Despite three Stringer visits to the Rutgers campus and two reports by the Home News that an agreement had been reached, administrators in Iowa women's athletics remain perplexed as to what the outcome will be.

ARLINGTON, Texas — When it came to the All-Star home run derby, major leaguers didn't have a million-dollar swing Monday.

While no one came close to hitting the scoreboard above the right-field porch at The Ballpark, target more than 500 feet away.

Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox beat Cleveland's Albert Belle in the final, averaging 432.5 feet per homer.

"I think I was sitting with six or seven outs without a homer," Thomas said. "I thought I had a chance of going the whole contest without hitting one. I slowed my body down and things fell into place."

'Art Thief' stolen from Iowa State campus

AMES (AP) — The art thief has struck again, this time making off with "Art Thief."

Five years ago, someone made off with a sculpture on the Iowa State University campus.

"Someone had to work at it," said Mary Atherly, registrar at ISU's University Museums. "It was bolted to the ground."

ISU English Professor Neal Bowers, who had been commissioned to write a series of poems about ISU, heard about the theft of the stolen 2 1/2-foot-tall metal rabbit and wrote a poem about it.

The poem was called "Art Thief."

Now, the poem, engraved on a plaque and placed at the site of the original theft, has been stolen.

"There's a sick sense of humor in it somehow," Bowers said.

It's not Bowers' first brush with theft. He's spent years trying to track down someone who plagiarizes his poems and submits them to poetry journals to be published again.

Simpson trial update

A couple on a date, Danny Mandel and Ellen Aaronson, told jurors they saw neither blood nor bodies nor any sign of mayhem when they walked past Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium at about 10:25 p.m. the night of the murders. That time is about 10 minutes after prosecutors believe Ms. Simpson was slain.

O.J. Simpson's eldest sister, Shirley Baker, corroborated other family members' testimony that Simpson was stricken with grief the day after the murders. She said she and her husband stayed at Simpson's mansion to keep an eye on him.

Serbs capture U.N. 'safe area'

Liam McDowall
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The U.N. "safe area" of Srebrenica fell Tuesday to the Bosnian Serb army despite a NATO airstrike on the rebel force. Srebrenica is the first U.N. safe haven to fall.

Refugees were fleeing the overrun eastern enclave, and Dutch peacekeepers abandoned a defense line and were struggling to set up another. The takeover was another grim setback to international efforts to end three years of war in Bosnia-Herzegovina, where the future of the U.N. mission seemed more uncertain than ever.

"The Bosnian Serb army is now in control of Srebrenica," U.N. spokesman Alexander Ivanko said. Dutch peacekeepers fled the position they set up south of the outside the main Dutch peacekeeping base in Potocari to the north, he said.

Nearly 20,000 frightened refugees had fled the Serb onslaught and were milling outside the tiny U.N. compound at Potocari, unsure where to turn for shelter, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said.

"These people are panicked. They have not eaten properly over the past several weeks," agency spokesman Ron Redmond said.

Stringer continues to waffle, says pressure has 'taken its toll'

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

More than a month after a New Jersey newspaper reported that Iowa women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer was leaving for Rutgers University, she has finally broken her silence.

But the only thing Stringer is saying is she still doesn't know what career move she's going to make.

After numerous rumors and erroneous reports from the Home News in East Brunswick, N.J., Stringer said on Tuesday that she is undecided about accepting the vacant women's head coaching position at Rutgers.

Stringer is one of the final five candidates for the East Coast job, with the fate of the other four coaches hinging solely on her decision.

"I don't know what my decision is yet," Stringer said. "I hope to make a decision soon."

Though she has been considering the position since June 19, Stringer said she needed more time to think about the move across the nation to coach the Scarlet Knights.

"This has been a very difficult time for me," she said. "It's taken its toll on me more than you can imagine. What I need is a little more time, and then it will all come out."

The Home News reported that Rutgers would announce Monday that Stringer would resign from the UI and opt for the East Coast position, but she has yet to make an announcement.

Rutgers Sports Information director Peter Kowalski said no timetable had been set for filling the position.

"There was never a deadline set as far as the women's head coaching position was concerned," Kowalski said. "No announcement has been made, and that's all that I know."

UI leaders prepared for position changes

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Despite being confident in their current positions, UI administrators admit a new permanent president would have the power to shake up the top authority and possibly put their jobs in jeopardy.

During his tenure at the UI, Hunter Rawlings was key in creating three new vice presidential positions: University Relations, Health Sciences and Statewide Health Services. Those offices are now held by Ann Rhodes, Henri Manasse and John Colleton, respectively.

Rhodes, vice president of University Relations since 1991, has already been through the rigors of changing administrations; she was here in 1988 when Rawlings became president. She said any changes would be slowly implemented.

"Usually, a new president makes changes. It happened when (Rawlings) came here," she said. "But the changes happened over time — it wasn't an immediate exodus."

Still,

Rhodes acknowledges her own position could be targeted.

"The new person could decide that my position should be a vice presidency, shouldn't exist at all or should stay the way it is," Rhodes said.

Clinton: It's time to 'move on' in Vietnam

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two decades after the war that bitterly divided Americans and left 58,000 U.S. servicemen dead, President Clinton normalized relations with communist Vietnam Tuesday. He called it "a time to heal and a time to build."

Clinton's historic White House announcement was boycotted by the American Legion, the nation's largest veterans group, and the leading POW-MIA organization. They disputed Clinton's argument that Hanoi has made major strides toward a full accounting of missing Americans.

Key Republican leaders — including most contenders for the presidential nomination — also opposed the decision. "All signs point to Vietnam willfully withholding information which could resolve the fate of many Americans lost in the war," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, who has vehemently opposed the U.S. move to normalize relations with Vietnam still listed as missing from the Indochina war.

"All signs point to Vietnam willfully withholding information which could resolve the fate of many Americans lost in the war," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, who has vehemently opposed the U.S. move to normalize relations with Vietnam still listed as missing from the Indochina war.

Over the past three years, 167 sets of remains have been returned to the United States from Vietnam, along with hundreds of pages of documents that may help solve cases.

"We will keep working until we get all the answers we can," Clinton pledged.

"With this new relationship, we will be able to make more progress."

The decision came 20 years after the United States left Vietnam in humiliation after the only war it ever lost.

In a demonstration of bipartisan support for his move, Clinton was flanked in the East Room by a handful of lawmakers who fought in the war, including Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who spent 5 1/2 years in Vietnamese prisons.

"This would not be an easy decision for any president to make," McCain said. "President Clinton has shown courage and honor in his resolve to do so."

Clinton's action drew particular attention because of his college-age

What normalization means

- President Clinton's nomination of an ambassador.
- Funding for an embassy in Hanoi (though Congress has several measures pending that would block funding).
- Most-favored nation trade status, meaning the U.S. and Vietnam give each other the lowest available tariffs on their products.
- Authorization of the Overseas Private Investment Corp. to insure U.S. investments against war, nationalization and other political risks.
- Authorization of the U.S. Export-Import Bank to finance American exports to Vietnam.

Can you say 'hypocrisy'? The Cabo debacle

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

"Hey, hey All Pets Veterinary Clinic, how many cats did you put to sleep?"

Just when you thought the furor over Cabo (no, not the famous Simpson house guest) was over, he's back. I really tried to avoid using my precious space to talk about the now-famous jungle cat that mauled a little girl. The owners didn't want to allow the cat to be killed for a rabies test, and everyone got in on the "Save Cabo" act.

Monday night, there was a memorial service for Cabo. Boo hoo, poor vicious cat. Don't get me wrong, I think it's wrong to have a cat placed in a domestic setting when it's natural habitat is the wild; I'd even go so far as to say it's stupid.

But what about Alice Mintz and the four other people Cabo bit before her? Two-year-old Alice had to get 200 stitches and rabies shots because of Cabo's attack and because her aunt was being selfish.

Therefore, I think it's good that Cabo was euthanized. Yep, it's fine — not only because the cat needed a rabies test, but because it seriously injured a helpless child.

And I think humans are of a higher order than animals. We're better, at least here in the city; in the jungle, I'll follow the animals' rules. Here, despite the stupidity of owning such a cat, the cat doesn't get special consideration because it came from the jungle. A rabies test is fairly common for animals who bite humans, even Cabo.

People have said, "That's just what Cabo does. He's out of his element." Well, so is a homeless person, yet if a transient had attacked Alice and caused her to need 200 stitches, people would be clamoring for reinstatement of the death penalty.

How can it be fair to compromise a person's safety and well-being for a cat's? I don't think it can. I really do love animals and have cats of my own. They are small, rambunctious and great pets. Why buy an exotic animal that survives by killing mammals and birds in the wild?

Anyway, how smart is it to keep a killer in your house? Not very. Would you let John Wayne Gacy live in your house, even if he were being really sweet at the time? No, because you would know that eventually he would snap. Just like Cabo.

UI Animal Coalition President Grace Trifaro wrote a letter to The Daily Iowan arguing that people collect exotic animals because they want to feel exotic themselves. I think she's right.

But maybe they just want a really big cat. Cats gain weight the same way that people do. Last night I heard someone say, "I know the best way to get really fat: Go out to the bars and get drunk, then go to Panchero's and eat an El Gordo (the two-pounder) every night for five months."

I don't know if cats like steak and pork or chicken burritos best, but I had a cat that weighed 20 pounds (Cabo's reported weight) and all it ate was Purina Cat Chow.

Selfishness seems to be at the root of the problem. First of all, if the owners hadn't thought "Wouldn't we be cool if we had a jungle cat?" nobody would have been attacked by Cabo. Secondly, if the owners hadn't said, "Don't kill it, it's our cat," Alice could have been spared the rabies shots.

Let me clarify selfishness because a friend of mine thinks selfishness is a virtue, wherein one looks out for his or her own best interest. To me, being selfish is thinking about oneself to the point of hurting others.

By my friend's definition, the owners weren't being selfish because they weren't looking out for their best interests (the cat had bitten both of them). But it wasn't in anyone's best interests to keep the big old mean kitty in their house.

By my definition — the right one, of course — they were being selfish, and, to quote my friend Amy, they were "a few fries short of a Happy Meal."

Does the word "hypocritical" mean anything to you all? Does it make sense to care so much about the cat that you protest its killing when it attacks your niece after bringing it from the wild (its home) to a house in Illinois where it would live a less than satisfactory life anyway? If the owners loved wild animals so much, why didn't they build a zoo or at least get a season pass to Brookfield Zoo in the Chicago suburbs? Or go to Africa?

Michael Jackson built a zoo (and an amusement park and a ranch, and he married Lisa Marie Presley). Well, maybe he's not the best example of normal people loving animals, but he might have taken care of Cabo and Alice all in one fell swoop.

But the owners put the cat's life in front of a little girl's — and what's more, in front of their own niece's well-being. If it had been a regular cat, would it be such a big deal? Nah, because a regular cat probably couldn't do that much damage.

I'm failing to see what is so much cooler about a 20-pound jungle cat as opposed to a regular house cat. Is it the danger? The cat looked like a cat. If you want to have an exotic pet, why not a tiger or a monkey? At least those look cool.

Or why not a gerbil or a parakeet or a puppy?

Pets are good companions. They are nice to have around, but they shouldn't be status symbols.

If the owners wanted a status symbol or wanted to be exotic, they could have bought a BMW. They eat gas and oil, not little girls.

Quotable...

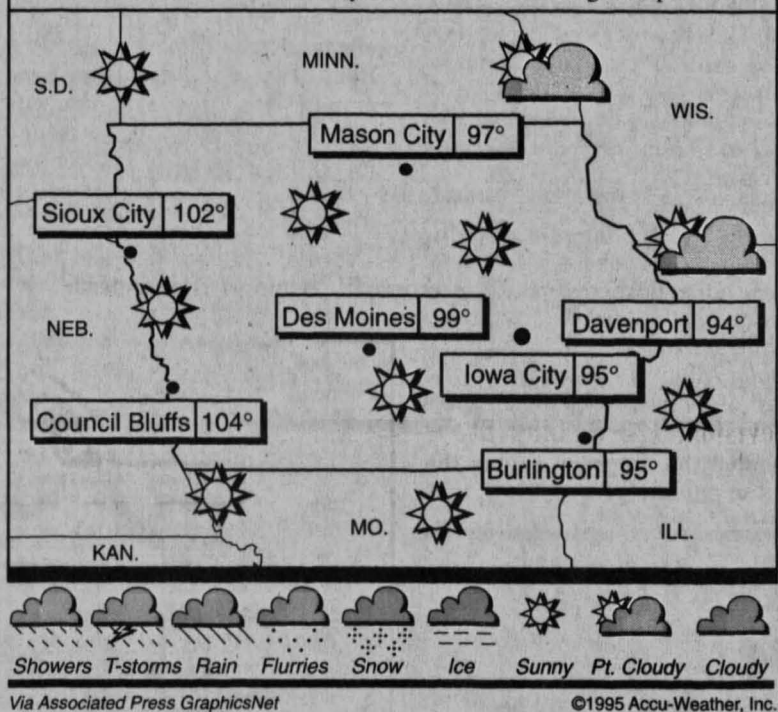

"I don't have a favorite, but I do have a least favorite: Kato Kaelin — he is a total idiot."

Limbaugh decorator claims expensive tastes led to dismissal

NEW YORK (AP) — Rush Limbaugh's former interior decorator says he's out of a job because Limbaugh's wife has expensive tastes.

Limbaugh

Ken Jennings sued Monday for breach of contract, saying he is owed about $100,000. He claims Limbaugh and his wife, Marta Fitzgerald, spent millions on their 12-room New York City apartment under his direction. But after working on it for a year, Jennings was suddenly barred from the building in April, he said.

"I think she was having a hard time with Rush because of the money she was spending, and I think I became the fall guy," Jennings said. "She went wild and got very ornate and very expensive."

The apartment has a walk-in humidor for Limbaugh's cigars and solid-gold fixtures.

A call to Limbaugh's publicist, Kit Carson, was not immediately returned Tuesday.

'Sisters' star to play journalist in Lifetime movie

NEW YORK (AP) — "Sisters" co-star Sela Ward will take on the rise and fall of TV newswoman Jessica Savitch in a cable TV movie.

"Almost Golden: The Jessica Savitch Story" won't sugarcoat Savitch's life, said Judy Girard, Lifetime vice president for programming.

Savitch drowned in 1983 at age 36 when the car in which she was a passenger backed into a canal outside Philadelphia. Her path to stardom at NBC included cocaine abuse, the suicide of her second husband five months after their wedding and a near breakdown on the air the year she died.

Ward, whose hair is blond for the part, dwelled on the positive in an interview in Tuesday's Daily News.

Savitch was "this wonderful woman, so full of life and playfulness. And she seemed like a really neat lady," said Ward, who plays Teddy on "Sisters."

The movie will air Sept. 4.

Douglas sibling cleared of criminal charges

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Kirk Douglas' son Eric was found innocent of disorderly conduct and obstruction charges over his eviction from a motel room.

Eric Douglas, 36, was charged in November when police told him to leave the room where he had been staying while performing at a comedy club.

Motel employees said Eric Douglas had been abusive to them, but his attorney, Barry Voss, said that no one told Eric Douglas he had been evicted and that police overreacted.

"He felt he had been wrongly accused and justly vindicated," Voss said Tuesday.

A jury acquitted him on Monday.

Princess takes covert holiday in Colorado

DENVER (AP) — Princess Diana breezed through Denver and apparently headed for the hills.

The princess, her two sons and her entourage arrived from San Francisco on Monday. They could be seen for just a few seconds before boarding a chartered plane.

It wasn't clear where she was headed during her private trip, but British tabloids reported that she went to the home of millionaire publisher Michael Flannery at the base of Vail Mountain.

"Someone asked her where she was headed," United Airlines flight attendant Kelly Schay said. "She said, 'Wouldn't you like to know?'"

An emphasis on loyalty and quality and a no-frills approach to business have kept three generations of Detweilers in a painting partnership for more than 50 years.

Detweiler Painting, 408 Dakota Trail, was unofficially established in 1938 when John Detweiler began painting mostly barns in Kalona and other rural towns outside Iowa City with paint he purchased off the porch of his friend Earl Gilpin.

In 1940, Detweiler and Gilpin — founder of Gilpin Paint & Glass Inc., 330 E. Market St. — combined their efforts to make a painter-for-hire available to apply the paint purchased at Gilpin's. That year, Gilpin opened the doors of its first store, then located at 110 S. Linn St.

To this day, Gilpin's still refers customers to Detweiler Painting, both out of loyalty and out of confidence that Detweiler will do the job right. Detweiler also holds a faithful association with Swartzendruber Lumber and Construction Co., of Homestead, Iowa.

"Swartzendruber, who is currently working with us on the woodwork in the Gamma Phi Beta house, often refers their unfinished wooden cabinets and furniture customers to us to do the painting," Detweiler said.

A focus on delivering quality service justifies the value of hiring a good painter, Detweiler said.

"We are not the most expensive painting outfits, but we easily could be," he said. "The average painter makes about $15 to $35 an hour. Detweiler's is somewhere in between. The quality is worth the money you pay. We've gone into places where other painters have painted over oil and dirt or filled cracks with bubble gum or toothpaste, and we fix it."

In the phone book, the painting company is listed in the white pages, and yellow pages with regular two-line references. Although Detweiler is usually booked two to seven months in advance, it is not due to fancy print advertisement or radio jingles.

Family painters stress quality

Azalia Owen
The Daily Iowan

An emphasis on loyalty and quality and a no-frills approach to business have kept three generations of Detweilers in a painting partnership for more than 50 years.

Detweiler Painting, 408 Dakota Trail, was unofficially established in 1938 when John Detweiler began painting mostly barns in Kalona and other rural towns outside Iowa City with paint he purchased off the porch of his friend Earl Gilpin.

In 1940, Detweiler and Gilpin — founder of Gilpin Paint & Glass Inc., 330 E. Market St. — combined their efforts to make a painter-for-hire available to apply the paint purchased at Gilpin's. That year, Gilpin opened the doors of its first store, then located at 110 S. Linn St.

To this day, Gilpin's still refers customers to Detweiler Painting, both out of loyalty and out of confidence that Detweiler will do the job right. Detweiler also holds a faithful association with Swartzendruber Lumber and Construction Co., of Homestead, Iowa.

"Swartzendruber, who is currently working with us on the woodwork in the Gamma Phi Beta house, often refers their unfinished wooden cabinets and furniture customers to us to do the painting," Detweiler said.

A focus on delivering quality service justifies the value of hiring a good painter, Detweiler said.

"We are not the most expensive painting outfits, but we easily could be," he said. "The average painter makes about $15 to $35 an hour. Detweiler's is somewhere in between. The quality is worth the money you pay. We've gone into places where other painters have painted over oil and dirt or filled cracks with bubble gum or toothpaste, and we fix it."

In the phone book, the painting company is listed in the white pages, and yellow pages with regular two-line references. Although Detweiler is usually booked two to seven months in advance, it is not due to fancy print advertisement or radio jingles.

"Business, ever since the beginning, has been promoted by word of mouth," he said. "But it's the return customers that keep us busy. A lot of established business people contract Detweiler and trust the employees with their homes, as far as moving furniture and other personal possessions. There's a lot of buildup of trust in us that has been passed from one customer to another."

Steve Detweiler, John's grandson, began operating the business this January after his father, Ivan, retired. Steve Detweiler has a new perspective on the task of maintaining the service his father and grandfather were known for.

"It's a heck of a responsibility to uphold the perfection and quality that has been established in the past," he said.

But Steve Detweiler is not intimidated by his new role in the painting industry.

"I've had enough years of experience to handle the painting part," he said. "It's the business aspect that will be new and different for me."

As a painter for his father, Steve Detweiler merely had one task for the day: painting. Detweiler now has to prioritize several duties daily.

"Now, there are five basic things I do each day," he said. "I check my answering machine in the morning and return calls. I go out and bid jobs, finding out what is needed for a specific paint job. I have to keep on top of the crew to make sure things are being done correctly. I maintain book work and bill collecting. And lastly, I actually do some painting myself."

Detweiler Painting may be continued into a fourth generation, Steve Detweiler said.

"I have a 12-year-old son, Justin, that I plan on bringing to work," he said. "I don't know if he'll take over the painting business, though. It depends on what he wants out of life."

Gamma Phi Beta Sorority, 326 N. Clinton St., has contracted Detweiler annually to do its summer cosmetic repairs for more than 20 years.

Sunny McNall, member of Gamma Phi Beta House Corp. Board, is in charge of decorating. She has enjoyed working with the company.

"They've done a lot of our work for a very long time," she said. "They're very conscientious and do a very good job. I'm very particular, but I've enjoyed working with the crew because they are accommodating."

Buchanan touts estate taxes plan

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Republican presidential contender Pat Buchanan on Tuesday pushed his plan for a $7 billion cut in inheritance taxes and took another swipe at rival Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's economic credentials.

Buchanan

Buchanan said his latest tax-cut idea was part of a larger package that will establish his credentials as a conservative. He said it would help his campaign in Iowa, where estate taxes are an important issue.

"This is forcing the breakup of family farms, portions of which have to be sold off to pay inheritance and estate taxes," he said. "It is against one of the basic ideas of this country."

Now, taxes can run as high as 55 percent of the value of an estate. Gramm would exempt estates of less than $5 million from inheritance taxes and set a flat 20 percent rate for estates above that level.

"It seems to me that taking 20 percent of the inheritance of the wealthy is enough," he said.

Later, Buchanan said he'll call for a modified flat tax and a "capital gain tax holiday," in which transactions under $50,000 would be exempted for six months.

In total, that package would establish his conservative credentials in a crowded Republican presidential field, Buchanan said.

Buchanan has heavily targeted Gramm, particularly in Iowa, which holds the first test of strength with precinct caucuses next February. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole is the overwhelming frontrunner in that caucus campaign, with Buchanan and Gramm competing for conservative voters to emerge as the alternative to Dole.

Buchanan's strategists said Tuesday's announcement was calculated to begin focusing attention on economic issues, where they say Gramm is vulnerable. They say Buchanan's tough anti-abortion stance has already established his credentials on social issues and they want to broaden that base.

PUBLIC ACCESS CHAIRMAN DEFENDS PROGRAM

Broadcast of nude woman sparks City Council caucus

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

A photo of a pinup girl and a macrame owl was the focus of public discussion at the Iowa City City Council meeting Tuesday night.

Producers, audience and board members addressed the council, defending what was deemed by some community members as questionable programming.

On July 1, a program looping of a photograph of a naked woman — with the lower body digitally altered — and a macrame owl was aired at 7 p.m. on Public Access television.

Some community members were offended by the program and showered council members with phone calls and letters condemning the program. They said the early evening air time was inappropriate.

Doug Allaire — chairman of the board of directors at Public Access Television, 123 S. Linn St. — defended the program, saying the point of public access is just that — access — and restrictions placed on timing or content were against the philosophy of the program.

"This is Iowa City. It is a diverse community," he said. "To some people, what was on was not very interesting."

Council members agreed public access is an important vehicle for free speech and expression.

"Sometimes, making people feel uncomfortable spurs discussion," Councilor Karen Kubby said.

Regularly scheduled open programming this Friday at 7 p.m. will address the legality and personal controversy wrought by the controversial program.

The spot usually features music, poetry, comedy or otherwise noted "ranting and raving" by Iowa Citizens, Allaire said.

was to the question of whether the trial has received too much publicity, which was a resounding "yes" from most polled.

"It says something weird about our society," said UI senior Miranda Akya.

Ironically, none of those polled mentioned that answering pollsters' questions was contributing to the barrage of coverage.

Among responses to readers' favorite witnesses, "America's Favorite House Guest" Brian "Kato" Kaelin was overwhelmingly on top — but not with everyone. UI senior Pat Geasland said the shaggy-haired actor would never be allowed to crash on his couch.

"I don't have a favorite, but I do have a least favorite: Kato Kaelin — he is a total idiot," Geasland said.

Had UI dental student Neal Allan scheduled his trip to Los Angeles any earlier, he might have rubbed elbows with Kaelin and Rosa Lopez. While Allan claims not to have confiscated the murder weapon, the highlight of the O.J. saga was being near the scene of the crime the day after Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were killed, he said.

"I was in his backyard the day after it happened," Allan said.

One observant survey participant pointed out the mounting garbage on Superior Court Judge Lance Ito's desk and another said Jay Leno's "Dancing Itos" are the high point of the trial, but Kent Pearson, UI associate professor of anesthesia, sided with 14 others by citing what might become known as the "Cinderella Slipper" moment of trial history.

"The highlight? O.J. trying on the gloves," Pearson said. "It was a key moment in a made-for-TV trial."

Poor Marcia Clark. Despite making it through law school with flying colors and working her way up to the District Attorney's office in one of the most crime-ridden cities in the country, she couldn't avoid a media buzz about her new haircut. "I like her new hair," Vaughan said.

"It's sexy, actually."

Our unscientific statistics deemed it a tossup whether attorney Johnnie Cochran resembled the gun-toting, Biblical verse-spewing Samuel L. Jackson (who starred in both "Die Hard with a Vengeance" and "Pulp Fiction") or the more diplomatic, Biblical verse-spewing politician Jesse Jackson. However, some chose to compare Cochran to other national heroes.

"Can I have a Walter Payton write-in?" Vande Berg said. "We'll keep with the running back theme then."

The final question brought out some rather creative responses. Among the things those polled would most miss as a sequestered juror were, reading Devon Alexander's column and the "Doonesbury" comic strips about the trial. However, UI dentistry student Jonathan Hanridge was speaking straight from the heart when he explained what he would most miss if he were isolated for months on end.

"I'd really miss conjugal visits with my wife," he said.

STRINGER

Stringer, a former NCAA women's Coach of the Year, is one of the few women's coaches in the country to make a salary equal to her male counterpart, UI men's basketball head coach Tom Davis. Stringer makes $123,219 at the UI.

In a phone interview Tuesday, Rutgers Athletic director Fred Gruninger said it was inappropriate to discuss what salary had been offered to Stringer.

"That's between Vivian and the search committee," Gruninger said.

However, Gruninger would say Stringer was the school's top choice.

"We're pleased to be involved in Vivian's consideration," Gruninger said. "Obviously it's an important and demanding decision, and it's going to take some time."

opposition to the war and efforts to avoid the draft.

He said his move was intended "to move beyond the haunting and painful past toward finding common ground for the future." It will lead to a number of important steps:

- The United States and Vietnam will negotiate trade, investment and tax treaties in order to expand commerce. By some estimates, Vietnam will spend $7 billion over the next seven years on roads, ports and a modern telecommunications system, and U.S. companies are clamoring for the business.

- The United States will upgrade its diplomatic liaison office in Hanoi to a full embassy, with an ambassador to be named later. Secretary of State Warren Christopher will go to Vietnam next month for talks on human rights, democracy and economic reform.

• A presidential delegation will go to Vietnam before year's end to press for more progress on missing Americans.

from Geneva, citing agency staffers who fled their office in downtown Srebrenica for refuge at the Potocari compound.

"They are looking for some kind of protection, though there is little protection they can get from the peacekeepers at present," he said.

Small arms and sniper fire was slicing through Potocari and around the town, apparently coming from Serbs through government troops that were likely firing as well, he said.

Ivanko said the United Nations was trying to persuade Bosnian Serbs to agree to a cease-fire in Srebrenica, "but no results yet."

The enclave is the first "safe area" the United Nations established two years ago to protect civilians, but as with the five other U.N.-protected areas, the designation has not kept it out of the war.

ADMINISTRATION

said. "Or the person could decide that I'm a jerk and make changes in personnel."

Although Rhodes said her new boss can make whatever changes he or she pleases, she thinks the current UI administrative framework works well.

"The structure we have here wouldn't work at some universities, but I think it's a good system," she said. "It's a good allocation of responsibilities."

Manasse is another "new" vice president and has been in his position as vice president for Health Sciences since 1993. The position was created to ensure coordination between the UI health science colleges, UI Hospitals and Clinics and the Statewide Health Service Units.

Manasse said his job is very complex and requires extensive knowledge of the health sciences. However, he accomplished the new president might be, he or she would probably not want to tackle Manasse's duties, he said.

"It will depend on how the new president wants to configure the top administration," Manasse said. "The new president could decide to take my responsibilities onto him or herself. However, I don't think the new president is going to want to spend his or her time worrying about what I do every day."

Uncertainties might be clarified when the UI undergoes an administrative audit during acting President Peter Nathan's tenure. While the audit will examine the administration in terms of potency and efficiency, Nathan doubted the recently hired vice presidents will have to worry about its results.

"It's possible (they will be examined), but I don't think so," Nathan said. "The university is, believe it or not, underadministered."

Jury selection begins in Klaas murder case

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — The first of an unprecedented 8,500 prospective jurors reported Tuesday for the trial of the man accused of killing Polly Klaas, the 12-year-old whose abduction prompted "three strikes, you're out" laws around the country.

What is expected to be four months of jury selection began with a hearing on procedural matters. About 150 people will be called each day to pick a jury for 41-year-old Richard Allen Davis.

They will appear before Superior Court Judge Lawrence Antolini, prosecutor Greg Jacobs and defense attorney Barry Collins.

After those who prove hardship are weeded out, Antolini hopes to have 360 potential jurors who will answer a 36-page questionnaire detailing their backgrounds and opinions on crime and punishment.

Officials have budgeted $1,233,945 for the case.

In the Klaas case, Davis faces murder charges that carry "special circumstances," which means he could face the death penalty.

He is accused of taking the 12-year-old Petaluma, Calif., girl from her bedroom during a slumber party on the night of Oct. 1, 1993.

The kidnapping and ensuing nationwide search for Klaas drew reams of publicity. In late November, Davis, 41, was arrested and days later authorities found Klaas' body, following information he gave them.

Defense secretary questions future of U.N.
mission in Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future of the U.N. humanitarian mission in Bosnia is in doubt now that Dutch peacekeepers have been overrun by Serb forces at the U.N.-protected enclave of Srebrenica, Defense Secretary William Perry said Tuesday.

"It's very clear that the viability of the U.N. providing that humanitarian mission is at issue here," Perry said in an interview with CNN.

"I continue to hope that an extraction will not be necessary because I continue to believe that the United Nations' forces are providing a very valuable function in the country, and if the forces do leave, we are facing the prospect of a humanitarian disaster," Perry said.

Rumors run wild after Yeltsin enters hospital

MOSCOW (AP) — Aides on Tuesday rushed Boris Yeltsin to the hospital with "acute" heart trouble, renewing doubts about the 64-year-old president's health despite assurances that he remained active and in control.

Yeltsin, the most powerful politician in Russia's young post-Soviet government, was taken to the Central Clinical Hospital early Tuesday with chest pains. Presidential spokesman Sergei Medvedev said doctors planned to keep him under observation for "the next several days."

But Yeltsin "continues to fulfill his duties and does not think his schedule for next week will be changed," Medvedev said.

Despite Medvedev's frequent updates on Yeltsin's health, many Russians were skeptical of the optimism, given the Soviet legacy of hiding the obviously failing health of aged leaders. Critics seized on news of Yeltsin's illness as confirmation that his health problems are more serious than the Kremlin has let on.

"Our president doesn't govern Russia," said opposition lawmaker Viktor Ilyukhin, a Communist. He doubted the official diagnosis of heart disease, and alluded to rumors that Yeltsin is alcoholic. "My source speak of an old illness that destroys the liver and kidneys," he said.

Although Yeltsin's behavior has grown more erratic in recent years, the Kremlin has maintained that he is fit while acknowledging that he suffers from back and heart trouble and takes medication for blood pressure.

Yeltsin continues to play tennis but reportedly moves more stiffly and awkwardly these days. As late as 1993, he frequently waded into crowds to shake hands; now his public appearances are rare and formal.

DEFENDANT DEEMED SANE BY DOCTOR

Associated Press

Sixteenth Circuit Solicitor Tommy Pope, right, shakes hands with law enforcement officers who are providing security at the Union County Courthouse Tuesday in Union, S.C. Pope is the prosecutor in the Susan Smith trial. Smith is accused in the October drowning deaths of her two young sons.

Judge declares Smith able to undergo trial

Jesse J. Holland
Associated Press

UNION, S.C. — Susan Smith is mentally competent to stand trial for drowning her two young sons, the judge in her murder case ruled Tuesday.

Circuit Judge William Howard agreed with the state's chief psychiatrist, Dr. Donald Morgan, who said Smith was sane. However, Morgan had warned that Smith was suicidal and might seek to sabotage her defense.

Smith, 23, could get the death penalty if convicted of the two murder charges in the deaths last fall of sons Michael, 3, and Alex, 14 months.

When the judge asked her if she understood the charges against her, Smith replied quietly, "Murder."

Asked if she understood the possible punishment, she responded, "The death penalty."

"At any time have you not been able to understand your attorneys and they not able to understand you due to your mental condition?" Howard asked.

"No, sir," she answered.

The judge also questioned her lawyers about whether Smith had cooperated with them. Lawyers David Bruck and Judy Clarke said she had, but they were afraid that if she was called to testify, she would ask jurors to sentence her to death.

In his ruling, the judge said the anti-depressants Smith has been taking seem to help her understand the court proceedings.

"In that sense, Ms. Smith is rendered more rational and better able to understand these proceedings. I find that Ms. Smith is competent to stand trial and can proceed with this matter," Howard said.

Prosecutor Tommy Pope then asked Howard to order Smith to enter a plea, but he declined and no plea was entered. On Jan. 16, a judge entered an innocent plea for her after Smith's lawyers said she was not ready to enter a plea.

The judge then resumed jury selection, which had begun Monday and could take up to two weeks. This morning, he dismissed a man and a woman because they oppose the death penalty and another woman who expressed fear that she would have a nervous breakdown if forced to sit through the trial.

He did accept one potential juror, the first to be passed to a second stage of questioning, but the defense later rejected her without giving a reason. The woman had said that at first she wanted Smith to get the death penalty but now has no opinion.

The names of the potential jurors are not being released.

During a hearing Monday, Morgan said if Smith takes the stand in her own defense, her growing suicidal tendencies may take over.

"She feels she deserves punishment, and her desire would be not to continue living in prison," Morgan said. "If she got out of prison, she said she would take her life as rapidly as possible."

She also has crying spells and nausea and takes the anti-depressants to help her sleep and stave off feelings of worthlessness, he said.

Bruck has said his defense will be based on her mental state.

Smith showed no emotion during Morgan's hour of testimony. He was the prosecution's sole witness, and Smith's lawyers did not put on any experts of their own.

David Smith, Smith's ex-husband and the father of Michael and Alex, walked into court on the first day of jury selection wearing a photograph of his sons on his shirt pocket. He sat two rows back from his former wife. At times he stared toward her, at other times at the floor.

He and Smith's mother, Linda Russell, who also watched the proceedings, declined to speak with reporters as they left court.

BRIDGE TO DANGER

Route poses problems

People are always looking for a short cut. Whether it be a quicker way to finish a task or a faster path to a destination, the swiftest path is always sought. However, the fastest route isn't the most important factor to consider when the quickest course puts one's life in danger.

This summer, the Union pedestrian bridge is undergoing some repair work. Summer is the best time of the year to make renovations that may cause an inconvenience because the number of students in town during the summer term is considerably less than during the regular school year.

Although this route between the east and west sides of campus is inaccessible, there are plenty of alternatives. One can take the Hancher pedestrian bridge, the Iowa Avenue bridge or the Burlington Street bridge to gain access to the other side of campus. None of these alternate routes is very far from the Union pedestrian bridge.

However, many have chosen to take a chance and walk across a railroad bridge, which is the private property of Crandic Railroad.

Unlike the Union pedestrian bridge, the railroad bridge isn't UI-owned. Crandic Railroad officials won't hesitate to bring trespassing charges upon those they find walking along the tracks.

In a Daily Iowan story Monday ("Bridge yields danger, short cut"), Crandic Superintendent Kevin Burke said, "It's a terrible idea (to walk on the bridge). We view it as trespassing, and pedestrians will be prosecuted. ... We would appreciate that people realize railroads can be dangerous."

Looking at a map, it is obvious why students use the railroad bridge; it takes them right to the Art Building, as the Union footbridge did. Since the Union bridge is out of commission, the next closest route is the railroad bridge.

However, it is also the most dangerous path. Are people really so lazy they would rather put their own lives at risk than go a block out of their way?

There is also an element of danger. In the DI article, a UI freshman said, "I'm only on this bridge because the other one is out of commission. But it is kind of fun; it's an adventure." It may be an adventure, but the fun will end when someone is hurt or killed when an train unexpectedly approaches them at full speed.

If Crandic had wanted the railroad bridge to be used, it would have constructed stairs to it to make it more accessible. There are three alternate bridges to use until construction on the Union pedestrian bridge is completed. While using the railroad bridge may save a few minutes, it could also result in tragedy.

Stringer: Make a decision or pack your basketballs

I can't figure out the C. Vivian Stringer ordeal. Sure, she's a hell of a coach, but to be objective, she has choked at the finish line a few times. Yet she's being handled with kid gloves from here to New Jersey.

The UI and Rutgers athletic departments, the UI women's basketball team and Stringer's coaching staff are all waiting for this one woman to finally make a career move — a decision that has been one month in the "consideration process."

She's been jerking both schools around for 30 days, she refuses press interviews and she'll only operate through a UI spokeswoman. Even her players have no inkling who is going to be blowing the whistle at their first basketball practice later this year.

To top it off, the all-important recruiting process is on hold at both Rutgers and the UI.

And yet no one — Rutgers, coaches, players, the UI — is the least bit annoyed.

"She needs to take quality time to think this over, and we'll give her all the time she needs," Iowa Women's Athletic director Christine Grant said Monday.

How much time is "quality time"? How about picking one team and doing what she's paid to do: "quality recruiting"?

Stringer's indecision is accomplishing far more than annoying loyal Hawkeye women's basketball fans and wearing on the nerves of her staff and players. Its causing the UI to focus far too much energy on a far too ridiculous topic.

The UI's new acting president, with less than two weeks under his belt, is already worrying about how to woo Stringer to stay loyal to the UI. "We're trying to keep Vivian Stringer here, but I don't know how that will go," acting President Peter Nathan said this week.

Rutgers has stated that if Stringer doesn't make a decision by the end of the week, they will be forced to offer the position to one of their four other candidates.

So now, in addition to Stringer's dumbfounded players, the scrambling UI administrators and compromising athletic directors, tack four excellent coaches onto the list of people waiting for one wishy-washy woman to reach a verdict.

To remain a Hawkeye or cross to the Scarlet Knights' side? Sure it's a big decision — the Hawkeye bug bites hard — but the world does not revolve around Stringer, and it's about time she was reminded of that.

It's only a matter of consideration that Stringer let someone in on what's going on. Maybe just a little hint; she could, for example, start sporting Rutgers T-shirts on a daily basis. Or perhaps she could leave a U-Haul parked in her driveway.

Countless people are annoyed, the press can't get the scoop and Nathan is wasting his valuable time worrying about who will lead the ladies in black and gold instead of concentrating his energy on tasks like improving the UI's waning four-year graduation rate or its retention of minority students.

But the fact that Stringer is being difficult, secretive and inconsiderate to people all around the nation is not enough to condemn the two-time Big Ten, Sports Illustrated and NCAA Coach of the Year.

So let's talk ethics.

Last year Stringer recruited a six-member group of players lauded as the finest in the nation by numerous magazines. The Hawkeyes haven't been that consistently fabulous to warrant such a turnout of eager and talented young athletes who were also being courted by other nationally renowned college teams. They flocked to Iowa City and Carver-Hawkeye Arena for one C. Vivian Stringer.

Stringer may be indecisive, but she's got one hell of a coaching reputation. In only five seasons, she raised the UI from the lowest rung of the Big Ten ladder to being one of the most to-be-reckoned-with basketball squads in the United States.

In 1984, for the first time in UI and U.S. history, a record number of fans — 22,157 people — piled into Carver-Hawkeye Arena for a women's basketball game. In her 22nd season as a women's basketball coach, Stringer ranks fifth in the nation for the most wins by an active coach. And she's the only coach in the 12-year history of the women's NCAA tournament to take two different teams — including Iowa — to the NCAA Final Four.

I admit she's good and before she drug this mess out for one month, I really hoped she'd stay.

But she's messed around too long and with too many people for me to fully enjoy her coaching talents. And I'll bet a lot of Hawkeye fans feel the same.

If I were in charge of the athletic department at the UI, I'd give Stringer an ultimatum: Make an immediate decision or pack your basketballs — thanks for the good years and good luck.

And if I were Rutgers, I'd say, "Thanks, but no thanks. You're a day late and a dollar short."

Community Development Block Grant appreciated

To the Editor:

Small businesses are the lifeblood of a community, and Iowa City is no exception. These businesses help define the intrinsic character of the community in which they are located and provide economic opportunities for residents. In response to the downsizing of corporate America, more people are choosing self-employment as a career option. Further, for economically disadvantaged individuals, entrepreneurship offers the hope of economic independence and personal growth and achievement.

The Institute for Social and Economic Development is an Iowa City-based nonprofit organization dedicated to creating small businesses in Iowa City and throughout the state of Iowa. Iowa City's Community Development Block Grant CDBG helps us to help low- and moderate-income individuals become economically independent through self-employment. Participants learn the elements of successful entrepreneurship and develop business plans to start their own businesses. During fiscal year 1994-95, ISED will provide assistance to approximately 50 residents, many of whom will start businesses in Iowa City.

Projects like these and others funded by the city through CDBG have direct and lasting economic benefit to the residents of Iowa City and need the support of the community. ISED looks forward to continuing its role as a partner with the city to help it achieve its social and economic development goals.

To the Editor:

The Crisis Center, which has been serving area residents for 25 years, received $182,500 from Community Development Block Grant funds. This funding was used during 1986-87 to purchase and renovate the current Crisis Center, 321 E. First St.

CDBG funds enabled the center to relocate and better meet the growing needs of people with low incomes in our community. During 1987, the center provided 11,556 food-bank and emergency-assistance services. By 1994, this total had climbed to 32,481 services — an 181 percent increase in seven years.

Ninety-four percent of households receiving food-bank and emergency-assistance services report incomes at or below the poverty line. Almost 50 percent of recipients are less than 18 years old. Many adult recipients are people with disabilities, the elderly and the unemployed.

CDBG support provided the facility — our physical foundation where our dedicated volunteers provide assistance to anyone in need.

The Crisis Center joins the Committee on Community Needs in acknowledging 21 years of community development made possible through CDBG funds.

To the Editor:

We are writing to explain the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program has helped low-income families access housing through the LIFE Skills Inc. Housing Support Program. LIFE Skills is a private, nonprofit social-service agency that has been working within the local community for six years. We provide a range of programs and services addressing the needs of families in crisis and of individuals who are working on developing independent-living skills.

The Housing Support Program has been funded by the CDBG fund for three years and has recently been granted funding for another year. This program provides assistance with local-ing housing for low-income people who are in danger of being evicted or who are homeless. We help with accessing community resources, budgeting and addressing other concerns that can lead to homelessness. LIFE Skills may also act as a liaison between the tenant and the landlord in addition to aiding the tenant with communication skills, if necessary.

The Housing Support Program strives to work closely with local social-service agencies to reduce the number of homeless in our community. The program provides the necessary hands-on intervention other agencies would like to provide but do not have the funding to offer.

The CDBG funding has allowed LIFE Skills to offer services that aid local agencies in achieving their goals of housing placement. The housing program also directly benefits those individuals it works with to obtain housing.

During the 1995 fiscal year, the LIFE Skills Inc. Housing Support Program has worked with more than 40 individuals or families to meet their housing needs. By shortening the time people are homeless, the Housing Support Program reduces the stress of overcrowding at local shelters. Even more importantly, it reduces the stress of homelessness on those people who are affected.

To the Editor:

I would like to thank Iowa City and the Committee on Community Needs for their grant to Neighborhood Centers of Johnson County. The $150,000 Community Development Block Grant will help make it possible to build a new neighborhood center, and along with it will come more opportunities for the community.

Currently the center is located in a three-bedroom apartment and there is not enough room for all the programs offered. For example, on Monday mornings there are six children in preschool, 12 children in the Summer Recreation Program and six teens in an Intensive Supervision Program; in the afternoon there are 17 children in child care while their parents study for a Graduate Equivalency Degree; and in the evening there is a parenting class and the center provides child care for 12 children. There are other programs that the center provides, and many take place at the same time. The bigger building will also provide more prevention programs for youths, day care and parent support groups.

My personal experiences with the center have been really great. They have provided preschool, after-school groups, parenting classes, computer time and the Even Start family education program. If it wasn't for Even Start and child care, I would have never gone back to school and received my GED. (I am upgrading my education so I can go to college in the fall.) And thanks to the support of Community Development Block Grant for a new center, even more families will have the same opportunities that I have had.

Ventilation is the problem with pigeons

To the Editor:

In recent accounts published in The Daily Iowan on the conflict between my family and Don Seydel over the location and operation of his pigeon coop, my body — as we say in my profession — has become an unwanted "site of discourse": "She shouldn't be living in Iowa," one remarkably uninformed and frighteningly unprofessional attorney suggested to the DI. "Keep your dogs and cats away from her or she'll call the cops," some weirdly paranoid man ventured a few days later. I read these things and wonder, who are they talking about?

Not asthmatic, far from animal-hating, I, too, have been moved by the beauty of Seydel's birds as they fly in formation and their incredible ability to find home. But what strikes me as a useful metaphor for us here is not how well his pigeons behave as a single unit, but how often a few of them break rank. In the human world, there's always another "flight pattern" to take into account, an infinite number of homeplaces to return to, and differences which have to be negotiated and renegotiated. In diverse communities, there's always another side to every "good story."

In a nutshell, ours is this: In the spring of 1994, we began to notice a stench coming from Seydel's coop. Then one cool, wet, late August evening when the odor permeated our backyard, I felt as if I had breathed in a piece of glass. The next morning I went to my family physician and was told to watch out for signs of the psittacosis virus. A week later while standing near my daughter's swing set, it happened again. This time my family physician sent me to the Pulmonary Clinic at UI Hospitals and Clinics for tests. There I was told that the likely cause of the attack was the pigeon coop. It was discovered that I was reacting to fungi contained in pigeon droppings.

Last spring, we hired an industrial hygienist with experience in animal outbuildings. At that time, we offered to pay Seydel a substantial part of the cost of moving the coop away from our property and of making several modifications recommended by the hygienist. Our offer was not even acknowledged.

Our concerns about the coop's wind-driven ventilation system and its numerous unfiltered openings are well-founded in medical literature. Research shows that pigeon waste is roughly 50 percent bacteria and viral agents. Dust particles emitted from pigeon coops have a density of less than three microns. Such a low-density dust mass can easily be inhaled into deep lung regions, fostering allergic reactions as well as infections. The short- and long-term effects of exposure to pigeon waste and dust have been well described in journals on occupational lung disorders.

In the end, watching Seydel's birds fly in formation will be more pleasurable for us when these and other issues have been satisfactorily resolved.

Suggestions offered

To the Editor:

Mary Ann Rasmussen has chosen to live in Iowa — with two dogs — on the edge of two wooded lots within a half block of the lush grasslands and woodlands (and allergens) of Hickory Hill Park. Proximity to these woods ensures a constant movement of wild birds, crows, chipmunks, squirrels, possums, raccoons, the occasional skunk and many deer through her lot each day, along with their usual leavings. The several compost piles in the neighborhood emit more odors than Don Seydel's well-maintained pigeon loft does.

A poll of the near neighbors of the Seydels shows strong support for the pigeons. They are a lovely sight as they circle and soar, and Seydel is generous in giving visitors — adults and children — tours and information about them.

If Rasmussen scores a coup (coo?) by forcing the Seydels to remove the pigeons, she surely will have egg on her face when she discovers her efforts have come to diddysquab and her asthma remains the same. (Forgive the bad puns — I would have preferred a loftier tone for this letter, but they seemed so natural in this situation!)

We pay for the lushness and beauty of Iowa by being a state with high asthma rates. Rasmussen would be better advised to get new filters for her air conditioning, banish her two dogs to a kennel and take the asthma-management workshop currently being offered at Mercy Medical Center in Cedar Rapids.

LOS ANGELES — No dog walked and nothing seemed wrong when a couple on a date strolled past Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium minutes after the time prosecutors believe Brown Simpson was slain there, the pair testified Tuesday.

The two, who were on a blind date that night, were among a series of witnesses whose testimony Tuesday for O.J. Simpson raised questions about the prosecution's timeline for the killings of Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Danny Mandel and Ellen Aaronson told jurors they didn't see any blood or bodies, nor did they see any sign of mayhem when they walked past Brown Simpson's condominium at about 10:25 p.m., roughly 10 minutes after prosecution witnesses heard the telltale cries of a dog.

Under pointed cross-examination by Marcia Clark, both witnesses acknowledged they never made a conscious effort to look up the walkway outside the condominium, where the bodies were found.

How did they remember the time? Aaronson said she checked her watch when a waitress asked them to close out their dinner bill because she was ending her shift. It was just before 10 p.m.

Mandel paid the bill, they chatted for about 15 minutes and left, strolling the few blocks to her apartment on the warm summer night of June 12, 1994, Aaronson recalled. She remembered Mandel batting the leaves on trees with his hand as they walked.

At one point, about five minutes after they passed Brown Simpson's condominium, Mandel checked his watch and it was about 10:30 p.m., he said.

Jurors took extensive notes as both witnesses traced on a large diagram the route they took to and from the restaurant.

Clark suggested to Mandel, a movie studio finance department worker, that he might be mistaken about the route. But Aaronson, who lived in the neighborhood, said she led the way and was certain that they passed Brown Simpson's address.

The testimony was important for the defense because it raises questions about the prosecution's time of death theory, which hinges on the howl of a dog at about 10:15 p.m. There were no eyewitnesses to the killings.

Defense witness Ellen Aaronson uses a pointer Tuesday during O.J. Simpson's double-murder trial in Los Angeles to show the route that she and her date Danny Mandel took the night of the murders as they passed by Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium.

case for the defense because it doesn't account for the time between 10:30 p.m. and 11 p.m., during which O.J. still isn't accounted for," Loyola University law Professor Laurie Levenson said.

Clark tried to point out inconsistencies in the couple's recollections. For example, Mandel said there was only one table seated when they left Mez-zaluna; Aaronson said there were people at several tables. Also, he said he had to quickly go back and get his keys after they left; Aaronson said she didn't recall whether that happened.

Clark also produced police reports on Aaronson's first interviews, in which she originally spoke of passing the condominium after 11 p.m. She said she changed the times after reconstructing the evening by checking with Mandel and the restaurant manager.

Mandel and Aaronson said they had never met Simpson and weren't trying to help either side. Aaronson said they called police because they thought it was "weird" that they were in the area so close to the time of the murders and thought their recollections might be of help.

Another witness, Francesca Harman, said she was attending a dinner party near the condominium that night, got in her car at 10:20 p.m. and drove past Brown Simpson's address but also noticed nothing awry and didn't hear a dog barking.

With the defense keeping up a fast clip of witnesses, Mandel and Aaronson were preceded to the stand by a Simpson golfing partner and Simpson's eldest sister, Shirley Baker, who corroborated other family members' accounts of a grief-stricken Simpson the day after the killings.

The entire family was in a state of shock, Baker said.

"Nicole had been a part of our family for 17 years," she said. "We couldn't believe what was going on."

At one point, Clark indignantly noted that when the family gathered at Simpson's home to comfort him, his two small children were whisked away and didn't appear at the mansion for a week. She implied they were of no concern to Simpson.

But Baker, equally indignant, said under redirect examination that the family wanted Sydney and Justin kept away.

"We did not want them there. They would be too traumatized," she said, describing the chaotic media invasion outside Simpson's house.

Baker also said Simpson friend Ronald Shipp, who testified for the prosecution, couldn't have had a confidential conversation with Simpson in his bedroom because she and her husband stayed there all night to keep an eye on her brother.

Shipp testified that the night after the murders, Simpson confided he had had dreams of killing his ex-wife.

The defense, continually reminding jurors of Simpson's status as a beloved celebrity, also called to the stand Jack McKay, of Alexandria, Va., who played golf with Simpson four days before the killings.

Board approves move of Raiders back to Oakland

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The return of the Raiders from Los Angeles to Oakland moved a step closer to reality today when the Alameda County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously to approve the deal.

The Oakland City Council was expected to take up the matter for a vote tonight and NFL owners were to vote on the deal Friday in Chicago, though Raiders owner Al Davis has said a vote is not necessary.

The board of supervisors voted 5-0 to approve the deal and issue up to $225 million in bonds to pay for stadium improvements at the Oakland Coliseum.

An executive summary prepared by city and county officials claims the return of the Raiders will produce about $1.2 million in annual tax revenue and create about 1,000 full-time and part-time jobs in the Oakland area.

Maryland QB suspended for gambling

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland quarterback Scott Milanovich has lost a chance to win the Heisman Trophy and the multimillion dollar NFL contract that usually follows, all because of a handful of bets totaling $200.

Milanovich has been suspended for eight games by the NCAA for gambling on college sports, according to sources. It is the most severe penalty handed to a Division I athlete for such a violation.

The school has appealed the suspension, one of five given to Maryland athletes by the NCAA on Monday. The school also will appeal the 20-game suspension of basketball guard Matt Raydo.

Four of the athletes have given the university permission to release their names. The fifth, according to sources, is Milanovich, but the school and NCAA won't confirm that.

The appeal process will be completed within two weeks.

NBA

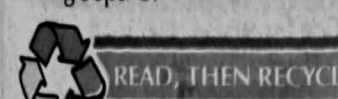

Players look to dissolve their union.

(AP) - NBA players seeking to dissolve their union took legal steps Tuesday to challenge the league's lockout.

Attorneys for the dissident players filed for a preliminary injunction and added nine players to the original seven who first brought the class action.

Joining the original group headed by Michael Jordan and Patrick Ewing were Scottie Pippen, Eric Murdock, Scott Skiles, Jim McIlvaine, Tim Hardaway, Lindsay Hunter, P.J. Brown, Don MacLean and Doug West.

Kessler, speaking by conference call, said the injunction, filed with district judge David Doty in Minneapolis, seeks a hearing Sept. 6.

Solo shots spell AL doom

National League All-Star Jeff Conine of the Florida Marlins is congratulated by All-Stars Mark Grace, left of the Chicago Cubs and Craig Biggio of the Houston Astros after hitting the game-winning home run in the eighth inning.

Conine's blast breaks 2-2 tie

Ben Walker
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Hideo Nomo began the game with a poignant bow, to his teammates and to the troubled national pastime. Jeff Conine, Mike Piazza and Craig Biggio won it with pure power.

What started as a strikeout duel between Nomo and Randy Johnson turned into home-run derby, with Conine's solo shot in the eighth inning Tuesday night giving the National League a 3-2 victory in the All-Star game.

And, maybe a reason for fans to come back to baseball.

"There was a lot of enthusiasm. We had a good game tonight," Conine said. "So hopefully, this will carry over into the second half."

All of the runs scored on homers, highlighted by Frank Thomas' monster drive for the Americans in the fourth, and all of the Nationals' hits were home runs.

Nomo and Johnson, leading their leagues in strikeouts, each fanned three in two scoreless innings, perhaps leaving fans wishing they could have stayed longer. But Nomo was satisfied.

"No, this was just fine, thank you," he said through a translator.

Yet even this relatively entertaining game was touched by reminders of the strike that soured its fans last season.

Thomas' home run landed in a luxury box in left field that was rented for the day by, of all organizations, the Players' Association. The ball eventually came to rest in the hands of union head Donald Fehr's 9-year-old nephew, Alex.

And, right after Thomas — the home-run derby champion in Monday's workouts and a fan favorite — homered, he exited the game. He had to leave because his Chicago White Sox play Wednesday, part of the rejiggered schedule that cut short the All-Star break.

Spartans search for life after Perles

Jon Basso
The Daily Iowan

The Nick Saban era begins this season at Michigan State. The Spartans major problems are lack of dominating players on defense and proven depth on the defensive line and in the secondary.

Following 12 rocky seasons highlighted by bickering between the administration and head coach, MSU fired Perles after a 5-6 record and fifth-place tie (4-4) in the Big Ten Conference last season.

Saban returns as head coach at the school where he held the defensive coordinator job from 1983-87. Saban orchestrated the dominating "Gang Green" defense in 1987 which rolled to a Big Ten championship and a Rose Bowl triumph.

1995, however, figures to be a different story than the glory days of 1987.

Saban will have to try and restructure a defense that surrendered 40 points against Michigan and 59 at Penn State. The Spartans major problems are lack of dominating players on defense and proven depth on the defensive line and in the secondary.

"On defense, our primary concerns are, again, on the line, where all three starters have graduated," Saban said.

Despite the loss of the defensive linemen, Saban decided to switch from a 3-4 to a 4-3 alignment which means he will have to come up with an additional starter on the line.

There are three returning lettermen on the line. Defensive end Orion Hayes and tackle Robert McBride, both seniors, and junior tackle Chris Smith are all expected to start. The fourth starter likely will come from a talented group of linebackers.

The Spartans appear to be fairly strong at linebacker. Three starters return from last year's squad including last year's leading tackler, sophomore Ike Reese. Junior Reggie Garnett is also a quality linebacker.

Seattle's Brian Blades is held by his parents Frederick and Rosa Tuesday after making a statement to the press regarding his cousin's death.

Blades speaks about accident

Karen Testa
Associated Press

PLANTATION, Fla. — Seattle Seahawks receiver Brian Blades emerged from seclusion at his parents' house Tuesday and professed through sobs the fatal shooting of his cousin was unintentional.

"I know Charles' death was an accident. The police know Charles' death was an accident. And most important, God knows Charles' death was an accident," Blades said in a news conference on his parents' lawn.

He has rejected police requests for interviews but read a statement to 35 reporters, photographers and neighbors with camcorders.

Charles Blades, 34, died of a gunshot wound to the underside of his chin in a bedroom at Brian Blades' home July 5. Police said the player was the only other person in the room when his cousin was shot. The death has not been classified as a homicide, but suicide has been ruled out.

Police revealed Monday that more than one shot was fired from Brian Blades' .38-

BASEBALL DREAM TEAM?

'America's Game' gets boost from foreign players

Not too many years ago I found myself in the middle of a heated debate about the Toronto Blue Jays' first World Series appearance.

I'm not a socialist, communist, or anti-American type, but I've always been a little bit partial to the Canadian baseball teams.

This didn't sit too well with my friends, who said Toronto shouldn't be allowed to play because they were a Canadian team.

Too bad guys — they won. Twice! The Montreal Expos might have done the same thing last year before the goats of '94 decided to sabotage the season.

Now the weather is nice, the country just celebrated Independence Day and the Canadian teams are no longer serious contenders.

Isn't July great? Hey wait a minute. I bet we can make July even better next year if we try real hard. Let's create a baseball Dream Team and kick some butt at the '96 Olympics! After all, we have some great players in the United States.

Bad idea. Yes, it would be fun to use our professional players to bring home the gold medal for the United States. But very few managers would be willing to let their star players take a vacation during the middle of a pennant race.

And just how American are today's baseball teams? I decided to see what a hypothetical Dream Team might look like.

Catcher — Ivan Rodriguez, Texas. This guy has the best arm in the majors. Just ask any would-be base stealer.

First Base — Andres Galarraga, Colorado. He didn't make the All-Star team, but he's third in the National League in both home runs and RBI.

Second Base — Carlos Baerga, Cleveland. Carlos is hitting over .300 for the fourth straight season and he seems to be a regular at the All-Star Classic.

Shortstop — Jose Offerman,

Los Angeles. OK. He's got a hole in his glove, but he's hitting over .300 and neither Ozzie Smith or Cal Ripken can make that claim this season.

Third Base — Vinny Castilla, Colorado. I know...Who is this guy? In my book it doesn't really matter. He's hitting .317 and he's fourth in the National League in home runs.

Outfielders — Manny Ramirez, Cleveland. Raul Mondesi, Los Angeles. Moises Alou, Montreal.

Mondesi and Ramirez are both hitting over .300 and hit plenty of home runs. Alou didn't make the All-Star team this year. However, he can still hit a little better than Lenny Dykstra's .262.

The highlight of my Dream Team would be the pitching staff. Hideo Nomo is currently the National League strikeout leader, Denny Martinez hasn't lost a game, Jose Mesa is the American League save leader and nobody can dance like Carlos Perez.

Maybe the United States would meet it's match in an Olympic showdown. This is the age of the import player. A quick glance around the majors is all the proof one needs that Puerto Rico (a U.S. territory), Mexico, and the Dominican Republic are providing a large portion of baseball's work force.

Each year more and more talented players come from south of the border and other areas of the world.

No problem.

I'm in favor of foreign players chasing their dreams in the major leagues. It's not like our home-grown players have a perfect track record.

This is the land of Pete Rose, Steve Howe and Darryl Strawberry. I'm tired of players complaining about their multi-million dollar salaries. Why should anyone have to listen to a guy like Lou Whitaker brag about his car and immense wealth?

There's nothing wrong with import players. Los Angeles is in first place and its imported pitching staff includes Nomo, Pedro Astacio, Ramon Martinez and Omar Daal.

And didn't they have some success with some guy named Fernando, too?

SPARTANS

"Garnett and Reese are recognized as bona fide 'backers with the kind of ability you need to compete in the Big Ten," Saban said. "We'll look for another starter and try to develop some depth at the linebacker position."

MSU has two returning starters in the secondary, but not much depth. Senior cornerback Demetree Martin was a 1994 all-conference choice. Senior free safety Robert Shurelds also started most of the season and is expected to have a big year.

"We have some experience in the secondary and that's good, because it's harder to defend the pass than it is the run," Saban said.

While Saban is a defensive-minded coach, the Spartans strength should be on the offensive side of the ball.

Senior Tony Banks is poised to become one of the top quarterbacks in the country. In his first year at the Big Ten level, Banks completed 145-of-238 passes for 2,040 yards, 11 touchdowns and six interceptions.

"From all indications, Tony Banks could be one of the better returning quarterbacks in the Big Ten," Saban said.

Banks will have plenty of passing options. Juniors Nigea Carter and Derrick Mason and seniors Muhsin Muhammad and Napoleon Outlaw should be a talented receiving group.

However, the Spartans biggest strength should be at tailback. Senior Duane Goulbourne has rushed for 1,903 yards and 16 touchdowns the past two seasons.

"It's difficult to say without seeing the players on the field firsthand, but our top strength should be our tailbacks, led by Goulbourne," Saban said. "We could have four or five top backs competing for playing time."

Fullback Scott Greene will complement Goulbourne in the backfield. He was voted the Spartans top player by his teammates last year when he averaged 5.5 yards per rush and caught a team-high 42 passes.

Greene and Goulbourne will have to work with an inexperienced offensive line. Only senior guard Bob Denton returns from last year.

The Spartans will have to learn very quickly under Saban since they open the season with Nebraska.

"If everyone takes care of what he's supposed to do, the team has a chance to be successful," Saban said. "None of those things take one bit of talent or ability. It's attitude, effort and intelligence."

ALL-STAR GAME

"We've got a 3:15 workout tomorrow that I want to be at," he said. "We need to make something happen in the second half."

Still, the crowd of 50,920, the largest in the two-year history of The Ballpark in Arlington, seemed to enjoy the show. About 110 spectators, however, had to seek treatment at first-aid stations because of the 96-degree heat.

Among those not at the park was Mickey Mantle, who was invited by baseball to attend. Mantle made his first public appearance since recent liver transplant surgery on Tuesday afternoon in nearby Dallas, but said he was too weak to watch in person and would instead tune in on television.

Conine, the only position player who did not get into last year's All-Star game, homered on the second pitch he saw. Batting for Ron Gant, he connected against loser Steve Ontiveros. It was the only time he was on the field during the evening, but it was enough to make him the MVP.

Heathcliff Slocumb escaped a first-and-second jam in the seventh by striking out Ivan Rodriguez and Jim Edmonds, and was the winner. Randy Myers pitched the ninth for a save.

The victory gave the NL its first two-game winning streak since 1984-85. The total of four home runs was the most since 1981.

Conine, Florida's lone representative, helped the National League run its record to 39-26-1 in the game. Carlos Baerga, one of six Cleveland players in the game, doubled and singled twice.

That 1981 event, which started the second half of a strike-split season, marked the last time a rookie started the All-Star game. That time it was Fernando Valenzuela, whose eyes-to-the-sky delivery captivated all of the baseball.

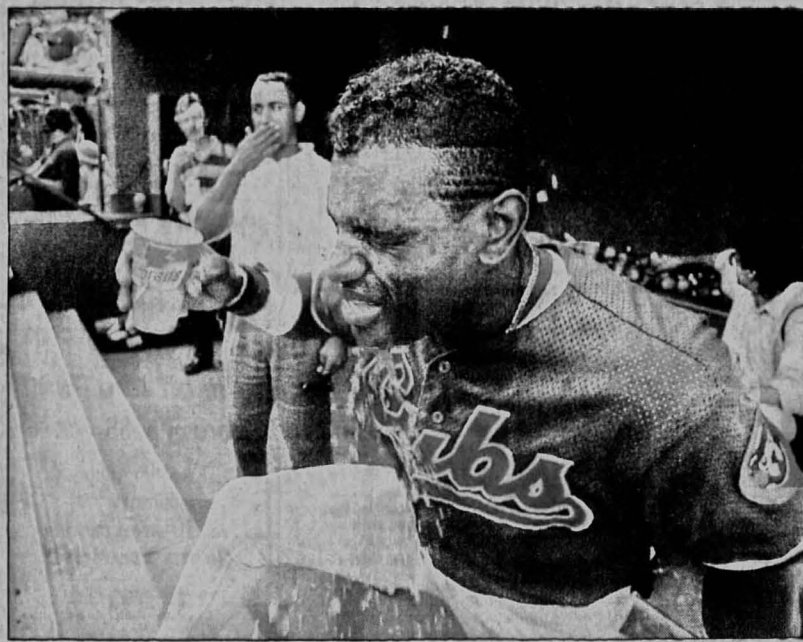

This time, it was Nomo's turn. Baseball, meanwhile, hoped this Los Angeles rookie, the first Japanese participant in an All-Star game, could similarly put the buzz back into the sport.

From the start, Nomo was the showcase player. For the first time since anyone could remember, a starting pitcher was not warming up when he was introduced. Instead, Nomo emerged from the dugout, trotted to the plate, and then went down the third-base line, bowing to each of the NL starters.

Baseball said it specifically asked Nomo to come out and take a bow, so to speak, because he's been the brightest light in the game this year. After receiving a nice ovation, he went to the bullpen and began loosening up with his slo-mo, back-to-the-plate windup.

Nomo's motion, along with a 94 mph fastball and darting forkball, baffled the AL stars the same way he's blown away NL hitters this season. Nomo, leading his league in strikeouts, pitched two scoreless innings and struck out Kenny Lofton, Edgar Martinez and Albert Belle. Baerga singled for the lone hit off Nomo.

Johnson was equally tough, striking out three in two hitless innings. He fanned Barry Bonds, Fred McGriff and Gant with a fastball that reached 98

IRON MIKE A COWARD?

Foreman doesn't foresee Tyson bout

Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. — George Foreman wants a shot at Mike Tyson, but says such a bout will literally be out of reach by next year.

"I intend next summer for my stomach to be so big that the only punch I could land on Mike Tyson is going to be a belly bump," Foreman said. "I lost a lot of weight (to fight) and I intend to get my weight back."

The robust 46-year-old former champion, during a stop Tuesday at a bookstore to promote his autobiography, said repeatedly that 1995 is his last year in the ring.

Foreman said he waited around for a shot at Tyson, who in 1986 became the WBC's youngest heavy-weight champion at age 20. Tyson is now preparing for a comeback after his two-year prison term on rape charges, but Foreman apparently isn't in his plans.

"Mike Tyson is supposed to be the toughest man on the planet," Foreman said. "He said he would get out of jail one day and whip me the next. He got out of jail and started hiding from me."

The world's oldest heavyweight champion said boxing is no longer a challenge and that it's time to get out because "the toughest guys in the planet are hiding" from him.

Foreman said he will fight his last fight by Dec. 31, but doesn't know who his opponent will be.

He said his top three, in order, are Michael Moorer, whom he beat last November to win the IBF and WBA heavyweight titles, Riddick Bowe and Evander Holyfield.

"Michael Moorer gave me a chance, and I told him I would give him a chance if he gave me a chance," Foreman said. "Mike Tyson, if he steps in, he's No. 1."

Foreman said he refused a rematch with Alex Schulz simply because he doesn't have time.

"I gave him a chance for the title. If I had a lot of time, I would fight a guy twice and move on," he said. "But I don't have the time, this is my last year boxing."

"Neither Charles nor I ever intended that Charles would be shot. Neither Charles nor I thought Charles would be shot."

"If I play a little bit harder and if I seem to jump a little bit higher and run a little faster or stretch a little farther, understand that inside Brian Blades' Seahawks uniform is a man motivated by and dedicated to his cousin Charles Blades' memory."

Brian Blades, Seahawks wide receiver on the shooting of his cousin Blades was not concerned about negative repercussions or legal ramifications from the news conference, Rosenhaus said.

"I hope the police will respect

Brian coming forward and making these comments," Rosenhaus said. "Whether there was one shot or two shots, it was an accident."

Two frantic telephone calls to 911, one from Brian and one from a friend, shed little light on what happened.

Sobbing, Brian Blades told the dispatcher, "I went down to stop my brother from, uh, fighting his girl, and the gun went off and shot my cousin."

In the second call, the friend said Brian Blades had been shot by his cousin.

Brian Blades said in his statement he would travel to Seattle "very soon," possibly as early as next week for training camp. When he makes it to the field, Blades says he'll be a changed player.

caliber handgun, giving rise to further speculation it may not have been an accident. The second bullet lodged in a wall.

"It's nearly impossible in an accident situation for a gun to go off twice," said police Sgt. Michael Price. "So it brings on new concerns."

Blades, 29, canceled two scheduled interviews with detectives. His agent, Drew Rosenhaus, said his client was distraught and "personally incapable" of talking to police.

But Blades faced a crowd as he read his statement. His father, Frederick, cried quietly as he rubbed his son's neck while his mother, Rosa, stood nearby.

His comments were wrought with emotion, sometimes difficult to understand through his sobs. Blades gave no indication who fired the shots and answered no questions.

"The gun that shot Charles was a gun that I owned," he admitted.

AIDS activist dies of disease's complications

A local AIDS activist has died of the disease about which he helped educate Iowa City.

Rick Graf, 45, died at his home
Tuesday evening of complications from AIDS.

He was the co-founder of the Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education (ICARE). He was also a member of the Iowa City
Human Rights Commission, the Ryan White Care Consortium and the Johnson County AIDS Coordination.

Graf co-founded the UI Gay Liberation Front, one of the first university-affiliated gay organizations in the United States.

A memorial gathering for Graf is scheduled for July 23 at 7 p.m. in the Upper Pavilion of Hickory Hill Park. Memorials may be given to the donor's choice of an AIDS education and / or research organization.

Iowa City to tally residents for state aid benefits

Iowa City will conduct a special census next year, hoping that the city's population will increase by at least 3,000 people.

Officials expect the count to show the city has grown since a 1990 census that showed 59,733 residents. The new count would be used in figuring population-based state and federal funding until the next official census is taken in 2000.

The city currently receives about $50 per person each year in road-use taxes from the state. If the new census shows Iowa City has 3,000 new residents, the city would receive $150,000 more year for roads.
