NFL FOOTBALL

Sunday's will be lonely no longer

Holy Cow it's August. And you know what that means, don't you? Next month is September. And you know what that means, don't you?

The NFL is almost here. It's practically in our laps. We're just weeks away from seeing 60 Minutes break into a thrilling, down-to-the wire 3 p.m. game.

Any day now, we'll see bonecrushing tackles, mind-boggling spin moves, heart-stopping interceptions, unbelievable kickoff returns and ... Hell, you know what to expect! It's the NFL!

And here are the top five reasons that I can't wait for this season to begin:

5. Oct. 1.

The San Diego Chargers travel to Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium. They will not return home in one piece.

The Chargers' fluke win in the AFC Championship game will still be fresh in the minds of the not-so-friendly Steelers. By the time the clock winds down, the score will be Pittsburgh 40, San Diego 0; the Chargers will have gained minus-76 yards, 19 San Diego players will be carted off to the hospital — three of them without heads — and Pittsburgh's Greg Lloyd will be arrested on nine counts of involuntary manslaughter.

4. Philadelphia and Randall Cunningham.

Adios Rich Kotite. Farewell. Not at all sorry to see you go. Hey, do you think it would be OK if the Eagles won a game this year instead of losing their last seven?

Kotite's gone. Ray Rhodes is in. Ricky Watters will beef up the offense. So that means Cunningham will return to his old, eye-popping, unstoppable form, right? Unfortunately, probably not. Supposedly Cunningham is struggling with the new 49er-style offense and he might have to wait a year (when he leaves Philly) to once again become the biggest stud in all of sports.

But wouldn't it be great if Cunningham, Arkansas Fred Barnett, Watters and Calvin Williams lit up every scoreboard in the league en route to a 19-0 season? I know. I know. I'm dreaming.

3. Da Bears and da NFC Central.

My other favorite team has a little more realistic chance of doing something this year. Not only have they improved from an impressive 1994 season with several key additions, but the rest of the NFC Central has slipped (namely Minnesota and Green Bay).

Chicago is actually favored to win the division by most and the receiving trio of Jeff Graham, Curtis Conway and Michael Timmons (plus Rashaan Salaam at running back if he ever decides to sign), will add some offensive flair to a pretty boring division.

I'm not too excited, though. I know all five Central teams will finish 9-7.

2. The AFC dogfight.

Patriots, Dolphins, Steelers, Bills, Raiders, Browns, Chiefs, Broncos, Chargers, Colts, and only six playoff spots available between them. Drew Bledsoe, Dan Marino, Rod Woodson, Marshall Faulk, Andre Rison, Junior Seau, Bruce Smith...

No, the AFC doesn't have a prayer of winning the Super Bowl, but the free-for-all 20-week race that leads up to the 49er Bowl might just be something worth talking about.

1. When I lay in bed until three or four o'clock on Sunday afternoons, I'll actually have an excuse. I'll be watching NFL football — the greatest damn invention since sliced bread.

UIHC employee dies following bout with cancer

The flag atop the Old Capitol will fly at half-staff today in honor of a former employee of UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Patricia Sovers, 53, of Solon, died of cancer early Sunday at UIHC. Sovers worked at UIHC in the Medicare department of the business office from 1987 to November 1994, when she was diagnosed with cancer. She had returned to work briefly after a surgery, but was not working when she died.

Sovers was a mother figure to many younger people in the business office, said Kathy Hedges, Sovers' supervisor and coordinator of the Medicare department.

"We're going to miss her very, very much," Hedges said. "She was an excellent employee; she had a very positive attitude about her work, her family and her illness."

Services for Sovers are today at 2 p.m. at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Solon.

Blood expert Herbert MacDonell testified that blood on a sock found near O.J. Simpson's bed had seeped from the inside of one ankle to the inside of the opposite ankle. He said that could have occurred only if the sock was lying flat with the inside surfaces touching — not if a murderer's foot were inside it.

Michele Kestler, director of the Los Angeles Police Department crime lab, testified outside the presence of the jury that she believes a news leak about DNA testing on the socks came from outside her lab.

Florida braces for Erin

Jackie Hallifax
Associated Press

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Erin slogged toward land with 85 mph winds and driving rain Tuesday, stirring up bad memories of catastrophic Hurricane Andrew just three years ago.

By nightfall, 70 miles of coastline north of Palm Beach were battered by gusting winds and sheets of rain. Hundreds of thousands of people were ordered to flee inland.

The first hurricane since Andrew to menace Florida's Atlantic Coast was expected to reach land around 2 a.m. Wednesday somewhere between Palm Beach and Vero Beach, about 70 miles to the north, said meteorologist Martin Nelson of the National Hurricane Center.

At 11 p.m. EDT, the center of Erin was about 55 miles east-southeast of Vero Beach

"We're ready to meet the Creator."

Rev. Edward Taylor, an 82-year-old Pentecostal minister who shuttered the windows on his home and headed inland — spring training home of the Los Angeles Dodgers — moving toward the west-northwest at 15 mph.

As Erin moved farther north than was earlier expected, authorities lifted an evacuation warning for 400,000 people in Dade County, which includes Miami and Homestead, the city to the south that was pulverized by Andrew in 1992.

Some got caught in the switch.

"When we left, they said it was going to hit Miami," said Paul Lazeau, one of three charter boat captains who thought they were beating Hurricane Erin by heading north from Palm Beach County. "We got here and they said it looks like it's going to be Fort Pierce."

Evacuation warnings remained in effect for 400,000 people along the central coast.

Police Chief Jim Gabbard said beaches and low-lying areas had been evacuated and police were patrolling to prevent looting.

"Right now, everything is under control and we're just waiting," Gabbard said.

The Rev. Edward Taylor, an 82-year-old Pentecostal minister, had shuttered the windows on his home before heading inland to his nephew's house.

But he said he wasn't worried: "We're ready to meet the Creator."

On Vero Beach's barrier island, palm trees shuddered in the 25-mph wind gusts and

Waco: Reno talks

Attorney General Janet Reno holds a gas mask while testifying Tuesday before a joint House subcommittee hearing on the 1993 raid on the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas.

Deaths of children haunt her

WASHINGTON — An unwavering Janet Reno defended her decision to use tear gas to end the siege at Waco, but said Tuesday the fiery deaths of children there "will be with me for the rest of my life."

"I made the best judgment I could based on everything I had available."

U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno

The attorney general rebuffed persistent Republican attempts to blame President Clinton for what went wrong at the Texas standoff two years ago. And Rep. Bill McCollum of Florida, one of two Republicans chairing the hearings, said he was satisfied she "made the ultimate decision."

But the co-chairman, Rep. Bill Zeliff of New Hampshire, suggested at one point that Clinton made the decision and at another point he improperly distanced himself from the decision.

Reno insisted, as she has from the start, the decision to use tear gas was hers and Clinton pledged to "back me up."

"I made the best judgment I could based on everything I had available," she said.

Zeliff pressed the issue of responsibility for the siege. "When military weapons are turned on the American people, who makes that decision?" Zeliff asked.

Reno was the final witness in 10 days of hearings into what went wrong at Waco, where

Congress votes to lift embargo

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rejecting both a veto threat and a warning that it would "Americanize" a savage war, Congress approved legislation Tuesday to lift the arms embargo against Bosnia so the Muslim-led government can better defend itself.

On an overwhelming vote of 298-128, the House joined the Senate in

"How many more atrocities do we have to witness?"

How many more children do we have to see killed before we act in Bosnia?"

Rep. David Bonior, the second-ranking Democrat in the House supporting the measure that repudiates a policy pursued by President Clinton. While the margins in both houses were big enough to override a veto, the White House expressed confidence it could ultimately prevail.

Despite Clinton's efforts, lawmakers of both parties were plainly angered by what many called the failure of the current policy to deter Serb aggression.

"How many more atrocities do we have to witness?" asked Michigan Rep. David Bonior, the second-ranking Democrat in the House.

"How many more children do we have to see killed before we act in Bosnia?" he said near the end of a debate in which numerous lawmakers likened Serbs to the Nazis and "ethnic cleansing" to the Holocaust.

"The modern-day Hitlers are at it," said Rep. Bill Paxton, R-N.Y. — running the "rape camps and torture camps."

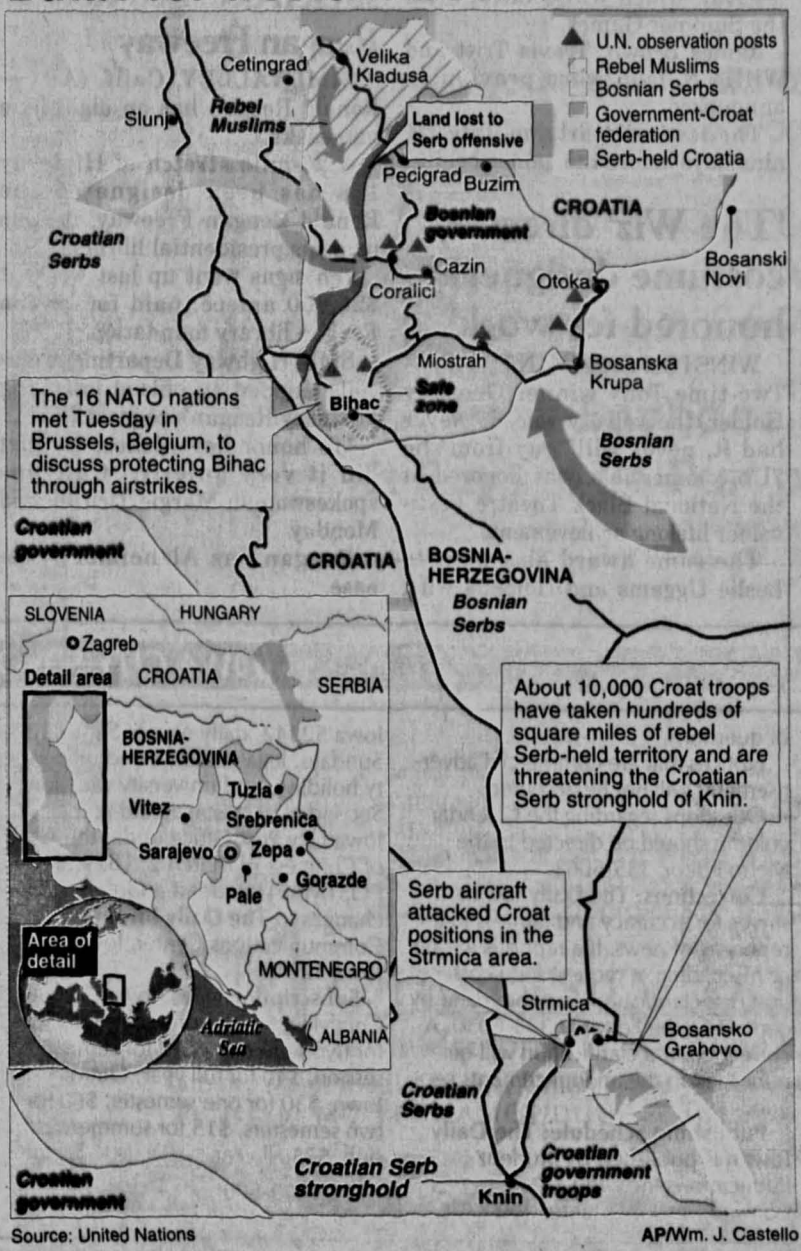

But others said lifting the embargo could set into motion an inevitable chain of events culminating in 25,000 GIs being deployed to help evacuate U.N. peacekeepers.

"Imagine explaining to the American people that your kid died in Bosnia to perform a retreat," said Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, his voice rising in indignation.

The measure would require Clinton to end U.S. support for the international arms ban after withdrawal of U.N. troops now on the

NATO expands protection

Paul Ames
Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — NATO on Tuesday extended its threat of airstrikes against rebel Serbs to protect all remaining "safe areas" in Bosnia, diplomats said.

The allies agreed last week to use air power to deter attacks against the eastern enclave of Gorazde. On Tuesday, they extended the threat to cover Tuzla, Bihac and Sarajevo if the U.N.-protected "safe areas" are attacked.

The threat was expanded during a meeting of the ambassadors of all 16 members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"We have an agreement. A good one," said John Goulden, the British Ambassador to NATO.

Officials said the allies would also consider enlarging the small "safe area" within the Bihac enclave. They gave no details.

Rebel Serbs from Bosnia and Croatia, allied with renegade Muslims, have been attacking the enclave for the past week, but — apparently fearful of NATO retaliation — have avoided attacking the "safe area" itself.

DEVON ALEXANDER

I'm out: Kudos to stuff that rocks I.C.

So I went to pick up my cap and gown last Friday, and inside my mortarboard there is a big anti-drug and alcohol campaign slogan — you know: don't party, substances aren't cool, be responsible.

Isn't the "Just Say No" campaign dead yet? I figured after dragonlady Reagan left — and our president had "not inhaled" — the establishment would get off our backs about polluting our bodies any way we saw fit.

Oh yeah, did I forget to mention I'm graduating Friday? Guess what that means? Yep, this is my last column for The Daily Iowan — ever. Not that I expect anyone to really care, but I've had fun writing it this summer, and rumor has it one or two people liked reading it.

But without my column, Sean Johnson over at the Campus Review might actually have to read something to poke fun at the DI. Some guy from the "Right Side of the Story" ran into the DI newsroom Tuesday afternoon and threw a handful of papers on a table, and then ran out before they even landed.

And I made it into the Campus Review, because I'm so cute. At least, I think that's it, because Johnson couldn't get enough of my picture, not to mention my stunning exposé of Iowa City stupidity.

Now, I'm a pretty sensitive guy, and I want to apologize to anyone I may have offended over the summer. Nah, never mind.

But after a whole summer of ranting, I kind of want to leave by telling people about the good things I saw in Iowa City over the last four years. Bear with me. It's just people, places and things that have made my college career bearable. I was going to do a four-year recap of stupid things, but I don't have enough room.

First of all, I must mention the beer garden at Gabe's because that's where I met my girlfriend last summer. Remember her, the one who rules my world. OK, great.

I have to admit, the beer garden itself is cool, too, but of all the things I could have gotten there (ringworm, shingles, killed), I ended up with her.

As far as bars go, George's Buffet, The Nickelodeon, Mike's Tap, Joe's Place and the Deadwood rocked Iowa City. Mumm's Saloon is cool, too, but I never seem to remember my whole visit when I go there.

Speaking of Mumm's, the owner and UI religion Professor Jay Holstein, of all people to combine in one sentence, taught me one of the coolest things I learned in college. It's actually two things, but they are closely related:

No. 1: Hate your enemies, but respect them and the power they have. Holstein taught me that when I took Literature and Philosophy Thought, a class he wasn't thrilled about teaching.

And No. 2: You've got to respect people who think, even if you don't like what they are saying.

And I guess we showed the people who don't think this summer, eh?

What else did I learn in college? One landmark I like is the fountain downtown, "Three Men Peeing." Where else in the world could you have a fountain named that, especially since people swim in it? What if they built a "Three Men Peeing"? Would people still swim in it?

Iowa City's got the laid-back attitude that would allow such a fountain. Just don't tell the Iowa state Board of Regents, or they might get all in a huff about golden showers or something.

Despite the stupids, Iowa City is a good place to live for four or five years (nine is too many, J.D.). Most of the people you meet are cool to you (at least to your face), and it's always relaxed around here.

Enough already. Ugh, my stomach hurts from all that sap, but you all know what I mean.

Better make a transition now to something nicer. OK, how about people I've met, or learned from, who I enjoyed knowing? Holstein, Professor Kathleen Kamerick, Associate Professor Richard Runge and Professor George Walker are all people I'll remember as being good at what they did, and who made it fun.

If you ever get a chance to go to a Iowa City City Council meeting, do it for one reason: Bruno Pigott. He's a city councilor, but he's the coolest guy. I've seen him at the Deadwood, and while he was still campaigning, he stopped at a party a friend was having. He likes students, and their interests (unlike a lot of Iowa Citizens).

You know, I've had a lot of employers in town in the last four years, but one stands out: Dan Berry. I'm not telling you he is, 'cause he might get mad, but if all of my bosses for the rest of my life are as cool as he is, I'll be set. Ask anyone who's ever worked for him.

Smooch, smooch. Jesus, I feel like a Gannett paper. Anyway, just a few more kudos, and I'll be on my way. I like charging at the Union, I like the ducks (sometimes), I really like the ginkgo trees (except in the fall) and I think the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, the Domestic Violence Intervention Program and the Women's Resource and Action Center should get more money, because they're great programs.

To all the people who think the DI sucks: Screw off; it was voted the best college newspaper in the nation in 1994 by the Society of Professional Journalists, and it's in the running for 1995. We're the best! We're the best! I've wanted to say that for a long time.

And just to make up for being so damn butt-kissy today, here's something else, to all the Iowa Citizens who aren't as cool as Bruno.

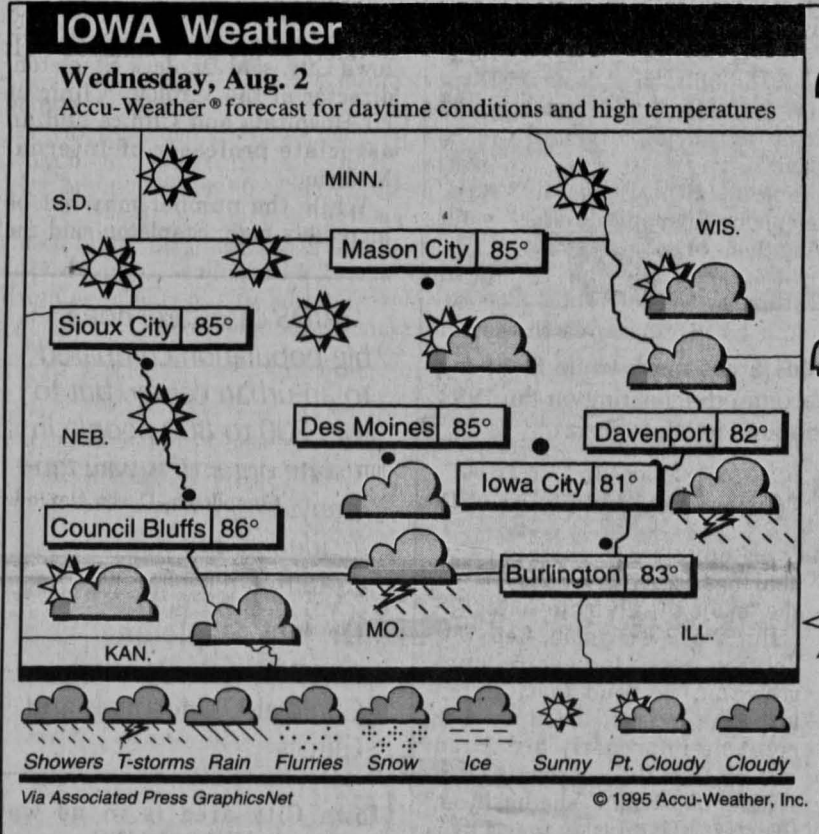

What would Iowa City be without the UI? What if the it were in West Branch, Iowa? There'd be no coffee shops, no sports teams, less live music and no damn Hancher Auditorium. Iowa City's reputation for being a Midwest cultural and academic center would be gone. So there. I bet if people tried harder to appreciate the students, and take the bad with the good more gracefully, they'd stop throwing up in the Pedestrian Mall.

Iowa City is cool, but not as cool as Molly Rose Rutten. There are good things about it, and I hope I'll be allowed back in town some day. Until then, please don't let the stupidity get out of hand. I'm out

The announcer didn't identify the object, but witnesses said it was a shell casing.

Love was to perform for an hour as part of the Lollapalooza festival. She left the stage at Star Lake Amphitheater halfway through the set.

"It's America in the '90s," Solursh said. "People have drive-thru fast food instead of cooking, so now they hire their demonstrators. Not like in the '60s, when we actually believed in what we were doing."

Waters said she will still make the call to Leach, and Solursh said there was at least one tangible benefit from the MCI protesters.

"It keeps these people away from the phone, so that they won't call me to tell me to switch my phone service," Solursh said.

While deregulation is an issue that could affect every American consumer, many said they were not aware of what was going on in Congress.

"I hadn't heard of (the bill), so at least I learned something" said UI senior James Skinner. "But I would certainly like to hear both sides of the issue."

The protesters contended the House bill would give local telephone companies unfair advantages, allowing them to enter the long-distance market without facing reciprocal competition from within the local market.

Nicholas Johnson, a UI visiting professor of law who served on the Federal Trade Commission, said the proposed deregulation could result in higher prices for consumers.

"I've never met a member of a business community who genuinely wants competition," Johnson said. "What (the telecommunications industry) wants is monopoly, but without government regulation."

With less regulation, Johnson said, corporations are likely to merge, similar to Walt Disney's purchase of ABC.

"The people (behind the bill) talk good market ideology, but they don't practice it," he said. "What they are really providing is an opportunity for cable and telephone companies to merge."

These mergers, Johnson said, could result in unregulated monopolies, in which case companies would be free to charge as much as they want for their services.

Low-income housing plan shifts hands

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council referred plans to build low-income housing apartment complexes in the Sarasota Springs neighborhood back to the Planning and Zoning Committee Tuesday night.

The two-story, medium-density apartment complexes — which would provide 41 available units to needy families — were proposed for construction in a low-density, single-family neighborhood.

In a 5-1 vote, the council decided the committee should review the project due to congestion problems.

"Density and safety control are my main concerns," said Councilor Ernie Lehman.

Re-zoning for 32 units instead of 41 was a possible solution suggested by the council, but members of the southeast neighborhood said the problems reach much further than traffic and congestion.

"It really only gets at issues of comprehensive planning, only one of a host of problems," said Mary Losch, a neighborhood representative. "The issue is that they are not woven into the fabric of the neighborhood. We think they deserve more."

Maximum safety and integration are the neighborhood's main hopes, she said.

"The issue is whether they are connected with the community, not whether they can reasonably live there," Losch said.

The single dissenting vote came from Councilor Jim Throgmorton. He said in his experience, living in apartments did not prevent community cohesiveness, and the neighborhood project was an excellent effort to spread low-income housing throughout the city.

"If not the southeast, then where?" Throgmorton said. "This location will be well-suited."

About 2,000 Iowa City residents are currently in need of low-income housing, he said.

Those living in the area were disappointed the council did not wholeheartedly deny the proposal and will return to refute any other proposals at future meetings.

SAM DONALDSON AND GOOFY

Tonight on 'Nightline'...

In a bold and stunning move, The Walt Disney Co. announced a merger with broadcasting giant Capital Cities — ABC Inc. The takeover by Disney is the second largest corporate merger in U.S. history and is going to make Disney the largest and most powerful manufacturer and distributor of entertainment and information in the world. Recently, a merger between Gannett and Multimedia Inc. was executed. In terms of size and impact, the Disney deal makes that one look like new management at a local restaurant.

In an agreement reached Monday evening and reported to be worth about $19 billion, Disney chairman and chief executive officer Michael Eisner and Thomas Murphy, of Capital Cities — ABC Inc., have created the latest media mega-giant. In a world that is seeing the business of news and entertainment come under an increasingly narrow ownership, the Disney / ABC merger has paired a company known for creating the world's most recognizable goof balls with a company that owns the nation's most successful network.

Mickey Mouse no longer means Annette Funicello and the Mouseketeers; he now represents an international media tycoon.

Disney owns Walt Disney Pictures, Touchstone Pictures, Miramax Films, Buena Vista Distribution, Buena Vista International, Disney Theatrical Productions and Hollywood Pictures. In television, Disney has KCAL-TV in Los Angeles, several cable channels (including The Disney Channel and Disney Interactive) and a partnership with three Baby Bell telephone companies that will soon offer video and interactive television. On top of that, there are the theme parks, the Disney Publishing Co. and some television production facilities.

In acquiring ABC, Disney gets eight more television stations and more than 225 affiliates that reach 99 percent of American households, ESPN and ESPN 2, partial ownership of Lifetime, A&E and cable interests in Germany, Scandinavia and Japan. Capital Cities — ABC Inc. also owns 21 radio stations and the ABC network services over 3,000 stations. Disney will also acquire the seven daily newspapers and several magazines that are owned by ABC.

What the merger does is combine the massive production and marketing capability of Disney with ABC's domestic and global distribution network, providing the framework for a vastly powerful entertainment and news conglomerate with the ability to produce, market and distribute information on a worldwide scale.

Eisner and Murphy have just created one of the most powerful institutions in the world. The smiling Mickey Mouse that decorated the wall behind the two men (as Eisner announced the deal at a press conference on Monday) belied the reality of the situation. Mickey Mouse no longer means Annette Funicello and the Mouseketeers; he now represents an international media tycoon. Peter Jennings and Sam Donaldson now have the same boss as Mickey Mouse and Goofy.

TRADING BOOKS FOR BOXES

Lease deadlines untimely

As the sweltering month of July came to a close and the end of the summer semester is in sight, hundreds of local apartment renters packed up their belongings and moved them across town. Many landlords and rental agencies in Iowa City have scheduled their renters' leases to terminate on July 31 and new contracts to begin on Aug. 1.

"This wouldn't be a problem, but the dates fall during the last week of summer school, a time of tests and stress that rises as fast as the mercury in a thermometer.

Final exams are renowned for being difficult. Students spend hours studying and stressing over the results. Many classes only offer a midterm exam and a final. Obviously, the final test is very important to one's grade. If valuable studying time must be spent moving, grades can suffer.

Once one moves, the work isn't over. Boxes must be unpacked and furniture must be arranged. Many people find they cannot be completely comfortable unless everything is in place. Things must be unpacked right away in order to feel at home in new, unfamiliar surroundings.

Yet, summer school finals are also hanging over the heads of students during this first week of August. Sure, school should come first, but apartment leases, utility bills and telephone services must also be arranged. And organization takes time — time that should be spent studying, but instead must be spent moving.

And with many students returning to their respective homes (where their parents reside) during the two-week break between the summer and fall terms, students must get used to their apartment again when they return.

UI students are pressured enough to do well in school without additional stress. Finals week is a time for studying, and distractions only make schoolwork that much harder to do. Students don't need the additional stress of having to move all of their belongings to another location.

The transition between semesters would be much more simple if leases ended after summer school finished. It would reduce distractions and give students the opportunity to get down to the books, and not the boxes.

Adventures of unconverted heathens in Mass

It is Sunday and I am waiting for my family to return from church. This is not an ordinary event — neither the family part nor the church part. But because it is my grandparents' 50th wedding anniversary, we have all converged on this resort in Florida. And because my grandparents are Catholic, someone thought it might be a nice gesture to round up all the heathen relatives and drag them to Mass. One of two things will happen: either souls will be saved or the church will be hit by a freak bolt of lightning.

But here I am, back at our pastel village of cottages on the beach, the only one of 22 of us to decline the possibility of salvation / damnation. "It's not about church," my father said this morning. "It's about being together." But then that's what Northern Ireland has been saying for 800 years.

Of course, I had a speech rehearsed: "Grandma and Grandpa know I love them. I am not going to go to church because I will feel like a hypocrite. I will not show my loyalty to the family by supporting an institution I disagree with." That sort of thing.

But no one asked. So here I am, plunked down on a floral pastel couch wondering if I am really being true to what I believe in or if I am just a bad granddaughter — or both.

The flight down to Florida was completely odd. I took American Transair, an airline that appears to be run entirely by a high school senior class. The choice for dinner was peanuts or pretzels, and the flight attendant kept forgetting her lines and giggling. ("Emergency exits are located, um, uh, ... Ha ha ha ha ha!")

The stop at an airport halfway there was right out of a surrealist's portrait of hell. My flight was late and the terminal was packed with thousands of people, all of whom looked like the kind of person you wouldn't want sitting next to you on a Greyhound bus (think Dustin Hoffman in "Midnight Cowboy"). I was running on four hours of sleep, I had to say goodbye to my best friend who is moving to New York while I'm gone and, thanks to a particularly self-destructive evening the night before, the whole time I was on the verge of curling into a small ball like a potato bug.

You have to understand that, of 22 people, 20 of them haven't been to church since "Bonanza" went off the air.

When my plane finally touched down at St. Petersburg Airport at 11:30 p.m., I was happy not just to be there, but to still be living.

The Wicker Inn on Longboat Key, where we are staying, is true to its name. If there is any wicker furniture left on this side of the state, it is not because this place didn't try to buy it. But besides the fact that it is decorated like a showroom for "Floridian Style" at Sears, the place is wonderful. It's right on the beach, there's a pool and my family is here.

And then this morning we had to bring up religion. You have to understand that, of 22 people, 20 of them haven't been to church since "Bonanza" went off the air. But for some reason they all agreed, despite huge personal objections, to go through with this "for the family." They are all liberals, they all disagree with the Vatican party line, they are all lapsed (ways way lapsed) Catholics. Still, they were talked into traipsing off to church.

I'm not sure what it is that disturbs me so much about all of this. People go to church all the time, just not these people. Sitting here in my pastel cottage, I worry briefly that my father might have some sort of sermon-induced epiphany and want to have me baptized. Could I outrun him?

But this is silliness. One Mass isn't going to make a Catholic out of him again. It isn't vital, unless it's something in the holy water, in which case I'll probably have to enroll in catechism. Enough. I'm overreacting.

They're back. My aunt walks into the living room. "I have one thing to say," she says before she slams the bedroom door. "You were right." My cousin sulks in behind her. "It was awful," she says. "The priest went on about how abortion was evil, and how being gay was evil. He said the only thing we had to be thankful for was that we had him to preach to us. I wish I had some spit balls."

"I'm glad I went," my father will tell me later, "because it reminded me why I don't go anymore."

So the heathens returned safely from Mass, unconverted. Whether this is a loss or gain for the Catholic Church we may never know.

Baseball does have a fan-sensitive side

To state the obvious, it's been a miserable year for baseball. Probably the worst since the Black Sox Scandal.

Besides last season's disastrous strike and its bitter aftertaste, the usual drug problems and the whining by players, there were other embarrassments.

It was bad enough that wealthy stars from the present and past sold their autographs, but several recently pleaded guilty to not paying taxes on this easy pocket money.

Even Mickey Mantle's lifesaving surgery had many people saying that a lifelong lush didn't deserve a new and sober liver.

But not everybody in baseball is a self-obsessed, immature stiff. It just seems that way. There are a few exceptions, and here's one of them.

"I left Chicago in 1980," said Richard Sturm, 48, "and moved to the Pacific Northwest to get away from the big city. I wanted to find that smaller town where people still cared about people."

Sturm, a business executive, found that friendliness in Eugene, Ore.

"But on July 4, I lost my father and I had to return to the Midwest. My brother and I had to go into Chicago to tie up some loose ends."

Sturm's father, Harry, who died at 80, was formerly second-chair cellist for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and later first cellist with the Milwaukee Symphony.

"He loved music and he loved baseball. A very quiet, nice guy. Very athletic, too."

"When my brother and I got to Chicago, we were driving past Addison Street, and we looked at each other and said, 'We're not that far, are we?'

"So we doubled back and headed for one of dad's favorite places. Ours, too."

"We parked across the street, got out of the car and stood for a moment and just stared. We were kids again, full of excitement. We were standing in front of Wrigley Field."

"As my brother Fred put it, 'A place where it will always be spring.'"

"My brother looked at me and said that if there was a game today, we're going. But at the ticket booth, we got the bad news: they're out of town for the week."

"So, oh, well, we could take a walk around the park and reminisce."

"As we were walking, I pushed on a large iron gate and it opened. I said to my brother, 'Let's go.' It was trespassing and we knew it, but it didn't seem wrong."

"We walked up the stairs to the right-field side and the field came into view. It was an emotional moment for both of us."

"We sat on the concrete steps and stared at the field — and all the stories Dad told us came rushing back. How, when he was a boy, he would show up at Wrigley to clean up the stands, put up seats and get into the game free. It was the only way he could afford to see a game."

"I noticed a groundskeeper out on the field. Thinking I had nothing to lose, I went over and told him why we were there and asked if we could walk on the outfield."

"He opened the gate to the field and all he said was, 'Sorry about your dad. Make yourself at home.'"

"We couldn't believe it. We were actually walking on the outfield grass of Wrigley Field, touching the ivy. We were kids again."

"About 15 minutes later, Mike — that was the groundskeeper's name — walked toward us. I assumed we had overstayed our welcome."

"But as he approached, he said, 'These aren't new, but here's a couple of game balls.'"

"We shook his hand, and when he walked away, he said it again: 'I'm really sorry about your dad.'"

"It didn't end there. Mike's boss asked him who we were. When he found out why we were there, his boss suggested that we might like to sit in the dugout for a while."

"Gosh, you sit in the dugout and you see the field and the dimensions like you've never seen it before. My brother said: 'Look, the wind is blowing out. It's a home run day.' We were sitting there, where Ernie Banks used to sit. And we could look up at the right-field bleachers, where my father caught a home run once."

"We stayed for more than an hour, walking the field, sitting in the dugout, playing catch in the outfield."

"When we left, I tried to give Mike a couple of $20 bills. He said: 'No way.' He and his boss wouldn't let us even buy them lunch."

"They just said that it was nice to have friendly people come to the park but that they were sorry it was under these circumstances."

"I was wrong back in 1980. You don't have to move to the country to find decent people. We'll probably never see Mike again, but I'll always consider him a friend."

Maybe the team should take away Mike's rake and make him a coach. There's a lot he could teach the players.

Senate motion targets diplomats' unpaid parking fines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 94-2 to deny $10 million to the United Nations if it refuses to turn over names of diplomats and countries who owe parking fines and other debts in New York City.

"All go unpaid while the diplomats hide behind the United Nations blue flag," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., citing reports that diplomats and foreign missions have accumulated more than $9 million in overdue debts.

The Senate adopted an amendment Monday by Sen. Jesse Helms, Foreign Relations Committee chairman, to a State Department reorganization bill. Helms, R-N.C., had wanted to withhold $20 million, but that was reduced by half to more closely reflect the actual debt owed.

In addition to parking fines, foreign officers owe bills to landlords, hospitals, banks, stores and restaurants, according to a report in March by a U.N. committee on relations with the host country.

"It is not the United Nations' fault that this is happening," said U.N. spokesman Ahmad Fawzi. "They should take it up with the delinquent diplomats." He said the United Nations would not name the diplomats who owed money.

Exact risks to women with silicone breast implants unclear

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women with silicone breast implants are not at a big risk of such diseases as lupus, the nation's top drug regulator told Congress Tuesday. But that doesn't guarantee there is no risk, he said.

Food and Drug Commissioner David Kessler said he can't estimate how likely these women are to have implants fall apart inside their breasts and flood their bodies with a pound of silicone gel. Some studies suggest 71 percent of these women will eventually experience such a rupture.

And he couldn't say if certain women, perhaps as many as 10,000, are particularly vulnerable to the effects of this silicone and will be at some increased risk for devastating diseases.

"As a doc, I'd love to be more reassuring," Kessler told a congressional hearing. But if his own mother needed an implant, Kessler said, he wouldn't have enough data to give her clear advice.

Some 1 million American women have the implants, and thousands claim the implants have injured them, including causing severe autoimmune diseases such as lupus and rheumatoid arthritis. Implant manufacturers have agreed to a $4.25 billion court settlement with about 280,000 women, but that settlement is in jeopardy because there may not be enough money.

Implant manufacturers insist the products are safe, citing studies, including one of 80,000 women published in June, that found no link with autoimmune diseases. Some other doctors argue the implants are very dangerous.

HURRICANE ERIN

fronds littered the deserted streets. The incessant whoosh of the wind and intermittent rain showers warned of the storm's approach, while large white-capped waves pounded the beach.

Earlier in the day, as Erin moved through the Caribbean, its heavy rains were blamed for a plane crash in Jamaica that killed five people. Erin ripped boats from their moorings and caused extensive damage to fields of bananas, avocados, mangoes and watermelons in the Bahamas.

In Florida, those taking warnings about Erin's approach most seriously were people hit hardest by Andrew, the nation's costliest natural disaster with $30 billion in damage.

"I'm scared of the wind," said Helen Bryant of Homestead, who stayed in a home that lost two rooms and a roof to Andrew in August 1992. She said she was concerned about her grandchildren, "Even if they hear a hard rain with no hurricane in sight, they get nervous."

Supermarkets and gas stations were jammed with residents and tourists caught by surprise at Erin's new, more northerly path.

Although Vero Beach was unscathed by Andrew, workers raced to board up the windows at Waldo's, an oceanfront restaurant in this tourist and retirement community.

"We've got a lot of artifacts from around the world, and we're taking a little extra time to get the stuff off the walls," said Harry Stein, the restaurant's manager.

Still, thousands of coastal residents ignored evacuation orders.

Nearly two-dozen curiosity-seekers gathered on Vero Beach's barrier island in the evening.

"I'm not looking for trouble, but I want to see and experience nature's strength," said one wave-watcher, Armand Vaccala, a 51-year-old businessman visiting from Bern, Switzerland.

At an emergency shelter at Vero Beach's Glendale Elementary School, Ken and Krista Ball of Gahanna, Ohio, fretted about their beachfront condominium and prepared for a tough night on the hard auditorium floor.

"I'm not real excited about spending a night of our vacation here," Ball said. "They don't even have pads to sleep on."

But smells of ravioli, tuna sandwiches and vegetable soup filled the Civic Center in Fort Pierce where a shelter with room for 350 was less than half full by early evening.

Evelyn Wade, 81, sat on a bench with her husband, John, 84. Both have health problems and couldn't find a hotel room when they were evacuated from their mobile home in Port St. Lucie.

"After this is over, we're on the move," Evelyn Wade said. "We're going to go live with our son in Maine."

Although its sustained winds of 85 mph were not nearly as strong as Andrew's 145-mph winds, Erin posed a different danger, threatening 3 to 6 inches of rain and 5- to 8-foot storm tides in an area already saturated.

"There is simply no way we're going to avoid flooding," said Kate Hale, Dade County's emergency management director.

Hale, who asked the famous question during the federal government's slow emergency response to Andrew — "Where the hell is the cavalry?" — warned against complacency.

"One of the worst moments in my life was that point in Hurricane Andrew where people were calling and saying, 'I need to go, I waited until the last minute,' and it was too late to send help," she said. "If they are in the path of the storm, they may not survive."

NRA

ating the need for every membership dollar.

Issues that have drawn sometimes unwanted attention to the organization included an NRA fund-raising letter that called federal law enforcement agents "jack-booted government thugs," prompting former President Bush to cancel his membership. Last month, it was revealed the NRA paid for consultants helping Republican congressional aides probe the Waco disaster and an NRA staffer told prospective witnesses she was part of the Waco hearing team. Witnesses said they believed she worked for Congress.

Wayne LaPierre, the NRA's executive vice president, said the group remains in good shape and its membership crept back up over the 3.2 million mark in July. He blamed the dropoff on an increase in dues late last year that boosted the minimum annual membership fee from $20-$35.

"What you're seeing with membership is related to the increase in dues and the planned cutback in membership promotion until we could see what kind of impact the dues increase would have," LaPierre said. "We don't need to increase membership right now. What we've wanted to do is stabilize and keep our membership."

NRA Treasurer Wilson Phillips said some members dropped out because they don't feel any urgency to send money, given the Republican-led Congress agrees with the NRA on most gun issues.

"The rest of this is cyclical," Phillips said. "Any organization is going to go up and down a little bit."

"An HIV and AIDS clinic opened in June of 1988 because in infectious diseases, we had gotten to the point where three-fourths of our patients were AIDS cases," he said. "The clinic was formed to provide more centralized care. We've seen close to 600 people since 1988."

As the numbers increase, attitudes about HIV and AIDS are becoming slightly more informed and tolerant. However, both afflictions remain highly charged issues, local experts say.

From Sen. Jesse Helms', R-N.C., statements of intolerance to the recent death of the co-founder of the Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education (ICARE), AIDS and HIV continue to touch the lives of everyone.

Laura Hill, director of ICARE, said tolerance may be on the rise, but many misconceptions remain.

"In the Iowa City area, people are pretty well-informed," she said. "But they still think, 'This couldn't happen to me.'"

In Johnson County, 56 people have been diagnosed with AIDS since 1983, according to state statistics. However, that number is somewhat misleading because many people move back to smaller communities, such as Iowa City, after they are diagnosed elsewhere. Lou Crist, educational coordinator for the Midwest AIDS Training and Education Center's Iowa site, located in Iowa City, said many people with AIDS and HIV return to the Iowa City area because of the health facilities and because they want to be near their homes.

"A number of infected people come back to their local communities," he said.

Those who do return to Iowa City are lucky, Hill said.

"The Johnson County area is unique and lucky because the UI Hospitals and Clinics are right here."

Stapleton said many people can't identify with AIDS on an individual level because they have yet to see their peers become infected. However, he noted people aged 30 to 39 have the highest incidence of AIDS cases, and AIDS takes about 10 years to completely develop.

"The average time from infection to AIDS is 10 years — most of those patients were infected in their early 20s," he said. "The problem with AIDS education is that young adults don't see their friends with the consequences. It isn't personalized."

Hill agreed, noting whenever someone famous reveals having AIDS, people tend to come closer to realizing they can be affected, too.

"Once you see somebody you can identify with, it makes a big difference," she said. "We can talk about statistics, but a real-life person is another issue completely."

"Our youngest client is 5, our oldest are in their 50s. We have clients that are male, female, straight, gay, single parents, both parents, all races and cultural backgrounds," she said.

Although many people are coming closer to understanding AIDS does not discriminate, too many remain uninformed and intolerant, Stapleton said. In early July, Helms said funding should be cut to AIDS research because people with AIDS engaged in "deliberate, disgusting and revolting conduct."

While Stapleton said he wasn't surprised to hear such ideas from Helms, the statement still troubled him.

"It makes me sad. I don't think anybody deserves any disease that's horrible and crippling," he said. "If you see that AIDS is the leading cause of death among 25- to 44-year-olds, then to apply your own prejudice is very short sighted."

ground or within 12 weeks of a request by the Bosnian government, whichever comes first.

The measure also would require Clinton to seek a U.N. Security Council vote to lift the embargo, marking one final attempt to avoid a split with NATO allies. If that failed, the administration would be required to seek a vote by the General Assembly before acting unilaterally.

The legislation cleared the Senate on a 69-29 vote last week, more than enough to override the anticipated veto.

Democratic leader Tom Daschle expressed confidence on Monday the president would win a veto struggle, and White House spokesman Mike McCurry echoed that moments after the House vote. "The more time the president has to discuss the complexities of the problem, the more votes we change," he said.

Officials familiar with the effort, speaking on condition of anonymity, identified several senators they believe may be willing to sustain a veto even though they initially supported the bill.

The group includes Sam Nunn, D-Ga.; Charles Robb, D-Va.; Richard Bryan, D-Nev.; Byron Dorgan, D-N.D.; Kent Conrad D-N.D.; John Warner, R-Va.; and John McCain, R-Ariz. McCain, in an interview, said he'd vote to override a veto "in a New York minute" if it came to that. But he said he was hopeful a compromise could be worked out.

"The president doesn't want to be repudiated at the end of the day and the Congress doesn't want to be responsible for the conduct of American foreign policy," he said.

In the House, 204 Republicans, 93 Democrats and independent Bernard Sanders voted for the measure. In opposition were 103 Democrats and 25 Democrats.

Administration officials were quick to note that represented an improvement over a vote in June, on which the House voted 318-99 to lift the embargo as part of different legislation.

The Bosnians, said Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., deserve the right of "at least the possibility of arming themselves, of defending themselves against what is without any doubt one of the most brutal forms of aggression the Western world has witnessed since the Holocaust."

Branch Davidian leader David Koresh and 80 followers died by fire or gunfire on April 19, 1993, six hours after the FBI started filling the compound with tear gas.

The deaths, which the government termed a mass suicide in fires set by the Davidians, ended a 51-day standoff that began with a Feb. 28 shootout that left six Davidians and four federal agents dead.

Throughout the contentious hearings, Republican lawmakers criticized a number of actions taken by the FBI, the Justice Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. But none of the other decisions was as closely examined as the FBI's use of tear gas.

Zeliff said that decision led to the deaths of Koresh and his followers.

"Koresh was the bomb," he said. "We lit the fuse."

Reno said she initially rejected the plan, but agreed to it after military experts told her the gas would not be harmful to children who were inside the compound. Other factors in her decision, she added, included FBI reports that the group had fresh water and enough food for up to a year, the likelihood that reported child abuse would continue, the fatigue of the specially trained hostage rescue team and concern a private militia group might head to Waco "either to help Koresh or attack him."

The Justice Department said information about the militia came from a discussion group on the Internet, a worldwide computer network.

"Even though Koresh broke every promise he made, and even though he never gave the FBI any reason to believe he would surrender peacefully, the FBI kept negotiating, kept trying, every way they knew how, to talk Koresh into leaving," she testified.

At several points in her hours of testimony, Reno talked about thinking constantly about the children, both before approving the gassing plan and after the bodies of more than 20 children were recovered.

"I stayed awake at night, wondering what was the right thing to do," she said. "What about the children?"

At another point, she curtly addressed Rep. John Mica, R-Fla., who said he was haunted by autopsy reports about the children and suggested Reno didn't give enough thought to the fact that children were present.

"I don't think you comprehend — if you talk to me about children — the fact that this instance will be etched on my mind for the rest of my life," Reno said. "Those children, no matter how they were found, the fact that they are dead is a tragedy that will be with me for the rest of my life."

DAGAN HILL, West Bank — Defiant Jewish settlers evaded military roadblocks Tuesday and planted an Israeli flag atop a West Bank hill they were evicted from a day earlier.

About 200 people, more than half of them teenagers, gathered atop Dagan Hill as dusk fell and recited evening prayers. When police surrounded the hill south of Jerusalem, which has been designated a closed military area, the settlers agreed to leave but said they would be back Wednesday.

This is going to continue every day, probably in more than one place," said David Waldman of the Kiryat Arba settlement.

Settler spokesman Aharon Domb said 150 more settlers were gathered on nearby Tamar Hill.

About 600 settlers, who oppose Israel's plans to turn over parts of the occupied West Bank to Palestinian control, were dragged off the hill on Monday by Israeli police and soldiers. Many then moved to another hill north of Jerusalem, and were forced off again Tuesday morning.

The army "doesn't have enough strength to clear this place constantly on a day-to-day basis," said Pesach Abraham of Kiryat Arba. "We are here and here to stay."

HIROSHIMA, Japan — It was a few hours after midnight when Harry Fukuhara pulled into the U.S. Army garrison on the outskirts of Hiroshima for gas and spare tires.

"The city is off-limits," the sleepy duty officer said. "No one is supposed to enter."

Fukuhara nodded and thanked him for the gas. That rule wasn't going to stop him.

A personal mission had brought the 25-year-old U.S. Army second lieutenant to Hiroshima, devastated only three weeks earlier by the atomic bomb.

A Japanese-American who had fought his way across the Pacific, Fukuhara had come back to the family hometown to search for his mother and three brothers.

He had not been able to contact them during the war, and he did not know whether they had survived the bombing, which killed about 140,000 people and reduced a thriving city to a tangle of broken buildings and sooty earth.

Clinton stands ground against GOP proposals

Nancy Benac
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Warming to the fight, President Clinton flung out multiple veto threats Tuesday and accused Republicans in Congress of bowing to "special interest politics at its most effective and at its worst."

The president drew a hard line against legislation moving through Congress on issues ranging from telecommunications to the environment, even as he continued to voice hope of finding "common ground" with legislators.

"You can see who's in control in this Congress ... and it's not good," Clinton said at a midday news conference. "You see some people feeling uncomfortable about it, and we may be able to make some progress."

The president's mixed message seemed aimed at convincing Americans he will hold firm against Republican moves to radically roll back the scope of government while he works to prevent disagreement from deteriorating into gridlock.

"We're going to be seeing this from now to November 1996," said political analyst Stuart Rothenberg. "He doesn't want to be the cause of gridlock, but he wants to make it clear he's not caving to the Republicans."

To that end, Clinton talked of vetoing five bills moving through Congress, lacing his comments with accusations that special-interest groups had exerted undue influence on the Republicans.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said he hoped to avoid a string of presidential vetoes, but added, "If that is a part of the re-election strategy and he is in a total campaign mode, everything he does is politics. I assume he'll do it."

The five vetoes threatened on Tuesday:

- In his newest threat, Clinton chided legislators for working expeditiously on legislation to finance the workings of Congress itself while letting other appropriations measures lag behind.

"I don't think Congress should take care of its own business before it takes care of the people's business," Clinton said. With that, he promised to veto the bill appropriating money for Congress if it reaches his desk before work is finished on other spending bills.

- He also confirmed a threat to reject telecommunications legislation in the House, making official a veto statement that began circulating on Capitol Hill a day earlier.

"I want very badly to sign a telecommunications bill," Clinton said. "I hope we can get it. But we want to get it right."

- Clinton called a House vote to restrict government enforcement of environmental laws a sign of "Washington special interest politics at its most effective and at its worst."

"The minute this polluters' protection act hits my desk, I will veto it," he said, underscoring a written veto threat first issued on Friday.

- Expecting House passage of legislation to lift the arms embargo on Bosnia, Clinton renewed his threat of a veto and said he was determined to block an anticipated override attempt.

- He revved up his rhetoric against GOP calls to roll back the assault weapons ban and other anti-crime legislation. In a satellite address to a police group, Clinton told his GOP opponents, "If you do succumb to the political pressures from extremist groups to repeal any of these measures, I will veto them in a heartbeat."

With a handful of other veto threats already pending, Clinton seemed determined to keep himself from being relegated to the sidelines as the Republican Congress marches ahead with its own agenda.

Of 13 appropriations bills for the budget year beginning Oct. 1, Clinton has now threatened to veto four and Cabinet officers have recommended he reject three others.

Clinton rejected suggestions that Congress' refusal to bow to his will was debilitating to him personally or to the country, making it futile to talk of cooperation.

"It's not debilitating; it's been invigorating," Clinton insisted.

Westinghouse seals plan to take over CBS

Skip Wollenberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In the second TV network takeover in two days, Westinghouse Electric Corp. struck a $5.4 billion deal Tuesday to buy CBS, hoping to restore the once top-rated Tiffany Network to its former glory.

The widely anticipated agreement came a day after the Walt Disney Co. created the nation's biggest entertainment company with a surprise deal to buy Capital Cities-ABC Inc. for about $19 billion.

Westinghouse, based in Pittsburgh, is an industrial conglomerate that makes airport radar systems and nuclear plants in addition to running a group of TV and radio stations.

CBS finished behind ABC and General Electric Co.'s NBC in the ratings last season.

"With the addition of CBS, Westinghouse is creating a premier broadcasting powerhouse and taking a leadership position in programming," said Westinghouse's chairman and chief executive Michael Jordan, who will lead the new conglomerate.

"We expect to build upon our new, combined strengths and considerable talent to restore CBS television to its historic position as the No. 1 television network."

CBS, which began as a radio network in 1927 and thrived under the leadership of William Paley, became known as the Tiffany Network for the quality of its programming. Edward R. Murrow, Walter Cronkite, Lucille Ball, Jackie Gleason and Ed Sullivan were among the stars that led it through its glory years in the 1950s and '60s.

Laurence Tisch, CBS's current chairman and chief executive, effectively took control in 1986, a year after Ted Turner made an ill-fated run at the company.

Tisch presided over the sale of major CBS assets such as its music business and its magazine publishing operations and focused almost exclusively on broadcasting. He rebuilt the prime-time schedule with shows like "Murphy Brown" and "Northern Exposure."

But the network's audience was aging along with some of its most popular shows like "Murder She Wrote," and CBS tumbled to third place last season. It also lost its NFL contract and several key stations to the growing Fox network.

CBS stockholders would get $81 a share in cash and an additional payment that depends on when the deal is closed.

In trading on the New York Stock Exchange, CBS finished unchanged at $77.75 a share, while Westinghouse rose $1.25 to $14.87.

DAGAN HILL, West Bank — Defiant Jewish settlers evaded military roadblocks Tuesday and planted an Israeli flag atop a West Bank hill they were evicted from a day earlier.

About 200 people, more than half of them teenagers, gathered atop Dagan Hill as dusk fell and recited evening prayers. When police surrounded the hill south of Jerusalem, which has been designated a closed military area, the settlers agreed to leave but said they would be back Wednesday.

The army "doesn't have enough strength to clear this place constantly on a day-to-day basis," said Pesach Avraham of Kiryat Arba. "We are here and here to stay."

The escalating settler protests come as Israel negotiates with the PLO to withdraw troops and turn over towns in the West Bank to the Palestinians.

While the protests are winning the settlers media attention and provoking debate over the use of Israeli soldiers in confrontations with Jews, they seem unlikely to sway the government — which few if any of the settlers support.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin called the settlers' actions "ridiculous provocations" and said they would be "dealt with in accordance with the law."

Earlier Tuesday, hundreds of police and soldiers tore down tents and flimsy huts atop Artis Hill, north of Jerusalem, and dragged away struggling adults and children.

"We'll return — if not today, then tomorrow," said settler Meir Gross. "This isn't a land dispute, but a struggle for our roots and our existence as a nation."

By midday, troops had cleared the site and surrounded it to block settlers from returning.

Police briefly detained about 100 people, including settler leader Pinchas Wallerstein. The settlers cheered each time one of their ranks was carried off by police and piled stones, pipes and plywood in the road to block the buses carrying the detainees.

"Not only will we see scenes like this every day, but they will escalate," said Benny Eilon, a settler leader, before troops removed him from the hill.

"We are not looking for sympathy. We need for the country to understand how grave the situation is. The country, the people, are being divided into two."

Settlers insist plans to turn parts of the West Bank over to Palestinian control endangers their security and violates their biblical claim to the land. They said they will continue their protests until negotiations with the PLO are stopped.

PARENTS ENDURED HIROSHIMA BOMBING

Japanese-American struggled to salvage family torn by war

P.H. Ferguson

HIROSHIMA, Japan — It was a few hours after midnight when Harry Fukuhara pulled into the U.S. Army garrison on the outskirts of Hiroshima for gas and spare tires.

"The city is off-limits," the sleepy duty officer said. "No one is supposed to enter."

Fukuhara nodded and thanked him for the gas. That rule wasn't going to stop him.

A personal mission had brought the 25-year-old U.S. Army second lieutenant to Hiroshima, devastated only three weeks earlier by the atomic bomb.

A Japanese-American who had fought his way across the Pacific, Fukuhara had come back to the family hometown to search for his mother and three brothers.

He had not been able to contact them during the war, and he did not know whether they had survived the bombing, which killed about 140,000 people and reduced a thriving city to a tangle of broken buildings and sooty earth.

About 3,200 Americans were in Hiroshima at the time of the blast, according to Hiroshima city government statistics. About 20 were POWs; most, like Fukuhara's family, were Japanese-Americans caught in the chaos of war.

With his commander's permission to mount his search, Fukuhara became one of the first Americans to enter Hiroshima in the wake of the Aug. 6 bombing.

His mother, born near Hiroshima, had taken her five American-born children back to Japan in 1933 after the death of Fukuhara's father, a first-generation Japanese immigrant.

"She thought it would be easier to raise kids by herself in Japan, where the living was cheaper," said Fukuhara, who now lives in San Jose, Calif., with his family.

That night, as he nosed his Jeep through the city center, a bright moon limned a stubble of landscape. The smell of death was everywhere.

"It was eerie and still, like a silent movie," he recalled in a telephone interview. It took him two or three hours to negotiate the pocked roads and broken bridges leading to his family's home.

Fukuhara had returned to America after graduating from high school in Hiroshima eight years earlier. When World War II broke out, he was working his way through college as a cook and houseboy.

His studies were interrupted by a brief spell in an internment camp for Japanese-Americans. There, he decided to fight for his country.

He enlisted in the Army in 1942 and saw combat in the South Pacific, New Guinea and the Philippines. But no battlefield horror prepared him for the lonely silence of his drive through Hiroshima.

All around him were charred chunks of wood and concrete, swarming with flies and maggots. The skeletal frames of buildings looked like picked bones.

It was shortly after sunrise when he pulled up in front of his family's home. It was badly damaged but mostly standing.

The light and heat of the blast had etched the shadows of shrubs onto the wooden walls. The foliage itself, of course, was gone.

Pushing open the door, he called for his mother. Silence. He called again, louder. More silence.

Fukuhara stepped inside. In the only room where the roof above was intact, he found his mother sleeping. She looked up at the bedraggled soldier in a strange uniform, not recognizing him at first.

"Mom," he said. "It's Harry."

She told him of the family's fate. His two younger brothers had been drafted into Japan's Imperial Army and forced to join suicide squads that had been assembled to repel an American land invasion. Because of the bomb, it never came — and they were still alive.

His oldest brother, Victor, had been walking to work when the bomb fell. He survived the blast, but the flesh had been seared from his back and he had been exposed to radiation. He lay dying in another room.

Amid the family talk, his mother suddenly stopped short.

"Harry, please move that car," she said, referring to his U.S. Army Jeep. "It's not a good idea to park it in front of the house — the neighbors ... I hope you understand ..."

Fukuhara moved the Jeep.

Though his combat tour was soon to end, he reenlisted so he could remain in Japan to care for his family. His mother lived for nearly three more decades, but her son says she was never quite herself again.

His surviving brothers were stripped of U.S. citizenship, but it eventually was restored after the family convinced authorities the two would likely have been killed if they refused to join up.

The family was never fully reunited in America.

"I wanted to move back, but by the time I got my citizenship back, I already had a wife and children," said brother Frank Fukuhara, 71, who spent his working life in Japan and then retired to Hawaii. "It was too late in life for me to start again from scratch."

Harry Fukuhara, now 75, still stays in touch with surviving relatives in and around Hiroshima. In his search after the bombing, he also found a cousin's daughter. But she was horribly injured and died soon after.

For years, the family avoided talking about what had happened to them in Hiroshima. The only balm for the horror was time — nearly a half century.

"Last year," Fukuhara said, "was the first time we ever discussed it."

NL EAST BATTLE

Phillies make up ground on Atlanta

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Light-hitting Kevin Elster tripled in three runs and Tony Longmire had a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the sixth inning as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Atlanta Braves in the opener of a three-game series between the NL East leaders.

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak by the Phillies and cut Atlanta's lead to seven games.

The Phillies, who had four pitchers combine on a four-hitter, led Atlanta by five games on June 25, but have gone 11-23 since. During that same period, the Braves have gone 22-10.

Reds 4, Mets 3

CINCINNATI — Ron Gant doubled in two runs and Thomas Howard had a solo homer as the Cincinnati Reds beat the New York Mets.

Pete Schourek (11-5) took a no-hitter into the sixth inning against his former team, then allowed four straight hits and two runs.

The Reds scored all four runs off Pete Harnisch (2-8).

Schourek retired the first 14 batters before hitting Kelly Stinnett in the fifth. He got Tim Bogar to fly out to keep his no-hit bid alive.

In the sixth, Schourek allowed consecutive singles to Jose Vizcaino, pinch-hitter Damon Buford, Brett Butler and Edgardo Alfonzo to score one run.

Cubs 7, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — Luis Gonzalez's two-run triple keyed a five-run sixth inning and the Chicago Cubs stopped a six-game road losing streak by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Chicago withstood Orlando Merced's three-run homer in the seventh to match a season-high four-game winning streak and extend Pittsburgh's losing streak to four. The Cubs' road losing streak was their longest since a six-game streak in September 1992.

The Pirates lost their 10th in 11 games to fall a season-low 14 games under .500 (36-50).

Marlins 5, Expos 2

MONTREAL — Andre Dawson,

just off the disabled list, went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs as the surging Florida Marlins handed Carlos Perez his first loss at home in a victory over the Montreal Expos.

Terry Pendleton also had three hits and Charles Johnson went 2-for-3 with two RBI as the Marlins won their fifth straight.

Pat Rapp (5-6) allowed a run on five hits, struck out three and walked five in 5½ innings. He left after walking four of the last eight men he faced.

Perez (9-3), who came in 8-0 with a 1.37 ERA at Olympic Stadium, gave up five runs on a season-high 12 hits in 7½ innings.

Astros 8, Cardinals 6

ST. LOUIS — Mike Hampton allowed three runs over seven innings and Craig Biggio hit two home runs to lead the Houston Astros to a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Hampton (7-3) has won 10 games in his two-year major league career and is 3-0 against the Cardinals this year and 5-1 lifetime.

White Sox 4, Royals 3

CHICAGO — Dave Righetti pitched into the eighth inning and Craig Grebeck scored a run and drove in another to lead the Chicago White Sox to a victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Righetti (2-0) allowed two runs on six hits, walked two and struck out four in his third start.

The 36-year-old left-hander was removed after Tom Gooden led off the Royals eighth with a walk and moved to second on Vince Coleman's single.

Yankees 7, Brewers 5

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees overcame shaky pitching from two rookies, an inside-the-park homer and three blown leads to beat the Milwaukee Brewers for their seventh straight home victory.

Tony Fernandez broke a 5-5 tie with a two-run bloop single to right with two outs in the seventh. It came after the Yankees tied the game on a bases-loaded walk to Gerald Williams by Angel Miranda (4-4).

The Brewers, who had three home runs among their seven hits, left 11 men on base and failed to take advantage of eight walks by rookies Andy Pettitte and Mariano Rivera (4-2).

Blue Jays, 12, Orioles 10

BALTIMORE — Domingo Cedeño's three-run homer capped a six-run ninth inning that carried the Toronto Blue Jays to a victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

The rally came against Baltimore closer Doug Jones, who gave up all six runs before getting an out in the ninth. Jones left to boos from the home crowd and tipped his hat as he walked into the dugout.

Toronto's comeback overshadowed Bobby Bonilla's first home run for Baltimore, a three-run shot that had given the Orioles a 9-6 lead in the sixth.

Red Sox 13, Tigers 3

DETROIT — John Valentin drove in a career-high six runs as the Boston Red Sox took advantage of a struggling Mike Moore and beat the Detroit Tigers.

Valentin hit a two-run homer off Moore in the third before adding two-run singles in both the fourth and fifth.

Mike Greenwell, Mo Vaughn and Troy O'Leary also hit home runs for Boston, which raked four Tiger pitchers for 15 hits.

Twins 6, Indians 5

CLEVELAND — Chuck Knoblauch homered off Julian Tavarez with two out in the ninth inning, giving the Minnesota Twins a victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The Indians have lost five of their last seven, but at 59-27 they have still matched the 1954 team for the best record after 86 games in franchise history. The Twins won for the second time in six games and still have the majors' worst record, 31-56.

Gooden anxious as decision nears

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden will apply for reinstatement this week and hopes to be pitching in the major leagues again before the month ends, he said in Tuesday's editions of the Daily News.

Gooden, having left the New York Mets as a free agent, has been out of baseball since June 1994.

First, he was suspended for 60 days after testing positive for cocaine, and last September, was banned for the entire '95 season after testing positive again, the News said.

"I feel I'm ready," Gooden told the News. "I'd go out there tomorrow if I could. I've changed my life, I've accepted who I am — an addict. Now that I've done that, the only piece that is missing is baseball."

Gooden, who has said he would like to play for the New York Yankees, is being drug-tested three times a week by the commissioner's office. He said since those testings that he has remained clean and hopes to convince baseball officials he is rehabilitated and deserves the chance to come back this season, the News said.

"I feel I should get a chance," Gooden told the News. "I'm ready for either a yes or a no because I've got my life back, and that's most important."

"... Also, I think I have something to offer to the sport. It hasn't been a good year for baseball — we've both been in rehabilitation. I think I can be an example to people and to kids. I've battled back from my problems to get my life in order. I think that sends a strong message."

Gooden said he has not spoken to baseball officials but pins his hope on a favorable ruling on a meeting he had two weeks ago in

New York with a doctor and psychologist employed by major league baseball, the News said.

"I feel good that (the answer) will be positive," Gooden told the newspaper. I feel real strong about that. They called me to New York for the meeting and I felt good about the way I presented myself to them. They admitted they saw the change in me."

It is Gooden's desire to follow former teammate and good friend Darryl Strawberry, who ended his latest drug-related suspension earlier this summer. Strawberry is under a minor-league contract with the Yankees' top affiliate at Columbus and is said to be close to an agreement that would bring him to the major-league club.

Gooden also is represented by Bill Goodstein, the agent who represents Strawberry and who got into a war of words with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner last week.

Gooden told the News that if he is reinstated that he would seek out Steinbrenner himself to talk about the possibility of playing for the Yankees.

Though Gooden has a preference for the Yankees, the team may not for him. The team filed a need for starting pitching when they acquired David Cone from the Toronto Blue Jays this past weekend.

That didn't faze Gooden.

"... David Cone is a great pitcher," Gooden told the News, "but I don't think that affects me. I still have something to offer them."

"... So if baseball says I can come back and George is interested in me, I'll drive to Tampa and say to George, 'How can we help each other to make the Yankees winners again?'"

Steinbrenner could not be reached for comment Monday night by the News, but recently has spoken highly of Gooden's community work in St. Petersburg, Fla. He said, however, that any talk of signing the former Cy Young Award winner is premature because he is suspended, the paper said.

"We feel that we have done everything that we would do for any patient," Goldstein added. "Baylor has very strict guidelines and policies that we follow for all our patients, and I think, in retrospect, we would do the same thing again."

The former New York Yankees star has been undergoing chemotherapy, which will continue. However, no further surgery is planned at this time, his doctors said.

his $4.375 million salary.

"We made this trade based on the fact that we're trying to win this thing," Cleveland general manager John Hart said after sending three minor leaguers to St. Louis last week.

"I think this sends a very clear message that we're serious about what we're doing."

In trading Bonilla and Saberhagen for four prospects, the New York Mets relinquished more than $10.5 million in salaries.

A key factor in the Saberhagen trade was Colorado's assumption of the bulk of his contract, which calls for a salary of $4.3 million next year and $250,000 annually for 25 years beginning in 2004.

"The financial end of this deal is one of the reasons for it. We keep a little (of the contract), they take the majority," said Mets GM Joe McIlvaine.

"If you go back to spring training we said if we were in the hunt and fans continued to support us like they had, we had room (in the budget) to make another move," Rockies owner Jerry McMorris said.

"We are. They have. We did."

Taunted players turn tempers toward fans

Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. — Fans were out of line when they heckled an Arkansas Travelers player — calling him "Pork Chop" — but that was no excuse for him and a teammate to attack two spectators in the stands, officials said Tuesday.

Witnesses at Monday night's Double-A baseball game against the Wichita Wranglers said Dmitri Young, 22, punched a man and Keith Jones, 24, hit another man in the back with a bat.

Both outfielders were immediately handed indefinite suspensions by Texas League president Tom Kayser, who attended the game.

Witnesses said at least one of the fans kept calling Young, who is 6-

"In the players' defense, there's no excuse for the fans to keep yelling after the game is over. In the fans' defense, there was no reason for the players to linger and go into the stands."

Steve Shaad, Wichita Wranglers general manager

"The fan probably crossed the line, but (Young and Jones) crossed a line, too," he said, adding that he planned to talk to the St. Louis Cardinals' organization about the incident.

Kayser was traveling between Wichita and Midland, Texas, on Tuesday and wasn't available for comment.

A league spokesman said Kayser hadn't announced any fines or further punishment for the players involved.

On Monday night, Kayser said he had spent the last three innings behind home plate and heard the heckling.

But he said the fans' conduct didn't excuse the behavior of the Arkansas players.

An off-duty Wichita police detective who was helping with security at the game interviewed both players and said it would be up to the district attorney whether to file charges.

A spokesperson in the Sedgwick County District Attorney's office said Tuesday that the incident still was under investigation and no determination had been made about possible charges.

Young and Jones left on their team bus after the game.

Steve Shaad, the Wranglers' general manager, said the incident happened about 10 minutes after the game, which Arkansas won, 6-4.

Most of the players already had left the field, and security guards had moved to the front gates as the crowd left.

"In the players' defense, there's no excuse for the fans to keep yelling after the game is over," Shaad said. "In the fans' defense, there was no reason for the players to linger and go into the stands."

It is a violation of league rules for a player in uniform to go into the stands for any reason, Shaad said.

Mike Ramsey, the Travelers' general manager, said the heckling went on for about seven innings and was "pretty vicious."

Steinbrenner could not be night by the News, but recently has spoken highly of Gooden's community work in St. Petersburg, Fla. He said, however, that his talk of signing the former Cy-young Award winner is premature because he is suspended, the paper said.

That didn't faze Gooden.

NFL NOTES

49ers weary of Tokyo exhibition

Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers are a little nervous about their trip to Tokyo this week.

Their game against the Denver Broncos there Sunday coincides with the 50th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima. And they're also concerned because of recent terrorist attacks in the city's subway system.

"You should be apprehensive," says San Francisco right tackle Harris Barton. "You're a visible target. But when you sign the contract, they don't tell you you've got a choice. This week you don't have a choice."

League officials, led by commissioner Paul Tagliabue, have tried to alleviate the concerns. Tagliabue wrote the players a letter calling Tokyo one of the world's safest cities.

He said that security over there in Japan had assured him there won't be any problems," linebacker Gary Plummer said.

The team, scheduled to leave today, also has been assured by the Japanese that they won't be running into a controversy when they arrive Thursday.

"The timing is interesting," coach George Seifert said. "I'm sure it's a solemn time for the Japanese people, for their country. But apparently, they investigated it or we wouldn't be going."

San Francisco, which will be the most traveled team in the league this year, is making its sixth overseas trip in eight years. It is the second time the 49ers have traveled to Japan.

Steve Young and Jerry Rice left Tuesday to help promote the game and take part in goodwill activities, including an autograph session that will benefit a relief fund set up for victims of the Kobe earthquake.

The NFL salary cap claimed another victim, Houston's third-string quarterback Buckey Richardson — a favorite in Texas, an unknown everywhere else. Richardson was waived by the Oilers to make room under the team's cap for rookie running back Rodney Thomas.

Coaches mourn nearly defunct SWC

Jaimie Aron

FORT WORTH, Texas — Most Southwest Conference coaches are avoiding misty-eyed comments about the death of their old league and instead are looking forward to joining new alliances.

Then there's Ken Hatfield of Rice and Spike Dykes of Texas Tech, the only two SWC coaches who also attended SWC schools.

Hatfield admits he's bitter over the breakup, while Dykes sounds more sentimental about the SWC's demise after its 81st season.

"I personally think the Southwest Conference would've survived, but people panicked and jumped too

"I personally think the Southwest Conference would've survived ..."

Ken Hatfield, Rice head coach

soon," Hatfield said Tuesday during a gathering of league coaches at the annual Texas High School Coaches Association's coaching school. "It's not a fun time. I'm not enjoying the situation no matter how I look at it."

Hatfield hinted that the successful teams in the conference should have done more to help the less fortunate programs.

"I was brought up in the good times," said Hatfield, who played and coached at Arkansas when the Razorbacks were in the league. "Back then, there were other teams in the league who picked people up. People have short-term memories of what used to be."

Hatfield was referring to Texas A&M, Baylor and Texas Tech, three of the big winners in the realignment who also were around when the SWC was propped up by Texas Christian, Southern Methodist and Rice.

A&M, Baylor, Tech and Texas will join the Big Eight next season to form the Big 12. TCU, SMU and Rice are bound for the Western Athletic Conference in 1996. Houston will be among the teams forming the new Conference USA.

"This is a sad year," Dykes said. "We're finishing the conference forever. It's really a low blow."

Dykes didn't want to even discuss the upcoming changes. He said he'd rather remain focused on the upcoming season and the memories it will evoke.

McCumber overcomes deficit for World Series win

KOHLER, Wis. (AP) — Mark McCumber overcame an early deficit for the second straight day Tuesday, making up two strokes on Loren Roberts in a 2-up victory in the U.S. final of the World Championship of Golf.

After Roberts drew even with a 7-foot birdie putt on No. 15, McCumber made a 12-footer for birdie on the par-5 16th hole to regain the lead.

They halved the par-3 17th with pars and McCumber ended the match with a par on No. 18 after Roberts hit his approach into the water.

Krajicek pulls out of Infiniti Open with injury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two-time champion Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands withdrew just before his first-round match Tuesday in the Infiniti Open because of a muscle strain above his right elbow.

Krajicek, seeded fourth, was injured last week in a doubles match in the Canadian Open. He retired in the second set of his second-round singles match against Brett Steven and had hoped to be able to play this week.

Meanwhile, second-seeded Michael Stich of Germany, No. 3 Jim Courier and No. 5 Thomas Enqvist of Sweden advanced to the second round with straight-set victories.

Top-seeded Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia was scheduled to play his first-round match Tuesday night against Kenneth Carlsen of Sweden.

BASEBALL

Anderson, Wakefield earn AL's monthly honors

NEW YORK (AP) — California rookie outfielder Garret Anderson and Boston knuckleballer Tim Wakefield won player and pitcher of the month honors for July, the American League announced Tuesday.

Anderson led AL batters by hitting .410, and had seven home runs and 31 RBIs. He scored 22 runs, had a .686 slugging percentage and a .422 on-base percentage.

Wakefield, who spent last season in the minors, went 6-0 with a 1.53 ERA. In 47 innings, he allowed 41 hits, 14 walks and struck out 34.

AUTO RACING

Penske's protest denied

TROY, Mich. (AP) — Penske Racing's protest of the disqualification that cost Al Unser Jr. a victory at the IndyCar race in Portland, Ore., was denied Tuesday by the sanctioning body.

Indy-car issued a one-paragraph statement saying the protest had been disallowed.

Unser, a two-time PPG Cup champion, overpowered the field on June 25 in the Budweiser-G.I. Joe's 200 at Portland International Raceway.

Mantle faces new fight

Stefani G. Kopenc
Associated Press

DALLAS — Mickey Mantle has a "fighting chance" against the cancer that has developed in his right lung, and the baseball great would not have received a liver transplant if his doctors had known the cancer had spread.

Mantle said in a statement taped Friday that "doctors found a couple of spots of cancer on my lungs" about two weeks ago.

The 63-year-old Hall of Famer had returned Friday to Baylor University Medical Center where he underwent a liver transplant June 8, and was released Tuesday.

His original liver was damaged by cancer, hepatitis and years of alcohol abuse. At the time of the transplant, doctors said he would not live more than a few weeks without a new liver.

Mantle's doctors said during a news conference Tuesday that in an examination during a routine follow-up they detected the cancer had spread to Mantle's right lung.

Doctors would not predict Mantle's chances for survival as they had after the initial transplant, when they listed his five-year survival expectancy rate at about 60 percent.

"I think that it's difficult to say at this point," said Dr. Robert Goldstein, Mantle's transplant surgeon. "It's very early and we're still taking it day by day. We are still hopeful that this will respond to therapy."

The lung cancer was not apparent three days before the transplant but it is now believed that it was there, said Dr. Daniel DeMarco, a gastroenterologist treating Mantle.

"It was undetectable," he said.

An apprentice transplant surgeon, Dr. David Mulligan, earlier had said some cancerous tissue was left behind, possibly involving the adjoining pancreas.

Goldstein said no spread of cancer.

INDIANA FOOTBALL

Hoosiers bank on Smith for success

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Indiana Hoosiers have a tradition of producing good running backs like Anthony Thompson and Vaughn Dunbar.

But this year they don't have to wait for one to blossom.

Sophomore tailback Alex Smith will set the tone on offense as the Hoosiers try to improve on last season's 6-5 record, their seventh winning season in nine years.

In only his first season with the Hoosiers, Smith rumbled for 1,475 yards and 10 touchdowns. He also recorded three 200-yard games, highlighted by a Big Ten freshman-record 245 yards against Purdue.

The Hoosier offense should receive an added boost at the quarterback position where junior Chris Dittoe takes over for John Paci.

Dittoe showed flashes of brilliance last season, despite starting only two games. Dittoe completed 58 of 107 passes for 631 yards and six touchdowns. His four touchdown passes against Penn State set an Indiana single-game record.

"He's a good guy," senior wide receiver Ajamu Stoner said of Dittoe. "He's 6-foot-6 so he can see the whole field. When he gets a little more experience he's going to be up there with the best of them."

Dittoe's supporting cast looks

Indiana is coming off a 6-5 campaign for the '94 season. The Hoosiers failed to make a bowl game, but figure a turnaround is inevitable with the insertion of junior Chris Dittoe as starting QB.

promising as well with Stoner and senior Eric Matthews both returning at wide receiver. Stoner caught 29 passes for 404 yards and four touchdowns in 1994, while Matthews is a member of the Indiana track team and boasts 4.3 speed in the 40-yard dash.

Stoner said an improved passing game is essential if the Hoosiers are to get a post-season bid.

"There's going to be some teams down the road that we won't be able to run against so we're going to have to pass more," Stoner said. "It should be a little different this year because now we've got a quarterback who can throw."

Defense could be a bit of a liability for Indiana. The biggest question is at linebacker where no starters return. Jon Pilch, Jamie Baisley and Matt Surface are the projected starters.

Things look a little better in the secondary with three returning starters. The cornerback spots will be held by Eric Allen and Kris Mucci. Eric Smedley and Aaron Warnecke will get the call at free safety and strong safety, respectively.

Smedley picked off four passes last season and returned one for a touchdown.

Stoner said Smedley is the Hoosier defensive leader.

"He's a really good cover man," Stoner said. "He knows the game and he finds the holes."

The defensive line will be

LIFE AFTER STRINGER

Deadline passes without a successor

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

The target date for finding Vivian Stringer's replacement has passed, yet the UI Women's basketball team still is without a leader.

Christine Grant, director of UI women's athletics, said the search committee has a short-list and is now interviewing applicants.

"That was our target date, it was a very ambitious date, and we're not quite ready to make the announcement," she said.

Stringer left UI to accept the head-coaching position at Rutgers University in New Jersey after a decision making process that took more than a month to complete.

While many criticized Stringer's indecision, because they said it put this season's recruiting process on hold, Grant said she thought Iowa's lack of a coach wouldn't hurt Iowa's recruiting process.

Acting head-coach Angie Lee, "is really trying to ensure that the work for the Iowa program is coming forward," Grant said. "I don't think the delay is going to hurt our recruiting chances."

Grant said she now hopes to name the new coach within two weeks, but said the search committee did not want to sacrifice quality for speed.

"This is not something that we do without a lot of homework going into it," she said. "I want to find the right person."

Grant compared the process to UI's presidential search, noting it has also suffered delays.

There is a point at which a delay would be detrimental to the Iowa

NO MORE ROSE BOWL?

Alliance alluring to Big Ten's best

Mike Nadel

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Joe Paterno, whose dominating, undefeated Penn State team was denied last year's national title, says Big Ten leaders will be ignorant if they don't consider joining college football's bowl alliance.

Nonsense, says Big Ten commissioner Jim Delany. He maintains that the conference and the Rose Bowl are bigger than the alliance.

"I don't think there's a bowl, year in and year out, that has the stature of the Rose Bowl. It's a very important game, one that the alliance would have to be concerned about," Delany said Tuesday at Big Ten media day.

"A lot of people say, 'What do the Big Ten and Pac-10 think about the alliance?' But I think that while we may want to watch them closely, I think that they may want to watch us closely."

Although Penn State had one of the best offensive teams in college football history last year, it spent most of the season ranked second to Nebraska.

Had the Big Ten been part of the bowl alliance, Penn State would have met the Cornhuskers in the postseason.

But because the Big Ten champion is contractually bound to meet the Pac-10 champion, the Nittany Lions had to play Oregon.

"I don't think we want to be a conference that's always on the outside looking in. That definitely does not make much sense for a conference that really established big-time college football," Paterno said. "We're celebrating the 100th year of Big Ten football ... and I would hope that we will not stick our heads in the sand and ignore what's going on around us."

Iowa's Hayden Fry, who has the longest Big Ten tenure of any head coach (17 years), loves the Rose Bowl but noted that "everything is dictated by money."

"With gender equity and women's programs to pay for, it's all the mark of the dollar sign," he said. "Six years from now, when the Rose Bowl contract expires, there's no telling what's going to happen."

While the league is launching its centennial celebration, Penn State is only going into its third year of Big Ten football. Before that, it was an independent.

"I don't have the situation I had for 27 years, when I'd just do what was best for Penn State," said Paterno, entering his 30th year as Nittany Lions coach. "Now, all of a sudden, people have different opinions about what direction a group of people should go. Sometimes I've disagreed, but I've had to go along with it."

The Big Ten and Pac-10 have six years left on their contract with the Rose Bowl. Even after that, Delany said, he can't envision the league ditching the game to be part of the bowl alliance.

"All parties need to look at ways to keep the bowl environment healthy," Commissioner Delany said. "I'm not sure whether that means merger, I'm not sure whether that means separation. But I'm sure that we need to preserve the unique relationship between the Big Ten, Pac-10 and Rose Bowl."

Change couldn't happen soon enough for receiver Bobby Engram, Penn State's top offensive player.

"The Rose Bowl is great, but whenever you get a chance to play for the national championship, that's what you go to college for," he said.

Contenders look to veterans for a boost

Mike Flam
Associated Press

Former Cy Young Award winners Bret Saberhagen and David Cone were traded for prospects. So were All-Stars Bobby Bonilla and David Wells. And don't forget Rick Aguilera, a three-time All-Star with two World Series rings.

Notice a trend? Non-contenders deal high-priced players, usually pitchers, to teams in a pennant race with dollars and minor-league talent at their disposal.

All six trades consummated

Monday before the 12 a.m. waiver-free trading deadline involved major league pitchers. And none were traded for one another.

Teams as close as 8½ games to first place (Detroit) and as far as 29½ games away (Minnesota) dealt expensive, veteran pitchers.

And a team like the Cleveland Indians, with a huge lead in the AL Central and in the midst of its most successful season in more than 40 years, could afford to acquire pitcher Ken Hill and
