Pricey diamond ring recovered from puppy droppings

GRASS VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Once Sherri and Tim O'Connor realized what had gotten into their dog, they couldn't wait to get it back out.

Heath, a 5-month-old golden retriever, swallowed a $7,500 diamond ring as the O'Connors were getting ready to leave for a trip to Las Vegas.

When they realized what happened, they called the kennel where the puppy was staying and asked workers to — pretty please — screen the droppings.

"We've had people ask us to check for worms, but never for a 4-karat ring," said Empire Kennels co-manager Pat DeNardo.

Employee Leah Owens was given the messy task.

"If anybody comes out to check if I looked through the poop, I'll just deny it," she said to herself after getting the assignment.

After four days, the puppy "gave birth to the ring," Tim O'Connor said.

Simpson trial update

FBI chemist Roger Martz accused of bias against O.J. Simpson was declared a hostile witness Wednesday but insisted he was just trying to be truthful when he abruptly changed the tenor of his testimony.

Transcript showed that Ito threatened Clark with severe sanctions if she continued to comment on the testimony of defense witnesses in court. Last week, he fined her $250 for a similar transgression.

The trial was in a half-day recess to allow Ito, his staff and attorneys to attend the funeral for a balliff slain while chasing a prowler near his home.

Senate: Lift arms embargo

Airstrike authority shifted to military

Louis Meixler
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali gave military commanders in Bosnia the authority Wednesday to call in NATO airstrikes without first clearing it with him.

Boutros-Ghali's announcement came hours after NATO warned it would launch pre-emptive and prolonged airstrikes if Bosnian Serbs advance on the U.N. "safe area" of Gorazde.

The U.N. mandate for the peace-keeping mission in Bosnia requires that Boutros-Ghali approve any request for NATO airstrikes. He has been criticized in the past for being too reluctant to do so, usually for fear the Serbs would retaliate against U.N. troops.

President Clinton welcomed Boutros-Ghali's move.

"It shows that he, too, is concerned that the United Nations cannot express a commitment to protect the security of people and then walk away from it," Clinton

Bosnians 'have a right to defend themselves'

John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a sharp repudiation of President Clinton's foreign policy, the Senate voted decisively Wednesday to lift the arms embargo against Bosnia. Clinton decried the move, warning anew that it could inject American troops into the European conflict.

Following debate charged by fresh reports of rebel Serb attacks, the Senate voted 69-29 to require Clinton to lift the 4-year-old arms embargo that critics say has rendered the Bosnian people defenseless.

Republicans and Democrats alike said Bosnia must be allowed to protect itself if the allies lack the will to carry the fight.

"People have a right to defend themselves," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., who sponsored the proposal along with Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn. The United States, Dole declared, would bear the responsibility "if more are killed and more are raped and more little boys are taken off to camps, 12 years old, and more are hanged in trees and more throats are cut because we imposed our will on this little country."

Despite the vote, Clinton said he remained hopeful lawmakers

"I do not believe the strong course for the United States and the strong course for the people of Bosnia is to unilaterally lift the arms embargo, collapse the U.N. mission and increase the chances of injecting Americans troops there."

President Bill Clinton, on his disapproval of the Senate vote would work with him to resolve the disagreement.

"I do not believe the strong course for the United States and the strong course for the people of Bosnia is to unilaterally lift the arms embargo, collapse the U.N. mission and increase the chances of injecting Americans troops there," he said.

The 69-vote majority was enough

Key witness won't talk in Chicago sex trial

James Webb
Associated Press

CHICAGO — A 19-year-old witness who refused to tell a court about her relationship with Rep. Mel Reynolds was held in contempt and taken into custody today at the congressman's sex-abuse trial.

"I respectfully refuse to answer that question," former campaign worker Beverly Heard answered, repeatedly invoking her Fifth Amendment right against self incrimination. Each time, Circuit Judge Fred Suria Jr. directed the prosecution's key witness to answer the question, saying she was in no danger of being charged with a crime for doing so.

But Heard, who once claimed to have had a sexual relationship with the 43-year-old congressman but has since recanted, again refused to answer.

Suria finally removed his eyeglasses, passed his hand across his face wearily and warned that unless she answered he could jail her. Again, she invoked her right against self-incrimination.

The questioning came with the jury absent as the prosecution sought to determine what Heard would say if called to testify.

Her attorney, Eric Dunham, cited potential problems between what Heard might say on the stand and the recantation she made more than six months ago in which she contended she did not have a sexual affair with Reynolds when she was 16 and 17.

When prosecutor Andrea Zopp asked Heard, now 19, to identify Reynolds, the young woman hesitated for several seconds before pointing out Reynolds, who

Agent denies ATF started raid

WASHINGTON — Tearfully defending his colleagues at Waco, a federal agent told lawmakers Wednesday there was no way the officers instigated the spectacular gunfight starting the siege. He also testified of the difficulty in negotiating with a man "who thought he was God."

That agent and others also testified they did not believe David Koresh was on the verge of surrendering as the sect leader's lawyer contended on Tuesday.

Jim Cavanaugh, a special agent for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said he watched in horror from a nearby

Check-forging suspects found

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

Police investigators have identified possible suspects in an alleged forgery by a door-to-door solicitor, and are continuing to investigate other illegal, high-pressure sales practices used by area salespeople.

The company associated with the door-to-door solicitors is participating fully with the Iowa City Police Department to find the alleged forger said Arlene Louis, a representative of World Wide Readers Service. WWRS hires people nationwide to sell magazines door to door.

Louis said Deondra Gardner, the woman who allegedly forged two of UI junior Joe Weber's checks, had been fired.

Weber said his roommate, UI junior Dennis Watts, had been tricked into turning over two unsigned checks for a total of $400 to a WWRS solicitor, who allegedly forged his signature. The checks were cashed with forged signatures.

Police have the names of possible suspects. Shannon Chambers, an office manager for WWRS in Miami, said the company was trying to resolve alleged forgery charges.

"We will not tolerate (illegal behavior by independent sales agents) at all," she said. "WWRS has not done anything wrong. It is two or three people who are misrepresenting the company."

Chambers said WWRS hires independent agents, who then solicit subscriptions and send the orders to the Florida company, where they are processed and sent to magazine publishers.

Many Iowa City residents have reported that salespeople claimed they were earning money for scholarships or charity or to win trips, but Louis said they were simply earning money for themselves.

Bar profits plunge in 'price wars'

Kellie McIlhonn

Cheap beer is here, but local bar owners just aren't happy about happy hour.

With less than half the UI student population sticking around this summer, Iowa City bars have tried to draw patrons by offering crowd-pleasing specials such as "domestic pitchers for 95 cents."

Summer revelers are relishing the cheap brew, but bar owners say the bar ends up paying the tab.

The summer tradition of lowering customer costs in order to capture clientele is known as the "price wars" to local bar owners, but the release of risky specials has not had a positive outcome, the owners said.

For some, the price wars are used to balance the heightened summer overhead costs with the lowered student population in an attempt to maintain profits.

One-Eyed Jake's, 18-20 S. Clinton St., runs such specials as 95-cent pitchers every Tuesday and Thursday from 9-11:30 p.m. to bring in an early crowd.

"My friends and I go to Jake's earlier just because it (has) cheap beer," UI junior Becky Norman said. "After we've been drinking for a while, we go upstairs to the dance floor. It's a good way to meet people because a lot of people go out when the beer's cheap."

Chris Peterson, a One-Eyed

Jake's bartender, said Iowa City beer specials are significant when compared to other college towns.

"I've been to three other Big Ten schools and have yet to find a cheaper place to drink than Iowa City, especially in the summer," Peterson said.

Vito's, 118 E. College St., has engaged in summer customer competition, but manager Brad Vokac said he is unhappy with the price wars.

"I shouldn't have to sell my product for less than it's worth," he said.

Instead, Vokac has kept overhead down by cutting the bar's advertising budget and limiting on-duty staff. He also attributes low overhead to well-trained employees who conserve on alcohol waste and provide a customer base.

Despite the lowered student population, Vokac reported an increase

Oddities & Idiosyncracies

SPAM creators peeved by spoof in Muppet film

Laura Baenen
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The maker of SPAM just can't stomach the latest attempt to poke fun at the canned luncheon meat.

This time, as Miss Piggy would say, moi is not amused.

Hormel Foods Corp. is concerned that a character named Spa'am in an upcoming Muppet movie will tarnish the image of the spiced ham product.

In "The Muppets Treasure Island," which is to hit theaters in February, Spa'am is the high priest of the wild boars who worship Miss Piggy as their Queen Boon Sha-Ka-La-Ka-La.

Spa'am does seem a bit nasty. He sentences the hero Kermit and several others to an unspecified "terrible fate" for their offenses against the queen.

Hormel filed a trademark infringement lawsuit against Jim Henson Productions on Friday in federal court in New York. The suit seeks unspecified damages and demands that the boar's name be changed.

The lawsuit describes Spa'am as an "unsavory-appearing feral pig," and alleges that the movie's producer "has intentionally portrayed the Spa'am character to be evil in porcine form."

Austin-based Hormel Foods has made SPAM, which stands for spiced ham, since 1937.

Over the years, Hormel has engaged in lighthearted promotions of the chopped pork shoulder meat and ham mixture. The annual SPAM Jamboree in Austin features SPAM sculpting, and the company sells watches, clocks, banks, clothes and other items with pictures of the cans.

But sales of the product are no joke — Hormel sells more than 100 million cans annually.

"We are sorry that Hormel does not share the Muppets' sense of humor and we certainly meant no offense," Jim Henson Productions' New York office said in a statement.

The two sides were negotiating a resolution.

Zoo anticipates birth of first test-tube gorilla

Terry Kinney
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — It's worked with humans, tigers, elands and bongos.

Now officials at the Cincinnati Zoo are awaiting the birth of the world's first test-tube gorilla.

The zoo's Center for Reproduction of Endangered Wildlife announced Tuesday it had successfully implanted an embryo fertilized outside the womb into a lowland gorilla. The baby gorilla is due in December.

The announcement came 17 years to the day after the birth of the world's first test-tube human, Louise Brown.

"A lot of times, research goes from animals to humans," said project Director Betsy Dresser. "In this case ... it came from humans to animals."

The gorilla mother — Mata Hari, also known as Rosie — lives at the Cincinnati Zoo. The father, Masuba, resides at the Henry Doorly Zoo in Omaha.

"This is a very significant milestone," said Ed Maruska, executive director of the Cincinnati Zoo. "With some vision, I can see this application being utilized increasingly in the mountain gorilla population as well."

Fewer than 5,000 lowland gorillas are estimated to remain in equatorial Africa. About 325 are in North American zoos and about 800 are in captivity worldwide.

Under Dresser, the Cincinnati Zoo pioneered the transfer of tiger embryos in 1981. Since then, it has worked with elands, bongos, exotic cats and other animals, prompting the attempt with gorillas.

The zoo's research team, which included human fertility experts, began the gorilla project last year, first by charting the female gorilla's menstrual cycle and then removing a dozen eggs.

The eggs were fertilized by the male gorilla's sperm in a glass dish. Three embryos were placed in the female and ultrasound tests earlier this month confirmed the pregnancy.

Supermodel Brinkley calls it quits with real estate husband

NEW YORK (AP) — The whirlwind finally caught up with Christie Brinkley. Just seven weeks after the birth of their son, she's separating from the millionaire she married seven months ago.

"After much thought and consideration, I have decided to separate from my husband," the supermodel said Wednesday in a terse statement released by publicist Fran Curtis. Curtis wouldn't provide further details.

Brinkley, 42, and real estate developer Richard Taubman, 46, survived a helicopter crash during a Colorado ski trip in April 1994. They were engaged soon after and married Dec. 22, exchanging vows in a sunset ceremony on Telluride Mountain, five miles from the crash site.

Their son, Jack Paris Brinkley Taubman, was born June 2. Brinkley has a 9-year-old daughter with first husband Billy Joel.

Actor Gere makes amends for Moscow Film Festival behavior

MOSCOW (AP) — Richard Gere has had his problems in Russia:

He was arrested while fishing and criticized for skipping out of jury duties at a film festival.

But Gere told a packed news conference Wednesday he remains dedicated to Moscow's 19th International Film Festival.

"I understand Russians. I feel instinctively close to you," The Moscow Times quoted him as saying. "It's emotionally right for me to be in Moscow now, though it's very hard on the mind and eyes to watch six hours of film a day."

Gere has been criticized in the press for leaving town twice. And jury members have reportedly walked out of at least one film, by a Yugoslav director.

"Have you seen the film? Did you enjoy it? Just because it's from a country at war doesn't make it a good film," he said.

Last weekend, Gere went fishing in the countryside with director Nikita Mikhalkov, whose "Burnt By the Sun" won this year's Oscar for best foreign film.

"I was arrested for illegally taking caviar from the river, but I'm not allowed to talk about that," he said.

Rockers croon for launch of AIDS T-shirts

LONDON (AP) — Sting and Elton John as the Righteous Brothers? Why not — raising money for AIDS is righteous business.

The rock stars sang a couple of bars of "You've Lost That Loving Feeling," a Righteous Brothers hit, at Wednesday's launch of a T-shirt which will raise money for medical and nursing care for AIDS patients.

The song had been broadcast over the PA system at London's Hard Rock Cafe, where the launch took place, just minutes earlier.

The T-shirts feature a minimalist self-portrait by Sting. It's signed "Sting by Sting" and will sell for $24 at Hard Rock Cafes throughout the world.

The hamburger emporium launches T-shirt campaigns for stars' favorite charities about once every six months. This time, it asked Elton John to promote his AIDS foundation. John, who had already designed a T-shirt for an earlier campaign, asked Sting to contribute.

The Daily Iowan

While Iowa City's population continues to grow, statistics show new residents are spreading out into existing homes rather than building new ones.

F.W. Dodge, a division of McGraw-Hill, Inc., which sells construction statistics, reported a negative percent change in the growth of Iowa City for 1995. Growth, according to Dodge, is defined as the start of new building projects.

The report stated Iowa City's total residential and nonresidential building costs have decreased 27 percent — from $73,573,000 in 1994 to $53,883,000 in 1995.

But despite the implications of the latest statistics for Iowa City's contracting trends, city officials said Iowa City is still growing.

"There has been a slowing down in the number of housing units being built — in terms of housing starts — but there is still a positive growth," said David Schoon, Iowa City economic development coordinator. "The growth just isn't as strong as last year."

Schoon said a change in contracting development has lead to a decrease in new construction.

"The 'building-on-speculation' days are over," he said. "Builders have out-built the market and it takes a while (for demand) to catch up."

"Building on speculation" refers to building a home on the assumption of enough demand for it and its sale within a reasonable amount of time. Some Iowa City contractors were constructing $300,000 homes, which are out of the price range for many working class families.

"I'm still seeing a high demand for houses priced at $100,000," said Steve Vanderwoude, a member of the Friends of Historic Preservation, an organization funding the restoration of Iowa City's old, beautiful homes. "If you have (built) houses for $300,000, they are sitting on the market for more than a year or coming down in price."

Kevin Hanick, of Lepic-Kroeger Realtors, 500 S. Dubuque St., said the Dodge statistics don't mean Iowa City contractors and realtors should pack up and relocate.

"There are still active buyers in the market," he said. "For now, we've met some of the housing needs that Iowa City has."

But some residents speculate people are leaving Iowa City altogether to live in less expensive surrounding towns, such as Coralville, North Liberty and Cedar Rapids.

Mark Gauger, a 29-year Iowa City resident, said resident migration may be due to both economic and social pressures.

"There has been a population shift in terms of where lots of people are living," he said. "Iowa City's growth has been hidden because the population is moving to different areas outside the city. Some are inspired by age — they are retiring — or finances; they cannot afford Iowa City living, for example."

Robert Embree, who has lived in Iowa City for 27 years, also believes the population of Iowa City is spreading beyond its boundaries.

"There will be a time when the lines between Iowa City, North Liberty and Coralville blur," he said. "The Iowa City-Cedar Rapids corridor really does exist. Not only do people in these areas work in Iowa City, but there are people who live in this area that work in Cedar Rapids and North Liberty."

DEMOCRATIC PROFILE HIGHLIGHTED BY VISIT

Clinton slated for campaign stop in Iowa

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — President Clinton is scheduled to speak at the Iowa Democratic Party's main fundraising event this fall, party leaders announced Wednesday.

Iowa Democratic Chairman Michael Peterson said officials are negotiating a precise date for the event. He said there also may be other campaign trips to the state by Clinton before next February's precinct caucuses.

"It appears to be very firm," said Peterson.

Democrats' biggest fund-raising event each year is the party's Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner, usually in October. The last current president to attend the dinner was Jimmy Carter, who visited Des Moines in 1977.

Peterson made the Clinton announcement at an Associated Press meeting of editors and reporters on the upcoming precinct caucuses. Peterson said the president's trip is part of a Democratic effort to raise the party's profile this fall and winter.

With no challenge to Clinton looming from within the Democratic Party, virtually all of the state's political attention is focused on the Republicans trooping through the state campaigning for the February caucuses.

With as many as nine Republican contenders visiting Iowa — and routinely trashing Clinton and other Democrats — some Democratic leaders worry the cumulative weight of that pounding will damage the party's hopes in the next election.

They hope to counter that campaign by bringing Clinton to the state, stirring up the enormous media focus accompanying a presidential visit.

"The president understands how important Iowa is," Peterson said.

For Clinton, the incentive to visit the state comes because he carried many states in the upper Midwest in the last election, and will have to match that success next year to win another White House term.

'I'll Love You' delves into gay life

Mark Pittillo

Special to The Daily Iowan

While the summer blockbusters continue to reach new lows in a mind-numbing spectacle, we lucky Iowa Citizens can get relief in Edgar Michael Bravo's ultra low-budget drama, "I'll Love You Forever ... Tonight," which plays this weekend at the Bijou Theatre in the Union.

Probably the first American gay-themed feature written and directed by a Latino, "I'll Love You" was shot for less than $100,000; in other words, "Batman" is budget is enough to produce this movie and about 1000 like it. It is a small, quietly moving film that takes an intensely personal look at gay life in Los Angeles.

The film stars Paul Marius as Ethan, a 27-year-old photographer who drinks light beer, has a tendency to daydream of past loves and has grown tired of a life of one-night stands. After his latest pick-up spurns him, he finds his sometime lover, Dennis, with a homeless hustler named Steven. Rationalizing his open relationship, Ethan reluctantly agrees to accompany Dennis and Steven on a Palm Springs getaway.

Ethan becomes suspicious when he discovers his old college flame, Peter, and Peter's new lover, Jeff, are also joining the group. After a night of hard drinking and strained confrontations, Ethan slowly discovers he is a pawn in a game of sexual musical chairs.

Bravo, in his debut feature, turns out to be a smoothly confident director. With minimal flash, he expertly sculpts a mood of intense alienation. Most of the film's tension comes from its highly realistic dialogue, which Bravo obtained by shooting each scene several times — once as achievement. He captures the awkwardness of two people meeting for the first time, or after a long separation — the "So, what do you do?" stage of a relationship. This painful hesitation is present even between Dennis and Ethan, whose relationship has become hopelessly strained because of its "open" status. A cast of unknowns, including Marius and Jason Adams as Dennis, is very good for a production of this type.

Robert Cairns' moody score also livens the film. Jeff Crum's high-contrast black and white photography is crisp and effective, especially during Ethan's melancholy walks through Los Angeles. Gorgeous shots of speeding traffic and crowds of people beautifully exemplify his — and the rest of humanity's — isolation.

Not that everything in the film works. The Palm Springs scheme is too overbaked to be believable, and sometimes the characters' actions don't quite ring true. But for a low-budget debut, it shows remarkable restraint, eschewing colorful diascripted and other times following the scene's intent but with heavy improvisation by the actors.

At first, this technique is bothersome and the acting appears hopelessly mannered, but gradually, it is easy to begin admiring Bravo's

Experts tap psyche in self-help seminars

The Daily Iowan

Although most UI students are still young enough to be in touch with their "inner child" and too busy to head to the forest and beat drums as some popular books might advise, the UI Counseling Service is offering a free peek under the covers of the self-help genre.

Every Thursday at noon, UI staff psychologists and self-help book enthusiasts meet in River Room 1 of the Union to discuss advice books dealing with topics from bulimia to men's issues and relationships.

Kelly Willson, UI senior staff psychologist, said the Summer Book Series provides expert insight on the self-help book phenomenon.

"We were hoping to educate people and discuss how these books work," she said. "We pick some of the more popular ones and some with things we find personally useful or that we recommend to people. It's kind of

Today at noon, UI staff psychologist Sam Cochran will discuss M. Scott Peck's "The Road Less Traveled," a psychology book addressing love, traditional values and spiritual growth. On Aug. 3, psychologist Martha Dennis Christensen of UI Counseling and Scott Stuart, a doctor from the UI Department of Psychiatry will lead a discussion on Peter Kramer's "Listening to Prozac" — a book examining the drug as a treatment for psychological and psychiatric problems and as a cultural phenomenon.

While "Listening to Prozac" is touted by some critics as an authoritative look at the drug's effect on society, Willson said — like most self-help authors — readers should not take the book as gospel truth.

"I encourage people to take (the book's advice) with a grain of salt," she said.

While most college students probably don't spend hours scouring book stores for advice on how to deal with their problems, the Summer Book Series, which started in June, may help readers pick and choose the most valuable advice.

"Sometimes we think in too generalized a way. We need to look at it and pick and choose the things that apply to our lives," Willson said. "Most college students don't take things in self-help books too seriously."

The Summer Book Series is free and open to the public. Comments are confidential. For more information, contact Kathie Staley at UI Counseling Service, 335-7294.

DIRECTOR IMPACTS INTERNATIONAL GENRE

Film's style flavors look at Chinese history

Aaron Han Joon Park

Special to The Daily Iowan

Xie Fei's "Women From the Lake of Scented Souls" ("Xiang Hun Nu" in Mandarin) was co-winner of the 1993 Berlin Film Festival's Grand Prize, along with Ang Lee's Taiwanese feature "The Wedding Banquet."

However, unlike Ang's light-hearted approach to marriage, Xie Fei's film is a solemn masterpiece offering an alternative voice in articulating mainland China's recent history.

Upon thinking about mainland Chinese cinema, Fifth Generation directors like Chen Kaige ("Farewell My Concubine"), Tian Zhuangzhuang ("The Blue Kite") and Zhang Yimou ("Raise the Red Lantern") immediately come to mind. These three directors' films have impacted the international film arena since the screening of Zhang Junzhao's "The One and the Eight" at the 1984 Berlin International Film Festival.

The Gang of Four's fall and the end of the Cultural Revolution in 1978 heralded a cessation of the rigid artistic constraints imposed by the political leadership. Experimentation in film form and the jettisoning of socialist realist aesthetics gave Fifth Generation films a fresh, cool look.

The films' critique and re-evaluation of the modern mainland Chinese cultural experience since 1949 initially avoided direct criticism of the present by being set to the pre-1949 period (for example, "Yellow Earth" and "Judou"). More recently, with the aid of foreign production capital, a historical sweep of 30-40 years has been the norm in such films as "Kite" and "Concubine."

In contrast to the trajectory set by the Fifth Generation, Xie Fei's "Women From the Lake of Scented Souls" — a joint local production by the Changchun and Tianjin film studios — follows a more "classical" approach to filmmaking and filmic representation. As a member of the "Fourth Generation" and a professor at the Beijing Film Academy's directing department, Xie Fei taught filmmaking basics to the Fifth Generation.

Xie Fei's cinematic style is measured and favors the extended shot. He is confident of his skills over the medium and expertly positions the camera to gently linger on a scene. In effect, he entices an audience to enter and inhale the atmosphere.

The film begins with an idyllic pastoral introduction in which a dedicated and hard-working woman manages a sesame oil shop to support her family. The film then shifts, and the audience soon discovers the tragedies of her life and the far-from-favorable choices she's had to make to survive.

Upon the founding of the Communist Party, one of Mao Tse-dong's first changes was the liberation of women from the constraints of Confucian feudal society. However, the film's protagonist, Xiang (Sijin Gaowa), has yet to experience a "liberated" life.

The recent prosperity that enters her life in the form of Japanese capital investment to modernize and expand her sesame oil business belies a personal tragedy that began at age 7. Sold by her father after her family's village was flooded, Xiang almost drowned herself at age 13. Encouraged by her mother-in-law to be patient, 20 years has passed and Xiang is 33 in the film. The 20 years were filled with personal tragedies, which are revealed from glimpses into her present life and her own personal testimonies.

The immensity of Xiang's personal tragedy is accentuated by Xie Fei's refrain from using flashbacks to re-enact her past. In effect, the audience is kept in the present and forced to confront the full manifestations of these past events.

Xiang's husband is a lazy man with a lame leg whose idea of passion is to force himself on her after a night of drinking. Her 22-year-old epileptic son, Dunzi, wants a wife and Xiang, through the use of her newfound wealth, reveals her tactical genius by outmaneuvering everyone and employing the services of key individuals in positions of authority to "convince" Huan-huan (Wu Yujuan) to marry Dunzi.

The film climaxes with the discovery of Xiang's affair with another man and her belated realization that she has condemned her daughter-in-law to a future similar to her own. In a touching scene, Xiang encourages Huan-huan to escape, divorce her son and find a happier life. However, Huan-huan replies that such an escape offers no real escape.

Caught by the confines of Confucian patriarchy — and by extension, the Communist patriarchy — the only real "escape" may lie in following the legend of the lake in which two 17-year-old girls — one a daughter of a rich man and the other the child of a blacksmith — drowned themselves in the lake during the Qing Dynasty and were transformed into birds.

"Women From the Lake of Scented Souls" is showing at the Bijou Theatre in the Union Friday at 7 p.m., Saturday at 8:45 p.m., Sunday at 7 p.m. and Monday at 8:45 p.m.

OPERA OPENS FRIDAY

Unique 'Figaro' spotlights 17th century love scandal

The Daily Iowan

Figaro - Figaro - Figaro - Feeeee-ga-roooooo!

With all the pomp and circumstance of powdered wigs and finely tuned vibrato, the UI Opera Theater brings its unique production of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" to Clapp Recital Hall this weekend with performances Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Under direction of UI opera director Beaumont Glass and UI choral director William Hatcher, the performances feature the voices of UI School of Music students. Although the opera is more widely performed in Italian, Iowa City audiences will be treated to a standard opera translation in English by Ruth and Thomas Martin.

"The Marriage of Figaro" was based on a play by the French playwright Beaumarchais, which scandalized Europe in the 17th century and was banned because of its revolutionary political statements. The first of three operas composed to a text written by poet Lorenzo Da Ponte, "The Marriage of Figaro" was first performed in Vienna in 1786, where it was an instant success with nine performances in the first year and 26 more during its 1789 revival.

The opera, subtitled "One crazy day," takes place in the course of a single day at the estate of the aristocrats, Count and Countess Almaviva. At the opera's start, Figaro, the Count's servant, is preparing to marry the Countess' maid, Susanna. The plot revolves around the Count's attempt to seduce Susanna on her wedding night — a feudal tradition the Count has renounced but wants to embrace anyway — and Figaro's efforts to prevent the seduction.

After a series of complications and subplots, the twisting and turning moves to the Count's garden after Figaro and Susanna's wedding by the last act. In order to trick the unfaithful Count, Susanna and the Countess have changed clothes. Thinking he has a rendezvous with the maid, the Count does not realize the woman he meets in the garden is actually his disguised wife.

Upon believing he sees Figaro with his wife, the Count is overcome with jealousy. As the Countess reveals herself and unveils both the Count's jealousy and unfaithfulness, the opera resolves itself with a reconciliation scene and a bright, uniquely Mozart finale.

The role of Figaro will be sung by Jonathon Thull at the Friday performance and by John Thompson on Sunday. Susanna will be performed by Kristie Tigges on Friday and Emily Truckenbrod on Sunday. The Count will be sung by Drew Poling at both performances. The role of the Countess will be shared by Caroline Gibson on Friday and Jennifer White on Sunday.

Singers in other roles include Erin McMahon, Amy Riesenberg, Tari Karbula, LeAnne Foust, Jeffrey Pappas, Lucas Knowles, Maria Gimenez, Rebecca Cox, Dwyann Carter, Steven Emge and John Des Marais.

Tickets for "The Marriage of Figaro" are available from the Hancher Auditorium Box Office, 335-1160.

UNION, S.C. — Susan Smith's brother took the witness stand Wednesday and protested sending "2,000 volts of electricity through her in the name of justice."

The judge told the jury deciding Smith's fate to ignore the comment by Scotty Vaughan as the defense began arguing why her life should be spared for drowning her two young sons by rolling her car into a lake.

The prosecution completed its portion of the sentencing hearing with grim photographs of the boy's bloated bodies after the car was recovered. They were still strapped in car seats, a sodden teddy bear on the floorboard at their feet. The boys' faces were not shown.

Smith's 33-year-old brother, crying at times, was the first witness called by defense lawyers. He said the family searches for clues to why "a good mother" killed her sons.

"I get to a certain point and then I just give up," Vaughan said. "I don't think Susan knew what she was doing. ... The Susan I know was not at that lake that night." Smith, 23, was convicted of murder Saturday in the deaths of 9-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex. She lied for nine days about their disappearance, saying a black carjacker had driven away with them in her car.

After an intensive search and heavy media coverage, Smith confessed Nov. 3 to leaving the boys inside the car when she sent it into John D. Long Lake.

Prosecutors argued she should be executed because of the heinous

LOS ANGELES — An FBI chemist accused of bias against O. J. Simpson was declared a hostile witness Wednesday but insisted he was just trying to be truthful when he abruptly changed the tenor of his testimony.

"Did you decide ... you had become an advocate?" defense attorney Robert Blasier asked as he went on the attack.

"I decided I had to be more truthful," Roger Martz told jurors. "I was not being entirely truthful with you and no answers. ... I decided I wanted to tell the whole truth." The turnaround in Martz's demeanor on Tuesday came after he had answered a series of questions indicating evidence bloodstains were "consistent" with the presence of chemical preservative used in the police crime lab.

The preservative, EDTA, is a key to the defense theory that Simpson was framed with his own blood taken from a test tube containing the chemical and scattered on socks found near his bed and the gate at his wife's condominium.

After initial questioning by the defense Tuesday, Martz conferred with prosecutors during a break and returned to the stand to aggressively declare the evidence bloodstains weren't identified as containing EDTA. He repeated that assertion dozens of times during prosecutor Marcia Clark's cross-examination.

New Music Revue

Rap G Style

Look out, K-Tel — Rap G Style is a compilation of gangsta rap looking to put a bullet in the skull of "best of" albums with a collection of bass, beats and bitches.

Along with the three B's, there are bouts with racism, anti-Semitism and occasionally, macabre humor.

Gangsta rap took off in the '80s with the rise of N.W.A. For all of its guns and violence, gangsta rap has become a way for most rappers to express the hopelessness of ghetto life. However, Mr. Scarface and Brotha Lynch Hung prove it's possible to rap and send no worthwhile message.

Brotha Lynch Hung's creation, "Rest in Piss," is nearly as good as an empty 40-ounce bottle — and has about as much substance. It doesn't flow and the "lyrics is butt," to sample from Tribe Called Quest.

"Talkin' shit" is what Mr. Scarface does on his track, "Mr. Scarface: Part III The Final Chapter." Screwing and shooting don't make for a particularly cool groove. Nice try, Scarface.

Surprisingly enough, The Geto Boys, (who by the way, Bob Dole, have broken up) contribute "Six Feet Deep," the most laid-back track on the disc. Any rap dropped over "Easy Like Sunday Morning" has to be good.

With "Six Feet Deep," The Geto Boys' stone-cold rhyme expresses the loss of a friend to gang violence and the fact that The Geto Boys expect most of their friends to die in the hood.

"When your time comes, just remember G, you'll always have a place in this world as a memory. ... Another homie got smoked but it's no surprise, everybody's tripping, 'cause the boy was too young to die. ... In the midst of all this shit I think about myself, wondering when somebody's going to try to take me off the shelf. ... On the city streets today a brother just can't win."

For those who aren't so sensitive, Ice Cube lays down a kickin' groove about his former crew, N.W.A. He raps effectively and angrily and joins the feud, which began when Cube left N.W.A., with his cut, "No Vaseline."

Cube ruthlessly takes cuts at all of the former members of the group — from Eazy-E and D.J. Yella to Andre Young (Dr. Dre, with whom Cube has since recorded an album).

Various derogatory references to Jewish people and Eazy-E's apparent penchant for anal sex make the song typical, vulgar gangsta-style rap.

Rap G Style will probably never make it to late-night television — or to record stores. In fact, this compilation — like many others — is primarily made up of music no one listens to. The two good tracks don't make up for the wack ones, so save the money for a fly ride.

The prosecution completed its portion of the sentencing hearing with grim photographs of the boys' bloated bodies after the car was recovered. They were still strapped in car seats, a sodden teddy bear on the floorboard at their feet. The boys' faces were not shown.

Smith's 33-year-old brother, crying at times, was the first witness called by defense lawyers. He said the family searches for clues to why "a good mother" killed her sons.

"I get to a certain point and then I just give up," Vaughan said. "I don't think Susan knew what she was doing. ... The Susan I know was not at that lake that night."

Smith, 23, was convicted of murder Saturday in the deaths of 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex. She lied for nine days about their disappearance, saying a black carjacker had driven away with them in her car.

After an intensive search and heavy media coverage, Smith confessed Nov. 3 to leaving the boys inside the car when she sent it into John D. Long Lake.

Prosecutors argued she should be executed because of the heinous-

Scotty Vaughan leaves the Union County Courthouse with his wife, Wendy, on Wednesday, after testifying in the Susan Smith trial. Vaughan is Smith's brother and testified that the family would be devastated further if Smith receives the death penalty. Smith has been convicted of the drowning deaths of her two sons, Alex and Michael.

ness of the crime, which they say she committed to remove her children as obstacles to a love affair. Her lawyers say she is mentally ill and snapped under mounting emotional pressure.

Other relatives are expected as witnesses to detail a life of emotional trauma, beginning with her father's suicide when she was 6. Defense testimony was expected to end Thursday.

Unless all 12 jurors vote for execution, Smith will receive a life sentence. If they decide on death, she could choose the electric chair or lethal injection up to 14 days before her execution date. If she didn't choose, she would die by injection.

Under questioning by defense lawyer David Bruck about how Smith's family would be affected by a death sentence, Vaughan said they had been "devastated already" and it could cause his mother, Linda Russell, to have a nervous breakdown.

Then Vaughan added, "To strap Susan in a chair and send 2,000 volts of electricity through her in the name of justice ... ." He was interrupted by prosecutor Tommy Pope's objection and Circuit Judge William Howard instructed the jury to ignore the comment.

Emotion stopped Vaughan earlier, as he tearfully read a letter he wrote his sister in prison last January after she asked him about their father, Harry Vaughan, and his suicide.

The letter recalled their parents' stormy marriage, their father's violent behavior and finally the night he shot himself.

"I'll never forget the hurt, the pain I felt when she (their mother) told me Daddy was dead. Then I thought about you and how hurt you would be," Vaughan read.

Also Wednesday, sociologist Arlene Andrews testified Smith lived two lives.

On the surface, she appeared normal — "a quiet person with a sweet personality," said the University of South Carolina professor, who interviewed friends and relatives and reviewed her medical and employment records.

Underneath, Smith's life was "chaos and confusion."

Andrews traced some problems to the fights of Smith's parents, their separations, her father's suicide and molestation by her stepfather, Beverly Russell.

Smith suffers from depression, which runs in her family, Andrews said, adding, "These feelings ... have left her wanting to die many times over."

Her sense of despair increased last October, Andrews testified, after her then-husband, David Smith, took a letter from her purse revealing she was having an affair with her boss, Cary Findlay, and threatened to tell Findlay's wife.

Andrews said while many people "live through hard times" without being destroyed by them, "Susan is not a resilient person."

CHEMIST ALTERS TESTIMONY

Defense expert declared hostile witness

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — An FBI chemist accused of bias against O.J. Simpson was declared a hostile witness Wednesday but insisted he was just trying to be truthful when he abruptly changed the tenor of his testimony.

Martz

Blasier asked as he went on the attack.

"I decided I had to be more truthful," Roger Martz told jurors. "I was not being entirely truthful with yes and no answers. ... I decided I wanted to tell the whole truth."

The turnaround in Martz's demeanor on Tuesday came after he had answered a series of questions indicating evidence bloodstains were "consistent" with the presence of a chemical preservative used in the police crime lab.

The preservative, EDTA, is a key to the defense theory that Simpson was framed with his own blood taken from a test tube containing the chemical and scattered on socks found near his bed and the gate at his ex-wife's condominium.

After initial questioning by the defense Tuesday, Martz conferred with prosecutors during a break and returned to the stand to aggressively declare the evidence bloodstains weren't identified as containing EDTA. He repeated that assertion dozens of times during prosecutor Marcia Clark's cross-examination.

fined her $250 for a similar transgression.

"Miss Clark, I cautioned you to be careful earlier," Ito told her during a sidebar conference Monday while Rieders was testifying. "Your commentary on testimony, I realize you're enjoying yourself, but I'm warning you right now — warning you in no uncertain terms — if I see any more of that commentary, there's going to be severe sanctions, and I underline the word, 'severe.'"

The trial was in a half-day recess to allow Ito, his staff and attorneys to attend the funeral for a bailiff slain while chasing a prowler near his home.

Deputy Antranik Geuvjehizian had escorted Simpson jurors on some of their outings.

In another development outside court, the juror who told Ito "I can't take it anymore" before she was dismissed broke her silence, saying she was ostracized after her complaints led to the reassignment of three deputies.

With "Six Feet Deep," The Geto

ARMS EMBARGO

to override a promised Clinton veto, as 21 Democrats joined almost all of the Republicans in supporting the measure.

The House voted 318-99 last month to lift the embargo — more than enough votes to override a veto. But because that measure was attached to separate legislation, the House will have to vote again.

On Wednesday, 112 House members signed a bipartisan letter to Clinton calling the administration's Bosnia policy "morally bankrupt and an obvious failure."

Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., chairman of the House International Relations Committee, hailed the Senate vote and promised "swift action" on the measure in the House.

If the bill becomes law, it would require Clinton to end U.S. support for the arms ban after withdrawal of U.N. peacekeepers or within 12 weeks of a request by the Bosnian government for their withdrawal — whichever comes first.

The Senate added an amendment requiring Clinton to seek a

Senate Minority Leader

U.N. Security Council vote to lift the embargo, marking one final attempt to avoid a split with NATO allies. If that failed, a second amendment would require the administration to seek a General Assembly vote. In the event of negative vote there, the United States would unilaterally withdraw from the embargo.

The Senate vote came even as U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali gave his military commanders in Bosnia authority to call in NATO air strikes without first clearing it with him. Dole, who has been sharply critical of what he sees as U.N. timidity in approving strikes, said it wouldn't have changed the outcome had Boutros-Ghali's decision come earlier.

Speaking at an Oval Office photo opportunity, Clinton said the amendments requiring him to seek U.N. agreement before lifting the embargo unilaterally improved the bill.

"A unilateral lift means accelerated deployment of U.S. forces," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D. "We lift, we're there and the action spreads — and then what?"

BEER SPECIALS

in weeknight and weekend crowds and believes specials and/or entertainment keep patrons loyal to one bar each summer.

But cutting prices to gain customers carries a steep price for many bar owners.

Mark Eggleston, owner of The Field House bar, 111 E. College St., offers free beer every Tuesday night — although a cover is charged — and said he would like to forget about the summer months because he doesn't make any money.

"(The price wars) are really not true of what the business is," he said. "It's not profitable."

Randy Lee, manager of the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., said he doesn't believe the bar is really at the mercy of students, but views the summer months as a low cycle in the industry.

"A bar's cash flow is cyclical," Lee said. "You just have to fight through the cycles and wait until your high cycle comes, where your retail versus wholesale costs get back into line with what the industry expects."

Although he runs costly specials to draw crowds and maintains high overhead costs, such as air conditioning, Lee said his business will survive the summer.

Despite many bars falling prey to the price wars, some bars decide not to participate in the competition.

Tom Strub, manager of The Dublin Underground, 5 S. Dubuque St., said the price wars are humorous and does not run any summer specials.

"(Bars engage in competition) to fill the place up, but then give everything away for free," Strub said.

Similar to the Dublin Underground's philosophy, Jim Bell, owner of the Deadwood tavern, 6 S. Dubuque St., said he does not need to engage in the price wars to keep patrons, and said if none of the bars did, the community would be better off.

"People appreciate not having to put up with the dysfunctional people that follow the cheap beer circuit," Bell said.

Like Strub, Bell reported he is able to maintain a steady clientele.

"People like the stability here (and) that we shut people off before other bars would," Bell said.

The closest thing to specials offered by the Deadwood is of no discount to the customer. Instead, with a different motivation in mind, the Deadwood sometimes gives 50 cents from every Leinenkugel's Red or beer of the bar's choice purchased to the Domestic Violence Intervention Project or the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

said in Washington.

After the last NATO airstrikes in May, Bosnian Serbs took about 370 U.N. peacekeepers hostage.

Meeting in Brussels, Belgium, on Tuesday, NATO nations had urged the United Nations to delegate its powers to order airstrikes to military commanders in the former Yugoslavia acting jointly with NATO's Southern Europe commander, U.S. Adm. Leighton Smith.

Today, the United Nations said Boutros-Ghali has "delegated authority in respect of airstrikes, which he has hitherto retained himself, to Gen. Bernard Janvier ... with immediate effect."

Janvier is the commander of U.N. forces in the former Yugoslavia.

One NATO official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said streamlining of the "dual key" system would enable allied jets to attack quickly and effectively without the "bureaucratic fuss and delay" plaguing previous attempts to use allied air power.

The United States had lobbied its European allies for a strong stand to flesh out warnings given in London last Friday that formidable air power would be unleashed against the Bosnian Serbs if they advance on Gorazde.

"This is exactly what we wanted," said U.S. ambassador Robert Hunter, of the decision reached after more than 13 hours of talks at NATO headquarters. "We're delighted; it's a real toughening of attitude."

REYNOLDS TRIAL

leaned back in his chair, his chin cupped in his hand. He did not appear to make eye contact with her.

The hearing — outside of the jury's presence — was an attempt by the prosecution to determine how willing Heard is to testify about her original allegations without exposing the jury to seeing Heard refuse to testify.

Heard's accusations last summer resulted in the prosecution's main evidence — sexually explicit telephone conversation recorded while Heard sat in the Cook County state's attorney's office. Prosecutors had hoped to follow the tapes with Heard recounting how the congressman approached her in June 1992 and began a sexual affair.

But Heard eventually stopped cooperating with prosecutors, and in January, her then-lawyer issued a stunning recantation in which she contended she had made up the accusations against the Democratic congressman and was pressured by investigators into continuing the case.

The black, two-term Democrat says he is the victim of a racist, politically misguided prosecution led by Cook County State's Attorney Jack O'Malley, a white Republican.

The tapes, featuring raw sexual language, were played for the jury Tuesday.

Prosecutors said they are clear evidence that Reynolds lured the underage campaign volunteer into a sexual affair and asked her to get him lewd photos of a younger girl. Defense attorneys fought to keep them out of court but now say the recordings merely show Reynolds liked to fantasize about sex over the telephone.

Reynolds looked down impassively at the defense table while the tapes were played, seeming to study the transcript with defense attorney Ed Genson. Most jurors were poker-faced, although one alternate and two male jurors smiled during parts of the conversation.

Heard recalled that "we had some really good times."

"Uh-huh," Reynolds responded, using a vulgarity for intercourse. Reynolds asked Heard to indulge him in a sexual fantasy.

"First of all, I want you to think about sex," Reynolds said. "... I want you to tell me about a sex thing you did, that I don't know about."

Heard asked for clarification.

"Right, a sex thing you did with some person, either a woman or some guy or something," he said.

Reynolds asked if it would be possible to have sex with Heard and another woman at the same time. Heard mentioned a fictional 15-year-old girl named "Theresa" who had spoken of having a "three-some."

"She's only 15?" Reynolds asked at one point. "You sure?"

Later, he urged, "Why don't you try to set it up?"

Fox mogul Murdoch favored to win TV legal war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Media baron Rupert Murdoch is expected to clear a final hurdle soon in a year battle to hang onto his Fox television network.

The Federal Communications Commission plans to rule on Friday that Murdoch's continued ownership of the network serves the public interest, even though Fox's ownership exceeded federal foreign ownership limits, according to Fox and officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The ruling, opposed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, would complete Murdoch's victory by not forcing him to sell the TV stations to comply with federal limits.

In May, Murdoch won a major victory at the FCC.

The agency had ruled Fox did deliberately conceal information about its ownership structure a decade ago when the company, whose parent is Australia-based News Corp., sought permission to acquire the six stations forming the backbone of the network. Murdoch, a naturalized American citizen, is majority shareholder of News Corp.

"We're expecting the FCC to make it very clear that Fox is free to own these stations and is clear to buy any other TV stations," said Fox attorney William Reyner of the upcoming ruling.

NAACP attorneys declined to comment. The group has the option of appealing the FCC's ruling.

The NAACP prompted an FCC investigation into Fox's ownership when it alleged Fox masked its true corporate identity in 1985 when seeking FCC approval to acquire six stations.

Man who shot two in robbery executed by injection

POTOSI, Mo. (AP) — Robert Murray's final word was "Peace" before he was put to death early Wednesday by injection for a robbery in which two men were killed by being shot in the back.

Murray, 32, had exhausted his court appeals, and Gov. Mel Carnahan rejected his request for a stay of the execution.

Death penalty opponents had argued the punishment was too harsh because Murray's brother, William, told authorities in 1991 after he was sentenced to life in prison that he was the triggerman. Another man was acquitted.

However, a witness to the 1988 robbery-killing said she saw Robert Murray shoot one victim.

The brothers met for the last time hours before the execution. The execution was witnessed by John Mahone, half-brother of victim Jeffrey Jackson. "Justice was served," he said.

Jackson, 27, and Craig Stewart, 26, were slain Dec. 6, 1985, in Jackson's apartment, where they had been partying with two women.

Gingrich encourages poor minority Americans to volunteer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — House Speaker Newt Gingrich urged poor and minority Americans on Wednesday to do more to improve their own lives, saying government can't solve urban crime, drug use and other ills.

"Government by itself hasn't succeeded. We're trying to find a way to increase volunteerism," Gingrich speaking via satellite, told the National Urban League's annual conference.

The Republican speaker told members of the 85-year-old civil rights organization that Habitat for Humanity and his own Earning Freedom Learning are good examples of how people can help each other.

Habitat, whose members include former President Carter, builds homes for the poor. The future homeowners are required to help build their homes and those of others.

Earning for Learning pays children $2 for each book read as a means of encouraging learning. It has spread to 17 states, Gingrich said.

Gingrich said he would meet with the Urban League to come up with plans to help poor urban youth.

The brothers met for the last time hours before the execution.

The execution was witnessed by John Mahone, half-brother of victim Jeffery Jackson. "Justice was served," he said.

Jackson, 27, and Craig Stewart, 26, were slain Dec. 6, 1985, in Jackson's apartment, where they had been partying with two women.

Gingrich encourages poor, minority Americans to volunteer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — House Speaker Newt Gingrich urged poor and minority Americans on Wednesday to do more to improve their own lives, saying government can't solve urban crime, drug use and other ills.

"Government by itself hasn't succeeded. We're trying to find a way to increase volunteerism," Gingrich, speaking via satellite, told the National Urban League's annual conference.

The Republican speaker told members of the 85-year-old civil rights organization that Habitat For Humanity and his own Earning For Learning are good examples of how people can help each other.

Habitat, whose members include former President Carter, builds homes for the poor. The future homeowners are required to help build their homes and those of others.

Earning for Learning pays children $2 for each book read as a means of encouraging learning. It has spread to 17 states, Gingrich said.

Gingrich said he would meet with the Urban League to come up with plans to help poor urban youth.

Abu-Jamal hearing opens

Ted Duncombe
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — From South Africa to San Francisco, the cry is gaining momentum: Free Mumia Abu-Jamal from death row.

The ex-journalist, condemned to die for the 1981 slaying of a police officer, has gained a global network of supporters who consider him a victim of a racially biased judicial system.

Prosecutors stand by evidence and witness testimony they believe is ironclad. That didn't stop protesters from showing up outside a courthouse Wednesday for the start of a hearing to determine whether Abu-Jamal will get a second trial in the shooting of Officer Daniel Faulkner.

The same judge who presided over his original trial will decide if he gets another chance. The hearing is expected to last for weeks; both sides expect Abu-Jamal's execution, set for Aug. 17, to be postponed.

Last year, Abu-Jamal gained attention when National Public Radio agreed to broadcast his commentary from death row, then withdrew the offer amid criticism. His commentaries did air on the Pacifica radio network.

The interest has intensified in the past two weeks with major protests virtually every day. Authorities say protesters often operate under illusions and inaccuracies.

In Berlin, at least 1,000 Abu-Jamal supporters marched through downtown last week. In South Africa, the country's largest black newspaper, The Sowetan, called on the international community to oppose the alleged racism in the case.

A cloth banner on a bridge crossing a Connecticut interstate demanded "Save Mumia." And a half-page advertisement Wednesday in The New York Times purported to tell readers "What You Haven't Read in the Press About Mumia Abu-Jamal."

His supporters carry signs bearing his ethereal, dreadlock-adorned visage, fax press releases about his being disciplined in prison, sell tapes of his commentaries, exchange information on the Internet and hold readings of his book, "Live From Death Row."

The hearing before Common Pleas Judge Albert Sabo, whom Abu-Jamal supporters call a "hangman," started with the judge ordering Pam Africa, a member of the radical group MOVE, to leave the defense table.

"She had too much to say during the last trial and that's why we had all the trouble," he said.

Faulkner's widow sat on a courtroom bench, apparently ready to relive the events that shattered her life 13 years ago.

Convicted cop killer Mumia Abu-Jamal arrives at Philadelphia's City Hall Wednesday. Abu-Jamal is back in court Wednesday as his attorneys are seeking to block his scheduled Aug. 17 execution by lethal injection.

Prosecutors said overwhelming ballistics evidence and eyewitness testimony prove Abu-Jamal shot Faulkner after finding his brother, William Cook, in a struggle with the officer on a Philadelphia street. The 25-year-old officer also shot Abu-Jamal, who was working as a cab driver.

Abu-Jamal never offered another explanation and his brother never testified. Abu-Jamal repeatedly disrupted the trial with political outbursts and several times was removed from the courtroom.

Defense lawyers contend prosecutors and police stacked the trial against Abu-Jamal, with Sabo's approval. Witnesses who could have helped his case were coerced to testify against him, intimidated into leaving town or simply unavailable during the trial, they say.

During sentencing, critics say, prosecutors inflamed the mostly white jury by mentioning Abu-Jamal belonged to the Black Panthers as a teen-ager.

Mayor Edward Rendell, who as district attorney 13 years ago sought the death penalty for Abu-Jamal, said he had spoken to protesters who were unaware Abu-Jamal was even found at the scene.

"If you're going to come in here and say this individual did not get a fair trial, know the facts of the case, know what happened," he said. "In my judgment, this is in no way a political case at all. This is a case of somebody murdering a Philadelphia police officer."

Bill Siemerling, Abu-Jamal's former station manager at WHYI radio in Philadelphia, called the defendant "an exceptionally gifted journalist." He said he was puzzled, however, by the international wave of support.

Supporters include actor Ed Asner, authors and academics such as E.L. Doctorow and Cornel West, black congressmen, trade unionists, Trotskyites and death penalty opponents.

Paris bomb victim ran back into wreckage to claim shoe

Amy Barrett
Associated Press

PARIS — He doesn't know why, but when Thierry Rabreau was blasted through the doors of the underground train, his pants on fire and shoes blown off, his first impulse was to get back on and find his blood-soaked shoe.

The regional RER train had just pulled into the Saint-Michel station when a bomb ripped through it.

It was 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. Rabreau had just looked at his watch and was preparing to exit the train packed with commuters, mostly headed toward middle-class southern suburbs.

"At the precise moment I touched the door handle, the explosion went off. The doors literally blew to bits, and I was blasted out onto the platform," Rabreau, a young industrial designer, told the newspaper Le Parisien.

The blast, described by one witness as a fireball, ripped open one car and shattered windows on much of the nine-car train. It tore away heavy white panels along the wall of the tunnel, blackening the concrete and filling the tunnel with black smoke.

After a few seconds, Rabreau got up and staggered back into the train amid the screams and the moans.

"All the passengers were on the floor, piled on top of each other, spattered with blood," he said. "I don't know how to explain this, but I went back to get my sneaker, (which was) filled with blood. I tore it out of that pile of bodies."

Above ground, on the edge of the Seine river a block from Notre-Dame cathedral, the Place Saint-Michel was full of tourists and Parisians in bustling cafes, bookshops and a fountain that is the Latin Quarter's most popular meeting spot.

Witnesses outside said they didn't hear the detonation. They knew nothing of the inferno below until victims began stumbling out into the peaceful, waning daylight, their faces blackened by smoke, stained with blood and tears. Some had bloody hand prints on their clothes from other victims.

"It was like watching people walk out of hell into heaven," said Jacky Oneir, a bookstore security guard. "Everything was normal, then suddenly a disaster came from below."

The sirens began to wail and the blue lights from dozens of rescue vehicles quickly converged at the site, turning it into a field hospital to sort out victims. Helicopters landed in front of Notre-Dame to pick up the gravely injured.

Down below, rescuers worked to free trapped victims, sawing off limbs of some maimed commuters.

Fire department Captain Jacques Kerdonouff was one of the first on the scene.

"When we got there, people in shock — their clothes blackened — were trickling out. You could have mistaken them for panhandlers," he told the daily Le Monde.

Georges Krajba was in the middle of the car in which the bomb exploded. "I felt like I was being electrocuted. I lost all my strength, but I kept thinking of God, and I was able to walk out of the car," he told French television.

Two of his toes were amputated and he suffered several burns, but he smiled when interviewed in his hospital bed Wednesday.

"I feel just fine. My motto is, where there's life, there's hope," he said.

Madeleine, a 44-year-old civil servant interviewed by daily Le Figaro when leaving the hospital last night, suffered a leg injury in the attack.

When the bomb went off, "I felt a sharp burning and then my leg started to bleed. I fell to the floor. Next to me, a woman had her leg torn off. She fell at the same time. She was screaming. Everyone around us was screaming," she said.

In the ensuing panic, victims were trampled, she said. "People were crazed, wanting to get out for fear it would blow again."

By Wednesday afternoon, seven people had died from the blast and more than 80 were injured.

One of the dead was 32-year-old Isabelle Costa.

She had planned a trip to Portugal two days later with her sister and brother-in-law.

"Last night they told us she was in a very serious condition," sobbed the brother-in-law, Joachim Barboza, told French television. "Five minutes later they called and said she was dead."

OBESITY CONTROLLED

Research: Hormone functions as fat-burner

Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Daily injections of a special hormone turned fat mice into lean and healthy rodents, suggesting to researchers that obese humans may one day control their weight with simple shots or pills.

Dr. Jeffrey Friedman of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute at Rockefeller University said the research in three labs forces a hormone he calls "leptin" to burn excess fat, while having no apparent effect on lean tissue.

"The protein resulted in almost a complete disappearance of body fat in these mice," Friedman said Wednesday. He said it is still not known, however, if the hormone is safe for long-term use and he emphasized "exercise and dieting is still the only recommended way of weight control."

"There appeared to be no side effects to the hormone," said Friedman, "but my instinct is to be cautious. We now have to prove that the hormone is safe."

Obesity is a major health problem in the United States. It is related to heart disease, cancer and diabetes, and Americans spend an estimated $30 billion a year to control body weight. Most techniques fail, experts say, and most dieters regain lost fat within a few years.

The hormone leptin, a name derived from the Greek word for "thin," is a protein normally produced by a gene called ob. This gene, first cloned last year by Friedman's lab, plays a key role in the body's control of its own weight. Researchers found that a mouse with a flawed ob gene becomes grossly obese and eventually develops diabetes and other fatal conditions. Such mice also lack the hormone leptin.

In the new research, scientists found ob mice injected with shots of leptin quickly began losing fat cells, ate less food, spent more time exercising and generally became healthier.

Within two weeks, he said, most of the extremely fat mice reduced their body weight by about 30 percent. And even normal mice experienced a steep loss of body fat, he said.

have a pair of experienced, game-breaking receivers.

Freddie Scott returns to the flanker position while Bobby Engram starts at split end. Engram, the 1994 Fred Biletnikoff Award winner as the nation's top receiver, and Scott make up the fiercest receiving corps in the Big Ten, if not the nation.

Last season the duo combined for 99 catches and more than 2,000

CAMPUS ROUNDUP

McNair secure, hungry
to please

Associated Press

Steve McNair, $30 million richer than he was in minicamp, continues to impress the Houston Oilers' coaching staff.

McNair worked out for the first time Wednesday since signing his new deal.

"He's hungry and he's been studying," said offensive coordinator Jerry Rhome. "He's running very smooth."

McNair, the No. 3 pick in the draft, finally signed a seven-year deal worth nearly $30 million Tuesday, then took to the practice field at Trinity University in San Antonio. Other Oilers watched him, dozens of cameras focused on him and fans lined up for autographs.

McNair said he was glad to get onto the field.

"I was just trying to get my timing back down," he said. "I'm just trying to go out there and feel comfortable with the things I'm doing and feel comfortable with the players."

Coach Jeff Fisher said it appears McNair has retained what was taught at an Oilers minicamp.

"Despite the distractions of the contract and everything, he studied," Fisher said. "He's got an understanding of what we're doing."

Associated Press

Kansas City Chiefs defensive tackle Dan Saleaumua works on his pass-rushing skills during practice Wednesday in River Falls, Wis.

Fisher and Rhome cautioned it would take some time to get McNair ready to be a starter — eight-year veteran Chris Chandler will start this season.

"He's eager and he's a good young man," Rhome said. "He's just getting started, so let's all be patient and have some fun."

Green Bay Packers

Guard Aaron Taylor, coming off knee surgery that wiped out his rookie season, got a scare when he injured his other knee during drills.

After a pileup, Taylor stayed on the ground and medical personnel rushed to his side.

After about 10 minutes, he walked off the field with a bag of ice on his left knee.

Coach Mike Holmgren said the team didn't think the injury was serious. He said Taylor might miss a couple of workouts.

Taylor sat out the 1994 season after rupturing the patellar tendon in his right knee during a minicamp last summer.

New England Patriots

New England's latest trouble at inside linebacker is with Vincent Brown's left knee. Brown, who underwent an MRI exam last weekend after complaining of soreness, watched from the sidelines as the Pats practiced Wednesday.

"Hopefully, it'll resolve itself," coach Bill Parcells said. "If it doesn't, we're now on a time frame where we've decided to wait because we don't have cause to do anything different."

Jacksonville Jaguars

Rookie tackle Tony Boselli, the second pick in last April's draft, called "totally bogus" a report on ESPN that his knee injury would sideline him for up to three months.

Boselli returned to camp late Monday after undergoing surgery on his left knee in Jacksonville on Friday. He has started his rehabilitation.

"That's not close to being true," Boselli said.

Arthroscopic surgery revealed Boselli's kneecap had popped out and then back, causing some damage to cartilage. Boselli's timetable for recovery was set at six to eight weeks.

"It's six weeks. At the most eight. I'm saying six. Three months is ridiculous," he said.

REDSKINS NO. 1 MAN

Shuler's time to shine is now

Joseph White
Associated Press

FROSTBURG, Md. — Growing more comfortable with his celebrity status, small-town boy Heath Shuler flashed a modest smile when asked to describe how he helped an elderly woman through an airport.

"She was upset because her flight was canceled," Shuler said. "I just sort of took her under my arm, and said follow me around."

Shuler went to extraordinary lengths to help the woman get to her destination. His efforts came to light only after she wrote him an open thank-you letter this week to a newspaper in Tennessee.

"That's the way I was brought up," said Shuler, a Southern Baptist from Bryson City, N.C., who keeps his distance from alcohol and cigarettes. "Every day you should at least do something. I believe the Boy Scouts have some sort of motto about that."

"If Shuler could only radiate that same confidence when confronted with an open receiver on third-and-5, the Washington Redskins would start smiling, too."

"He still isn't as consistent as I'd like to see him," coach Norv Turner said this week after another spotty practice by his starting quarterback.

Shuler may not have a wild streak off the field, but he has brought one with him to his first full NFL training camp — over-throwing, under-throwing, and, more often, throwing behind his receivers in simple drills as well as full-contact practices.

"We're just starting to get accustomed to knowing the offense," said Shuler, who spent almost all of his off-season working with Turner to get the playbook down pat. "A couple of times it was my fault, a couple of times it was (the receivers) fault. The thing is, we have to complete the pass regardless."

The errant throws have brought the first angry cries of "C'mon, Heath, get the ball down," from the Redskins faithful who make the pilgrimage to training camp.

"He's having to think about what he wants to do with the ball, where he wants to go, what his reads are," said former Redskins quarterback and Hall of Famer Sonny Jurgensen, now a radio and TV commentator. "All of those things force you to start aiming the ball at times. When he just starts throwing the football, cutting it loose, that's when we're going to see the big jump for Heath Shuler."

In other words, Shuler is still on a crash course, trying to combine the outstanding natural ability that made him the No. 3 overall draft choice after his junior year at Tennessee.

2ND STRAIGHT IN EXTRA INNINGS

Gilkey's single propels Cards past Mets

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Bernard Gilkey's 11th-inning RBI single Wednesday gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-2 victory over the New York Mets, who have lost five in a row.

It was the second consecutive extra-inning game and fourth in seven meetings between the two teams, with each winning twice. St. Louis won 8-7 in 11 innings Tuesday night.

The Mets took the lead in the top of the 11th when Tim Bogar hit an RBI single off Tony Fossas (2-0).

Geronimo Pena walked off Doug Henry (1-5) to start the bottom half and pinch-hitter Gerald Perry, who's 8-for-40 for the year, singled him to third. With one out, Ray Lankford singled off Eric Gunderson to tie the score and Gilkey followed with a single to center that easily scored pinch-runner Allen Battle from second.

Expos 4, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Butch Henry earned his third straight victory despite allowing 12 hits, and Rondell White and Sean Berry homered.

Henry (6-7) walked one and struck out none in 6½ innings, and the Cubs stranded 11 runners.

Mel Rojas pitched the ninth for his 19th save.

Kevin Foster (7-7) worked 6½ innings, allowing four runs on eight hits. He has allowed nine home runs in his last three outings.

Phillies 2, Pirates 1, 1st

Phillies 6, Pirates 4, 2nd

PHILADELPHIA — Pinch-hitter Tony Longmire hit a towering three-run homer in the eighth inning, rallying the Philadelphia Phillies past Pittsburgh for a sweep of their two-night double-header.

The Phillies won the opener on Mickey Morandini's sacrifice fly in the 11th inning.

Philadelphia trailed 4-3 in the second game when Charlie Hayes opened the eighth with a double off reliever Mike Dyer (3-2). Dave Gallagher tried to sacrifice, but Hayes was thrown out at third.

After Lenny Webster walked, Jason Christiansen relieved and Longmire connected for his third pinch-hit home run of the season.

Longmire's homer landed in the fifth level in right field — the last home run into that area was hit by Atlanta's Fred McGriff on Oct. 7, 1993 during the NL playoffs.

In the first game, the Phillies held Pittsburgh to two hits.

Andy Van Slyke and Darren Daulton opened the 11th with walks off Dan Plesac (3-3). Mark Whiten then grounded to third, and Jeff King threw to second for a force play as Van Slyke moved to third.

Astros 4, Rockies 3

HOUSTON — Pitcher Darryl Kile left the bases loaded in each of the first three innings and hit a two-run single to help end his five-game losing streak as the Houston Astros beat Colorado.

Kile (4-10) had not won since June 19. He allowed only one run in the first three innings, when he walked six.

Todd Jones got two outs for his ninth save. The Astros scored twice in the first off Armando Reynoso (2-3).

Red Sox 5, White Sox 3

BOSTON — Dave Hollins singled to break a sixth-inning tie in his Boston debut, and Mike Greenwell drove in three runs as the Red Sox beat the Chicago White Sox.

Hollins, who was obtained Monday from Philadelphia, was 0-for-2 with a walk before lining a bases-loaded single. Greenwell followed with a two-run single off Alex Fernandez (4-7) to give the Red Sox a 4-1 lead.

Ray Durham's fourth homer of the year cut Chicago's deficit to two runs in the seventh, but Zane Smith (5-6) won his second straight game after losing four of his previous five decisions.

St. Louis Cardinals' Bernard Gilkey (23) is surrounded by teammates after singling in the winning run in the 11th inning to defeat the New York Mets 3-2, Wednesday at Busch Stadium in St. Louis.

Blue Jays 6, Twins 2

TORONTO — Shawn Green hit a three-run double and Pat Hentgen struck out a season-high eight as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Minnesota Twins.

Hentgen (7-8) bounced back from a pair of shaky starts to help the Blue Jays stop a three-game losing streak.

Tigers 10, Athletics 4

DETROIT — David Wells waited out a 77-minute rain delay at the start, then won his ninth straight decision as the Detroit Tigers beat Oakland.

The Tigers have won two in a row after losing 10 of 11. The A's have dropped five straight and 11 of 13.

Wells (10-3) has not lost in 13 starts since May 18.

Royals 6, Yankees 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wally Joyner slid past the tag of Jim Leyritz to score the winning run with two outs in the ninth as the Kansas City Royals beat New York to end the Yankees' seven-game winning streak.

Joyner hit a leadoff single off reliever Bob Wickman (2-3), and was sacrificed to second by Gary Gaetti.

Joyner beat Randy Velarde's throw, which brought Yankees manager Buck Showalter running onto the field to argue with umpire Dale Scott.

Reliever Hipolito Pichardo went two innings for the victory.

Orioles 7, Rangers 6

BALTIMORE — The Texas Rangers lost their 10th straight game, their longest skid in 13 years, as Jamie Moyer pitched seven innings of three-hit ball in the Baltimore Orioles' victory.

The Rangers' losing streak matches the third longest in team history, equalling a 10-game drought in 1976.

Managers suspended for participating in brawl

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago White Sox manager Terry Bevington and Milwaukee Brewers manager Phil Garner were suspended Wednesday for four games for fighting and setting off a bench-clearing altercation during a July 22 game in Chicago.

"The American League holds managers to a higher standing and believes they share in the responsibility to end bench-clearing incidents," said league president Gene Budig.

Garner's suspension will begin today when the Brewers play a four-game home series against the California Angels.

Bevington has appealed and his suspension will be held in abeyance pending a hearing.

Suns name Nelson as assistant coach

PHOENIX (AP) — The Phoenix Suns hired former Golden State Warriors assistant coach Donn Nelson for a similar job Wednesday.

Nelson is considered an expert of foreign basketball talent and the Suns may seek to replace unrestricted free agent Danny Ainge, if Ainge goes to another team as expected, The Arizona Republic reported Wednesday.

Nelson, 33, was with the Warriors for five seasons and has coached in Lithuania, where he was an assistant coach of the 1992 team that won a bronze.

Manley arrested for fourth time in eight months

HOUSTON (AP) — Dexter Manley was arrested for the fourth time in eight months Wednesday by narcotics officers who have been investigating the former star lineman, authorities said.

Manley was charged with driving without a license and remains under investigation for drug possession, said Harris County sheriff's officer C.E. Gholar.

Manley was pulled over by officers from the Harris County organized crime and narcotics task force on a west Houston freeway, Gholar said.

When officers attempted to arrest him, Manley began running down the freeway shoulder. He was apprehended and taken to the Harris County Jail.

Television station KTRK reported that the officers found crack cocaine on Manley. Gholar said he could not confirm the report except to say Manley has been Cleveland starter Dennis Martinez hangs his head in the third inning Wednesday after ...

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Dennis Martinez knew his winning streak would end eventually. He's just glad it happened against a first-place team.

Martinez failed in his bid to become the first Cleveland pitcher in 58 years to win his first 10 decisions of a season Wednesday.

Martinez (9-1), who was the first Indians pitcher to open a season 9-0 since 1961, lost for the first time since July 31, 1994.

"It was going to end sooner or later," the 20-year veteran said. "I was trying to keep it going as long as I could, but it happened today — and against a great ballclub. So I have nothing to be ashamed of. At least I lost to one of the best teams in baseball."

The four-time All-Star, who hasn't beaten the Angels since Sept. 6, 1985 while with the Baltimore Orioles, allowed six runs and seven hits over six-plus innings. He struck out five and walked three.

Chili Davis tied a season-high with five RBI and hit a grand slam as part of a five-run third inning for the American League West-leading Angels.

Mike Harkey (5-6) earned his first victory since California claimed him off waivers from Oakland July 19. The right-hander allowed eight hits over six-plus innings, including solo homers to Paul Sorrento and Jim Thome.

"I just wanted to come here and do what I could to help," said Harkey, who struck out three and walked two. "I didn't think a team in first place would go after me, especially on waivers. It surprised me a lot."

A fielding error by Thome at third base set the stage for a five-run third inning by the Angels.

California tied it 1-1 on an RBI single by Tony Phillips, who had been 1-for-13 lifetime against Martinez. Tim Salmon followed a walk to Jim Edmonds with what could have been a double-play grounder. But Thome bobbled it, loading the bases with no outs.

"The ball was hit pretty hard and I just didn't make the play," an agitated Thome said.

Davis then drove a 2-2 pitch inside the right-field pole for his sixth career grand slam.

"I wouldn't say it was a bad pitch," Martinez said. "It was the kind of pitch that hitters sometimes guess on, and he guessed right. I put the breaking ball right in his powerhouse and he hit it well."

Hawkeye guards ejected in PT tangle

Forget about this just being a friendly game of summer basketball.

While they're teammates during the basketball season, Andre Woolridge and Mont'el Glasper proved they are fierce opponents during Prime Time playoff action.

Glasper and Woolridge both were ejected for a pushing match at the end of First National Bank's 123-109 upset win over Hills Bank Wednesday at City High.

"We were just too competitive, that's all there is to it," Glasper said. "It was nothing personal, just a couple of competitive guys."

Glasper helped First National's cause with 20 points and 11 rebounds while Woolridge netted a game-high 30 points before the ejection.

First National ran the fast break with ease all night as Hills Bank never made a serious run.

"It's playoff time and what we're planning on doing is winning," Woolridge said.

Tobey Newson led First National with 29 points. Jermain Wilford finished with 27 points and 17 rebounds and Bill Ennis-Inge contributed 27 points.

In the other late game, red-hot Active Endeavors/Lepic Kroegeer Realtors blew by Nike, 109-77.

Klay Edwards led all scorers with 30 points and pulled down 13 rebounds. Tony Brus added 27.

"They played a zone for most of the game," Active Endeavor's Tyrone Brehan said. "We shot real well in the first half, and just tried to do the same thing in the second. We got the ball to our big men and they were hitting their shots."

Ryan Bowen was limited to 12 points, but hit on five of his seven field goal attempts.

Jeff Hrubes led Nike with 21 points and 12 rebounds.

PENN STATE FOOTBALL

Lions' success depends on 'D'

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

After finishing 12-0 and crushing Oregon 38-20 in its first Rose Bowl appearance since 1923, Penn State fans must have thought another national championship was theirs.

Instead the media opted for sentimental favorite Tom Osborne and his Nebraska Cornhuskers, who also finished unbeaten.

Finishing second in the national polls despite its sparkling record was little consolation for Penn State, which beat its opponents by an average of 26 points per game, while Nebraska won the Orange Bowl by a mere touchdown.

However, Penn State coach Joe Paterno said his squad can't live in the past.

"Well, we didn't lose a game, so we can't complain about that," Paterno said. "It wouldn't do us any good to complain about the polls. There's so much other stuff to worry about."

In any other year, losing players the caliber of top-five NFL draft picks Kerry Collins and Ki-Jana Carter wouldn't just be something to worry about, but the type of problem that would lead coaches to refer to a season as a "rebuilding year."

Penn State also lost all-American tight end Kyle Brady to the NFL, but the Nittany Lions plunge head first into the 1995 season reloaded and ready to defend its Big Ten title.

who left Penn State early to become the top pick of the draft. Archie averaged nearly six yards per carry in a reserve roll last season.

The senior brings one other dimension to the Nittany Lion offense. Unlike Carter, who was used almost exclusively in the backfield, Archie caught 22 passes a year ago for 215 yards.

Filling Collins' shoes won't prove an easy task for Paterno, but with all the action Wally Richardson saw last season during Penn State blowouts, making the transition to starter will be a little easier.

Richardson, a 6-foot-4, 211-pound senior from South Carolina, can take solace in the fact he'll
