Fans heading to Iowa City High with the hopes of watching Ricky Davis play in the Prime Time League are in for a big surprise: the star junior-to-be from Davenport North High School is currently sporting a thick blue cast on the lower half of his left leg.

Davis, who last year committed to play his college basketball for the University of Iowa, fractured a bone in his left foot on July 8th while competing in the Adidas basketball camp in New Jersey, and has since missed five games for his God-fellow Printing/Imprinted Sportswear team.

"I just came down on it wrong," Davis said. Davis said he was told by a doctor that he will need to wear the cast for the next six to eight weeks.

Police search for mall parking ramp purse snatcher

Iowa City police are searching for a man involved in an armed purse snatching incident Wednesday night in the Old Capitol Mall parking ramp.

The suspect, who wielded a sharp object, is described as a white male between the ages of 20 and 25, said Officer William Campbell of the Iowa City Police Department. The suspect has short, dark hair.

The perpetrator reportedly threatened the victim, took her purse and fled the parking ramp on foot about 7:12 p.m. Wednesday.

No information on the female victim is being released; the incident is still under investigation by the ICPD.

"I would anticipate in the next day or so, as the investigation gets rolling, that they will have more," Campbell said.

Judge Lance Ito barred a blood-spatter expert from mentioning results of an experiment he performed on bloody socks found at the foot of O.J. Simpson's bed. He said the experiment was flawed because the conditions were not accurately recreated.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark was fined $250 for criticizing Fredric Rieders, founder of National Medical Services laboratory, who the defense plans to call Monday to talk about the blood preservative EDTA.

Police photographer Willie Ford suggested he didn't see the socks in Simpson's bedroom because they had already been collected by police.

Militia share Waco theories on Internet

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

Just hours after the Waco hearings began Wednesday, hundreds of people were already logged on to the Internet, writing reactions and updating government conspiracy theories.

MIDWESTERN MILITIAS

Last of a three part series

One person wrote 14-year-old Kiri Jewell had been "brainwashed" by professional "deprogrammers," and was committing perjury when she said she had been sexually molested at the Branch Davidian Compound in Waco, Texas.

Another criticized The New York Times' coverage of the hearings, saying it ignored important events, such as an Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent's admission that federal agents had received an invitation from David Koresh to visit the compound and inspect the Davidians' stash of firearms at any time.

Brian McConnel, a member of the Missouri militia, said he learned from the Internet that the Waco investigation was covered up because the compound contained evidence proving George Bush, President Bill Clinton and Koresh had worked together to smuggle drugs into the country.

One of the busiest media exchange is the Internet news-group "alt.conspiracy," on which

"What infuriated (militia members) about Waco is they saw it as people defending themselves from armed abuses of government power."

Gerry Carroll, author of the forthcoming book, "Militia Nation"

anyone is allowed to post. This group contains everything from copies of Associated Press articles to magazines published exclusively on-line and alleged "classified government documents."

McConnel said he first believed the ATF blew up the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, Okla., to destroy documents about Waco, but said the individual who posted the theory has since said the belief was "a practical joke."

These messages posted on the Internet, and similar statements on shortwave radio and fax networks, are evidence the federal government's raid of the Branch Davidian compound in April 1993 has become a rallying point for militias across the nation, said Gerry Carroll, UI programming assistant in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication and author of the forthcoming book, "Militia Nation."

"What infuriated (militia members) about Waco is they saw it as people defending themselves from armed abuses of government power," Carroll said. "If the militia thinks the government is covering up the investigation again, that will cause an uproar in the militias."

Many militia members, Carroll said, would like to try U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno and President Clinton for murder of the 81 people who died in the compound.

"They would be in favor of impeaching Clinton because of Waco," he said. "Some militia members advocate violence in the elimination of rough elements of the government."

Because mainstream media do not treat the conspiracy theories held by militia members seriously, Carroll said, the militias have bypassed the media by creating their own information network.

"They were some of the first people on the Net," he said. "They have fax networks, World Wide

Muslim-Serb clash escalates

Leaders in Zepa refuse to surrender

Clare Nullis
Associated Press

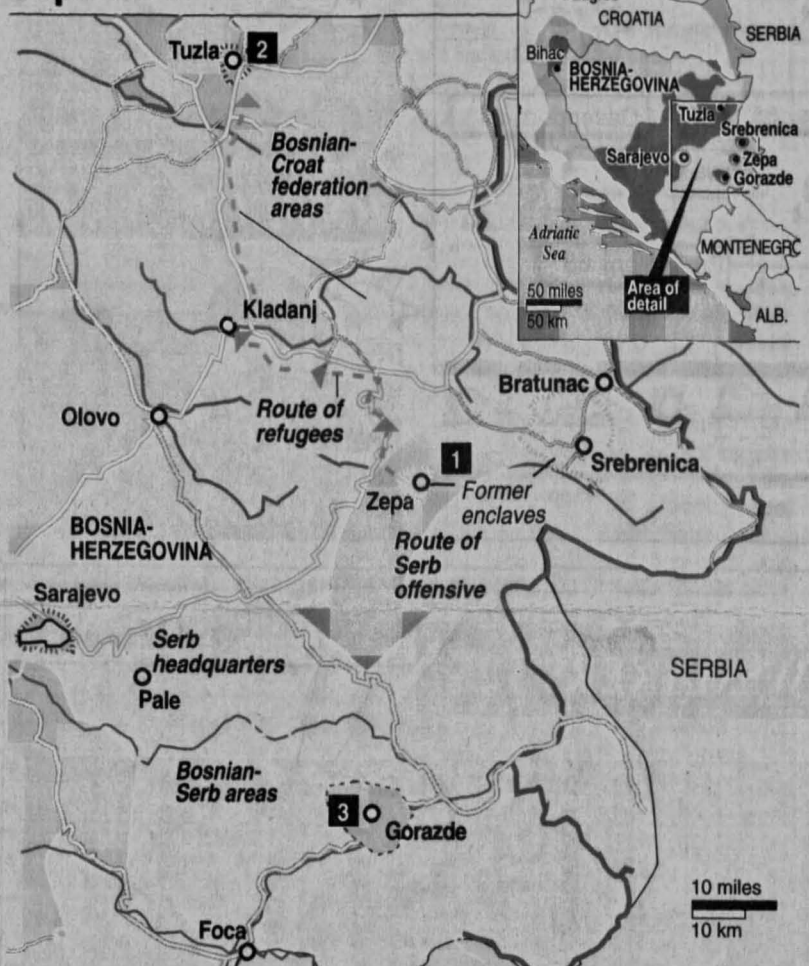

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Surrounded by Bosnian Serbs in the U.N. "safe area" of Zepa, outgunned Muslim leaders refused to surrender Thursday. The fate of thousands of terrified civilians hung in the balance.

Government forces in Zepa responded to a Serb attack by shelling a U.N. peacekeepers' compound, destroying a medical center and damaging barracks. The Bosnians had threatened to shoot at the peacekeepers if the United Nations didn't call airstrikes against the Serbs.

Serb leaders insisted civilian men be held as prisoners of war, as they did last week after capturing the nearby "safe area" of Srebrenica.

Serbs on Thursday also attacked Bihac in the northwest, reportedly taking at least one town in the safe haven. The capture sent hundreds of people fleeing into the forest and drew threats from neighboring Croatia that it might intervene to save the Bosnian city.

Zepa falls to the Serbs

1 Zepa has been surrendered to the Serbs. The city's civilians are leaving under U.N. military escort. The capture of Zepa widens Serb control over a strategic swath of land between Sarajevo and the Serbian border.

2 Zepa's estimated 10,000 to 16,000 civilians are expected to join the tens of thousands of people who had fled from Srebrenica in refugee camps in Tuzla.

3 Only one more Muslim enclave, Gorazde, lies in that region, and Serbs are expected to make it the target of their next major assault. France apparently hasn't won U.S. or British support for its proposal to protect the city or to break the Serb stranglehold on Sarajevo.

U.S. ultimatum to Serbs: Back off or face attack

Robert Burns
Associated Press

LONDON — The United States is proposing an allied ultimatum to Bosnia's Serbs: Back off from the Sarajevo and Gorazde "safe areas" or face a large-scale NATO air assault that would dramatically deepen America's military involvement.

Defense Secretary William Perry said Thursday the major U.S. allies with peacekeeping troops in Bosnia — Britain, France and the Netherlands — had not yet agreed to the U.S. plan, and said a speedy consensus on military action was vital.

"If we cannot in a matter of a few days agree on a plan ... so we have some confidence that Sarajevo and Gorazde can be protected, then I believe the dynamics are such that (the U.N. peacekeeping force) is likely to withdraw," Perry told reporters as he prepared for talks with allied defense chiefs.

The Clinton administration has put top priority on averting a U.N. withdrawal, in part because it fears the humanitarian crisis there would worsen and also because it would require the deployment of 25,000 U.S. troops to Bosnia.

Perry was joined in London by Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. They were holding private meetings Thursday with their counterparts from France, Britain and other allied nations; today they are scheduled to attend a meeting of representatives of more than a dozen nations with peace-keeping troops in Bosnia.

The U.S. proposal, as outlined by Perry and Shalikashvili, represents a major departure from present American policy in several respects. It for the first time would mean pre-emptive attacks on Serb air defenses, it would bypass the requirement for advance U.N. approval of air strikes and it would sustain the attacks even in the event the Serbs took U.N. forces or other foreigners hostage.

"To be effective, it has to be major," Perry said of the proposed air assault. This means it must be capable of protecting the U.N. enclave of Gorazde in conjunction with the Bosnian army while opening the U.N. humanitarian supply routes into Sarajevo and preventing a resumption of Serb shelling of the capital, he said.

Perry said the first NATO targets, in the event such an air campaign is launched, would be Serb air defenses in Bosnia — but not in Serbia proper. The focus then would be on Serb tanks and artillery, and NATO air and ground commanders would be free to work out exact targets and timing without having to get outside approval.

France has favored putting more of its own troops into Gorazde, the next U.N. "safe area" targeted by the Bosnian Serbs, with the help of

FBI investigates local hate crime

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The FBI is joining the search for the vandal who sprayed painted slogans like "Go back to Africa" and "KKK" on Coralville resident DeWayne Byrdson's Mercedes late last Friday night.

Larry Holmquist, a spokesman for the FBI regional office in Omaha, Neb., confirmed the bureau has entered the investigation of the incident, which is being labeled as a hate crime. They are investigating the vandalism under the Discrimination in Housing section of the U.S. Code.

"It says it is unlawful to use force or threat of force to intimidate any person because of their race, color, religion, etc.," Holmquist said. "It includes the sale, rent, purchase and most importantly for us, the occupancy of property."

The vandalism is an infraction on Byrdson's right to occupy his property.

'FRIENDS' POPULARITY BOOSTS NETWORK

NBC's hits rake in Emmy nominations

Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — "ER," NBC's pulse-pounding ride through a big-city hospital, took a leading 20 prime-time Emmy nominations Thursday, including best drama and the nomination for its entire starring cast.

"ER," "Frasier" and the new comedy "Friends" fueled an NBC surge that gave the network 85 nominations, tying it with CBS for the network lead in the 47th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards.

ABC, last season's top-rated network, received an embarrassing 39 nominations, one of the poorest showings ever for a major network. ABC also saw its most popular series, "Home Improvement," shut out of the top categories.

The network did have the second-most nominated program in "NYPD Blue," which received 12 bids, including best drama. Last year, the police drama had a record 26 nominations.

Cable channel Home Box Office, amassing a growing number of nominations each year for its critically acclaimed series, specials and movies, surpassed ABC with 48.

PBS, Fox and Turner Network Television each had 17 nominations.

The Emmy Awards will be broadcast Sept. 10 from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium by Fox Broadcasting Co. A ceremony will be held the day before to present awards in technical categories.

The cast of NBC television's "Friends" (clockwise from left) Jennifer Aniston, Matthew Perry, David Schwimmer, Lisa Kudrow, Matt LeBlanc and Courteney Cox is pictured above. "Friends," NBC's hit new comedy series, received eight Emmy nominations Thursday, including outstanding comedy series, outstanding supporting actor (Schwimmer) and outstanding supporting actress (Kudrow).

"ER" stars Anthony Edwards, George Clooney, Sherry Stringfield, Eriq La Salle, Noah Wyle and Julianna Margulies; all were nominated in either lead or supporting acting categories.

"Next Tuesday when we go back to work, there will just be this across-the-board elation," said La Salle.

Grand scam: Thief swipes baseball cards

Box containing valuables filched from owner's bedroom

When a burglar broke into a Champaign, Ill., trailer earlier this month, the thief wasn't looking for electronics or jewelry. Instead, the crook made off with five baseball cards valued at a total of $2,140.

The owner of the trailer said it was secure and all windows were intact when he left on July 5. However, when he returned on July 8, a bedroom window had been broken and the metal box which contained the baseball cards and $300 in cash was missing.

The cards were a Pete Rose, valued at $875; a Ted Williams, valued at $700; a Mike Schmidt, valued at $450; a Frank Thomas, valued at $80; and a Ryne Sandberg, valued at $35.

Ditched: U of Kansas student continues solo across country

A student at the University of Kansas was left alone and tentless four days into a biking trip across the United States when the friend he was traveling with gave up on the excursion.

Brent Taylor and his roommate got a ride to Oregon, where they set out on their mountain biking trip. They traveled 1,600 miles in five days while sightseeing and fly-fishing along the way.

Even after his roommate bailed out, Taylor didn't pack it up. He has continued solo, traveling between 50 and 75 miles and spending an average of $4 per day.

Taylor has not paid for a hotel room yet, and two or three times a week is invited to strangers' homes for dinner and free lodging.

Last week, Taylor arrived in Kansas City, Kan., to rest for a few days before continuing on to Myrtle Beach, S.C., from where he will take a bus back to Kansas.

Woman killed when balloon crashes near UCD campus

A ballooning accident just outside of the University of California-Davis campus resulted in the death of a 27-year-old woman.

According to witnesses at the scene, the balloon was landing as scheduled when something went wrong, and it slammed into the ground traveling about 15 knots per hour.

Ten passengers were on the balloon ride, and witnesses said the impact caused the gondola to tilt and eject three of the travelers.

UG police question student's account of butt-shooting

University of Georgia police are questioning a student's explanation of how he was shot in the buttocks.

UG junior Tormal Jemar Johnson told police he was shot in the buttocks by two robbers in UG student Runako Brown's residence hall room.

The police searched the room and found marijuana and a large amount of cash.

Johnson was taken to a local hospital, where he underwent surgery to remove the small-caliber bullet. Hospital employees reported the wound to police.

University Police Chief Chuck Horton said Johnson and Brown were not cooperating in the case.

"Right now I have some serious questions as to the reliability of their story," Horton said. "I would rather the gentlemen just tell us what happened."

Charges have not been brought against Brown for the drugs found in his room, and Johnson and Brown did not comment on the case.

Mary Matalin and James Carville have a new daughter, but her political affiliation hasn't been announced.

Matalin, Carville announce new daughter's White House future

WASHINGTON (AP) — What do you get when you cross a wise-cracking GOP consultant with a ragin' Cajun Democratic strategist? Why, the first woman president of the United States.

So claims the birth announcement for Matalin Mary Carville, born Thursday to Mary Matalin — she's the Republican — and James Carville — he's the Democrat.

Matalin, the political director of President Bush's failed re-election effort, is co-host of "Equal Time" on CNBC-TV. She and Carville, who headed President Clinton's campaign, married in 1993.

Their daughter, already nicknamed Matty, entered the 2032 presidential race at 10:06 a.m. She weighed in at 8 pounds, 10 ounces and was 21 inches long. Her parents are listed on the announcement as campaign co-chairmen.

And the newborn's political affiliation? "Equal Time" producer Susan Morrison said, "No comment."

At the White House, presidential press secretary Mike McCurry began his daily briefing by announcing the birth. The baby, he said, is of "a size certain to confirm that it is a Democratic child."

Author Grisham excused from jury duty

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — The author of "The Client" will not be the Juror.

John Grisham showed up for jury duty Monday and Tuesday, but he wasn't called and was excused from further service.

The writer maintains a home in Oxford but has moved with his family to Virginia.

Deputy circuit clerk Baretta Mosely said Grisham's appearance caused a minor stir at the Lafayette County courthouse, but people didn't bother him.

Mosely said she resisted the temptation to ask him for his autograph.

"I didn't think he wanted to be disturbed," she said.

La Toya Jackson files bankruptcy to avoid collectors

NEW YORK (AP) — La Toya Jackson has filed for protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy laws, claiming she had less than $50,000 to her name and bills of between $500,000 and $1 million.

Her husband-agent, Jack Gordon, said the cash crunch was caused by the owners of the Moulin Rouge club in Paris, who are trying to collect $650,000 from the pop singer for cutting short a six-month engagement two years ago.

Gordon said the club owners had filed liens on everything in Jackson's name, including royalties on her book "The La Toya Jackson Story" and her nude video for Playboy, as well as future performances.

The Chapter 11 petition was filed Wednesday at the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Manhattan, the court clerk's office said Thursday.

Twenty of the nation's brightest kids learned 3-D animation at Weeg Computing Center this week — minus the goofy glasses.

The National Scholars were invited to the UI for the National Recognition Program for High School Students and tried their hands at the 3-D animation software used by "Jurassic Park" creators.

They didn't give life to any tyrannosaurus rexes or triceratops, but soaring shuttles, a melting snowman and baby snakes hatched onto their screens.

Far from average, the participants, all juniors, were invited because they scored in the top 1 percent in the nation on the pre-SAT test.

Kelly Kamp, of St. Paul, Minn., said the special opportunity drew her to the UI, because her school cannot afford state-of-the-art equipment.

Kamp and her partner originally designed a doughnut dunking into a neon cup of coffee.

"At first we liked the doughnut shape, and we gave it a sprinkled look," Kamp said. "But the fingers were too difficult, so we decided to trash it."

In a space usually reserved for medical research and movie-making, these superior students are learning skills they can apply to other computer programs, McNabb said.

"The idea is to learn from the best people in the best environment and take the principles that you learn and apply them in the environment you have back home," she said. "If you want to be the world's best chef, you want to learn from the world's best teacher — so you go to France and study with the world's best chef. Then when you go home, you can take what you've learned."

Students' enthusiasm has backed up hopes of the instructors. Some students return to Weeg in their free time to work on their projects, and all are enthusiastic about what they've created, McNabb said.

Iowa high school student Jane Cherry and her partner, Carrie Johnson, of Oklahoma, first attempted to animate a loaf of bread. It ended up a little misshapen.

"If we brought it to a bake sale, I don't think it would sell — it's shiny," Johnson said.

Despite the level loaf, the pair tried again, this time building textured columns and spheres.

"I'd like to have this at school. It would be really weird if we did — I'd end up having too much fun," Cherry said.

The students had three assignments to complete in four days' time. First, they had to create a 3-D object to animate and also create a multimedia biography.

"In the beginning, they seemed kind of frustrating — it's expected when working with software that is so complicated — but now they feel real good," Karimi said.

The purpose of the biography was to break up the monotony of figuring out the animation program. Next, using a video camera, the students superimposed photographs of themselves making faces and wrote intimate messages about their personalities over the photos.

Missouri teenager Andrew Olson put his ears, lips and hair over a picture of his partner, his message reading simple enough: "I like computers and things that go vroom."

Finally, each participant was asked to keep a textual journal of how they felt about the week's work of learning.

Olson said he hadn't really kept up with his journal, but the other assignments were definitely worth his time.

"I wish I could stay longer but they'd kick me out," he said.

BUSINESS RECEIVES 'AT LEAST 200 CALLS A DAY'

Search service scours world for hard-to-find videos

Moira Crowley
The Daily Iowan

A new organization of video gunshoes promises to track down the elusive tape needed to finish off a collector's home video library.

A Million and One World-Wide Videos, based in Orchard Hill, Ga., will buy, sell, trade, rent, broker and auction almost every video in the world. Give them the title, star or director and video detectives will search for the movie for free.

Barbara Lambert, founder and chief detective of World-Wide Videos, has been locating lost copies of highly sought-after tapes for four years.

"We usually get at least 200 calls a day," she said, "even calls and faxes from abroad."

Lambert said since the invention of the movie camera, 100 years ago this year, millions of films have been made. Only 5 percent of those can be bought from dealers; World-Wide Videos specializes in the other 95 percent, she said.

"When Hollywood produces a movie, they'll test it in the high-budget theaters," she said. "If it flops there, they won't make many copies of it on video tape, making the demand for it much higher later on."

World-Wide Videos will go to any extreme to find a tape — searching the world's collector's market. Lambert said people are willing to pay anywhere from $10-$500 for a video.

"When people first call the order in, we ask them how much they are willing to pay," she said. "If we have to find a private individual who owns a copy of the tape, it will usually cost more."

An example of a $500 tape would be if a doctor was unable to attend a special medical seminar; World-Wide Video would travel to the city and tape it for him, Lambert said.

Foreign films, documentaries, classics and how-to's are some of the 435 topics of special-interest videos the business is able to find. Lambert said the only tapes they refuse to locate are the X-rated, kinky sex videos.

"We don't deal in those kind of films," she said. "I figure people can find those someplace else."

Many Iowa City residents desperately seeking long lost videotapes said they would send World-Wide Video on a rescue mission.

UI graduate student Melissa Lockwood said she has tried to track down the Brazilian film "The Third Bank of the River," but has been thwarted.

"I've inquired at the local video stores, but most of them haven't ever heard of it," she said. "They never offered to find it for me, but I know it exists."

Iowa City resident Vincent Hiser said he likes watching videos, usually historical documentaries, but said he doesn't really have the ultimate tape, for which he would scour the country.

"The video search is a good thing, though," he said. "People should have the opportunity to watch whatever they want. I usually watch The Discovery Channel."

Years of fruitless search have made Iowa City resident Tobin Eckholt think his favorite video is on moratorium.

"It's a Polish film called 'Interrogation,'" he said. "I've been searching for it since 1987. It's not findable. Well, maybe it is now."

Local victim programs awarded service grants

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Three Iowa City crime victim service agencies have been awarded $177,621 in state and federal grants, and a large portion of the money is coming from convicted criminals themselves.

United Action for Youth: Child Victim Assistance Program, 410 Iowa Ave.; Rape Victim Advocacy Program, 17 W. Prentiss St.; and the Domestic Violence Intervention Program received the grants, which are a mixture of state and federal funding. Programs throughout Iowa received a total of $2,584,112 in funding; $931,000 of it is received from fines collected from federal criminals.

Having the criminals help some of their victims through the grant is appropriate irony, said Ginny Naso, an associate director of United Action for Youth.

"I think that is really fitting," she said.

The agency will use its $34,801 for counseling services for child abuse victims. Naso said they served 274 children in the past year. Of that number, 101 were victims of physical abuse and 71 were victims of sexual abuse.

Naso said the project lost about $3,000 in funding compared to last year, but they were prepared for the decrease. However, if the money stops flowing from state and federal grants, the services might be forced to stop helping abuse victims.

"Without this funding, the programs would definitely be in jeopardy," she said.

The program offers services ranging from counseling for the child and his or her nonabusive parents to preparation for court testimony with the victim and the Johnson County Attorney's Office.

The Domestic Violence Intervention Program received $77,350 through the grants. The organization aims at preventing and intervening in cases of domestic violence; its most important element is a 24-hour shelter where battered women can go with their families for safety.

The shelter is in a secret location and visitors must sign a disclaimer saying they will not reveal the location so abusers will not find their victims.

Cris Kinkead, program director, said the money is essential for the running of its various programs.

"That amount is all for salaries. If we lost it, we definitely wouldn't be running the shelter," she said. "It funds three and a half to four specific positions."

The money funds a counselor, a rural outreach coordinator, a daytime position and an overnight position at the shelter. Kinkead said the nonshelter positions would be in jeopardy if the funds were not available.

"If any money was cut, we'd have to lay off because our basic service is the 24-hour shelter," she said. "And we have to keep (the shelter) going."

The grants are administered through the Crime Victim Assistance Division of the Attorney General's Office. The largest portion of the money goes to domestic abuse and rape crisis programs. Only Des Moines exceeded Iowa City in the total amount of funding awarded in a community.

Bob Brammer, spokesman for the Iowa Attorney General's Office, said the funding for the entire state is up slightly from last year's, but has been at a plateau for several years.

"It's very similar; it's a little higher than last year, but we wish we could say it's been rising," he said. "It's been pretty flat for the past couple of years. There may be attempts this year at making it higher; we watch the funding and we know how badly it's needed."

Organizations go through an application process for the grants; groups funded in the past are reviewed for repeat funding. Brammer said the vast majority of programs show sufficient progress to be refunded.

A group seeking first-time funds would have to meet certain criteria set by the Attorney General's Office. They include recognizing an unmet need, the ability to fill the need and the demonstration of a realistic proposal for funding, Brammer said.

Five killed when car jumps curb at bus stop

WOODLAWN, Md. (AP) — A car plowed into a crowd of people waiting at a bus stop Thursday morning, killing a woman and four small children, all relatives.

The children apparently tried to run as the car jumped the curb shortly after 7 a.m. at a bus stop adjacent to the sprawling national headquarters of the Social Security Administration.

Bodies and tiny children's shoes were scattered in a 150-foot radius.

"One minute I saw them, and in the blink of an eye they were all dead," said John LaVeck, a witness.

A 24-year-old woman and two of her children were killed, said Baltimore County police spokesman Jay Miller. The woman's sister ran to safety, clutching one of her children but had two other children among the dead, Miller said.

The four cousins, three girls and a boy, were ages 3 to 8.

An 8-year-old boy whose relation to the family was unknown was hospitalized in critical condition, said Debbie Bangedorf, a spokeswoman at Johns Hopkins Hospital's Children's Center.

Another woman unrelated to the family, 35-year-old Vicky Stuart, was in stable condition at Sinai Hospital. Spokesman Paul Uman-sky said she would probably be released later today.

Names of the dead were not immediately released.

No charges were filed by early this afternoon against the driver, identified by police as Raymond Haney, 32.

Witness claims Smith showed intense remorse after confession

UNION, S.C. (AP) — A state investigator, called as the first witness for the defense, testified Thursday that Susan Smith was racked with guilt and wanted to kill herself when she confessed to drowning her two young sons.

Pete Logan, of the State Law Enforcement Division and formerly an FBI agent, was asked by defense lawyer Judy Clarke if Smith showed remorse during her Nov. 3 confession.

"Probably the greatest I've seen in 35 years," Logan testified.

Smith's defense began its case Thursday after Dr. Sandra Conradi, who performed autopsies on the two drowned boys, testified as the final prosecution witness that the bodies bore no marks of violence.

Prosecutor Tommy Pope announced the state's case was finished less than an hour into the morning session. Smith, 23, could face the death penalty if convicted of the murders she confessed to after claiming for nine days a black carjacker abducted the boys.

Logan had testified as a prosecution witness during a pretrial hearing outside of the jury's presence, but Pope did not call on him to testify before the jury.

Defense lawyers have portrayed the deaths as a failed suicide by a woman under great mental pressure.

Senate to vote on flag desecration amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 12-6 Thursday for a constitutional amendment to curtail desecration of the flag. The proposal will go to the Senate floor.

Democratic Sens. Dianne Feinstein of California and Howell Heflin of Alabama joined 10 Republicans in supporting the proposal. Six Democrats opposed the amendment.

The amendment already passed the House this year by a 312-120 vote, more than the two-thirds majority necessary. If each chamber approves the amendment by two-thirds, three-quarters of the states would have to ratify the language within seven years.

The measure would permit Congress and the states to enact laws to prohibit flag desecration. The bill is a reaction to recent Supreme Court rulings that threw out such laws as a violation of constitutional protections of free speech.

Leaders end UC gender, race policy

Michelle Locke

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Leaders of the University of California voted Thursday to drop affirmative action policies on admissions and hiring following a tumultuous meeting in which demonstrators led by the Rev. Jesse Jackson forced the panel from its meeting room.

The University of California Board of Regents voted 14-10 to drop race-based admissions at the nine-campus system and 15-10 to halt affirmative action in hiring.

The votes were major victories for forces working to roll back affirmative action programs around the nation, including Republican Gov. Pete Wilson, who has made repealing affirmative action programs the key plank of his 1996 presidential campaign.

"It means the beginning of the end of racial preferences," Wilson said after the votes. "We believe that students at the University of California should achieve distinction without the use of the kind of preferences that have been in place."

The votes came a day after President Clinton pledged his support for affirmative action programs.

After the first vote on hiring, a woman stood in the back of the room and yelled in protest.

The regents suggested clearing the room, prompting Jackson, who had pledged to commit civil disobedience if necessary, to stand and fold his arms across his chest. About 100 demonstrators surged forward.

Jackson, who faced off with Wilson in two days of protest and debate on the issue, stood on a chair to address the crowd.

"We must fight back," Jackson

MISS VIRGINIA OUSTED

Pageant authorities yank title from winner

David Reed
Associated Press

ROANOKE, Va. — Organizers of the Miss Virginia pageant took away the winner's title Thursday, two weeks after she was accused of embellishing her credentials.

Andrea Ballengee refused to resign, pageant spokesman Bud Oakey said.

"We're taking her crown," he said, refusing to comment further on what prompted pageant officials to end her reign.

Ballengee's most recent telephone number was disconnected and she could not be located for comment.

"She was very upset," her mother, Pat Ballengee, said from her home in Jupiter, Fla. "It was a surprise this morning."

Ballengee said her daughter did not tell her what had prompted the pageant's action. "The thing they told her time and time again was that they would support her," she said.

Ballengee won the Miss Virginia Pageant on July 1. Within a week, officials from Virginia Tech and Tabb High School in Yorktown claimed she had listed on her pageant résumé high honors she never received.

For example, she wrote on a pageant form she was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, a national academic honorary society, but the chairman of the Virginia Tech Phi Beta Kappa membership board said her grade-point average "wasn't anywhere close" to a minimum necessary to qualify.

At a news conference on July 7, Ballengee defended what she put on her pageant résumé. "I believe 100 percent what I wrote down."

Ballengee, who represented Hampton and Newport News, was to have competed in the Miss America pageant on Sept. 16 in Atlantic City, N.J.

Amber Medlin, Miss Virginia Beach, was the first runner-up. Her credentials will be reviewed in deciding who represents Virginia, said Margaret Baker, the state pageant executive director.

Ballengee had said she planned to attend law school and run for Congress, and felt being Miss Virginia would help her toward that goal.

"Miss Virginia is a politician in her own right," she said.

An effigy of California Gov. Pete Wilson sits outside the University of California-San Francisco campus, where the UC Board of Regents voted Thursday to drop the university's policies on affirmative action. Several hundred students turned out to demonstrate in support of affirmative action.

said. "You must contain this virus and stop it here."

The demonstrators linked arms and sang "We Shall Overcome," the civil rights protest anthem.

Most regents left, and the meeting continued in another room, where the second vote was held. After that vote, Jackson left the room and vowed to get arrested.

"California casts either a long shadow or a long sunbeam," Jackson said after the vote. "This is a long shadow. July 20 will live a long time in California history."

The demonstrators, which included students, ministers and others, remained. They were initially joined by Democratic Lt. Gov. Gray Davis, a regent and political enemy to Wilson.

There was no immediate attempt to disperse the demonstrators.

Police in riot gear ringed the building on the UC Laurel Heights campus as about 200 demonstrators outside yelled "Shame! Shame! Shame!" Officers barricaded off streets around the campus.

Earlier, six people were arrested on civil disobedience charges and a bomb threat forced an evacuation of the meeting room for 40 minutes as the regents neared the first vote.

At the start of the meeting, Wilson tried to set the terms for debate from his vantage point as panel president.

"Are we going to treat all Californians equally and fairly? Or are we going to continue to divide Californians by race?" he asked.

Jackson, himself a potential presidential candidate, urged regents not to drop race-based admissions.

"The consequence of going backwards is the loss of hope, the furthering of despair, the hardening of cynicism we can ill afford," Jackson said in an emotional 45-minute address.

After Jackson spoke, he made a point of pushing to Wilson's seat and shaking his hand. Wilson rose and the two spoke.

Seventy people addressed the regents, who began discussing the issue late in the afternoon.

During the debate, about 500 demonstrators marched outside, and some were let inside to watch the proceeding on television monitors. One hanged Wilson in effigy. Another wore a shirt saying "PETE — Public Enemy To Education."

GOP: Waco drug charges concocted to lure military

David Morris
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Trying to regain control of the Waco hearings, Republicans asserted Thursday that federal agents invented drug allegations to lure the military and its tanks for the deadly raid. President Clinton defended the agents, saying there were mistakes but no grounds for "war against police."

The Republicans started the second day of hearings into the 1993 events at the Branch Davidian compound by focusing on the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Without the bureau's drug allegations, not supported by later evidence, they said the military would not have been authorized to help train agents or provide armored vehicles and helicopters.

Democrats, meanwhile, kept to their opening-day tack, aggressively painting Davidian leader

David Koresh as the real villain at Waco and the National Rifle Association as a dark force behind anti-government sentiment at the hearings.

Separately, Clinton told a law-enforcement group, "We must not make war against police, and we must not confuse making mistakes ... with the awful things that happened in that compound at Waco."

Both the White House and Attorney General Janet Reno criticized the NRA's involvement in lining up witnesses and examining evidence in the weeks before the hearings.

"It is very important ... that it's Congress representing the people of the United States and not one special interest group that is conducting the investigation," Reno said.

Republicans in charge of the eight-day hearings have refused to subpoena NRA representatives.

Some Republicans on the panel are frustrated Democrats have been able to control much of the hearing direction so far, with attacks on the NRA during both days of testimony and with graphic testimony Wednesday from a 14-year-old girl who said Koresh had sex with her when she was 10.

"These hearings are not just about the NRA and 14-year-old girls," complained Rep. Bill Zeff, a New Hampshire Republican who chairs one of the two subcommittees conducting the hearings.

The Republicans were able to move the focus Thursday — at least for part of the day — onto the federal agents' investigation of the Davidians and the allegation a methamphetamine lab was operating at the compound.

The drug angle gave federal agents an avenue to receive training and equipment from the military. The government now admits there is no evidence the lab existed at the time the military help was sought.

Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, R-Fla., flatly accused ATF officials of "lying about the drug."

Another Republican, Steve Buyer of Indiana, said examining the military's role in a law-enforcement matter is important because, "since before the founding of our nation, Americans have had deeply rooted concerns about the separation of the military from civilian affairs."

"More than any other, the image of Bradley fighting vehicles and M1 tanks set against the burning Mount Carmel compound calls into question the role of the military at Waco," he said.

"It is very important ... that it's Congress representing the people of the United States and not one special interest group that is conducting the investigation."

"You know, you don't have to pull somebody aside and say, 'Sorry you didn't get nominated,' or nobody has to pull me aside and go, 'We weren't nominated.' ... This is pretty cool."

Outstanding drama nominees besides "ER" and "NYPD Blue" were CBS' "Chicago Hope," NBC's "Law & Order" and Fox's "The X-Files."

"Chicago Hope," which competed with and was vanquished by higher-rated "ER" on Thursday nights, also trailed in the Emmy contest with eight.

The nod for Fox's cult-hit "The X-Files" was an unusual acknowledgment of a drama in the thriller-science fiction genre. It was the Golden Globe best drama winner in January.

"The best drama nomination was a huge surprise to me and I wasn't prepared. I was floored actually, said series creator and executive producer Chris Carter.

Among comedies, "Frasier" received the most bids with 10, followed by freshman sitcom hit "Friends" with eight. Also nominated: HBO's "The Larry Sanders Show" and NBC's "Mad About You."

Shalikashvili said the American plan calls for going far beyond the limited air strikes that have proven ineffective against Serb aggression in the past.

"If you are going to commit air power and you are going to take the risk of hostage taking, you do so in a way that makes a significant difference," Shalikashvili said.

The general said it was necessary all the nations with troops in Bosnia agree, before any NATO air campaign was started, they would not halt their bombing campaign even if the Serbs responded by taking peacekeepers hostage. The Serbs have taken hostages in the past in reaction to NATO air strikes.

"If we are not up front with each other from the beginning, that even in the face of hostage taking that operation must continue, then we will find ourselves paralyzed, as we have in the past," Shalikashvili said.

Although there are no U.S. troops among the peacekeepers in Bosnia, Perry said the United States was not immune to the threat of Serb hostage taking. There are a small number of American civilians in Bosnian working for relief agencies.

Perry stressed the U.S. plan did not amount to a declaration of war.

"I do not see it as waging war for the (Bosnian) government" against the rebel Serbs, he said. "They only bring on this air campaign themselves" by violating U.N. resolutions and attacking Gorazde or other U.N. protected areas, he said.

Web pages and shortwave radio shows.

The militias use the Internet because it is a low-cost, effective way to spread a message, Carroll said.

"Millions of people can see and download (the militia's) messages," he said. "They will publish it on the Internet rather than try to publish something in the newspaper."

Bob Spear, of Leavenworth, Kan., travels the national gun circuit selling survival books. He said he has a weekly shortwave radio show reaching nationwide audiences.

Spear said he hopes to warn others of a coming attempt by federal government Satanists to seize tyrannical power and teach them how to survive it.

"I figure (with my radio show) I help others by telling them what the Lord would have us do," he said.

Because of public access to the Internet, it is very difficult to verify the authenticity of some radical statements, or the credibility of those writing them.

E-mail messages often do not fully identify the sender, and although anonymous posting is allowed, it is often criticized.

One woman wrote: "Yep, that was groovy. An NRA guy posting anonymously from Finland. Man, talk about having the courage of your convictions."

To combat what the National Rifle Association anticipates to be "scant media coverage," the NRA Institute for Legislative Action has set up a fax network with daily Waco hearings updates.

But not just Waco and the Oklahoma City bombing are subject to talk. There is also a group dedicated to John F. Kennedy's assassination, and people dispute everything from the purpose of markings on road signs to whether the gloves O.J. Simpson wore were authentic.

BOSNIA

In London, U.S. officials proposed ratcheting up pressure on the Serbs by threatening major NATO air assaults if they continued their rampage through "safe areas" with an assault on Gorazde, the last government-held enclave in eastern Bosnia after Zepa. France and Britain were close to agreeing to the plan, the White House said.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic spoke with President Clinton by telephone, bemoaning a "lack of U.S. leadership," according to the state-run BH press agency.

Clinton responded that Washington "will do what we said we will do," apparently referring to proposals for air strikes against Serb positions, BH reported.

Bosnia's government on Thursday disputed Serb claims that Zepa had fallen. While there were reports that Serb forces had entered some of the 20 hamlets in the Zepa enclave, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard in New York insisted they had not captured Zepa proper. He cited reports from peacekeepers in Zepa.

The Bosnian Serb military commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic, demanded that government authorities surrender the entire mountainous enclave by 7 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT). The government refused because the Serbs planned to detain all men between 18 and 55 and exchange them for Serb prisoners, said Maj. Myriam Sochacki, a U.N. spokeswoman in Sarajevo.

As the deadline expired, Bosnian Serb forces unleashed a brief barrage of heavy weapons fire into Zepa. There was no word on casualties or damage.

Outgunned government forces responded by briefly firing on the peacekeepers' compound in Zepa, almost completely destroying a medical center and pharmacy and badly damaging barracks, Sochacki said, adding, "There is no medicine left." No peacekeepers were hurt, and the United Nations protested the attack, she said.

Despite the government's tough stand, it was clear Zepa's civilians were preparing to give up. Serb television showed footage of Muslim civilians waving a white flag and sealing their surrender with cigarettes and wine.

The Serbs drove 60 buses to Zepa on Thursday and planned to evict women, children and the elderly to government-held towns in central Bosnia. There are an estimated 10,000-16,000 people in Zepa, although the Serbs claim there are only 7,000.

A small U.N. liaison team arrived in Zepa for talks with Mladic and local government officials on the evictions and to evacuate 35 wounded people to Sarajevo. However, Bosnian government representatives did not show up at a U.N.

checkpoint as planned to take part in the discussions, Sochacki said.

The U.N. Security Council condemned "in the strongest possible terms" the Bosnian Serb offensive against Zepa, and warned all who ordered or committed human rights abuses would be held responsible.

The United Nations earlier admitted it was powerless to guarantee safe passage for women and children leaving Zepa, or to prevent mistreatment of prisoners held by the Serbs.

After taking Srebrenica on July 11, the Serbs evicted some 23,000 Muslim women and children, many of whom arrived with tales of rape, executions and other atrocities. About 11,000 civilians, mostly men, are unaccounted for.

In Sarajevo, meanwhile, Serb shells hit the Bosnian presidency building as European Union mediator Carl Bildt was holding talks with Izetbegovic. One guard was slightly injured.

The United States has proposed a large-scale air assault if the Serbs attack Gorazde.

"If we cannot agree on such a plan, then I believe the U.N. forces will be pulled out of Bosnia," U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry said Thursday.

EMMY NOMINATIONS

"You know, you don't have to pull somebody aside and say, 'Sorry you didn't get nominated,' or nobody has to pull me aside and go, 'We weren't nominated.' ... This is pretty cool."

Outstanding drama nominees besides "ER" and "NYPD Blue" were CBS' "Chicago Hope," NBC's "Law & Order" and Fox's "The X-Files."

"Chicago Hope," which competed with and was vanquished by higher-rated "ER" on Thursday nights, also trailed in the Emmy contest with eight.

The nod for Fox's cult-hit "The X-Files" was an unusual acknowledgment of a drama in the thriller-science fiction genre. It was the Golden Globe best drama winner in January.

"The best drama nomination was a huge surprise to me and I wasn't prepared. I was floored actually," said series creator and executive producer Chris Carter.

Among comedies, "Frasier" received the most bids with 10, followed by freshman sitcom hit "Friends" with eight. Also nominated: HBO's "The Larry Sanders Show" and NBC's "Mad About You"

and "Seinfeld."

Nominations for lead actor in a comedy went to Kelsey Grammer for "Frasier," Garry Shandling for "The Larry Sanders Show," Paul Reiser for "Mad About You," John Goodman for ABC's "Roseanne" and Jerry Seinfeld for "Seinfeld."

Nominees for lead actress in a comedy included Cybill Shepherd for CBS' "Cybill," Ellen DeGeneres for "Ellen," Helen Hunt for "Mad About You," Candice Bergen for "Murphy Brown" and Roseanne for "Roseanne."

ABC's popular "Home Improvement," a best comedy series nominee last year, didn't make the cut Thursday.

Nominees for supporting comedy actor were David Schwimmer for "Friends," Jason Alexander of "Seinfeld," David Hyde Pierce of "Frasier," Michael Richards of "Seinfeld" and Rip Torn of "The Larry Sanders Show."

Comedy supporting actress bids went to Lisa Kudrow of "Friends," Christine Baranski of "Cybill," Julia Louis-Dreyfus of "Seinfeld," Laurie Metcalf of "Roseanne" and Liz Torres of NBC's "The John Larroquette Show."

HATE CRIME

will be reported to the U.S. Attorney General's office.

The FBI usually doesn't confirm or deny involvement in an investigation until a suspect is apprehended, but Holmquist said hate crimes warrant more public interaction.

"In these cases, the public has a right to know what's going on. We're encouraging the public to come forward with information about this," he said. "Somebody out there knows who did this."

Byrdsong has more than FBI involvement and racial slurs running through his mind — he's experiencing hassles with his insurance company. He got a price estimate to have his car buffed and repainted, but the company refuses to pay for anything except the buffing, which would remove the vandalism.

Byrdsong said he needs the car to be repainted, not to look good, but so he and his wife can forget the ugly incident.

"I'm trying to ease the memory of this for me and my family," he said. "I think the car should be the least of my worries."

Byrdsong said he hopes people remember what happened to him and take racist vandalism seriously if it occurs again.

"I hope the city people take an interest in this and don't just take a report and then set it aside and think, 'This kind of thing happens all the time,'" Byrdsong said. "I'm thankful people are paying attention."

DELIBERATION TOOK TOO LONG

SEATS' contract renewed

Bravo to the Iowa City City Council for finally getting a job done — and well done, at that.

Since late last year, many people who utilize the Johnson County Special Elderly and Disabled Transportation System have been wondering if the service on which they have grown to rely would be downsized or eliminated altogether.

On Tuesday, councilors voted unanimously to continue the program, maintaining the level of service. The SEATS contract with Johnson County has been discussed for months in an effort to continue the service, but at a lower cost.

The SEATS program is self-explanatory, providing a paratransit service for senior citizens and the physically challenged of Johnson County. But SEATS is more than just a chauffeur service — it offers companionship and care to its users.

Providing door-to-door service, SEATS is the only means of transportation for some riders who need to complete grocery or convenience store shopping. Drivers offer assistance to riders who aren't able to carry purchases into their homes, and they often check in on riders.

Such a service is a godsend to residents who are closed off from society because they are unable to drive. Iowa City is fortunate to have such transportation; few towns of this size are so lucky. That's why it is so surprising — and even a little disappointing — that it took councilors so long to deliberate.

Leaving the SEATS program up in the air so long was unfortunate, causing understandable concern among the riders. Councilors are relieved the contract is settled and seem genuinely pleased that the program is continuing. But every two years, SEATS will have to endure the same process — and so will its riders.

The program will soon be on the table again. Senior citizens and physically challenged residents will still need rides, and there will — hopefully — be friendly and compassionate drivers willing to offer their services. Let's hope the council realizes this and renews SEATS' contract with more speed and efficiency in 1997.

Not just entertainment provided at '80s Night

To the Editor:

In the Thursday, July 13 Daily Iowan, I had the unfortunate displeasure to read a self-aggrandizing diatribe titled "Dolls' snubbed — Turn off the Falco: Get a clue, barflies." (I wouldn't name it as a critique or as an objective journalistic article — it is blatantly filled with copious amounts of subjectiveness and sentiments of intellectual superiority.)

Shayla Thiel rants about the obviously popular experience commonly known to us local "hicks" as '80s Night. Among her many unthoughtful barbs within her invective account, Thiel wallows in her apparently bitter relationship with that strange, paradoxical and very often misunderstood decade. Thiel degenerates sadly into a conventional description of some elaborate future and satirically depicts our generation as being the "over one million who sold out."

This Marxist viewpoint permeates the entire harangue — tyrannical in its exclusion of alternative opinions — and prevents the concerned reader from comfortably considering important questions and issues. More importantly, it maligns '80s Night.

For is it not the unique and expressive essence of the American mixed economy, which in its capitalistic aspects so carefully — if not perfectly — balanced with government regulation, that produced such incredible artistic endeavors as "Rock Me, Amadeus," "Girls Just Want to Have Fun" and that famous finale to '80s Night, deeply felt by us "unglamorous Midwestern" types, "Jack and Diane."

These songs fought their way through the nation to reach the top. Some of the groups crashed and burned, but some still radiate like the purple royalty of the artist formerly known as Prince or the virginal ecstasy of a holy Madonna. But in each of these songs, millions of people recognized aspects of themselves, just as they let the music take them to places far outside of themselves. That's why the songs are popular.

Thiel should let go of whatever ill feelings she holds against '80s music culture and realize popular culture means success. If the Goo Goo Dolls "have something to say" other than "Fuck you, too" — and we decide we want to hear it — 10 or 15 years from now a group of kids may be rocking to them in a way-cool club. Those kids may decide how to fit the Dolls' song into a rock music and social issues thesis, while someone out of the dark shouts to a friend, "I knew them before they were popular."

Fans of weekly event disappointed by band

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to the Thursday, July 13 DI Arts and Entertainment article, "Dolls' snubbed — Turn off the Falco: Get a clue, barflies."

I enjoy live music, and all types of music for that matter, but when I got to the Union Bar on Tuesday night and found the Goo Goo Dolls playing instead of "Come on Eileen" by Dexy's Midnight Runners, I was a bit distraught and disappointed. I asked the employees when '80s Night would begin, and they said it wouldn't start until midnight.

I got in an hour and a half of '80s Night, but I was mad that I had to wait, but not just for three hours. I had been waiting the whole week to go.

I have been going to '80s Night almost every Tuesday since January, and I have gotten used to it. I enjoy the music very much, and the environment is great. Not to have an '80s Night, to me, is like not having a Christmas or a Thanksgiving. So when anything upsets my one day of enjoyment for the week, I get ticked — no, I get pissed off. And when I read the article on Thursday, I was really pissed off.

The article made the Goo Goo Dolls a victim of '80s music. Nobody wanted to see them, this '90s band. No, people wanted to hear "complete crap," as Thiel calls '80s music. And why not? It's only played on Tuesday nights, and as far as I know, only the Union plays it all night long.

The way I see it, '80s music was the victim of that night, along with — dare I say — hundreds of fans in Iowa City, otherwise referred to by Thiel as a "small, unglamorous Midwestern cesspool."

And, Thiel's notion that ignoring live rock and alternative bands in Iowa City leads the music world to think we are hicks who stand in cornfields and jam to Garth Brooks' "Friends in Low Places" is asinine.

Any music world with bands telling people, who actually wanted to see them, "Fuck you, too" (Goo Goo Dolls' Robby Takac) does not seem worthy enough for me to care what they think about Iowa City.

How to manage stress without being paranoid

Recently I was in my office, with a lot to do — including write a column — when I got a phone call informing me the electric company had cut off my power.

Years ago, I would have responded to this petty annoyance with a pointless, immature outburst of anger. But since then, I have learned stress management is vital to health. So I hung up the phone, took a deep breath, exhaled slowly and then punched my desk so hard I could not make a fist for three days.

Then, using my other hand, I called the electric company, which has one of those automatic call-routing systems, designed by escaped Nazis with the aid of the Educational Testing Service, wherein you must use your touch-tone phone to pass a lengthy multiple-choice test ("...if you know your first name but NOT your last name, press...").

This is the electric company's way of testing your worthiness as a customer; it's similar to the way knights of old had to prove themselves by slaying dragons, except instead of winning the hand of a fair maiden, you get put in line to speak with an actual Customer Service Representative.

While waiting, I kept my stress level down by calmly going over the points I planned to make, as follows:

1. You stupid idiots.
2. Give me back my electricity THIS INSTANT.
3. What are you people using for brains?
4. Pez?

While I was refining these points, a Customer Service Representative came on the line and immediately irritated me by — I believe this was a deliberate tactic on her part — being polite.

Atomic bomb actually saved Japanese lives

For some reason, it has become an article of intellectual chic in certain way-out academic circles to find fault with the United States. Kim Painter's fantastically incorrect July 10 Daily Iowan column can serve as an example of this and of how all types of misinformation are served up and — if not refuted — become accepted wisdom.

To prove her point that there was no need for American militarists to drop the atomic bomb on Japan, Painter stated, "After Japan's loss at Okinawa where America suffered 12,000 casualties ... there was no doubt the war was over."

The United States, however, suffered not 12,000 but 75,000 casualties in the very hard-fought Okinawa campaign. Among the losses were 763 aircraft, 36 ships sunk, 368 ships damaged, 4,907 seamen killed or missing and 4824 seamen wounded (Hist. Branch, U.S. Marine Corps "Okinawa," p. 260).

Keep in mind the atomic bomb not only saved many American lives, but most assuredly saved an enormous number of Japanese — perhaps millions — from death and injury that probably would have resulted had the war been continued by conventional means.

In just the Okinawa/Ryukyus campaign, officially concluded on July 2 — about one month before the dropping of the Hiroshima bomb — the Japanese suffered some 110,000 military dead from their 117,000 island troops and about 100,000 civilians dead from the local population of about 450,000. The immediate death toll from both atomic bombs was 140,000-150,000 (Britannica, 1991).

She explained that my electricity had been turned off because — get a load of THIS excuse — I had not paid my bill.

I was furious. The only thing that prevented me from hiring the entire O.J. Simpson defense team and suing the electric company for every last volt it owns was the realization that I had not, in fact, paid my electric bill. You know how you sometimes make a pile of papers that you avoid making eye contact with the pile for several weeks, secretly hoping — you crazy optimist — a giant comet will strike the Earth and wipe out all human life and you won't have to deal with it? My electric bill was in a pile like that.

The irritatingly polite woman told me they could turn my electricity back on that day, but only if I paid the bill in person before 2 p.m. She told me to pay at a drugstore near where I live. (I don't know why she didn't have me pay at the electric company; they probably don't want anybody to find out their secret method for generating electricity, which I suspect involves a carpet being scuffed by a giant pair of mechanized shoes.)

So I had to rush home to get my electric bill, and naturally my car chose that exact moment to be low on gas, so I had to stop at one of those all-purpose gas stations that also sell beer, cigarettes, magazines, hats, beef jerky and hot dogs the same age as Strom Thurmond.

Naturally, I would up standing in line behind some moron who was investing his family's grocery money in some kind of state lottery transaction so complex as to require the full attention of ALL THREE store clerks for about 15 minutes, during which time I controlled my stress level by staring laser holes into the back of the moron's neck and shrieking silently — inside my head — WHY NOT SAVE YOURSELF SOME TIME? WHY NOT JUST SET YOUR MONEY ON FIRE?

So as you can imagine, I was feeling very stressed when, with 2 p.m. rapidly approaching, I finally got back out onto the highway and immediately got stuck in severe traffic behind a driver with ears the size of pie plates who had just this moment arrived here from the year 1937 and had therefore never seen a left-turn arrow.

You could see him studying it, trying to figure it out — a green arrow! Pointing left! Here in the left-hand lane! Whatever could it MEAN? — while those of us behind him controlled our stress levels by pounding our horns and then yelping with pain because we had accidentally used the same hand that we had used, in an earlier stress-control effort, to punch our desk.

Finally, with only minutes to go, I got to the drugstore — a cramped and dingy place selling unattractive housewares on layaway — and found myself at the end of a long, Soviet-style line of people paying their utility bills in cash, which they pulled out of their wallets one dollar at a time in slow motion, pretending they couldn't hear my brain shrieking at them HURRY UP YOU FOOLS but of course they knew exactly what they were doing because they were ALL PART OF THE PLOT, along with the electric company and the big-eared driver and the lottery moron and the black federal helicopters constantly monitoring my movements, all of them working together to RAISE MY STRESS LEVEL BUT I KNOW WHAT THEY'RE TRYING TO DO AND IT'S NOT GOING TO WORK. HAHAAHAHAHAHAHA HEY GET AWAY FROM ME YOU mal occasion and so everyone would be dressed in dark suits, so he wore the jacket. He was late because he had spent the morning trying on so many things before deciding on it."

The commentary about Monk's "Straight No Chaser" and vintage film of Monk's live performances are far and away the documentary's best segment. Although Gillespie was still alive when the film was made, it seemed odd Bach wouldn't spotlight him — and the few other jazz heavyweights who were in the photo — the same way. Another surprise was the general lack of tension "Great Day" provided. Although it was funny to watch the jazz stars (captured also on home movie footage) all but ignore Kane as he attempted to get them to pose, the subject of racial and socioeconomic barrier between the young white photographer and the subjects was never broached.

The development of jazz by 1958 also was not adequately explored in the documentary; much of the film's first 15 minutes focused on stride piano — a trademark of 1920s jazz. Despite extensive modern footage of Gerry Mulligan, the rest failed to mention the genre's quick changes that were taking place just nine years after the famous Birth of the Cool sessions.

However, "Great Day" is simply a charming piece of cinema. It's fun to see the aging jazz legends pointing at the photo, recalling the day and remarking about some of the subjects ("Oh, he's gained a lot of weight since then.") — something of a high school class reunion for jazz idols.

For those unfamiliar with the art form and its history, "Great Day" would likely move a tad slow. Picture looking at a 1969 photo of the Rolling Stones, The Beatles, Herman's Hermits, the Alan Parsons Project and other British rock bands — some of whom were lucky enough to hit the big time and some of whom died of heroin overdoses the year after the photo was taken — and suppose they all happened to live in the same borough and one day decide to pose for a photo.

That's what "Great Day" is about — the magic that happened one day when, by some crazy fluke, a hundred or so jazz icons gathered and captured history.

Although it's really for jazz-bos only, "A Great Day in Harlem" reminds audiences how important it is to keep that golden age in music alive.

TONIGHT

• For the second night in a row, Bo Ramsey and the Back Sliders bring their down 'n' dirty, Springsteen-ish rock to Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St. The band will be playing with the Dave "High and Lonesome" Zollo Band and Greg Brown.

• Local favorites Blues Instigators showcase their catchy brand of bar blues at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

• Or perhaps you're looking for a quieter night at home. Why not try a quiet night at someone else's house? A new installation by local artists Kelly Murray and Tony Gault explores "notions of shelter" within the top floor of an Iowa City home.

Including sculpture, film projections and a sound environment, the installation is something like a maze, according to the artists. It's rather similar to hanging out at the library, only awfully cultural. The installation is open tonight, Saturday and Sunday from 6-9 p.m.

• The Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., hosts everyone's second-favorite Dave, Dave Moore. Moore brings his original acoustic folk tonight and Saturday.

SATURDAY

• Get a bang out of Missouri band Bottle Rockets at Gabe's with a sweet taste of guests Little Debbie. Incidentally, Bottle Rocket guitarist / singer / songwriter Brian Henneman toured as an additional guitarist with the now-disbanded Uncle Tupelo. The headliners, which have been compared to Neil Young, Hank Williams and Georgia Satellites, are touting their most recent release, The Brooklyn Side — an album with contemplative, irreverent lyrics set to slammin' Kentucky Fried rock.

• Anyone who made it to the Blues Traveler concert at Davenport's Adler Theatre in April remembers the feisty opener, Jono Manson with the Rough Housers. Manson will bring his band's George Thorogood / Stevie Ray Vaughan-esque blues to Gunnerz. Who knows? Blues Traveler's harmonica-wunderkind John Popper, who often sits in with the band, might be there.

MONDAY

• Cool down after a sizzling weekend with a "Cold Snap." No, it's not a soft drink commercial. "Cold Snaps" and free air conditioning can be found at Shambaugh Auditorium at 8 p.m., when fiction writer Thom Jones, an alumnus and visiting faculty member of the UI Writers' Workshop, will read from his story, "Cold Snap."

Ito bars testimony of blood expert

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson was dealt another setback Thursday when the judge restricted testimony from a blood spatter expert who conducted experiments the defense said would have supported its frame-up theory.

A few hours later, prosecutor Marcia Clark was fined $250 for criticizing another witness the defense said it planned to call Monday.

Simpson's lawyers watched Thursday morning as yet another of their witnesses delivered testimony helpful to the prosecution, when police photographer Willie Ford suggested he didn't see a pair of socks in Simpson's bedroom the day after the killings because the socks had already been collected by police.

"You were only instructed to videotape a room after a search was complete," asked prosecutor Christopher Darden, in a series of questions generating numerous defense objections, most of them overruled by a testy Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

"That is correct," Ford said. Darden then asked, "That's why we don't see socks in the videotape, is that correct, Mr. Ford?"

"That's correct, sir." Defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. objected to that question as well, but Ito overruled him with a sharp warning to "sit down, counsel." The judge later apologized to jurors for being in a "bad mood" and having a "judicial attitude."

Prosecutors contend Simpson left the socks in the bedroom as he hastily prepared for a trip to Chicago after murdering his ex-wife and her friend June 12, 1994. The defense says police planted the socks and smeared one with a victim's blood to frame Simpson.

Ito imposed the fine on Clark before afternoon testimony even started. She lodged an objection to the way the defense juggled its witness list, arguing she didn't have time to prepare for Fredric Rieders, the founder of National Medical Services Laboratory in Willow Grove, Pa., a witness the defense said it would call Monday to talk about the blood preservative EDTA.

Defense attorney Robert Blasler

Associated Press

Willie Ford, a police photographer, looks at a photo showing the black socks inside O.J. Simpson's bedroom during direct examination by defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. Thursday at Simpson's double-murder trial in Los Angeles. Ford videotaped Simpson's house the day after the murders.

said prosecutors had had Rieders' name and that of FBI agent Roger Martz since early this week and it was strange she was ready to cross-examine one but not the other.

"Oh, come on. I think that's so obvious it doesn't even bear addressing," Clark countered. She said the agent "is going to be an honest witness who's going to testify truthfully to the results."

"Counsel, counsel," the judge warned. But Clark continued, "That's a little easier..."

Ito interjected: "Miss Clark, earlier today, I cautioned you about the personal attacks..."

She responded, "OK, I, I'm sorry, your honor..."

But the judge interrupted, "I've warned you already. The sanction is $250. Don't leave court without writing a check."

Ito then called for the next witness, Simpson housekeeper Josephine "GiGi" Guerin, who started by describing her schedule and how she adjusted it to match Simpson's.

The court day started with the ruling barring defense expert Herbert MacDonell from mentioning the results of an experiment he performed on blood found on the socks. The defense claims the blood was planted on the socks.

Ito agreed with prosecutors that MacDonell's experiment, which gauged the drying time of blood on sock fabric, was flawed because the sock materials and conditions affecting the socks in the case were not accurately recreated.

Ito has barred testimony that would support the defense's drug-hit theory for the murders, restricted the defense's ability to explore statements Detective Mark Fuhrman made during a mock cross-examination and blocked efforts to call a travel agent to support Simpson's claim he cut his finger in a Chicago hotel room and not at the crime scene.

After the ruling, testimony resumed. Called as a defense witness, Ford testified under direct questioning Wednesday and Thursday that he didn't see the socks when he videotaped Simpson's house the afternoon of June 13, 1994. A still photograph taken that day shows the socks at the foot of Simpson's bed.

"You never saw what's depicted in that photograph, right?" asked Cochran.

"Right," Ford said.

Snider and McCovey get busted for tax evasion

NEW YORK (AP) — The Duke came back to Brooklyn, not in glory but in greed.

Baseball's memorabilia market, symbol of a sport mired in money, snared two of its all-time heroes Thursday when Hall of Famers Duke Snider and Willie McCovey pleaded guilty to tax evasion.

"I got caught. I'm very sorry about it. I hope to get a second chance from a lot of my fans," Snider said outside the federal courthouse. "We have choices to make in our lives and I chose to make the wrong choice."

Snider and McCovey joined an expanding lineup of convicted tax cheats in a sport already weighed down by drug problems and lingering resentment from a strike that wiped out the World Series.

The convictions were the government's latest blow in a crack-down on unreported income from baseball card shows, publicity events, autograph signings and memorabilia shows that became million-dollar businesses in the 1980s. Snider and McCovey admitted they did not report income from memorabilia shows.

Owners will vote on Raiders today

CHICAGO (AP) — As far as commissioner Paul Tagliabue is concerned, the Raiders have always belonged in Oakland, not Los Angeles.

So he has recommended that NFL owners approve the move back to where they were one of the league's most successful and feared teams.

According to several sources, Tagliabue faxed all 30 owners a memo Wednesday night supporting the Raiders' move back to the Bay Area, which they left after the 1981 season for Southern California. The owners will vote today on the move, announced last month by Al Davis after he chose Oakland's offer over a proposed new stadium in Los Angeles.

Still, the meeting is likely to be long. For one thing, Davis needs approval from 23 of the 30 teams; for another, the move would leave the league without a team in the NFL's second-largest market following the move of the Rams to St. Louis in May.

Seles grabs top ranking

(AP) — Martina Navratilova figured if Monica Seles was No. 1 when she left tennis, so she ought to be No. 1 when she returns.

And after a bit of a struggle, that's the way it will be.

Navratilova, president of the WTA, said that Seles will be ranked co-No. 1 with Steffi Graf when she returns to tournament tennis next month, 2½ years after Seles was stabbed in the back during a tournament in Hamburg, Germany.

"That's where she was and that's where she belongs," Navratilova said Wednesday.

The WTA made it official Thursday.

Taking Europe by storm

American golfer Tom Watson celebrates sinking a 60 foot putt Thursday. Watson started his chase for a record-tying sixth British Open championship with his best start ever in the tournament, a 67.

Three Americans take share of lead

Ron Sirak

Associated Press

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland —

The only other time Tom Watson shot 67 in the first round of the British Open was 1983, when he won his last major championship.

The only other time Jack Nick-laus made 10 on a hole in the British Open was 1962, at Royal Troon in his first Open. No one can remember the last time he threw a club.

The Old Course at St. Andrews saw it all in Thursday's first round of the 124th British Open.

Watson, trying to win a record-tying sixth British Open, was brilliant in shooting a 5-under-par round that tied for the lead with Ben Crenshaw, John Daly and Mark McNulty.

Nicklaus was baffled as he took a 10 on the par-5 14th hole, needing four shots to get out of the Hell Bunker, tossing a couple of clubs along the way, and needing to birdie two of the last four holes to stumble to a 78.

While Nicklaus was no longer in the hunt, a ton of players were.
Fifty-nine broke par-72, leaving 55 players within four strokes of the lead. Another 25 players were at par.

David Feherty, Vijay Singh, Bill Glasson and Mats Hallberg were a stroke behind the co-leaders at 68. U.S. Open champion Corey Pavin was in a knot of nine players at 69.

Nick Price, the defending champion, was among 16 players at 70, along with Davis Love and Phil Mickelson. Greg Norman was at 71 along with Mark Calcavecchia,
Ian Woosnam, Ernie Els and 22
others.

Nick Faldo, the three-time British Open champion and the pre-tournament favorite, shot a 74.

No one was better than Watson
on this day.

He closed with a 31 on the back nine in which he had four birdies and an eagle. All traces of the putting problems that have kept him winless since 1987 were gone as he rolled in a 70-foot birdie on the first hole and made a half-dozen putts from four to 15 feet.

"I putted great," Watson said.

He was also magnificent with his approach shots.

"When I went 3-3 at 13 and 14,
I hit some shots that I'll always remember," Watson said. "On 13 (where he birdied) I drew in a 7-iron to four feet. It was the same shot on 14 (where he eagled), with a 3-wood. I drew it in, let it ride the wind from 250 yards to 15 feet."

ball as well as anyone, has made

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT GROWS THINNER

Bongiovi, Murphy set to leave UI

Shannon Stevens

The Daily Iowan

In the wake of C. Vivian Stringer's decision to depart to Rutgers University, two more members of the Iowa women's athletic department are heading to the Northeastern United States.

Dianne Murphy told The Daily Iowan Thursday she will step down as Iowa's women's assistant athletic director to become the senior associate athletic director at Cornell University.

Murphy said the Cornell job will help her advance her career goals.

"What I'm looking for is to eventually become an athletic director at a Division I institution," Murphy said. "This is an opportunity for me to be able to do that."

In addition to Murphy, women's sports information director Cathy Bongiovi will also be ending her tenure at the UI.

On Thursday, Atlantic 10 Conference Commissioner
Linda Bruno named Bongiovi as the new Assistant Director of Communications for the Atlantic 10.

Bongiovi said she was looking forward to starting her new duties in mid-August.

"This job is perfect because it's basketball-related and basketball is my first love," Bongiovi said. "The Atlantic 10 doesn't have any football, so it's a totally basketball-oriented conference."

Murphy said it was ironic that she, Bongiovi and Stringer were all headed East.

KEEP IN MIND WHAT HE DID

Tyson belongs in a cell, not in a ring

What is Mike Tyson to do?

George Foreman thinks he deserves a shot at Iron Mike before the end of this year. HBO wants Tyson to fight in a world title reunification tournament, but Don King won't allow it.

There are some who think Tyson's return bout against Peter McNeeley is a joke — that even though Tyson hasn't fought in over three years, he can certainly find a worthier opponent than McNeeley.

I fall into that category. Come August 19, Tyson shouldn't be fighting McNeeley.

Actually, Tyson shouldn't be fighting anyone, he should be in jail rotting with all convicted rapists.

Three years in a cell wasn't long enough for what Tyson did to Desiree Washington. I'm not even sure 30 years would do the trick.
The crime Tyson was convicted of is so incredibly trivialized in this country that a punishment to fit his crime could be viewed as barbaric. Then again, so was the crime.

Perhaps I'm being too harsh on convicted rapists.
It's been well documented that criminals
can be rehabilitated.

But rape isn't a crime
like burglary, a crime that gives the victim a chance to move on with his or her life.

Instead, rape lingers with its victim well after its perpe-tration. Rape haunts its victims, eating away at them as they're driving to work, socializing with friends or trying to sleep.

There's such a stigma attached to the idea of rape, yet not enough consequence for the crime. Why not let Tyson sit in jail until Washington has had time to get over the incident.

If she can never fully recuperate, well then, fine. Tyson stays in prison. Or, if the courts find a life sentence for rape unconstitutional, why not take it a step further.

Perhaps a step that would ensure Tyson will never, ever rape again. I think you know what I'm getting at.

I believe when most people look at Mike Tyson they see the most awesome physical specimen boxing has seen this half of the century.
They see a squared-circle terror known for his fast knockouts and grim reaper-like demeanor.

Badgers must rebuild to compete for title

The time has come to accept the fact that big-time football has finally been established in the land of cheese.

The Wisconsin Badgers have posted a 17-5-2 record the past two seasons, and have produced consecutive January bowl wins. The 17 wins set a school record for the most victories in consecutive seasons since 1900-1901.

Coach Barry Alvarez heads into the 1995 season trying to further establish the Badgers as a national powerhouse. However, he must do so without most of the big guns from the previous two seasons.

The Badgers lost a whopping 27 seniors from a year ago. Perhaps the biggest departures are the second- and third-leading rushers in school history, Brent Moss and Terrell Fletcher, respectively.

Additionally, Wisconsin lost three all-Big Ten offensive line-

AMERICA CUP SOCCER

Brazil proves too much for upstart Americans

Associated Press

MALDONADO, Uruguay — The United States' remarkable run through the America Cup ended Thursday night with a 1-0 loss to Brazil in the semifinals of the South American championships.

The four-time World Cup champions scored in the 13th minute on a header by Aldair to advance to Sunday's finals against Uruguay.

The Brazilians extended their unbeaten streak to 25 games, their last loss coming to Germany in 1993. They limited the United States to two good scoring chances, both by defender Alexi Lalas.

The Americans, eliminated, by Brazil 1-0 in the second round of last summer's World Cup, were playing in the semifinals of a major international tournament for the first time since the 1930 World Cup.

The United States will play Colombia for third place on Saturday in Maldonado. The two countries played to a scoreless tie last month in Piscataway, N.J.

The United States beat Chile, Argentina and Mexico on the way to the semifinals, but faced a far stronger in opponent in mighty Brazil. The Americans struggled throughout the first half.

a habit of teasing in major championships in recent years, threatening early only to have his putting deteriorate the deeper into the tournament he gets.

"Last year he began the British Open with rounds of 68-65-69 at Turnberry, but shot 74 on Sunday to finish fourth.

"That was the most disappointed I've been in several years," he said.

Disappointment, frustration and embarrassment were the words for Nicklaus.

reason for it, it just happens," Murphy said. "I think a lot of times people look to go back to their roots and that may be the case with Vivian and Cathy."

men, last year's entire secondary, its top receiver (Lee DeRamus), tight end (Michael Roan) and defensive tackle (Michael Thompson).

Still, Alvarez is confident his program will recover this year.

"When a program starts to mature like ours has, the backups and redshirts need to step up and replace the departed players," said Alvarez, the first coach to take Wisconsin's program to back-to-back New Year's Day bowl games.

One established player who will return to key the offense is senior quarterback Darrell Bevell, a 1993 first-team, all-conference selection who holds most of the school's significant passing records, and has directed the Badgers to 21 wins in his career.

The 25-year-old, three-year starter could join only four players in Big Ten history to pass for more than 7,000 career yards and complete at least 60 percent of his passes.

Bevell will have a couple of excellent receivers to throw to this year. Sophomore wide receiver Tony Simmons set a conference freshman record in receiving yards (588) and touchdowns (eight) last year.

Senior tight end Matt Nyquist also has excellent hands.

Simmons "made people play us honest because he's a home run threat on every snap," Alvarez said.

The Badgers' running backs will also play a big role in determining Wisconsin's fate this season — the loss of Fletcher and Moss (and their combined 6,842 career yards) leaves a big hole in the backfield.

Sophomores Carl McCullough and Royce Robertson are the heir apparents in the running game. Both are former prep all-Americans who excelled in limited playgram.

"Summertime in the collegiate world is when you have the most turnover," she said. "People get ready for next year and I think (Iowa) will be in good shape come the end of August and early September. Everybody will be on board and will be ready to go for another year."

Murphy has held her current position since the 1988-89 academic year. Before coming to Iowa, Murphy served as the assistant athletic director at Kentucky State ing time last season.

Despite losing three top offensive linemen to graduation, the Badgers should still be well stocked this season. Junior tackle Jerry Wunsch (6-foot-6, 315 pounds) returns as the top lineman.

"There's a good nucleus (on the line) with three guards and a tackle having starting experience," Alvarez said.

On the defensive side of the ball, the Badgers are talented but inexperienced.

Wisconsin's defense appears strongest at linebacker where Pete Monty (6-2, 231) and Eric Unverzagt (6-2, 235) will be asked to provide leadership. The two combined for 246 tackles and 14 pass breakups last season.

Each will serve as a co-captain this fall.

On the defensive line, Alvarez has decided to eliminate the nose guard position and slide all confer-they go to hit their shots. "You really have to think your way around here."

Daly got his 67 by making seven birdies that included one on the 316-yard 12th hole when he drove the green into the wind and two-putted.

Crenshaw, who has the touch to handle the large and sharply sloped greens, made only one bogey in his 67.

And McNulty made four consecutive birdies from No. 7 for his 67.

Certain not to make the cut in his last British Open was Arnold Palmer, who posted an 83, his highest round in 23 tournaments.

They should be forced to think about what they've done every day for the rest of their lives.

He could go undefeated in the ring for the next 20 years or give millions of dollars to those less financially fortunate than him, still, one simple fact would remain.

Mike Tyson is a rapist. Nothing more, nothing less.

University, in Frankfort, Ky.

Bongiovi has served as the sports information director for the last four years. She was also in charge of producing media guides for all 12 Iowa women's sports. This year Bongiovi's rowing media guide received "Best in the Nation" honors from College Sports Information Directors of America.

Murphy said searches would be started to find a new head basketball coach, sports information director and assistant athletic director.

ence senior Jason Maniecki (6-5, 290) to tackle.

Junior Tarek Saleh (6-3, 229) led the team in sacks (seven) last year and will join Maniecki in heading the line.

Alvarez said the Badger secondary is his single biggest concern this year. The top five defensive backs from a year ago have exhausted their eligibility.

LaMar Campbell and Jason Suttle, each with one career start, are expected to line up at cornerback, while sophomore Kevin Huntley and freshman Leonard Taylor are slated to start at safety.

Wisconsin opens the '95 season against national powerhouse Colorado Sept. 2 in Madison. The Buffaloes, who finished the year No. 3 nationally, thrashed the Badgers in their only meeting last year.

The Iowa Hawkeyes will also return to the Badger schedule after a two-year absence.

New York Yankees third baseman Wade Boggs rolls on the grass as he tries to catch a blooping double by Kansas City Royals' Bob Hamelin in the second inning Thursday at Yankee Stadium.

Rodriguez tosses first win

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Frank Rodriguez spoiled Scott Erickson's return to the Metrodome, earning his first major league victory as the Minnesota Twins beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-2 Thursday.

Rodriguez (1-3), acquired July 6 in a trade that sent closer Rick Aguilera to Boston, gave up just three hits and one run in six innings for his longest career outing.

Erickson (6-7) lost for the first time since the Twins sent him to Baltimore on July 7. Traded away after four-plus seasons in Minnesota, Erickson got far more boos than applause when he was introduced before the game.

Mariners 4, Brewers 2, 13 inn.
MILWAUKEE — Felix Fermin scored on pitcher Jamie McAnrew's throwing error in the 13th inning, and the Seattle Mariners snapped the Milwaukee Brewers' seven-game winning streak.

Fermin led off with a double. Rich Amaral bunted, and McAnrew (0-1) overthrew first base, allowing Fermin to score Seattle's first run since the fourth inning.

Amaral later scored on first baseman Kevin Seitzer's fielding error. Bill Krueger (1-0) picked up the victory with four innings of two-hit relief.

Indians 6, Rangers 3
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Sandy Alomar hit two home runs in a game for the first time in his major league career, leading the Cleveland Indians over Texas for their seventh win in eight games since the All-Star break.

The temperature was announced at 102 degrees when the game began. The Rangers have played only two day games in July since 1988.

Alomar went 3-for-4 and scored three runs. Mickey Tettleton homered for Texas, which lost its fourth in a row.

Orel Hersher (7-4) gave up two runs and six hits in six innings, striking out four and walking one. Jose Mesa pitched the ninth for his 24th save in 24 chances. Mark Brandenburg (0-1) lost in his big league debut.

Athletics 6, Tigers 3
OAKLAND, Calif. — Ron Darling won for the first time in nine starts and the Oakland Athletics sent the Detroit Tigers to their eighth straight defeat.

Ernie Young, Stan Javier and Geronimo Berroa homered for the A's.

Darling (3-5) was 0-3 since last winning June 5 against New York. He won for the first time in four decisions at home this year. Dennis Eckersley struck out the side in the ninth for his 20th save.

Angels 10, Blue Jays 3
TORONTO — Tony Phillips had two of California's seven first-inning singles as the Angels batted around for the second time in as many games against Toronto, scoring six times en route to a 10-3 win over the Blue Jays.

The Angels batted around and scored six runs in the second inning of their 10-2 win over the Blue Jays Wednesday night. Their two-game sweep of Toronto gave them an 8-2 margin in their season series and a 7-1 record on their eight-game road trip.

Yankees 8, Royals 4
NEW YORK — Bernie Williams and Mike Stanley hit back-to-back home runs to cap a four-run sixth inning, lifting the New York Yankees to an 8-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Williams' homer, his 11th, was a two-run shot off Royals reliever Billy Brewer (1-3) and Stanley followed four pitches later with his ninth to put the Yankees ahead 5-3.

Kevin Appier held the Yankees to four hits over the first five innings before they broke through. Steve Howe (4-3) was the winner in relief.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 1
CHICAGO — Mo Vaughn broke up a tie game in the seventh inning with his 25th homer and Jose Canseco also homered, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Thursday night.

The game was delayed twice by rain for a total of 1½ hours. After the second delay of 38 minutes, Kirk McCaskill relieved starter Alex Fernandez to start the seventh.

Vaughn, leading off the inning, homered on a 2-2 pitch over the left field fence.

The homer tied Vaughn with Chicago's Frank Thomas, who homered in the fourth, for the major league lead.

NL ROUNDUP

Cubs fail to muster offense in Montreal

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Butch Henry pitched a seven-hitter and Darrin Fletcher and Rondell White hit solo homers as Montreal won its third straight and seventh of nine since the All-Star break. The Expos defeated Chicago 4-0.

Chicago lost its fourth straight and is 1-8 since the break.

Henry (5-7) struck out four and walked one for his first shutout since Aug. 15, 1992, against Chicago, when he was with Houston.

Fletcher and White connected off Jaime Navarro (7-4) leading off the fourth and fifth. It was Fletcher's seventh and White's eighth.

Rockies 7, Phillies 3
DENVER — Bill Swift won his fifth straight start and Dante Bichette hit another homer at home Thursday to lead Colorado to a victory over Philadelphia.

Swift (6-2) gave up three hits in seven innings. Bichette, whose 16 homers have all come at Coors Field, drove in three runs.

The Rockies got to Paul Quantrill (7-6) for four runs in the third on Bichette's two-run hit and a two-run triple by Jason Bates.

Braves 4, Pirates 3
ATLANTA — Charlie O'Brien's pinch-hit single with the bases loaded and one out in the ninth capped a two-run rally that was aided by two Pittsburgh errors.

With two on and one out, pinch-hitter Dwight Smith greeted reliever Dan Miceli with a broken-bat single over the mound that shortstop Jay Bell threw wide of first allowing Jones to score the tying run and allowed the runners to take an extra base. After an intentional walk, O'Brien hit a single that landed at the base of the wall in left.

tie and Los Angeles snapped Florida's four-game winning streak and spoiled Jeff Conine Day in Broward County.

Jose Offerman and Raul Mondesi led off the 10th with singles off Terry Mathews (3-2). One out later, Karros hit a hard grounder between shortstop and third base to score Offerman, who was running on the pitch. After a walk to load the bases, Randy Veres relieved and gave up a sacrifice fly to Roberto Kelly.

Astros 11, Giants 4
HOUSTON — Derek Bell padded his NL RBI lead with a career-high six, including a three-run homer and two-run single.

It was the Giants' fourth straight loss and extended Terry Mulholland's losing streak to seven decisions. Mulholland (2-8) allowed nine hits and six runs over 2½ innings.

Barry Bonds homered to lead off the sixth. He has nine homers and 21 RBIs in his last 19 games.

Cardinals 8, Mets 6
ST. LOUIS — Darnell Coles hit a three-run homer and Ray Lankford hit a two-run shot as St. Louis ended New York's four-game winning streak.

Lankford's 14th homer was his third in four games and sixth in 12. He has 20 RBIs in his last 12 games.

Brett Butler of the Mets had his third straight four-hit game, including his first homer of the season. Butler had 15 hits over his last four games, one off the major league record set by Milt Stock of Brooklyn in 1925.

Allen Watson (3-3) allowed eight hits and four earned runs in five innings. Tom Henke recorded his 21st save in as many opportunities with 1½ innings of scoreless relief.

NFL Roundup

OFFSEASON TROUBLES

Allegations hurt Moon, Vikings

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Vikings already were trying to downplay an array of off-field problems when Felicia Moon accused her husband of beating and choking her this week.

The allegations against quarterback Warren Moon, who was accused of sexual harassment earlier this year, stunned the Vikings. Officials said Thursday they would do whatever they could to help the Moons, but they also were scrambling to defuse another public relations disaster just days before training camp opens.

"It obviously comes as a big shock and a major disappointment that something like this would happen," president Roger Headrick said before a Vikings charity golf tournament.

"We're prepared to help Warren and Felicia and the family, and hopefully help them get back on track."

Minnesota has been beset by controversy since last season ended.

Three weeks after the Vikings were upset by Chicago in a first-round playoff game, allegations of sexual harassment surfaced against head coach Dennis Green and assistant Richard Solomon.

A similar accusation was made against Moon this summer by a former Vikings cheerleader. The entire organization has vehemently denied each claim.

Backup offensive linemen Bernard Dafney and Everett Lindsay got in a fight earlier this month when Dafney punched Lindsay, who had made fun of Dafney's weight during a karaoke performance.

Dissatisfaction also has surfaced in the front office, where numerous employees have been fired or have left in recent years. The latest was long-time ticket manager Harry Randolph, who has said he was fired this month.

Associated Press

Chicago Bears center Jay Leeuwenburg unloads a large beach ball from his car as he arrives at Bears training camp Thursday in Platteville, Wis. Leeuwenburg uses the ball for back rehabilitation.

At Thursday's golf outing, Green said he hoped the Moons, who have four children, could work out their problems. But Green also said he would forget the tumultuous offseason once camp opens Sunday in Mankato.

"My thoughts right now are with Warren and his family," said Green, who hoped to talk to his quarterback later in the day. "But football starts Sunday. We've just got to talk football when we get to training camp. That's all we're going to talk about."

Mrs. Moon told police Tuesday her husband slapped her and choked her nearly to the point of unconsciousness before she was able to escape and drive away from their suburban home.

Bledsoe gets richer

SMITHFIELD, R.I. — Drew Bledsoe couldn't grasp the numbers on the contract that made him, according to the man paying his salary, the highest paid player in the NFL.

"What do I think?" Bledsoe said about the $42 million, seven-year deal he signed Thursday. "I don't know. I can't even do the math."

Patriots owner Bob Kraft called Bledsoe's deal "the highest average salary and the highest signing bonus" in NFL history.

Boselli needs surgery

Tony Boselli, the No. 2 overall pick in the NFL draft, sustained a more serious knee injury than originally thought and will undergo arthroscopic surgery Friday.

Dr. Stephen Lucie, the team's physician, found a small floating cartilage chip and scheduled surgery. Boselli is expected to miss the first exhibition game July 20.

Falcons sign Andersen

Morten Andersen, released by the New Orleans Saints in an effort to force him to restructure his contract, has agreed to join the Atlanta Falcons.

The Falcons said Andersen needs only to pass a physical before the contract is signed. The Falcons said current kicker Norm Johnson would be waived if Andersen joins the team.

Emtman disses Cardinals

Arizona won't be picking up Steve Emtman after all. The frequently injured defensive tackle, the No. 1 pick of the 1992 draft, called off his visit to the Cardinals, giving no explanation for the decision. Arizona coach Buddy Ryan planned to have Emtman take a physical Friday.

Sports

Friday Quotables

Compiled by Shannon Stevens from DI articles and the AP Wire

"You'd wish our home fans would understand the game a little bit better. Maybe it was a Chicago fan, in which case I hope some Brewers fans were around him."

— Phil Garner, Brewers manager on a fan interference call that cost his team the go-ahead run.

"Twelve million dollars worth of hitters beat him."

— Bob Boone, Royals manager on why his pitcher (Melvin Bunch) lost after he gave up homers to Baltimore's Cal Ripken and Rafael Palmeiro.

"Do you know how difficult it is to be here at the top of the mountain and then not take it?...That's not easy."

— C. Vivian Stringer, Iowa women's basketball coach on her decision to leave Iowa to become the head coach at Rutgers University.

"When the season ends and the leaves turn colors, my numbers are going to be there and I'm going to be OK. But I can't go out and do 1994 again."

— Jeff Bagwell, Houston first baseman on his early season slump.

"You can't stop him. You just have to contain him and hold him down. He gets to the corner real fast and once he's got his shoulders squared up with the field you'd better start angling towards the goal line because he's on his way."

— Craig Sauer, Minnesota linebacker on the talent level of teammate Chris Darkins.

HOW DO THEY DO IT?

Brewers surprise with win streak

MILWAUKEE — They are baseball's little engine that could.

The surging Milwaukee Brewers are winning with an unlikely cast of characters that includes eight rookie pitchers, three of them former replacement players.

Despite the second-lowest payroll in baseball, the biggest attendance dropoff in the major leagues and uncertainty over what city they'll call home next year, the Brewers have climbed into the AL wild-card chase.

Even with eight players on the disabled list, including catcher Joe Oliver, they won seven straight games until falling in extra innings Thursday to Seattle.

"We're the Brew Crew, damn it."

Darryl Hamilton on his surging team

Milwaukee's surge can be traced to June 29 and a 17-13 loss to Chicago that has become a microcosm of their surprising season.

They got into a brawl that night with the White Sox when recently released reliever Rob Dibble whizzed a fastball at Pat Listach's head. The 5-9, 180-pound Listach charged the mound and punched the 6-4, 230-pound Dibble.

"I think guys came together with it," Phil Garner said. "The fact that Pat went out there kind of stood notice that, 'Hey, you may be big and you may be stronger, but you just can't walk on me.' It doesn't matter what the outcome of the

Zabel rides to 17th-stage victory

BORDEAUX, France — Erik Zabel of Germany won his second stage of the Tour de France, beating Djamolidine Abdoujaparov of Uzbekistan in a final sprint Thursday while Miguel Indurain moved closer to another championship.

Indurain stayed in the overall lead as he finished in the pack of the 17th stage. He holds a 2-minute, 46-second margin over Alex Zülle of Switzerland.

The Tour ends Sunday with the Spaniard virtually assured of his fifth consecutive title.

altercation is, what matters is that we stood up to them."

With a payroll of just over $15 million — only Montreal's is lower — the Brewers have grown accustomed to the notion of being overlooked and underestimated.

Outfielder Darryl Hamilton last week provided this disparaged, disregarded and disrespected bunch of overachievers with its own rallying cry when he declared, "We're the Brew Crew, damn it."

They beat you not with three-run homers but by chip, chip chipping away with drag bunts and double steals and patience and sacrifice, the ultimate team concept.

Garner had predicted a competitive team this spring "because of the way I thought our pitching staff would stack up."

"Here we are halfway through the season and Ricky Bones is the only guy that's pitching for us," Garner said. "We lost our closer for a stretch in there, too."

Bill Wegman's ineffective starts sent him to the bullpen. Cal Eldred had season-ending elbow surgery. Angel Miranda needed knee surgery and Bob Scanlan has a strained right elbow.

Also, the Brewers may not have a lot of pop in their bats, but they are hitting. 275. DH Greg Vaughn has emerged from his first-half slump to providing the punch the Brewers sorely missed.

B.J. Surhoff, who signed for one-tenth of his $2.5 million salary last year, has bounced back from shoulder and abdominal surgeries and was hitting .380 this week.

"Now, if all those kids in there have failed to see that, then a pox on all their houses," Garner said. "B.J.'s just been hotter than a firecracker and it coincides almost pretty much to our run right now. There's not a more valuable utility player in baseball."

He was finally caught with about six miles left in the 153-mile leg of mostly flatlands.

close to 95, the pack was not pushing the pace, riding at 21 mph.

Marie sought to break up the stage by going out alone for about 35 and built up a lead of more than two minutes.

McDowell receives fitting punishment

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jack McDowell, already fined $5,000 by the New York Yankees for making an obscene gesture to the crowd, was ordered Thursday by AL president Gene Budig to make it up to fans by buying them tickets.

In a letter of reprimand to McDowell, Budig directed the pitcher to purchase a large amount of tickets to Yankees home games. The tickets — the number was not disclosed — will be given to the public through "worthy agencies."

"I am aware that you have been disciplined by the Yankees for your actions on July 18 and believe that they acted in a timely manner under the circumstances," Budig wrote to McDowell.

"We are all trying our best — in this difficult year — to appreciate the loyalty of our fan base. ... believe you have a responsibility to participate in those efforts," Budig wrote. "I trust this was an isolated incident and that we and you can put it behind us for the remainder of the season."

McDowell, booed by a crowd of 21,118 after a bad outing Tuesday night, walked off the mound at Yankee Stadium, thrust his middle finger in the air and twirled it around. Near the dugout, he taunted the fans by motioning for them to jeer him even louder and they did.

Jordan ponders return to football

ST. LOUIS — Now that he's established himself as an everyday player, Brian Jordan wants to be a man for all seasons.

Jordan, who leads the St. Louis Cardinals in four offensive categories, is starting to make noises about being a St. Louis Ram as well. He's noticed the enthusiastic reception the Rams have gotten after their move from the West Coast as the Cardinals stumble along in last place in the NL Central.

"My options are open," he said. "I feel pretty good about myself right now in the game of baseball, but don't be surprised if I'm back on the football field, too."

Jordan's agent, Jim Steiner of St. Louis, has received inquiries from the Rams and a few other teams. But he wanted to downplay the NFL possibility for now.

"We have not been aggressively pursuing it," Steiner said. "It all depends on the Cardinals, and what they want to do down the road. But I'm sure he has the football fever, because it's that time of year."

Fever? On Wednesday, Jordan

Brian Jordan

wanted to know who the Rams had at strong safety, his old position when he played for the Atlanta Falcons from 1988-91. Next week, he plans to attend a practice or two, and he wouldn't mind sitting down to dinner with Rams GM Steve Ortmayer.

Jordan, 28, is happy with the way this season has gone, but somewhat sour on his career with the Cardinals in general. Due to injuries, too many outfielders at times and periodic benchings and demotions, Jordan entered the year with 594 at-bats in parts of three seasons.

"This is my rookie year, really," he said. "I've finally gotten an opportunity to prove myself in this game. It's just seeing the pitches, playing every day. I've gotten an opportunity to shine."

But he could be a lot happier. He can be a free agent after this season and he's got questions about the direction the team seems to be headed.

"I like to win, so right now I'm not having too much fun," Jordan said.

Father beheads son after concluding children were possessed by devil

ESTANCIA, N.M. (AP) — A man on a weekend fishing trip with his sons decided they were all possessed and beheaded his 14-year-old on a roadside while his younger child and passing drivers watched, authorities said Sunday.

"We have witnesses who saw him hacking at the boy's head at the side of the road," Torrance County Sheriff Don Lyles said.

When truckers whizzing past reported what they'd seen, authorities gave chase and Eric Star Smith raced away in his van, throwing his son's head out the window about a mile down Highway 40, Lyles said.

He was captured after a 40-mile chase into Albuquerque early Saturday.

Smith, 34, was jailed pending arraignment today on counts of murder, evidence tampering, child abuse, driving while intoxicated and resisting or obstructing an officer.

The body of Eric Star Smith Jr. was found sprawled across the shoulder and into the roadway, clad in shorts and socks.

"There were 29 stab wounds that I counted in his back, but the ones in front I didn't count," said the sheriff, who witnessed the autopsy. "I hope he was dead before he was beheaded. I'm assuming he was."

The boy's 13-year-old brother saw the beginning of what happened, then ran.

"The father said they were possessed by the devil," Lyle said the boy told him.
