Funky store sports custom-made collectibles

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's 400 block of Burlington Street is no more a strip of retail space but a collection of unique shops. The most recent to join the area is the Funky Monkey, which specializes in custom-made collectibles.

Artists not only create custom-made furniture and artwork, but the Funky Monkey store donated 10 percent of their total sales last year to various social organizations. According to Funky Monkey owner John Palermo, the store is a creative way to donate money to social organizations.

"It's a way to give in a unique way," Palermo said. "It's a fun way to donate money.

The furniture store offers people a chance to contribute to social organizations. For example, the store recently donated money to the Iowa City Public Library and the City of Iowa City.

Palermo added that he hopes other businesses will follow suit and donate money to social organizations as well.

The latest King novel led by predictable shortcuts

"Rose Madder" is the latest King novel, but as expected, it's predictable. King has created a story that is largely focused on the main character, Rose Madder, who is sleepwalking through her life. The plot is predictable and lacks any real depth or surprises.

The problem with "Rose Madder" is that it's too predictable. The story is filled with clichés and lacks any real originality. It's a classic example of a story that has been done before and done better.

"Rose Madder" is a disappointment for King fans. He has written many great novels in the past, but "Rose Madder" falls flat. It's a story that is more about the characters than about the plot.

Daughter introduces other side of Simpson

Linda Deutsch
Los Angeles – O.J. Simpson's little girl, Arnelle, took her first public stand yesterday in a double-murder trial.

Arnelle Simpson gestures as she testifies in the double-murder trial of her father, O.J. Simpson, in Los Angeles.

Arnelle Simpson's lawyer suggested the testimony was a strategy to dupe the jury.

Arnelle said in her sworn testimony that O.J. Simpson told her in the car on the day of the murders that he was responsible.

Arnelle Simpson, who testified yesterday for the first time in the murder trial against her father, said he told her later that night that he had killed Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Arnelle Simpson, who was 10 years old when her father was arrested for her father's double murder in 1994, testified before Judge Lance Ito.

Arnelle Simpson's testimony was a slowing force in the case, according to the lawyer representing her father.

Arnelle Simpson, 10, told the jury that her father bragged to her that he had killed Nicole Brown Simpson and Ron Goldman.

Arnelle Simpson, who was 10 years old when her father was arrested for her father's double murder in 1994, said she was too young to remember her father's crime.

Arnelle Simpson repeated yesterday what she has said publicly in the past about her father:

Tarango exits again

Associated Press

Gstaad, Switzerland - The trumped out Tarango has withdrawn from the Swiss Open for the second time in three days, officials said today.

In Week 2, Tarango had accused French umpires Bruno Reboux and Pierre of being "the worst ever" officiating in the game.

The exalted tennis pro, who after a dispute with Reboux over a call to a Tarango's backhand, and Reboux, then slapped the official's nose in the face. Afterwards, Tarango alleged that Reboux's "beef" was because he is a "player for the people."

He named Swiss, the Olympic nation from Switzerland as one of those who had benefited from the officials favoritism.

Tarango was fined a record $2,159 for the outburst and may face further fines or suspensions following an investigation.

"We understand that some "gypsy" from the ATP (Tour of Champions) go back to the United States because Swiss does not allow us to make their tournament," said Tarango in his second day here.

"This was my purpose of this, to be near Geneva," said he was very sorry about the allegations."

All-Stars draw the spotlight tonight

Bill Fenwick

Arlington, Texas – With no day off until the 66th All-Star Game Tuesday night at the Ballpark of the Americas, there is a healthy list of players expected to do well tonight.

But the eye of the storm for the season’s top professional baseball leaders, starting tonight, is the Progressive Field in Cleveland.

The All-Star Game is a preview of the kind of game where you may not see a Cy Young Award winner, but you may see a Cy Young Award winner tonight, perhaps an American League Cy Young Award winner.

But the All-Star Game is not just for those on the field. It’s a celebration of the sport of baseball, the way it’s played and how it’s played.

Frank Thomas, the Chicago White Sox first baseman, will be the headliner for tonight’s game.

Iowa State hires women’s coach

AMES, Iowa – Bill Fenwick didn’t need much time to consider Iowa State’s offer to hire his former teammate and best friend as its new women’s basketball coach.

Fenwick recently became the head coach at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, his alma mater, but he had no idea what was going on.

“I didn’t even know if I wanted to come back,” Fenwick said. “But I was excited about the opportunity to be here and help build a program.”

Fenwick was named the new head coach of the Iowa State women’s basketball team on Monday.

“I’m not sure what’s going on, but I’m excited to be here and help build a program,” Fenwick said.

Fenwick played for Iowa State from 1984-88 and was an assistant coach from 1988-91. He was the head coach at Wisconsin-Madison from 1991-99 and was named the Big Ten Coach of the Year in 1996.

Fenwick is 32-19 in his three seasons as the head coach at Wisconsin-Madison and led the Badgers to the NCAA Tournament in 1996.

“I’m excited to be back in Des Moines and excited to be coaching at Iowa State,” Fenwick said.

“I’m looking forward to the opportunity to be here and help build a program.”

Fenwick is the third new head coach in Iowa State’s history. The other two are Warren Gambo and Martha Vujnovich.

“I think Bill is a great fit for Iowa State,” Barta said. “He’s got a lot of experience and a lot of energy. He’s going to be a great fit for Iowa State.”
