Poll: Majority oppose dismantling programs

By Patricia Harris

The Daily Iowan

A half dozen of UI faculty staff and students think affirmative action should be dismantled, according to the results of a Daily Iowan poll.

Poll by phone taken Aug. 3-4. It asked respondents whether they thought affirmative action should be ended. Those who returned the phone call supported affirmative action by 59%. Those who did not return the call opposed affirmative action by 62%.

African-American and Latino professors were the most vocal in their opposition to affirmative action.

The poll was designed to be representative of the opinions of UI faculty staff and students.

Publication will publish the results of the poll on Aug. 5 - 6.

The governor doesn't see the need to change the state's affirm- ative action policy which is related to the need of minorities because it relies on a lot of state students, even in the minority group. The policy doesn't need any changes, nor have we received requests from the Office of the Governor that the policy be revised.

He's not convinced that the policy is a necessary one. "We've managed to increase the number of students and minorities in state jobs and in the general population," he said. "The policy will not change, nor have we received requests from the Governor's office to change it.

Davenport may ban sale of spray paint to minors

Associated Press

Davenport police said they have another reason for deciding to ban the sale of spray paint to minors: an ordinance prohibiting the sale of spray paint to minors.

The ordinance, which was approved by the City Council last month, takes effect on Nov. 1.

The ordinance prohibits the sale of spray paint to minors, except for those minors who have obtained a written permit from a parent or guardian, or who have obtained a written permit from a court.

The ordinance is designed to prevent minors from using spray paint to create graffiti or other forms of vandalism.

The photo, which was taken last spring, shows a cyclist wearing a helmet and riding a bike. According to the caption, the cyclist was riding during a heat wave, which made the ride particularly challenging.

The photo was taken near the University of Iowa campus, and the cyclist is captured in mid-action, riding down a street with trees in the background.

The caption also notes that the cyclist is wearing a pair of sunglasses, which helped protect their eyes from the glare of the sun.

In addition to the cyclist, the photo also captures the surrounding scenery, including a few other pedestrians and some street signs.

Overall, the photo captures the essence of a hot summer day, with the cyclist braving the heat to enjoy a ride through the city.

NEW YORK — Talks between the NBA and its owners in New York on Thursday night with no agreement reached,

Iowa Hawkeyes basketball coach Lute Olson said Friday that his team had reached an agreement in principle with the players' union to extend the deadline for settling the ongoing labor dispute.

The two sides had until midnight to reach a deal after free agents began to sign with teams once the current NBA season ended. Olson said the players' union had indicated it was willing to extend the deadline to Friday night, when free agents could begin signing contracts.

"We believe it's going to work," Olson said. "We think it's going to be a good deal for the players and a good deal for the owners."
