Simpson trial update

Judge Lance Ito banned the prosecution from using an FBI report that showed carpet fibers on murder evidence almost certainly came from O.J. Simpson's Bronco. Special Agent Douglas Deedrick only disclosed that report to the defense Wednesday, when Ito ordered him to.

Ito rejected a defense bid to force testimony by the jail nurse who drew Simpson's blood sample the day after the murders. He agreed with prosecutors who argued the chain of custody had been adequately established.

Prosecutors said that after Deedrick, their final witness will be Nicole Brown Simpson's mother, Juditha Brown.

GOP scores budget victory

Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Triumphant Republicans steered their landmark plan for balancing the budget and slashing taxes through Congress Thursday, moving a key step toward their goal of changing the face and role of government.

By an almost party-line vote of 239-194, the House approved the GOP fiscal framework claiming to halt federal deficits by 2002 while envisioning $245 billion in tax cuts for families, investors and businesses. Only one Republican and eight Democrats deserted their parties' positions.

Shortly afterward, the Senate gave the measure final approval by a straight party-line vote of 54-46.

The outline does not require President Clinton's signature. But the White House renewed its warning that Clinton might veto subsequent bills cutting taxes and spending if they mirror the blueprint's priorities. Spokesman Mike McCurry said Clinton might have to reject the measures "if we are going to protect the interests of the American working family and protect the American economy."

The White House's words did little to dampen Republican enthusiasm.

"This is why we came to Congress," said House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, who, like other Republicans, was giddy with victory. "To put America over

His counterpart and chief co-author of the plan, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., proclaimed, "Just before Independence Day, it is more than a coincidence that a budget resolution is going to free America" from higher debts.

Democrats, to the end, insisted the GOP plans would hurt most people.

"The Republican budget lacks a heart and it has no soul," complained Sen. James Exon of Nebraska, ranking Democrat on the budget panel. "In a family, you

A missing Mason City, Iowa, news anchorwoman spent the weekend before her disappearance in Iowa City, but people who met her said she seemed carefree and did not indicate she was in any danger.

Jodi Huisentrut, a producer and anchorwoman for KIMT-TV in Mason City was reported missing Tuesday morning after she failed to report for work. Police in Mason City are still searching for the 27-year-old news anchor and said they suspect foul play.

Huisentrut visited Iowa City Saturday with friends and went boating on the Coralville Lake, SPACE CENTER, Houston — An American shuttle docked with a Russian space station floating 245 miles above Earth Thursday in an extraordinary display of scientific cooperation between two former rivals.

It was only the second time ships from two countries linked up in space: The first was 20 years ago between an American Apollo capsule and a Soviet Soyuz.

They were 245 miles over Central Asia near the Russian-Mongolian border, when shuttle commander Robert "Hoot" Gibson eased the Atlantis to first contact of mating rings on the shuttle and the Russian space station Mir.

"We have capture," said Gibson, precisely on time, at 9 a.m. EDT. The Mir commander gave a similar message to his home base.

With crews of both countries on each of the ships, the space-to-ground loops to flight controllers in Houston and Kaliningrad crackled in English and Russian.

The Mir was the passive partner in the union; its only task was to stay at the proper altitude, and it

Racially drawn voter districts ruled illegal

Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Election districts drawn mainly to boost black voters' political clout are unlawful, a sharply divided Supreme Court ruled Thursday in a decision jeopardizing recent gains by minority politicians from Congress to City Hall.

The 5-4 ruling, announced as the court ended its 1994-95 term, struck down a Georgia congressional redistricting plan under which three black Democrats won seats in the state's 14-member delegation.

Going far beyond Georgia, the ruling could reach into every state, subjecting legislative districts and even local election precincts to constitutional challenges. The boundaries of thousands of districts could be affected.

And while the political impact will take years to play out, the decision could undercut the trend that has increased black representation in the 435-member House of Representatives from 24 before 1992 to the present 39.

Civil rights advocates saw the decision as a severe defeat for their cause. They had feared just such a ruling from the conservative court. It came on the heels of a ruling this month that dealt a potentially crippling blow to many federal affirmative action programs.

In time to affect Fourth of July revelers, drunken drivers will face stiffer penalties after Saturday, when the state government puts new, tougher laws into action.

Second-time drunken driving offenders will be hit hard under the new laws. People convicted of a second drunken driving offense

New Drunk-Driving Laws

As of July 1, the following provisions will be added to Iowa drunk driving laws:

- Drivers under age 21 who are found with a blood-alcohol concentration of .02 or more could lose their license for 30 days. The legal limit for drivers 21 and older is .10.
- People convicted of a second drunk-driving offense within six years of their first offense will have their cars impounded.
- To retrieve their cars, owners could face more than $1,000 in costs, not including fines and legal fees from their conviction. If the car is not paid for in one month, it will be sold.
- Availability of temporary permits for work-related driving will be increasingly limited. First-time offenders will lose their licenses, and required to wait 30 days for a permit. Second-time offenders will not be granted permits.

UC 'hostage crisis':

Campus activism reached a whole new level at the University of California - Davis, when an anonymous group stole a university sign and demanded the university donate $500 to a student group for its safe return.

The thieves said they would not return a chemistry building identification sign until the university "improved school spirit" by donating money to the "Students First Campaign."

Associate Vice Chancellor Darrell Ralls said the theft will be investigated and could mean felony violations.

The thieves explained their demands in a letter to the student newspaper, the California Aggie, but said it was "not an extortion nor a ransom demand."

Those in charge of the UC purse disagreed.

"We will not negotiate with terrorists," said Senate President Pro Tempore Ashish Kuran. "I

New prison director has experience on both sides of the bars

Florida's Alucha County's new jail director could have put an experience most prison directors don't have on his résumé — in 1962, Nate Caldwell pleaded guilty to manslaughter and served five years for involvement in a gang fight in Brooklyn, N.Y.

But perhaps because Caldwell thought time served wasn't exactly what Alucha County was looking for, he left blank the questions regarding past criminal record part on his 1986 application.

Now that two County Commissioners have found out about his past, they are questioning his integrity.

"This looks like a cover-up attempt," said commissioner Bobby Summers. "If any other employee lies on an application, then they are dismissed."

Caldwell said his 27 years of work in the system showed he was a capable director.

UI RESEARCHERS NEED ADDITIONAL PARTICIPANTS FOR TESTOSTERONE STUDY

Men, ages 21 to 40, are invited to take part in the project, being conducted at the UI General Clinical Research Center.

The study will look at the physical and psychiatric effects, and possible changes brought about by various doses of testosterone and withdrawal from testosterone therapy. Testosterone is the principal male sex hormone and has been used as an illicit anabolic steroid among weight lifters and other athletes.

Participants will receive varied doses of testosterone cypionate, and then be observed for acute and withdrawal effects. All participants will be closely monitored throughout the study to ensure medical and psychiatric safety.

The study will consist of 28 weekly visits, ranging from 30 minutes to three hours. Compensation is available. For more information, call 353-4239.

Carly Simon finds solitude in Martha's Vineyard getaway

NEW YORK (AP) — When Carly Simon needs to get away from it all, she heads for the Martha's Vineyard house that's been her refuge for 24 years.

"If you let the power of fame or celebrity catch hold in your psyche, it can swallow your art," the singer said in the July issue of InStyle magazine. "This house has always been a retreat for me because I try to remember who I am in a small way."

When Simon first arrived at the house in 1971, it was "a kind of a bachelor hippie shack" built by her first husband, James Taylor. The couple has since split up, but Simon kept the ever-expanding home.

Over the years, she added a 45-foot tower that leads to a meditation room. A new master bedroom was created, connected to a wing built for her children with Taylor. The children, now grown, have their own cottages on the 40-acre property.

"This is my only house — I have an apartment that I rent in New York," Simon said. "But this is my home. These are my roots. It's my own sweet money pit."

Rasia Gorbachev objects to husband's possible presidential venture

MOSCOW (AP) — Nyet, nyet, a thousand times, nyet. That's Raisa Gorbachev's stand on Mikhail Gorbachev's possible return to politics, he said.

In an interview published Wednesday in the daily Moskovsky Komsomolets, the former Soviet leader explained his wife's objections: "Politics took away the best years. All our lives, our family was absorbed in one thing."

Still, Gorbachev said his wife's concerns will not influence his plans.

Gorbachev, 64, has not ruled out running for president of Russia in 1996.

"She is more emotional than I am," Gorbachev said of his wife. He said she was particularly bothered by accusations made against him when he was in power.

"Those lies really affect her," he said.

JFK Jr. interviews father's political opponent for new magazine

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Looking for material to fill his new magazine, called George — for George Washington — John Kennedy Jr. paid a visit to another George: George Wallace, a nemesis of Kennedy's father.

As governor in the 1960s, Wallace lost a showdown over segregation with President Kennedy. Federal officials helped two blacks enroll at the University of Alabama despite Wallace's "stand in the schoolhouse door."

"He's just a fascinating American political figure," the former president's son said Wednesday, a day after an interview in Wallace's office. "I know his views have evolved," Kennedy said.

Kennedy hopes to have his first issue out in September.

Wallace, 75, has been paralyzed below the waist since a 1972 assassination attempt during a bid for the presidency. His hearing is so poor that interviewers have to pose their questions in writing.

Actor Slater puts down guns for good

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christian Slater's pistol-packing days are over.

The "True Romance" star said he learned a lesson six months ago when he was arrested at New York's Kennedy Airport trying to board a flight with an unregistered gun.

"Honestly, I don't like guns. There was a time that I did like guns, they're just not for me anymore," Slater told "Entertainment Tonight" in an interview for broadcast Thursday. "I don't have any guns at home. I used to, but I've gotten rid of all of them."

Slater said he's confining his gunplay to the big screen.

"I put all of that childish James Bond behavior behind me," said Slater, who is shooting the action film "Broken Arrow" with John Travolta.

Magic Johnson / Sony open 12-screen L.A. cinema complex

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Magic Johnson, the dazzling showman of the basketball court, is bringing movie magic to a riot-scarred section of Los Angeles.

Johnson and Sony Pictures Entertainment open the doors today to the $11 million Magic Theatres, a 12-screen movie complex at the Baldwin Hills Crenshaw Plaza.

Johnson and Sony are partners in the project. "The response from the community has been overwhelming, people honking their horns, thanking me for doing this. The community needs this shot in the arm, and they need somebody like myself to be a part of it," Johnson said.

Business leaders are hoping the theater will be a boost for Crenshaw Plaza.

"There's been a real reluctance for retailers to come in. We need something to get us over the hump," said Bill Price, project manager of the Crenshaw Redevelopment Project Area.

Summer '95 enrollment found lower than 1994's

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

Contrary to previous expectations, final figures indicate enrollment in the UI summer session is down from last year.

But UI Registrar Jerald Dallam said the decrease was too small to be significant.

"Enrollment is only down 99 (students)," he said. "I think that's within a statistical tolerance."

UI officials, who have faced declining enrollment in every session since fall 1983, were pleased by initial figures indicating enrollment had increased. But Dallam said he was not upset by the decline.

"We were down about 70 in the graduate college," he said. "Overall, I wasn't disappointed."

Dallam said he didn't know the cause of the decline, but said the economy may affect enrollment.

"Many times, higher summer enrollment reflects a bad economy," he said. "If students can't get jobs, they go to summer school."

The UI is still projecting an increase in fall enrollment, but Dallam said since freshman orientation hasn't ended, the UI isn't certain about the numbers.

Enrollment in the colleges of law, medicine, pharmacy, dentistry, education and liberal arts is up, while enrollment in the colleges of business administration, engineering and nursing and the graduate college is down.

Cat's true owner disputed

Lisa Blaney
The Daily Iowan

Tom Harmon, Sari Mintz's fiancé, threw a roadblock in front of authorities ready to destroy Cabo, the 20-pound Asian jungle cat, Thursday morning when he claimed he was the animal's legal owner.

The fugitive feline was court-ordered to be put to sleep and tested for rabies after attacking Mintz's 2-year-old niece, Alice, in Illinois. The toddler needed 200 stitches on her face and scalp.

Earlier in the week, Alice's parents, Bill (Sari's brother) and Judy Mintz, asked for the case's dismissal in order to keep family harmony. But despite the family's request, DuPage County Circuit Judge Bonnie Wheaton gave Mintz until Thursday to return the cat to animal control officers in DuPage County or Iowa City.

Mintz had reluctantly agreed to have the cat destroyed if the court order was not reversed. However,

Harmon, now claiming to be the jungle cat's true owner, will not authorize the feline's destruction.

Harmon has written several letters to Iowa City officials claiming the cat is his and acquired a lawyer to fight for Cabo's rights.

"The lawyers are haggling with it. Until they can iron it out, Johnson County will stick with the confinement agreement of keeping Cabo under observation for rabies," said Kot Flora, disease prevention manager at the Johnson County Health Department. "If we had a clear owner and they said we could euthanize the cat, it would be no problem, but that is where the problem is."

Alice began a series of rabies shots June 19, a day after the assault. If Cabo was destroyed and an autopsy proved him free of rabies, Alice's treatments could be stopped.

"This is not only a rabies issue. The chances of the cat having rabies are slim to none," said Chris Whitmore, an animal control officer at the Animal Control Licensing & Shelter, corner of Kirkwood Avenue and South Clinton Street. "This is a vicious cat. It is a wild animal. If they didn't have it in the first place, none of this would have happened. Wild animals shouldn't be pets."

Mintz was hoping to convince the judge that Cabo's destruction was unnecessary as the cat has bitten Alice, Mintz, her fiancé, a neighbor and a co-worker in the past and there were no problems with rabies, Mintz's attorney, Frank Howard, said.

Until the mystery surrounding the real owner of Cabo is solved, the cat will remain at the All Pets Veterinary Clinic, 512 S. Dubuque St.

On Wednesday, Mintz said the thought of destroying Cabo devastated her.

"This cat is a house pet that sleeps on my pillow next to my face every night," she said.

Interviews for UI head commence

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The committee searching for a permanent replacement for Hunter Rawlings took a major step toward completing its task when they began interviewing candidates off-campus this week.

Steve Collins, chairman of the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee, said Monday that the interviews would begin "very quickly." By Thursday, Collins had a more concrete answer.

"We're in the process of conducting off-campus interviews," he said. "These will probably take place over a period of a few weeks."

Collins, in his characteristically secretive fashion, would not reveal exactly when or where the interviews took place and described the interviews already finished as "terrific." However, he said the complete interview list had not been scheduled and the committee was still receiving information about many of the candidates.

"It's fairly likely there will be additions to the list," Collins said. "We're still contacting references, so it really depends on the outcome of our reference checking."

Collins has been saying since the beginning of the search process the committee would need to decide whether to conduct on-campus interviews during the summer session. The question has raised debate because fewer people are on campus during the summer session than in the fall.

Collins has said he wants the committee to avoid appearing like it is trying to evade input from the UI community about the search.

After months of saying the decision is somewhere in the future, Collins admitted it was time for the committee to make a judgment on the issue.

"I suspect that we will talk about that perhaps as early as next week," he said. "We are getting to the point where we need to talk about the timing."

Collins said he and the committee isn't feeling any extra pressure from regents because of the speed of the UNI search, which began about a month after the UT's.

"I think the regents and the people of the state of Iowa clearly understand that the University of Iowa and the University of Northern Iowa are two very different schools," Collins said.

MISSING NEWSWOMAN

a.m. Tuesday after being alerted by workers at KIMT-TV. She was due at work between 3 and 4 a.m. and spoke to one co-worker on the telephone at about 4 a.m., saying she was on her way to work.

That was the last time anyone spoke to Huisentruit.

UI senior Bryan Svoboda was also at the lake Saturday when Huisentruit flagged him down for a ride on his jet ski. Svoboda had never met her before and said she seemed very friendly. He agreed with White, saying the reporter seemed to be having a good time and didn't express any trouble that could be linked with her disappearance.

"She didn't seem nervous about anything," Svoboda said. "She seemed excited to be in Iowa City. She wanted to run around and go to the bars."

Reports of a stalker following Huisentruit and of someone peering in her apartment window surfaced a few months ago, but Mason City police have not substantiated any of the reports. They said they have few leads and no suspects.

The local and national news media have picked up the Huisentruit story. She worked at KGAN-TV in Cedar Rapids from February 1991 to April 1992 — KGAN has made the Huisentruit disappearance its top story since the incident. The CBS Evening News with Dan Rather carried the story Wednesday; KIMT is a CBS affiliate.

Svoboda, who said Huisentruit had been at Fitzpatrick's, 525 S. Gilbert St., and the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., on Saturday night, said he was startled when he saw reports of her disappearance. Employees at the Sports Column said they had not seen the reporter.

"I saw it on the news and I was completely shocked," Svoboda said. "I thought, 'That's the woman I gave a ride to.' It's very weird."

SHUTTLE

The other displayed what Gibson was seeing, a greenish target coming closer, slowly, slowly.

Cameras from Mir captured images of astronauts and cosmonauts waving and smiling from the Atlantis windows.

"It's a great feeling to be here," Gibson said. "We're lucky and we're honored and privileged to be part of this. It's great to be back joined in orbit again."

Both ships had crews from both countries. Atlantis was ferrying a fresh pair of cosmonauts to Mir for the next two months; the Mir crew — two Russians and American Norman Thagard — looked forward to returning to Earth next week aboard the shuttle.

After years of negotiations aimed at melding space efforts that have become prohibitively expensive for either nation alone, space officials hoped the union would be a milestone in the effort to build an international space station.

Gibson had the demanding task of steering the 100-ton Atlantis to within three inches of the 123-ton Mir, at a closing rate no faster than one foot in 10 seconds, while the two ships sped in tandem around the Earth at 17,500 mph.

He had only two minutes to do this, so that Mir could maintain contact with a Russian ground station. The shuttle had no such constraints; it is in near-constant contact with Mission Control via satellite.

The danger was the two behemoths would bump with too much force.

"It's not an easy thing to do, but ... it's the kind of thing you can train to do," Gibson, a former fighter and test pilot, said before the flight. "It's kind of along the lines of some of the stuff I used to do, air-to-air refueling and any of those precision tasks."

The docking tested a technique needed for building an international space station beginning in 1997. It was the first of seven dockings planned before the station construction starts.

BUDGET

look after each other."

"What was the middle-class squeeze becomes the middle-class squeeze, and that is something we should not allow to happen," said House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo.

The plan filled in some detail of the broad pledges Republicans made en masse during last fall's campaign to balance the budget, prune programs and cut taxes.

It maps $894 billion worth of savings, plucked mostly from Medicare, Medicaid and a host of anti-poverty programs. In addition, the Commerce Department and operating aid for mass transit systems would be abolished and scores of other programs axed.

The White House veto warning meant the Republican outline was an opening gambit in what is likely to be prolonged negotiations later this year with Clinton, who prefers a 10-year plan with smaller cuts in taxes and spending. His signature is not needed for Congress' budget, but will be needed for later measures carrying out its plans.

"I hope we can work something out," House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., told reporters.

The Senate exhibited its customary reserve as it blessed the outline, with Republicans exchanging friendly pats on the back. Kasich was in the chamber as the vote was held, flashing a thumbs-up sign.

Earlier in the House, a cheer from the GOP side of the floor rang out upon passage.

During debate, Republicans in both chambers proclaimed a new era of tough-minded budget making in Washington following four decades of Democratic congressional dominance.

"The party of the past 40 years of profligate spending is over," said Senate Majority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss.

But Democrats resorted to the counter-argument that they hope will appeal most to voters next fall, that Republicans are aiming the tax cuts to benefit mainly the rich while putting the crunch on the neediest, frailest Americans.

"Don't kid yourselves about who's paying for that tax cut for the wealthy — America's elderly and America's children," said Senate Democratic Whip Wendell Ford, D-Ky.

"The budget resolution before us today is a new version of survival of the fittest, and many of my constituents won't survive without being bruised and battered," said Rep. Richard Neal, D-Mass.

RULING

Wade Henderson, legal director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, called the decision "the first step in the resegregation of American electoral democracy."

"They've really crippled voting rights, and have thrown into question the constitutionality of every black-majority district across the nation," said Lauglin McDonald of the American Civil Liberties Union.

But Ben Ginsberg, an attorney who has argued many redistricting cases on behalf of Republicans, predicted in the long run the decision would have little impact. Republicans, too, have made significant recent gains in state legislatures, he said, and will be reluctant to redraw districts in a manner that might help white Democrats.

Before ending its session, the court made sure it would have more to say about the subject by agreeing to decide redistricting disputes from North Carolina and Texas next year. Each case poses important, but more narrow, voting rights questions.

In the Georgia redistricting case, Justice Anthony Kennedy wrote for the court that the plan devised by state lawmakers in 1992 violates some voters' equal-protection rights.

Such rights are violated whenever "race was the predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision to place a significant number of voters within or without a particular district," he said.

The heart of the decision was that any district — not just those with irregular shapes — is unlawful if its creation was primarily motivated by race.

A 1993 decision setting aside North Carolina's congressional redistricting had appeared to rely on the "bizarre" shape of a challenged district. Thursday's ruling was broader, making it more difficult to fend off challenges.

Of the 17 blacks elected to Congress from the South in 1992 and 1994, all represent black-majority districts.

Nationwide, only five blacks ever have been elected to Congress from white-majority districts. And the ACLU said a similar pattern holds true in state legislatures in the South, where about 90 percent of the blacks elected during the 1980s came from majority-black districts.

DRUNKEN DRIVING

driving each year. During the 1992 fiscal year, nearly 11,000 people were convicted with a first offense. In the past 10 years, about 26,000 people under the legal age have been arrested for drunken driving.

Aziz Longou, owner of Vito's, 118 E. College St., said he hoped the new law would make partygoers more responsible when it came to driving home, but he doubted it would have much of an effect.

"I don't think the students will pay much attention to it," he said. "They should. You can pick up the paper and see people who are second and third offenders. They just don't seem to learn their lesson."

Even though he doesn't have much hope for the law, Longou said in the past few years more people have been calling for cabs when they feel they've had too many drinks.

"And we have managers here who will always recommend a cab for anyone who's had too much to drink," he said.

The new laws also will crack down on minors who get behind the wheel, even after one drink. Drivers under age 21 who are found with an alcohol concentration of .02 percent or more could lose their license for 30 days. The legal limit for drivers older than 21 is .10 percent.

Tom Conway, a counselor at West High School, 2901 Melrose Ave., and sponsor of the school's Students Against Driving Drunk chapter, said if the word gets around, the stricter law will keep more people from driving under the influence.

After 10 years of being closely involved with students, Conway said the penalties currently enforced have gotten kids off the road when they've had too much to drink.

"The laws they have right now have even had an effect," he said. "Ten years ago, no one ever thought about the effects of driving drunk, and now people are talking about designated drivers."

The traffic safety bureau also revealed minors account for 9 percent of all licensed drivers in Iowa, but make up 20 percent of drunken drivers responsible for fatal crashes.

One provision of the new laws will markedly decrease the availability of temporary permits for work-related driving. First-time offenders will lose their licenses, having to wait 30 days for a permit. Second-time offenders will not be granted permits.

Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake said this year operating while intoxicated convictions in Johnson County have dropped significantly for the first time in many years.

Winkelhake said he can't predict the effectiveness of the new laws, but he said it will be interesting to observe the outcome.

White House gunman receives 40-year jail sentence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Francisco Martin Duran, convicted of trying to kill President Clinton by firing a barrage of bullets at the White House, was sentenced Thursday to 40 years in prison.

U.S. District Judge Charles Richey rejected the government's request to lock up Duran for life, saying he thought the sentence would serve to punish the defendant and discourage others from similar acts.

"That is the rationale," Richey said. "I do this without any malice."

Duran, in a blue prison jumpsuit and orange shoes, told the court that he had wanted to die on Oct. 29, 1994, the day he fired more than two dozen bullets at the mansion. At the time of the shooting, Clinton was watching a football game on television in the living quarters. No one was injured.

"My acts ... were inexcusable and wrong," Duran said in an even voice before he was sentenced. "I'm sorry that I've not only ruined my life and my future but that of my wife and son."

27 dead, hundreds injured when five-level store caves in SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — An upscale five-story department store crowded with shoppers collapsed Thursday, trapping hundreds of people inside. At least 27 were killed and more than 700 injured, police said.

Bloodied people — some unconscious, others crying for help — were carried out of the bright pink Sam-pung Department Store in a steady stream. Helicopters ferried many to hospitals because an evening rush-hour traffic jam slowed ambulances.

As night fell, rescuers worked feverishly under spotlights to try to free up to 100 survivors in a basement supermarket area. They were forced to pull out when thick black smoke began billowing from the rubble, and firefighters started pouring water over the debris.

Shoddy construction appeared to be the cause of the collapse, Mayor Choi Byung-yol said. Some employees said they were told to evacuate the 6-year-old building shortly before the building caved in, and the owner of a restaurant on the top story said the floor and ceiling had been crumbling all day.

The extent of the damage and initial reports of a large boom raised speculation about a gas explosion.

Virginia flood rescue continues

David Reed
Associated Press

BUENA VISTA, Va. — Steady, sometimes torrential, rain soaked parts of Virginia Thursday for the eighth straight day. The death toll rose to six, with the discovery of three bodies in a pickup truck in a swollen creek.

Power company workers found the pickup in a stream about 2 a.m., county officials said. Victims' names were withheld pending notification of relatives.

The truck was near a washed-out portion of a county road, said Claude Webster, director of the Franklin County Department of Public Safety. The section of roadway passed over a small stream that was channeled into culverts, he said.

At least two people were missing after being swept away Tuesday by swollen rivers and creeks. Rescue crews resumed searching for an elderly woman whose house was swept away in Madison County. The search for a three-year-old girl overcome by a mountain stream in Warren County was postponed Thursday because of high water.

Nearly 3,000 people were forced to flee their homes Wednesday, the second straight day of relentless rain in the Shenandoah Valley, southwest Virginia and the Piedmont region just east of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Many of those rescued were plucked from trees, rooftops and vehicles stranded in several feet of streaming current.

Southwest Virginia and the southern Shenandoah Valley were under flood watches until late Thursday night. Minor flooding occurred Thursday on the Dan River in Danville and the Roanoke River in Campbell County.

"It's still a very dangerous situation," Gary Szatkowski, a National Weather Service forecaster in Sterling, said Thursday.

"People were driven out, boated out, carried out, flown out — we got them to safety any way we could," said Bill Todd, assistant fire chief for Glasgow in Rockbridge County. About half the town of 1,250 was submerged.

For Virginia, the flood damage is the worst and the search and rescue efforts are the most extensive in a decade, state Department of Emergency Services spokeswoman Janet Clements said.

When the water recedes enough, a herculean task remains.

Gov. George Allen viewed flood damage by helicopter Wednesday, one day after he declared a state of emergency for all but the eastern and western tips of the state.

Besides the three bodies found Thursday, the dead include a rescue worker and a motorist who drowned after a dam broke near Lynchburg a week ago. Another man drowned Tuesday in Rappahannock County.

ALTERNATIVE METHOD SOUGHT

Killer's execution delayed for organ donation appeal

Elliott Minor
Associated Press

JACKSON, Ga. — A convicted killer who was minutes away from execution Thursday won a stay while he appeals for a method that may allow him to donate his organs.

Larry Lonchar wants to receive a lethal injection instead of dying in the electric chair, though experts say his organs might still be rendered unusable. He wants his execution delayed long enough for the Legislature to change the law to permit another method of execution.

"I believe that death row inmates should be given the option after their appeals to be put to sleep and donate organs," Lonchar said at a hearing Wednesday.

Lonchar had eaten his last meal and had his head and ankle shaved when the U.S. Supreme Court stayed the execution. He was never seated in the electric chair because officials were awaiting word, said Mike Hobbs, a deputy state attorney general.

Lonchar, who insisted for years he wanted his execution carried out, was convicted in 1986 of killing three people over a $10,000 gambling debt.

"I believe that death row inmates should be given the option after their appeals to be put to sleep and donate organs."

Larry Lonchar, who won a stay to appeal execution method

Wayne Smith, 54, and his son, Steve Smith, 24, were found handcuffed and shot to death. Margaret Sweat, 45, was shot as well, and her attackers slashed her throat when she called police.

Another of Smith's sons was shot but survived. His request to witness Lonchar's execution was refused.

Lonchar, who once vowed never to appeal, changed his mind two years ago about 30 minutes before execution. He said his tearful father persuaded him, but the appeal was never actually filed and the warrant expired.

The Supreme Court will conduct a full hearing on Lonchar's request, but probably not before October, state Attorney General Michael Bowers said.

FOSTER SUITED FOR SURGEON GENERAL ROLE

Position an important one

After five months of back-and-forth debate, Dr. Henry Foster was finally ousted from consideration for U.S. surgeon general last Thursday. Only three votes short of confirmation, the decision, said President Clinton, has "done a disservice to a good man, done a disservice to the nominating process and sent a chilling message to the rest of the country."

Opponents to Foster's nomination have cited much more than abortion as the reason behind his decline. They have said he isn't the right person to follow Joycelyn Elders' difficult term and he lacks credibility, having changed his answer many times on the number of abortions he has performed. However, the fact that Foster performed abortions has proved to be a prominent issue since Clinton selected him last winter.

Clinton's first nominee, Joycelyn Elders, was chosen under similar circumstances as Foster, following almost eight months of heated debate. She seemed to be more controversial than Foster ever would have been, supporting condom distribution in schools and the use of marijuana for medical purposes. Elders served from September 1993 to December 1994, when she was dismissed after suggesting masturbation be explained in schools. The post has been vacant ever since.

Now, the nation is — yet again — left without a surgeon general. More than halfway through Clinton's term, it seems the spot may remain empty for the remainder.

Many are questioning the need for a surgeon general. An article in USA Today last Friday related the opinion of Senate Majority Leader and presidential hopeful Bob Dole, R-Kan., the position really isn't a necessity. "The world won't come to an end if we don't ever fill this office, or if it's abolished," he said.

However, since its creation in 1870, the surgeon general role has proved to be rather important. It was Surgeon General Luther Terry who released the first report linking smoking to lung cancer in the '60s. During former President Ronald Reagan's term, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop launched a huge anti-smoking crusade and AIDS prevention campaign, which included advice on condom use.

Past surgeon generals have discovered some very vital information. The position is, as Ralph Hale of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said in USA Today, "very important to the American people to have someone with a health background to speak out on issues like teen pregnancy, breast cancer and heart disease."

Because Elders and Foster chose to speak on abortion, masturbation and other taboo topics, many feel they are unfit to be surgeon general. If Foster is so unfit to be surgeon general, why has he led a campaign against teenage pregnancy in Nashville for years, and why is that one of the things required of the new surgeon general?

Foster's opponents don't want to eliminate the office of surgeon general itself; they want to omit topics they don't consider suitable for public discussion. Because Foster and Elders chose to speak on what many didn't deem appropriate, they were barred from being surgeon general.

However, sex is a part of health that can't be ignored. If past surgeon generals — like Koop — hadn't spoken about AIDS prevention, many people would remain uninformed. The role of surgeon general is a very important one, in which the public is educated about disease, health and proper diet and nutrition. Without this person, many Americans would be left in the dark.

Clichés incorrectly worded by DI writers

To the Editor:

With all due respect, if you intend to allow cliché-ridden prose into The Daily Iowan, you might want to make sure the clichés are correctly worded. Inform Devon Alexander, for example — colorful though the latter may be — the term is "buck-naked," not "butt-naked" ("Attack of the testosterone T-shirts" DI, June 22).

Similarly, Shannon Stevens ("The Tribe's been opening some eyes in Cleveland" DI Sports, June 22) should be told the phrase is "for all intents and purposes," not "for all intensive purposes."

As a whole, I think your writers might find the Idioms and Phrases Index available in the UI Main Library an informative read.

Lawsuit concerning pigeons sets precedent

To the Editor:

It seems every time you turn around, somebody's doing something making you wonder how the human species possibly made it out of the caves if Cro-Magnons like them existed. The impending lawsuit filed by Mary Ann Rasmussen and Stephen Vlastos against their neighbor, Donald Seydel, and his pigeons made me think just such thoughts (DI, June 22).

Don't get me wrong. I sympathize with Rasmussen's problems with allergies severe enough to trigger asthma attacks. Since I live with someone who suffers from both allergies and asthma, it's hard not to. But living with this person has also taught me this kind of affliction can be controlled.

It is my understanding (based on an Iowa City Press-Citizen article) Rasmussen's attacks are only set off when she goes into the far back of her yard, and prior to an attempt at gardening back there last summer, Seydel's pigeons caused Rasmussen no problems.

There's the old joke about a man who walked into a doctor's office and said, "Doctor, it hurts my arm when I move it like this." The doctor turned to him and replied, "Well, maybe you shouldn't move your arm like that." I think the analogy is clear.

As for things like the noxious odors mentioned in the petition, again my heart goes out to her. I've moved a lot, so I've had wonderful neighbors and I've had neighbors who must surely have been summoned from the darkest depths of Hell. Seydel, in my book, does not fit either category. So he's got an unusual hobby. Think of it this way: It could be much worse. He could have filed a specious complaint against one of his brand-new neighbors.

To end on a lighter note, I'd like to point out what kind of precedent this lawsuit could set. Seydel's pigeons are not those filthy city birds with which we are all familiar. They are pets. If he is forced to give them up, other types of pets could be separated from their loving owners because someone who moved in next door happened to be allergic to them. I hope none of Rasmussen's other neighbors have cats or dogs.

Got a light? Engineering a nuclear cookout

Today's culinary topic is: How to Light a Charcoal Fire.

Everybody loves a backyard barbecue. For some reason, food just seems to taste better when it has been cooked outdoors, where flies can lay eggs on it.

But there's nothing worse — and I include the Great Depression in that statement — than trying to set fire to a pile of balky charcoal.

(For those of you who actually went through the Great Depression and are offended by the previous sentence, let me state — in all sincerity — "Balky Charcoal" would be a good name for a rock band.)

The average backyard chef, wishing to cook hamburgers, tries to ignite the charcoal via the Squirt, Light and Wait method — wherein you squirt lighter fluid on a pile of briquettes, light the pile and wait until they have turned a uniform gray color.

When I say "they have turned a uniform gray color," I am referring to the hamburgers. The briquettes will remain as cold and lifeless as Leonard Nimoy. The backyard chef will keep this up — squirting, lighting, waiting, squirting, lighting, waiting — until the bacterial level in the side dishes has reached the point where the potato salad rises up from its bowl — Blob-like — and attempts to mate with the corn. This is the signal that it's time to order Chinese food.

The problem is modern charcoal, manufactured under strict consumer-safety guidelines, is one of the least-flammable substances on Earth. On more than one occasion, quick-thinking individuals have extinguished a raging house fire by throwing charcoal on it. Your backyard chef would be just as successful trying to ignite a pile of rocks.

Is there a solution? Yes. There happens to be a technique guaranteed to get your charcoal burning very, very quickly, although you should not attempt this technique unless you are a complete idiot.

I found out about this technique from alert reader George Rasko, who sent me a letter describing something he came across on the World Wide Web, an exciting new computer network you should definitely learn more about, because as you read these words, your 11-year-old is downloading pornography from it.

By hooking into the World Wide Web, you can look at a wide variety of electronic "pages," consisting of documents, pictures and video created by people from all over the world. One of these is a guy named (really) George Goble, a computer person in the Purdue University engineering department.

Each year, Goble and a bunch of other engineers hold a picnic in West Lafayette, Ind., at which they cook hamburgers on a big grill. Being engineers, they began looking for practical ways to speed up the charcoal-lighting process.

"We started by blowing the charcoal with a hair dryer," Goble told me in a telephone interview. "Then we figured out that it would light faster if we used a vacuum cleaner."

If you know anything about (1) engineers, and (2) guys in general, you know what happened: The purpose of the charcoal-lighting shifted from cooking hamburgers to seeing how fast they could light the charcoal.

From the vacuum cleaner, they escalated to using compressed pure oxygen, which caused the charcoal to burn much faster, because as you recall from chemistry class, fire is essentially the rapid combination of oxygen with the cosine to form the Tigris and Euphrates rivers (or something along those lines).

By this point, Goble was getting pretty good times. But in the world of competitive charcoal-lighting, "pretty good" does not cut the mustard. Thus Goble hit upon the idea of using — get ready — liquid oxygen. This is the form of oxygen used in rocket engines; it's 295 degrees below zero and 600 times as dense as regular oxygen.

In terms of releasing energy, pouring liquid oxygen on charcoal is the equivalent of throwing a live squirrel into a room containing 50 million Labrador retrievers. On Goble's World Wide Web page (<http://ghg.ecn.purdue.edu/>), you can see actual photographs and a video of Goble using a bucket attached to a 10-foot long wooden handle to dump three gallons of liquid oxygen (not sold in stores) onto a grill containing 60 pounds of charcoal and a lit cigarette for ignition.

What follows is the most impressive charcoal-lighting I have ever seen, featuring a large fireball that — according to Goble — reached 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The charcoal was ready for cooking in — this has to be a world record — three seconds.

There's also a photo of what happened when Goble used the same technique on a flimsy little $2.88 discount-store grill. All that's left is a circle of charcoal with a few shreds of metal in it.

"Basically, the grill vaporized," said Goble. "We were thinking of returning it to the store for a refund."

Looking at Goble's video and photos, I became — as an American — all choked up with gratitude at the fact that I do not live anywhere near the engineers' picnic site. But also I was proud of my country, for producing guys who can be ready to barbecue in less time than it takes for guys in less-advanced nations — such as France — to spit.

Will the three-second barrier ever be broken? Will engineers come up with a new, more-powerful charcoal-lighting technology? It's something for all of us to ponder this summer as we sit outside, chewing our hamburgers, every now and then glancing in the direction of West Lafayette, Ind., looking for a mushroom cloud.

GUEST OPINION • SCOTT GRAU

Republicans: Humbug and misrepresentation?

Ray Calef and Andy Myers promise to "smoke" their opponents "like a cheap cigar." Judging by the confusion, mistakes, misinformation and misrepresentations in their June 12 guest opinion, the only thing they've been smoking is some bad twitchweed.

It's not clear to which 40-year time period they are referring in mentioning the alleged "socialist / liberal" policies of the past, but to suggest that any U.S. presidential administration during the 20th century has been "socialist" is patently absurd.

Although not one of the conclusions in the article stands up to close scrutiny and the use of evidence in the arguments they offer is seriously flawed if not outright dishonest, space does not permit me to pick apart every misrepresentation; let me point out a few egregious problems.

They suggest the rich already "pay more than their fair share in federal taxes," since the richest 1 percent of taxpayers paid more than 25 percent of all federal taxes in 1990. First, they can't even get their numbers right, since they confuse "income taxes" with "all federal taxes." According to the Congressional Budget Office, the top 1 percent paid 24.1 percent of federal income taxes in 1990, but just 14.9 percent of all federal taxes.

But their mistake runs deeper than this. It's true the wealthier are paying more taxes today than in 1980, but they are making much more money. While working Americans during the 1980s saw their real pre-tax income slide, the income of the wealthiest Americans has increased dramatically since the 1970s.

Calef and Myers neglect to point out the huge shift of income (and wealth) toward the top 20 percent of the population since Reagan took office. In fact, since 1979, about 98 percent of all household income growth has gone to the top 5 percent of Americans, according to Census Bureau data compiled by the Department of Labor. The share of national private wealth owned by the wealthiest 1 percent of the population has increased to 40 percent since the late 1970s.

The tax burden went up for the poorest 60 percent of the population during the 1980s, while it dropped for the wealthiest 20 percent. Changes in the federal tax code since 1980 have made the overall burden of taxation more regressive, especially since Republican administrations began using Social Security surpluses to mask the size of the federal deficit created by massive income and corporate tax cuts and military expenditure increases in the 1980s.

Leaving aside for the moment the inherent complexity of defining poverty levels, it nevertheless is plainly false to assert — as Calef and Myers do — the poverty level in the United States today has increased to its highest level in history. This is not to say, however, poverty today is no problem. Since the Reagan years, average poverty rate levels have hovered between 13 and 15 percent, well above the average levels of the "socialist" years between 1969 and 1980. Moreover, the percentage of children living in poverty in the 1980s increased by 22 percent, according to U.S. Census data.

Again, however, Calef and Myers use misleading statistics to paint a false picture of Republican prosperity. By a very misleading and selective choice of framing dates, 1983 and 1989, they imply the Reagan administration presided over a dramatic reduction in poverty, which is far from the truth.

Keep in mind that 1983 was a severe recession year, with post-war record high unemployment rates. The number of people in poverty peaked at 35.3 million people, or 15.2 percent of the population. It does not prove much to say that poverty levels dropped from such high levels. By contrast, their other date, 1989, came at the end of a period of economic depression. It is true the number of people in poverty dropped down to 31.7 million, although this still amounted to 13 percent of the population, well above poverty levels in the 1970s.

From 1976 to 1979, poverty rates had hovered between 11.4 and 11.8 percent. But after Reagan took office, things got worse. With 1983 and 1988 as our bracket dates, we see an increase of 2.4 million people in poverty, many of them children. Calef and Myers are playing games with numbers by selectively and dishonestly choosing two dates most favorable to their argument to hide the larger picture of increasing general levels of poverty and unemployment.

Calef and Myers suggest a debate, which is a great idea. Let's just hope the next time they take to a public forum, they try to be more careful to get their facts right. But let's not hold our breath. Calef and Myers offer us a reminder that for humbug and misrepresentation, there is no party like the Republican Party.

J.C. EVENT BEGINS MONDAY NIGHT

From legends to fresh faces: Jazzfest promises feisty grooves

Jan Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Celebrating five straight years as a local source of culture, as well as its own ever-increasing popularity, the Iowa City Jazz Festival kicks off Monday evening for two days of music to satisfy every jazz lover's taste.

This year's festival continues a tradition that has built up steam steadily since the event's 1990 creation. The yearly gathering has attracted such legends as Thelonius Monk Jr. and has boasted attendance in excess of 15,000 — a number co-director Steve Grismore said organizers hope to reach this year.

The festival has weathered one rain-out during the flood-drenched summer of '93, and its creators continue to bring in top names in the jazz field while creating new events each summer to keep stagnation out of the picture.

The fresh addition to this year's festival is a performance by two local groups Monday evening on the main stage, located facing west at the corner of Dubuque and Washington streets.

Sharing Monday's lineup with the Jazz Ambassadors of the United States Army Field Band are the Iowa City Unified Jazz Ensemble and the Often Ensemble. The Unified Ensemble is a fusion of City High School and West High School jazz groups, while the Often Ensemble is an 11-piece band made up of Iowa City and Cedar Rapids musicians with an ear for contemporary sounds.

Grismore said he believes the variety of jazz groups make the festival the only authentic jazz festival in Iowa.

"In my opinion, it's really the only jazz festival in the state," Grismore said. "It's not just a Dixieland or a blues festival. We have avant-garde, big band, blues — we try to cover the spectrum. Plus, it's free."

Tuesday's events, beginning at noon, prove Grismore true to his word, starting with the modern jazz band Strange Pursuit. The group's unpredictable set list could include originals, as well as anything from Thelonius Monk to Tom Waits.

Local blues favorites The Blues

Instigators and the Latino rhythm of Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz round out the afternoon.

Orquesta's exuberant presence and sweat-soaked set list, including shots from Santana and Tito Puente, promise to have the festival crowd forming conga lines with their inherently danceable grooves. Grismore, a guitarist with the ensemble, said his foundations in jazz have helped him come up with a notable lineup.

"Being a jazz musician, I try to really bring in stuff that's for real," Grismore said. "For example, Roy Haynes is a master and has been for years."

Chicago jazz saxophonist Earl LaVon "Von" Freeman, now in his 70s, is up next; his set will feature the unique "Chicago" jazz style, which Freeman alone is credited with keeping alive. Having once turned down an offer to tour with Miles Davis as a replacement for John Coltrane, Freeman has chosen instead to stay in the Midwest, concentrating on redefining Chicago jazz and pushing his sound in new directions.

The Dirty Dozen Brass Band, another group credited with resusc-tating a dying tradition, takes up the penultimate spot in Tuesday night's lineup. The Dozen's revival of "second line" jazz — the famous type of upbeat music played by brass bands during funeral parades —, as well as a full range of jazz and Dixieland styles.

The festival concludes with headliners the Roy Haynes Group. Haynes, one of the most influential pioneers of jazz drumming, has been called by jazz guitarist Pat Metheny "the father of modern drumming."

Considered by many artists and critics as the link between bebop and contemporary styles, Haynes is the only drummer to have worked with jazz legends as Louis Armstrong, Charlie Parker, Lester Young and John Coltrane. Although Grismore analogized using downpours, he said he's hoping for sunshine for the two-day festival.

"It's really such a large umbrella," he said. "There are so many different groups and styles, those who are not as familiar with jazz might as well give it a shot."

Though not quite as cool as Flash Gordon ("Flash! A-aah!" Pardon the Freddie Mercury memorial moment), the Kevin Gordon Band flashes into Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight with its bluesy-rock funk. And if you never found time to join the Sailing Club, Society for Creative Anachronism, Brownies or S.A.D.D., take heart. Saturday is Club Hangout night. Hang out with some righteous dudes in a club of your own — oh, that's not what it means? Go anyway. It sounds like it's almost as cool a concept.

So, there it is. With the Sanctuary taking the weekend off, it's a bit of a short list. Of course, all things should be done in moderation. Or as a philosophical friend of mine likes to say, "Shouldn't it be 'All things should sort of be done in moderation'?"

Bomber threatens to kill again

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Unabomber is threatening to kill one more time even if a 35,000-word revolutionary manifesto he wrote is published in Penthouse magazine, The New York Times reported in today's edition.

The threat, in a letter the bomber sent to Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione, apparently is intended to pressure the Times or The Washington Post — publications he called "respectable" — into publishing his tract and three annual follow-ups, the Times reported.

The Unabomber said in letters to the newspapers he wants one of them to publish the material within three months. But even if that happens, the bomber — who has killed three and wounded 23 in 16 mail bombings since 1978 — refuses to swear off sabotage, only attacks against people.

The Times and Post received copies of the manuscript Wednesday.

Jackie Markham, spokeswoman for General Media, the parent of Penthouse, said late Thursday that Guccione hadn't received the manuscript yet but talked on the phone earlier this week with a man who said the Unabomber would be sending him a package.

When Unabomber first disclosed in April he was writing the manuscript and wanted it published, Guccione said he would print the tract in full if the bombings stopped. Markham said Guccione stands by that offer.

The newspapers' publishers said in statements Thursday they were studying their options.

"One issue that we find especially troubling is the demand that we not only publish the initial document but then open our pages for annual follow-ups over the next three years. Such a commitment is not easily made," Arthur Sulzberger Jr., publisher of the Times, said in a statement.

In today's edition, the Times summarized and quoted from the self-described anarchist's manuscript, titled Industrial Society and its Future.

The Times described the 62-page, single-spaced document as "touching on politics, history, sociology and science as it posits a cataclysmic struggle between freedom and technology."

The manuscript begins: "The industrial revolution and its consequences have been a disaster for the human race."

The author, a self-described anarchist, calls for a political revolution, aimed not at governments but the economic and technological basis of society, the Times said.

The bomber called for factories to be destroyed, technical books burned and leaders overthrown, with the hope that the ensuing chaos would foster a return to "wild nature." He railed against what he described as an international elite of government and corporate officials.

The author also devoted long passages to "the psychology of modern leftism," the sources of social problems in modern life and the freedom of individuals, the newspaper reported.

The Unabomber said little about his past attacks, the Times said, but he did write: "In order to get our message before the public with some chance of making a lasting impression, we've had to kill people."

The bomber sent the Times letters accompanying the manifesto and indicated he had sent copies of those letters to the Post, Guccione and Scientific American magazine, the Times reported. It said the FBI had confirmed the materials as authentic.

In the letter to Scientific American, the Times said, the writer showed considerable skill in discussing an article on whether advanced nuclear reactors could initiate runaway reactions.

In the letters, he called the FBI "surprisingly incompetent" and he criticized what he described as journalistic inaccuracies in describing his motives.

He also derided the FBI's theory that he has a fascination with wood. Authorities say he has shown a fascination with wood in building the bombs and choosing targets.

The Unabomber offered the Times and Post first claim to publish, and said Penthouse would get publication rights if the newspapers refused, the Times reported.

Miami sued by the Knicks

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks filed tampering charges against the Miami Heat on Thursday for comments by club executives interested in hiring Pat Riley.

Riley resigned as coach of the Knicks on June 15 with one year left on his contract after four seasons with the team.

Knicks president Dave Checketts said his team filed charges with NBA commissioner David Stern after reading newspaper quotes from Heat owner Micky Arison and Dave Wohl, the team's executive vice president.

Heat and league officials were not immediately available for comment. Riley returned this week from Greece, where he had been vacationing and holding clinics in conjunction with the European Championships.

Webb returns to Hawks

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Spud Webb, the 5-foot-7 point guard who became expendable when Sacramento drafted Tyus Edney, was traded by the Kings on Thursday to the Atlanta Hawks for journeyman Tyrone Corbin.

Webb, who won the NBA slam dunk contest in 1986 despite being one of the NBA's shortest players, is returning to the team where he played his first six seasons.

Jerry Reynolds, the Kings' director of player personnel, said the trade is likely the beginning of a series of moves to strengthen a club that missed the playoffs by one game last year.

Corbin, a 6-6 forward, will be joining his seventh NBA team, having previously played for San Antonio, Cleveland, Phoenix, Minnesota, Utah and Atlanta.

Lawyer says Rodman must accept responsibility

ATLANTA (AP) — Dennis Rodman must pay for his irresponsibility in infecting a former Atlanta Hawks cheerleader with a disease she will have for the rest of her life, her lawyer said Thursday.

Lisa Beth Judd, 24, claims the NBA star infected her with herpes when they had sex Jan. 14, 1993.

Trigg asked the jury to award Judd $1.25 million in punitive damages, an additional $580,000 in compensatory damages and more than $191,000 in attorney's fees. The $1.25 million is half of Rodman's annual income.

50-year-old woman blackmailed Strawberry

NEW YORK (AP) — A California woman has been arrested for allegedly threatening to reveal embarrassing information about Darryl Strawberry if the outfielder didn't pay her $300,000, a law enforcement source said today.

The 50-year-old woman, who identified herself as Judith Lee, was arrested Tuesday at the Manhattan office of lawyer Bill Goodstein, who is Strawberry's agent, and charged with extortion, Joe Valiquette, spokesman for the FBI's New York office confirmed.

UI gains a coach, tries to retain another Long returns to Hawkeyes Stringer receives deadline

The Daily Iowan

He just couldn't stay away from football. Less than two weeks after retiring from the NFL, former Iowa quarterback Chuck Long has returned to the Hawkeyes as an assistant coach.

Long was named defensive backfield coach Thursday, replacing Bob Elliott.

The 1985 Heisman Trophy runner-up is ideal for his new assignment, Coach Hayden Fry said.

"(Long) brings some unique qualities," Fry said. "Certainly not many people know defensive backs better than someone who has spent 15 years reading defenses."

Long spent nine years in the NFL, eight of those with the Detroit Lions.

After he retired last week, Long expressed his desire to enter the coaching ranks.

"I was fortunate to play nine years in the NFL ... But I still have a passion for the game and that is why I'd love to return to coaching," he said.

The first player to play in five college bowl games (beginning with the 1981 Rose Bowl and concluding with the 1985 Rose Bowl), Long makes one aspect of his trip back to Iowa City another first.

"I feel very proud of this appointment because Chuck becomes the first Iowa player in which I've coached to come back as a full-time assistant," Fry said.

Long is the only Big Ten player to ever pass for more than 10,000 yards in a career, a big part of which was in his senior season.

Nearly 3,300 yards passing and 27 touchdowns locked Long in a Heisman Award battle with eventual trophy winner Bo Jackson of Auburn.

The Daily Iowan

Another week has passed and there is still no word on what Iowa women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer plans on doing.

Her choices: Stay at Iowa or take her talents to Rutgers University in New Jersey.

Rumors of her possible departure have been circling for over a week and it seems that University of Iowa faculty and fans aren't the only ones waiting for her decision.

The Home News in East Brunswick, N.J., is reporting today that Rutgers plans to make an announcement on who will become their newest head coach by next Friday. It seems that the decision is up to Stringer and the school will wait one more week for her.

Stringer has certainly shown interest in the job, based on two visits to the university. However, that's the only apparent clue.

"We haven't talked today," UI women's athletic director Dr. Christine Grant said Thursday. "Vivian is really trying to think through this right now. I'm not trying to pressure her one way or the other."

Iowa basketball player Jenny Noll also said she hadn't heard anything from Stringer, but said it would be a big disappointment if Stringer left.

"She's a great coach and she's one of the main reasons I came here and most of my teammates came here," Noll said. "Everybody including the whole state of Iowa would be upset if she left, but if she decides to leave we're 100% behind her decision."

Grant said it would be hard to replace a coach of Stringer's caliber.

"Everybody in her department is hoping that she'll stay and we'll do anything we can to insure that."

WIMBLEDON, England — Andre Agassi's crushing returns, faster than any serves he's seen so far, are the hottest shots in one of the hottest Wimbledons in history.

Tar roads melted and trains stalled in the heat wave around the country, and the temperature soared to 102 degrees Thursday on Centre Court by the time Agassi and Patrick McEnroe bowed in greeting to the Royal Box.

On Court 14, the heat and the blazing serves of a 6-foot-8 newcomer from Belgium, Dick Norman, already had ground down former two-time champion Stefan Edberg, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 — the first of four seeded men to fall on the day.

"He's like a giant," exclaimed a stunned Edberg, at 29 a mere shadow of the player who won six Grand Slam titles. "You feel like David and Goliath out there."

Jim Courier, a finalist two years ago and now seeded No. 11, was sweating halfway through his 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 loss to Cedric Pioline. No. 3 Boris Becker was beginning a four-set victory over Jan Apell, Jeff Tarango was on his way to knocking out No. 15 Andrei Medvedev in four, and Petr Korda was just warming up for a 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 upset of No. 5 Michael Chang.

Serves were flying fast everywhere. Marc Goellner smacked 31 aces but still lost 4-6, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4 to unseeded Mats Wilander, playing Wimbledon for the first time since 1989 and rallying from two sets down for only the third time in his career.

But the man with the antidote for even the hardest serves was Agassi, one of only seven seeded men left in the tournament — the fewest number to advance to the third round at Wimbledon in the Open era in a year when there were 16 seeds.

McEnroe the Younger may not be the biggest serving threat, but the way Agassi

Foreman surrenders belt without a fight

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — George Foreman has given up the last of his heavyweight titles rather than accept a mandate by the IBF that he fight a rematch with Germany's Axel Schulz, promoter Bob Arum said.

Foreman, the oldest heavyweight champion in history, will fight only once more, probably against Michael Moorer either late this year or early next year, Arum said.

Arum had faced a July 3 deadline from the IBF to get an agreement on a rematch with Schulz, who lost a disputed decision April 22 in Las Vegas to the 47-year-old Foreman.

Foreman has said all along that he plans to fight only once more, and Arum said a Schulz fight without the time mandated by the IBF would not be financially feasible.

IBF president Bob Lee said Foreman had yet to notify his organization about his action. He said the IBF would fill its vacant title by a fight between No. 1 contender Frans Botha of South Africa and Schulz, who was moved up to No. 2 in the latest ratings.

Foreman won both the IBF and WBA versions of the heavyweight title last November when he knocked out Moorer.

The WBA earlier stripped Foreman of its title because he did not defend against the top contender at the time, Tony Tucker. Its champion is now Bruce Seldon.

DREAM TEAM III

Can we get any more obnoxious?

Let's get one thing straight: I think Dream Team II was the most embarrassing thing to happen to the United States since The Bay of Pigs.

Loud, immature athletes, spoiled by multi-million dollar contracts and naive that the rest of the world doesn't play basketball like we do, made a mockery of the game during the summer of 1994.

Who could ever forget Larry Johnson thundering in for a dunk, then pausing right in front of the camera to wipe fake tears from his eyes. And Derrick Coleman, slamming over a Brazilian point guard, then glaring at him as if he'd just dunked over Hakeem Olajuwon.

The U.S. proved its point with the first Dream Team, now it's time to turn the reigns back over to the college players.

The Olympic Committee, however, didn't see it that way, and a tentative roster was set this week for Dream Team III. I couldn't be more opposed to the idea, but as the Zen proverb goes, "If you're going to drown, it may as well be in deep water."

So sticking with the embarrassment motif set by last year's squad, here's a short list of 12 NBA players up to the standards of the newest Dream Team.

- Chris Webber (co-captain): Who better than the King of Complaint to head up this merry band of hard-wood ambassadors? As long as new head coach Quinn Buckner doesn't damage Webber's glass ego, the Michigan alum will be to Angola what Jerry Lewis is to France.

- Latrell Sprewell (co-captain): The only problem here is that Sprewell might become difficult to get along with if the team decides to make some moves to better itself. (Sprewell pouted when Golden State traded so-so forward Billy Owens for desperately-needed center Rony Seikaly).

- Chuck Person: Senior leadership. He can teach the youngsters how to "talk the talk," without "walking the walk."

- Chris Morris: He'll show Europe how to get out of practice by refusing to tie his shoe strings, a tactic he employed last season in New Jersey.

It was a shot that set the tone for the match and showed why Agassi has such a good chance of regaining the title he won in 1992. Seattle halts A's winning streak

Associated Press

Mariners 5, Athletics 2

SEATTLE — Mike Blowers hit a three-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning Thursday as the Seattle Mariners rallied to beat Oakland 5-2 and stop the Athletics' four-game winning streak.

With Oakland ahead 2-1, pinch-hitter Doug Strange singled off Mark Acre (1-2) to drive in the tying run. Blowers then hit a 1-0 pitch about 420 feet into the left-centerfield stands for his fourth homer this season.

Chris Bosio (6-1) allowed one earned run and six hits in eight innings. Bobby Ayala finished for his 12th save.

Acre hit Joey Cora with a pitch starting the ninth. Two outs later, with Cora at second, Acre intentionally walked Tino Martinez and Strange followed with the tying single.

As starter Ron Darling, who lost to the Mariners three times last season, allowed one run and four hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Terry Steinbach hit an RBI groundout off Chris Bosio in the second, and consecutive doubles by Scott Brosius and Brent Gates made it 2-0 in the third.

Red Sox 7, Tigers 1

BOSTON — Tim Wakefield won his first game in four starts and Mike Macfarlane homered as the Boston Red Sox increased their AL East lead over Detroit to six games with a 7-1 win Thursday over the Tigers.

Macfarlane's 10th homer of the season, a leadoff shot in the fifth off Mike Moore (5-6), broke a 1-1 tie.

Boston added five runs in the eighth, the big blow being Mike Greenwell's bases-loaded single that brought home three runs when it eluded right fielder Danny Bautista for an error.

Wakefield (5-1), who pitched his third complete game, struggled through the first four innings, allowing one run on eight hits.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 1

TORONTO — Joe Carter hit two of Toronto's four home runs and Juan Guzman went the distance with a seven-hitter as the Blue Jays snapped the Orioles' four-game winning streak.

Guzman (2-3) was within three outs of his second career shutout when Harold Baines led off the ninth with his ninth homer. He struck out seven and walked one in his first complete game of the season.

Carter led off the second with his ninth homer and opened the fourth with another to make it 3-0.

Ed Sprague homered in the second and Roberto Alomar hit one in the fifth to make it 5-0.

Sid Fernandez (0-4) gave up three runs and five hits over 3 2-3 innings in his first start since going on the disabled list with a strained joint in his left shoulder on June 7.

Indians 10, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Eddie Murray of the Indians moved within one hit of 3,000 with a home run and single, then made outs in his last four at-bats.

Murray hit a two-run homer in the first and a single in the second off Scott Erickson (3-6).

He struck out in the fourth and fifth and grounded out in the seventh and ninth. Murray is trying to become the 20th player, and just the second switch-hitter besides Pete Rose, to reach the 3,000-hit mark.

The Indians increased their lead to 5-0 in the second on a two-run homer by Carlos Baerga.

Bud Black (4-2) pitched six innings, allowing three runs on eight hits.

White Sox 17, Brewers 13

MILWAUKEE — Robin Ventura had five of Chicago's season-high 22 hits and Ray Durham and Craig Grebeck each had four RBIs as the White Sox won their seventh straight, while handing the Brewers their seventh loss in a row.

There were two dugout-clearing incidents resulting in the sixth-inning ejection of Milwaukee reliever Bill Wegman and the ninth-inning ejections of Chicago reliever Rob Dibble and Brewers second baseman Pat Listach.

The teams combined for 36 hits, 17 for extra bases.

The Brewers trailed 17-10 after the second inning and closed the gap with a three-run double by David Hulse off Tim Lincecum, who walked three and gave up the double after replacing Dibble. Roberto Hernandez got the final three outs.

Milwaukee rookie Brian Givens (0-2) allowed nine earned runs on 13 hits in 4 2-3 innings, while Wegman gave up four earned runs on four hits in two-thirds of an inning.

SEASON-LONG SLUMP

Hoiles struggles in opening months

David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Chris Hoiles' customary early-season slump has become a lengthy, agonizing struggle of which there is seemingly no escape.

Hoiles and his new three-year contract have found their way to the Baltimore Orioles' bench.

He was batting .176 through Wednesday, 91 points below his career mark and 134 points off the .310 average he had two seasons ago.

His hitting drought was understandable in May, given that the fifth-year catcher has a lifetime average of .242 over the first month of the season.

But Hoiles' had only one multi-hit game since May 27 and only four hits over the past two weeks.

"When things are going like they are, it's hard not to think about it. You think about on the field, off the field, when you eat, everywhere you go," he said.

Lately he's had the chance to

"You've just got to tell yourself that things are going to come around. You can't beat yourself over the head or go crazy every time you make an out."

Chris Hoiles, Orioles' catcher on his season-long slump ponder his slump on the bench.

Manager Phil Regan opted this week to use rookie Greg Zaun against right-handed pitchers in favor of the struggling Hoiles.

Last year, Hoiles batted sixth behind guys like Rafael Palmeiro, Cal Ripken and Harold Baines.

Now he's usually seventh, where an 0-for-4 performance isn't as harmful.

Hoiles said while it hurts being moved down in the lineup, he understands Regan's motives.

"When you're struggling and not getting hits and not driving in guys, they move you down in the order," Hoiles said.

"I don't want to be down there. I want to be hitting with the Ripkens and Baines."

When he started the season off poorly, Hoiles attributed his difficulties to a pair of problems: a sore shoulder in spring training and his propensity to often stumble out of the starting gate.

At this point, though, he concedes that his problems at the plate are more serious than the norm.

"It's definitely been a struggle all year," he said.

"You've just got to tell yourself that things are going to come around. You can't beat yourself over the head or go crazy every time you make an out."

That's the advice Hoiles got from Ripken, who has experienced more than a slump or two during his career.

"We talk all the time," Ripken said. "You don't want to make a big deal out of it because it only complicates things."

"Generally speaking, I can say, 'Hey, it will get better,' and he knows it because I've been through it, too."

While his slump drones on, Hoiles must be content to contribute in other ways.

In addition to blocking the plate and cutting down would-be base stealers, Hoiles is obligated to provide guidance to a struggling pitching staff.

"Everybody looks at his offense like that's the only part of his game," Baltimore pitcher Mike Mussina said.

"But he's got to call the game, worry about how the pitchers are doing, relay signs from the dugout and all this other stuff."

"Luckily, he hasn't had any problems doing that."

It hasn't been easy. "I'd be lying if I said it was simple to separate the hitting from the catching," Hoiles said.

"You go through a period where you're struggling mentally and physically, trying to change things, but nothing's working for you. You can't help but take it out to the field with you."

"Strange Pursuit was born one very warm evening in the Red Hook section of Brooklyn. The audience consisted of hard drinking dock workers who lived in the neighborhood and artists who use the warehouses for loft space. We seemed to appeal to all concerned. ON HIS 36TH BIRTHDAY

Hartsburg takes over Blackhawks

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Craig Hartsburg remembers the slashes and spears, the high sticks and heavy fists. He remembers the blood trickling out of his nose and over his upper lip. He remembers the sound of 18,000 loathsome voices ringing through the Chicago Stadium rafters.

"Ten years ago," he said, "the team I probably hated the most was the Chicago Blackhawks."

Now the former Minnesota North Stars defenseman and captain is not just part of the team he used to detest, he's in charge of it.

Thursday — Hartsburg's 36th birthday — the Blackhawks named him coach and gave him a three-year contract.

Hartsburg, the 30th coach in club history, replaces Darryl Sutter, who resigned last week to spend more time with his family.

After first interviewing with the Blackhawks last week, Hartsburg told his wife, Peggy: "That's the place I want to be. It's the greatest sports city in North America and the best hockey organization in the world."

After retiring with 98 goals and 315 assists in 570 games, Hartsburg spent one year as an assistant coach in Minnesota. He was then an assistant for four years in Philadelphia before guiding the Guelph Storm to the best record in the Ontario Hockey League last season.

"There are six teams without head coaches, and I know for a fact that three of those have Hartsburg number one on their lists," Chicago general

Arnold Palmer approaches No. 18 during the first round of the U.S. Senior Open in Bethesda, Md., Thursday.

Ringer and Snead nab early lead

David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BETHESDA, Md. — The only thing better than playing golf with Arnold Palmer is playing better than Arnold Palmer.

Just ask Larry Ringer. One day after enjoying a practice round with his favorite golfer, Ringer shot a 4-under-par 68 to share the lead with J.C. Snead after Thursday's opening round of the U.S. Senior Open.

Regardless of how he fares in the $1 million tournament, Ringer will never forget this week.

The thrills began Wednesday, when the former golf coach at the Naval Academy found himself in a foursome with Palmer.

"That made my day," Ringer said. "It made my year."

Just when he thought things couldn't get any better, Ringer had the round of his life Thursday. He didn't make a bogey, had 12 one-putt greens and twice drained putts of more than 30 feet.

"Yesterday I played with the king, and today I played like a king," he said.

Palmer, meanwhile, had a 72 despite a double bogey after three-putting on the 14th hole. That left him 2-over, but birdies on Nos. 16 and 17 got him back to par.

"I'm pleased that I hit the ball solidly, but I'm not pleased with the score," Palmer said. "To be pleased, I'd have to be at the top of the leaderboard."

That distinction belonged to Ringer, a regular on the Senior Series, and Snead, who sank a 25-foot birdie putt on No. 17 to move into a tie for the lead.

"I missed one fairway and didn't miss a green. I can't do much better than that," said Snead, who had previously broken 70 only once in 16 rounds at the Senior Open.

His only bogey came on No. 6, when he three-putted from 15 feet.

Bob Murphy, a three-time winner on the Senior Tour this year, tied with Tom Weiskopf and four others at 69.

Raymond Floyd, Tommy Aaron and Isao Aoki were among several golfers who shot 70s on the damp, 6,945-yard Congressional Country Club course.

Jack Nicklaus had a 71, and Hale Irwin, Palmer and defending champion Simon Hobday were in a group at par. Lee Trevino and Gary Player had 73s.

Grades fall despite Proposition 48

Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — For the first time since Prop 48 established stricter academic standards for freshman athletes, graduation rates declined in men's basketball.

The graduation rate for Division I basketball players who entered college in 1988 was 42 percent, a drop from 46 percent for the previous class, an NCAA study shows.

The steepest decline was among white players, whose graduation rate fell from 57 percent for the 1987 class to 50 percent for the 1988 group. The rate for black players fell from 39 percent in 1987 to 37 percent in 1988.

"It's fascinating, but it's fascinating in a negative kind of way," said Dr. James Frank, commissioner of the predominantly black Southwestern Athletic Conference.

Under Prop 48, which went into effect in 1986, freshmen athletes had to meet minimum academic standards to play in their first year.

"It's fascinating, but it's fascinating in a negative kind of way."

Dr. Frank James, on the drop in the college graduation rate

The first two classes affected by Prop 48 showed slightly improved graduation rates for almost all groups of athletes.

The upward trend continued in the latest study for female athletes and Division I-A football players.

But the sharp decline among male basketball players may be cause for concern, especially because the dip occurred when even stricter academic requirements were supposed to have the opposite effect.

"We won't know what it means until we can study more data and see if there is a trend. But I think people are going to be concerned when they see this," said Marian Washington, Kansas women's basketball coach and a board member of the Black Coaches Association.

"It should alert people that there is reason to take a closer look at what we're doing with all our athletes."

The NCAA research is based on athletes who graduate within six years of enrolling, so the performance of the 1989 freshmen can't be calculated for another year.

"To attempt to make any definite conclusions at this point would be irresponsible," said Frank, who was NCAA president in 1983 when debate first began on Prop 48's standardized test scores, which some believed were racially biased.

Still, some people were alarmed by the falling graduation rate in men's basketball.

"There's been a broad-based assumption in college sports that we've tackled this issue and won," said Richard Lapchick, director of Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society. "It's impossible to know without analyzing the data. But this may challenge that assumption."

There was better news in football and women's sports.

Graduation rates for Division I-A football players rose from 55 percent for the freshman class of 1987 to 56 percent for the class of 1988. The figures for black players fell from 44 to 42 percent, but the rate for white players jumped from 63 to 64 percent.

The biggest strides were made by black female athletes.

Their 58 percent graduation rate was five percentage points better than the year before and 17 percentage points better than the overall rate for the black female student body.

New Jersey battles to hang onto Devils

Tom Canavan
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New Jersey Devils were given $33 million in concessions in a lease that was twice renegotiated because the NHL franchise was struggling at the time, the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority says.

The statement is made in court papers as part of a suit aimed at keeping the Devils from moving.

In documents filed Wednesday in the Chancery Division of Superior Court in Hackensack, sports authority head Robert Mulcahy suggested the Devils have become ingrates since winning the Stanley Cup.

"They now want to turn their backs on the sports authority and on the citizens of New Jersey, simply because the owners believe they can now make more money at another location," Mulcahy said in support of the sports authority's request for a restraining order to prevent the Devils from ending their Meadowlands Arena lease next week and possibly relocating to Nashville, Tenn.

Dick Evans of Gaylord Entertainment, who has a "hunting license" to bring pro hockey or basketball to the city, reminded reporters in Nashville that the city's offer was good to any NBA or NHL team.

And that offer has been "very well received," Evans said. "We are clearly the most aggressive." The deal is generous in sharing arena revenues with a pro sports team, and offers $20 million to relocate, and another $12.5 million to cover lost revenues once a team commits to relocating.

Cubs fall to St. Louis

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Ramon Caraballo hit his first major league home run and Ken Hill earned his first victory in six starts as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 6-4 Thursday to end a five-game losing streak.

Brian Jordan also homered in support of Hill (5-4), who won after four losses and a no-decision.

Hill's last victory came May 30 against the Colorado Rockies.

In seven innings, Hill allowed two runs on eight hits, walked two and struck out three.

Reds 10, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — Eric Anthony went 4-for-5, drove in four runs and scored three times as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 10-4 Thursday.

Pete Schourek (6-4) allowed six hits and four runs in 5 2/3 innings, and drove in two runs. Ron Gant hit his 16th home run and added two RBIs.

After Phils starter Paul Quantrill (7-3) struck out Barry Larkin to open the game, the Reds scored six runs in the inning.

Van's owners could help solve mystery of missing TV journalist

MASON CITY, Iowa (AP) — Police are looking for a 10-year-old white Ford Econoline van in connection with the disappearance of television newswoman Jodi Huisenruit.

Mason City Police Chief Jack Schlieper said the case is being handled as an abduction, not a missing person case, but people connected to the van are not necessarily suspects.

"I want to emphasize that the person or persons associated with the van are not necessarily suspects. They simply may have information that would help us in our investigation," he said.

"At least one person saw a van in the parking lot shortly before 4 a.m." the day Huisenruit disappeared, Schlieper said at a news conference. "Between 4 and 5 a.m., at least one scream was heard."

Huisenruit disappeared Tuesday. People with information may call police or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-383-0088.

Alleged Pizza Hut robber nabbed on Interstate 80

A Muscatine man was charged with second-degree robbery after allegedly fleeing Pizza Hut, 805 First Ave., Friday morning with an undetermined amount of cash.

Ricky McCoy, of Muscatine, allegedly entered Pizza Hut around 11:18 a.m. Friday, put an unknown object up to the manager's back and demanded money.

The manager watched the man drive away from the restaurant in a vehicle described as an older red Nissan. The manager then made a 911 call to the Iowa City Police Department. The suspect was described as a black male in his early- to mid-20s and 6 feet tall.

Iowa State Patrol officers stopped a vehicle matching the description on Interstate 80.

The driver was taken into custody and was held pending identification. The manager later identified McCoy as the alleged robber.
