Rabbi points to journalist as famous 'Deep Throat'

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A rabbi who stood by President Nixon throughout Watergate said Monday he believes journalist Diane Sawyer was "Deep Throat," the source who helped the Washington Post uncover the scandal.

Sawyer, who was an assistant in the Nixon press office at the time, said the claim was laughable.

And Bob Woodward, the Post reporter who has never revealed the identity of his source, said there is no truth to the story.

"For 20 years we've always said the source 'Deep Throat' was a man," said Woodward, now an assistant managing editor at the Post. "There is no evidence that Diane Sawyer in her kind of subsidiary role in the Nixon White House would have that kind of knowledge."

Rabbi Baruch Korff, 80, said he based his opinion on Sawyer's "special relationship" with press secretary Ron Ziegler, and his observation Sawyer had advance knowledge of what was going on at the White House.

Simpson trial update

Bruce Weir, a world-renowned genetic scientist, admitted his calculations of genetic frequencies in mixed blood stains were "consistently wrong" because of a computer glitch. He redid the math and testified the odds of matching blood samples in evidence used against O.J. Simpson were lower than previously thought.

Weir's testimony is expected to be followed by scientific analysis of dog and human hairs from the crime scene that prosecutors say tie Simpson to the murders.

Exotic cat mauls 2-year-old

Fugitive feline transplanted to Iowa City animal clinic

Brian Bergstein
Associated Press

CHICAGO — A woman whose pet jungle cat mauled her 2-year-old niece whisked the animal away to Iowa, defying a court order to have it killed and tested for rabies.

Sari Mintz, who owns the exotic, 20-pound cat, could go to jail for contempt of court, and her niece is undergoing a grueling series of rabies shots that might not have been necessary had the pet been destroyed for testing.

The child, Alice Mintz, needed 200 stitches on her face and scalp after she wandered into her aunt's suburban backyard June 18 during a Father's Day party. The golden jungle cat, which had previously bitten three people, was on a tether.

DuPage County Judge Bonnie Wheaton, acting Friday at the request of the girl's parents, ordered the cat killed and the carcass examined. By then, Mintz had spirited away her pet to the clinic in Iowa City where she bought it.

"She holds the animal very close to her," said her lawyer, Frank Howard. "It's just a terribly unfortunate incident."

Lions and tigers and bears — in Iowa City? According to one pet store owner, it's very possible.

The recent incident in Chicago during which an Iowa-purchased jungle cat mauled a two-year-old girl has sparked the question: Where are these exotic animals coming from? Don Morrison, owner of Pet Degree, 1971 Broadway, said a sales barn in Kalona holds six auctions per year and has a selection of animals ranging from coyotes to baby bears.

"I've been there and I saw jungle cats being sold," Morrison said. "There was even a lion that they were selling."

Iowa City resident Kenneth McCullough said he has attended "I've been there and I saw jungle cats being sold."

"I've been there a couple of times," he said. "If you wanted to buy a juvenile raccoon for a kid you could do it, or wanted a few emus for breeding, you could do that, too."

Finding exotic animals to sell is easy, Morrison said.

"I have a catalog that lists all different types of animals in the U.S. from ants to zebras," he said. "It lists breeders and wholesalers, so I just have to call around to find somebody who has what you're looking for."

President Clinton walks off the stage of the San Francisco War Memorial Opera House after speaking at a ceremony commemorating the 1945 signing of the United Nations charter.

U.N. milestone sparks criticism

Tom Raum
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — President Clinton observed the golden anniversary of the United Nations at the site of its birth Monday by suggesting it "does not work as well as it should" and must trim its operations.

At the same time, Clinton denounced Republicans in Congress who have urged a U.S. pull-back from the body and blocked funds for the recent expansion of its peacekeeping mission in Bosnia.

"Turning our backs on the U.N. is no solution. It would be shortsighted and self-destructive," Clinton told an audience of U.N. delegates and other diplomats.

Speaking in the ornate War Memorial Opera House, where President Truman addressed original framers of the charter 50 years ago, Clinton conceded some complaints about the United Nations were valid.

With flags of organization's 185 nations on the stage behind him, Clinton said "not all the critics of today's United Nations are isolationists."

He said the same budget-cutting under way in the federal government must be carried out by the United Nations.

"Over the years it has grown too bloated," he said. "We must consider major structural changes. The United Nations simply does not need a separate agency with its own acronym, stationery and bureaucracy for every problem."

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — Dr. Jack Kevorkian has started a clinic and was present there Monday for the death of a woman with Lou Gehrig's disease. It was the 24th death he has attended.

Erika Garcellano, 60, died at the clinic Kevorkian established "for the purpose of alleviating the suffering of patients," his attorney, Geoffrey Fieger, said.

Garcellano had suffered for at least three years from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease, a degenerative nerve disorder, he said. She had been living at a nursing home in Kansas City, Mo.

Fieger would not say how Garcellano died. Garcellano's two sons, John and Paul, and her friend Marjorie Jackson were also present when she died, Fieger said.

Assistant Oakland County Prosecutor Larry Bunting said he was not aware of Garcellano's death.

"We don't have anything from the Sheriff's Department and we're reserving judgement until we know what the facts are," Bunting said.

The clinic, in Oakland County north of Detroit, was named the Margo Janus Mercy Clinic after secret list, but the total pool of 298 prospects has been whittled down to a manageable number, said committee chairman Steve Collins.

"We're down to the list of off-campus interviews. I'm not indicating exactly how many that is, but I think it's fair to say it's in the neighborhood of 12," Collins said. "[The interviews] will come very quickly."

Collins refused to say exactly when or where the off-campus interviews will take place. However, he did say the committee is still on schedule to have the search process completed by the summer session's end. The committee will choose whether to do on-campus interviews of finalists during the summer session.

The off-campus interviews will involve a few candidates being interviewed at a central location. Individual interviews will last about two hours, and Collins said the committee is trying to assure none of the candidates will run into each other.

"We are taking great pains to make sure the candidates don't bump into each other at the off-campus interviews," Collins said. "There is space between the interviews and they have elaborate directions on how to get where the interview is scheduled."

For example, Collins said if three candidates are to be interviewed at the same place on a given day, they will receive three different sets of directions on how to get to the interview.

Whitewater inquiry clarifies Clinton role

WASHINGTON — A report prepared for federal regulators found that an Arkansas savings and loan was tapped for $88,000 to keep Whitewater Development Co. afloat during a critical four-year period when its co-owners, President Clinton and his wife, made no investment at all.

The report found "no documentary evidence" that the Clintons were aware of the source of the funds, which usually came from other companies controlled by their partners, government officials said Monday.

FIVE THEFTS REPORTED EACH WEEK

Bike heists plague Iowa City residents

Christie Midthun
The Daily Iowan

Biking is a serious hobby for some people in Iowa City, and the only form of transportation for many others — but with so many bikes in the area, theft is common.

Up to five bike thefts are reported to the Iowa City Police Department each week during every season, Sgt. Craig Lihs said. And usually the bicycles are stolen right from the owner's front porch.

"They leave them on their front porch, assuming it's safe," Lihs said. "Obviously, it's not."

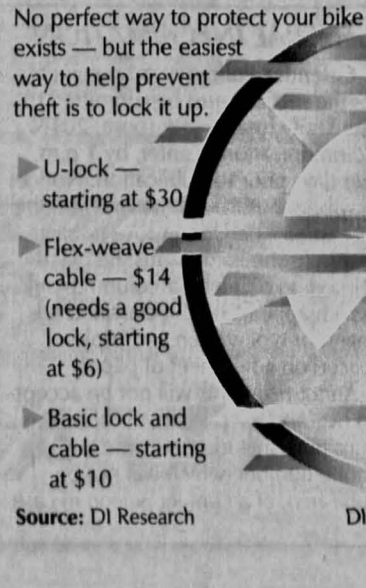

But taking extra precautions, such as storing a bike inside, doesn't prove to be infallible. Iowa

No perfect way to protect your bike exists — but the easiest way to help prevent theft is to lock it up.

- U-lock — starting at $30
- Flex-weave cable — $14 (needs a good lock, starting at $6)
- Basic lock and cable — starting at $10

Planting delay puts extra stress on farmers

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

The flood of '93, extremely low crop prices in '94 and this year's late spring, which has caused a major delay in planting, are resulting in dangerously high stress levels for Iowa farmers, a UI researcher said.

Until just recently, the ground has been too wet for farmers to plant crops due to excess rainfall during the past two months, said LaMar Graft, agriculture safety specialist at the UI-based Center for Agricultural Safety and Health.

These delays pushed planting back so far it is too late for many farmers to plant corn, Graft said. This can result in thousands of lost dollars in income, causing stress levels around Iowa to soar, he said.

"A farmer's livelihood depends on raising a crop," Graft said. "If they can't put in a crop, they can't harvest a crop and they have no income."

Graft said weather and commodity prices are the two main stress points for farmers because they have no way of controlling either.

"Farmers are not able to price their commodities and sell them," he said. "They have to take what the market gives them. Imagine if a car dealer couldn't set his own prices, and someone walked in and offered him $10,000 for a car. Well, it might have cost $12,000 just to make, but that's what the market demands."

Excessive stress can result in physical problems like ulcers, headaches and heart trouble, as well as emotional problems like depression and paranoia, Graft said.

Joyce Webb, a farmer in Sigourney, Iowa, said her family has been extremely busy trying to get their crops planted and has felt the stress of the shortened season.

"Everyone's on edge," she said. "We're not nearly as struck as someone who started [farming] four or five years ago — those people are stressed. They've had so many bad years. They're struggling. You'll be seeing a lot of ground switching hands."

Although most of the state is now planted, Graft said the dangers of stress are still lingering.

"There's a real concern when there's a period of real high stress followed by a less intense, but continuing stress," he said. "It's often enough for farmers to experience lasting effects — they can't shift back into normal working conditions or they may be depressed."

To learn how to combat the effects of stress, Graft started the "Farm Partners Assist" program based in Clayton and Fayette counties in northeast Iowa.

The program's main purpose is to spread awareness about the dangers of not dealing with stress and show people how to recognize warning signs in others, Graft said. She

"We've diversified. We raise emus and ostriches and hogs and cattle. The trick is to not put all of your eggs in one basket."

Joyce Webb, a farmer in Sigourney, Iowa added the main way to curb stress is for communities to reach out to farmers so they can talk about their feelings and problems.

"When someone is almost in a crisis situation they need some kind of intervention," Graft said. "They need someone who cares to step in and talk to them to diffuse the situation."

Graft said he is mainly working with feed and seed dealers, teaching them stress management techniques they can pass on to farmers with whom they work. Because dealers work with farmers on a regular basis, they often notice when a there's change in attitude that may signal high stress levels.

"We hope we can present enough information so as they do their sales they'll recognize things going on that usually don't," Graft said. "And they'll see that those changes need to be dealt with."

The program is also working with school districts in northeast Iowa, showing teachers how to recognize stress in farm children, Graft said.

During the 23 years her family has been farming, Webb said she has learned the best way to be successful and decrease worry about crops is to have a backup form of income.

"We've diversified," she said. "We raise emus and ostriches and hogs and cattle. The trick is to not put all of your eggs in one basket."

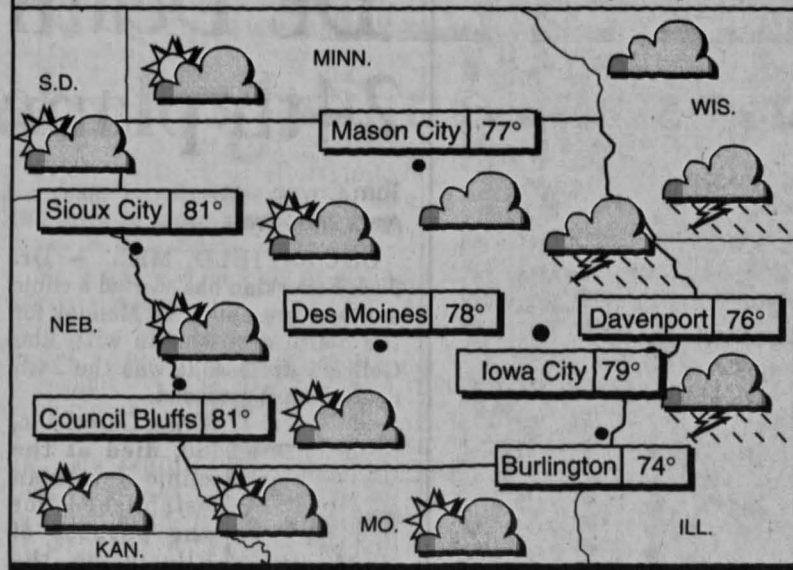

Webb said when it's impossible to plant and her family gets overly stressed, they try to get away from the farm and relax. She said farmers have to deal with their stress and take each day as it comes.

"Certain people can farm and some just can't," she said. "They can't sleep; they drive themselves nuts. People have got to get away from home and take a break. You can't just sit home and worry about it. And you can't give up."

Country singer digs hole for "hits"

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Garth Brooks is tired of his greatest hits album, so he's burying it — sort of.

"The Hits," announced as a limited edition package six months ago, has sold 6 million copies, and about 4 million are still in stores.

That's enough for the country singer, so he's planning a little ceremony Friday in front of the Capitol Records office in Los Angeles with the album's master recording.

"We want to visually make it apparent that 'The Hits' is over, so we're burying the ... master of 'The Hits' in L.A. in front of the towers, where it all started in 1988," Brooks said.

The original tapes of the music, however, will remain in the Capitol vaults.

"Melrose" premiere will surprise viewers

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — "Melrose Place" is heading for a big bang, with dire consequences for some of the show's characters.

The premiere of the hit series' fourth season will include scenes from a bomb blast storyline that were cut from the past season's finale because of the Oklahoma bombing, according to TV Guide, quoting sources close to the show.

Mackenzie Hart, played by Morgan Brittany, is killed by the blast, and Kimberly (Marcia Cross) faces charges and is institutionalized.

Alison (Courtney Thorne-Smith) loses her sight in the explosion, and ex-boyfriend Billy (Andrew Shue) returns to her side, making his new bride Brooke (Kristin Davis) jealous.

Fiddler takes music show's spotlight in two roles

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — There will be little rest for Eddie Stubbs on the stage of the Grand Ole Opry.

He became the weekly country music show's newest announcer over the weekend, replacing Charlie Douglas who retired. But he also plans to continue with his fiddle playing.

Stubbs is a longtime member of the Johnson Mountain Boys, a bluegrass group, and also plays in the Kitty Wells' band.

"It was a dream I had as a youngster to play fiddle on the Opry, and I have been afforded that opportunity. Getting to work as an announcer is another dream come true," Stubbs said.

Miss America looks forward to dancing after reign expires

NEW YORK (AP) — Miss America Heather Whitestone is looking forward to the end of her busy yearlong reign. She needs time to dance.

"I feel like part of me is blah," she said in the July-August issue of Fitness magazine. "I love being Miss America, but when I don't have time to dance, I feel like something is missing."

Whitestone, 22, deaf since she was a toddler, dances to the vibrations.

Before being crowned Miss America, she could dance two to three hours a day, five days a week. Traveling almost 5,000 miles a week doesn't leave much time for that.

"When I dance, I forget about my deafness," she said. "I forget about everything."

Rajagopal founded The Environmental Professional, the association's quarterly journal, in 1979. As an interdisciplinary journal, it collects environmental research, essays and reviews from all sorts of powerful people — biological and social scientists, government officials, engineers and "the management," he said.

During his six years as editor-in-chief, Rajagopal taught at the UI, traveled to neighboring states to teach short courses on the Chautauqua Indians and studied Iowa water quality and policy.

"(Being editor) was almost like being a part-time professor but with no salary," Rajagopal said. "I got excited about other things so I let some other sucker take over. You can only eat cake for so many days before you want something else."

But now the progressive professor is ready to sneak away at the end of the summer to write a book on screening.

In layman's terms, screening is how to hone in on a problem very quickly, Rajagopal said.

"What excites me more and more now is how to make changes in society," Rajagopal said. "I am not interested in studying to publish a paper. It is far more important to know what to study than how to study. How you choose which problem to study is far more important than studying a problem."

For the last two years, Rajagopal, along with former state legislator David Osterberg, has traveled the Midwest and met with groups of elected officials interested in natural resources and environment. Since the state officials allocate funds and make environmental laws, it is important to teach them how to choose the most pressing environmental issues, he said.

"When you leave home to go to school, why not go to Cedar Rapids?" Rajagopal asked. "You figure out over the years the shortest route. We need to establish simple ideas and get them into laws and regulation. It is like kindergarten stuff."

Policy captures his attention because laws carry power and change.

"Every day we are faced with ethical questions and personal decisions (to be environmentally conscious), but a law requiring every government building to recycle is more powerful than one person's decision," Rajagopal said.

Jay Emerson, a graduate assistant who worked with Rajagopal at his legislature lectures for one summer, said Rajagopal enticed the officials.

"He is a real wheeler-dealer, a man with a mission sort of thing," Emerson said. "He comes off as inspired and inspirational — almost religious. He wanders around, thinks off the top of his head — and they like that. It is out of the norm in political circles."

Rajagopal said his work at the UI, the journal and his plans to hide away and write are moving him away from academia.

"I am a scientist becoming a scientist-slash-activist," he said.

The transition is noticeable to Emerson. Rajagopal has been his adviser for four years and has aided him in his dissertation on landfill gas.

"When I first came here he was in the tinkering mode," Emerson said. "Now he is in the big picture mode. He has moved beyond just measuring issues and problems; he's taken a step back and has a more holistic view."

DEVELOPMENT FOR RALSTON CREEK SLATED

Plans to beautify city proposed

Kathryn Phillips

Burlington Street could be made into a boulevard if plans to connect the near south side with downtown Iowa City are approved by the Iowa City City Council in September.

Developers presented plans to make the near south side — an area including Gilbert, Court and Clinton streets — more pedestrian-accessible and less disjointed from downtown in a work session Monday night.

The long range vision of Burlington Blvd. is complete with a slim green median and lamp posts, the restoration of the old train depot and an emphasis on beautifying Ralston Creek. Government buildings and UI utilities would be included in the conformation effort.

"Refer to the analogy of a patchwork quilt," a Kansas City developer, who is involved in project design, said. "There is a government patch, a downtown piece, a residential piece, the old depot piece and a university piece. What is the stitching that holds this together, but allows each to have its own identity?"

Gateways, lamp post art, green space and new building designs would link the different pieces together, complementing downtown while maintaining its own aura, the developer said.

Councilors supported the idea to implement a downtown atmosphere beyond the Pedestrian Mall, but were concerned the near south side would lose its own identity.

"We should encourage not just a blending, but create a unique form of unity among itself," Councilor Ernie Lehman said.

Photographs showed how the south side has no defining atmosphere.

"We can assert right now that the near south side has no distinct pattern," the developer said. "That is a revelation. We want to create a holistic environment with all elements related to each other, a unified way of doing things."

Developers will return in September to present a final plan for further council discussion.

"We can assert right now that the near south side has no distinct pattern. That is a revelation. We want to create a holistic environment with all elements related to each other, a unified way of doing things."

Uniting or creating a new central business district will require approval from the Iowa Department of Transportation, the UI and intricate working government facilities having a past history of separatism, said Councilor Karen Kubby.

"We have enough separatism already," Kubby said.

STATE TO PROPOSE TAX RELIEF

Branstad beaming as budget balances

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The state is set this week to end its budget year with a surplus approaching $400 million, about 10 percent of overall annual spending, officials said Monday.

They said the surplus is a crucial link in an increasingly complex budget picture that will include renewed calls for tax cuts, at the same time that Congress is likely to begin shoving programs back to the states.

The relative sea of black ink is something of a remarkable turnaround in the state's financial picture, where only a few years ago the state posted a budget deficit that soared past the $400 million mark.

Since then, a series of spending restraints — coupled with a boost in the sales tax — have brought the state's books in line.

"I think we're going to be in the strongest fiscal position we've been in in modern times."

strongest fiscal position we've been in in modern times," boasted Gov. Terry Branstad Monday.

The state ends its budget year on Friday, and while closing out the books will take months, officials said it's clear that the state's financial health is solid.

Gretchen Tegeler, Branstad's top budget aide, said getting 10 percent of the state's budget into

"I think we're going to be in the strongest fiscal position we've been in in modern times."

Gov. Terry Branstad, on the budget surplus said Tegeler. "That's significant progress over the last three years."

In addition to state belt-tightening, officials have benefited from an economy that's been stronger than any had expected. During the current budget year, state revenues have been forecast to increase by 4.8 percent, but that number is likely to end up closer to 5.3 percent, Tegeler said.

While there are some signs of economic softening, she said the reserve accounts can tide the state through a slowdown.

That's important, both Tegeler and Branstad said, because there are looming demands on the treasury. Branstad this year asked the Legislature for a 15 percent cut in income tax rates.

While that was replaced with a mix of property tax relief and income tax cuts, Branstad said he will push for another income tax package next year, albeit a smaller one.

"We're probably not going to be able to do rate reduction of the magnitude that I recommended last year," Branstad said.

CARSON GETS STOCK

Final figure presented in Younkers bid

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Milwaukee retailer Carson Pirie Scott & Co. is extending its hostile takeover bid for Younkers Inc. one more time, and says it now has access to 51 percent of the Des Moines department store chain's stock.

The growing number of tendered shares is indisputable evidence that Younkers shareholders continue to demand that the Younkers board put Younkers up for sale to the highest bidder, Carson president and chief executive officer, Stanton Bluestone, said in a statement issued Monday.

Carson set Friday as the deadline for its offer to buy Younkers at $19 per share, or about $170 million. Its previous $19 offer expired last Friday.

Carson has revised and extended its offer repeatedly since first offering $17 a share for Younkers last October, but indicated that this could be its final extension.

"While our current intention is to let our $19 per share cash tender offer expire at the end of today's extension to June 30, our desire to acquire Younkers is undiminished," Bluestone said.

Carson owns 11.7 percent of Younkers stock, or about 1.04 million shares. The company said Monday that owners of another 3.5 million shares have accepted its tender offer to buy those shares at $19 each. That gives Carson the ability to buy 51 percent of Younkers stock, but if Carson begins buying those shares it would trigger a "poison pill" takeover defense that would make a takeover prohibitively expensive.

RED RED MEAT TO PLAY WEDNESDAY

File photo

Red Red Meat, an alternative rock band out of Chicago, is scheduled for some raw entertainment Thursday night at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., as it plays from its 1993 release, Jimmywine Majestic. The band shares the bill with Minneapolis' rockers, Polara. Ambush #5 will open.

Chicago band grinds raw rock and blues mix at Iowa City tour stop

Clint Marsh
The Daily Iowan

For a band with so much red in its name, it sure is blue.

Combining the raw power of heavy rock with stylistic Chicago blues, Red Red Meat plugs a hole in the music world that has been open too long.

Red Red Meat's 1993 release, Jimmywine Majestic, embodied the spirit of Chicago's heavier acts with the Windy City's constant release of blues. When asked if he felt Red Red Meat was an important force in the Chicago music scene, vocalist /

"I don't feel like I'm representing my town ... I don't feel like a sports team."

Red Red Meat guitarist / vocalist Tim Rutili guitarist Tim Rutili seemed unconcerned.

"I don't feel like I'm representing my town," he said. "I don't feel like a sports team."

Red Red Meat also takes considerable influence from other bands striving to combine heavier rock and blues, with definite ties drawn to both the Rolling Stones and Royal Trux. Rutili said Jimmywine was pieced together after band members looked through their personal music collections and decided to make an album for themselves.

"We thought, 'Why not make a record that we want to listen to?'" said Rutili. "I like a lot of blues stuff, a lot of country stuff. Blues and country — that's what rock 'n' roll comes from."

Changes in the band's roster have plagued Red Red Meat since its inception. Originally known as Friends of Betty, the band's lineup consisted of Rutili, bassist Glynnis Johnson and drummer John Rowan (who has since risen to power pop fame as Blackie Onassis with Urge Overkill).

Guitarist Glenn Girard was added before Friends of Betty's 1990 Europe tour. Upon returning to the states, Rutili decided a change for the band was in order. Its moniker was changed to Red Red Meat and the members went into deep freeze, playing just a few shows over the next two years.

"We just hung out and played and released a single ('Hot Nikkety Trunk Monkey')," Rutili was quoted in a different interview. "But we were going to be better songwriters."

Brian Deck replaced Rowan on drums in 1992, and Red Red Meat toured with Smashing Pumpkins later that year. The 10-day tour exhausted Johnson, who soon after died at age 32 of an AIDS-related illness. The death shocked nearly everyone who knew her.

"She was sick with AIDS, but even she didn't know until a month before she died," said Rutili in an interview with The Chicago Tribune. "She wasn't an intravenous drug-user; she wasn't promiscuous. It was really scary."

Johnson's death was a large blow to Rutili, who had been romantically involved with her for eight years, but he was determined to keep going. Current bassist Tim Hurley replaced Johnson.

"This was her band," Rutili said. "I think she'd really like what we've done with it."

Rutili described the Jimmywine Majestic follow-up album, Bunny Gets Paid — due out in October — as a way for the band to take a more varied approach to recording. Aside from studio work, Red Red Meat used a four-track recorder on some of the album's songs.

"We wanted to do a more schizophrenic record," said Rutili.

Red Red Meat's current tour is a two-week swing through the South and Midwest, with the band's Iowa City appearance Wednesday at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., as their last act.

With the new album and tour comes the latest membership changes for Red Red Meat. Guitarist Girard was replaced with newcomer Neil Rosario, and one-time Red Red Meater Ben

"We thought, 'Why not make a record that we want to listen to?' I like a lot of blues stuff, a lot of country stuff. Blues and country — that's what rock 'n' roll comes from."

Rutili, on the band's album, Jimmywine Majestic

Masserella has joined the band on a second set of drums. Rutili seemed amused at the concept of two drummers and said the combination was a sight to see.

"They're like wind-up monkeys — like crazy chimpanzees," he said. "There's a lot of jumping around. They must be seen to be believed."

Rutili jokingly hinted at something more than coordinated drumming between Masserella and Deck.

"They're always looking at each other and giggling," he said.

With all the chaos behind the band, Rutili prefers to remain isolated onstage.

"The best shows are when I don't look at anyone," Rutili said.

Red Red Meat will appear Wednesday night at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., with Minnesota band Polara. The groups are touring the Midwest on a double bill, trading off headlining status. Local act Ambush #5

TICKETMASTER CONFLICT CITED

Eddie's spoken: Pearl Jam cancels concerts

SEATTLE (AP) — Pearl Jam's feud with Ticketmaster is taking its toll.

The grunge-rock band is canceling the remaining concert dates on its 15-date, 11-city summer tour. A publicist cited scheduling difficulties.

Pearl Jam had planned its summer tour around sites that didn't use Ticketmaster, the ticket agency that the band has accused of price gouging.

The band instead used the Philadelphia-based agency ETM. Many shows sold out, but Pearl Jam was locked out of many larger venues because most sites with more than 5,000 seats use Ticketmaster exclusively.

Tickets for the remaining shows will be refunded. The cancellations include Salt Lake City; San Diego; Phoenix; Las Cruces, N.M.; Austin, Texas; New Orleans, Milwaukee and Chicago.

The announcement Sunday came a day after the band played for 50,000 people in San Francisco. Neil Young stepped in when singer Eddie Vedder walked off the stage in mid-concert, saying he was ill with the flu.

Courtesy of Sony Music

Pearl Jam called off the rest of its summer tour, citing Ticketmaster as the reason — not frontman Eddie Vedder's health. Vedder walked out of a concert in San Francisco Saturday, telling fans he had the flu. "I just went through the worst 24 hours of my life," Vedder said. About half the crowd left following Vedder's departure.

MANY WORKS UNDOCUMENTED

Smuggled art mystery surrounds African exhibit

Graham Heathcote
Associated Press

LONDON — As the Royal Academy of Arts organizes the largest-ever exhibition of African art, it has faced troubling and often unanswerable questions of how the works were acquired.

"The bulk of the loans are inevitably from Europe and America as that's where the great collections are. The circumstances in which many of the works left Africa is not known," Piers Rodgers, the academy secretary, said.

"Africa: The Art of a Continent," opens Oct. 4 and continues through Jan. 21 at the 227-year-old Royal Academy in London's Piccadilly. Its only other showing will be at New York's Guggenheim Museum, opening in June 1996.

The 750 works will span 1.6 million years and cover the whole of Africa, something never previously attempted, the organizers said.

It will start with the earliest known human artifact, a hand-made stone tool from Olduvai Gorge in Tanzania, and go on through rock paintings 29,000 years old from the Apollo 11 cave in Namibia and down to recent times.

Rodgers said many of the works came out of Africa with the beginnings of Western trade with the continent and in the missionary and colonial period, and are undocumented.

He acknowledged the question of art works being outside their country of origin is a contentious one but stressed increasing sensitivity in recent years: museums

"The questions about how these works left Africa and if it is right to show them have been foremost in our minds all the time ... We never knowingly show stolen property but we cannot refuse to show great works of art."

Royal Academy secretary Piers Rodgers deciding against buying works without a provenance and attempts to regulate the trade in antiquities.

"Our first concern is to put on the best show we possibly could. We went all over the world for them, as well as in Africa," Rodgers said. "The questions about how these works left Africa and if it is right to show them have been foremost in our minds all the time."

"Part of the answer lies in the colonial period so far as it is history. A private institution like the Royal Academy devoted to art is not really in a position to right the wrongs of history. If that can be done at all it is a matter for governments," the secretary said.

"We try to take a balanced view. We never knowingly show stolen property but we cannot refuse to show great works of art. They cannot be kept in the cellar forever."

Rodgers said he regretted that Britain has not ratified a UNESCO convention of 1970 against illicit traffic in art.

He said pillaging of art works in Africa and thefts from African museums is still going on, as well as the looting and destruction of African archaeological sites.

Tom Phillips, a British artist and Royal Academician who has traveled widely in Africa, said the exhibition will show the primacy of Africa in the history of art.

"African art has been labeled by us for years as primitive, but the truth is that it was too sophisticated for us to understand," said Phillips, the curator of the exhibition.

"The exhibition will show that Africans can make anything, and often did before anyone else."

The exhibits will include stone and wood carvings, statues, reliefs, basketry, totems, snuff bottles, textiles, bronzes, gold ornaments and other jewelry, pottery figures, mosaics, manuscripts, Arabic calligraphy, portable goods of nomads and Mameluke art from Cairo.

The exhibition has been conceived as a journey around Africa

"African art has been labeled by us for years as primitive, but the truth is that it was too sophisticated for us to understand."

British artist and Royal Academician Tom Phillips and divides the continent into seven geographical areas: Egypt and Nubia; Ethiopia, Sudan and the eastern coast, including the island of Madagascar; southern Africa; the Congo and central Africa; coastal west Africa; the sub-Saharan region and north Africa.

Petrine Archer-Strow, a lecturer at the Courtauld Institute of Art in London, said the exhibition catalog she is coordinating will contain essays by 120 scholars in archaeology, ethnography, anthropology and art history and will be the most comprehensive survey of the subject yet published.

The exhibition is the centerpiece of "africa95," a British season devoted to all the arts of Africa, starting Aug. 12 and lasting until the end of this year.

LOCAL ARTS BRIEFS

Lesbian writers to perform original work Friday

A trio of local women known as P.O.W. will present "Theatre of the Voice" — a collection of original work to be read in celebration of Iowa City pride month — on Friday, June 30 at 7 p.m., in Clapp Recital Hall.

P.O.W. (which, according to the women, is an acronym for a number of interesting "P.O." phrases) is made up of local lesbians, Mona Shaw, Sherry Hall and Cherry Muharji.

During the mixed media presentation, the women will perform original works touching on motherhood, racism, classism, women as artists, religion and growing old. The performance, co-sponsored by the UI Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Staff and Faculty Association, is free and open to the public.

Gregory Peck to speak at Hancher

Actor Gregory Peck, who appeared as the unforgettable Atticus Finch in the silver-screen classic "To Kill A Mockingbird," is slated to speak at Hancher Auditorium Sept. 17 at 3 p.m.

Peck will show clips from many of his most famous movie roles, talk about his film career and invite audience members to ask questions.

Tickets for the 1995-96 Hancher season will go on sale July 5 at the Hancher box office. The sale opening will be marked with free popcorn and ice cream on the Hancher patio, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

New Music Revue

Green Apple Quick Step Reloaded

Whether it is nostalgia or profit driving the recent resurgence of lazy, fuzzy, '70s-style rock, myriad bands are eager to join in the fun. Whether the production influence of Stone Gossard (Pearl Jam, Brad) or childhood memories is responsible, Green Apple Quick Step is certainly one of them.

From the drowsy opener "Hotel Wisconsin" through 11 other tracks, Reloaded is not unlike numerous other trips down memory lane offered by a growing number of artists. Blues-tinted rock replete with hooks, meandering solos and a few revisionist touches form much of Green Apple Quick Step's musical style (these are, after all, the post-postmodern '90s).

"Ed #5" is a laid-back, guitar-heavy romp with lyrics as confusing as those of the average Smashing Pumpkins song. Biting at its heels is the refreshingly unadorned garage rock of "No Favors," a powerhouse led by the vocals of bassist Mari Ann Braeden that puts the rest of the album to shame.

The remainder can be filed away with the work of Collective Soul, April's Motel Room and their brethren as proof we don't need to relive the 1970s. With the exception of "Los Vargas" — an oasis in this desert of recycled sound and uninspired ideas — it's just all been done before and is bound to be done again.

Further Down the Spiral

Nine Inch Nails

Although disco balls and strobe lights are proud inventions of the 20th century, the dance remix has existed for hundreds of years.

Classical composers dabbled with remixes via fantasias on themes, variations on piano works and even 12-inch versions of Beethoven symphonies, but it's the rare musician who can do a song better the second time around.

Nine Inch Nails disproves the schlock theory of remixing with Further Down the Spiral, an 11-song collection serving as the evil-twin doppelgänger to 1994's The Downward Spiral.

Lead singer Trent Reznor employs a stable of electronic production gods for the CD, including Aphex Twin, Rick Rubin and members of Coil. They neatly sidestep standard remixing devices — wailing hallelujah background singers and cosmic-fart synthesizer solos — in pursuit of a sleeker beast.

Throughout the CD, unidentified sounds layer disarmingly with Reznor's Midwestern twang. A sickening calliope noise starts the fun on "Piggy (Nothing Can Stop Me Now)," and Reznor whispers like a cloistered nun on "The Downward Spiral (The Bottom)."

While many of the remixes stick closely to original structures, several deviations make this collection worth having. A "polite" version of "Eraser" is an amusing, sing-songy chant. Over and over again, Reznor repeats his little grocery-list lyrics: "Find you / taste you / use you / scar you / fuck you / break you."

The singular disappointment about Further Down the Spiral is four songs included on the domestic version aren't on the import, and vice versa. Otherwise, this disc is absolutely the most unhappiness money can buy.

Prostitute serial killer nabbed after case dead-ends

MIAMI (AP) — Five months after the search for the killer went cold, a building-supply salesman was charged Monday with strangling six prostitutes and dumping their bodies in residential neighborhoods.

Rory Enrique Conde, 30, admitted picking up the streetwalkers and killing them at his apartment, Metro-Dade police said. The only explanation he gave for the four-month spree was that he was having problems with his estranged wife, police said.

"It stemmed from his broken relationship with his wife," and prostitutes "were easy targets," Sgt. John Metvin said.

Conde was jailed without bail on six counts of murder. Prosecutors did not immediately indicate whether they will seek the death penalty.

The killer had terrorized streetwalkers along a strip of low-rent motels and strip malls on the edge of middle-class Hispanic neighborhood along the Tamiami Trail, a major east-west thoroughfare feeding downtown Miami.

Dubbed the Tamiami Trail Stranger, he dumped the bodies of the five women and one male cross-dresser in neighborhoods just off the road.

The spree ended in January with few clues and thousands of dead-end leads.

Both sides hold firm in luxury auto tariff battle

GENEVA (AP) — The two top negotiators in the U.S.-Japan auto dispute squared off this evening in a final push to avoid punitive tariffs that would price luxury Japanese cars out of the American market.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto both came to the table talking tough, although both sides said they wanted to avoid a trade war.

Hashimoto, arriving from Tokyo, said it would be "difficult" to reach an accord before the Wednesday deadline for threatened U.S. sanctions against Japanese cars worth nearly $6 billion.

The United States insists that Japan open its auto market to foreign cars and car parts or be hit with tariffs that would virtually price $5.9 billion worth of Japanese luxury cars beyond U.S. consumers' pocketbooks.

The two trade chiefs began their talks about sunset, and sources close to the talks have predicted negotiations will have to work right up to the deadline if they are to strike a deal.

German air power to lead operations in Bosnia

BONN, Germany (AP) — German fighter jets will take to the skies over Bosnia to counter Serb missile radar this summer in what could be their first combat mission since World War II, the government announced Monday.

Officials portrayed the Cabinet's decision as a step in Germany's postwar maturation, showing a willingness to take risks in support of NATO allies. They hope shouldering responsibility will boost German clout in the European Union.

"This is a sensible government that makes sensible decisions," Chancellor Helmut Kohl said in Cannes, France, where he was meeting with other union leaders.

The $241 million mission, expected to win approval in parliament Friday, followed months of agonizing over whether German troops should venture into the Balkans, where the Nazis slaughtered hundreds of thousands of Serbs and others in World War II.

The United Nations has approved deployment of the 12,500-member force, but hasn't authorized it to react against the Serbs if they attack or hinder U.N. blue helmets.

Egyptian president survives attack

Terry Leonard
Associated Press

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Gunmen fired a fusillade of bullets today at the motorcade carrying President Hosni Mubarak from the airport to a summit of African heads of state. He escaped unharmed and flew back to Egypt.

Two vehicles tried to block the motorcade as it passed the Palestinian embassy en route to the opening session of the Organization of African Unity meeting, said organization officials and Ethiopian sources, all speaking on condition of anonymity.

Gunmen inside the vehicles and possibly from a nearby rooftop began shooting at the motorcade, and at least one bullet hit Mubarak's black armored Mercedes-Benz. Upon his return to Cairo, the president said he was fine.

It was unclear who the gunmen were, but two other plots have been reported against Mubarak over the past three years during a campaign by Muslim radicals to topple Egypt's government and install strict Islamic rule.

It was the most serious attempt on Mubarak's life since he was elevated to the presidency in 1981 after a radical Islamic group called Jihad assassinated President Anwar Sadat during a military parade in Cairo.

Conflicting reports emerged about today's attack and the ensuing shootout with Egyptian and Ethiopian security agents.

Ethiopian officials said seven gunmen — five inside the vehicles that blocked the motorcade and two atop a nearby building under construction — opened fire. But workers at the construction site said the men shooting were Ethiopian soldiers assigned to protect organization dignitaries using the airport road.

Organization officials initially said four attackers were slain, two escaped and one was captured. But a Ethiopian Foreign Ministry statement later said two assailants and two Ethiopian security men were killed.

The statement made no mention of a captured gunman or the total number of assailants involved, and the Foreign Ministry refused to comment further.

The statement said the assailants "were of Arab origin," but said they had not been identified.

A man claiming to represent the Muslim fundamentalist Vanguard of Conquest group called a Western news agency in Cairo praising the attack.

"We welcome the attack on Mubarak," the man said in Arabic. "We will finish him the next time."

ATHLETES TARGETED

Drug tests in schools favored by high court

Laurie Asseo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Public schools can require drug tests for athletes, whether or not they are suspected of drug abuse, the Supreme Court said Monday, ruling that privacy rights sometimes must yield to the fight against drugs.

"School sports are not for the bashful," the court said in ruling six to three that random drug tests do not violate student athletes' right to privacy. The justices said the Constitution allows an Oregon school district to bar a teenager from his school football team for refusing to take a drug test.

"Deterring drug use by our nation's schoolchildren is at least as important as enhancing efficient enforcement of the nation's laws against the importation of drugs," Justice Antonin Scalia wrote for the court.

"It seems to us self-evident that a drug problem largely fueled by the 'role model' effect of athletes' drug use ... is effectively addressed by making sure that athletes do not use drugs," Scalia added.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote in dissent that the ruling means millions of student athletes, "an overwhelming majority of whom have given school officials no reason whatsoever to suspect they use drugs at school, are open to an intrusive bodily search."

Ethiopian policemen inspect a rocket-propelled grenade found in a house a few meters from the place where Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak was ambushed Monday. Unidentified officials said the house was rented by the gunmen who attacked Mubarak's motorcade on his way from the Addis Abeba airport to attend a meeting of the Organization of African Unity.

He urged Egypt to "live according to the Koran, not sell off our country to America."

The president's entourage returned to the Addis Ababa airport within minutes of the attack and he flew back home.

Cabinet ministers and truckloads of soldiers and police met the president at Cairo International Airport afterwards. Mubarak waved with both hands as he left the presidential plane.

His sons, Alaa, 30, and Gamal, 28, went aboard the aircraft, then emerged with him. Gamal wiped away tears as he followed his father down the ramp. The president wore a perfectly pressed dark gray suit.

"Whatever happens, Egypt will not be shaken and we will not give up fighting terrorism," Mubarak, 67, told an airport news conference, referring to the Islamic radicals.

"As you see I look sound and safe and fine," he said. "I am a believer and I have always thought that God is protecting me."

Mubarak said his vehicle was 150 yards from the Addis Ababa airport when it came under attack.

"Suddenly I found a blue van blocking the road, and somebody jumped on the ground and a machine-gun started, and I realized there were bullets coming at our car," he said.

The Egyptian information minister, Safwat El-Sherif, said nobody in Mubarak's party was hurt, but one of the president's bodyguards was reported wounded.

A Palestine Liberation Organization official at the embassy, who refused to give his name, said Youssef Rajeb Radi, the PLO ambassador in Ethiopia, was shot in the leg.

Ethiopian police escorted journalists to a gray stone house down a side road 150 yards from the ambush site, which they described as the gunmen's hideout.

The police said they had recovered two footlockers from the house, each containing one Russian-made rocket propelled grenade and one AK-47 assault rifle.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency, quoting unidentified Ethiopian officials, said the house had been rented to a Sudanese, but police and the Ethiopian Foreign Ministry declined to comment. Egypt accuses Sudan of backing Islamic fundamentalists

Weather conditions delay launch of shuttle for Russian link

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The weather forecast was bleak for NASA's third attempt in five days to launch space shuttle Atlantis on a flight to link up with the Russian space station Mir and bring home an American astronaut.

Thunderstorms reduced the chances of good weather for Tuesday's 3:32 p.m. liftoff to 30 percent, NASA weather officer Ed Prisela said Monday. More bad weather was forecast for the rest of the week.

Atlantis was drenched during launch attempts on Friday and Saturday. Technicians had to dry about 15 shuttle thrusters.

NASA has only seven to 10 minutes each day to send Atlantis on the most fuel-efficient route to Mir. Thunderstorms could be a problem until July 3 or 4, Prisela said.

If Atlantis isn't up by August, NASA's Norman Thagard and his two Mir-mates will have to return to Earth later that month in a Russian Soyuz capsule. They have been aboard the space station since mid-March.

Russian and the United States plan seven Atlantis-Mir dockings over the next two years to prepare for construction of an international space station.

The exhibition is the centerpiece of "africa95," a British season devoted to all the arts of Africa, starting Aug. 12 and lasting until the end of this year.

LOCAL ARTS BRIEFS

Lesbian writers to perform original work Friday

A trio of local women known as P.O.W. will present "Theatre of the Voice" — a collection of original work to be read in celebration of Iowa City pride month — on Friday, June 30 at 7 p.m., in Clapp Recital Hall.

P.O.W. (which, according to the women, is an acronym for a number of interesting "P.O." phrases) is made up of local lesbians, Mona Shaw, Sherry Hall and Cherry Hanjani.

During the mixed media presentation, the women will perform original works touching on motherhood, racism, classism, women as artists, religion and growing old. The performance, co-sponsored by the UI Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Staff and Faculty Association, is free and open to the public.

Gregory Peck to speak at Hancher

Actor Gregory Peck, who appeared as the unforgettable Atticus Finch in the silver-screen classic "To Kill a Mockingbird," is slated to speak at Hancher Auditorium Sept. 17 at 3 p.m. Peck will show clips from many of his most famous movie roles, talk about his film career and invite audience members to ask questions. Tickets for the 1995-96 Hancher season will go on sale July 5 at the Hancher box office. The sale opening will be marked with free popcorn and ice cream on the Hancher patio, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

as well, after all."

On Sunday, the girl's parents changed their minds about having the animal destroyed.

"If the cat is that important to (Sari Mintz), then for the sake of family harmony we will ask the state's attorney not to pursue legal remedy further on behalf of Alice and not to pursue destruction of the cat," they said in a statement.

Despite the change of heart, the DuPage County state's attorney is pursuing the cat's return, said Nancy Wolfe, chief of the office's civil division.

Mintz, a spokeswoman for the Illinois State Toll Highway Authority, was in New York City on a business trip and could not be reached Monday. She could face jail time until she complies with the court order, Wolfe said.

Alice began treatment for rabies over the weekend and was resting at home Monday after having her stitches removed under general anesthesia, said her family's attorney, Richard Stavins.

She will need two rabies shots in her head and buttocks over the next two weeks unless the cat, named Cabo, is killed and found to be free of rabies.

Although Cabo has received rabies shots, a veterinarian testified Friday that the shots are designed for domesticated cats and are not approved by the Food and Drug Administration on exotic Asian jungle cats.

The three-year-old cat, a native of Asia, bit three people last year, said Jean Hennessey, a warden for the county Animal Control Board. But the other victims, including a 10-year-old neighbor girl, never pursued destruction of the cat for rabies testing.

Mintz will donate her cat to a zoo if it doesn't exhibit symptoms of rabies while it's under observation at the Iowa clinic, Howard said.

ANIMAL DEALER

"There's a big problem with selling exotic animals (at the auctions)," he said. "They don't have to bother with codes. Therefore, they can sell the animals at half the cost of what I can because they don't need to buy insurance or pay for employees."

However, Jerry Tubaugh, a Belle Plaine resident who sets up the auctions for the Kalona Sales Barn, said they must follow regulations from a variety of groups including the United States Department of Agriculture and the Department of Natural Resources.

"We lease the barn, which is USDA approved; get our consignments by Thursday night; hold the auction Friday and Saturday; and we're out of there and gone by Sunday night," Tubaugh said.

He said the auctions sell exotic animals, including Bengal cats, hedgehogs, many different types of deer, buffalo, and occasional African spox.

Tubaugh said his auctions provide a service to people wanting to raise exotic animals, in addition to keeping a variety of species populated.

"I don't own anything or raise anything," he said. "I just help put together excess stock to sell and help propagate the species."

Tubaugh said the Chicago incident was isolated and it should not have an effect on what animals people should be allowed to own.

"This type of incident gets people all excited and riled up," he said. "They don't understand and would rather just ban wild animals. It could have been a dog or a horse and you can't do anything about it. It's pretty isolated, but people just need to keep their animals where that doesn't happen."

The Wild Exotic Animal Law states an owner may sell an exotic animal to a person if the prospective buyer has a state-signed license. The state bases license approval on the animal type and the individual interested in buying the animal.

"I cannot sell a jungle cat to someone unless they have a permit," Morrison said. "If the state issues a permit to an idiot, then I can do nothing about it."

The Johnson County Animal Control has jurisdiction over Morrison's store, and he said they make frequent visits during which the entire store is checked.

"They'll check everything," he said. "They'll say, 'That rabbit cage is dirty; you better clean it' or 'the mice are out of water. You better fill it.' They do a good job at keeping a good pet store from becoming a bad pet store."

But Morrison said the law fails when it comes to the auctions because the USDA and the DNR rarely send officials to check them.

SEARCH

Collins also introduced what was the first mention of how the on-campus interviews might proceed. On-campus interviews will be conducted after the off-campus interviews are finished and about six finalists are chosen.

Collins said finalists might be asked to participate in sessions dealing with UI topics rather than emphasizing meetings with certain groups, such as UI vice presidents.

Collins said it would be a departure from the usual procedures used for presidential searches.

"Our goal is to make as effective use as we can of the two-day interview period to provide as much access as we can to the campus community," Collins said. "Essentially, it would consist of a number of sessions focused on a particular topic. In the past, meetings have often been focused on a particular group. We're at least thinking about adding a number of sessions focusing on a number of themes — undergraduate education, for example."

Collins said people with a particular interest in a certain topic would be invited to participate in the sessions, making them open to all levels of the UI community, he said. They would most likely be held during the first day of on-campus interviewing.

BIKE THEFTS

City resident Lynn Ansher's bike was stolen from her locked garage on South Clinton Street.

"The only people who can get into the garage are people who live in that apartment building," she said. "I couldn't believe that they (bike thieves) don't have respect for fellow tenants."

Ansher never got her bike back, which is common for victims of bike theft. She replaced the bike and keeps it in her apartment. Ansher said she trusted other people before the incident.

"Now I'm even tentative about riding my bike downtown," Ansher said. "I don't want another bike to be stolen."

Besides keeping bicycles locked up, Lihls also recommended registering bicycles with the police department, so that stolen bikes can be matched with the owner if found.

Lihls said to prevent a bike from being stolen, the owner should take the bike inside their residence. But, if that's not an option, he advised cyclists to lock their bikes to something immobile.

The best kind of lock is the U-lock, said Brian Wood, an employee at Lefler's Schwinn Cycling & Fitness, 1705 S. First Ave., with a common brand being the Kryptonite lock. For best safety results, Wood said cyclists should take off the front wheel (provided the bike has a quick release wheel) and lock it beside the rear wheel.

A flex weave cable is another kind of lock Wood suggested. He said the cable works well because it can't be cut.

Not only are bikes stolen in Iowa City, but their seats and headlights are also being taken. Most bikes come with quick release headlights and seats that can be detached easily. Wood highly advised detaching any accessories before leaving a bicycle parked.

"People who steal bicycle seats are doing it out of pure mischief," Wood said. "They're doing it just to do it."

how the clinic is equipped or staffed.

Garcellano's death was the 24th death Kavorkian has attended since June 1990.

Attorney Michael Odette of Davisburg, who is representing the Garcellano family, the family would immediately comment.

Before Garcellano's death, Kevorkian most recently attended the deaths of the Rev. John Evans and Nicholas John Loving in May. Evans died at his home while Loving's body was found in the back of Kevorkian's van, parked outside the Oakland County Medical Examiner's office.

The retired pathologist has not been charged in either of those deaths. He could be charged with murder in two earlier deaths and assisted suicide in three, under a recent court ruling.

The Legislature enacted a ban on assisting in a suicide in February 1993. It expired in November 1994.

The state Supreme Court ruled in December that there is no constitutional right to assisted suicide. The court also found that assisting a suicide is illegal under common law.

Kevorkian had appealed that ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court, saying the Constitution gives people the right to "end intolerable pain, suffering or debilitation." The high court in April refused to hear the appeal.

Kevorkian's sister. Janus, who crusaded with her brother for the right to assisted suicide, died last summer of a heart attack.

Fieger said the main purpose of the clinic is to provide a place for residents of other states to die.

"The intention of Dr. Kevorkian is to provide a foundation where other doctors can come forward and work with Dr. Kevorkian," Fieger said.

Kevorkian, a retired pathologist, also hopes the clinic can be used as a hospice and has long advocated establishing such a place, Fieger said.

agency, requested the report as part of its effort to determine whether anyone should be sued in the failure of Madison Guaranty S&L, which cost taxpayers more than $60 million.

Madison was owned in the 1980s by James McDougal, who along with his wife, Susan, were co-owners with the Clintons of the unsuccessful Whitewater vacation and retirement development in northern Arkansas' Ozark Mountains.

Privately, Democrats and Republicans alike described the report as a mixed bag for the White House.

The report made no recommendations or conclusions, the officials said. They stressed it was a preliminary effort solely to trace the flow of funds.

White House spokesman Mark Fabiani said Monday he had not seen the report.

The Clintons' personal lawyer, David Kendall, said that he, too, had not seen the report but that the agency's probe "has apparently come to the same conclusions we have been emphasizing for a long time." He cited the findings that the Clintons lost money and were passive investors.

McDougal dismissed the findings. "No money was ever illegally transferred to Whitewater," he said. "This is a typical Republican fabrication."

Houston pummels St. Louis, 11-0

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Greg Swindell pitched a six-hit shutout and rookie Orlando Miller drove in a career-high five runs Monday night as the Houston Astros coasted to an 11-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Swindell (5-3), who hurled his first shutout since Oct. 1, 1993, allowed only seven baserunners, with only three making it as far as second base. He struck out five and walked one.

The Astros, who scored a club-record 19 runs on Sunday, scored nine runs on five hits in 1-3 innings against St. Louis starter Mark Petkovsek (3-2). By the end of the second inning, Houston led 10-0.

Braves 4, Expos 3
ATLANTA — David Justice's 431-foot, two-run, sixth-inning homer carried Atlanta to its third straight victory.

The Braves overcame a 3-0 deficit in winning for the 10th time in 13 games and handing the Expos their 10th loss in 12 games.

Ryan Klesko also homered for the Braves and Tom Glavine (6-4) beat the Expos for only the seventh time in 18 career decisions.

The Braves rallied off reliever Luis Aquino (0-2), who yielded a one-out double to Fred McGriff before Justice homered over the center field fence. Klesko hit his seventh homer over the right field fence in the fifth off starter Gil Herreria.

Marlins 9, Mets 4
MIAMI — Jeff Conine's two-run homer sparked a five-run sixth inning, lifting Florida over New York and pushing the Mets deeper into last place in the NL East.

Bobby Bonilla's two-run homer in the first and run-scoring single in the fourth gave starter Bobby Jones (4-5) and the Mets a 3-1 lead. Bonilla also hit a solo homer in his 11th, in the ninth.

Jones walked Kurt Abbott to begin the sixth and Conine, who was 3-for-5 and scored three runs, hit his 11th homer of the season.

Charles Johnson capped the inning with a two-run home, his fourth of the year.

Pirates 8, Cubs 6
CHICAGO — Carlos Garcia went 3-for-4 with a homer and extended his hitting streak to 2 games Monday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat Chicago 8-6.

Chicago Cubs' Shawon Dunston takes to the air after forcing out Pittsburgh Pirates' Jay Bell at second on the first half of a double play during the first inning Monday in Chicago. The Cubs lost 8-6.

dropping the Cubs to .500 for the first time this season.

Garcia also doubled and singled and is hitting .365 (27-for-74) during his streak. Al Martin had three hits and three RBIs as the Pirates had a season-high 16 hits.

Trailing 7-3, the Cubs rallied for three runs in the bottom of the eighth off reliever Jim Gott. Todd Zeile, Shawon Dunston and Ozzie Timmons hit consecutive singles to make it 7-4. Pinch-hitter Howard Johnson walked to load the bases with two outs and Brian McRae followed with a two-run single to center.

Athletics 4, Rangers 3
ARLINGTON, Texas — Benji Gil's throwing error with two outs in the ninth allowed the winning run to score as the Oakland Athletics rallied for four runs in the inning and beat the Texas Rangers 4-3 Monday night.

The Rangers made two throwing errors in the ninth, and a bad relay throw by Gil on a potential double play allowed Oakland to keep batting.

After one-out RBI singles by Terry Steinbach and Stan Javier made it 3-2, Roger McDowell relieved with runners on first and second and got Gates to hit into a fielder's choice. Gil's throw to first pulled Will Clark off the bag and kept the rally alive.

White Sox 6, Twins 5
MINNEAPOLIS — Frank Thomas hit a pair of two-run homers to give rookie Brian Keyser his first major league win Monday night as the Chicago White Sox beat Minnesota 6-5, extending their winning streak to a season-high four games.

Thomas homered to left-center in Chicago's three-run fifth and hit a line drive over the wall in right-center for his 18th of the season to make it 6-1 in the seventh.

Keyser (1-2), making his fifth start since being recalled from Class AAA Nashville, worked out of trouble several times as the White Sox followed their three-game sweep over Cleveland with a rare road victory. Chicago has the worst road record in the majors at 5-19.

Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 3
BOSTON — Luis Alica's single in the bottom of the ninth inning gave Boston a 4-3 victory over the slumping Toronto Blue Jays on Monday night after the Red Sox blew a three-run lead in the top of the inning.

Mike Greenwell was hit by a pitch from Tony Castillo (0-2) to start the inning. After two fly outs to center, Greenwell stole second and scored on Alica's line single. Left fielder Candy Maldonado fielded the ball and had a play at the plate, but he fired it high over the head of catcher Lance Parrish.

Stan Belinda (5-0) got the win after failing to protect Erik Hanson's lead in the ninth.

Yankees 7, Tigers 3
NEW YORK — Rookie Andy Pettitte pitched seven scoreless innings and New York extended its longest winning streak of the season to five games with a victory over Detroit.

Pettitte (3-4) shut down a team that had hit 16 home runs in its previous seven games and had won four in a row. An inning after he left with a 5-0 lead, Cecil Fielder hit a two-run homer off Josias Manzanillo.

Randy Velarde, batting ninth for the Yankees, went 3-for-3, drove in two runs and scored twice. Wade Boggs also had three hits for New York and has 10 hits in his last 21 at-bats.

Felipe Lira (4-4) took the loss for Detroit.

Indians 2, Royals 0
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chad Ogea won his fourth straight start and helped Cleveland end its longest losing streak of the season, but he took a shot in the gut while leading the Indians over Kansas City.

With two outs in the seventh and a runner on base, Tommy Goodwin hit a hard liner back to the mound that struck Ogea (4-0) in the belly. He lay on the ground for several minutes, then slowly got up and walked off. He was not seriously hurt, a team spokesman said.

Kenny Lofton scored one run and drove in the other before he left the game in the second inning with a strained hamstring. The shutout was the fifth of the year for Cleveland, which had lost four in a row.

Orioles 2, Brewers 0
MILWAUKEE — Jamie Moyer took a no-hitter into the sixth and allowed only two hits in 7 1-3 innings as Baltimore sent Milwaukee to its fourth straight loss.

Moyer (2-3) didn't give up a hit until Jeff Cirillo lined a single to center with two outs in the sixth. Doug Jones finished up the combined two-hitter by pitching the ninth for his 10th save.

Kevin Bass and Rafael Palmeiro had RBI singles for the Orioles. Angel Miranda (4-3) left the game in the fourth inning after straining his surgically repaired left knee. The severity of the injury was not immediately known.

King gets her crown; PGA reviews criteria

John Curran
Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Now that Betsy King has finally earned her way into the LPGA Hall of Fame, the association expects to make the criteria for getting there more realistic.

The change could happen within two years, outgoing LPGA commissioner Charles Mechem Jr. said, but the final decision is up to the players.

And most of them say the requirements are outdated because the game has grown so much.

"In today's world, meeting the existing criteria is a virtual impossibility," Mechem said.

King's win in the ShopRite LPGA Classic finally gave her Hall-of-Fame clinching career victory No. 30, but renewed debate about what it takes to make the Hall. King won her 29th event in November 1993.

To gain entry, a player must post 30 victories, including two major tournaments; 35 victories with one major; or 40 with no major titles.

"I definitely feel they should change the standard," the 39-year-old King said.

"I think the idea of having an objective criteria is good, but I believe it needs to be changed because of the number of good players."

"I believe you want to reward the best players from each era. I think it's unfairly slanted to the people who played on the tour a long time ago."

One possibility is establishing a system under which golfers get points for winning tournaments, leading the tour in prize money and being named player of the year.

King, who joined the tour in 1977, said the pressure to win one more haunted her during the 20-month drought.

"I think it is pretty tough. I have mixed emotions about it," King said.

"I think it's a standard that everybody can shoot for. I know that was the reasoning for making the criteria, so it would be objective, not a popularity vote."

In today's world, meeting the existing criteria is virtually impossible.

Charles Mechem Jr., LPGA Commissioner, on the LPGA Hall of Fame

Beth Daniel, who has 31 victories and one major title, said the standards were set when there were 40 or 50 players competing. The field for the ShopRite had 144 players.

Prior to the tournament, Daniel discussed the Hall of Fame with Amy Alcott, who is one win away.

"Eventually, they're going to have to change the qualifications. When they do, Amy Alcott and I are in, no question," Daniel said Sunday.

That, too, poses a dilemma, Mechem said.

"One of the reasons that there has been reluctance to make the changes as soon as some people might have liked is that Amy Alcott, Betsy King and Beth Daniel didn't want to get in based on a change in the rules," Mechem explained.

Strawberry shows vintage form

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Darryl Strawberry, facing live pitching for the first time since signing with the New York Yankees, hit a 400-foot homer Monday.

The homer, one of two Strawberry hit in a simulated game at the team's minor-league complex, landed on the roof of a shed beyond the right field fence.

Facing teammate Scott Kamieniecki, Strawberry started out 0-for-5 with two strikeouts.

In his sixth at-bat, Strawberry hit a hanging curve ball. In Tampa to rehabilitate the elbow he injured in May, Strawberry finished 4-for-11 against Kamieniecki.

"After seeing these (rookies), that's an awesome sight," Yankees pitching coordinator Nardi Contreras said. "None of these kids here are going to be able to hit the ball like Strawberry did out there today."

Toronto prospect Joe Davenport, 19, almost had the chance to see Strawberry hit from up close. The right-hander was the starting pitcher in Monday's Gulf Coast League game between the Toronto and New York rookie teams. Strawberry was a late scratch.

"It doesn't matter who I face, I just try to get everybody out," Davenport said. "It would have been fun to face him, but I wasn't expecting it. It would have been a good challenge."

Nomo, Martinez named Players of the Week

NEW YORK — Hideo Nomo of the Los Angeles Dodgers was selected NL player of the week and Edgar Martinez of the Seattle Mariners was honored as the top AL player.

Nomo allowed five hits in two starts, pitching his first career shutout Saturday, a two-hitter against San Francisco.

Martinez was 12-for-24 last week with five doubles, one homer and seven RBIs.

Honorary captains named for all-star game

NEW YORK — Pitching greats Nolan Ryan and Ferguson Jenkins will serve as honorary captains at the All-Star Game next month, the baseball commissioner's office said today.

Ryan, who pitched in both leagues en route to career records of 5,714 strikeouts and seven no-hitters, will captain the American League players.

Hall of Famer Jenkins, the Chicago Cubs' pitching coach who also was in both leagues, will captain the National League. He won 20 or more games seven times, and was the NL Cy Young Award winner for the Cubs in 1971.

basket.

Meyer and Hoiberg both took part in a pre-draft camp in Phoenix, then toured Europe with a group of players led by TV analyst Billy Packer. That helped Meyer ready for his individual workouts.

The Phoenix Suns are the only team that invited Hoiberg in for a workout and if he had his druthers, he'd play there. But there's certainly no guarantee that's where he'll land.

"I think they're interested in anybody they bring in, but you're never sure what they're going to do," Hoiberg said.

Hoiberg, a 6-4 guard known for his outside shooting, is similar to another former ISU star who began his NBA career in Phoenix. Remember Jeff Hornacek?

FIELD HOUSE

is not uncommon to find a couple of them participating in pick-up games during the off-season.

There are no formal rules for the pick-up games, but most players have a basic understanding of the guidelines.

Games are played to 15 points (by one) and a team must win by at least two points. If neither team is able to gain a two-point advantage, then the first team to 21 points wins.

The winning team stays on and takes on the next team of five waiting to play.

Offensive players call their own fouls, but are expected to only call the hard fouls.

"If you call anything cheap, you better be ready to get hit pretty hard the next time down," Jones said. "Nobody likes a guy who calls weak fouls."

In addition to the pleasure of playing competitive basketball, the pick-up games are seen as an important break from the pressures of reality.

"It's a good place to bump and

The word Hoiberg gets is that he could be chosen anywhere from the late in the first round to early in the second round or from the middle of the first round to late in the second round.

He also remembers what happened a couple of years ago to Iowa State's Justus Thigpen.

"They said the same thing about Justus — late first or early second and he didn't get drafted at all," Hoiberg said.

"So you never know. It just depends on who needs you and what position they have open."

Hoiberg said he'd play in Europe if he doesn't stick with an NBA team.

Michalik, a 6-10 forward, is likely to end up in Europe, his home continent. The native of Slovakia is the prototype European player — long, lean with good hands and a soft shooting touch.

"He'd be a great player over there," Hoiberg said.

NBA super scout Marty Blake thinks all three will get a chance to play in this country and notes that Meyer's chances have improved the most since the season ended.

"Meyer is one of about 10 guys that fits in a lot of places," Blake said. "There's a lot of interest in Meyer. If you're picking in the first round, you have to be interested in Meyer."

Of the teams Meyer worked out for, their picks range from Detroit at No. 8 to Dallas at No. 24. Dallas also has the No. 12 pick in the first round, and Portland has two first-round picks as well — Nos. 18 and 19.

Blake said Hoiberg has played well every place he has been in the postseason and also said he hopes Michalik gets a chance to play in the NBA.

grind and sweat it up a little bit," junior Matt Currier said. "It helps to relieve those everyday stresses." Jones agrees. "It's a big break from academic life," he said. "It's a good way to get rid of some of that youth angst."

"I don't mind it if my opponent is talking a little. If a guy on my team that I don't know starts shouting at me then I'm always tempted to punch him."

Dan Bajek, amateur basketball player and Field House patron

Another way the stress is relieved is by talking a big game in addition to playing a big game. With the absence of officials to control the games, trash talking is a common occurrence on the courts. "If I'm not hearing a lot of trash talk out there then I'll start giving it out," Currier said. "I like to think of it as an art."

Most players take the trash talk in stride as long as it does not get too personal.

"I don't mind it if my opponent is talking a little," senior Dan Bajek said. "If a guy on my team that I don't know starts shouting at me then I'm always tempted to punch him."

Bajek said that fights usually only occur when somebody's pride is on the line or has been questioned.

Pride is the biggest thing to defend since there are no big checks or shoe contracts to play for at the Fieldhouse.

And while there aren't reporters at the Fieldhouse to write about the games, the players talk away most of the great plays in their memories.

"I remember one play that happened this weekend real clearly," Jones said. "This guy on my team dribbled the ball up to half-court and then just launched it—swish. I don't remember what the score was, but I just started shaking my head."

WIMBLEDON

Mats Wilander, back at Wimbledon for the first time since 1989, has a style suited to the new balls and had little trouble sweeping past Mark Petchey, 7-6 (7-3), 6-1, 6-2. Aaron Krickstein came from two sets down to beat Sweden's Christian Bergstrom, 4-6, 0-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-2, 6-2.

In women's play, 11th-seeded Iva Majoli was the first upset victim, losing 1-6, 6-3, 6-1, to Angelica Gavaldon.

"He'd be a great player over here," Hoiberg said.

Blake said Hoiberg has played nearly every place he has been in the postseason and also said he hopes Michael gets a chance to play in the NBA.

Sixth-seeded Kimiko Date-Kajimura Appelmans 6-4, 6-2; No. 8 Gabriela Sabatini beat Lea Ghirardi 6-3, 6-4; No. 12 Amy Frazier defeated Stephanie Rottier, 6-4, 7-5; No. 15 Brenda Shultz-McCarthy was two points away from elimination before rebounding to defeat Tatjana Bobkova, 6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (7-3), 1-1; and No. 16 Helena Sukova beat Sandra Cecchini 6-3, 7-6 (7-5).

Big Ten all-star team completes undefeated tour

KOBE, Japan — The Big Ten men's all-star team rounded out its summer tour Sunday with a 103-81 victory over Japan's college all-stars.

Ryan Bowen led the Big Ten squad with a 17-point, 15-rebound effort, shooting 8-of-9 from the floor.

The Iowa sophomore travels home having averaged 13.6 rebounds and 9.6 points per game.

This was the first time a Big Ten team has gone undefeated on a foreign tour, finishing 7-0. An Australian tour in 1971 saw a Big Ten team go 15-1.

Celebrity softball game is rescheduled for tonight

Softball celebrity Eddie Feigner and his "court" were rained out Monday, but they will return tonight to put on an exhibition at Iowa City West High.

"The King and His Court" will take on the West High girls softball team at 7:30 p.m.

Devils move a step closer to Nashville

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The Stanley Cup champion New Jersey Devils will end their franchise agreement with the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority after the 1996-97 season.

A brief statement by the sports authority Monday did not say whether that meant the Devils will move after the '96-97 season. But if the termination is valid, it would allow the team to play elsewhere. The authority said it was reviewing the termination letter from the Devils.

For more than a month Devils owner John McMullen has been considering a lucrative offer to move the team to Nashville, Tenn., while at the same time trying to renegotiate his Meadowlands Arena lease with the sports authority.

Bengals threaten move to Baltimore

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bengals president Mike Brown says he will take steps that could lead to a move from the city if officials fail to reach agreement by Thursday on a new football stadium.

If Cincinnati and Hamilton County cannot agree by then, Brown said he will begin negotiating exclusively with a group trying to attract an NFL team to Baltimore.

"It is not for me to mediate the dispute between the city and county," Brown said. "But time is pressing on us. We don't have the luxury of getting into some kind of intramural scrimmage that could stop us from getting a deal."

Last Thursday, the county proposed a sales tax increase coupled with a property tax rollback to finance a $540 million project to build stadiums for the Bengals and baseball's Reds by 2000.

Sampras squeaks by

Steve Wilstein

WIMBLEDON, England — In case anyone confused the two, Pete Sampras emphatically declared on opening day of Wimbledon, "I have nothing in common with Deion Sanders."

Sampras, the one without the gold chains and the handkerchief on his head, felt moved to distance himself from the San Francisco 49ers star when asked if he would say of Wimbledon what Sanders said of Atlanta on his return for a game last season: "This is my house!"

Boasting and strutting have never been part of Sampras' style, but for the past two years in his championship runs Wimbledon has, indeed, seemed like his home, a place where he could settle in comfortably on the grass for a fortnight each summer.

On Monday, though, Sampras seemed more of a stranger on the sweltering Centre Court, slipping and sliding to a shaky 7-6 (7-4), 6-7 (7-2), 6-4, 6-1 victory over Karsten Braasch, a left-handed German who looked as if he were swatting flies while winding up to serve.

Sampras is trying to become the first American to win three straight Wimbledons — and the first player since Bjorn Borg won five in a row — but the combination of the slick surface and Braasch's quirky serves nearly led to a different niche in Wimbledon history for him. Not since Manuel Santana was knocked off by Charlie Pasarell 28 years ago had the champion gone out before tea on the first day.

No. 4 Goran Ivanisevic, who lost in the final to Sampras last year and to Andre Agassi three years ago, served 21 aces to overpower Sebastian Lareau 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Todd Martin, seeded No. 14, also served 21 aces in beating Nicolas Pereira 6-1, 3-6, 7-6 (7-4), 7-5. Michael Chang, No. 5, flexed his improved serve for 14 aces in beating Lionel Roux.

In other men's matches, American grass-court specialist Bryan Shelton ousted 12th-seeded Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands in straight sets, 7-6 (7-2), 6-

Herpes lands Rodman in court

Leonard Pallats

ATLANTA — Dennis Rodman had unprotected sex with a former Atlanta Hawks cheerleader a day after a Detroit woman went to his home and told him he had given her genital herpes, a lawyer said Monday.

But an attorney representing the San Antonio Spurs star in a federal lawsuit brought by the Atlanta woman said there was no evidence Rodman has ever had a transmittable form of the incurable disease.

Lisa Beth Judd, 24, is suing Rodman for unspecified damages. She claims Rodman, with whom she had an on-and-off relationship since 1991, gave her herpes Jan. 14, 1993, when he came to Atlanta while then playing for the Detroit Pistons.

Her lawyer, Mark Trigg, said Rodman had told her the night he gave her herpes he was ready to get serious about their relationship.

"That was exactly what Lisa had hoped he would say," Trigg said in opening arguments to the eight-woman, two-man jury. "Lisa loved Dennis Rodman. Lisa trusted Dennis Rodman."

The usually flamboyant Rodman, who came to court wearing a green jacket and dark slacks, had given herpes to two other women about two weeks earlier, Trigg said.

Richard Hines, representing Rodman, told the jury there was no medical evidence the 26-year-old Detroit woman who accused Rodman of giving her herpes actually has the disease.

He said that while a 1993 blood test showed Rodman had herpes, there was no evidence it was ever in an active, transmittable form.

Another Rodman lawyer, Taylor Daly, said Judd became pregnant three times between ages 17 and 20. "She should have understood the risks of unprotected sexual activity," she said.

Field House offers 'serious basketball'

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

There are no uniforms. There are no referees. But make no mistake, pick-up basketball games at the Field House gym are a serious business.

Basketball is a year-round sport for many in Iowa City. And there is no better place to find competitive pick-up games than at the Field House, even in the summer.

"Most of the competition at the Field House is pretty high," senior Brant Jones said. "Still, you can usually find any level of competition you want, from poor to really good. Occasionally, you can even play against Hawkeye players."

"If you call anything cheap, you better be ready to get hit pretty hard the next time down. Nobody likes a guy who calls weak fouls."

Trash-talking ad

Shaquille O'Neal wants another shot at Hakeem Olajuwon, despite being swept in the NBA Finals. In this advertisement appearing in Monday's newspapers across the country, the Orlando Magic center insists he is not through with Olajuwon. It was not immediately clear whether O'Neal or one of his sponsors paid for the ad, or whether Olajuwon was a participant.

Cyclone trio sets sights on NBA

Loren Meyer's cross-country odyssey is almost over. Now comes the hard part — the waiting.

A possible first-round choice in Wednesday's NBA draft, the former Iowa State standout is making the rounds to work out for teams. His itinerary looks like part of a rock band's summer tour — Atlanta, Charlotte, Milwaukee and Cleveland, followed by Detroit, Portland, Dallas and Sacramento.

All because the NBA clubs in those cities wanted to check out Meyer's skills, conditioning, strength and attitude. When you could be investing several million dollars in a player, you want to make sure he's got the goods.

"It's keeping me busy and that's good right now," said Meyer, who finishes his trek Monday in Sacramento. "If I wasn't on the move, I think it would be a lot harder on me because I would just be waiting. This way, I only have to wait for a couple of days."

Iowa State's Fred Hoiberg and Julius Michalik will join Meyer in awaiting the outcome of Wednesday's two-round draft. The three led Iowa State to a record 23 victories last season and all are expected to get a chance to play professionally, if not in the NBA then certainly in Europe.

perhaps as high as the No. 10-to-20 range in the first round. Meyer played especially well late in the season and has carried that over into his postseason activities, Hoiberg said.

"He's everything you want in a big man," Hoiberg said. "He runs the court, he rebounds the ball, he's an excellent scorer around the

First lady to write weekly syndicated column

WASHINGTON (AP) — Often the target of journalistic barbs, Hillary Rodham Clinton plans to live by an old adage: If you can't beat 'em, join 'em.

The first lady says she is now a newspaper columnist.

Following in Eleanor

Roosevelt's footsteps, Rodham Clinton said Monday she will write a column to share her opinion with the public.

In a speech to the American News Women's Club, she said:

"I think it's going to be, for me, interesting to try to ... talk about issues that I know are on people's mind and also share with people some of what does go on here — some of the funny stories and some of the momentous events, some of the human stories — the kinds of stories about people who come here that nobody would know otherwise."

Kevorkian's death clinic short-lived as landlord pulls plug

DETROIT (AP) — Jack Kevorkian has begun a new chapter in his quest to put doctors in the suicide business with the opening of an "obitorium," a clinic for helping people end their lives.

However, the first suicide at the new Margo Janus Mercy Clinic apparently will be its last. The building's owner said Tuesday he has given Kevorkian a month to get out.

"I'm looking at the pressure from authorities, from the media," said Jody Rothermel.

On Monday, Erika Garcellano, a 60-year-old victim of Lou Gehrig's disease who had been living in a Kansas City, Mo., nursing home, died at the "obitorium" in the 24th suicide that Kevorkian has aided or witnessed since 1990.
