Acie Earl's alleged assaulter misses hearing

DES MOINES (AP) — The Des Moines man accused of swinging a knife at pro basketball player Acie Earl skipped his arraignment Tuesday, Polk County District Court officials said.

Ronald Walker, 25, was charged with assault with a weapon and fourth-degree criminal mischief in a Des Moines incident this spring. Police said Walker swung a knife at Earl, cutting his shirt sleeve. Earl was not injured. Walker also allegedly flattened two tires on Earl's car.

Earl was in Des Moines at the time to help former Iowa player Roy Marble at a basketball tournament.

Officials at the court's criminal division said Walker would be given one or two days to appear in court. If he does not show up, a warrant will be issued for his arrest.

Earl, a former Boston Celtics player, was drafted by the Toronto Raptors in the NBA expansion draft this summer.

FBI chemist Roger Martz insisted his tests on blood evidence did not confirm the presence of enough of the EDTA preservative to support a theory of a police frame-up.

Prosecutors sought to bar defense testimony about whether Detective Mark Fuhrman, who found a bloody glove at O.J. Simpson's estate, is a racist. Meanwhile, lead defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. plans to enforce a subpoena of a North Carolina screenwriting professor who interviewed Fuhrman and other police officers about their jobs.

I.C. hit by magazine scam

Solicitors get unsigned checks, forge signatures

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

An investigation is underway to catch door-to-door solicitors who illegally use high-pressure, non-conventional sales tactics to trick Iowa City residents into turning over unsigned checks.

On Tuesday, the Iowa City Police Department opened the investigation, which could lead to felony forged-check charges.

The investigation comes just days after a rash of complaints were made to the police department about solicitors who knock on doors in the Iowa City area.

The solicitors are people in their late teens and early 20s who say they are selling magazines to earn "points" for trips, college scholarships or charitable organizations.

The solicitors use a variety of tactics to lure residents out of money. Some convince their targets to turn over unsigned checks, saying the checks will never be cashed, but will allow the solicitor to earn "points."

Joe Weber, a UI student majoring in journalism, said a solicitor from World Wide Readers Service forged his signature on two checks for a total of $400. Weber said his roommate, Dennis Watts, turned two of Weber's unsigned checks over to the solicitors, who claimed to be from North Carolina, selling magazines to earn money from the WWRs corporation.

The solicitors, Watts said, told him not to sign the checks because WWRs would call at a later time to verify Watts still wanted to purchase the magazines. Watts was

"I lived in Chicago and I'm very suspicious. (The solicitor) said he was trying to get money for some trip, for some charitable organization. The thing that really gripped me was he said he wouldn't bill me."

UI alumnus Bobby Stearnes, who didn't fall for the scam told he could then refuse and never be charged.

But Tuesday, an employee at First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St., called to inform Weber he was overdrawn. His checks had been cashed at Great Western Bank in Lakewood, Fla., with a forged signature.

The WWRs corporation, based in Miami, has received an "unsatisfactory" rating by the Miami Better Business Bureau, because "a pattern of customer complaints causes concern."

Bobby Stearnes, a UI alumnus, said although he was visited and would have liked to subscribe to a magazine, he turned the solicitor down.

"I lived in Chicago and I'm very suspicious," he said. "(The solicitor) said he was trying to get money for some trip, for some charitable organization. The thing that really gripped me was he said he wouldn't bill me."

Subscription fraud

Tips to help you avoid magazine subscription fraud:

Order directly from the publisher.
Don't necessarily believe a salesperson represents the publisher or a charity organization.

The Federal Trade Commission's "cooling off rule" stipulates a consumer has three business days to cancel a purchase of $25 or more if bought from a home or a location that is not the seller's regular place of business.

For more information about the "cooling off rule" or to check out a company before making a purchase, contact the Better Business Bureau in Des Moines (515) 243-8137. To find out if complaints have been filed against a magazine seller or to file a complaint, contact the Consumer Protection Division in Des Moines at (515) 281-5926.

UI MUST RESPOND WITHIN 6 MONTHS

New charges filed by dental professors

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The UI could be back in court if officials do not respond to a new set of charges filed by three professors in the College of Dentistry.

The associate professors, who previously worked in the now-defunct UI dental hygiene program, are to be assigned new faculty jobs in the college, but the three say they have heard nothing since the program's May closing.

On Monday, lawyers for Elizabeth Pelton, Pauline Brine and Nancy Thompson filed an administrative prerequisite, a document preceding the filing of a lawsuit.

The three associate professors first sued the UI for discrimination in 1992, after officials announced the closing of the dental hygiene program, which was comprised entirely of women. Judge Celeste Bremer awarded the women more than $400,000 in compensatory damages and legal fees, but allowed the program to close.

Pelton said the fact that they

NICOTINE REGULATION CRUSADE WOULD END

Clinton considers anti-smoking drive

Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton may drop efforts to regulate nicotine as a drug if tobacco companies agree to fund a massive national campaign against teenage smoking, two congressmen said Tuesday.

The news comes as two federal criminal investigations get under way into whether tobacco industry executives lied to Congress and regulators about smoking and the addictiveness of nicotine.

The Food and Drug Administration and the White House are discussing ways to curb childhood smoking, including banning cigarette vending machines.

The plan given to Clinton Monday by Reps. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., and Charlie Rose, D-N.C., would go much further. Under the proposal, Clinton would negotiate a "memorandum of understanding" with every U.S. tobacco company in which the industry would provide funding for states to stop tobacco sales to minors. The actual figure has not been determined, but would probably be at least $100 million, officials said.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said Clinton is consider-

Serbs seize Zepa, Muslims flee

Samir Krilic

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Serb rebels marched into Zepa and sent thousands of Muslims fleeing into the woods Tuesday, capturing their second U.N. "safe area" in two weeks with no military response from the West.

See related story . . . . . Page 7A

On the same day as the Serbs' latest conquest in their assault on the isolated Muslim enclaves, their leaders were indicted by a U.N. court on charges of genocide and crimes against humanity during the 39-month war.

After seizing the Srebrenica "safe area" on July 11, Serb forces were accused of committing atrocities against civilians and captured government soldiers.

Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said Zepa residents had fled into the woods. He demanded they be evacuated under U.N. escort to prevent them from being harmed by the Serbs.

"That is the minimum that the United Nations can do," he said. "Any evacuation without the protection of UNPROFOR would mean sure death."

About 150 wounded were evacuated on Serb buses with U.N. escort toward Sarajevo Tuesday evening, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gerard Dubois.

Late Tuesday, U.N. officials in Tuzla said 21 busloads of civilians had left Zepa on Bosnian Serb buses on a five-hour drive to government lines at Kladanj. They were traveling without the U.N. escort requested by the Bosnian government for any evacuation, said Panos Moutetis of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

He estimated there were about 1,000 people aboard the buses.

Zepa, a remote mountainous enclave of 20 villages, had a population of 10,000-16,000 before the Serb onslaught.

There was no other word on the fate of the other civilians and Muslim-led government soldiers in the enclave. It was unclear how many villages have been

Puttin' on the Ritz requires less glitz

Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press

BOSTON — Maybe it was the change in weather. Maybe it was the change in fashion.

The folks at Boston's Ritz-Carlton are loosening their ties, allowing gentlemen guests to go without theirs.

The hotel that not too long ago showed a tieless mayor the door said it is bowing to the wishes of its customers — especially the big-spending baby-boomers.

Diners still are required to "put on the Ritz" at the hotel's dining room and the roof lounge, but the strict jacket-and-tie dress code has been relaxed in the café, the bar and the second-floor lounge. Ties and jackets are now "recommended," not required.

But don't get too comfortable: Wearers of jeans, T-shirts, shorts or sneakers still won't get a table.

The Ritz-Carlton's new policy, which took effect Monday, followed a survey of guests and staffers and a look at the fashion scene.

The survey found while people under 40 and in their 50s and 60s favored a stricter dress code, 40-something boomers liked informal-

Koresh's lawyers criticize FBI for refusing Waco negotiations

David Morris
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lawyers who represented Branch Davidian leader David Koresh offered a stinging criticism of the FBI Tuesday, saying agents rejected two plans to peacefully end the Waco standoff and mishandled negotiations at every step.

One of the lawyers, Jack Zimmermann, said agents on the scene agreed to one surrender plan but were overridden by "some deskbound bureaucrat in Washington."

The picture Zimmermann and lawyer Dick DeGuerin painted at congressional hearings was of an FBI that had no clue how to deal with Koresh and his Bible-quoting followers as they tried to negotiate an end to the standoff.

Richard Scruggs, an assistant to the attorney general, said the FBI acted properly in the face of Koresh's "lies and misrepresentations."

Zimmermann and DeGuerin, testifying on the fifth day of hearings into what went wrong at Waco, described agents who tried to earn the trust of those inside the compound, only to negate any progress by blasting loud music and driving the Davidians back to Koresh.

They also outlined two surrender plans, saying the FBI ignored one and reneged on the other.

The biggest mistake of all, DeGuerin suggested, was using tanks to poke holes in the compound while filling it with tear gas.

That move, he testified, played right into Koresh's "apocalyptic vision" of "giant beasts breathing

Forget your lease and live on the Pentacrest

Being a college student is great, isn't it? We get to expand our minds, party and meet new people, all while being independent and learning about the real world. I still think Puck from the "Real World" got the shaft.

In all reality, though, the real world is just a fantasy for most of us. You know what my biggest fantasy is? Having a landlord who's not out to screw me over.

It'll probably never happen, but after all the horror stories I've lived through and the ones I've heard from friends and acquaintances, I've come to one conclusion, with the help of Jello Biafra and the Dead Kennedys: Let's lynch the landlord.

Not all the landlords. (I learned in seventh grade you can't make absolute statements and be credible, and besides, I work for a landlord.) But I'd bet everyone has had some cantankerous old freak — man or woman — swindle them out of a deposit and even a decent living space.

The first issue is rent. It's too damn high. Who decided $450-$500 was a reasonable amount to charge a college student for a one bedroom apartment? And then charge extra when the student gets a roommate to defray costs? Ludicrous.

And how many college apartments are worth what students pay for them? One, maybe, but only if it had a keg on tap all the time and a free all-you-can-eat buffet every day.

And deposit? It's always nice when one has to plunk down anywhere from one to one-and-a-half month's rent in order to secure a place to live, which should probably be a right, not a privilege.

Oh yeah, a lot of college students I know have to pay $800 up front for a place to lay their head and throw up when they're drunk, or whatever students want to do.

I understand landlords invest in these properties and want to protect their investments. But taking a student's deposit should be reserved for serious problems, such as if the student stole the refrigerator or knocked out a wall.

How many people do you know who got their whole deposit back? I did once, and I've lived in seven Iowa City apartments. One guy gave me $8 back from the $208 I gave him. I was really insulted.

Do you know where my money went? Probably to his retirement fund. He was an unusual character to say the least. When he had something to tell me, this landlord never called — he sent the sheriff with a letter. I had to pay $15 a pop every time Smokey came by.

I found out on the third time that the sheriff thought my landlord was as big a tool as I did. Give that man a doughnut.

Of course, the guy also sent monthly newsletters to his tenants with inspirational messages on how we could all become better citizens. I'm an OK citizen, and besides, he'd have been better off sending an exterminator.

One guy who lived in the house waged a crusade against the roaches by eating them. But after the first one, he was so full he had to stop. I think he caught one to take home for Thanksgiving dinner, though.

Petty stuff is the landlord's favorite thing to get you for. Of course, when the landlord does get you, it's not petty. A friend of mine was told he had to have his carpet professionally cleaned, or the landlord would do it for him — at a cost of about $1,000,000. That's all right, the fee was about what Todd paid for his deposit, so he didn't have to pay extra.

How can it cost $20 to clean an oven? Or $50 to scrub a toilet? Even if it were full of excrement, I'd only charge $10. But landlords are a species all their own, except the ones who are landlords by day and have real jobs at night.

Petty stuff is the landlord's favorite thing to get you for. Of course, when the landlord does get you, it's not petty. A friend of mine was told he had to have his carpet professionally cleaned, or the landlord would do it for him — at a cost of about $1,000,000.

What is a student to do? Obviously killing the renter wouldn't do the job because there are always more greedy, money-grubbing scumbags to take the renter's place.

You could rent only from the good landlords, but how could 25,000 students fit into 50 apartments in town?

I think we could have Bill Clinton declare Iowa City rents a national disaster and maybe the National Guard could come and build reasonably priced apartments.

Hey, I've got it. Why don't we move into subsidized housing for the poor. What? The Iowa football team already rented all the apartments? Damn.

Now, I'm not much for extremism or activism, but I think we should organize a protest, and here's how it should go:

Every student in Iowa City should refuse to sign a lease. It won't work unless a majority of the students do it.

Then, everyone who comes back in the fall should pitch a tent on the Pentacrest. It would be great, we could all party (cause we'd save so much money by not paying rent), hang out and sing protest songs like "Screw off, AUR; this time you've gone way too far."

We'd all have great excuses for being late, like "Well, I live on the Pentacrest, and there's no electricity, so my alarm didn't go off." And we'd all have extra money for food.

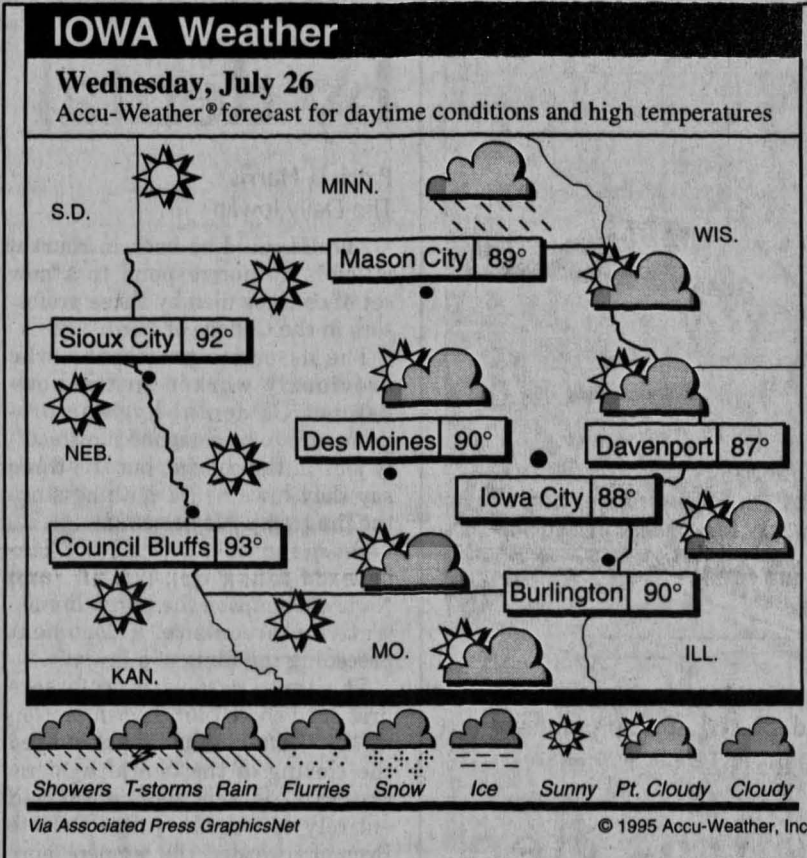

The UI would freak and maybe lean on the landlords to get cheaper apartments which are fit for human habitation. Yeah, right. The UI cares about students as much as the landlords do. Did I say something about money-grubbing before?

Well, anyway, if this protest gets off the ground, I'll see you all in the fall somewhere between Jessup and Macbride halls. And don't worry about eating — I'll bring the doughnuts.

Rocker's ethnic slur offends concertgoers

WEST BLOOMFIELD, Mich. (AP) — The lead singer of Blood, Sweat & Tears shocked an audience in this heavily Jewish suburb with a flip remark about the Holocaust.

Halfway through the show at Marshbank Park, David Clayton-Thomas provoked gasps from the crowd of about 3,000 when he said it was "as hot as the last train car going to Auschwitz," The Oakland Press of Pontiac reported Tuesday.

West Bloomfield Township is home to many of the Detroit area's 97,000 Jews.

Concert organizer Judith Share-Vine was at the show with her husband, George, an Auschwitz survivor. She called the remark "a very stupid thing to say."

About 3 million Jews died at the Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland during World War II.

Share-Vine said Clayton-Thomas' manager, Vincent Riccobono, apologized to her during the show Saturday, and told her he had spoken strongly to the singer.

Svelte Jerry Hall lands Betty Grable radio role

LONDON (AP) — Jerry Hall's long legs and blond hair helped her snag a role as Betty Grable — on BBC.

"Like the character she plays, she is blonde, sexy, has a sharp sense of humor — and the legs to carry it off," said Olivia Landsberg of Rewind Production, the show's director, without specifying how those attributes would help a radio production.

The Texas-born Hall, wife of Mick Jagger, will play Grable on a British Broadcasting Corp. radio biography to be broadcast in September.

Grable, whose legs were insured for a million dollars, was the most popular pinup girl for American soldiers fighting overseas in World War II. She retired from acting and modeling in the 1950s and died in 1973.

Fireman risks job to appear in film with porn star

NEW YORK (AP) — Cavorting on film with porn star Marilyn Chambers has made life a little too hot for a decorated fireman.

In the R-rated "Bikini Bistro," William Bresnan plays a restaurant critic seduced by Chambers, who starred in pornographic films in the 1970s.

Both appear bare-chested in the pay-per-view film showing on cable systems nationwide, the Daily News reported Tuesday.

Bresnan remains on active duty while the fire department investigates whether he broke rules by taking the job, spokesman Bob Leonard said. He declined to comment on the film.

The fourth-generation firefighter, who is married and has a child, won a medal for a rescue during the World Trade Center bombing in February 1993.

He could be suspended or fired.

UI profit in speech hearing studies

Moira Crowley
The Daily Iowan

The quality of programs research done in UI speech and hearing has given faculty members a reputation of excellence and international acclaim.

UI professors Bruce Gantz, Titze and Bruce Tomblin are three pioneers who are gaining in the field of cochlear implants, voice and speech impairment and children's language disorders.

Internationally recognized for use of cochlear implants to res hearing to deaf adults and children, Gantz helped establish a federally ported, multi-million dollar national clinical research center for cochlear implants at the UI College of Medicine and the UI Hospitals and Clinics in 1985.

Cochlear implants convert sound vibrations into electric signals that are transmitted to the brain, where they are perceived as sound. Gantz and his team found children who were born with hearing loss could learn how to develop speech language abilities from information transmitted electronically from the brain.

Scientific advancements in the field of voice and speech impairment have also been discovered at the UI labs.

Titze, who is a UI professor in the School of Music and Speech Pathology and Audiology, is also the director of the UI National Center for Voice Speech. The center, established in 1990, conducts research in the area of speech production and rehabilitation.

Concentrating on the molecular structure and biomechanics of the vocal chords, Titze identifies the differences between various speech disorders.

Titze and his colleagues are refining techniques for vocal chord surgery by conducting clinical studies to see how sound is produced when only one vocal chord is functioning instead of two.

"It is possible to produce sounds with one vocal fold, but it's not as easy as seeing with one eye or hearing with one ear," Titze said.

Speech and hearing research is limited to the UI laboratory and microscope. Professors also delve into the realm of psychology and genetics while studying speech pathology and audiology.

Tomblin, a professor of Speech Pathology and Audiology, studies children's language development and disorders and identifies factors placing children at risk for disorders, specifically genetics.

Tomblin will receive a five-year million grant from the National Institutes of Health to establish a new center in Iowa City for the study of Speech Language Impairment.

Gantz and his team found children who were deaf from birth benefit from the implants and learn how to develop speech and language abilities from information transmitted electronically from them.

Scientific advancements in the area of voice and speech impairment have also been discovered at the UI labs.

Titze, who is a UI professor in the School of Music and Speech Pathology and Audiology, is also the director of the UI National Center for Voice and Speech. The center, established in 1990, conducts research in the areas of speech production and rehabilitation.

Concentrating on the molecular structure and biomechanics of the vocal chords, Titze identifies the differences between various speech disorders.

Titze and his colleagues are also refining techniques for vocal chord surgery by conducting clinical studies to see how sound is produced when only one vocal chord is functioning, instead of two.

"It is possible to produce sounds with one vocal fold, but it's not as easy as seeing with one eye or hearing with one ear," Titze said.

Speech and hearing research is not limited to the UI laboratory and microscope. Professors also delve into the realm of psychology and genetics when studying speech pathology and audiology.

Tomblin, a professor of Speech Pathology and Audiology, studies children's language development and disorders and identifies factors placing children at risk for disorders, specifically genetics.

Tomblin will receive a five-year, $5 million grant from the National Institutes of Health to establish a new center in Iowa City for the study of Specific Language Impairment.

Liggins convicted of murder

Greg Smith

DUBUQUE — Jennifer Lewis' mother broke into tears as a Dubuque County jury ended five years of grief with a guilty verdict of first-degree murder against Stanley Carter Liggins.

"I'm glad they found Stanley guilty. He was always in the wrong. Jennifer had her day in court. She can rest in peace now," said Sheri Glenn, clutching a small picture of her smiling daughter sitting on top of a horse with other children.

Liggins, who had disrupted the court twice during the 12-day first-degree murder trial, showed no emotion as 10 sheriff's deputies were stationed around the courtroom when the murder verdict was read shortly after 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Jurors deliberated a total of 11 1/2 hours, including eight on Tuesday.

Liggins, 33, of Rock Island, Ill., sat forward in his chair, his chin in his hands when the jury was immediately polled by district court judge James Kelley.

"Was that and is that your verdict?" the judge asked each of the six men and six women on the jury.

"Yes," each responded.

Kelley set sentencing for 8:30 a.m. Aug. 10 in Davenport. A first-degree murder conviction carries a mandatory life sentence in Iowa.

Lewis died Sept. 17, 1990, four days before her 10th birthday, after she disappeared from a store in her Rock Island neighborhood. Her body, wrapped in a plastic bag, was doused with gasoline and found burning near a Davenport elementary school she had once attended.

Liggins was convicted in 1993 by a Scott County jury, but the first-degree murder conviction was overturned late last year by the Iowa Supreme Court. Kelley moved the trial from Davenport to Dubuque a month ago when he discovered an impartial jury couldn't be found to hear the trial.

Scott County attorney Bill Davis, who prosecuted the 1993 trial, stood next to assistant county attorney Julie Walton and both appeared subdued after the verdict.

"These are sad things. A little girl dies; wrecks that family; a young man goes to prison in the prime of his life. But this is justice.

"I feel satisfied. I feel Julie and I have done a professional job, as have every police officer on this case," Davis said.

Defense attorney J.E. "Mike" Tobey said he grew more encouraged as the 5 p.m. deadline approached, which meant the jury would have been sent home for the day.

Jurors met at 9 a.m. and asked the court attendant to clear the courtroom so they could see Liggins' 1983 Peugeot that's been sitting a few feet away from the defense table the past two weeks. Prosecution witnesses had placed the French-made car either at the scene or driving away from the scene where Lewis' body was found.

Jurors spent six minutes looking at the car and then went back to their jury room. They also had four questions throughout the day for attorneys and Kelley, which indicated at least some dissension in the jury room.

Downtown rally to honor American disabilities act

Kristine Crane

A commemorative rally and candlelight vigil tonight in the Pedestrian Mall will celebrate the fifth anniversary of the Americans With Disabilities Act.

The Johnson County Coalition for Persons with Disabilities and the Evert Conner Rights and Resources Center for Independent Living are sponsoring a candlelight vigil beginning at 7:30 p.m. next to Godfather's Pizza in the Pedestrian Mall.

Ethel Madison, executive director of the Evert Conner Center, said she hopes the event will increase community awareness of the needs of disabled people, as well as motivate disabled individuals to fight for their rights.

"I would like to see another 300 people knocking on our door, asking what their rights are," she said.

The act, enacted on July 26, 1990, provides disabled rights for employment, government, public areas and telecommunications.

The act gave the disabled population a great sense of security, Madison said.

"(The act) brings attention to changes the community needs and gives a sense of power to persons with disabilities," she said. "With legislation backing them up, they don't have to sit at home and wish anymore."

Tonight's event begins an annual public celebration of the act. Last year, Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., celebrated it with a poetry reading, during which disabled persons exclusively read.

This year, the ceremony will begin with the presentation of an award to Sahara restaurant, 320 E. Burlington St. The Public Accommodations Committee visited about 20 local restaurants, coffee shops and bars and noted accessibility. Sahara topped them all with its wide doors, level floors, wide aisles and menus both in Braille and on tape, Madison said.

Other businesses were eager to hear the committee's suggestions for increasing accessibility, she said. Eventually, the committee will publish its findings in a pamphlet.

However, Madison said Iowa City is still far from being completely accessible.

"The curb cuts are so dangerous because people can fall off their wheelchairs and be laying in the street," she said. "Heaven forbid that happen at night when no one is around. Also, transportation is inadequate if vehicles are without lifts."

Miya Rodolfo-Sioson, a member of the Johnson County Coalition, said the Iowa City community generally treats disabled people well. Having such a large disabled population in Johnson County — estimated at 1,000 for the blind and mobility-disabled alone — increases acceptance, she said.

But prejudiced attitudes are still rampant, particularly with the use of euphemistic language, Madison said. "I hate special needs," she said. "They don't have special needs. They just have a need like everyone else. That's not special."

However, Madison said the Speakers Bureau, a branch of the Evert Conner Center, is helping to educate the community. The group of five disabled individuals speaks to community groups, and since the group's existence, people have increasingly volunteered, she said.

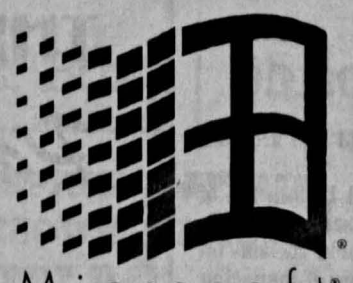

Tonight's activities also include a keynote address by Maurice Peret, a member of the United Auto Workers and the National Federation for the Blind; testimonies from people with disabilities; and the reading of a poem called "You and I," which contrasts life inside and outside an institution for the disabled, Madison said. The evening will conclude with a candlelight vigil in memory of disability civil rights leaders.

Man imprisoned in trunk kills carjacker with stashed pistol

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — After Carl Lee Reese carjacked a Lexus at a car wash and forced the driver into the trunk, police say he apparently had a second thought: What if the driver had a cellular phone in his pocket?

Reese stopped the Lexus and opened the trunk. But the driver didn't have a phone — he had two pistols stashed in his trunk.

When Reese didn't heed Paul Brite's orders to lie down and act as if he was reaching for a gun, Brite killed him Monday morning with a shot to the abdomen, police said.

An accomplice who was following the Lexus in a station wagon tried to run over Brite, 53. He fired a round at the station wagon and it sped away.

Reese, 21, died at a hospital. He had been arrested for two other carjackings and was wanted for a robbery parole violation.

His cousin and roommate, 17-year-old Mario Danele Sikes, was arrested shortly after the shooting in a vehicle matching the wagon's description. Police planned to charge him with theft, kidnapping and possibly felony murder for participating in a kidnapping which resulted in the death of his cousin, said Sgt. Jeff Maslan.

When Reese stopped in an upscale Fort Lauderdale neighborhood to open the trunk, he left his gun in the car. Brite may not have realized the assailant was unarmed and emerged with his semiautomatic pistol and a .357-caliber Magnum, Maslan said.

"He ordered the suspect several times to lie on the ground, firing two warning shots," Maslan said.

After recounting his ordeal to police, Brite wasn't talking to the media.

Judge reinstates firefighter hiring privileges to Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge returned control of firefighter hiring to the city after 21 years of court supervision resulting from a racial discrimination lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge James Alesia cleared the way Monday for the city's first firefighter entrance exam in 10 years. More than half of the 34,000 applicants who have signed up to take the test today and Thursday are African-American or Hispanic, city officials said.

Officials said they would wait to see the racial breakdown of the top scorers before deciding whether to hire applicants in order by score or to conduct a lottery from a larger pool of qualified candidates.

Of the city's 4,000 firefighters, 71 percent are white, 21 percent are black and 8 percent are Hispanic. According to 1990 census, Chicago's population is 39 percent black and 20 percent Hispanic.

Attorney: Doctor failed to assess abortion clinic killer's competence

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — A prosecutor in the case of two abortion clinic killings accused a psychiatrist of favoring a mental incompetence diagnosis in cases where defendants refuse to cooperate with their lawyers.

John C. Salvi III, accused of killing two abortion clinic receptionists, suffers from schizophrenia and delusions, Dr. Philip Resnick has said.

Prosecutor John Kivlan said Tuesday Resnick did not address whether Salvi was able to stand trial, only that he was not being cooperative in preparing for trial.

Kivlan got Resnick to acknowledge he decided Salvi was incompetent to stand trial before he spoke with or read a report by a state psychiatrist.

Salvi, 24, of Hampton, N.H., is charged in the Dec. 30 shootings at two abortion clinics in the Boston suburb of Brookline. Two people were killed and five other workers were wounded.

Salvi says he is competent to stand trial and would accept the death penalty if convicted.

DEFENSE COUNTERED

Witness: Chemical data won't help case

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The battle of blood experts heated up at O.J. Simpson's trial Tuesday with an FBI chemist insisting his tests on evidence didn't confirm enough preservative to support a defense frame-up theory.

"I believe my data has been misinterpreted by somebody else and I wanted to prove that," said Roger Martz, countering a defense expert's testimony that the chemical used in police lab test tubes was present on blood from a sock and a gate.

But Martz also seemed to contradict himself, first saying the chemical compound he found in crucial bloodstains was "consistent" with the preservative EDTA, then saying he saw no evidence of EDTA in the samples. The preservative, which is found in many food and household products, is used in labs to prevent blood clotting.

Simpson's defense says EDTA on that evidence supports its theory that blood was planted by police conspirators to frame Simpson for the murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend, Ronald Goldman.

Blood that Simpson voluntarily gave police the day after the murders was stored in test tubes containing the chemical, as was blood drawn by the coroner from the victims' bodies.

Prosecution experts have said blood consistent with Brown Simpson's was on the sock found near Simpson's bed, and blood consistent with Simpson's was on the gate at the murder scene.

The defense, which subpoenaed Martz to testify, argued that if EDTA was present in evidence blood, that was a powerful sign the blood was planted. But prosecutors say EDTA can be found naturally in blood. They say the levels found in the evidence blood are so low as to be insignificant.

So in the space of two days, the two defense witnesses clashed on the scientifically obscure issue.

Fredric Rieders, a defense toxicologist, didn't do the actual tests, but he reviewed the FBI agent's results and concluded EDTA was present on the sock and the gate.

Martz admitted he had never before tested for the presence of EDTA in blood, and as defense attorney Robert Blasier quizzed him on terms such as "parent ions" and "daughter ions," confusion mounted.

At first, a soft-spoken Martz testified his sophisticated chemical tests detected a substance appearing to be the preservative.

"It responded like EDTA responded," Martz said.

"Is it consistent with the presence of EDTA?" asked Blasier.

"Yes," Martz said.

But minutes later, Martz returned from a break with an assertive demeanor and said he wanted to set the record straight.

"I am not convinced EDTA is on that sock, and I want to make that perfectly clear," he declared. "Every one is saying I found EDTA. I never said that."

"These stains were not from preserved blood," he continued.

"I was able to determine on the first day there was not EDTA present ... in the amount you would find in preserved blood," he said.

Blasier suggested because the prosecution requested the EDTA tests, Martz had already decided — before he did the tests — they should show no EDTA was found.

Although his testimony could hurt Simpson, the defense was forced to call Martz because its own expert, Rieders, based all of his testimony on Martz's tests.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark had threatened to move for exclusion of all of Rieders' testimony if Martz was not called.

"It's a very strange phenomena to see the defense put on two witnesses who in succession impeach each other," Southwestern University law professor Robert Pugsley said. "I have to believe that this is confusing to the jury."

Jurors listened and occasionally took notes, but some furrowed their brows when charts were shown and the testimony veered off into scientific jargon.

Rieders, who was under cross-examination when court recessed Monday, was excused until Friday because of a personal appointment in his home state of Pennsylvania.

In another development, prosecutors sought to bar defense testimony about whether Detective Mark Fuhrman, who found bloody gloves at the crime scene and at Simpson's estate, is a racist. They filed a motion saying the defense has "abysmally failed" to show Fuhrman planted evidence against the black former football star.

"Despite defense promises to the contrary, they have failed to come up with any evidence that Detective Fuhrman either had the opportunity to plant the glove or that he actually did so," the motion said. "Consequently, whether or not he is a racist ... would add nothing to the jury's determination of the defendant's guilt."

Also, lead defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. was due in a North Carolina court Friday, seeking to enforce a subpoena of Laura Hart McKinny, a screenwriting professor who interviewed Fuhrman and other Los Angeles police officers about their jobs.

WEIGHT OF RAUNCHY CONVERSATIONS DEBATED

Attorneys paint conflicting portraits of Reynolds

James Webb
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The sex-abuse trial of U.S. Rep. Mel Reynolds is a tale of tapes filled with raunchy language between the congressman and a teenage girl — both sides agree on that.

The jury must decide whether those telephone conversations mean Reynolds is a sexual predator who schemed to cover his crimes or a man whose weakness for phone sex was trumped up into felony charges.

Prosecutor Andrea Zopp quoted extensively from the police tapes in her opening statement Monday, suggesting they catch the 43-year-old congressman discussing sexual encounters with former campaign worker Beverly Heard when she was 16 and 17.

Defense attorneys say Reynolds is guilty of nothing more than fantasizing with Heard, now 19.

"He does like to talk sex on the telephone," said defense attorney Sam Adam. "It is a turn-on for him. I suggest to you, whether you like it or not, it's not illegal."

Testimony in the case opened this morning and jurors could hear the tapes themselves as early as Tuesday.

"It's unbelievable that police officers in this time and age are taping private conversations and not doing their jobs," Reynolds' wife, Marisol, said as the couple entered the courtroom Tuesday.

On Monday, Marisol Reynolds listened impassively while Zopp read transcripts in which Reynolds discussed his and Heard's genitalia.

In another conversation, Reynolds and Heard discuss in graphic detail Heard's sexual relationship with her lesbian lover, and Reynolds asked if Heard and her lover would be interested in having sex with him.

N.J. high court upholds sex offender policy

Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — New Jersey's Supreme Court Tuesday upheld the state's Megan's Law, ruling it is constitutional to require a convicted sex offender to notify a community he lives there.

However, the high court agreed with a lower court ruling in February that an impartial review is required before authorities can decide which sex offenders warrant community notification and to what extent residents should be warned about them.

And a federal judge has ruled the law unconstitutional; that ruling is still under appeal.

The law is named for 7-year-old Megan Kanka, who was sexually assaulted and strangled on July 29, 1994, her body left in a park near her home. A former sex offender who had moved into a house across the street from the girl's home was charged.

5-YEAR-OLD POINTS OUT DRUG STASH WHEREABOUTS

Child gets death threat for aiding police

Associated Press

NEW CASSEL, N.Y. — Five-year-old Arno Sorto wants to be a policeman when he grows up. For now, he's under police protection, an informant in a drug arrest and allegedly the target of a death threat.

Arno was playing on the street when he saw police arresting a marijuana dealer. He showed them where the man had left his stash.

One day later, police said, a friend of the dealer approached the boy, pulled a knife, fingered the blade and said: "For squealing you are going to get your throat cut."

Arno drew a small finger across his neck as he imitated the man Tuesday in his family's tiny apartment in a ramshackle Long Island neighborhood.

"They are bad. They are very bad," Arno said of the neighborhood's small-time drug dealers. The boy, whose parents are from El Salvador, spoke in Spanish and a family friend interpreted.

Police have increased patrols and installed a "panic button" — a device resembling a walkie-talkie that would signal a problem to officers — in the two-room apartment where the Sortos and their five children live. The family has no phone.

Arno's trouble began last Thursday, when detectives arrested a 25-year-old man suspected of selling 55 bags of marijuana on a street corner.

As the suspect was being handcuffed, the boy showed police where the dealer had hid 67 more "nickel bags," said Anthony Vessa, a Nassau County police deputy inspector.

After police left, more than 20 men gathered outside the Sortos' home in a two-story brick apartment building, threatening and insulting them, said Arno's father, Diego Sorto, 48.

The next morning, Diego Sorto said, a youth who sells drugs in the area tried to run his son down with a bicycle. Then the apartment's owner told the family that a woman had urged their eviction, saying the boy was costing the dealers money.

The boy's mother, Anna Sorto, 33, added a man dropped his pants and mooned the boy.

After the threat involving the knife, Arno ran home and his father called police. As detectives took statements, the boy looked out the window and spotted the man he said had accosted him, Vessa said.

Police arrested Paul Dillon, 27, of New Cassel, and confiscated a knife, Vessa said. Dillon was held Tuesday on $10,000 bail, on charges of menacing and weapons possession.

Diego Sorto said he would move his family out of New Cassel. "I fear for my life," he said.

Anna Sorto said she lets Arno out of the apartment only when she's with him.

Still, they are proud of their son, who was raised to believe drugs are evil.

"Every time he sees people selling marijuana, he runs to me and wants to call the police," Anna Sorto said. "Maybe this will help clean up the streets."

The father added: "He always runs to greet the police and they are happy to see him ... He said to a detective that usually comes around, 'I want to grow up to be just like you.'"

The 3-foot-tall aspiring policeman was asked if he considers himself a hero.

"I am brave," he replied.

Boys' father weeps on witness stand

Christopher Sullivan
Associated Press

UNION, S.C. — Susan Smith's ex-husband broke down sobbing Tuesday as he told the jury how all his dreams for his sons died when he learned his estranged wife had drowned the boys.

"Everything I had planned — teaching them to play ball, taking them fishing, teaching them to ride bikes, watching them go to school the first day, watching them grow up — all that has been ripped from me," said David Smith, tears streaming down his face.

Three of the 12 jurors who will decide whether to sentence Susan Smith to life in prison or death also wept during the wrenching testimony. Several times, Smith herself leaned over the defense table and cried.

At one point, as Smith tried to compose himself during a recess, she whispered, "I'm so sorry, David." He did not respond.

Smith has said he believes his wife, who was convicted Saturday of two counts of murder, should be executed. Her lawyers hope to persuade the jury to sentence her to life in prison instead.

Circuit Judge William Howard ruled Tuesday that the jurors may see a videotape in which investigators reenacted the crime, pushing a car into a lake, as Smith did with her sons inside. It took nearly six minutes for the car to sink during the re-enactment.

Susan Smith's lawyers argued unsuccessfully that the video, shot during daylight, would unfairly inflame jurors by falsely suggesting she witnessed the same scene when her car sank in darkness on Oct. 25.

Her lawyers had been expected to grill her ex-husband about his taking a $20,000 advance for a book on the case, as well as allegations he had abused her during their marriage. But they decided not to question him.

Anticipating the cross-examination, prosecutor Tommy Pope brought up the issues himself.

"Did you write that book to make money off your children?" he asked David Smith.

Smith said no, he hoped the book would return the public's focus to his dead sons.

"So many people were portraying Susan as the victim," he said.

While he took the $20,000

Alexander, 14 months, and Michael Smith, 3, are shown in this file photo taken the month before their death in October 1994. While testifying at Susan Smith's sentencing hearing Tuesday, the boys' father broke down in tears.

advance, he said he planned to give the royalties, as much as $300,000, to children's charities.

The couple's divorce became final in May while Susan Smith, 23, sat in prison awaiting trial. But David Smith told jurors of a marriage that turned rocky even before their second child was born.

Once, he said, when he came home late from work and his wife threatened to return to her mother, he told her she should leave right then.

"Shamefully, I did grab Susan by her arms and just more or less dragged her out of the bed and out to the front porch," he said. "(I) didn't throw her down or anything, just let her down on the porch."

Smith began to cry when Pope asked how he felt when he saw the sheriff announce on television Nov. 3 that Smith had confessed to drowning 3-year-old Michael and his 14-month-old brother, Alex, by rolling her car into John D. Long Lake with the boys inside.

She had maintained for more than a week a black carjacker had abducted the boys, and Smith said he had believed her.

"All my hopes, all my dreams, everything that I had planned for the rest of my life, it ended that day," he said.

"He does like to talk sex on the telephone. It is a turn-on for him. I suggest to you, whether you like it or not, it's not illegal."

Defense attorney Sam Adam

Zopp apologized to jurors before she began recounting the conversations. "It's not my language," she said. "It's the language that Congressman Reynolds chose to use with Beverly Heard in his conversation."

As Zopp talked, Reynolds stared down at the defense table and occasionally took notes.

Reynolds is charged with criminal sexual assault, aggravated criminal sexual abuse, child pornography and obstruction of justice for allegedly trying to derail the investigation.

The black second-term Democrat has claimed he is the target of a racial and political vendetta by Cook County State's Attorney Jack O'Malley, a white Republican.

The tapes' importance is magnified because Heard, who accused

Reynolds last summer and consented to having her conversations with him taped, recanted her accusations nearly seven months ago, saying her statements were coerced by investigators.

Prosecutors contend Reynolds orchestrated the recantation. Circuit Judge Fred Suria Jr. barred prosecutors from raising that allegation during opening statements. Adam recounted Reynolds' rise from humble beginnings in tiny Mound Bayou, Miss., and argued he was on trial as a result of "outrageous pressure" on Heard.

"The question is not whether you like him, not whether you'd vote for him," Adam said, "but whether they can prove him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt."

Smith began to cry when Pope asked how he felt when he saw the sheriff announce on television Nov. 3 that Smith had confessed to drowning 3-year-old Michael and his 14-month-old brother, Alex, by rolling her car into John D. Long Lake with the boys inside.

She had maintained for more than a week a black carjacker had abducted the boys, and Smith said she had believed her.

"All my hopes, all my dreams, everything that I had planned for the rest of my life, it ended that day," he said.

MULTIMEDIA INC. TO BE BOUGHT

Gannett plans to expand

It has been said information is power, and the Gannett Company has proved the veracity of that statement by publicizing its intention to buy Multimedia Inc.

The acquisition of Multimedia will make Gannett, a communications giant, significantly larger and more diverse. The move is one of the first in a trend that will likely snowball as restrictions on media ownership are loosened by the proposed deregulation of the telecommunications industry currently being considered by Congress.

Many critics of deregulation fear what Gannett is doing — essentially monopolizing the flow of information. Gannett's chief business is now and will remain newspapers. The company owns USA Today, The Des Moines Register and many other papers as well as the nation's largest outdoor advertising company. As a business move, the deal makes perfect sense and has been lauded by industry analysts on Wall Street. From the standpoint of the media consumer, the deal is more than a little frightening.

Broadcasting currently makes up only 10 percent of Gannett's total revenue. At Multimedia, broadcasting and cable television make up nearly 50 percent of total revenue. The acquisition of Multimedia will broaden Gannett's influence in the sphere of television beyond what is legal by federal law.

Federal communications law mandates no single company can own more than 12 stations at once, yet by way of its Multimedia deal, Gannett will own 15 television stations — and that figure does not include cable. Apparently, Gannett's executives are confident Congress will approve deregulation. Ironically, the most visible part of Multimedia's holdings — its syndicated programs, which include "Donahue," "Jerry Springer," "The Rush Limbaugh Show" and "The Dennis Praeger Show" — is seen as its most vulnerable, as many of the shows are considered past their prime. Obviously Gannett is not concerned with the syndication interest because it has offered a hefty $1.7 billion to acquire Multimedia.

Earlier this year, mergers were proposed between CBS and Disney and other media outlets. Now, Gannett is to acquire Multimedia. Is the trend obvious? Large companies with vast amounts of capital are the only ones who can compete in the arena of information control. If the theory sounds paranoid, it is rightly so.

What the deal for Multimedia indicates is a shrinking sphere of control in a business dictating how people think. Ultimately, what this means is less choice for the consumer and more control for the industry giants who have the money to play the game.

BECOMING A THING OF THE PAST?

Affirmative action needed

Last Thursday, the University of California Board of Regents, under the strong encouragement of California Gov. Pete Wilson, put an end to all race- and gender-based admissions and hiring policies. In Wilson's opinion, "students at the University of California should achieve distinction without the use of the kind of preferences that have been in place."

The reason for wanting to end affirmative action programs is understandable. People should be hired and admitted to colleges based on credentials, not on race or gender. A person can look great on paper, but when a prejudiced individual sees an African-American applicant in person, all rationale goes out the window. If the person feels African-Americans are inferior, he or she would never consider allowing that person into the environment.

As a result of the board's actions, the Justice Department will take a closer look at the state of California to determine whether federal grant money and contracts will be affected by the decision, according to a Monday Daily Iowan article ("UC end to affirmative action opposed").

This is not something California can really handle. According to a Sunday, July 16 Chicago Tribune story, "California dreaming" is ending. The state which once enticed thousands to move there every year is now plagued by high unemployment rates, overcrowded schools and severe budget problems. The article said in Los Angeles County alone, an estimated $1.2 billion budget exists for the third year in a row. California can hardly stand to lose much-needed grant money from the federal government.

It seems affirmative action is most needed by California, a state where dozens of ethnicities live. Because of its proximity to the Mexican border, the state is composed of 22.5 percent Hispanics over 18. Asians are another 8.9 percent, and African-Americans make up 6.7 percent of the state population of legal adults.

While President Clinton remains strong about his desire to maintain affirmative action, opponents are working to end the program. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., called affirmative action discrimination and preferential treatment. Wilson is calling to "end it. You can't mend it."

The end to affirmative action at the University of California is the first step in the wrong direction. Other schools may soon follow, along with states and then the entire country. If a Republican wins the 1996 presidential election, affirmative action will become a thing of the past, and so will many jobs for women and minorities.

No more school for me — I want some plants

I've reached that age. I never thought I'd get here, but I have. I've finally hit the age where I am sick and tired of being a professional student. I don't want to sit on second-hand couches anymore. I don't even want to hear the word futon, let alone sleep on one. And if I have to eat one more Ramen noodle, I swear I'm going to kill someone. No matter where I live, it always seems too small. No matter how much money I save, it's never enough. No matter how much I spend on groceries, I'm still hungry.

I want a stocked fridge. I want a big apartment with a view. I want a mattress that doesn't sag, a mahogany desk and a carpet with padding underneath. I want a television that isn't older than me, I want a coffee table with magazines on it and I want a fish tank that doesn't have beer cans floating in it. I want windows with screens. I want walls that aren't spackled. I want air conditioning. Not to be fruity or anything, but I want some plants. Nothing flowery or anything, but a fern here and there would be nice. I want to start making some coin.

I didn't always feel this way. In fact, not even a year ago I told my parents I knew exactly what I wanted to do with my life: I wanted to go to graduate school. Even though I told them I wanted to be a writer, I really just wanted to stick around for a while and hide out from the real world. At that point, I could've gone to grad school for underwater basket weaving and it would've been fine with me. Anything would've been better than working. But somewhere along the line, my life philosophy changed and I figured it was about time I got a job.

Not that I'd never had a job, mind you. Counting writing for The Daily Iowan (it's not a job, it's an adventure), I've had 12 different jobs. I've caddied, worked at Burger King and ushered at an amphitheater. I've worked at a grocery store, a video store and a department store. I've worked in a warehouse and a bank. I even worked at United Parcel Service for 27 minutes. I didn't like any of those jobs, though. I want something for which I wouldn't mind dragging myself out of bed. I want something cool.

Having Brian "Kato" Kaelin's job would be cool, too. I'm not exactly sure what he does, but I hear he hasn't paid rent since the '70s.

Having David Letterman's job would be cool. Come on, what does this guy do, anyway? He throws a few pencils, tells a few jokes and asks a few questions — and makes $6 trillion a minute. How hard can that be? I figure all I'd have to do is say a few tasteless things about Hugh Grant, make fun of CBS, put a camera on a dog's head and I'm in like Flynn. If my ratings start to sag — and Jay Leno starts to catch up — no problem. I'll just send my mom to Europe and tell her to stand in front of Stonehenge with a silly grin on her face. Piece of cake.

Having Brian "Kato" Kaelin's job would be cool, too. I'm not exactly sure what he does, but I hear he hasn't paid rent since the '70s.

Maybe I'll be on "Friends." That would be a pretty cool job. All the actors do is sit around in expensive clothes and say clever things. I could do that, because all I do now is sit around in cheap clothes and say stupid things, so training me wouldn't be very hard.

I could join the real world by joining MTV's "Real World." Now that would be the life. They set you up in some hip city in a cool house, absolutely rent free (maybe that's what Kato does). All you have to do is argue with everyone about stupid stuff. After about two months, you throw someone out, get a new roomie and take a first-class vacation paid for by the network. That I could do.

I think the coolest job, though, and the one I'm really shooting for would be Ann Landers' job. The old, toothless woman just sits around all day and reads mail from losers. When she feels like it, she answers a few letters with some terrible advice. The woman writes a total of seven sentences per day and is a national celebrity. She probably doesn't even read those letters; there's probably some intern somewhere wading through thousands of misspelled and unreadable letters while Ann plays bridge or does whatever you do when you get that old.

I used to worry about growing up and getting a job. It used to scare the hell out of me, but the more I think about it, the better it sounds.

This time journalists oppose full disclosure

The Washington media stars are upset because they have been tweaked by the U.S. Senate.

It's the kind of Beltway story that normal Americans don't care about, but gets Capitol insiders all twittering.

The Senate did this by passing a measure that would require journalists who cover Congress to reveal their moonlighting income.

This was obviously aimed at the big name newspaper columnists and TV blowhards who are paid enormous fees by special interest groups to make speeches.

It's a touchy subject that has been picking up steam since Jim Warren, The Chicago Tribune's Washington bureau chief, began writing about it in his Sunday column.

He introduced the now-popular "Cokie Watch," which detailed the conventions and trade organizations that pay Cokie Roberts $30,000 for name-dropping speeches about what's really going on in Washington.

And, of course, Sam Donaldson, at $25,000 for prolonged babble, and members of the McGoofy Group, "Crossfire" and all the other Washington heavies, who get from $5,000 to $20,000 for their insights into the great issues of the day.

Inspired by Warren's disclosures, the Senate said it would be only fair for journalists to reveal their outside income, since members of Congress have to do the same.

That way, if a journalist takes a speaking fee from a trade association and later writes something nice about that industry, the Senate will know a conflict of interest exists.

And if there is a field in which members of Congress are world-class experts, it is conflict of interest.

Naturally, the journalists have indignantly responded that they are not public officials, but are employed in the private sector.

That's true. Journalists are not paid by the taxpayers. If we were, we'd all be living under bridges. Nor do media creatures have to take oaths of office, pass license exams to practice our trade or even promise to always be good boys and girls and never, ever tell a lie or Santa won't come.

Which is why the Senate measure is silly. Journalists are not any different than bicycle messengers, busboys, punch-press operators or cabdrivers. Wait, that's a mistake. Cabdrivers have to be licensed and pass a test.

True, it has been said journalists have a special public trust. I don't know about that. If we have a public trust, how come the public doesn't trust us?

So the Senate has no more business asking journalists to disclose their outside income than anyone else who works in the private sector.

But there's no reason for Washington journalists to get so huffy about it.

One indignant congressional correspondent said: "This is clearly an assault on the freedom of the press. A reporter's qualifications, income and outside interests are matters between that reporter and his or her publisher or news director. They are not the business of the U.S. Senate."

That's probably true. But on the other hand, modern journalists risk sounding foolish when they talk about anything not being someone else's business.

There's very little considered private by today's transom-peeking, hamper-sniffing media. If teams of sleuths can trail politicians to see who they are sleeping with, what's wrong with asking the McGoofy Group how many thousands they were paid to get on a stage and make public fools of themselves?

To prove my sincerity, even though I don't cover the Senate, I will voluntarily disclose how much I have made in public speaking fees over the past decade.

My fees amount to exactly $0.00, give or take a zero or two.

That's because I don't make speeches for money.

My feeling is that 50 cents is a fair price for my column, especially since the paper includes all sorts of news, many more erudite columnists, comics, sports, crossword puzzles, obituaries, theater reviews, recipes, ads and much, much more.

For 50 cents, that's a good deal.

But if anyone offered me the awesome bundles that Sam and Cokie and the other Washington darlings pocket, I'd have them restrained and put under observation for their own good.

Besides, the Senate is just pulling the media's chain. Now there will be pompous editorials and screaming matches on the loudmouth public affairs shows. Then it will be forgotten and the Washington media stars and the senators will show up at the same dinner parties, do some back-slapping and have a hearty laugh.

And that is the inside story, which didn't cost you a nickel extra.

GOP: End U.S. embargo on Bosnia

John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Struggling for control over foreign policy, President Clinton warned Senate Republicans on Tuesday that lifting the embargo on arms shipments to Bosnia would be a "futile effort" that might draw America into the bloody ethnic conflict.

"Unilateral lift means unilateral responsibility," Clinton said in a letter to Capitol Hill, referring to congressional demands for the United States to act on its own to help the beleaguered Bosnians defend themselves. "Congress would undermine efforts to achieve a negotiated settlement in Bosnia and could lead to an escalation of the conflict there."

But lawmakers frustrated by continued rebel Serb aggression in Bosnia and dissatisfied with last weekend's NATO response appeared bent on following the House vote earlier this year overwhelmingly in favor of ending U.S. participation in the U.N. embargo.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Secretary of Defense William Perry held what Christopher called a "spirited" meeting of the Senate Democratic caucus to explain administration policy. Christopher said the Senate was acting "in an atmosphere of enormous frustration."

Republicans, meanwhile, emerged from their floor strategy session saying the Clinton administration had lost control of foreign policy.

"If it were not for a near vacuum of leadership on all foreign policy issues, the president probably would not be faced with this repudiation," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz.

The Clinton administration responded that if the Republican-led Congress wants to take over Bosnia policy, it must be prepared to accept the consequences. The point was aimed particularly at Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., co-sponsor of the proposal to lift the embargo. Unlike many Senate actions on foreign policy issues, the measure was not just sense-of-the-Senate resolution but a binding bill.

Oneir and others in Saint-Michel Place said they didn't hear the blast, which occurred deep underground.

Interior Minister Jean-Louis Debré ordered heightened security at both of the capital's airports — Charles de Gaulle and Orly — and other possible targets, including border crossings, public buildings and transportation facilities.

President Jacques Chirac and Prime Minister Alain Juppe rushed to the scene.

Since most of the victims suffered leg injuries, police said the device apparently was hidden beneath a seat on the train.

About 60 people were hurt, more than a dozen seriously. Juppe said four people were killed.

Two people were trapped inside the wreckage and firefighters worked to remove them, the spokesman said.

Anti-terrorism investigators probed the site of the explosion. Witnesses were quoted by French TV as saying they smelled gunpowder after the blast.

"There are so many terrible things happening in the world today that we could have been a target for any one of them," said a bystander, Jean-Luc Remurier.

launch an attack and the question is whether or not the Congress will stand by and watch the Bosnian government be overrun," Christopher said. Perry warned of "a humanitarian catastrophe."

White House press secretary Mike McCurry was even more blunt, saying Republicans "will take on the responsibility, if we lift this arms embargo unilaterally, of telling Bosnian mothers why there's no humanitarian aid for their children."

The U.N. Security Council imposed an arms embargo on the former Yugoslavia in 1991 in an attempt to prevent an escalation of the fighting in the Balkans.

Dole argues it merely established a built-in military advantage for rebel Bosnian Serb forces and their sponsors in neighboring Serbia.

"We have an obligation to the Bosnian people and to our principles to allow a U.N. member state — the victim of aggression — defend itself," said Dole.

At Clinton's request, Dole last week delayed Senate action pending completion of last weekend's London conference among the NATO allies. The United States, France, Britain, Russia and other participants agreed to warn the Bosnian Serbs against attacking the U.N. safe area of Gorazde. Perry said the warning could be followed up with widespread, "disproportionate" air strikes against the rebel Serbs.

But the question of whether civilian U.N. officials still can veto the air strikes — a constant problem in the international response in Bosnia — remains unresolved.

"The London meeting did not result in significant changes in approach," said Dole. "It essen-

BOMBING WEAKENED PUBLIC SUPPORT

Israeli authorities anxious to resume PLO peace talks

Dafna Linzer

Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Despite calls to reconsider the peace process after a deadly bombing in Tel Aviv, Israeli officials expressed urgency Tuesday on reaching an agreement with the PLO to expand Palestinian autonomy.

Negotiations were suspended temporarily Monday, after a bomb ripped through a crowded commuter bus in front of the high-rise Tel Aviv diamond exchange, killing five Israelis and the bomber.

The attack weakened the Israeli public's support for the peace process and sparked calls from right-wing officials to end the talks altogether.

Tuesday marked another missed target date for the negotiations. Instead of festivities, there were funerals as Israel buried the five victims.

But Israel Radio said Tuesday Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin wanted the talks resumed and an agreement concluded quickly.

"We are all interested in quickening the talks, both us and the Palestinians," said Rabin spokeswoman Aliza Goren.

Uri Savir and Ahmed Qureia, the top Israeli and Palestinian negotiators, met Tuesday night to discuss reconvening the delegations.

Eran Etsion, an aide to Savir, stressed the suspension of talks was purely out of respect for the victims. He said Israel was anxious to resume negotiations because "there is a sense of urgency."

Qureia agreed the deadly attack should give new impetus to reaching an agreement. "The alternative would be bloodshed," he told The Associated Press.

Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization had originally set a July 1 target date for an accord on expanding autonomy from the Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho to other parts of the West Bank. After that date passed, negotiators said they had hoped to sign by July 25.

No new deadline has been set. Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said talks would resume today somewhere in Europe, but PLO leader Yasser Arafat said he wanted them to stay in the region.

The five Israeli victims of the blast — an 80-year-old man and four women in their 60s — were buried Tuesday in cemeteries around Tel Aviv. At the blast site, passersby prayed, lit memorial candles and laid red roses at a makeshift memorial.

Nineteen people injured in the blast remained hospitalized, two of them in critical condition.

A sixth body found at the scene was believed to be that of the suicide bomber, but no identification had been made by Tuesday evening.

Grozny battle sparked by halted peace negotiations

GROZNY, Russia — Shooting broke out in the center of the Chechen capital Tuesday after negotiators suspended peace talks without signing an agreement on Chechnya's future relationship with the Russian Federation.

Chechen rebels using automatic rifles and grenade launchers targeted a Russian military post near the former presidential palace, less than a mile from the building where the talks were held, and troops who rushed to help.

The Russian military command said at least six Chechens took

Vyacheslav Mikhailov, Russian delegation chief part in the hourlong battle and two of them were killed. They said one Russian serviceman was also killed.

The breakdown in the peace talks followed Chechen leader Dzhokhar Dudayev's criticism of the negotiators as "hairsplitters" who had not accomplished anything in five weeks.

Dudayev's televised remarks Saturday night soured the atmosphere at the talks, with each side accusing the other of stalling an agreement.

The ITAR-Tass news agency said the talks would resume Saturday after both sides consulted with their leaders. Russian delegation chief Vyacheslav Mikhailov said negotiators will continue working on draft documents during the break.

"The talks will continue. There is a certitude that we will make real progress and achieve the final agreement," Mikhailov told ITAR-Tass before departing for Moscow.

President Boris Yeltsin, meanwhile, discussed the peace talks Tuesday with Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin at a sanatorium near Moscow, where Yeltsin is recovering from what aides said was heart trouble.

After initial progress on military and other issues, the negotiators have stalled for weeks over the question of Chechnya's future status in relation to the Russian Federation.

The Chechen separatists, who declared independence in 1991, want Moscow to recognize their independence. The Kremlin insists the republic remain part of Russia, but is willing to let the question wait until after fall elections in Chechnya.

Thousands have been killed since President Boris Yeltsin sent some 40,000 troops into Chechnya in December to end its independence drive. Despite a moratorium on fighting during the peace talks, battles have raged on in the tiny Caucasus Mountain republic in recent weeks.

said, according to the WWRP, independent sales agents nationwide send in magazine orders to the company, which then processes the orders and sends them to magazine publishers.

The company could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Several other Iowa City residents said they have had bad experiences with the WWRP solicitors.

UI junior Brandon Mills said two saleswomen came to his apartment and tried to sell magazine subscriptions to him and a friend. He declined, but his friend, Laura Kohl, subscribed to Elle.

The solicitors, Mills said, gave Kohl a phone number and said if she didn't want the magazine, she could cancel anytime, but asked her to wait at least three days to cancel so the solicitor could get her points.

given lip service by the university," she said. "The number of advocates for us is extremely limited."

Pelton said she did not know who was in charge of reassigning her. The three women are now professors in the UI Department of Preventative and Community Dentistry.

The prerequisite was filed with the Department of Education, the Iowa Commission on Civil Rights and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The new charges have been filed so the UI can respond and possibly avoid going to court again, said Kelly McClelland, the professors' lawyer. McClelland said the professors will have to wait about six months for the UI's response before getting a right-to-sue letter, or the

The phone number turned out to be a number for someone in Chicago who had never heard of the magazine company, and Kohl stopped her check.

Kohl received a receipt which stated customers only have three days to cancel the subscription, but Mills said the saleswomen were very aggressive and adamant about "getting their points."

Solicitors are required by Federal Trade Commission law to inform customers both written and verbally about the right to cancel within three days, but Iowa City resident Cameron Vanni said the solicitor at her door didn't tell her.

"He didn't (mention) that I could cancel within three days," Vanni said. "He said he was raising money for the Youth of America, but I was suspicious, and he used high-pressure sales tactics."

Vanni, who said solicitors have also visited others in her neighborhood, called WWRP after she saw "the amounts on the receipt didn't add up."

But others are already wary of magazine sellers before they reach their doors. UI senior Sarah Kuhns said a man visited a house at which she was babysitting and told her he was trying to earn money to go to school.

"He was real nice," she said. "But I was warned. One of my friends gave a man on the Pentacrest $16 three years ago, but the magazine never came."

Although a spokesman for the Iowa Attorney General's Office said they had no information on WWRP and were not conducting an investigation, he urged anyone with a complaint to call the consumer protection division in Des Moines.

go-ahead for another court battle.

After receiving the letter, a lawsuit must be filed within 90 days, McClelland said.

"It gives the university the opportunity to do the right thing and correct it," he said. "If they take no action on it, then we'll go back to court."

UI counsel Mark Schantz said Tuesday he had not heard anything about the new charges.

"There's been nothing told to me," he said. "I don't think there would be a basis for further legal action."

The documents filed by McClelland say the UI retaliated against the three associate professors after the original verdict in April, which awarded the women compensatory damages and lost salary wages. Bremer has since revoked $20,000 in lost wages from the professors, but agreed with the jury on awarding $65,000 each in compensatory damages.

Bremer's decision also mandates the UI's lawyers, Schantz and Gordon Allen of the Iowa Attorney General's office, comply with a court order to file documents stating Pelton's medical records had been returned to her. Pelton's medical history was used to help determine mental anguish in the case, and court records should have been filed by June 25.

Bremer's order says the UI's lawyers must give the court a reason by July 31 why they should not be sanctioned for ignoring the order. Sanctions against the two lawyers could range from receiving fines to being found in contempt of court.

"I thought we had complied with that," Schantz said. "If we didn't, it will be done by July 31."

abandoned besides Zepa.

The fall of Srebrenica and Zepa leaves Gorazde as the only government-controlled enclave in eastern Bosnia. The fall of Gorazde would give Serbs a clear path between Sarajevo, Bosnia's capital, and Serbia. They aim to unite the more than 70 percent of Bosnian territory they control with Serbia, the dominant power in what is left of Yugoslavia.

As Zepa fell after a two-week Serb assault, NATO allies were still arguing in Brussels over how to carry out their threat of airstrikes on the rebel Serbs.

Tension also was mounting over another Muslim enclave, Bihac in northwestern Bosnia, where rebel Serbs from Bosnia and neighboring Croatia have joined forces and gained significant ground over the past week.

In The Hague, the Yugoslav War Crimes Tribunal indicted Bosnian Serb Gen. Ratko Mladic and the rebels' political leader, Radovan Karadzic, as war criminals. Also indicted was Milan Martić, leader of rebel Serbs in Croatia, as well as 21 others.

Mladic — a hero to his troops — personally oversaw the capture of Srebrenica, where U.N. officials said Muslims were then killed, raped and taken captive. Up to 7,000 people remain missing.

The chief wrangling over Zepa's fate concerns its defenders, reportedly reinforced by government troops who managed to flee nearby Srebrenica.

Mladic has insisted all males between the ages of 18-55 be held until Serb prisoners of war are freed by the government.

Bosnian Serb sources said about 500 Serbs are being held by the Bosnian government, and Mladic would exchange all detainees from Srebrenica and Zepa for them.

"Members of the Muslim army will get a status of war prisoners and will be exchanged in the future," said a statement from Karadzic's office.

ing a number of options, but has questions "that are both legal and regulatory in nature." However, McCurry said, the president is determined "to do something about this growing evidence that there is a rise in tobacco use among young people and it's threatening their health."

A federal inspector general found earlier this year that teens can easily buy cigarettes across the country because states spend law-enforcement funds to fight serious crime, not curb tobacco sales to underage customers.

The proposed agreement also would forbid advertising targeted toward teens and cigarette vending machines, free samples and mail sales allowing teens to access tobacco, Rose and Wyden told The Associated Press.

"If the companies will agree ... then the president will not move forward the rule-making process at the FDA," Rose said. "If we do it this way, the Southern tobacco states will be grateful to the president."

If Clinton pursues FDA regulation of nicotine as a drug, Congress has a good chance of forbidding that regulation and the tobacco states would fight it in court, he added.

The catch is if tobacco companies violate the proposed agreement, FDA regulation would go back on the table, Wyden said.

"The FDA definitely — repeat definitely — has the authority to regulate tobacco products," he said. "A concept like this requires you put a lot of heat on both sides."

Word of the heightened White House talks came a day after Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., made new accusations against the tobacco industry on the House floor.

Citing internal company documents, Waxman accused Philip Morris Cos., the world's largest tobacco company, of tracking Virginia third-graders as potential future customers and giving electric shocks to college students to see if the resulting anxiety would make them smoke more.

The U.S. attorney in New York has begun a grand jury investigation into whether Philip Morris concealed from federal regulators what it learned from studying the addictiveness of nicotine, two Justice Department officials said, demanding anonymity. Subpoenas already have been issued there, they said.

In Washington, the criminal division soon will be calling tobacco executives before a grand jury looking primarily into possible perjury before Congress during April 1994 hearings, the officials said.

Several hours after the gassing began on April 19, 1993, a fire swept the compound and Koresh and 80 of his followers died. It was, said Rep. Bill Loeffler, R-N.H., who is co-chairing the hearings, "a fire that burns in many hearts and minds."

DeGuerin and Zimmermann walked a fine line, saying while Koresh was a criminal, he deserved representation, and while FBI agents on the scene treated them fairly, the bureau did not keep its word on surrender plans.

By Zimmermann's account, Koresh was within days of surrendering under a plan agreed to by the FBI, the lawyers and the Davidians. Under that plan, he testified, DeGuerin and Koresh were to leave the compound first to "show everybody they weren't going to be executed."

The residents would pass through metal detectors and the adults would be fitted with plastic wrist restraints and taken before a federal magistrate. Zimmermann said he and his client, Koresh's top aide, Steve Schneider, were to come out last.

"We had a deal," he told the two subcommittees conducting the hearings. "We were going to do it" as soon as Koresh finished writing a biblical treatise in 10 to 12 days.

The Justice Department said the plan was one of several discussed as the standoff at the Branch Davidian compound dragged on, and it was eventually rejected as a delaying tactic.

"The bureau agents in the field decided that it was just another one of Koresh's lies and misrepresentations and he was not going to come out," said Scruggs, the Justice Department official.

DeGuerin also told of another plan for Koresh to surrender to the Texas Rangers. He said the FBI never responded to that idea.

Not surprising, said Scott Omelianuk, a fashion writer for GQ magazine.

"They were the first group to wear jeans to school," he said. "This is just one more step for them."

The dress code had inspired some embarrassing moments.

In 1993, a sweater-wearing Mayor Raymond Flynn was told he could not enter with a business delegation from Galway, Ireland. The maître d' was praised for enforcing the code.

The 68-year-old Ritz-Carlton is one of many businesses recognizing there is a more casual feel afoot.

Corporate giants Ford and IBM

earlier this year relaxed their buttoned-down dress codes. And Chrysler, Motorola, American Express, PepsiCo, Chase Manhattan and thousands of others have all instituted "casual days," according to this month's issue of GQ.

The 30 other Ritz hotels already have relaxed their rules, especially at warm-weather resorts like in Florida and Hawaii, said national spokeswoman Stephanie Platt.

"Most guests didn't even come with a coat and tie," she said.

And the Ritz is not alone. The posh Mansion on Turtle Creek in Dallas took a more relaxed view a year ago, after their strict dress requirements caused some problems.

"One week a little over a year ago, we had to ask Tom Selleck to go back up to his suite," said Jeff Trigger, managing director. "He was a guest in the hotel, he looked beautiful — a turtleneck and a blazer."

Trigger said the hotel came to its senses. "We're in the hospitality business; the key word is to be hospitable."

NEW YORK (AP) — Longtime Boston Celtics center Robert Parish, now with the Charlotte Hornets, battered his former wife Nancy Saad, throughout their marriage, according to this week's Sports Illustrated.

In a story on spousal abuse sparked by charges filed in Houston against NFL quarterback Warren Moon, the magazine said Parish's beatings of Saad culminated on June 2, 1987, in a Los Angeles hotel hours before the Celtics were to open the NBA Finals against the Lakers.

Saad told the magazine she went to talk to Parish about their 5-year-old son, Justin, whom he had not seen for some time and who had suffered minor injuries in a bicycle accident, as well as child support payments.

She said when she knocked on her estranged husband's door, he first closed it on her. When she knocked again, she said Parish grabbed her by the throat and threw her into the hallway. Saad told SI she remembers being punched and thrown into a wall and then kicked by Parish.

Iowa preps take the plate

Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

Baseball has a way of bringing out the little kid in people, even someone who has been around the game as long as Gene Schultz.
Schultz is completing his 26th season as the coach at Lansing Eastern Allamakee. Today, his team plays in the state tournament for the 11th time. No coach has been in the summer tournament more often.

Yet Schultz is as excited as the first time he made it back in 1973, when he won the first of his eight state championships.

"I told the kids when we got into tournament time that I wished I could put on the uniform and play," Schultz said. "The goose bumps are still there. It starts with the national anthem, and I can't wait to get on the field."

Schultz has plenty of reason to be excited about this year's team, which is 40-5 and seeded No. 1 in the Class 1A tournament at Carroll.

The Kee Hawks made it to the tournament for the first time since 1992 — an unusually long dry spell for them.

"It seems like it has been a while — a lot longer than three years, actually," Schultz said.
"We're happy to be back."

Kee, which plays Gilbertville Don Bosco today, has its usual combination of good hitting and strong pitching.

Junior Shane Schellsmidt is the top hitter at .420 and is a rarity — a catcher who bats leadoff. Senior Drew Buckmaster has been around the .400 mark all season and sophomore pitcher
B.J. Plagge is 13-1 with an earned run average below 0.80.

Le Mars Gehlen, the state runner-up last season, also is part of the 1A field. The second-seeded Jays (28-3) meet Coon Rapids-Bayard tonight.

The baseball tournament has a new look this year, starting with Carroll as one of the sites.
The 1A and 3A games are there, with the 2A

and 4A teams playing at Marshalltown, the traditional site of the tournament. A second site was added because the number of teams was increased from four to eight.

Action at Marshalltown also begins today.
Gehlen, which lost to Lisbon, 10-3, in last year's finals, is one of three runners-up that made a return to the state tournament.

Van Horne Benton earned a return trip in 3A
after losing to Denison, 4-3, in the championship game. Davenport Central returns after an 8-7 loss to Cedar Rapids Washington in the 4A finals.

"We're very pleased to be going back," Benton
coach Howard Conrad said. "Starting with day one of practice, that was the goal for these kids — to get back to state. Hopefully, we can do a little bit better this time."

Benton returned just four players from last year's championship-game lineup, but one of

Buckeyes set sights on Lions, Rose Bowl

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Last season the Ohio State Buckeyes were the victims of a 63-14
thrashing against Big Ten Conference and Rose Bowl champion
Penn State.

This year the Buckeyes have only one thing in mind: P-A-Y-B-A-C-K!

After a 9-4 season, which included a Citrus Bowl appearance and a win over arch-rival Michigan, the Buckeyes are anxious to knock the Nittany Lions from their penthouse residence.

"I think it will be good for us to go up there and get tested at Happy Valley," wide receiver Buster Tillman said. "Last time we were up there we got embarrassed. The next time we're up there we're going to be looking for revenge."

A revenge victory may not be out of the question considering veteran quarterback Bobby Hoying returns for his senior season.

The 6-foot-4, 222-pound Hoying quietly produced outstanding numbers his junior campaign, throwing for 2,335 yards. His 19 touchdown passes tied Art Schlichter for the school's single-season record.

"I think Bobby Hoying's going to shock a lot of people this season," Tillman said. "He's gotten a lot better at reading the defenses and he's more confident."

Tillman, Terry Glenn and Rickey
Dudley figure to be Hoying's primary targets. Tillman is the top returning receiver after snaring 33 receptions for 455 yards and two touchdowns last season.

The Buckeyes lost their top two wideouts to graduation, but Tillman predicts the returning cast will be just as good.

"We're a little inexperienced at the wide receiver position, but I think a lot of people will recognize our talent," Tillman said.

The ground attack should be ketball. Current Iowa

Hawkeye players have teamed with local high school players as well as former and current college players.
The result: lots of scoring, matador defense and a few fantastic dunks.

Since I've attended most of the games, I consider myself something of a Prime Time connoisseur.
So I'm going to put my marginal reputation on the line and make some predictions.

Today's action begins with what seems to be a mismatch as top-ranked Goodfellow
Printing/Imprinted Sportswear
takes on No. 8 U of I Community Credit Union.

Goodfellow has all the horses.

Murray has made a case for league MVP with stellar play. Acie Earl hasn't dominated as expected, but he plays in the NBA and is a millionaire. J.R. Koch is the new stud in town. And Anthony Harris, a football player at DuPage College, is the quickest player in the league.

Of course, UICCU does have Jim Bartels, who may have concluded his Hawkeye career, but still finds the basket consistently. And remember, UICCU beat Goodfellow in the season finale, 116-114.

Still, Goodfellow will be too much: Goodfellow 121, UICCU 109.

The other early game should be a tangle between Russ Millard and Chris Kingsbury and their squads, Fitzpatrick's and New York Life, respectively.

New York Life is basically a three-man team. Kingsbury and former Hawkeyes James Moses and James Winters provide the offense.

Fitzpatrick's relies basically on a two-man game; Millard and former Hawkeye Gerry Wright combine for most of the team's points.

So I guess that means it will be
New York Life as Kingsbury drains a 3-pointer at the buzzer: New

Junior Matt Calhoun and sophomore Nicky Sualua will share duties at the fullback position.

Buckeye opponents will also be confronted by a top-notch defensive unit, which returns six starters. Ohio State ranked 15th in the nation in total defense a year ago and figures to improve with the return of all four starting defensive linemen.

The favorite in 3A is Davenport Assumption, the state champion in 1992 and '93. Assumption (39-3) won its first 35 games this season and has a rare luxury for high school baseball — a four-man pitching rotation.

Vrabel and Matt Finkes will anchor the line once again after combining for 23 sacks and 40 tackles behind the line of scrimmage. Matt Bonhaus and Luke Fickell are permanent fixtures at the inside positions.

The defensive line is "extremely tough," George said. "They might be the best defensive line in the country. They play and practice like it every day. They challenge each other to be the best."

Greg Bellisari is the lone returning linebacker, but he should be helped out by an improved secondary.

Braves squeak by Pittsburgh

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Pinch hitter Dwight Smith singled off Jim Gott to break a 10th-inning tie and carry the Atlanta Braves to a 3-1 victory Tuesday over Pittsburgh in a game marred by a violent collision between Pirates outfielders Dave Clark and Jacob Brumfield.

Clark broke his left collarbone and Brumfield suffered cuts and bruises as they ran into each other chasing Jeff Blauser's fifth-inning drive into right-center field. Brumfield made a spectacular catch before slamming into the turf.

The game was stopped for 23 minutes as an ambulance was brought onto the field and both players were treated. Clark was knocked unconscious.

Neither team scored after the mishap until the 10th, when the Braves loaded the bases with two outs on Javier Lopez's double, an intentional walk to Ryan Klesko and Mark Lemke's walk.

The double was Navarro's third of the season and his fifth hit in 36 at-bats (.139). Navarro (8-4) pitched 6½ innings, gave up 10 hits, three runs, walked two and struck out six.

The Cubs took a 3-0 lead in the second off Expos starter Pedro Martinez (8-6). Sammy Sosa led off with a walk, and two outs later, Hernandez and Joe Kmak also walked to load the bases. Navarro then doubled to left to increase his season's RBI total to five.

Cardinals 8, Mets 7, 11 inn. ST. LOUIS — Brian Jordan hit two 400-foot homers and singled home the winning run in the 11th inning to lift the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-7 victory over the New York Mets on Tuesday night.

Jordan's single, off Jerry DiPoto (3-4), followed one-out walks to Gerald Perry and John Mabry. New York's Carl Everett, called up from Triple-A Norfolk earlier in the day, tied the game at 7-7 in the ninth inning with a two-out RBI single off Tom Henke, who blew his first save opportunity of the season after 22 straight conversions.

Marlins 9, Giants 3 MIAMI — Bobby Witt retired the first 14 batters for his first victory since May 13, and Florida set a team record with four triples as the Marlins beat the San Francisco Giants.

Witt (2-7) allowed seven hits and pitched around a 42-minute rain delay in the fifth inning. He struck out nine and walked one in his first complete game since July 13, 1994 with Oakland.

Steve Decker drove in three runs with a single, a triple and his first home since May 13, 1991, a span of 198 at-bats. Teammate Kurt Abbott tripled and added his 11th home run.

Padres 4, Reds 2 CINCINNATI — Eddie Williams homered and Steve Finley had three hits and scored three runs as the San Diego Padres completed a two-game sweep of the Cincinnati Reds.

Brian Williams (2-7) allowed four hits and one run over five innings in his first start of the season. The reliever went into the rotation as a replacement for Scott Sanders, disabled by elbow tendinitis.

Doug Bachtler pitched into the eighth, leaving with runners on first and third and two out. Trevor Hoffman came on and walked Reggie Sanders to load the bases, then struck out Eddie Taubensee to end Cincinnati's final threat.

Phillies 7, Rockies 6, 10 innings PHILADELPHIA — Charlie Hayes, hitless in his previous 31 at-bats, singled home the winning run as Philadelphia beat Colorado.

Hayes' hit brought home newly acquired Mark Whiten, who reached on a one-out walk, stole second and took third when catcher Joe Girardi's throw skidded into center.

Heathcliff Slocumb pitched two innings, striking out five, for the win. Mike Munoz took the loss.

Astros 4, Dodgers 0 HOUSTON — Hideo Nomo left the game after four innings because of a split fingernail, and wound up the loser as Astros starter Doug Drabek pitched a three-hitter.

Nomo's (7-2) string of seven straight pitching decisions ended with his shortest outing since May 12 when he also went four innings in a no-decision against St. Louis. He allowed four hits, walked two and struck out one.

White Sox 8, Red Sox 3 BOSTON — Frank Thomas broke a tie with an eighth-inning sacrifice fly and the White Sox scored four more runs in the ninth for a victory over the Red Sox.

The White Sox, who won their third straight game, got six runs on seven hits in the last two innings. Lyle Mouton drove in three runs with two singles and Thomas added an RBI single in the ninth.

Jason Bere (5-8) got his first win in his last four starts, striking out seven while allowing four hits, three walks and no earned runs in 7½ innings. Roberto Hernandez pitched the final 1½ innings for his 14th save.

The White Sox were held hitless for five innings until Rhea Cormier (3-2) came in to pitch the eighth for Boston.

Yankees 8, Royals 1 KANSAS CITY — Randy Velarde had his first career five-hit game and Paul O'Neill hit two homers to lead the Yankees to their seventh straight win.

The victory moved the Yankees within 4½ games of first place Boston in the AL East, the closest New York has been since May 29.

The first five Yankees to bat in the first inning got hits and four of them scored. The big blow was a three-run home run into the right-field bullpen by O'Neill, who also had a solo shot in the third inning.

Orioles 4, Rangers 3 BALTIMORE — Bret Barberie singled in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning and Baltimore handed Texas its ninth straight loss.

The Rangers' losing streak is their longest since April 1987 when they also lost nine in a row. The team record is 15 straight losses in 1972.

Leo Gomez led off the ninth with a double off Roger McDowell (4-2) and Harold Baines was walked intentionally. Greg Zaun sacrificed the runners up and another intentional walk loaded the bases.

Ed Vosberg relieved and retired Brady Anderson on a fielder's choice, but Barberie then blooped a single between shortstop Esteban Beltre and center fielder Otis Nixon.

Jesse Orosco (2-1) who entered in the eighth, earned his first victory since May 30th.

Twins 7, Blue Jays 3 TORONTO — Rookie Frankie Rodriguez scattered five hits over seven innings and Chuck Knoblauch and Marty Cordova homered as Minnesota beat Toronto.

Rodriguez (2-3) allowed three runs in his longest career outing, walking three and striking out two. He has won the last two of his six major league starts.

Minnesota has won five of its last seven games while Toronto has dropped three straight.

Juan Guzman (3-7) gave up five runs on 11 hits over six innings, striking out six and walking one.

Tigers 6, Athletics 3 DETROIT — Lou Whitaker and Kirk Gibson drove in two runs apiece and Detroit beat Oakland in a matchup of two slumping teams.

The win was just Detroit's second in 12 games, while Oakland had its losing skid extended to three games. The A's have lost nine of 11.

Felipe Lira (7-5) got his third win in his last six starts, allowing one run on five hits in five innings with three walks and three strikeouts.

NFL

NFL ROUNDUP

Dolphins win the Emtman lottery

Associated Press

The Miami Dolphins signed defensive lineman Steve Emtman Tuesday, outbidding San Francisco for the free agent waived by Indianapolis after three injury-plagued seasons.

"We are not making any formal announcement," Dolphins spokesman Harvey Greene said late Tuesday night. "We are confirming the fact, but that is all we are saying at this point."

Houston Oilers

SAN ANTONIO — Steve McNair arrived at the Houston Oilers training camp Tuesday and signed a $28.4 million contract, then dashed off to join his team as the highest-paid Houston player.

The soft-spoken 22-year-old from Alcorn State, who finished third in the 1994 Heisman Trophy voting, said he's ready for the NFL.

"I'm going to be a leader as I was at Alcorn," he said. "A leader is a leader no matter what category he's in."

Oilers owner Bud Adams wasted no time complimenting McNair's speed, agility and powerful arm. McNair is "probably the finest natural athlete to play the position of quarterback," he said.

Dallas Cowboys

Nate Newton isn't in the mood to discuss how he stayed out of the kitchen and dropped 40 pounds in roughly 40 days before training camp.

Dallas coach Barry Switzer criticized Newton two months ago for ballooning to more than 385 pounds. Now, Newton is down to about 345, but he doesn't want to talk about it.

"My name is Nate Newton. I'm an All-Pro guard with the Dallas Cowboys. I play excellent football. If you have any questions about that, ask," Newton said.

"If you want to know about a fat farm, you have to go to California and find stars like Dom DeLuise."

AUSTIN, Texas — If Kevin Williams was a little taller, no one would be wondering if he could replace departed free agent Alvin Harper at receiver for the Dallas Cowboys.

At least that's what coach Barry Switzer believes. "I have always been a Kevin Williams fan," Switzer said. "I think if Kevin Williams was three inches taller, everybody in the world would be excited about him."

Williams, who is 5-foot-9, forgives the doubters. After all, the 6-foot-3 Harper, who was a college high jumper, had more touchdown receptions last season (eight) than Michael Irvin (six), and his average yards per catch (24.9) was best in the NFL.

But Harper's a Tampa Bay Buccaneer now and Williams, who has made plenty of big plays as a punt and kick return specialist, must gain the confidence of quarterback Troy Aikman and the coaching staff as a consistently clutch receiver.

"I think Kevin Williams is the veteran and has distinguished himself in big games and has worked hard enough to be in the lead to replace Alvin," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said. "But any player out here has competition."

The competition comes primarily from Cory Fleming, who is in his second year, and was drafted and cut by the San Francisco 49ers in 1994.

Fleming lacks speed — his time in the 40 is 4.88. But coaches like his height (6-2) and the way he pursues a catch.

"Everybody can see that when Cory grabs that ball it's like a running back with the ball," Jones said.

Chip Brown

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — When Wade Wilson saw his role turn from starter to back-up, he decided to see if the team he idolized was interested in him.

"Why not back up the best?" Wilson said of his new role behind the Dallas Cowboys' Troy Aikman. Wilson, beginning his 15th NFL season after stints with Minnesota, Atlanta and New Orleans, was first courted by the Cowboys in 1993. But he wanted another chance as a starter and took a two-year, $4 million deal with the Saints.

He started the 1993 season and led New Orleans to a 7-7 record before suffering a knee injury. He lost the starting job to former Jim Everett last year and thought about retiring after the season.

But he asked his agent to see if Dallas was interested. For Wilson, it was the perfect opportunity — he's a lifelong Cowboys fan who lives in Dallas.

And then there's the shot at a Super Bowl. "At this point in my career, if I am going to be a backup, I want to finish up here," Wilson said. "I have accomplished a lot of things in my career, and the Super Bowl is the thing that I lack. I would love to have that."

Wilson, who has completed 1,276 of 2,236 passes for 15,960 yards in his career, signed a three-year, $14 million contract, and says the Cowboys are his last team.

"The guys who preceded me kind of used the job as a steppingstone for bigger and better things," Wilson said. "But I am very content to finish up my years here as a back-up. This is my last stop. Whether it's one, two or three years, it's as far as I am going."

Tyson targets Bowe ... on cable

Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson will fight again Nov. 4 in Las Vegas, his manager said Tuesday, the same night Riddick Bowe and Evander Holyfield are scheduled to meet in another big heavyweight fight just across the Las Vegas Strip.

Setting up what could be a heavyweight battle between competing fights, Tyson manager John Horne said the former champion would fight an opponent to be named at the MGM Grand hotel-casino.

The pay-per-view event would go directly against the Bowe-Holyfield rubber match, which will be announced Wednesday in New York. That fight will be held a block away in an outdoor arena at Caesars Palace.

"Mike Tyson has his dates; they can move their dates," Horne said. "Bowe-Holyfield is a good attraction, but right now the biggest attraction is what Mike Tyson does."

Bowe's manager, Rock Newman, however, said there was no comparison between the two fights.

"They're attempting to serve the people dog biscuits," Newman said. "We're serving filet mignon on Nov. 4."

Newman charged promoter Don King and Horne with trying to bluff their way into the date, with no opponent and no assurance that Tyson will win his Aug. 19 fight against Peter McNeeley.

"This is another pimp, hustler move by the King-Horne camp," Newman said. "On one hand they want you to spend $50 to watch on pay-per-view and $1,500 in person to see Tyson fight what is reported to be a competitive match against McNeeley. On the other hand, they're telling you the outcome is already decided."

Horne, speaking by conference call, said ever since Tyson's Aug. 19 fight with McNeeley was arranged, it was his intent to fight again Nov. 4.

Horne refused to identify Tyson's opponent but possibilities include former champion Michael Dokes and Lou Savarese.

"Mike Tyson's role is already laid out. All he has to do is follow it," Horne said. "The only person that can alter anything is Peter McNeeley."

Marc Ratner, executive director of the Nevada State Athletic Commission, said he received a request for the date from Newman on July 14 and two days later received a request from King for the same date.

Ratner said the commission's policy would be to allow both fights to go on.

Caesars World executive Rich Rose said the Bowe-Holyfield fight would go on as scheduled. It will be televised on TVKO, Time Warner's pay-per-view arm.

"We've got a great fight, we're excited and we're ready to present it to the public," Rose said.

It will be the third fight between Bowe and Holyfield, whose two previous title fights were major pay-per-view attractions.

But unlike the first two title fights, this bout would be for the lightly regarded WBO title held by Bowe.

"Bowe-Holyfield is old news," Horne said.

"They're attempting to serve the people dog biscuits. We're serving filet mignon on Nov. 4."

Rock Newman, Riddick Bowe's manager

"Who cares who wins or loses? It's not even for anything. The people are eager, hungry to see Mike Tyson."

Tyson signed a six-fight contract with the MGM Grand and Showtime Event Television for his series of comeback bouts shortly after being released from prison in March.

Horne claimed SET reserved the Nov. 4 date earlier this year with pay-per-view distributors and made its intentions known months ago that Tyson would fight on that day.

The battle over the Nov. 4 date is important to Las Vegas casinos because it comes at a time when the hotels are not filled with conventions or holiday visitors, as they will be much of the rest of the year.

Viola vies for spot in Reds' rotation

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Frank Viola has changed teams in his attempt to get back to the big leagues after reconstructive elbow surgery.

Viola, 35, used an escape clause in his minor-league contract with the Toronto organization to leave for the Cincinnati Reds. The former Cy Young Award winner agreed to a contract Tuesday with Triple-A Indianapolis, where he'll get a chance to show whether he can still pitch.

Viola has told Reds general manager Jim Bowden that he's still got it.

"When Frank Viola tells me on the phone, 'Jim, I can still pitch,' that's a critical part of it," Bowden said.

Bowden and manager Davey Johnson planned to drive to Indianapolis to watch the left-hander start Tuesday night against New Orleans.

Viola, recovering from surgery last year to replace an elbow ligament, agreed to a minor-league contract with Toronto in April.

He had been on a rehabilitation assignment with the Blue Jays' Class A team in Dunedin, Fla., going 0-1 in three starts.

The Reds have the best record in the National League and need starting pitchers. Viola pitched for Johnson with the New York Mets in 1989 and the first part of 1990, before Johnson was fired.

Bowden likes to sign veterans to minor-league contracts and see if they pan out. Bowden said if Viola continues to progress, he could be in the Reds' rotation this season.

"There's no risk involved here," Bowden said. "He's been there and he knows how to win. He knows how to get hitters out."

Michigan recruits on hand for festival

Beth Harris

DENVER — Louis Bullock had just gotten off work at a record store up the street from his house in Laurel, Md., when a call came that he never expected.

Bullock was told to pack a bag and catch a flight to Denver to play basketball in the U.S. Olympic Festival.

"It caught me a little off-guard. They called me the day before opening ceremonies in the afternoon," Bullock recalled. "I had to get on the plane Friday morning, so I'm rushing packing and stuff. It was worth it."

Luckily, he has an understanding boss.

"He knows that I play basketball," Bullock said. "He puts me on the schedule when I'm available to work, which I thank him for because a lot of employers won't do that."

The 6-foot-2 guard from Laurel Baptist Academy is one of three Michigan recruits — the most of any school represented here — playing in the festival.

Bullock made the North team as a late replacement for Shammgod Wells of New York City, who twisted his ankle. Center Robert Traylor of Detroit plays for the West, and forward-center Maceo Baston of Dallas plays for the East.

Bullock was a McDonald's All-

American who averaged 25.7 points, 8.7 assists and 6.0 steals as a senior.

"I really didn't know him. He's a quiet kid," said Tubby Smith, the North head coach who recently took the Georgia job. "He's got that Kenny Anderson style of play, where he doesn't look like he's playing hard but he is."

Bullock, who holds the Maryland prep scoring record, and Chauncey Billups of Denver are the only high school players on the men's rosters.

"Most of these guys have already played a year in college," Bullock said. "I haven't even stepped foot on a college court yet, so that makes it better for me because I know a little bit what to expect for next year."

For Traylor and Bullock, it's old home week. They've played together a lot and are next-door neighbors in the athletes' dormitories. They'll go against each other when the East meets the West in the men's opener today.

At 6-foot-8 and 290 pounds, Traylor is the weightiest basketball player at the festival. No one else wears a size 20 shoe, and not many can keep up with the 18-year-old at the dinner table.

"They have to keep the trays filled after he gets through," Bullock laughed. "Actually, he shocked me (Monday) when he said, 'Man, I can't eat that food in there.'"
