MORE THAN A GAME
Special Olympics
bringing out emotion

Until one has witnessed the Special Olympics first hand, it's hard to truly appreciate the magnitude of what its athletes have accomplished.

The first time I had the pleasure of watching my cousin Matt compete in the St. Louis Special Olympics was two summers ago. He played soccer — fullback — and would tumble on for months before the games about what he was going to do. Matt was 14 years old but possessed the body of a child half his age.

He was diagnosed at birth with Down's syndrome, but if you ask anyone in my family, Matt is sharp as a tack.

From the time he recited the pledge of Allegiance at age six to last Spring, when he got an A in math his sophomore year of high school, Matt has proven it's not the area of retention that he struggles with.

The biggest effect of his condition is his behavioral problem. His mother said that he just doesn't know how he's supposed to behave with other people, something I've always observed.

But when I caught my first glimpse of Matt that humid, St. Louis Saturday down on the soccer field, he didn't show any signs of misbehaving. There he was, working in unison with ten other Special Olympians toward a common goal: winning.

That goal mattered only to the players on the field, but was simply disregarded by family and friends in attendance who were in awe at the mere marvel of the festivities.

As I observed Matt maneuvering opposing forward toward the goal line, pride began to swell within me.

This was the same 14-year-old who just days before was scolded for spitting at his older sister. She had tried to turn off the TV while MacGyver was on.

Now, however, he was working part of a team.

I sat down next to my aunt to watch Matt's squad, barely noticing the irritation of the poorly mowed grass on my legs. At one point he stole the ball and began dribbling down field. Noticing an open path to the goal, Matt became excited, drew his right foot back and kicked over the ball, missing it completely.

He tumbled to the ground but quickly scurried back to his feet. Instead of giving up in disappointment and gazing around to see if anyone might have witnessed this under — like many so-called "normal" kids would have done — he buried his head and sprinted back to his position of right fullback.

The ball hadn't even arrived there, but just the fact that he put forth such an effort proves that the Special Olympics are much more to athletes than "Look at what these people can do."

Matt's team lost, but judging by the ear-to-ear smile on his face I'd think he had just dribbled around Pele for the winning goal.

"Mom ... look," he belted out from the edge of the crowd. Matt was boasting a medal; a medal that, for all he cares, could have been made out of plastic.

After receiving a giant bear hug from my aunt, Matt turned his attention toward me.

As he headed in my direction, he was stopped by the family of a teammate. Neither Matt nor his teammate smiled while they talked. Finally he made his way to me. I took out my hand and he gave me a high-five.

Matt was holding his medal level with his forehead. "Did you see?" Yeah, Matty, I saw.

Coralville cartoonist, wife enter not-guilty plea in shooting death

A Coralville cartoonist and his estranged wife pleaded not guilty to first-degree murder and other charges Thursday at their Scott County District Court arraignment.

Lyle Van Harris, and his estranged wife, Denise, of Bettendorf, have been charged with first-degree murder, conspiracy to commit murder and willful injury in connection with the May 31 shooting death of Jerome Gordon, 36, of Bettendorf.

Lyle Harris was charged the night Gordon was found dead in a duplex apartment he shared with Denise Harris. She was charged a week later of planning the murder with her husband.

Lyle Harris drew the comic strip "The RudyPoo Comics" and created about 60 Iowa City cable-access television programs.

Postal worker kills supervisor at mail-processing center

CITY OF INDUSTRY, Calif. (AP) — A postal worker walked up to his boss, pulled a gun from a paper bag and shot him to death Sunday, sending some co-workers running for cover while others wrestled the gun away.

The supervisor, 50-year-old James Whooper, was found slumped over a mail-sorting machine.

Bruce William Clark, 58, was arrested for investigation of murder and jailed without bail in this Los Angeles suburb, Deputy Diane Hecht said.

Both men had been at work at the 24-hour mail processing center when Clark punched his boss in the back of the head "for no apparent reason," Hecht said.

As Whooper was talking to his own boss about the incident, Clark walked over, pulled out a .38-caliber pistol and fired two bullets into Whooper's chest at about 2:30 a.m., deputies said.

N.J. paper: Stringer to leave UI

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer will announce today she is leaving Iowa for Rutgers University, a New Jersey newspaper reported Sunday.

The Home News, based in East Brunswick, N.J., reported that sources inside the Rutgers athletic department said it was expected Stringer would make her announcement today.

If Stringer fails to make a decision by the end of this week, Rutgers will be forced to turn toward one of its other four coaching candidates, because only limited time remains in the recruiting period, the Home News reported. Rutgers has not released the name of the other candidates.

Stringer's lack of public comment has taken its toll on some of her current Hawkeyes.

Iowa center and UI senior Simone Edwards' answering machine announced, "If you're calling about Coach Stringer, I have no comment."

Other players appear to be as much in the dark as the Rutgers athletic depart-said. "Not a word."

In a phone interview last week, Dr. Christine Grant, UI assistant professor in Sports, Health, Leisure and Physical Studies and Women's Intercollegiate Athletics director, said efforts were being made to keep Stringer as Iowa's coach.

"Everybody in her department is hoping that she'll stay, and we'll do anything we can to ensure that," Grant said.

Speculation on Stringer's professional whereabouts began circulating a month ago, when the Home News first reported she had reached an agreement with Rutgers.

The initial report of an agreement turned out to be erroneous, with Rutgers Athletic Director Fred Gruninger calling the story, "... not very accurate."

C. Vivian Stringer, center, is expected to announce her resignation as head women's basketball coach today.

Flood survivors remember neighborly bond

There was no rain date scheduled for Saturday's "Skeeter Flats Flood Reunion 1995." Margaret Koch, the psychologist who helped organize this year's reunion, said Mother Nature owed them one.

Koch may have been right, because it remained dry as about 100 neighbors came to her backyard on Normandy Drive — on the banks of the Iowa River — to remember the catastrophic flood Celebrated was the sense of community Koch said the neighborhood discovered during that time.

"There was a lot of good neighborly activity during the flood,"

she said. "We all bailed each other out, and we don't want to lose that sense of cooperation."

Almost everyone present could recall how their neighbors went out of their way to help, and another flood survivor, Josh Tan-berg — who was 11 in 1993 — said he even had a few pleasant memories.

"I wouldn't want it to happen again, but the flood was fun for me," he said. "I got to go tubing down the center of my street."

Tanberg said everyone had to adapt to the flooding — he did his paper route in a canoe.

"I had one of the only motorboats, so I ran a ferry between people's homes and high ground, where they had parked their cars," he said. "Everyone helped."

Defense to highlight Simpson's demeanor

Michael Fleerman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In the early hours of June 13, 1994, O.J. Simpson's life was jet-setting along its usual path: He was flying first class to Chicago, signing autographs and gearing up for another Hertz golf-and-greet gig.

Hardly the behavior of a man who had just slashed the throats of his ex-wife and her friend, Simpson's lawyers will try to show this week as they begin presenting their case after five months of prosecution evidence.

The defense wants to call all the passengers on Simpson's flight, assorted baggage handlers, chauffeurs and airline and hotel staff to talk about his demeanor.

The witness list also includes friends and relatives expected to testify he was not in a murderous mood around the time Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were slain.

Less than a month before her death, Simpson was at his ex-wife's sickbed, defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr. told jurors in his opening statement.

"She had pneumonia," Cochran said. "O.J. Simpson was the one that took her soup and tried to nurse her back, to get her back

'Butt-naked' and other cool Gen X clichés

A cliché, as defined by the American Heritage Dictionary, is a "trite or overused expression or idea." Last week, John Streck — a particularly observant Daily Iowan reader — accused Shannon Stevens and me of misusing the colorful tool in our writing.

Well, my crime was writing the expression "butt-naked," which he so smugly assured me was supposed to be "buck-naked." He recommended I use a cliché and idiom reference book to get it right.

Cool enough — and thanks for your concern. I really can't believe there is a reference book for clichés, but anyway, I prefer butt-naked, and here's my reference for the term.

"... gonna get butt-naked, tootin' on a flute, riding on a horse drinking whiskey outta boots, she got the wings and the teeth of an African bat, her middle name is mudbone and on top of all that, your mama's got a wooden leg, looks real fake" from the song, "Your Mama," by the Pharcyde. The song is an extended "snap" — or insult. Snapping has a long, colorful history and is more fun to listen to than a cliché. So, Mr. Streck, I've put together one for you, whose mama got a son with too much time on his hands.

If free time were a stench, you'd be Cedar Rapids.

You can't teach an old dog new tricks, so when I've got my nose to the grindstone writing stories and columns, clichés seem like pennies from heaven. I'll use them 'til the cows come home, so roll with the punches and don't get your knickers in a twist.

OK, just kidding — don't sue me. But really, I don't condone the use of clichés; they are just so ingrained in our culture that using them is like shooting ducks in a pond. You can't teach an old dog new tricks, so when I've got my nose to the grindstone writing stories and columns, clichés seem like pennies from heaven. I'll use them 'til the cows come home, so roll with the punches and don't get your knickers in a twist.

Actually, I think clichés are pretty stupid and most of them either don't make sense or at least don't add anything to the speech or article. They make the speaker sound comical, if not stupid.

So, I've taken it upon myself to bring some old clichés up-to-date. These interpretations may make them more understandable to slackers and twentysomethings who might be as confused or annoyed as I am.

The first cliché that should be changed: "Rears its ugly head."

To make this more reasonable, people ought to think of an ugly object and use it instead of "ugly head." Here's mine: "The conservative spectra pulled on its ugly pair of parachute pants as the Republicans seized control of Congress last fall."

See, you still realize how bad the problem is, and it's all spelled out in nice, Gen X terminology.

Here's another one that could use some work: "Til the cows come home." When's the last time you ever saw cows come anywhere, much less to your house. A modern version of this might be something like this: "We're going to party 'til MTV plays some videos."

It would probably be longer than waiting for a bunch of bovines to come over.

Crazy as a loon? Nah, I think "they acted like they drank too much Robitussin." Between a rock and a hard place? Nope, one has "to hold it or use the port-a-potty." Both choices are equally bad, and bathroom humor is always funny.

What about "It was a wolf in sheep's clothing"? It means someone is trying to be something they aren't. We could just say "it's a Keanu," because although Reeves is trying to be a Schwarzenegger-type action hero, he'll always be Ted, dude.

All right, it's getting painful to listen to all these clichés, but there are a few more. Remember "It's like finding a needle in a haystack"? A semi-modern version could be "It's like finding a needle in Epstein's hairdo" or even "It's like finding the humor in 'Jim's Journal.'"

Has anyone heard of a Herculean task? I think it would be better to say one had to "blow up the Death Star" instead. Star Wars has a wealth of new clichés like "He's so stupid, he would fall for the Jedi mind trick."

Music offers us many opportunities for clichés. I'm pretty sick of hearing "one-hit wonder" all the time. Pick your favorite "flash in the pan" and make your own catch phrase. I'd probably pick "Oh, they'll have as many hits as Dexy's Midnight Runners." It could be shortened, as in "Better Than Ezra is a total Dexy, man."

Painted lady is a term for prostitute. Who else do you know who wears (or used to wear) a lot of makeup? Gene Simmons from Kiss. Pick your favorite member and cliché away. Think about it. I can see the headline: "Hugh Grant arrested for having car sex with Gene Simmons in Hollywood."

Ouch, trying to think of all those clichés really hurt. Next time, I'll let my fingers do the walking and use the book. Making new clichés can be a great drinking game or just a way to pass the time. Try it with your friends.

Or not. Those damn little phrases, while they may be rich in Americana folklore or world history, are a real burden on creativity. If everyone tries really hard, I think society can get rid of them altogether. But don't count your chickens ...

Quotable...

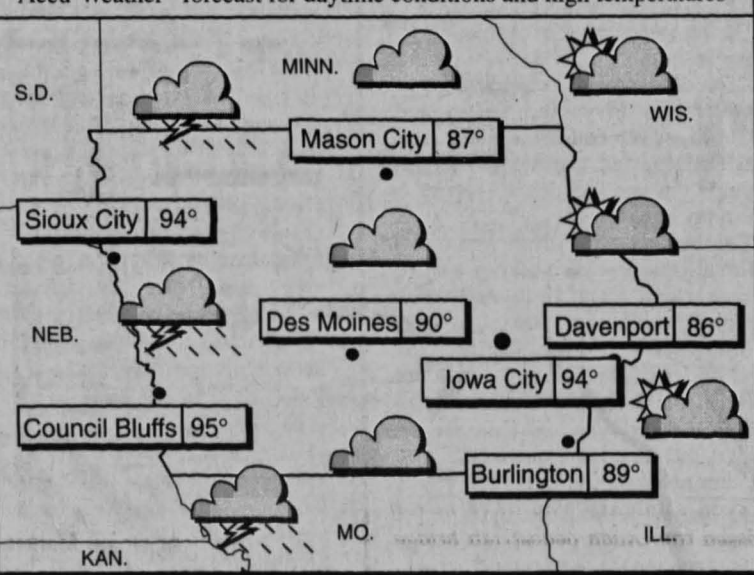

"It would be great performance art if there were a ferryman. One day, they could have a guy in black robes, and the next some guy saying, 'I'm the ferryman — want to get in my boat?'"

Roseanne endorses violent brand of feminism

NEW YORK (AP) — Memo to Ben Thomas, Roseanne's husband No. 3: Hide the steak knives.

"I think women should be more violent, kill more of their husbands," Roseanne says in a lengthy profile in the July 17 issue of The New Yorker. "I like the fight. If people are comin' at you, you don't just sit there and lay down and go, 'Oh, bless you.' That's not in the human arsenal. To say that women shouldn't do that is to say women aren't human."

Roseanne also attacks Hollywood's most prominent liberal women, saying they have little connection to the working-class women she says the feminist movement needs to target.

UI RESEARCHERS NEED ADDITIONAL PARTICIPANTS FOR TESTOSTERONE STUDY
Men, ages 21 to 40, are invited to take part in the project, being conducted at the UI General Clinical Research Center.
The study will look at the physical and psychiatric effects, and possible changes brought about by various doses of testosterone and withdrawal from testosterone therapy. Testosterone is the principal male sex hormone and has been used as an illicit anabolic steroid among weight lifters and other athletes.
Participants will receive varied doses of testosterone cypionate, and then be observed for acute and withdrawal effects. All participants will be closely monitored throughout the study to ensure medical and psychiatric safety.
The study will consist of 28 weekly visits, ranging from 30 minutes to three hours. Compensation is available. For more information, call 353-4239.

Shoplifting f

Christie Midthun
The Daily Iowan

During the dog days of summer the weather isn't the only thing sticky — the fingers of some Iowa City residents are, too.

Shoplifting occurs fairly often in Iowa City, said Iowa City Police Department Sgt. Craig Lih. Shoplifting merchandise worth $100 or less is considered a simple misdemeanor, he said. The punishment is a $100 fine and/or 30 days in jail.

But the punishment is only enforced when people are actually caught shoplifting. Certain businesses have good security systems, but others have less-than-adequate systems, he said.

"Most stores have an alarm system on everything they have for sale," said Lih. "Some also hire security personnel to watch at all times."

Any store could be the target of shoplifters. John Schewe, manager of Cub Foods, 855 Highway 1 West, said shoplifting is more of a problem than store officials would like.

Cub Foods attempts to deter potential shoplifters by using cameras, security guards and employees to keep an eye out for trouble.

PROSECUTION ENDS IN SIMPSON TRIAL

Is justice really blind?

"The people rest."
With those words from prosecutor Marcia Clark, the O.J. Simpson trial took the turn that may lead it within sight of the light at the end of the tunnel.

What started as a minor story about the deaths of a celebrity's ex-wife and her friend quickly evolved into a reality taxing the farthest limits of the imagination. Just a few hours after Simpson failed to surrender himself to court authorities — and after their national announcement that he was a "fugitive from justice" — Simpson mesmerized the nation with a hauntingly slow and painfully pointless drive down a California highway.

And now his trial for the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman has assumed some of the same mesmerizing and hauntingly slow — yet painfully pointless — characteristics.

Each one of the more than a dozen attorneys for the defense and the prosecution is using the thousands of hours of priceless, but free, televised advertising to audition for future clients. The trial is also slowed considerably by Superior Court Judge Lance Ito's "loose" handling of the case. Ito has allowed the attorneys to introduce evidence and question witnesses not beyond a reasonable doubt — but beyond a shred of interest.

To the casual, impartial onlooker, some of the more than 92 days of testimony have been bone-tired boring. Some reports have even cited incidents of jurors nodding off during some of the testimony of the prosecution's 58 witnesses — which should have been a big red warning sign to the strong-lunged attorneys. And yet, Ito lets them drone on.

The end of the prosecution's case comes none too soon. Millions of dollars have been spent by both sides, including a trip by two Los Angeles police officers to northern Iowa. (They were in Iowa to track down a possible witness, or the friend of a friend of a possible witness. They apparently didn't find who they were looking for, but the officers reportedly did do a little ice fishing.)

The stress of the case has played havoc with the jury and the alternates. Ten have been dismissed, all for odd or different reasons — none yet for more usual family emergencies such as deaths or illness. At this turning point, the trial is just three jurors away from a possible mistrial and the whole process beginning again.

The stress of the trial also has been difficult for family members who sit in the crowded courtroom. It must be as difficult, if not more so, for Simpson himself. He must — in some ways — feel as though he is sitting under the sword of Damocles, helplessly at the mercy of others.

Simpson recently turned 48; it was his second birthday spent behind bars. As his defense team attempts to make it his last, and as the jury spends yet another sequestered day hidden from the world, the Simpson trial is a screaming example of the need for legal reform.

The Simpson trial is a telling reminder of the different layers of justice in this country. Financially well-to-do murder defendants receive the best legal defense money can buy, and their trials go on and on. Less affluent defendants often receive less-experienced representation in much shorter trials. Neither example is just or fair. The Simpson trial should be streamlined, but poor defendants — with less competent representation — shouldn't be railroaded.

Justice is blind, and the scales of justice shouldn't be tipped one way or the other by the addition or subtraction of a few more gold coins.

Flag depicts freedom

To the Editor:
Illegal to burn the American flag? This is absolute nonsense, folks. The fact that we can burn our country's flag without fear of punishment is exactly what the flag stands for — freedom. We are very fortunate to have the freedom to freely criticize our government, president and legislators. Do you really want these freedoms taken away?

Exotic animals not meant to be pets

To the Editor:
The recent media coverage of the mauling of a 2-year-old girl by a "pet jungle cat" is only one of many incidents revealing the sad plight of wild animals caught, transferred or bred to be sold as "family pets."

While the child is a victim in this incident, the wild cat is clearly a victim as well. Each year, thousands of wild "exotic" animals are smuggled into the United States or bred and sold at auctions to zoos, pet shops or laboratories. Some are given to private homes with pet "menageries" and even to ranches, where hunters pay thousands of dollars to participate in "canned hunts."

Because of the expanded trade in exotic animals, people who cannot even care for domesticated animals are able to buy, house, breed and even sell animals for which they have no professional background to raise. Many purchase exotic animals thinking they can become exotic themselves. It becomes a pure status symbol or a fad to own an animal possessing unique qualities or origins. Those who say they "love" their wild animal friend separate love from respect.

Moreover, contrary to Jerry Tubough, an animal auction organizer in Kalona, who claims he is helping "put together excess stock and propagate the species" (DI, June 27), the sale of exotic / wild animals not only threatens the individual animals but their species as well. Many are unable to breed because of the stress of travel and handling by humans. Also, thousands of exotic animals smuggled into the United States die before making it across the border.

Exotic / wild animals have needs far different and more demanding than domestic animals such as dogs and cats. Their natural environments (also threatened by human interference) is far more complex and delicate than that found in a backyard or living room — even if the latter is equipped with all the high-tech, exotic paraphernalia.

The sale of exotic / wild animals should be banned. They are not "commodities" to be bought and sold but sentient creatures, with lives and families of their own, playing a vital role in the ecosystem. By not purchasing exotic / wild animals, one will show far more love and respect for wildlife. If you really want a companion animal, please visit your local animal shelter and adopt an abandoned animal there.

Nobody revises history like a revolutionary

Conservatives in American government have a history of being at home with hypocrisy. Controversy over the Enola Gay exhibit at the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum has exposed conservatives' fanatical devotion to historical orthodoxy. William Lanouette's article in the January / February 1995 issue of Civilization magazine sheds light on the shadowy decision to drop the bomb.

The Enola Gay was the B-29 that carried the atomic bomb to Hiroshima. As we began to understand its power, our leaders determined the immediate need for an ironclad moral justification for its use — we used the bomb to end the war quickly and save American lives.

President Harry Truman said, "It occurred to me that a quarter of a million of the flower of our young manhood were worth a couple of Japanese cities, and I still think they were and are." Such statistical sleight of hand helped pacify inquisitive bleeding hearts who felt bad as reports of human casualties came into focus.

A clever contemporary would have noted with each passing day both Churchill and Truman raised the number of lives the bomb had spared. By the time memoirs were penned, they implied over a million American lives were saved by use of the bomb. This is the calculus of a brute trying to justify his savagery, as idiotic as adding up discounts to learn how much money you saved on a mad shopping spree.

Many forces were at work when we decided to drop the bomb. To pretend otherwise is a transparent canard on the part of the new Republican revolutionaries in Congress. The Smithsonian exhibit attempted to deal with the subtleties of history — such nuances as fear, political motivation and global calculation. These are the all-too-human considerations that so often lead us into cataclysm.

Republicans would have none of the subtlety of the intellectual elite and joined the attack on the Smithsonian. Pilot Paul Tibbets, who flew the Enola Gay, declared the exhibit text "a package of insults." The Senate called it "revisionist, unbalanced and offensive."

Speaking of revisionism, no fewer than five redrafts on the Smithsonian's text were required to create a more "balanced" perspective. Historical labors were literally overlaid to placate conservative revisionists. The sheep were steered back into the corral of orthodoxy: We dropped the bomb to end the war quickly and save American lives.

GOP revolutionaries lay claim to several traits. They are learned in American history, they tell us, and they have no fear of the truth. The Enola Gay flap reveals the baldness of those claims. By adopting popular belief rather than supporting an unnerving attempt to glimpse the truth, they took the easy way out. Here are some truths about the use of the bomb our new revolutionaries would rather keep quiet:

After Japan's loss at Okinawa, where America suffered 12,000 casualties to Japan's 180,000 (chiefly civilian), there was no doubt the war was over. Surrender was a question of how — and when.

There was also no doubt the Truman administration was over a barrel with a secret project on which $2 billion (roughly $26 billion today) had already been spent without the knowledge of Congress. The Manhattan Project was established to create an atomic bomb. It involved 160,000 people in work at 37 top-secret sites around the United States.

The high risk of political scandal created immense pressure on Truman to use the bomb. It was bad enough they'd spent all that money on the damned thing in secrecy. The only way to avoid getting dragged to the woodshed by Congress later was to use the bomb now — to end the war quickly and save American lives. If they could pull it off, it would be a political miracle.

Global politics were at least as significant as domestic pressures in the decision to drop the bomb. Russia was of particular concern. Truman's secretary of war, Henry Stimson, freely discussed the bomb as a political tool in his diaries. Its use would be crucial, he wrote, in cooling the heat of Russian expansionism.

It should be noted Stimson waited two weeks after Truman was sworn in to inform him of the Manhattan Project's existence. Add that Truman was widely believed to be in the same strength and decisiveness league as our own William Jefferson Clinton, and the resulting picture is devoid of the unambiguous nature displayed on the altar of historical orthodoxy.

The atmosphere in which it was decided to drop the bomb was heavy with complexities. Japan was an aggressive and terrifying enemy. Their willingness to die to perpetuate the Imperial system rendered the American public nearly hysterical. The Bataan death march and the staggering inhumanity with which POWs were treated sickened us. Pearl Harbor became the symbol of our involvement and an emotional trigger for a national outrage that some believe led us inexorably to drop the bomb rather than accept any surrender.

Yet surrender was in the air. We refused it and let our monumental cargo fall. This much, at least, is not open to debate, but the Republican revolutionaries may protest. No less a military icon than Dwight Eisenhower seems to disparage conservative revisionism on the mission of the Enola Gay.

"Japan," Eisenhower said, "was at that very moment seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of face." It wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing." GOP revolutionaries would beg to differ, and their zeal reminds us that nobody revises history like a revolutionary.

GUEST OPINION • PATRICK RYAN

Recent incident proves racism issue still important

Patricia Harris must be commended for her report "African-American man claims sublease refused due to racism" (DI, June 23). After interviewing Howard Davis, who was refused a lease on a house in Tipton, Harris also interviewed the wife of the landlord. Upon meeting Davis and seeing he is African-American, Davis said the landlord remarked, "I see one problem already. You won't fit in here."

Some readers in Iowa City might discount Davis' charge that he and his wife were refused the sublease because he is African-American. I believe him.

I'm white; my wife is Native American. On Father's Day, we took our two children camping at Springbrook State Park near Des Moines. I noticed all the campers were "white," of European descent, but didn't think that observation significant until we walked to the swimming beach.

On returning from the restroom, my wife told me a boy about 8 years old had approached her on the sidewalk and shouted, "Ootta the way, nigger!" — the latest in a series of occasional insults, rebuffs or embarrassments my wife has suffered in Iowa because her skin is brown.

My wife is Apache. The boy who called her "nigger" saw her long black hair, dark brown eyes, high cheekbones and rich brown skin kissed by the sun for countless generations under the American sky. So amid pallid sunbathers — prone, half-naked and scorching for a tan in the mid-day heat — the boy taunted my wife with the epithet "nigger." This indicates, I believe, some of his elders' strong reactions to people of color intruding in de facto all-white areas.

I looked at the boy in the distance — nothing unusual about him, just the stereotypical image of a clean-cut, all-American boy, with blue jeans, sneakers and a crew cut.

During the late '50s in racially segregated Texas, I was his age. Growing up white in segregated parks, little leagues and Boy Scout troops, many boys learned from some of their elders and taught each other to say "nigger" or "nigra" trippingly on the tongue, a verbal sign of white "manhood." Our all-white neighborhoods, churches and schools endorsed the racial separatism rooted in American slavery and the more distant European experience.

I regret that some all-American boys — like some Iowa landlords — have not changed enough.

The landlord told Davis he wouldn't "fit in." During four years in Iowa, we have made good friends and met wonderful people. But my wife has never felt she quite "fits in." She was once reminded of her difference at church.

A quiet, gentle woman, my wife taught Sunday school classes at a small local Lutheran church, where the pastor and her fellow teachers accepted her with unqualified warmth. For over a year, she taught a class of the congregation's pre-school children every Sunday. One morning, as classes were dismissing, a member of the church asked my wife whether she had found a woman's lost gloves. When my wife appeared confused by the question, the woman asked, "Well, aren't you the custodian?"

The only brown-skinned person in the church basement at the time, my wife was taken for the custodian. The equation is simple enough: the white-skinned women were identified as Christians, members of the church; the brown-skinned woman was identified as domestic help. The incident affected my wife deeply.

I believe Davis was refused a lease because he is black, and I can only urge well-meaning Iowans to work harder to accept racial minorities.

The issue is important. Not long ago (July 1991), someone in Iowa City burned a cross into the lawn of an African-American principal, who then left town. No charges were ever filed.

Thank you to Harris for publicizing Davis' unhappy experience. And to Davis, I promise I will teach my children not to reject a person because of his skin color. And my wife will continue to teach that we are all children of the Creator.

Patrick Ryan is a graduate student in English at the UI. He came to Iowa in 1991 after teaching in Texas, Minnesota and Malaysia.

Testimony about demeanor is a powerful way to insert a reasonable doubt in jurors' minds, said a former federal prosecutor, Charles Roistacher.

"It's something a jury can relate to in their common experience. (They'll think,) 'Hey, a guy who just did something like this is going to be out of his mind,'" Roistacher said.

The key to countering that strategy is for prosecutors to show that these witnesses don't know Simpson as well as they may think.

front of our house."

The night of Aug. 9, 1993, stuck out in everyone's mind, Koch said, because it was the third time water overwhelmed the residents.

"We had just gotten everything cleaned up, and then there was a flash flood, which the (U.S. Army Corps of Engineers) could have cut down because they had space in the reservoir," Koch said.

Larry Molnar, a UI assistant professor of physics and astronomy, said the plan the engineers used in 1993 could have been better.

"It was well designed in the '50s, but many things have changed since then," he said. "At first, the corps said they were using the best possible plan, but now they admit they can do better."

Molnar said the corps had agreed to some changes he and another professor had suggested, but said that might not be enough.

"You can't eliminate damage; you can only minimize it," he said.

In an effort to prevent future damage, many residents have attempted to waterproof their basements, and Koch and most of her neighbors who have property along the river have raised their lawns two feet.

The reunion consisted of residents of Normandy, Eastmoor and Manor drives, and Koch said barring any future floods, they'll do the same thing again next year.

was helpful. This will be a kind of repeat visit to that audit.

"I'm sure it will also focus on some new issues, some current issues — how can the university focus better? How can we do our jobs efficiently with higher quality and lower cost?"

The Iowa state Board of Regents is currently looking for a firm to perform the audit.

Of course, Nathan and the UI administration have more on their minds than freshmen and accounting firms — basketball, for one.

"We're trying to keep (UI women's basketball coach) Vivian Stringer here — I don't know how that will go," he said.

While Nathan assumes the presidency with considerable experience as a top UI administrator, acting Provost Samuel Becker does not. Becker has directed the School of Art and Art History and chaired Communication Studies, but has never played a role in running the entire university.

"The biggest part of the transition is making sure Sam Becker comes up to speed on the issues and meets with the vice presidents and associate provosts and learns the issues," Nathan said.

Nathan also said he wants to hire — or have the provost hire — a permanent director of Opportunity at Iowa, currently run on an interim basis by Nancy "Rusty" Barcelo.

"I really think we need that leadership in order to continue our efforts to further diversify the campus," he said.

Nathan seemed confident — albeit tired — Friday. He's still working out of the provost's office (more book space, he said) and has no intention of making the move to the president's residence, 102 Church St.

The adjustment to president

"I'm sure it will also focus on some new issues, some current issues — how can the university focus better? How can we do our jobs efficiently with higher quality and lower cost?"

Peter Nathan, acting UI president hasn't been an extreme change in responsibilities, Nathan said. He's said he's not worrying about a new president undermining what he'll do in the next few months.

"Given that I've been provost for five and a half years and I know what needs to be done, my assumption is that what we do is the right thing to do," he said. "I can't second-guess anybody who comes in. I guess I'd be pretty surprised if what I do is not seen as the right thing to do."

Regents President Marvin Pomerantz and Gov. Terry Branstad met with Nathan in late June to hammer out details of the administrative transition, he said. When regents appointed Nathan as acting president on June 29, Pomerantz immediately referred to him as "President Nathan."

Make no mistake — Nathan is in charge.

"I'm going to do what a president ought to do and that is move ahead. I have the support of my vice presidents, who have been very supportive and cooperative," he said.

The key to countering that strategy is for prosecutors to show that these witnesses don't know Simpson as well as they may think.

"I would stress the fact that ... the length of exposure wasn't significant, and I would argue that he's an actor; that's how he made his living recently," Roistacher said.

Prosecutors have a more preemptive strike in mind.

Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden denounced the defense's witnesses as a waste of time last week and promised to spend the better part of today fighting to keep some of them out of court.

A defendant's demeanor generally sheds little light on guilt or innocence, the government is likely to argue.

Other murder cases show no clear pattern. The Menendez brothers went on a shopping spree after shotgunning their parents. Robert Alton Harris ate his victim's hamburger. And one killer in the case that inspired Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood" drove home, kissed his mother, sat down to Sunday dinner, then fell asleep watching a basketball game on television.

Simpson's first witness is his eldest daughter, 26-year-old Arnelle, one of the small circle gathered at Simpson's mansion the week after the murders.

She's expected to counter the testimony of another member of that group, Ronald Shipp, who said Simpson did not mourn and only showed concern for himself.

She can also try to bolster the claim that police prejudged Simpson; she told them his trip to Chicago had been planned, but they went on to call it unexpected in an affidavit for a search warrant.

Body discovered during property cleanup project

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — A woman clearing out her garage as part of a municipal cleanup day found a plastic-wrapped corpse buried in the dirt floor.

The death was being treated as a homicide, said Clark County Coroner Dirk Wood. "Few people go to that much trouble to hide a natural death," he said.

Mary Williams said she tried to remove a pair of tennis shoes from a pile of debris during her cleanup work Saturday.

"I pulled on the tennis shoes and when I did, I said, 'There's something in the shoes. There's a body in them,'" she said. "The leg was the only thing I saw. I ran out."

Neither Wood nor police would release any details about the body.

Investigators had not identified the decomposed remains, which Wood sent to the Montgomery County coroner's office in Dayton for an autopsy.

The body may have been there when Williams and her family moved into the house about a year ago, Wood said.

Guard points to first lady's chief of staff in Whitewater investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — At odds with the Clinton administration, a Secret Service guard has told prosecutors he saw the first lady's chief of staff remove papers from Vince Foster's White House office suite the night of his death, individuals familiar with the Whitewater investigation said Sunday.

Margaret Williams, chief of staff to Hillary Rodham Clinton, disputed the guard's statement and passed a lie detector test, said the individuals, who spoke only on condition of anonymity. At her instigation, the prosecutor's office administered a polygraph test last September. The sources said the test indicated Williams was not being deceptive.

The White House has acknowledged that on the night of Foster's death on July 20, 1993, Williams and two other presidential aides entered Foster's office to look for a suicide note, but insist they took nothing away.

The statement by the Secret Service uniformed officer, Henry O'Neill, is the first to challenge that account, the sources said. The guard recalls seeing Williams carrying papers either directly out of Foster's office or from the suite of offices.

French naval forces intercept Greenpeace protest mission

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — French navy commandos seized the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior II on Sunday, thwarting any attempt to land protesters on a South Pacific atoll where France plans to resume nuclear tests.

The commandos fired tear gas as they boarded the ship and removed 11 people, including Greenpeace protesters and journalists, Greenpeace spokeswoman Nellie Pejeault said in Paris.

"The boat was taken under normal procedure. There was no violence. But tear gas was used to stop the advance of the vessel, which was heading toward the canal leading into Mururoa," Capt. Catherine Flibert, a Defense Ministry spokeswoman, said in a telephone interview in Paris. No one was injured, the government said in a statement.

The French navy had been authorized to fire on any ship coming within 12 miles of Mururoa Atoll.

Bosnian Serb forces advance on enclave border

Liam McDowall

SARAJEVO — Bosnian Serb tanks and infantry drove to the edge of Srebrenica on Sunday and fired shells into the town, a U.N.-designated "safe area" in which civilians are supposed to be spared from attack.

The Serbs also seized 15 Dutch peacekeepers, bringing to 30 the number taken in two days of advancing toward the government-held eastern enclave.

In response to the Serbs' move to within a half-mile of the Srebrenica town line, an elite team of Dutch peacekeepers deployed wire-guided anti-tank weapons.

But there was no immediate word on whether the peacekeepers had begun firing back, as their mandate allows them to do when endangered.

U.N. observers saw Serb artillery pieces firing into the town, said Alexander Ivanko, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo.

"It's pretty much one-way shelling," Ivanko said.

U.N. officials had no word on casualties. But Osman Sulic, a Srebrenica city councilor, told Sarajevo media that eight civilians had been killed and 27 wounded since Thursday, when the Serb assault began.

Ivanko said the peacekeepers who were seized Sunday and 15 others who were taken Saturday night were not considered hostages.

"The Serbs have not demanded anything for their release. Indeed, they have promised they will release them shortly," said Ivanko.

A Dutch peacekeeper died Saturday after being shot by Bosnian government forces while his unit

"In Srebrenica, (the U.N. Protection Force) is in a shambles, and is not able to protect itself or helpless civilians."

Bosnian Prime Minister
Haris Silajdzic, in a letter to NATO was retreating from an observation post seized by the Serbs.

Of the peacekeepers detained Saturday, seven from one observation post were taken to the Bosnian Serb town of Bratunac, north of the Srebrenica enclave. The eight others remained at their U.N. post, which was occupied by the Serbs, U.N. spokesmen said.

Ten of the soldiers seized Sunday had been prevented by Bosnian government forces from leaving an observation post in the Srebrenica region, and the other five were taken while on patrol, U.N.

spokesman Jim Landale said.

There was no comment from the Bosnian government, except a denial by President Alija Izetbegovic that his troops Saturday had killed the Dutch soldier.

The United Nations said it delivered a strong protest to the Bosnian government Sunday over the death of 25-year-old Raviv Rennsen. He was the 67th peacekeeper killed in combat since U.N. troops arrived in former Yugoslavia in 1992.

U.N. spokesmen did not know if the peacekeepers had resisted Serb capture of the U.N. posts. The Dutch Defense Ministry in Amsterdam denied Serb claims the peacekeepers had voluntarily left the observation post.

Outraged Bosnian government officials and state-run news media warned of a civilian catastrophe if Serb troops reached the town of Srebrenica, a U.N.-declared "safe area" in the enclave of 42,000 Bosnian Muslims.

"In Srebrenica, (the U.N. Protection Force) is in a shambles, and is not able to protect itself or helpless civilians," Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said in a letter to NATO. He demanded to know why the United Nations had not requested NATO airstrikes to stop the assault.

The United Nations asked only for NATO jet flyovers, and alliance warplanes buzzed the zone Saturday and Sunday. The Bosnian Serbs took hundreds of U.N. peacekeepers hostage after NATO airstrikes in May.

"If Srebrenica falls, that will be the end of the U.N. mission in Bosnia-Herzegovina," said Mustafa Bijedic, Bosnian ambassador to the United Nations.

Such an event would be a severe blow to the U.N. mission. No U.N. safe area has yet fallen in Bosnia's three-year war, although Gorazde and Bihac came under similar intensive Serb assaults last year.

Both those assaults tapered off after NATO airstrikes. But NATO has always been extremely cautious about taking air action and is likely to be especially so in the wake of last month's seizure of hundreds of peacekeepers by the Bosnian Serbs in retaliation for airstrikes near Serb headquarters in Pale.

Col. Milovan Milutinovic at Bosnian Serb Army headquarters charged that government forces have used the designated safe areas at Srebrenica, Zepa and Gorazde to attack Serb positions over the past month.

He also claimed Bosnian troops had "occupied U.N. observation posts manned by Dutch and Ukrainian personnel," capturing weaponry later used against the Serbs.

The United Nations has never confirmed any Bosnian government seizure of observation posts. There also has been no U.N. confirmation of government forces attacking Serbs from within the Srebrenica enclave recently, although that has happened from some enclaves since a 1993 U.N. resolution created six "safe areas" in Bosnia.

COMPANIONS DIED AWAITING RESCUE

Survivor discovered after 9 days

Paul Alexander
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — The rescue worker almost ignored the faint tapping. It must have been someone else digging for bodies. Surely no one could be alive in this jumble of concrete and steel rods after nine days.

Then came the almost-inaudible plea.

"Save me. Please save me. Water. Quickly."

An hour later on this rainy Sunday morning, Choi Myong-suk was pulled from a collapsed shopping mall where 160 people are known to have died and another 260 remain missing.

The 21-year-old children's shoe salesman had survived, in amazingly good condition, in an area that had not been a high priority to search because it appeared anything much larger than a mouse must have been crushed.

But the countless tons of rubble had fallen in a way that gave him a 4-foot-wide space, although it was too short to stand up in. Within the space was just enough sustenance to keep him alive — a trickle of rainwater to drink and a cardboard box to eat.

His only company were the bodies of two other people who survived the

"I did think that I would die. There were others around me, but they are dead."

Choi Myong-suk, a survivor of the collapsed department store in Seoul, South Korea initial disaster only to die later, filling his precious air with the stench of death and finally convincing him he would never see daylight again.

"During the first few days, I thought I would be rescued," Choi said from his hospital bed.

But despair set in as he heard rescue workers nearby — but never close enough — in the wreckage of the ritzy Sampoong Department Store.

"They would dig and go away, dig and go away," he said. "I was depressed."

As he waited in the darkness, flicking on a lighter occasionally to see, Choi's sense of time warped. He figured he had been trapped only five days.

"I thought of my parents, my friends," he said, adding he dreamed he was flying like a bird with his parents, going on a vacation.

But when he was awake, reality set in.

Rescue workers lift Choi Myong-suk, center, from the rubble of the Sampoong Department Store in Seoul, South Korea Sunday morning. Choi, a 21-year-old part-time shoe salesman at the store, was found alive in the first basement of the building, which collapsed nine days ago.

"When I was too hungry, I ripped a bit of a box to eat," he said. "I slept when I got sleepy. What was most difficult was that when it wasn't raining, there wasn't any water. I did think that I would die. There were others around me, but they are dead."

Then on Sunday, workers found two bodies just above Choi. One was a mother of four who had given him her phone number so he could call her family if he survived.

"We were digging up the remains, and we thought we heard a small voice," rescue worker Kim Sang-whan said. "We turned off our machine and listened."

Korean TV networks went live nationwide as workers using torches and power drills cut through concrete slabs and pulled Choi free.

Shirtless, Choi was carried to a waiting ambulance, a towel protecting his eyes from the sudden daylight. At the hospital, he was reunited with his parents.

"I thought, 'Is this a dream or is this real?'" said his mother. "I feel like I could fly," said his father Choi Bong-ryul.

Doctors said Choi, the youngest of three children, was dehydrated and had lost 11 pounds, but otherwise appeared to be in good health and might be released in about a week. He said his only wishes were food and a cola.

Heartened by the dramatic rescue, 400 workers switched to hand tools to excavate the area. They had been using heavy machinery, thinking the chance of survivors was virtually nil.

Sparked by hope and frustration, about 400 relatives of the missing tried to march to the disaster site. Shouting "Find the missing!" they briefly clashed with riot police who stopped them a block away. After a brief silent prayer, they returned to the university auditorium they have been using as a waiting room.

The previous survivors were a group of 24 cleaners rescued from a largely intact basement room seven days ago. Choi's father had helped in that effort.

Shoddy construction and defiance of safety standards are being blamed for one of South Korea's worst peacetime disasters. In addition to the dead and missing, more than 900 people were injured.

On Friday, government investigators questioned three local officials suspected of taking money to overlook violations of safety standards. Prosecutors said Lee Choong-woo, former head of the district office, admitted to receiving bribes.

A preliminary police investigation showed Sampoong repeatedly expanded its shopping area without shoring up its foundation. News reports claim similar practices exist at other malls.

Four store executives have been arrested. They allegedly knew the building was shaky and its top floor was crumbling hours before the collapse, but did not warn anyone.

When the two met at the net, Becker gave Sampras a hearty handshake and a thumbs-up sign. Sampras stripped off his shirt and tossed it about 20 rows into the stands.

Baseball Roundup

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Baltimore takes care of Chicago, 11-2

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Scott Erickson made a successful Baltimore debut, and Harold Baines and Chris Hoiles homered as the Orioles completed a four-game sweep of Chicago, 11-2.

Erickson (5-6), making his debut with the Orioles after being acquired Friday from Minnesota, allowed two runs in six innings as Baltimore earned its first four-game sweep in Chicago since June 1969.

Bret Barberie went 3-for-4, scored twice and drove in two runs to send Chicago to its fourth straight loss and sixth in seven games, all at home.

Alex Fernandez (4-6) gave up eight runs, nine hits and two walks in three-plus innings.

Red Sox 7, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Knuckleballer Tim Wakefield took a no-hitter into the eighth inning for the second time this season, losing it on a leadoff single by Jeff Reboulet, as the Boston Red Sox beat the Minnesota Twins 7-0 Sunday.

Wakefield (7-1), who lost 15 games in the minors last year, finished with a four-hitter for his first American League shutout. In lowering his league-best ERA to 1.61, he walked four and struck out three.

Mariners 9, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Tino Martinez hit his second career grand slam and Jay Buhner hit a three-run homer to spoil Orel Hershiser's return from the disabled list.

Cleveland lost for only the fourth time in the last 14 games but still entered the All-Star break with a 46-21 record — the best in the majors and the Indians' best record ever through 67 games.

Hershiser (5-4) had missed two starts because of a sprained lower back.

Tigers 4, Royals 2

DETROIT — Rookie Felipe Lira earned his fifth victory in seven starts and Detroit took advantage of Tom Gordon's early wildness.

The Tigers, who have won nine of their last 12 games, had only six hits but scored two runs on a bases-loaded walk and a wild pitch.

Lira (6-4) gave up three hits in six-plus innings and was charged with two runs, and Mike Henneman pitched the ninth for his 17th save.

Blue Jays 7, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Devon White homered and scored three runs, and Pat Hentgen pitched 7½ strong innings Sunday as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Oakland Athletics 7-3.

White went 3-for-5 and hit his eighth home run, and Roberto Alomar and Ed Sprague also homered for the Blue Jays.

With a four-run lead after two innings, Hentgen (6-6) won his second straight start. He allowed six hits and struck out four.

Rangers 5, Yankees 4, 12 Innings

ARLINGTON, Texas — Mickey Tettleton tied the game in the eighth with his 200th career home run, and hit an RBI single in the 12th inning to give Texas a 5-4 victory over New York in Sunday's 102-degree heat.

Tettleton's ground single to left off Steve Howe (3-3) scored Mark McLemore from second base when Gerald Williams' throw to the plate was off-line.

Brewers 9, Angels 7

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Matt Mieske's first career grand slam capped a six-run first inning Sunday and the Milwaukee Brewers held on for a 9-7 victory over California.

Mieske's fifth homer of the season followed RBI singles by Kevin Seitzer and B.J. Surhoff as the Brewers gave left-hander Chuck Finley a rude send-off to the All-Star game.

Cubs 7, Phillies 6, 13 Innings

PHILADELPHIA — Todd Zeile's sacrifice fly scored Brian McRae in the 13th inning as the Chicago Cubs completed a three-game sweep over the Philadelphia Phillies with a 7-6 victory Sunday.

McRae, who was 2-for-6 with three runs scored, opened the 13th by reaching first on an error by first baseman Mariano Duncan. He moved to second on Rey Sanchez' single and to third on Mark Grace's sacrifice bunt before scoring on Zeile's fly ball to center.

Rockies 4, Expos 1

DENVER — Dante Bichette and

Associated Press

Baltimore second baseman Bret Barberie throws first to complete a double play after forcing Chicago's Robin Ventura Sunday.

Larry Walker hit back-to-back solo home runs and Marvin Freeman pitched seven shutout innings, pacing the Colorado Rockies to their fifth straight victory, 4-1 Sunday over the Montreal Expos.

Eric Young and pinch-hitter John Vander Wal also had solo homers for Colorado, who cracked 20 homers in the seven-game homestand to help open up a five-game lead in the NL West.

Padres 9, Astros 2

HOUSTON — San Diego pitcher Andy Ashby continued his recent superb stretch of pitching and Eddie Williams contributed a grand slam home run to send San Diego to a 9-2 victory over Houston Sunday.

The victory enabled the Padres to avoid a five-game sweep as they head home for the All-Star break.

Ashby continued a dazzling two-week run Sunday by handcuffing the Houston Astros on only five hits and striking out three in 7½.

Reds 8, Dodgers 0

CINCINNATI — Reggie Sanders hit a two-run homer and a bases-loaded double Sunday as the Cincinnati Reds rocked starter Ismael Valdes for eight runs and coasted to an 8-0 victory over the struggling Los Angeles Dodgers.

Sanders matched his career high by driving in four runs — two on his 15th homer in the third inning and two more on his two-out double in the fourth. The All-Star right fielder has driven in a team-high 56 runs, six shy of his total for last season.

Marlins 6, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Mark Gardner pitched his first complete-game shutout in nearly five years, and Tommy Gregg hit his first career grand slam leading the Florida Marlins to a 6-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday.

Gardner, who replaced injured David Weathers in the rotation, allowed the Cardinals seven hits, no walks and struck out eight. His last complete game shutout came on July 20, 1990 as a member of the Montreal Expos.

Pirates 6, Mets 3

PITTSBURGH — Center fielder Brett Butler's misplay of Orlando Merced's routine single scored the go-ahead run and the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Mets 6-3 Sunday behind rookie Esteban Loaiza.

Loaiza (6-3) withstood his own early wildness and Todd Hundley's solo homer to throw a five-hitter, outpitching Bret Saberhagen.

Orioles release Fernandez

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles finally gave up on Sid Fernandez, putting the left-hander on waivers Sunday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

The move was made following the Orioles' 11-2 victory at Chicago.

Fernandez, 32, was 0-4 with a 7.39 ERA in eight games this year. He was demoted to the bullpen June 29 after giving up three homers in 3 2-3 innings in a 5-1 loss to Toronto.

After that game he talked of retirement, but changed his mind after family convinced him to "get the money I was owed."

Fernandez is in the middle of a three-year, $9 million contract. If he signs after the Thursday deadline, the Orioles will be obligated to make sure he receives the money owed him for the remainder of the contract.

Mantle to speak publicly

DALLAS (AP) — Baseball great Mickey Mantle has scheduled his first public appearance since undergoing a liver transplant.

The 63-year-old former New York Yankees star will hold a 1 p.m. news conference Tuesday at Baylor University Medical Center, where he underwent surgery on June 8.

The Hall of Famer has been recuperating alone since his June 28 discharge from the hospital.

He was admitted to the hospital May 28, complaining of nagging stomach pains.

Hawkeye takes second at Iowa Masters

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Travis Korne shot a par 72 in the final round and took the championship.

Korne's 54-hole total of 208 was four strokes ahead of second-place finisher Sean Rowen. Rowen, an Iowa golfer, shot a 71 in the final round Sunday at the Veenker Golf Course.

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

World Games come to an end

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The world's largest sports event this year, the Special Olympics World Games, ended Sunday with tributes to the courage of some 7,000 athletes.

Timothy Shriver, the president of the games organizing committee, officially closed the games at 5 p.m. Then the Flame of Hope, which burned all week in New Haven, was extinguished. The flame will shine next for the 1997 winter games in Toronto and Collingwood, Ontario.

The games drew athletes from more than 140 countries for nine days of competition in gymnastics, softball, soccer, swimming, softball, sailing, bocce, and many other sports.

Wimbledon's court crowned

Graf walks away with 17th Grand Slam title

Steven Wine
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Steffi Graf has played shorter sets than the game that led to her sixth Wimbledon title.

A memorable match's classic climax came with Graf and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario tied 5-5 in the third set Saturday.

The game would have been extraordinary under any circumstances, lasting 32 points and 20 minutes with 13 deuces and countless clutch shots by the world's top two players.

Because of the context — late in the final set of a close, exciting women's final — it will become part of Wimbledon lore.

Graf knew as much instantly, perhaps even before she had won the game and, four points later, the match, 4-6, 6-1, 7-5.

"It's a game that will stand out for many, many years," Graf said. "Never in my career had I played such a long game with so many quality points."

We both didn't give anything to each other. I was really tired at the end. There were some incredible points."

The dramatic duel was reminiscent of the fourth-set tiebreaker in the 1980 men's final, when John McEnroe beat Bjorn Borg 18-16 before losing the fifth set. This time, Graf beat Sanchez Vicario 17-15.

"It was very long, and I think I never had such a long game in a Grand Slam," Sanchez Vicario said. "I had some opportunities, but every time, Steffi came up with a great shot when she needed it."

With both players serving well deep into the third set, it was clear that one service break would likely decide the match.

That put the burden on Sanchez Vicario at the start of the 11th game of the set.

Graf forced three deuces, then hit a return wide on break point. Sanchez Vicario whacked a backhand passing shot for a winner and hopped up and down several times in celebration.

Graf answered with an overhead slam for deuce.

From there, the tension built.

Pete Sampras smooches the Men's Singles Cup trophy after defeating Boris Becker Sunday in four sets.

Eight times Sanchez Vicario had a point to hold serve, and eight times she failed. Graf held six break points, but Sanchez Vicario escaped the first five, usually by hitting a winner.

"I know people in the crowd were getting excited, because it was getting longer and longer," Sanchez Vicario said. "In my mind I just tried to be calm and concentrate on each point and try to continue to be aggressive."

Soon the game had lasted longer than Sanchez Vicario's first six service games combined. But despite a temperature of 102 degree on Centre Court, neither player wilted under the pressure of the moment. At least twice on break point, Sanchez Vicario hit a shot that landed on a line, then went on to win the point with a passing shot for deuce.

On another break point, she deftly hit a running backhand drop-volley winner — the shortest shot in the longest game, and perhaps the best.

Graf, meanwhile, confidently belted forehands as if practicing against a ball machine, jumping into the air on her follow-through.

"It produced the best tennis from both of us," Graf said. "Neither of us really played any loose points. We weren't nervous or anything. We were going for it."

In the end, Graf was one shot better. On the sixth break point, she hit a thunderous forehand that landed just inside the baseline, and Sanchez Vicario could manage only a weak backhand reply into the net.

"Yes!" Graf shouted, pumping her fist as the scoreboard finally changed to 6-5. She then served out the match at love, making her the winner of both a marathon and a championship.

Sampras downs Becker for third straight

Stephen Wilson
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Pete Sampras used a devastating serve to defeat Boris Becker in four sets Sunday for his third straight Wimbledon title.

Sampras never faced a break point as he rallied after losing the first-set tiebreaker to overwhelm the three-time champion, 6-7 (7-5), 6-2, 6-4, 6-2, in 2 hours, 28 minutes.

Sampras became the first man to win Wimbledon in three consecutive years since Bjorn Borg won five straight from 1976-1980.

The second-seeded Sampras achieved his sixth Grand Slam crown with an amazing display of serving and power tennis.

The third-seeded Becker, playing in his seventh Wimbledon final 10 years after winning his first title at age 17, was virtually helpless against Sampras' rocket deliveries.

After another Sampras ace flew past him in the fourth set, Becker put his hand over his eyes and used his racket like a cane to impersonate a blind man.

Taken to deuce only twice, Sampras hit 23 aces, won seven service games at love and took 91 percent of the points on his first serve. Sampras hit his first serves at an average speed of 116 mph, with a top delivery of 129 mph.

The return of serve also was a key. Sampras got back 60 percent of his returns, while Becker was successful on only 44 percent.

While Becker never earned a break point, Sampras had 16 break points, converting five times. He had nine return winners and 10 passing winners.

Becker served 16 aces, but those were virtually erased by his 15 double faults.

There were no breaks in the first set, which was decided in the tiebreaker when Becker hit a strong backhand return that forced a volley error from Sampras.

But Sampras took charge when he broke Becker for the first time for a 2-1 lead in the second set. After hitting a backhand passing shot to get to 0-40, Sampras turned

Kingsbury ignites win with 42 points

Jon Bassoff

Mr. Three was up to his old tricks Sunday night.

Chris Kingsbury poured in 34 of his 42 points in the first half to lead New York Life to a 141-128 win over Hills Bank.

Kingsbury hit on 10 of 17 from downtown overall and added eight rebounds and six assists.

After ten minutes of play, Kingsbury had already scored 24 points.

"I felt pretty good, I guess," Kingsbury said. "Things are starting to come around in my game."

Andre Woolridge kept Hills Bank in the game until the closing minutes with a super game of his own.

Woolridge scored 39 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and dished off 10 assists, his second straight triple-double.

"Andre and I like to go at it against each other," Kingsbury said. "We respect each others'

NL ALL-STARS

Next generation gives hope to senior circuit

Ben Walker
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — There's a new look to the NL All-Star team these days, and it's more than just Hideo Nomo.

Sure, Nomo's slo-mo windup is entertaining, and so is the way Carlos Perez prances around on the mound. They're two of the 12 first-time NL stars — and all of them are under 30.

"They've got a lot of good, young talented players over there," AL manager Buck Showalter said. "But we do, too. We all scout the same players. You don't think we do a better job and get all of them, do you?"

No, it just appeared that way for a while, especially at All-Star time.

On its way to winning six in a row, the American League always seemed to bring the newer and brighter stars, from Ken Griffey Jr. to Frank Thomas to Roberto Alomar and Kenny Lofton. The NL, meanwhile, seemed to always have Ryne Sandberg, Ozzie Smith and Barry Bonds — all good players, but not a whole lot of new ones.

That changed a bit last year when, helped by an early hit from Jeff Bagwell and capped by Moises Alou's RBI double in the 10th inning, the NL won for the first time since the 1987 team with Mike Schmidt, Rick Reuschel and Mike Scott.

This year, the NL roster is even more loaded with young, first-timers. Raul Mondesi, Reggie Sanders and Sammy Sosa combine speed with strength, while five of the nine pitchers are first-timers.

Mondesi, a five-tool outfielder for Los Angeles, and Montreal pitcher Perez, whose brother, Pascual, pitched in the 1983 game, are the youngest NL members at 24.

"He's the most excited player in the game," Colorado manager Don Baylor said of Mondesi. "Whatever you need done, he can do it."

Dodgers catcher Mike Piazza is back for his third All-Star game.

"You can write that on paper with carbon copies because he's going to be there year after year after year," Dodgers general manager Fred Claire said when Piazza was elected to start.

Making the All-Star team once, by the way, does not guarantee a return trip. Of the 16 first-timers picked last year, only three are back this summer — Lofton, Dante Bichette and Jeff Conine. Bagwell, Jose Rijo and Jason Bere are among those who won't be at the Ballpark on Tuesday night.

Iowa City gastrointestinal doctor may have license revoked

An Iowa City physician may lose his license to practice if charges of providing inadequate care for 101 gastrointestinal patients can be substantiated.

Noufal Jajeh, 35, of 54 Gallup Place, was charged June 29. He is a physician at Mercy Hospital, 505 E. Market St.

Jajeh released the following statement in response to the charges: "We deny those charges and we will present to the board facts to prove these charges are all false at a later hearing."

There will be a hearing before the medical examiners in Des Moines on July 28. Jajeh could face additional disciplinary charges, such as permanent license revocation and a $10,000 fine.

Simpson trial update

O.J. Simpson's daughter Amelle opened the defense case, countering several points made by the prosecution. She said Ronald Shipp, a friend who said Simpson had confided he had dreamed of killing his ex-wife, was never alone with Simpson the night

Amelle Simpson said she never saw blood spots in the foyer of her father's mansion when she entered to let the police come inside, nor did she see blood on the driveway.

Simpson's sister and mother offered brief testimony on Simpson's character, relationship with his family and his actions and mood after he learned of his wife's death.
