While many inexperienced studentathletes may find the long summer waiting to be just a time to relax, at least one of them is using it as an opportunity to see some of the country's top high school and college teammates.

Winter clothing emerges among summer wear sales

Patricia Harris

The Daily Iowan - Iowa City, Iowa - Thursday, July 6, 1995 - 3

There are those shoppers who anxiously await the first snowfall to determine winter clothing. Others prefer the heat of summer, before the first frost, to make the transition to winter wear.

"It's nice to have only two seasons of weather," one shopper said. "In the summertime, there will only be one or two items to buy in a particular store."

Some of the items available now include: knits, sweaters, denim pants, coats and jackets.

"Basically, people are just like, 'Oh my god, it's fall!'" said one customer. "Summer isn't over yet.'"

Harkin seeks to improve relations with Vietnam

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said he wants to be the partner in Vietnam and the United States.

"They want us to be their partners probably more so than any other country." Sen. Tom Harkin, referring to Vietnam

Department officials have been in Vietnam

Harkin talked to former Attorney General Mike Myers and Dessie Bryant, who was charged with possession of a firearm in the state.

Harkin spoke during a telephone interview with Iowa reporters as he's on a mission to Vietnam to explore issues in the way of normalizing relations between the two countries.

Harkin, who was a Navy pilot during the war, said only one of the U.S. soldiers was in Vietnam who was shot down.

Jeff Blumenschenk was a Louisville soldier who was listed as missing in action at the time.

"He was reported standing after a bomb hit him and he had to crawl back to base," Harkin said.

"No one knows what ever happened to him," Harkin said. "I've got a plan to return from Vietnam.

Harkin said he wants to work with President Clinton and Hays to improve relations.

He said he hopes to be back in Vietnam in the fall, perhaps with a delegation of lawmakers from Iowa.

"We have a ton of stuff to do," he said. "We really have to make sure he's successful." Harkin said.

SUMMERS RAIL: THOUGHTS IN SUMMER

The end of the early fall clothing season is not so clear cut as some people still need them. Harkin said he expects that businesses will see a surge in the next month, and end of summer shoppers will look for fall and winter merchandise. People will look for fall and winter merchandise as they prepare for weather changes.

Harkin said, "Let's get a lot of people in fall and winter clothes.

Impulse buying of fall clothing will come.

That's because shoppers with tight credit limits will look for fall clothing in the next few weeks, while it's possible to return the first few days of the month, in time for fall prices.

"I'm going to get relations normalized," Harkin said.

That's because Harkin is a native of Iowa City and is a member of the Senate.

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing and Charles Smith, teammates on the New York Knicks, met in a hearing room Wednesday to discuss the investigation into their alleged role in a pay-for-play scheme during their time on the New York University basketball team.

Ewing, the New York Knicks' center, and Smith, the Knicks' point guard, were both suspended for an indefinite period after the NCAA said it had evidence of a pay-for-play scheme. The NCAA said the players were paid $500 each to play for the New York University basketball team.

Ewing, who is represented by a lawyer in the investigation, has denied the NCAA's allegations.

Smith, who is represented by his lawyer, has also denied the NCAA's allegations.

Ewing and Smith, who are both 23 years old, were both suspended for an indefinite period after the NCAA said it had evidence of a pay-for-play scheme.
