Tom Stoppard, Robert Schenkkan and Beth Henley.

Susan Gregg, guest director of this summer's UI production of "The Illusion," says the play — which deals in multiple levels of time, perception and meaning — is the perfect selection to open a Kushner festival.

"This play is so much about the theater and what the theater is for and how it works that it opens the summer's arms and embraces the audience," Gregg said.

Although Kushner's play is based upon a historical script, Gregg said it truly has become a Kushner original in the playwright's hands.

"There is an incredible degree of humanity, of love of mankind, which — in one way or another — pervades all of Kushner's work," Gregg said. Kushner also expresses a degree of precision, she said, a trait that makes Kushner unique among modern playwrights.

"The Illusion" will be followed in the festival lineup by Kushner's "A Bright Room Called Day," which runs June 25-July 5.

"A Bright Room Called Day," which opened the 1991 New York

Shakespeare Festival, is a searing, playful drama in which Kushner transports his audience to Berlin during the 1930s. A group of intellectual leftists complain about the rise of Hitler but seem oddly unable to find any solutions to the Nazi threat. A female character from the present provides a tie-in for today's audiences by occasionally interrupting characters' arguments with scathing political commentary.

Other Kushner plays featured in the 1995 Summer Rep season will include "Hydriotaphia, or The Death of Doctor Browne," which runs July 6-19, and "Slavs! (Thinking About the Longstanding Problems of Virtue and Happiness)," running July 13-22.

Minnesota band mixes mysticism with music

Minneapolis' The Blue Up? will play tonight at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington. Cover will be charged at the door.

Clint Marsh
The Daily Iowan

Despite all signs indicating otherwise, Rachael is not a happy little girl.

The press materials for the first-name-only musician whose Minneapolis-based band, The Blue Up?, describe "Rachael's world" as one of "a child princess perpetually celebrating her own debauched and eternal birthday party." However, Rachael said she often feels very alone — even in crowds.

"I don't want to wallow in my misery so I surround myself with comforting things," Rachael said in a recent phone interview.

Rachael described her childhood as one of joy and wonder. She said her happiest girlhood memories include watching sunlight shine through marbles and dashing out of the house first thing in the morning to run through town before discovering she was still in her pajamas.

However, while coming of age in the small town of Stillwater, Minn., Rachael said she realized the borough was "a terrible place to discover that you're different." The decision to be her own person made the singer / guitarist an outcast in high school — the main reason Rachael said she dropped out four months before graduation to seek fame in the rock world.

Much like Rachael's life story, her band's music mixes the joy of being alive with the trauma of being different in a big bowl and serves it to listeners in heaping portions of mandolin-laced screams. Spool Forka Dish, The Blue Up?'s second album, delivers 17 helpings of the sticky-sweet substance to the music world — a refreshing meal in an era of copycat bands.

Rachael started work at a doughnut shop in Minneapolis and within a year formed The Blue Up? with drummer Renee Bracchi and bassist Carolyn Rush. The band's first single, "We Are the Garden," was released later in the mid-1980s.

Throughout the 10 years of the band's history, The Blue Up? seems to have confronted myriad problems. Whenever situations arise that are too stressful or pointless to deal with any other way, Rachael said band members simply resort to their own magic word — "joba."

Just as some words have no English translation, "joba" is an entity of its own.

"This is the cosmic fool's super-enlightening, all-empowering, world / thought / action that invokes humour, faith and trust," reads the secret message hidden with code in the lyrics of Spool Forka Dish.

"Renee made up the word one day," said Rachael, recalling a particularly grueling rehearsal. "She makes up all these words that have no English translation."

While touring for its first album, Cake and Eat It, Rachael recalled one of the most bizarre situations in the band's history that happened at a stop in Iowa. When the women couldn't find anywhere to dress for the show, she said they changed in the ladies room of a local hotel and ran into several confused detectives.

"All these guys with walkie-talkies came in. I guess they thought we were prostitutes," Rachael said, quickly discounting the notion as she remembered the antennae "bee hat" she was wearing at the time.

The band's live performances provide no distraction other than distraction itself. As her bee hat demonstrates, Rachael's clothing is wild and mystical, embodying the savage soul struggling to emerge from inside — like a child trapped onstage in a woman's body. Candles, incense and other props decorate the stage to provide a sense of atmosphere for the sylvan-like Rachael.

Not to lose any of the mysticism of a live performance, the last few tracks of Spool Forka Dish feature the entire album backwards, as if to give listeners a new way to look at the songs. The decision to backtrack through the album was an aesthetic one, Rachael explained.

"I really like the sound of things backwards," said Rachael, describing her tendency to listen to records backwards at home. "I wanted to give people the opportunity."

try-sounding tunes, Dwight's live music comes through with great energy, and his easy rapport with his fans is obvious in his between-tune discourse. "Thank you for making it possible for me to earn a living doing what I did for so many years for free," he tells the audience between songs.

There is a special bonus: the album contains two of Elvis' most loved songs — "Little Sister" and "Suspicious Minds." Although good Elvis impersonations are few and far between nowadays, Yoakam's renditions would probably even get a thumbs-up from the King himself. In fact, in 1994 when Dwight performed at the "Elvis: The Tribute" pay-per-view concert in Memphis, he was singled out by a Los Angeles Times critic who wrote that Yoakam "definitely had a little Elvis in him."

When it comes down to it, Dwight Live hits — and it misses. The album would have definitely succeeded had Yoakam stuck to what he knows and does well and what the fans love: country music. As is, the album is mostly rock with a random fiddle, and it leaves the true country music lover feeling a bit cheated.

Maybe Yoakam was hoping his live album could be a "transitional CD" for those who are trying to ease themselves into country. Indeed, Dwight Live is the happy medium for people whose systems still get shellshocked by pure country singers like George Strait and Don Williams.

AUTHOR TO READ TONIGHT AT SHAMBAUGH

Acclaimed novelist completes trilogy

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

After winning a mantel-full of writing awards, surviving a 10-year battle with spinal cancer and having an Oscar-winning filmmaker create a documentary about his life, author Reynolds Price always embraced one role for which he is less lauded: teacher.

Price, who will read from his latest book, "The Promise of Rest," tonight at Shambaugh Auditorium, has taught at Duke University in Durham, N.C., for 37 years. Aspiring young authors often seek advice from the James B. Duke professor of English, but Price recommends students teach rather than write.

"Occasionally, I'll have students come to me who say they want to write, but I rarely encourage them," Price said in a phone interview. "It is not necessarily the best existence. You sit in a room by yourself all day long — talking to no one — and try to write something that in all likelihood won't ever be published."

Price's battle with spinal cancer is recounted in his memoir, "A Whole New Life" (1994), the basis for a PBS-TV documentary — which premieres June 29 — by four-time Academy Award winner Charles Guggenheim.

Although he never quit writing, the spinal cancer permanently confined Price to a wheelchair. Despite being almost completely incapacitated, when asked how his illness affected his most recent work, Price takes a practical angle.

"I get more work done now, if anything," he said, explaining that a personal assistant helps him with the more menial tasks of answering mail and completing household chores.

"The Promise of Rest" forms the closing panel to a trilogy titled "A Great Circle," which the author started in 1975 upon publishing "The Surface of Earth" and later, "The Source of Light." Focusing on universal topics of family loyalty, race, suffering,

"(Writing) is not necessarily the best existence. You sit in a room by yourself all day long — talking to no one — and try to write something that in all likelihood won't ever be published."

Author Reynolds Price

freedom and duty, "The Promise of Rest" tells the story of how a professor and his wife deal with their only son returning to their Southern home to die of AIDS.

Although Price has had friends and relatives die from the disease, the novel is hardly a political statement, he said. The author said he remained upbeat as he penned "The Promise of Rest."

"I was not trying to make a specific statement about the AIDS virus," Price said. "It is a tragedy that this disease has spread so quickly and taken so many lives with it. However, writing can be a cold thing. I wasn't crying over my typewriter every day."

Price has published volumes of poems, essays, translations from the Bible and numerous plays. His books have been translated into 16 languages.

A life-long North Carolina resident, Price is often compared to such Southern literary heavyweights as William Faulkner for his distinct regional voice. However, Price dismissed the labeling in his characteristic drawl, noting Midwesterners are not so different from his neighbors.

"I think the label of 'Southern writer' has been placed upon me from outside," he said. "Really — in this day and age — I don't think Southerners are much different from the people in rest of the country."

ABJECTION OF BLACK CULTURE ANALYZED

Film targets sexually violent messages in rap

Jonathan Gourlay
The Daily Iowan

Nihilistic violence, gangsta chic, misogyny, homophobia.

All are elements of "The Darker Side of Black," Isaac Julien's documentary about hip-hop, rap and dance hall music. This effective film promises to disturb and provoke not only rap lovers, but anyone who lives in America and still cares about what's going on.

The documentary is set in Jamaica, America and England and features interviews as well as some music video clips and dramatic footage. Although it sounds like "documentary as usual," the whole of this film is somehow greater than the sum of its parts.

In fact, the documentary is just short of magical. It begins as a rather dry rumination on the shift in Jamaican music from spiritual reggae to body-worshipping dance hall tunes and on how the shift has influenced American hip-hop and rap. However, by the end of the documentary, links between slavery and aspects of black popular culture, phobias and machismo are made clear.

After an accumulation of smart interviews with rap stars, academics, activists, politicians and theologians, the film's point becomes shockingly clear: MTV and certain rap artists are doing nothing less than marketing black abjection and nihilism to black culture.

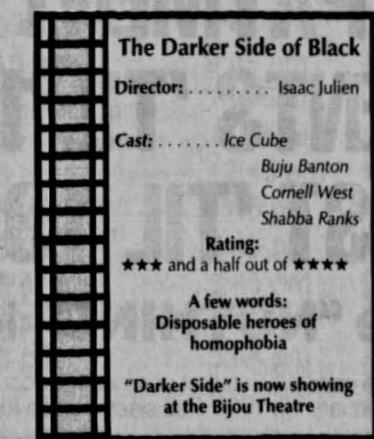

Much of the film takes off from the controversy surrounding Jamaican musician Buju Banton's dance-hall smash "Boom Bye Bye." The song doesn't mince words with its call to anti-gay violence — "Shoot them now / Come let me shoot them ..." — crooned

"The Darker Side of Black," a film by Isaac Julien is showing at the Bijou Theatre in the Union tonight and through Sunday.

in the young Banton's deep bass voice.

Did Banton mean to be taken seriously? And are all the bluster, gun-loving, misogynist hip-hop and rap stars simply indulging in irony? Are they merely living up to age-old stereotypes of the sexually charged, violence — "Shoot them now / Come let me shoot them ..." — crooned

The film says yes — Banton and the others should be taken seriously. These musicians' sexist and homophobic power fantasies stem from hopelessness. The documentary is bold enough to not merely condemn such music as homophobic, but it goes further into where the fear comes from.

Whereas reggae artists such as Bob Marley and leaders like Martin Luther King Jr. offered hope as an alternative to hopelessness, many current artists (and companies supporting them) revel in hopelessness. They go as far as making hopelessness seem sexy and enticing. They sell nihilism on MTV to a willing — if uninformed — audience.

The most eloquent voice in the film is Cornell West, academic and author of "Race Matters." He points out rap music serves as "black self-affirmation (and is) something positive," but West also says it's "something negative ... an attempt to (police) black folk into a homogeneous blob."

The documentary doesn't make the mistake of turning black culture into one great mass. There is a wide range of opinion expressed from within the rap music world, from the cool-headed intelligence of Michael Franti of The Disposable Heroes of Hiphoprisy to the Bible-thumping Shabba Ranks, who has said homosexuals should be crucified.

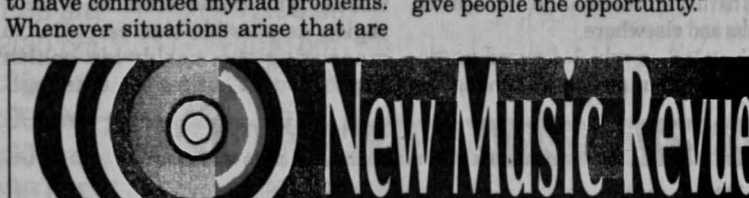

The diversity and talent on display in the documentary give hope that rap and hip-hop artists will remain unflinching in their depiction of real violence and nihilism in black culture — and be able to offer something more than naive gun-waving, woman-bashing, gangsta chic as an avenue to "power."

"The Darker Side of Black" runs with the AIDS-themed documentary "Fast Trip, Long Drop" at the Bijou Theatre in the Union Thursday through Sunday. Call 335-3041 for show times.

New York rockabilly trio bounces into Gabe's

The Frantic Flattops will bring an infectious, rockabilly sound to Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight. The New York band — three dudes with haircuts resembling The Fonz's — will take the stage tonight offering its '90s version of rockabilly, which has been described as Elvis meets the Stray Cats. Band members Too-Tall Paul, Frantic Frank and Sid Baker promise to get the crowd bouncing with tunes like "(I Like) Whiskey Straight Up (My Women Laying Down)" and "Sneak a Peek."

Opening for the Frantic Flattops are the Bent Scepters. Cover will be charged at the door.

Dwight Live

Dwight Yoakam

It's rock 'n' roll with a twang — not to mention one hell of an Elvis remake — and a fiddle or two tossed in for good measure.

Country legend Dwight Yoakam's first-ever live album, Dwight Live, is a contradiction of sorts. The vast majority of this country artist's songs seem like a flashback to '60s rock 'n' roll, while only a handful of the disc's 17 songs sound like genuine country.

But when Dwight actually does country, he's got it down to a fine art. Just when this live CD seems to get bogged down with an effort to be too "mainstream," Yoakam switches into one of his 100 percent, true country ballads — complete with a depressing tale of lost love and a few references to Mama — that made this cowboy famous in the early '90s. It's too bad more of his music isn't preserving such traditional sounds of country.

Despite the album's lack of coun-

New AIDS drug to be dispensed through random selection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first of a promising but still experimental new class of AIDS drugs will be made available free to some 2,000 patients through a government-sanctioned lottery.

Manufacturer Hoffman-LaRoche will offer Invirase to advanced AIDS patients outside current clinical trials of protease inhibitors, drugs that appear to be the most potent yet at reducing the amount of HIV virus in patients' blood.

Twelve companies are racing to develop protease inhibitors, which are designed to keep the virus from reproducing by disabling a crucial enzyme, but none have yet filed an application with the Food and Drug Administration. Still, the FDA agreed that early data showed Roche's drug appeared good enough to give to certain patients before testing is complete, and is discussing a similar arrangement for Merck & Co.'s protease inhibitor.

"We obviously have in hand information at this stage that shows this to be a promising agent," said FDA spokesman Arthur Whitmore.

Violent Internet story protected as free speech

DETROIT (AP) — A federal judge dismissed charges Wednesday against a former University of Michigan student who published a violent fantasy about another student on a computer bulletin board.

Judge Avern Cohn said Jake Baker's publication of the rape / slaying story would have been better handled as a disciplinary matter by the university.

The story named a fellow Michigan student as its victim. Baker, 21, a sophomore, was charged after it went out worldwide on the Internet.

The charge, transmitting a threat over state lines by electronic mail, carries up to five years in prison on conviction.

Prosecutors contended Baker's fantasies about the woman and the discussion of carrying them out against someone constituted transmitted threats. Defense lawyers said Baker's writings were protected free speech.

"The government's enthusiastic beginning petered out to a salvage effort once it recognized that the communication which so much alarmed the University of Michigan officials was only a rather savage and tasteless piece of fiction," Cohn wrote in his dismissal order.

The university had no immediate comment.

Baker underwent psychological testing while jailed on the charges, as attorneys fought over whether he should be freed on bond. Prosecutors said he was dangerous. His attorney, Douglas Mullkoff, called the writings harmless fantasy.

Passengers freed after plane hijacked in Japan

Mari Yamaguchi
Associated Press

HAKODATE, Japan — Riot police stormed a jumbo jet at dawn Wednesday, rescuing 364 people and seizing a hijacker who reportedly demanded freedom for a jailed cult leader and threatened to blow up the plane with everyone aboard.

Despite his threats, police said no explosives were found and the man apparently was acting alone.

The hijacker was hustled from the plane by police dressed as airline employees. His arms were bloodied and his head was swathed in a towel.

All the passengers were safe, but one woman had a light stab wound and one police officer was kicked during the raid. Five people were taken to the hospital, according to Japanese TV.

The raid capped a nearly 16-hour ordeal that began when the All Nippon Airways flight was hijacked just before noon Tuesday on a flight from Tokyo to the northern city of Hakodate by a man brandishing an ice pick.

Immediately after the raid, ambulances with flashing lights converged on the plane. Passengers, looking drawn and tired, filed down steps and onto waiting buses. One man cradled a baby wrapped in a blanket.

TV footage showed police scrambling up small ladders through hatches into the plane's underbelly. The film was not broadcast until after the raid was completed.

Some police were wearing chemical-protection gear, while others carried riot shields. One contingent, in plainclothes, advanced quietly and opened a gate behind the plane just before the larger force moved in.

"I'm relieved it's over and that all the passengers appear to be safe," airline president Seiji Fukatsu told reporters.

The plane's pilots were shown shaking hands.

Anxious relatives had kept a vigil at the airport in this seaside town, 425 miles north of Tokyo, as the blue-and-white Boeing 747 sat on the runway.

Japanese across the nation were glued to their television sets to watch the drama unfold. Television stations went to nonstop live coverage.

Captives making fugitive calls on mobile phones told blindfolded passengers' growing hunger, thirst and fear as the hours passed. News reports said crew members in the cockpit heard children crying in the passenger cabin.

Airport officials said conditions on the plane worsened by the hour. With blinds drawn and doors shut, the plane was hot and humid. Since the flight was short, no food and only limited drinks were on board, and the hijacker refused to let airport workers deliver more supplies.

The passenger list included seven infants and more than 60 people over the age of 60, officials said.

Soldiers, military helicopters, fighter planes and chemical-weapons experts were put on alert almost immediately after the plane landed in Hakodate.

The airline said its crew relayed word by a closed radio channel that the hijacker was an apparent member of the cult accused in the Tokyo subway attack, and that he demanded the release of jailed guru Shoko Asahara, charged with murder in the subway attack.

NO-CONFIDENCE VOTE REBUKES GOVERNMENT

Yeltsin foes voice aversion

Julia Rubin
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The opposition that has been building in Russia's parliament to President Boris Yeltsin crystallized Wednesday with a no-confidence vote in his government — a measure that is non-binding but sharpens political tensions.

The catalyst was the weeklong hostage crisis in southern Russia, which left scores dead before ending with the escape Tuesday night of the Chechen hostage-takers back to the hills of Chechnya.

Dissatisfaction with Yeltsin goes deeper than the hostage crisis or even the unpopular Chechen war itself; those voting no-confidence Wednesday cited a number of sometimes-conflicting reasons.

By the same token, such fractures in the opposition could enable the president to weather this political assault as he has previous ones.

The State Duma, parliament's lower house, passed the no-confidence measure 241-72, with 20 abstentions. A simple majority of 226 votes in the 450-member house was required.

The motion was mostly symbolic. Only if parliament passes another no-confidence resolution in the next three months would Yeltsin have to choose either to dismiss Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin and his Cabinet, or to dissolve parliament and call parliamentary elections.

Yeltsin's job is not at stake. The president is popularly elected and appoints the prime minister and Cabinet.

But the Communist Party and hard-line Agrarian faction are going further, trying to collect the 150 signatures needed to call a vote on impeaching Yeltsin.

"The conflict between the branches of power ... well known to us from 1992 and 1993 has been unleashed anew," Deputy Prime Minister Sergei Shakhrai told reporters.

Associated Press

Yeltsin disbanded the former, Soviet-era parliament in 1993 after months of confrontation, and used tanks to end armed resistance by its defenders.

His opponents have long sought a no-confidence vote. Their last attempt, in October, fell 32 votes short.

Debates now are especially charged since parliamentary elections are just six months away, with presidential elections expected next June. Yeltsin has not said whether he will run.

Presidential aide Sergei Medvedev accused parliament of playing politics with the hostage crisis and told the Interfax news agency Yeltsin "has no reason not to have confidence in the government."

Many of those voting no-confidence said they opposed Yeltsin or the heads of Russia's security ministries, rather than Chernomyrdin, who took charge of the faltering hostage negotiations.

Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov said he was protesting "economic reforms (that) mean full-scale genocide." Agrarian leader Mikhail Lapshin cited Yeltsin's 1993 storming of parliament among his reasons.

Grigory Yavlinsky, head of the reformist Yabloko bloc, said he hoped Chernomyrdin would form a new Cabinet, and voted no-confidence "to show we are opposed to a civil war in the North Caucasus," around Chechnya.

Yavlinsky — a likely presidential candidate — told Interfax, "all the problems of our policy are caused by the president's unpredictability."

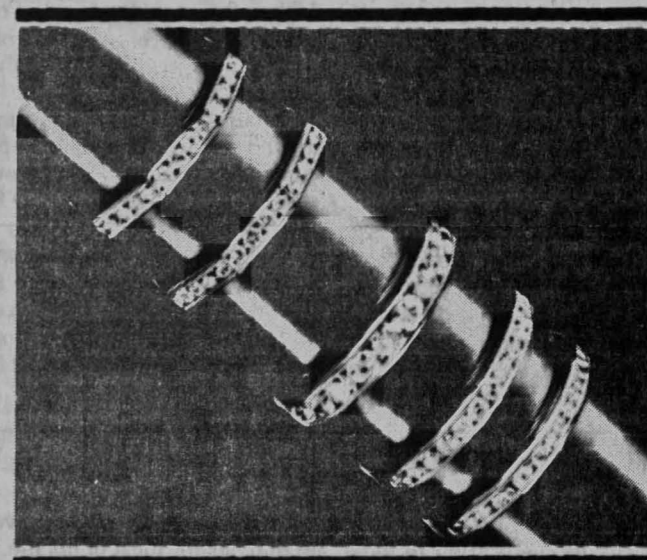

For years, Yeltsin has been dogged by rumors of ill health and accused of erratic behavior and drinking. While the hostage crisis unfolded, he went to the Group of Seven summit in Canada, and was seen on television attending the circus and rambling and gesticulating dramatically at news conferences.

LAWSUIT

This doesn't belong in the court system — it belongs in a real-estate "for sale" office. If Rasmussen has asthma, she is going to have trouble in Iowa no matter what."

Rasmussen, who moved to the house after Seydel began raising pigeons, said in the petition she has "sought mediation and demanded on various occasions from 1994 to 1995 that the defendant abate the nuisance created by his acts."

No court date has been set.

about 15 years," Seydel said. "They are homing pigeons, and racing them is a hobby of mine."

Though homing pigeon racing is the No. 1 sport in Belgium and can mean big money on the U.S. coasts, Seydel said it is less popular in the Midwest.

"It's sort of like a poor man's horse racing," he said. "I'm in a combine (racing cooperative) with some people from neighboring cities, and we have a truck haul the pigeons down to Oklahoma and release them there. The one that travels home fastest wins."

In the coop, Seydel talked about his birds with pride. Seydel can recall the racing history of each one.

"See that one there," he said, singling out one of 30 almost identical birds. "That was the combine bird of the year — fourth in the 400 (mile race) and first in the 500."

Seydel said he has about 60 pigeons, some of which are capable of flying up to 400 miles in about eight hours.

"The biggest concern is (the pigeons') health," Seydel said. "My pigeons are healthy, active and well-fed, unlike those in the wild who give pigeons a bad name."

To maintain the pigeons' health, Seydel pumps fresh water into the coop and gives them food and vitamins daily. He also lets them out for exercise every day.

Seydel said breeding is critical to the overall success of his pigeons.

"Winners breed winners. And the only way to tell how well a bird races is to fly him."

The pigeons rely on the earth's magnetic fields to find their way home, but Seydel said things don't always work out.

"You could let 30 young birds out and lose half of them," he said. "They will get caught in bad weather, the magnetic field will mess up or they simply won't be able to find their way home. Last Saturday I sent nine birds down to Afton, Oklahoma, and only seven returned."

Seydel's hobby also represents a significant financial investment.

"Most birds would sell for about $50 each, but I have one breeder I wouldn't take $500 for," he said, adding that although he has thousands of dollars worth of birds and equipment, it is not a commercial venture.

But Seydel is not the only one to derive benefits from the pigeons.

"I take them to my mother's nursing home and the residents come out on the lawn and watch them release — they enjoy it a lot," he said.

Seydel raised pigeons as a child, and he now brings them to local elementary schools and gives presentations to sixth-grade classes.

"It's my hobby," Seydel said. "That's what I worked all my life for — to have free time and do what I enjoy."

GRADUATION

a very substantial amount of money if the students graduate in four years rather than five."

Juliet Kaufmann, director of the Undergraduate Academic Advising Center, said it had received two new half-time advisers to help ease the burden accompanying the plan.

The plan appeared to appeal to orientation participants — 207 out of 399 incoming freshmen, or 52 percent, signed up for the plan Wednesday.

The plan is generally a good idea, said Bill Skarr of Lombard, Ill. Skarr, his wife, Jackie, and their daughter, Christine, were at the UI for Christine Skarr's orientation. However, Bill Skarr was concerned students on the plan would be treated differently than regular students.

"For parents with children who aren't on the plan, there should be some kind of guarantee there won't be preferential treatment for the students who are on the plan," Bill Skarr said. "You need an open statement from the university that everyone will be treated equally."

Nathan denied there would be any special treatment given to the students on the plan.

Although she said it was never discussed publicly, Jackie Skarr said she was worried the plan might place extra stress on her daughter.

"I asked myself if I thought the plan would be asking too much of Christine, forcing her to work too hard," she said. "But I think she can do it. It's discouraging for parents to think it will take their children five years to get out of college, especially if there are other children coming up. It can be done with some dedication."

Christine Skarr plans to major in nursing, a field with only a 20 percent four-year graduation rate. However, she said she still wants to sign up for the plan.

"I think I'm going to sign up for it," she said. "If I can't do it, I can always drop off the plan. At my small group, the academic advisers were really pushing for it. They were really recommending it."

STUDENT DEATH

Hager is taking medication to fight off the possibility that his body might reject the kidney and must do so for the rest of his life."

Hager, a resident of Waukon, Iowa, said White was distraught when doctors decided against using a live donor. Hager's parents, John and Denise, and his older brother, Mike, were all tested as possible donors, but it was White's kidney that matched most closely. Of the six blood antigens sought for matches in a transplant test, White's matched five.

"He talked about donating, but I didn't really want him to donate. I mean, he was a year older than me and he had a life to live, too," Hager said. "When I was first diagnosed, he said 'hey man, you can have one of mine — I have an extra.'"

In December 1994, Hager was diagnosed with a disease called ANCA — a rare illness affecting the lungs and kidneys. Hager is currently in remission, but without White's kidney he would have been on dialysis for most of his life.

This type of transplant situation is rare, said Barbara Schanbacher, UIHC transplant coordinator.

"We've seen this once — maybe 1985 or '86 with another organ," she said. "This is very unusual."

Needed organs most often come from the patient's immediate family, but Schanbacher said siblings and parents are not automatically the best donors.

"It's not necessarily unusual," she said. "Many times, the parents are only a half-match."

Services for White were held Wednesday in Waukon, and Hager was upset he couldn't attend. The situation's poignancy was far from lost for Hager, who said he's fortunate to have a new kidney, but misses his friend.

"I guess it's good. It's nice knowing he's a part of me and that's how it will always be," he said. "I don't really consider myself lucky. I just wish I still had him here."

the stormy tenure of former Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders.

Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., chairwoman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee that approved the nomination 9-7, voted with the Democrats on Wednesday. But she still opposes Foster, calling him "the wrong person to step into this badly damaged office at this time."

The 57-43 vote to cut off debate and clear the way for a final confirmation vote fell three votes shy of the 60 needed. Supporters have one more chance to prevail — at 2 p.m. EDT Thursday — but their chances appeared slim.

"I'm not through yet and we're going to do our best to win it," Clinton said.

"It's very tough, but we're going to try," said Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., a leading Foster booster who is usually more upbeat.

Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., and other supporters said they had singled out five Republicans who might possibly change their votes. But they would not name names.

The vote Wednesday was to stop a threatened filibuster by Phil

Gramm, R-Texas, who is running for the GOP presidential nomination, as is Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole. Eleven Republicans sided with the Senate's 46 Democrats.

Democrats accused other Republicans of voting for reasons having little to do with the nominee himself.

"Dr. Foster is being crucified on the altar of presidential politics," said Sen. James Exon, D-Neb.

Gramm suggested Foster held "radical views about abortion" and said, "I do not believe those views represent traditional American values. I do not believe they represent the will of the American people."

Dole said, "Somewhere out there among America's hundreds and thousands of physicians, there is a man or woman whose past actions and statements would not divide the American people and this chamber."

He suggested that Clinton himself had been thinking ahead to the elections.

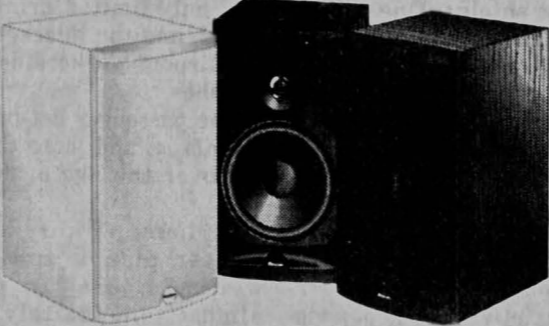

"This nomination was meant to try to drive a wedge between Republicans on the issue of abortion. President Clinton made a calculated political move," Dole said.

Jordan's jersey switch costs Bulls $100,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA fined the Chicago Bulls $100,000 Wednesday for allowing Michael Jordan to wear No. 23 during the playoffs instead of No. 45.

The fined was assessed by Rod Thorn, the league's vice president of basketball operations.

For Game 2 of the Eastern Conference semifinals against the Orlando Magic, Jordan switched back to the No. 23 jersey he wore during nine seasons with the Bulls. When Jordan returned to the NBA after a brief retirement, he chose No. 45, which he wore for 17 regular-season games and the first round of the playoffs.

After Jordan's surprise switch, the league fined the Bulls $25,000 for failing to notify the league of the number change. At the time, the league said more fines would be levied if Chicago continued to allow Jordan to play as No. 23.

The $100,000 fine includes $25,000 for each additional game in which Jordan wore No. 23.

Davis: See ya' later L.A.

Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Al Davis
apparently has decided to move the Los Angeles Raiders back to Oakland, raising the prospect of the nation's second-largest city being without an NFL team.

A source close to the NFL told
The Associated Press that the move back to Oakland was a "done deal."
But NFL spokesman Joe Browne said today that "any discussion of a done deal is premature."

Broadcast reports said the Raiders would move in time for the 1995 season, but that could not be confirmed. Davis in the past has indicated the team was moving out of Los Angeles, but deals could never be finalized.

Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, would not confirm.

"I don't know what's going on, so help me God," Davis said today from his home in Marina del Rey.
"Everyone's doing a lot of things.
This went on two weeks ago."

Steve Ortmayer, who used to

"Any discussion of a done deal is premature."

Joe Browne, NFL spokesman work for Davis, said the move was not imminent.

"Every indication I have is that the guy (Davis) is staying in Los Angeles and will be playing at the (L.A.) Coliseum this year," Ortmayer, now the director of football operations for the St. Louis Rams, told The Daily Breeze of Torrance.

Just two months ago, the NFL approved the move of the Rams from Anaheim to St. Louis and said it was committed to keeping a team in the Los Angeles area.

"We've obviously had discussions with the Raiders in recent days and weeks," Browne said, "but we have not been told Al Davis has made a decision at this point."

Earlier today, though, KCBS-AM reported that Oakland Coliseum officials will formally announce the return to Oakland, where the Raiders played their first 22 seasons. Also, sports commentator and former Raiders coach John Madden reported on radio station KNBR that the team will be returning.

Coliseum officials did not immediately return a phone call to the AP this morning.

The Raiders have played their home games at the Los Angeles Coliseum since winning the right to move in an antitrust suit and abandoning Oakland in 1982.

But Davis announced earlier the team would not play in the Coliseum this fall, citing poor conditions and lack of luxury suites at the aging facility.

Davis has been considering whether to move the Raiders to a stadium to be built by 1997 at Hollywood Park in Inglewood or return to Oakland.

Oakland's offer is for an $85 million modernization of the Oakland Coliseum, including the luxury suites Davis wants. The improvements would be publicly financed, with bonds to be repaid largely through revenues generated by ticket sales.

Murray-led Goodfellow dominates Fitzpatrick's

The Daily Iowan

Somebody needs to break up Goodfellow Printing.

In the headline Prime Time Basketball league match up, the Kenyon Murray-led squad knocked off Fitzpatrick's 125-112.

Russ Millard led the way for Fitzpatrick's with 35 points and 17 rebounds.
Murray poured in 38 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and dished off 6 assists for Goodfellow Printing who improved to 3-0.

all this week

Although Millard and Murray nearly matched each other in the final stat line, it was Murray who got the better of his Prime Time opponent in the head to head match up.

Millard had his way down low against the inexperienced big men of Goodfellow Printing. But when Murray was assigned to guard him in the second half, the 6-foot-9 Millard got shut down.

"I thought I would be a little more physical with Russ than J.R. (Koch)," Murray said. "He's not used to banging with guys bigger than him."

"I took my chances guarding him and I think I did a pretty good job in the second half."

The 6-5 Murray said that he relishes
the opportunity to play against the bigger Millard.

"It's fun to play against the guys you played with all year," Murray said. "I took a David vs. Goliath attitude with Russ."

While Millard and Murray were the center off attention, perhaps the biggest highlights of the game came from Davenport North High's Tyree Ricky Davis.
Davis put down four acrobatic dunks to bring the City High crowd to its feet.

In the other early game, Active Endeavors improved to 2-1 by edging First National Bank 98-97.

Iowa State's Klay Edwards poured in 31 points and grabbed 14 rebounds for Active Endeavors.

'MAJOR LEAGUE' COMES TO LIFE

The Tribe's been opening some eyes in Cleveland

In 1985, Mike Hargrove was a member of the Cleveland Indians and his teammates included Brett Butler, Joe Carter, Julio Franco and Andre Thornton.

That was the good news.
The 1985 Indians went on to finish in the A.L. East cellar with a pitiful record of 60-102.

A decade later Hargrove is still with the Indians. But now he's managing a World Series contender instead of playing basement ball.

Maybe it was the two movies mocking the team's futility (Major League I and II) or maybe they just got tired of being compared to the Chicago Cubs.

In any case, the Cleveland Indians are making a serious charge at their first American League title since 1954.

The first noticeable difference
is the pitching staff.
Denny Martinez, Orel Hershiser and Charles Nagy give the Indians a solid 1-2-3 punch in the starting rotation. All three are in a position to be Cleveland's
first 20-game winner since 1974.

Shannon
Stevens

The bullpen, led by converted starter Jose Mesa, is sharp as well.

Mesa has amazed everyone by becoming one of baseball's top closers. He currently has 17 saves and is tied with California's Lee Smith for the league lead.

Cleveland can pummel its opponents at the plate as well. Kenny Lofton, Manny Ramirez and Carlos Baerga continue to scorch opposing pitchers at well over a .300 clip.
Jim Thome (15 HR), Ramirez (14),
Paul Sorrento (13) and Albert Belle (12) are all among the A.L. home run leaders.

Detroit manager Sparky Anderson has already acknowledged Cleveland's talent.

"You want to know what makes them good? Tell me one bad player they've got... Go ahead, I'm waiting... They don't have one bad player, and that can help you win some games can't it?" Anderson said in an interview earlier this season.

The competition in the other divisions isn't very intimidating.
Boston is off and running in the A.L. East, but what will happen when Erik Hanson and Tim Wakefield start to throw hanging curves.
And their closer is Ken Ryan? Who is this guy and why isn't he in the minors?

California and Texas are the top threats in the A.L. West.

The Angels couldn't find their offense with a microscope and a starting rotation that features the likes of Shawn Boskie and Scott Sanderson is guaranteed its fair share of losses.

As for the Rangers .... (Yawn!)
Maybe they'll find some pitching and Mickey Tettleton and Juan Gonzalez can only hit so many home runs.

The A.L. Central race is over!
Cleveland has already won the division for all intensive purposes.
I know it's only June, but the Royals just can't hit. The only run the Royals have left in them is provided by an aging Vince Coleman.

One thing is for sure. The Indians will win at least 90 games and earn a trip to the World Series.

There they'll meet the Cincinnati
Reds in the "Battle of Ohio."

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Benes shuts out Cubs for win No. 2

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Steve Finley scored from second base in a sixth-inning rundown and made a leaping catch in the ninth to preserve the lead.

Andy Benes (2-5) threw a six-hitter and won consecutive starts for the first time in a year.

He struck out seven and walked one.

Dodgers 10, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Delino DeShields hit a grand slam and Tom Candiotti allowed three hits over seven innings Wednesday as Los Angeles beat St. Louis 10-1.

DeShields homered in a seven-run second that also included a two-run homer by Mike Piazza.

Rockies 6, Marlins 3

DENVER — Jason Bates drove in two runs with a double and bases-loaded walk and the Rockies snapped a five-game losing streak.

The Rockies avoided the three-game series sweep at home as Bill Swift (2-2) ended a personal two-game losing streak. He struck out seven, walked five and allowed three runs over five innings.

Giants 6, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — Robby Thompson's suicide squeeze-bunt double broke a ninth-inning tie and the Giants prevented Pittsburgh's first sweep of the season.

Mark Carreon hit his third homer in two games and doubled ahead of Glenallen Hill's tying RBI single in the eighth for the Giants.

Dave Burba (3-1) pitched the eighth for the victory and Rod Beck got his 12th save despite allowing Jacob Brumfield's solo homer in the ninth.

Mark Parent, who hit a three-run homer in the first, struck out to end the game with the tying run on second.

Astros 5, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Greg Swindell won for the first time in a month and Tony Eusebio drove in three runs as the Astros completed a three-game sweep.

Swindell (4-3), winless in five starts since beating Montreal on May 21, allowed one run on four hits over six innings, struck out four and walked one as Houston capped a 7-2 road trip. They started the trip with a four-game winning streak on the road.

Reds 3, Braves

CINCINNATI — John Smiley and two relievers combined on a three-hitter as the Reds snapped the Braves' seven-game winning streak.

Smiley (6-1) allowed only Jeff Blauser's single leading off the fourth over seven innings before being pinch hit for. Hector Carrasco gave up a single to Mark Lemke in the eighth and Jeff Brantley, who earned his 10th save, gave up Fred McGriff's 10th homer in the ninth with two outs.

Phillies 6, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Tom Marsh, taking Lenny Dykstra's spot on the roster and filling Gregg Jefferies' place in left field, hit two home runs as the Phillies won their fifth straight.

Third-string center fielder Dave Gallagher had three hits and scored twice as the banged-up Phillies won their seventh in a row on the road. The Mets lost their third straight.

Red Sox 3, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — Backed by home runs from Mo Vaughn and Mike Greenwell, Erik Hanson gave up four hits in eight innings against baseball's best-hitting team Wednesday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians 3-1.

Associated Press

Cubs pitcher Steve Trachsel fires a pitch against the Padres Wednesday in San Diego.

by beating Baltimore.

The Yankees, who managed only six hits, won for the first time in 19 games when scoring fewer than four runs.

Brewers 10, Blue Jays 9

TORONTO — Jose Valentin's grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning lifted Milwaukee over Toronto.

With the Brewers trailing 8-6, Greg Vaughn worked reliever Woody Williams for a leadoff walk and Darryl Hamilton chased Williams with a two-out single, the only hit he allowed in three innings. David Hulse greeted Mike Timlin (3-1) with a single to load the bases.

Tigers 1, Rangers 0

DETROIT — Lou Whitaker hit the first home run allowed by Bob Tewksbury this year, and Detroit made it hold up against Texas.

Felipe Lira (4-3) allowed five hits in eight innings before Juan Gonzalez doubled with one out in the ninth.

Mike Henneman got the last two outs for his 11th save as the Tigers salvaged one win in three games with the Rangers.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4

CHICAGO — John Kruk's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 5-4 victory over the Seattle Mariners on Wednesday night.

Tim Raines led off the 10th with a single off Bill Risley (1-1) and advanced to second on a wild pitch. Frank Thomas followed with a single to left, moving Raines to third.

FIRST 10-GAME WINNER

Appier shines under new manager

Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Maybe it's no mere coincidence that Kevin Appier's finest season as a pitcher is happening during Bob Boone's first season as a manager.

Boone must have learned a thing or two about pitchers during a 19-year career cajoling, consoling and catching them. When he replaced Hal McRae as field boss of the Kansas City Royals, he brought along a wealth of insight into Appier's world.

"Being a catcher, he has a real good feel for pitchers," Appier said Wednesday. "He helps out extremely well in strategy for pitchers, how we go into making our game plan and the information we have."

Boone doesn't call pitches but is active during the game.

"I know I'll never get there. But, the closer I get to perfection, the better I feel."

Kevin Appier, Kansas City pitcher

"He has a good feel for what will work," said Appier, whose 10 wins lead the American League. "It's very helpful to have him there."

It's even more helpful to have fastballs that zip and breaking pitches that bite the corner of the plate.

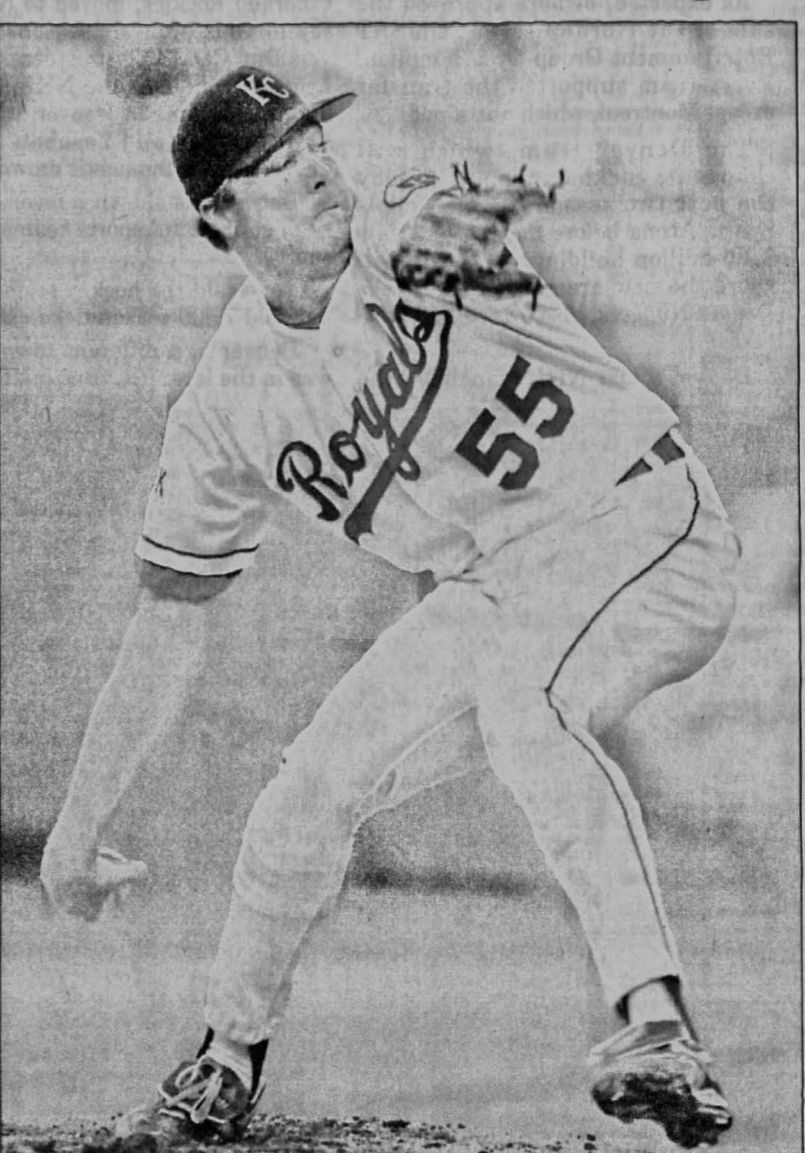

"Overall, I've been in a very good groove," said Appier (10-2), who also ranks near the top of the league with 95 strikeouts and a 2.19 ERA.

He's been cruising since opening day, when he no-hit Baltimore for 6 2-3 innings in a 5-1 victory.

"My rhythm has just been a lot more consistent. That's a huge thing in pitching. I think my fastball on average has been better this year. And my other pitches are more consistent."

Dedication to his craft is another factor. Appier is known as one of the Royals' hardest workers.

"My record of 10-2 is very good. But I hope for more perfection," he said. "I know I'll never get there. But the closer I get to perfection, the better I feel. I would like to see myself progress faster than I have."

Associated Press

Kansas City Royals starting pitcher Kevin Appier delivers a pitch to Toronto Blue Jays' Devon White during the first inning Saturday.

Unlike many pitchers, Appier cannot reel off his week-to-week statistics as easily as his phone number.

"I look at my stats every once in awhile. I look at them mostly after the season is over. I'm not a guy who has his head buried in stats," he said. "They're more significant at the end of the season."

Although much has been said of Boone's four-man rotation, it doesn't seem to have any detrimental effects on Appier's arm.

"I don't feel tired at all," he said. "We haven't exactly been in a four-man. It winds up being like a five-day rotation. The way we've done it so far, I feel very good about it."

Former heavyweight champion Mike Tyson stands outside Harlem's Apollo Theater after addressing a crowd Tuesday in New York.

Tyson settles suit

Anthony Jewell
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Tyson has settled the civil suit filed against him by the beauty contestant he was convicted of raping four years ago, the boxer's lawyer said Wednesday.

"All I can tell you is that the matter has been resolved and Mike is looking to the future and not to the past, and that's why he resolved this," attorney Nathan Dershowitz said from his office in New York.

Dershowitz would not say how much money — if any — is involved.

Tyson was convicted in 1992 of raping Desiree Washington in a hotel room while both were in the city for Indiana Black Expo, a cultural festival. He was released March 25 after serving three years of a six-year term at the Indiana Youth Center.

Washington filed the civil suit against the former heavyweight champion in federal court in June 1992, seeking unspecified damages for assault, battery, false imprisonment and emotional distress.

Trial had been scheduled for July 24 in Indianapolis before Judge Larry J. McKinney in U.S. District Court. The agreement has not been filed and the case remains on his docket, McKinney said.

Top seeds fall during tune-up

Associated Press

Gigi Fernandez, a semifinalist at Wimbledon last year, may need more tuning to get that far in this year's tournament.

Thirteenth-seeded Chanda Rubin beat No. 5 Fernandez 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 on Wednesday in the third round of the Eastbourne championship, a grass court warmup event in England for Wimbledon, which begins Monday.

In other upsets, No. 10 Lori McNeil beat No. 4 Helena Sukova 7-5, 6-3; No. 11 Nathalie Tauziat beat No. 6 Lisa Raymond 6-3, 6-4; and unseeded Christina Singer beat No. 3 Brenda Schultz-McCarthy 7-6 (7-4), 6-3.

All moved into the Eastbourne quarterfinals.

Ninth-seeded Zina Garrison Jackson, winner of last week's Birmingham tournament, squandered three match points before losing to No. 8 Yayuk Basuki of Indonesia, 5-7, 7-6 (10-8), 6-2.

Top-seeded Kimiko Date and No. 2 Natasha Zvereva avoided upsets with straight-set victories, and seventh-seeded Marianne Werdel-Witmeier was forced to withdraw due to a lower back strain, allowing Ines Gorrochategui to advance.

Residents warned of local bank scammer

The Iowa City Police Department is alerting Iowa City residents to an attempt made to pull the "bank examiner's scheme" Tuesday.

An alleged bank examiner, who called himself Mr. Andrews, asked an Iowa City senior citizen to withdraw a large sum of cash and turn it over to him.

Detective Ed Schultz warned Iowa City residents to be suspicious and aware of the scheme.

"If someone wants to examine your account, tell them to meet you right at the bank," Schultz said.

If a person asks to examine a bank account, the account holder should demand identification and ask a lot of questions. Schultz said bank examiners usually have official bank ID.

A person contacted by a suspicious examiner should contact the bank or the police department for advice, Schultz said.

"If someone ever asks you to take out large amounts of money in small bills, the red flag should immediately go up," Schultz said.

Prosecution claims Simpson's hands swelled due to medication lapse

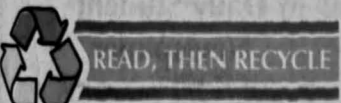

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A prosecutor accused O.J. Simpson of skipping his daily dose of arthritis medicine so his hands would swell, making them too large to fit into gloves linked to murder, a courtroom transcript showed Thursday.

Simpson's lawyer, Johnnie Cochran Jr., called the allegation by prosecutor Christopher Darden "paranoid."

In private talks with Superior Court Judge Lance Ito Wednesday, Darden demonstrated the prosecution's dogged determination to put Simpson's hands in the murder gloves one way or another.

Players say they're not informed

Associated Press

Basketball agents have been behind the move, angry that new union head Simon Gourdine has kept them uninformed about the state of negotiations. The agents and league's top players apparently think Gourdine is being too conciliatory in bargaining.

The petition was filed with Daniel Silverman, the NLRB's New York regional director, by Jeffrey Kessler, a lawyer who has represented the NFL Players Association and Grant.

Gourdine held two telephone conference calls today with player representatives. Gourdine and the league were said to have agreed to an outline for a six-year deal.

Twenty of the league's 27 teams were represented on the call.

"It was very productive," union president Buck Williams said. "We assured them we weren't operating in a vacuum. All the players looked at the deal in its entirety. Like any deal, you'll find some goodies and some things you don't think are favorable."

The decertification move angered Williams, who on Tuesday accused agents of "trying to dictate policy."

"This union is run by and for players, not agents," he said. "Apparently, these agents have heard bits and pieces of the deal we are working on, and they don't think certain parts of the deal are good for their business. They have responded by claiming the players are uninformed, which could not be further from the truth."

Hakeem Olajuwon, who led the Houston Rockets to their second consecutive NBA title last week, criticized the headline stand of some of his colleagues.

"It's a good deal when both parties are happy," Olajuwon said. "The NBA has made such tremendous progress in the last seven or eight years."
