Steroid scan clouds livestock show circuit

It was all an American icon—grinning, towering Ron Bass rumbled his mighty engine and roused the crowd.

Bass, a meaty MoTony elevating his mighty voice and sending the crowd into a frenzy.

"We're going to do it again!" he shouted.

Bass's voice echoed through the grandstand, and the crowd roared in approval.

But just as Bass's engine started to rev up, a strange noise began to permeate the air. It was the sound of a scanner.

"There's a problem," one of the officials said.

"What is it?" Bass asked, his voice shaking.

"It's a scan," the official replied.

"A scan? What kind of scan?" Bass demanded.

"It's a scan of your engine," the official explained.

Bass's face fell. "What do you mean?"

"It's a scan to check for illegal steroids," the official said.

Bass's eyes widened in horror. "I didn't know!"

"It's legal," the official said, "but you can still fail the scan.

Bass stood there, his mouth open in shock. "What do I do now?"

The official patted him on the back. "Just keep your cool."

"I can't keep my cool," Bass said, tears streaming down his face.

"We'll help you," the official said, "but you need to work with us.

"I'll do whatever it takes," Bass said, "just help me.

"We'll do our best," the official said, "but it's up to you.

Bass nodded, his shoulders slumping. "I'll do my best.

"Good," the official said, "we'll keep you updated.

Bass thanked the official, but his mind was elsewhere. He thought back to the moment when he had first seen the scan.

He had been competing in a show, and his engine had been humming along smoothly. But then the scan had appeared, and everything had changed.

Bass sat in his car, his hands shaking. "I can't believe it," he said, "I never thought this would happen.

But now, he knew the truth. He knew that his engine was being monitored, and he knew that he had to do something.

"I'll do whatever it takes," Bass said, "I'll do whatever it takes to win.

But he knew it wasn't going to be easy. He knew that he would have to work hard, and he knew that he would have to be careful.

Bass drove away, his mind racing. He knew that he had to stay focused, and he knew that he had to keep his cool.

But he also knew that he had to win. He had to win at all costs.

"I'll do whatever it takes," he said, "I'll do whatever it takes to win."

Birthday bash for Clinton's 49th

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Part of the fun of a surprise birthday bash for President Clinton was seeing the president himself. He was in attendance at a Thursday night reception for the president at the Wolfensohn residence.

Among the guests were former Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and the Treasury Secretary's wife, Neice Terzano, said the president was left alone.

Five dozen balloons were on the Teton Mountains, all of it arranged by the White House.

The president said he was surprised after having any chance to be with Clinton a happy birthday before he left for vacation. Clinton's birthday wishes 12 months insurance for the crime bill negotiations.

Freshmen brighten boring living quarters

Mary Forrest
The Daily Iowan

Just a week after the mud hall days, the freshmen at the University of Northern Iowa are settling into the dormitories that will be their homes for the next two years.

The new school year begins and freshmen are tackling several problems, one of which is the problem of getting students accustomed to campus life.

The dormitories are being remodeled, and freshmen are working hard to get their rooms ready for the fall semester.

Freshmen are also dealing with the problem of finding a place to live. Many freshmen are living in dormitories, and some are living in off-campus housing.

Despite the problems, freshmen are finding ways to make their dorms fun and inviting. Many freshmen are decorating their dorms with posters, pictures, and other decorations.

The freshmen are also making new friends and getting to know each other. Many freshmen are involved in extracurricular activities and are making new friends through these activities.

The freshmen are also dealing with the problem of getting lost. Many freshmen are new to the city and are finding their way around can be difficult.

The freshmen are also dealing with the problem of getting too much work done. Many freshmen are working hard to keep up with their studies and are finding it difficult to find time for fun and relaxation.

Iowa City, Iowa - Justice Department officials are scheduled to announce today that they have dropped a weapons charge against a rampaging militia leader who was convicted in the shooting of the McMartin family of Iowa, which was blamed for the deaths of two young children.

The announcement comes after federal authorities concluded that the weapons that were seized from Wayne McMartin, the leader of the Oklahoma City-based militia, were not part of the original charge against him.

The weapons were seized as part of a broader investigation into the Oklahoma City bombing, and it was later determined that they were not involved in the shooting of the McMartins.

Oklahoma City authorities had originally charged McMartin with two counts of murder, but the charges were later dropped.

The decision to drop the weapons charge comes amid a broader examination of the McMartin case, which has been the subject of controversy and debate for many years.

Some advocates have argued that the McMartin family was responsible for the deaths of the two children, while others have maintained that the family was wrongly blamed.

The Justice Department's decision to drop the weapons charge is seen as a significant development in the case, and it is expected to be announced today during a news conference in Iowa City.

The McMartin case has been the subject of intense media scrutiny and public debate, with some calling for a full investigation into the circumstances surrounding the deaths of the two children.

The decision to drop the weapons charge is expected to be welcomed by those who believe that the McMartin family was wrongly blamed for the deaths of the two children, and it is hoped that this will bring a measure of closure to the case.

The announcement is expected to be made at a news conference this afternoon in Iowa City.
er's charges, who said he thought Jaeger intoxicated and dangerous, testified that he was struck in the thigh, forced to the ground, and struck with McMartin's baton 13 times.

Iowa City attorney David PCIi., who is representing Jaeger, said the city is being charged because training was not adequate and no amount in damages is specified.

Hundreds killed in train collision

Moniray Roy

NEW DELHI, India — At least 300 passengers died and 490 were injured Tuesday when a passenger train collided with another train, officials said, in what is believed to be one of the worst accidents in India's history.

The accident occurred on a busy stretch of track near the town of Malviya Nagar, on the outskirts of the capital, New Delhi. The collision happened around 7:30 a.m. and resulted in a fire that trapped some passengers inside the carriages. At least 300 people were killed and more than 490 were injured, officials said.

The Indian Railways, which operates the country's vast network of trains, said the accident involved two trains: a Delhi-Kanpur Express and a Kanpur-Varanasi Express.

The Kanpur-Varanasi Express, which was traveling from Delhi to Varanasi, one of India's holiest cities, collided head-on with the Delhi-Kanpur Express, which was traveling in the opposite direction.

The accident occurred at a level crossing where two new lines intersect the existing track. The crossing is known for its high accident rate, and railway officials have been trying to upgrade it to improve safety.

The Indian Railways has announced that it will conduct a thorough investigation into the accident to determine the cause and prevent future incidents.

Rabin spurns atrocity inquiry

"I don't suggest that we open up matters that don't contribute to the new positive atmosphere between nations. It is time for opening up new pages, bright pages ... not getting ourselves involved in conflicts of the past."--Religious Affairs Minister Shimon Shestrea.

Rabin spurns atrocity inquiry

Stories of the atrocities emerged earlier this month when retired Brig. Gen. Avraham Rif said Israeli troops under his command killed 45 Egyptian prisoners of war in the Sinai Desert in 1949 because they "were aberrations." Military commanders, according to the veteran, had ordered the executions "as a lesson" to prevent the killing of more prisoners and civilians in at least these 1948-1949 wars.

"The disclosures have shaken the Israeli government," said Rif, 62.

"It's all over the world to you with the national news you want at a price you can afford."

SEOUL, South Korea — Flames engulfed a dormitory of a girls' school in South Korea on Monday, killing at least 37 sleeping girls and injuring about 50 others, an official said.

Rigorous safety measures were in place, and officials said they would not say why they lowered the figure. But they said the toll was more than double the figure. The death or suffocation, according to police quoted her.

FBI agents investigating the fires said they were in serious condition. "There are reasons that others were burned frequently and treated improperly," FBI said. The official said that the school officials on evidence of understaffing.

About 900 fire trucks and rescue vehicles were sent to the scene. The blaze broke out in the dormitory of a school for girls, Yongin, 35 miles south of Seoul.

"All 38 dormitory residents were completely burned. About a dozen relatives of the school's 138 students suspected of being involved in the fire were hospitalized. The fire started in the dormitory official, said there was a select group of enthusiastic University of Iowa students who interact with people and enjoy the performing arts.

We are looking for a select group of artists who are interested in working with well and people and enjoy the performing arts.

Interviews will be held on August 23, 30, 31.

Superior Court Judge
Lakesha Burke of Superior Court ruled on Monday that the evidence in the Simpson case is not sufficient to meet the state's burden of proof in the civil trial. The state, which has sought a permanent restraining failed to meet its burden of proof.

It is likely that the state will appeal the decision, and the case will go to the Supreme Court.

Iowa vacations give new meaning to the word ‘Hogwash’

We’re looking for a vacation novel destination blending outdoor activities with huge amounts of fun. In that respect, Iowa is a complete vacation dream. The state has all the requisite ingredients I have in my spectators’ playbook — a unique, picturesque setting, a generous travel destination, and an incredible variety of outdoor activities. In short, if you’re looking for a unique and memorable place to spend a weekend, Iowa is the place for you.

I was concerned about this, however. This is Iowa, and people don’t generally party the way some of our more cosmopolitan friends do. How could a place that is so predicated by hog projects and annual fairs be a place for a vacation? I was correct, but the story is what unfolded.

The story said state officials were generally pleased because the Des Moines Register considered to be “one of the most historic events of the day.” I am sure it could put that down to a personal connection. You’re probably thinking of the Des Moines Register, which gets up and down on average every ten or fifteen minutes on average. There are also the Iowa Register, which is just like the ideal wake in The Des Moines Register, which itself is a perfectly prophetic Wall of Iowa, where you would not expect it at all. It is true that you will find yourself in the state even if you drive through this state, you will not want to be an example of the story again.

Of course, it would be absurd to suggest everybody who visits Iowa will be engrossed by manicured housing. Believe me. You have two options: one, either you sit down and read the Wall Street Journal online about the Iowa hog project and watch it from goon. You think I am making a joke, but I assure you that I am only because you did not read The Wall Street Journal article about the Iowa hog industry, written by Scott Ritter and said to me by many not real people. I still do not think you have to feel like. I felt like. You can see it in the story. That certainly makes ME feel better. Clearly, the lesson here is that, if Iowa, the vacation area, would prefer for whatever personal reason for the moment, to be consumed by a certain kind of manure or hog, I have just jumped into the Iowa experiment, an exercise in Ohio. The story says you are trying to avoid an evening sound of gun gunfire or hog manure. But it seems from the perspective and the attack seems. This is not a single thing that might possibly open your Iowa vacation, since that was my immediate reaction to yet another Des Moines Register story, published July 14, and sent in by many concerned readers, which states that Cedar Rapids firefighters were called to the General Mills plant in an emergency involving a corn explosion. I think you are trying to avoid an evening sound of gun gunfire or hog manure. But it seems from the perspective and the attack seems.

As for the story and the attack seems. This is not a single thing that might possibly open your Iowa vacation, since that was my immediate reaction to yet another Des Moines Register story, published July 14, and sent in by many concerned readers, which states that Cedar Rapids firefighters were called to the General Mills plant in an emergency involving a corn explosion. This is not the story I was telling. I mean, this is not the story I was telling. This is not the story I was telling.

The story goes on to say that Iowa is a state that has a unique story attached to it. In Iowa, is the Popcorn 5-feet long, weighs over a ton. This is the story I was telling. I mean, this is not the story I was telling. This is not the story I was telling. This is not the story I was telling. This is not the story I was telling.

My point is that unless you make sense of the story, you are not going to make sense of the story. I mean, this is not the story I was telling. This is not the story I was telling. This is not the story I was telling. This is not the story I was telling. This is not the story I was telling.

Mike Tyson

The boxer who gave off impressions of a real-life animal the moment he stepped into the ring.

Mike Tyson The Boxer

After a search across the country, Mike Tyson, 20, signed with the Silver Spurz team of Amarillo, Texas, and began his pro career. Last week, he lost his first fight to Larry Holmes. Tyson was a bit long in the tooth for the big-time circuit, but he had a good punch. He lost by a unanimous decision after six rounds of action. Tyson was ahead on two cards, but behind on one. He improved his record to 40-11-5, but still has a lot to prove.

Tyson vs. McNeely

The重量级拳击手之间的对决。

Tyson，at 275 pounds, was looking to improve his record to 30-1-1. McNeely, at 285 pounds, was trying to win his first fight in more than a year. McNeely had lost his last four fights, including a decision to Tyson in 1987. Tyson was favored to win, but McNeely had been working hard to get back into shape.

Tyson is the current holder of the world heavyweight title.

Tyson vs. McNeely

The heavyweight title fight between Tyson and McNeely was held in Las Vegas, Nevada. Tyson, 275 pounds, had a one-sided fight against McNeely, who weighed 285 pounds. The fight lasted only three rounds, with Tyson winning by a technical knockout. Tyson improved his record to 30-1-1, while McNeely dropped to 22-12-1.

Tyson goes in search of his third title.

Tyson, who has won the IBF, WBA, and WBC heavyweight titles, is looking to become the first fighter to win all four major titles. He has already held the IBF title for two years, and is now the WBA champion. His next opponent is expected to be the WBC champion, who is currently held by Lennox Lewis.

Tyson's career has been marked by controversy.

Tyson was convicted of rape in 1992 and was later acquitted. He was subsequently charged with assault and robbery and pleaded guilty to the charges. Tyson has had several legal problems, including a conviction for assault in 2002 and a conviction for drug possession in 2004.

Tyson's next fight will be in October.

Tyson's next fight is scheduled for October 15, 2005, against Wladimir Klitschko. The fight will be held in Las Vegas and is expected to attract a large audience. Tyson is favored to win the fight, but Klitschko is no slouch and will be a tough opponent.

Tyson's career has been marked by controversy.

Tyson's career has been marked by controversy. He has been involved in several legal problems, including convictions for assault and rape. Despite this, he remains a popular fighter and is expected to attract a large audience.

Bears crumble in final minutes

RICK CAMO

CHICAGO —Arena Williams intercepted Steve Young’s pass and returned it 89 yards for a touchdown in the final minutes to send the San Francisco 49ers to a 30-14 victory over the Chicago Bears.

The Cardinals got two breaks in the final minutes to record their third straight victory, the last coming with 1:15 left on a 16-yard pass from Walsh to Krieg, who finished 17-of-26 for 171 yards.

Welch finished 6-for-13 for 111 yards.

San Francisco 49ers defensive coordinator Dan Quinn said he thought he could get plugged in the offensive line, particularly at the position that needs help. He also believed the team was still competitive.

How to succeed academically (or die trying)

For incoming students, the UI can seem very intimidating. However, just keeping a few things in mind can make the Hawkeye experience slightly easier to take.

The UI is a very, very big school. Freshmen lectures sometimes exceed 3,000 students, a situation that resulted in 234 deaths by asphyxiation last year alone. (That's not to mention the occasional Powerbook accidents.)

Because academic life often means living on the edge of danger, it comes as little surprise that some students don't exactly work up to their full potential.

Luckily, however, you will be the exception. You will be happily well-liked and an academic genius because you are naturally wonderful.

Habits doing homework. (If you have trouble finding one, try looking in the back pages of Rolling Stone.) This is airtight advice that can make you do anything that is against your religion. If they do, you can get the American Civil Liberties Union to sue their ass and then you will be able to drop out of school and will never have to do homework again.

Also, don't be afraid to use that slackster stuff to the fullest. No one really understands exactly what it is or how powerful the urge to slack can be. Try wearing a flannel shirt and telling your professor that you are not studying is a "new" phenomenon. They might accept that you are beyond your control and leave it at that.

If neither of these work, find a UI building that is named after its benefactor and change your name to that building. Like Samuel L. Becker, for instance. Just add a "Mr." to the end of your name and constantly make references in class to your kindly old grandfather. Not that being related to a wealthy donor ever has any effect on how you are graded.

I'm sure that none of the UI professors ever have let family connections sway their red pen. (Or that loud grinding sound when you save?) "Is it possible to upgrade a monochromatic monitor to color?"

Get to know a few of them by name and start dropping in from time to time just to say hello. If nothing else, you will learn about all sorts of repairs or repair you can make with a paper clip.

Well, I hope some of these suggestions will help you — mean, your dull freshman cousin — out this fall. But take them too seriously. After all, you only have one life to live. Like life itself, in need is life making a good espresso. If you can do that, you will always be employable.

5,000 STUDENTS EXPECTED

College 101 taught at orientation sessions

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

This summer, an estimated 5,000 new UI students and their parents will come to campus for a crash course in college life.

Over spring and summer, 19 groups of incoming freshmen, transfer students and international students will flock to the UI to see just what they get themselves into.

"The primary orientation groups are the freshmen students," said Tom DePrenger, assistant director of orientation for Pre-enrollment Services at UI Admissions. "They come in June and July and they show up for a two-day program."

About 3,500 of the 5,000 new students will be freshmen, setting the UI campus with their shiny black-and-gold folders this summer, DePrenger said.

During the sessions, incoming students will learn about academic life at the UI and will have the opportunity to place out of several General Education Requirements.

"It's really an academic focus," DePrenger said. "We test both math and foreign language placement."

Students will also have scheduled appointments with their advisers to discuss academic plans. After adviser meetings, students will have an opportunity to register for fall semester classes.

Coordinators of the program

"We think that new students relate better to people their own age. We find it's very effective to orient new students with current students."

Tom DePrenger, assistant director of orientation for Pre-enrollment Services at UI Admissions

"It's important for parents to understand where (students) are going and what it's all about, so they can be prepared for letting go."

Tom DePrenger said.

For Pre-enrollment Services strongly encourages parents to accompany students and learn about college life at the UI. The service is beyond programs specifically geared toward parents.

"It's important for parents to understand where (students) are going and what it's all about, so they can be prepared for letting go," DePrenger said.

"We also find that most parents want to come. We have one of the best participation rates (of parents) for any Big Ten school.

Sessions for parents include meetings with deans, department directors and current UI students and parents. Other activities include meetings with representatives from residence halls, campus safety and the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

This year, the program for parents will include several new sessions, including activities to assist in the process of choosing courses, meeting and finding their academic advisers.

"We think that new students relate better to people their own age," DePrenger said. "It's very effective to orient new students with current students."

Scholastic powerhouses head UI

PRESIDENTS/ VICE-PRESIDENTS

Peter Nathan, acting UI president

Peter Nathan, 60, was selected to lead the UI on a temporary basis in late June after the resignation of former UI president Hunter Rawlings III. Nathan, who was UI provost for almost five years before the appointment, is a well-respected professor of psychology and a renowned expert on the study of alcoholism. As acting president, Nathan is responsible for overseeing the UI and making major decisions about UI policy and procedures. One of the most important roles of the president is to act as a representative of the UI to other institutions as well as to the public.

The UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee met throughout the summer to review applications for the presidency.

See related story, Page 7

Sam Becker, acting UI provost

Becker was Nathan's personal choice for the role of right-hand-man to the president. Becker, a 72-year-old communications studies scholar, is one of the most renowned figures at the UI and one of the few living UI faculty members having a UI building named after him; the Becker Communications Studies Building was christened in his honor. As provost, Becker is responsible for the quality of teaching and curriculum at UI and will probably make a few key hiring decisions during his tenure — including the permanent chairperson of the Opportunity at Iowa program. The provost also serves as an emissary to other institutions and the Iowa state Board of Regents.

Later this month, Becker will head the School of Art and Art History and be the chairman of Communications Studies.

David Skorton, vice president for research

David Skorton came to the UI in 1989 and became the UI's vice president for research in 1982. Skorton is also a professor of internal medicine in the UI College of Medicine and of electrical and computer engineering in the College of Engineering. Skorton received a bachelor's degree in 1970 and his medical doctorate in 1974, both from Northwestern University.

Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations

Ann Rhodes has been the UI's vice president for University Relations since January 1991. Rhodes acts as a spokesperson for the UI, participates in crisis management, oversees UI athletics, and has a number of other responsibilities. Rhodes is the UI's source for just about any type of information available to the public.

John Colloton, vice president for Statewide Health Services

John Colloton has served as the UI's vice president for Statewide Health Services since 1993 when he became a staff member of the UI Colleges of Medicine, Dentistry, Nursing and Pharmacy, the UIHC, and the statewide health services units. In terms of budgets and staffing, Colloton said he is responsible for about 60 percent of the UI's total resources.

Rhodes acts as a spokesperson for the UI, participates in crisis management, oversees UI athletics, and has a number of other responsibilities. Rhodes is the UI's source for just about any type of information available to the public.

R. Edward Howell, director of UI Hospitals and Clinics

Howell was made director of the UIHC in August 1984, after serving as the executive director of the Medical College of Georgia Hospital and Clinic since 1986. Howell serves as the chairman of the Board of Teaching Hospitals of the Association of American Medical Colleges. Howell is also an adjunct professor in the College of Medicine and Business Administration.

Douglas True, vice president for finance and university services

True is vice president for finance and university services, a position he assumed in August 1984, after serving as the executive director of the Medical College of Georgia Hospital and Clinic since 1986. Howell serves as the chairman of the Board of Teaching Hospitals of the Association of American Medical Colleges. Howell is also an adjunct professor in the College of Medicine and Business Administration.

DEANS

David Johnsen, College of Dentistry

Johnsen assumed the leadership of the College of Dentistry on Aug. 20, replacing the retiring James McLean. Johnsen was a professor and the chairman of pediatric dentistry at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. He was also the director of the pediatric dentistry residency program and served as an interim dean of Case Western's dental school in 1993.

Robert Kelch, College of Medicine

Kelch was made dean of the College of Medicine and a UI professor of pediatrics in 1994; previously, he served as the assistant dean of clinical affairs at the University of Michigan for three years. Kelch received his undergraduate degree from Wayne State University in 1965 and graduated as valedictorian from his UM Medical School class.

Geraldine Felton, College of Nursing

Geraldine Felton came to the UI in 1961, after serving as dean of the Oakland University School of Nursing in Rochester, Mich., for six years. She also served on the board of directors of the American Red Cross from 1990 to 1993 and for Mercy Health Services from 1991 to 1994.

Gilbert Banker, College of Pharmacy

Gilbert Banker became the dean of the College of Pharmacy in 1992 after teaching pharmacaceutics and heading the College of Pharmacy at the University of Minnesota for seven years. He received his bachelor's degree in pharmacy from Union University and a master's degree and doctorate in industrial pharmacy from Purdue University.

Judith Aikin, College of Liberal Arts

A specialist in early German literature, Aikin has been at the UI since 1975. She became the dean of the college of Liberal Arts in 1989; after serving one year as interim dean. She received a bachelor’s and a master’s degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1968 and 1969, respectively. She received her doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley in 1974.

Gary Fethke, College of Business Administration

Gary Fethke received his bachelor's degree and doctorate in economics from the UI in 1960 and 1966, respectively. He has been a faculty member of the College of Business Administration since 1974 and became the dean in 1993. Fethke has taught at the London School of Economics and headed the planning of the Pappajohn Business Administration Building.

N. William Hines, College of Law

Hines has been at the UI since 1962 and became the dean of the College of Law in 1976. A specialist in environmental and agricultural law, Hines was educated at Baker University, the University of Kansas and Harvard University. He is a member of both the Kansas and Iowa Bar Associations.

Leslie Sims, Graduate College

Leslie Sims has been at the UI as a professor of chemistry and the dean of the Graduate College since 1991. He received his Ph.D. degree from the University of California at Berkeley and became dean of the Graduate College in 1993, after serving as the acting president for Statewide University services head UI

UI acting President Peter Nathan wants to keep things simple.

While the university waits for a permanent president to be named, Nathan said he's going to focus his energy on the big issues — including the transition from his job as provost to being in charge of a large state university and an upcoming UI audit.

The last time the UI was audited was during the 1988-89 school year. An independent accounting firm examined the UI administration for inefficiencies in leadership and repetition of duties among offices. The UI will be audited again during the 1995-96 school year.

"It raised a lot of anxiety, as you might imagine, because of the prospect of some programs closing," Nathan said. "But on the whole, I think it was helpful. This will be a kind of repeat visit to that audit."

"I'm sure it will focus on some new issues, some current issues — how can the university focus better? How can we do our jobs efficiently with higher quality and lower cost?"

The Iowa state Board of Regents is currently looking for a firm to perform the audit.

While Nathan assumes the UI acting presidency with considerable experience as a top UI administrator, acting Provost Sam Becker does not. Becker has directed the School of Art and Art History and chaired Communication Studies, but has never played a role in running the entire university.

"Given that I've been provost for five and a half years and I know what needs to be done, my assumption is that what we do is the right thing to do. I can't second guess anybody who's going to come in. I guess I'd be pretty surprised if what I do is not seen as the right thing to do."

Studies, but has never played a role in running the entire university.

"The biggest part of the transition is making sure Sam Becker comes up to speed on the issues and meets with the vice presidents and associate provosts and learns the issues," Nathan said.

Nathan said he wants to hire — or have the provost hire — a permanent director of Opportunity at Iowa, currently run on an interim basis by Nancy "Rusty" Barcelo.

"I really think we need that leadership in order to continue our efforts to further diversify the campus," Nathan said.

Nathan seems confident in his new position. He's still in the provost's office (more book space, he says) and he opted not to move to the president's residence for the few months he's running the UI, although he could have.

The adjustment to president hasn't been an extreme change in responsibilities, Nathan said. He said he's not worrying about a new president undermining what he'll do in the next few months.

"Given that I've been provost for five and a half years and I know what needs to be done, my assumption is that what we do is the right thing to do," he said.

"I can't second guess anybody who's going to come in. I guess I'd be pretty surprised if what I do is not seen as the right thing to do."

Board of Regents President Marvin Pomerantz and Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad met with Nathan in June to hammer out details of the exchange of power. Nathan said Branstad, a UI alumnus, was supportive of the transition. When the regents appointed Nathan acting president on June 29, Pomerantz immediately referred to him as "president Nathan."

Computer purchases save money and hassle

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

UI students who have plenty of work to do on computers but don't want to travel around campus looking for an open terminal may find buying their own computer a better solution.

The Personal Computing Support Center, located in room 229 of the Lindquist Center, is where students can buy their own computers.

Students can purchase a personal computer at the university for below retailers' cost, said Marilyn Drury, manager of the center. "Having a computer of your own would definitely help with doing work and assignments," she said. "It makes life easier to buy one."

IU sophomore Reina Whitmer said she would definitely buy a computer after buying her Macintosh last fall. "I bought my computer so I could write papers for school and so I could use e-mail in my room," she said.

Whitmer never thought of buying a computer before, so she was timid when she entered the center, she said. However, Whitmer had no problem getting what she was looking for.

"It was easy," she said. "I just didn't know what to expect."

Two computer brands - Macintosh and IBM - are sold at the center, because they can use almost every program that exists, Drury said.

In addition to computers, students can also buy printers and software from the center, she said.

Not all students can afford to pay for the computers at once, so the center also allows students to take out loans from the UI, Drury said. There is eight percent interest on the loans, and students can borrow up to $3,000, which will automatically appear on their U-bills.

In previous years, students had to venture to Jessup Hall to get a loan form signed. Now, however, all the work is done at the center.

"We handle the loans up here, so there's no running around with signing forms," she said.

A computer fair will be held on Oct. 17 in the Main Lounge of the Union, she said. Students can see all types of computer retailers and get information about many different brands of computers, including Macintosh and IBM.

For students who may be interested in buying a computer but don't know how to work them, the center also features a help desk and offers training courses which last about two hours, Drury said.

Students can buy one desktop computer and one laptop computer per year, although most students prefer to buy laptop computers, Drury said.

"I think they're more portable," said Dave Scudellari, senior system analyst.

"It's been kind of an evolutionary process," he said. "Terminals were connected around the campus, and in the late '70s (and early '80s) PC's became institutionalized into what we have today."

Currently, a little less than 800 work stations exist at the 24 sites on campus, Scudellari said. However, students may still have to wait sometimes for a spot to open up.

"Most of it is timing of the semester," he said. At the end of the semester, there are a lot of students in line waiting to do projects.

Sealey said that he and other programmers are always looking to improve the system to keep students happy.

"Whenever we get complaints, we use them as challenges to try and improve ourselves," he said. "We respond to the needs of the students and that's what really drives our decisions."

For example, one of the main issues weeg had to deal with is that there are no monitors on the second floor of Burge, said Sealey. However, on a part-time basis, a monitor works and helps students' questions.

"We want students to work as smoothly as possible, and when it doesn't we try to fix it as soon as possible," Scudellari said. "If a student needs a class that has been closed, a waiting list can often be formed to fill possible vacancies."

The UI has developed a system to reserve seats for those who register late.

"What we have done is taken courses most freshmen need and we've saved a certain number of classes for the student entering from high school," Scudellari said.

Students can use ISIS to change their registration by dropping or adding courses before the beginning of the semester. After classes start, schedule changes aren't as easy.

"Once classes start, if they change courses they have to go to the instructor and notify the instructor of their plans," Dal lam said.

Both instructors and academic advisors must sign an add or drop slip and return it to the Registration Center in room 30 of Calvin Hall before a schedule will be officially changed.

Although most students are limited to taking a maximum of 16 hours per semester, there is no minimum. However, Dallam warned students against taking too few hours.

"If a student takes 12 hours every semester, they'll never graduate," he said.

The Union's called the "heart of campus life" at the UI, and it offers a wide variety of activities and services for students.

Besides providing places to shop and eat, the Union houses 350 student organizations as well as a movie theater, a hair stylist; and the Recreation / Arts & Craft Area.

The ground floor of the Union is a place where students can eat, drink and meet with friends. The Union Station and the Union Pantry offer coffee, snacks and sandwiches, and the Union Market supplies groceries.

To enjoy their food, students may utilize dining areas in the Hawkeye Room or the Wheelroom, which offers free music from time to time.

The Recreation / Arts & Craft Area is also located on the ground floor of the Union. Students can relax there with a game of pool or pinball. Supervisor Blanca Lippschitz Bailey also invites students to participate in noncredit art classes or to utilize the craft space, which has matting equipment, a printing press and a darkroom.

The offices of a number of student groups, from minority student organizations to UI Student Government, are located in the Student Activities Center on the ground floor.

Up the stairs and to the left on the first floor, students can enjoy a different dining atmosphere in the River Room. The River Room has a buffet-style cafeteria and dining room.

For that special occasion, the State Room on the second floor has been described as one of the best restaurants in town. Wine, candles and tablecloths create a fitting ambiance for the best food the Union has to offer.

The business offices of the Union, located on the first floor, have staffs which can assist students in applying for jobs and answer questions for students whose U-bills show a "code three."

Student Legal Services is located in room 155 on the first floor. Co-director William Taylor said any currently registered UI student is eligible for legal advice.

Advice is given by a licensed attorney and disseminated through UI law students. Along similar lines, the Tenant-Landlord Association in room 211 of the Iowa House advises students in the often problematic world of rental housing.

If housing is not a concern, but the entertainment and lots of places to go home. But if they try to kick you out, pay a visit to Taylor in the Iowa House, the Union's answer to Howard Johnson.

The Union may truly be the heart of campus life. With food, entertainment and lots of places to study, students may never need to go home.
The Iowa state Board of Regents is a group of nine people you may never meet, but they make all major decisions for the UI — from tuition rates to overseeing the search for the next president of the university.

The members of the board are all graduates of Iowa colleges or universities — the UI, Iowa State University in Ames and the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls. The board's decisions affect students, faculty, staff, and alumni throughout the state.
Regents provide long-term focus for Iowa state universities

Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa state Board of Regents is a group of nine people you may never meet, but they make all major decisions for the university — from tuition rates to overseeing the search for the next president of the university.

The regents are appointed by the governor to six-year terms. All appointees must be confirmed by the Iowa Senate and must receive a two-thirds majority of the Senate's vote. The members' terms rotate so there are three new members appointed to the board every three years; the board must be balanced in terms of political affiliation and gender.

The regents appoint their own president from their ranks each time a president's term expires. Currently, Marvin Pomerantz is serving as the interim board president. The president runs the monthly regents meetings and acts as an unofficial spokesperson for the regents.

The other regents for the 1995-96 school year are Tom Collins of Cedar Rapids; Tom Dorr of Manchester, Iowa; Melissa Johnson-Matthews of Cedar Falls; Ellen Gray Kennedy of Bancroft, Iowa; Owen Newlin of Des Moines; Nancy Pellett of Atlantic, Iowa; Beverly Smith of Waterloo, and John Tyrrell of Manchester, Iowa.

Smith, an African-American, is the only minority member. She replaced another African-American woman, Betty Jean Purgessen.

The regents meet to discuss and decide on the major issues surrounding Iowa's higher education system. In the past year, some of the issues they've tackled include tuition rates (which increased), four-year graduation rates (regents approved a plan to help incoming freshmen get grades) and recruit high school students in their freshman and sophomore years) and began not only one, but two, university presidential searches.

This year's regent vote by the Senate was not without its share of contention. Nominees David Fisher, a Des Moines businessman, was rejected by the Senate in April. Kennedy and Smith were Fisher's fellow nominees, but both women won easy Senate approval.

Fisher lost his confirmation bid amid controversy. He is currently involved in a $20 million federal lawsuit in which he and his former business associates are charged with making bad loans when they ran a now-failed savings and loan association in the mid-1980s. Iowa Governor Terry Branstad nominated Pomerantz in Fisher's place.

Pomerantz is slated to serve only a one-year term on the board. The regents themselves represent many areas of life. For example, Johnson-Matthews is the student representative — she is enrolled at UNI. Dorr is a lawyer; Smith is the principal of a middle school. There is always one student on the regents; the student member is a full member and has full voting rights on all issues at meetings. Most of the highest-ranking members of the UI administration — such as the president, provost and vice-president of finance and university services — attend the meetings to give reports on issues occurring within the UI.

COMPUTERS NAVIGATE DATABASES

Library resources unravel maze of information

Jill Groenenboom
The Daily Iowan

From the outside, the 5-story UI Main Library may seem huge and imposing. However, on the inside, it can provide a wealth of knowledge and information to students.

"It is overwhelming; we realize that, I think that given all the services offered, our goal is to eliminate some of the barriers and make students more comfortable," said Janice Simmons-Weiburn, head of the reference department.

The first step in doing research at the Main Library is to go to the information desk, Simmons-Weiburn said.

"It's a place to come and find where (students) can get direct information if they're not sure where to go," she said.

With more than 184 librarians and staff members, Simmons-Weiburn said the librarians' staffs are among their best resources.

"Librarians go into classes and explain what sources are available and how to use them," said Marsha Forys, coordinator of user education. The UI Libraries also work closely with rhetoric Teaching Assistants.

"We're here to support the curriculum and facilitate independent learning," to help (students) succeed in their coursework. "Over time, they'll know where to go," Simmons-Weiburn said.

Information desk workers can direct students to the right location, and librarians can also get a research topic and help gather specific information.

"At any time, you can come in, show us your book and we'll find where the information is," Simmons-Weiburn said.

Answers can also be found using two supplemental computer programs. The Main Library provides two interactive computer programs — Library Navigator and Library Explorer — available through computers located near the library reference desk and in Instructional Technology Centers.

Library Navigator provides an introduction to UI libraries, focusing on the Main Library. Almost a year old, Library Explorer is a more in-depth program and offers an easy-to-use book format and more interaction for the student.

Because of its book format, Library Explorer is a good instructional source, Forys said. In addition to simulated database searches, it also provides instruction on how to use OASIS, the online library catalog and information system.

Sixty-five percent of the Main Library's collections is indexed on OASIS. OASIS also provides databases such as the Wilson Periodicals Index, which contains periodical references, and the Periodical Abstracts Data Base, which contains abstracts and indexes for more than 1,600 general journal publications. More specific databases include the psychology databases for psychological and behavioral science information and the recently installed Hispanic American Periodicals Index, indexing Latin American journals and journals related to Latin American topics.

Classes are also available to help students learn how to use OASIS and to teach students how to access the Internet.

"Help is available here to ease your anxiety," Forys said.

Electronic, print and human resources are all available at the Main Library, and more specific research may be done at the 11 satellite libraries and the Law Library, all located on campus.

CENTERS COMPILe CAREER INFORMATION

Services help students with employment aspirations

Michele Kaeter
The Daily Iowan

In a 1994 survey of entering UI freshmen, 76 percent said they wanted help in developing their career plans. UI students scramble to find an internship or a job after graduation can find help right on campus.

Students can start by going to the Center for Career Development and Cooperative Education in room 315 of Calvin Hall. Janice Seyfer, a center associate, said the second semester of a student's freshman year is a good time to set up an appointment with an advisor.

"We do career advising and help with locating internships or professional work experience," Seyfer said. "We help students develop a career and to focus their career goal. We help in exploring and focusing career plans and gaining professional work experience."

The center also has a career library and computer assistance to help students decide on a career. Seyfer said students in any major can go to the center for help at any stage in their education. Many times, people wishing to change their careers visit the center.

"We have students at all levels," he said. "It's a real diverse group that uses our office.

When students receive an internship, they should arrange it with the center, Seyfer said.

"We offer official recognition," he said. "The experience goes on each student's permanent record. They can maintain student status."

The center compiles internship information for students to peruse.

"We screen possible internships to make sure they are professional," Seyfer said.

When employers want resumes of a particular group of students, the placement office can retrieve them for the employers.

Stupp Hurst said about 75 to 85 percent of business students receive professional employment, while others go on to graduate school or continue looking for jobs.

She said placement statistics for liberal arts students vary depending on each major.

RESEARCH FACILITIES SUPPORT PATENT PROCESS

Tom Schoenberg
The Daily Iowan

Starting new companies and the marketing of technology and research come together in full swing at the UI's Oakdale Research Campus.

Oakdale, located about seven miles east of Iowa City in Coralville, got its start as a research park within UI in 1981. However, until the 1980s when universities became aware of the act's benefits and America saw an explosion of patents by universities.

In 1984, the UI also jumped on the patenting bandwagon by establishing its own Technical Innovation Center at Oakdale. The center is where the patenting and marketing of UI research is done, and is described by Wheaton at the UI's "business incubator." A "business incubator is a sheltered environment used for the growth of new companies," Wheaton said.

Although Oakdale does not offer student courses or require undergraduate involvement, its expansion has advantages both for the UI - because it implements and markets UI research - and for the city of Coralville, which reaps the economic benefits.

What launched Oakdale's success was the passing of the Bayh-Dole Act which gave universities the rights to their own government-funded research. Although there were many lessons learned during the 1980s when universities became aware of the act's benefits and America saw an explosion of patents by universities.

Although there were many lessons learned during the 1980s when universities became aware of the act's benefits and America saw an explosion of patents by universities.

We enable people to use results of research, but human use of research means that somebody has to make it and sell it, too.

In the past, the majority of Oakdale's patents have been in the area of biotechnology, but more recently there has been a strong "Combining academic strength and business exchange was a very key concept in the establishment of the park," associate director Tom Bauer said. "There's a thread which weaves through it all and stems from the university's interest in becoming a better university and a service. One way to become a better university is to strengthen partnerships with businesses by strengthening partnerships both intellectually and financially.

Oakdale's acclaimed relationship between intellectual and financial sources has been quite successful, considering invention disclosures have gone up 50 percent in the past three years and the center has maintained its goal of graduating one company each year.

Oakdale and its companies have also been successful at a financial level, considering there are only 60 UI-paid employees compared to the 600 employees who are paid through Oakdale's profit. Wheaton said the private money against Oakdale's budget that goes back to support the research is not dependent on federal funding.

"It would be very nice if our institutional strategy embedded in our nation's strategy for growth," Wheaton said.

As for Oakdale's future, plans have already been made to construct a public bicycle path through the research park, as well as to build new roads to make Oakdale more accessible. A business and educational level, Bauer said the area will be the site for academic research and a service unit for more than 20 research-based companies.

However, Ritchie stressed that although Oakdale's growth is part of the industrial level, the research park is environmentally safe.

"It's 'clean industry,'" as they say - no smokestacks," Ritchie said.

Lecture Committee guests enlighten UI audiences

Jen Dawson
The Daily Iowan

Poet Maya Angelou, former presidential candidate George McGovern and Olympic runner Jackie Joyner-Kersee have one thing in common - they've all treated the UI community to their words of wisdom.

The UI Lecture Committee, a group of students appointed by the UI Student Government, is in charge of bringing speakers to the UI community throughout the school year.

The committee sponsors various lectures which have drawn some of the nation's most notable speakers.

"There are a couple of lectures we have every year," said UI senior Andy Peebler, chairman of the lecture committee. "We have a distinguished lecture and Martin Luther King, Jr. lecture every year.

This year's Distinguished Lecturers were Angelou and McGovern, and the Martin Luther King, Jr. lecturer was Morris Dees, the co-founder of the Southern Poverty Law Center and the 1991 recipient of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Award.

"The biggest lecturer we had was the Maya Angelou lecture. We had about 2,500 people in two different locations," said Peebler.

Peebler said the committee strives to bring in speakers from all walks of life - including former UI athletics director John Grant, who spoke at "Welcome Week 1994." In addition, the UI welcomed several independent filmmakers during the 1994-95 school year.

"What we started trying to do this year was to look at the different potential audiences on campus," Peebler said. "What we tried to do is not limit ourselves, (and we are) trying to meet as broad a range of interests as possible."

But bringing in big names means shelling out big bucks for the committee, which spent $5,000 to bring Angelou to the UI last fall.

"With the carryover our budget was $72,000," Peebler said. "Next year it's going to be bigger."

Controversy is commonplace at the UI when the lecture committee sponsors two figures. In April, UI graduate Joseph Gaylord - now an aide to Newt Gingrich - was met by a group of 50 protesters when he came to speak in the Union.

The speech was delayed 45 minutes as members of six student organizations waved signs and interrupted Gaylord as he attempted to begin his lecture.

Peebler said conflict of opinions is normal when outside speakers public figures come to campus.

"Because of the people we're dealing with, it's a situation where people who are on the cutting edge of their fields' it's natural that people are going to be offended," Peebler said. "It's part of our job to spark debate. We do like to have people come in who will challenge people's views."

Although the committee invites a broad spectrum of lecturers to campus, there are some speakers who don't make the cut.

"...we had someone calling to book Kato Kaelin," Peebler said of O.J. Simpson's famous houseguest. "I don't think Kato will consent to campus anytime soon."

Although the committee put on an estimated 15 lectures during the 1994-95 academic year, the summer schedule is limited to one speaker.

Students who have suggestions for the committee can participate in two ways.

"They could call our office with a suggestion or drop a letter," Peebler said. "But I would really encourage a person to apply for the committee. I would say the more people that apply, the better."

Applications for the committee are accepted each April.

Individual departments are also active in soliciting speakers from professional settings.

"The College of Business Administration brings in between 25 and 30 speakers each year, said Sharon Scheib, the director of communications and external relations.

The business school recently hosted Ron Pearson, president of Hy-Vee Food Stores, for a discussion with UI faculty and students.

"Not only did he speak, but at every table there were students who进行了 discussion with the guest," Scheib said.

Because guests at the lectures are often prominent members of the business community, the event offers students an opportunity to network with possible future employers.

The department's lectures are organized to inform students as well as helping them to make valuable connections.

"If we don't bring people in to speak to our students we really miss out," Scheib said. "That kind of activity is 20-to-1 - a figure he is proud of because it makes Oakdale less dependent on federal funding."

Services help minorities adjust to UI life

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

Minority students can discover opportunities and fight feelings of alienation at a predominantly white university with the assistance of two UI organizations that emphasize cultural diversity and minority concerns.

Opportunity at Iowa has been striving to increase minority enrollment and retention rates since its establishment in 1987. The organization works to reaffirm the UI’s stance that the best universities include people from the broadest spectrum of backgrounds, cultures, viewpoints and disciplines.

As well as coordinating the recruitment and retention of under-represented faculty and students, Opportunity at Iowa also develops and supports a variety of initiatives to sustain an environment conducive to minority students and women.

Organizations such as Opportunity at Iowa and Special Support Services are important in any college setting because they symbolize that school’s commitment to diversity — something that should be found on every campus — said Nancy Barcelo, interim director of Opportunity at Iowa.

Nancy Barcelo, interim director of Opportunity at Iowa, said that it’s important for (new minority students) to know that there is a place for them to go to if they encounter concerns or want to seek information about how to improve their opportunities to do different things on this campus.”

It’s important for (new minority students) to know that there is a place for them to go to if they encounter concerns or want to seek information about how to improve their opportunities to do different things on this campus, Barcelo said. “It is so critical for them to know that they can make contacts with individuals who are like them or who are sensitive to their different cultures or different languages.”

Opportunity at Iowa scholarships, which total $20,000 over four years, are the UI’s highest scholarly awards for entering minority freshmen. The scholarships support qualified minority students and are based on academic achievement. Last fall, 58 students received the scholarships — the highest number since the program’s inception nearly twice as many from the year before.

UI sophomore Latoya Buchanan said she appreciated the personal attention she received from Floyd Akins, associate director of Opportunity at Iowa.

Floyd Akins is great because he assisted me with trying to get to school,” Buchanan said. “Besides that, he really cares, and you can tell he cares. He’ll make it better.”

“When you come in and you tell us that you are going batty because your roommate has never known someone like you before and you didn’t expect that much ignorance, how you feel singled out in class, we understand,” she said.

Nonminority UI undergraduate students who participate in the trio programs — including the Talent Search, Upward Bound, Educational Opportunity Center — may also receive assistance from Special Support Services.

Volunteers, colleagues, community residents and fellow students who become helpful resources and friends to newcomers reinforce Special Support Services goals. This develops an atmosphere conducive to the personal, social and intellectual development of students from all racial, ethnic and cultural backgrounds.

Students are offered individual attention with mentors and referrals to tutors through New Dimensions in Learning. Student volunteer peer assistants, who have previously attended the UI, familiarize new students with the UI and Iowa City communities.

Despite rising tuition, UI remains best bargain in Big Ten

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

After scanning the myriad of brochures, it might seem the UI is something of a Never- Never Land under a golden dome. Yet, three inevitable evils lurk on the dark side of change and butter up the meter maid in order to avoid faces.

Rush hour to class every Wednesday morning to escape overzealous strangers on street corners who shove yellow Add Sheets in students' faces.

But make no mistake about it, after 11 years of tuition hikes, the increases seem as definite as the black and gold state Board of Regents voted by inclusive hiring goals.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION AT IOWA

UI community diversity upheld by inclusive hiring goals

In 1994, the Iowa state Board of Regents voted to increase tuition at the three state universities for the 11th year in a row. Despite fierce student lobbying efforts preceding the vote, tuition was raised 4.3 percent for in-state students and 6 percent for out-of-state students. The boost tacked on an extra $144 per semester to the approximately $1,049 for residents.

Despite the steady increases, the hike is below the median price of other Big Ten Conference schools, said Regent Tom Collins.

"Tuition at our state universities is reasonable and competitive with the other universities in the Big Ten. No matter how much or how little we raise tuition in a given year, there will be people who complain." Collins said the UI is a bargain for students who can make it through in four years.

"Obviously, the longer a student stays in school, the more it will cost them. If students could gain in four years, they could be earning an income sooner and saving the money they would spend on school," Collins said. "Focus should not be on fighting tuition increases, but on graduating on time." In 1995, Collins proposed a tuition rebate as an incentive for students who may have come from a non-diverse background.

"Affirmative action is the basis for expanding the diversity of students on campus." Phillip Jones, UI dean of students

Students who may have come from a non-diverse background may especially benefit from the services offered if they remain receptive to new ideas, Mask said.

"It's provide educational training about sexual harassment, diversity, disability awareness and sensitivity among other areas," Mask said. "For students, a larger question on campus is 'What is diversity?' The (Affirmative Action) Office is a tool to help achieve diversity on campus.

Mask said there are a number of offices and programs on campus working together to make the UI more culturally diverse, including Opportunity at Iowa, a program for minority students.

"Students who may have come from a non-diverse background may especially benefit from the services offered if they remain receptive to new ideas, Mask said. According to the UI Affirmative Action Office, 61 percent of UI students are minorities.

"Affirmative action is a process of being open to new ideas can reap long-term benefits, and Mask said students don't need to do much planning to come to a campus as diverse as the UIs.

"If they bring an open mind and realize differences are not a threat, the appreciation of difference is something that helps us grow," he said.

A written affirmative action plan is required of all federal contractors holding contracts of $50,000 or more and employing 50 or more individuals. The plan helps measure the UI's progress in equal hiring practices and work force diversity, and can identify the need for different implementation strategies. Groups which are protected by the affirmative action plan include women, minorities, disabled persons, veterans and people of an alternate sexual orientation.

UI community diversity upheld by inclusive hiring goals

The UI uses hiring goals not quotas -- in its hiring practices. The goals are designed to achieve a greater inclusion of previously excluded or underserved individuals. The goals are based on the percentages of women and minorities available for positions. Ideally, the percentage working in UI departments would be the same as the percentages available.

UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones said affirmative action is a part of life at the UI thanks to both legislative mandates and executive orders from the civil rights era.

"Affirmative action is the basis for expanding the diversity of students on campus," Jones said. "It's a process of being affirmative in seeking out qualified applicants and promoting the concept of opportunity in admissions." Affirmative action could include broader recruitment of students on the basis of both merit and need, Jones said. However, special consideration is not given to students with disabilities or students of color, he said.

Administration and faculty are determined to help students battle budget cuts and tuition increases is to become active in fighting the increases.

"The more people we can get to help us, the bigger impact it'll make," he said. "So if you want to make an impact, join us." While he commended students for caring about the price of their education, Bernstein said their battle is wasted.

"Even with increases every year, (the UI) is still the biggest bargain in the Big Ten," he said.
Students exercise options with P.E. - skills requirement

Tracy Naden

UI senior Travis Anderson practices his raquetball game at The Field House. Raquetball is one way to complete the P.E. requirement.

The numerous physical education classes offered by the UI Physical Education Skills Program range from raquetball to weekend excursions in rock climbing, guaranteeing even sports fanatics a new experience. Students in the College of Liberal Arts are required to have four P.E. credits before graduating.

Students have the option of enrolling in half-semester one-hour P.E. classes, going on one-credit-hour weekend trips, taking full-semester P.E. classes for two credit hours or testing out of the P.E. requirement by taking written and physical tests.

Faith's Dancers

Students in other UI colleges may enroll in special-permission courses such as Ballroom Dance, Bicycle Touring, Basic Canoeing, Latin Dance and Rowing.

P.E. classes entailing weekend trips are in popular demand by UI students wanting to gain one credit on two days. This is the first year all weekend treks have been located in Iowa.

Students like getting it all done in one weekend,” Fairchild said. “We have about 2,000 per semester enrolled in weekend trips.” Each of the five weekend courses offered — Basic Canoeing, Rock Climbing, Mountain Biking, Bicycle Touring and High Ropes Course — are available on three different weekends and are limited to 15 students per session. There is a $40 registration fee. Information and sign-up sheets are located in room E220 of The Field House.

Dance classes taught by the UI Dance Club meet for eight weeks and have a $25 fee. Ballroom Dance, Country Dance and Latin Dance are available. Instructors start with the basics and give students with new lifetime social skills. Opportunities are also available for more advanced dancers, including a chance to compete in national competitions.

Students with physical disabilities have the option of taking two adapted classes which are customized to students’ needs. Special permission is required from the Student Disability Services office in room 3101 of Burge Residence Hall.

Most P.E. classes are taught by Teaching Assistants with different backgrounds in order to provide diverse activities.

“We do try to have a varied program to give kids a lot of choices,” Fairchild said. “Other instructors are coaches for women’s athletics, so everyone is very experienced.”

A list of P.E. classes and registration dates can be found in the Schedule of Courses. More information is available from room E220 of The Field House.

Residence halls pave change to UI lifestyle

Sheba Wheeler
The Daily Iowan

New students may be able to make an easier transition into the UI environment if they spend their first couple of years in the residence halls.

Many choose to live in residence halls because they are convenient and economical and provide opportunities to meet people and develop friendships.

UI sophomore Jeff Lentz lived in Slater Residence Hall during his first year. Lentz said living in a residence hall with so many other people was a positive experience for him because he realized that what he did or how he behaved directly affected the people on his floor.

"It helped me meet new people and get accustomed to college life," he said. "If you lived off campus, you wouldn't have the same opportunity to meet as many new people or get involved with the activities in your hall. You can do intramurals, have a barbecue or a movie night with other floors; it just helps you learn how to relax."

The residence halls on the east side of the Iowa River, near the main campus area, include Burge, Currier, Daum, Mayflower and Stanley. Hillcrest, Quadangle, Riemow and Slater residence halls are located on the west side of the river, near the UI athletic facilities and UI Hospitals and Clinics. Dining rooms in Burge provide food service for the residence halls on the east side of the river, while Hillcrest and Quadangle provide for the residence halls on the west side of the river.

The UI residence hall complex is the third smallest among the Big Ten universities. During the 1994-95 academic year, UI residence hall populations ranged in size from 1,018 Mayflower residents to 319 Quadangle residents. The residence halls also vary in atmosphere, from modern high-rises like Slater and Riemow to the more traditional architecture of Quadrangle and Currier.

More than 5,500 students — about 20 percent of the UI population — live in the residence halls. Among incoming freshmen, more than 90 percent choose to live in the residence halls, but students of all levels — including upperclassmen and professionals — also choose to live there.

Others living in the residence halls include Resident Assistants, RAs are sophomore, juniors, seniors or graduate students who are each assigned to a residence hall floor to help students become accustomed to the UI lifestyle.

In addition to RAs, hall coordinators also help students in the residence halls. Hall coordinators are full-time professional staff members who run the daily operations of the halls; advise student government; and encourage recreational, social and cultural programming.

Returning upperclassmen gave varied responses to the residence halls. The most common responses included location, social activities, easy walking access or a free Cambus ride to classrooms and recreational facilities, security, study areas, access to computer facilities, all-you-can-eat meals, laundry facilities and friends.

UI senior Brian Fritz has lived in Hillcrest Residence Hall for three years. He said living in a residence hall is a matter of convenience and it allows him to spend more time studying.

"I don't have to clean the bathroom, do dishes, spend time going to the grocery store to buy food or spend time cooking," Fritz said. "It's an interesting social environment. I probably have met a lot more people (in Hillcrest) than I would have if I had lived in an apartment."

Each residence hall provides laundry facilities, vending machine areas, study space, TV lounges and free Cambus service. Rooms are furnished with desks, chairs and tables, sinks, mirrors, a telephone, waste baskets and cable TV access. Residents share a bathroom unless they opt for rooms with adjoining bathrooms. All halls are

Residence Halls

There are nine residence halls on the UI campus. Each offers a unique setting: trade, dormitories and bicycles.

Burge Residence Hall

Burge Residence Hall houses 905 residents. An Undergraduate Academic Advising Center is located in Burge, as are the Department of Residence Services, the UI Housing Office and a computer lab. Most rooms in Burge are doubles, but there are some singles and triples. Some rooms are air conditioned. Students who wish to live in a quiet environment can opt for "quiet houses" — floors where quiet hours are enforced from 7 p.m. to 10 a.m. Other Burge specialities include accessible housing for students with disabilities, a sun deck, a cop machine, an ATM and a kitchenette on each floor.

Daum Residence Hall

Daum Residence Hall is connected to Burge by an underground walkway. Residents share Burge's dining and study facilities. All the rooms in Daum, which are double and single occupancy, are air-conditioned. Nearly 350 students live in the residence hall. One of Daum's main attractions is the basketball and volleyball courts located behind the building.

Currier Residence Hall

Currier Residence Hall — built in 1914 — was the first residence hall constructed at the UI. The building houses 663 students in mostly double and single rooms. No rooms are air-conditioned. Currier residents have access to a computer lab, a weight room with benches and free weights, and an aerobics room with equipment.

Quadangle Residence Hall

Quadangle Residence Hall, more commonly called "Quad," houses 319 residents in mostly double rooms, some of which are air-conditioned. The residence hall has a dining room for its residents and a public cafeteria. Quadangle offers an automatic teller machine, a copy machine, an ITC, classrooms and study areas and a baby grand piano. The residence hall also remains open for occupancy during winter break.

Riemow Residence Hall

Riemow Residence Hall is one of two 12-story, high-rise residence halls on the west side of the Iowa River. Riemow's 511 residents live in mostly double rooms, also of which are air-conditioned. There is an adjacent outdoor basketball court, laundry room and a piano and a quiet house option.

Mayflower Residence Hall

Mayflower Residence Hall, which houses more than 1,000 residents, combines the homey atmosphere of apartment life with UI residence hall convenience. Two double-occupancy rooms with air conditioning share a kitchen and a bath, giving students the option of cooking their own meals or purchasing a board plan at another residence hall's dining room. Special floors are set aside for upper-classmen and graduate students. Mayflower services include automatic teller machines, laundry facilities on each floor, a piano room, a copy machine, parking for a limited number of cars, and a lounge. The mostly double rooms are all air-conditioned, and a quiet house option is available.

Stanley Residence Hall

Stanley Residence Hall, which is connected to Currier, offers its residents a lounge and a kitchenette on each floor, a view of the Iowa River, an Instructional Technology Center and mostly double rooms, some of which are air-conditioned. Eight of the 10 floors are quiet houses. The 402 Stanley residents dine in Burge.

Hillcrest Residence Hall

Students who remember the agony they experienced at the beginning of the school year may recall it had little to do with classes, but a lot to do with making it up the intimidating hill which leads to Hillcrest Residence Hall. Hillcrest, which houses rooming over the Iowa River, houses 841 students in mostly double and single rooms. Hillcrest is home to the Foreign Language House, where students share an interest in foreign languages and cultures can live. A grand piano, a kitchenette and an ITC are located in Hillcrest.

Hillcrest Residence Hall

Hillcrest Residence Hall, more commonly called "Quad," houses 319 residents in mostly double rooms, some of which are air-conditioned. The residence hall has a dining room for its residents and a public cafeteria. Quadangle offers an automatic teller machine, a copy machine, an ITC, classrooms and study areas and a baby grand piano. The residence hall also remains open for occupancy during winter break.

"When I moved in, I was there no matter what happened," she said.

"I felt like I could trust her and rely on her whenever I needed." Along with helping residents on a personal level, RAs also conduct educational programs, and help to maintain an environment conducive to study and sleep.

UI junior Heather Weems, an RA at Hillcrest Residence Hall, said conducting programs is an important part of her job.

"I think the biggest part of being an RA is being a helpful resource for other residents," she said. "We are responsible for making them aware of the programs they can participate in around campus and to help them become more involved."

"It is something that is important to help students feel comfortable and to get to know other students on the floor."

"The residential life is a very important part of the UI experience." Students should be able to turn to their RA at any time and they should feel comfortable doing so.

"An RA's job is to be a helper, a friend, a resource — someone who cares that a floor member is doing well," she said. "Forming good relationships with all the residents on the floor is a key to being an RA. Students should feel they can approach an RA at any time with any problem. That's what they are there for.

"This year's RAs were selected during the spring semester and they will receive training through August. As compensation for their work, Quads' dining facilities; room and board.

Life in Iowa City: It's a whole new world

On the brink of a new experience, it is inherently human to attempt to craft a vision of what lies ahead.

For instance, before I began writing for The Daily Iowan, my vision entailed working in a dusty, smoke-filled newspaper where everyone present had a thin mustache of perseveration on their upper lip - the dual result of impending deadlines and a steady diet of cigarettes. It was restless.

I also had an idea that my editor would be a high-strung sort, having some type of unusual physical trait that would serve to define or hiss her persona (whether it was a facial tic or an ever-present, suited, chomped-on cigar, I hadn't yet decided).

As it turned out, my editor happened to be as calm as a lake on the breastless day, with no sign of any unrest. She is inherently clean and - you could think of.

Life is next with "World in a Minute," which is followed by a recap of temperatures on this date in the past ten years. Finally, the show is a wrap with warm besters among the anchor persons, but not before we receive a final forecast and a promise of the latest breaking weather developments on the news at 10.

From these programs, it is easy to see why misconceptions of Iowa City are so often misplaced. Yet what one finds upon living here is that this town is surprisingly unpredictable. In fact, it is rare to find another place where you can encounter so many diverse groups of people, for this town truly contains all representations of characters. It's hip, not just for Iowa, but for the whole Midwest.

Because of this dynamic confluence of folk, Iowa City is a place where your perspective can be unendingly broadened - only if you choose to look. And there is no tougher prescription for meeting people here. Simply arm yourself with an honest smile and a friendliness, and you are bound to meet someone who will stimulate your mind and your soul.

It all may sound difficult to believe if you haven't yet been indoctrinated into Iowa City life, especially if you envisioned hayseed spitting' and bass-ackward people. But remember...it is almost always the expectation that is seen as backward.

Iowa City’s live music venues offer variety

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Whether you like your grungy sweaty, your rock poppy, your funk groovy or your folk mellow, there is bound to be a local live music scene for you.

Although large-scale acts are somewhat rare in Iowa City, music fans are sure to find strong local acts with avid followings and enough bars that provide live music to satisfy most every musical need on most every night of the week.

Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St.
The newest live music bar to hit Iowa City is Gunnerz, which opened in May. The three owners, Warner Anderson, 22, Mark "Gunner" Gruhlke, 26, and Todd Geffler, 26, started up the bar because they felt a need to continue and improve the presence of live music in Iowa City.

"We’re attempting to bring the best available music talent into Iowa City, regardless of style," Gruhlke said. "It can be alternative grunge, blues, jazz — whatever. We’re not concerned with musical style, so much as the talent of the band."

This summer, look for Slim Dunlap, former guitarist of the Replacements; Chucklehead, a ska-funk band from Boston; Rex Daisey, a Minneapolis-based group recently named one of the best up-and-coming bands by Rolling Stone; and Miss Universe, headed by Michelle Ruhl — named one of the best female singers at this year’s South By Southwest Music Conference in Austin, Texas.

Gunnerz also features a Monday night blues jam lead by Kevin B.F. Burt of the Blues Instigators for a $1 cover charge.

You have to be 21 or older to get into Gunnerz, and cover ranges from $3 to $5 for most acts, but may be more for larger acts.

Gabe’s, 223 E. Washington St.
One of the most popular bars to catch both local and larger touring acts is Gabe’s.

The dark, sweaty, smoky atmosphere is very conducive to moshing to your favorite alternative bands. The bar has boasted a number of larger acts, including Wilco and blues legends Bo Diddley and John Hammond, in addition to playing home to area bands like House of Large Sizes and High and Lonesome.

Tuesday night is a big night at Gabe’s for the hip-hop crowd when it features its Club Hangout Hip-Hop Dance Party, complete with various DJs and lots of dancing.

To get into Gabe’s, you must be 19 or older. Cover ranges from $3 to $5 for most acts, but may be more for bigger acts.

Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave.
The management down at the Que is set to pick up any live music slack caused by the recent closing of two local live music bars. While the downstairs area remains a great place to shoot pool and play darts or pinball, the upstairs area offers a large stage and dance floor. The bar has played host to local favorites like Dagobah and Shattering Sky and if the mass of sweaty bodies filling the dance floor in any indicator, the bar is likely to bring in bigger acts.

The Que also hosts a Monday night blues jam for $1 cover charge.

You must be 19 or older to get into the Que, and cover ranges from around $3 to $5.

The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St. and the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 406 S. Gilbert St.

For a more laid-back, mellow atmosphere without sacrificing musical talent, check out The Mill or the Sanctuary. Both usually offer live music on the weekends for a small cover fee. Most acts are acoustic, and local favorites are often spotlighted.

Union Bar, 121 E. College St.
While the Union is mostly known for its dance music and DJs, the large bar does occasionally bring in musical acts such as the Jayhawks and Fishbone. Also, the Union offers free live music each Wednesday night in the front section of the bar. Performances range from the blues-inspired rock of High and Lonesome frontman David Zoloto to the rap/funk of Muddybone to the country rock of the Tom Jensen Band.

You must be 21 to attend the Wednesday night shows.

Friday night concert series

Live music fans who like to hear their tunes for free should check out the weekly Friday night concert series held near the Dubuque Street fountain in the downtown Pedestrian Mall. The concerts, which began in May, run from 6-9 p.m., through Sept.

Lisa Barnes, executive director of the Downtown Association, said the idea for the free performances began three years ago when local business owners, professionals and employees decided to improve the family environment of the downtown area.

The series has grown valuable for not only local bands but also bands seeking exposure. Top priority for the shows, which drew more than 4,000 attendees last year, is given to local bands.

The remaining Friday night concert

The remaining Friday night concert for the shows, which drew more than 4,000 attendees last year, is given to local bands.

MOVING TOWARD GREATER DIVERSITY

UI tops state universities in minority enrollment

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

As a campus with nearly 9 percent minority representation, the UI is the only one of the three Iowa state Board of Regents universities to meet the goal of 8.5 percent minorities.

This number does not include the number of foreign students, which made up 6.5 percent of total UI student enrollment during fall of 1994, said Michael Barron, UI director of admissions.

"The UI has seen an increasing number of minorities," Barron said. "It is very culturally aware."

UI sophomore Amy Tasker said coming to the UI was a learning experience.

"I'm from a really small town in Illinois," Tasker said. "We only had one minority family (in town) so I didn't have much exposure to different cultures. It's really different here. Everybody is here. You can find people of all different types at the university. It has made me more open because I learned about all different cultures."

Of the 9,158 total minorities enrolled at the UI during fall of 1994, 7,411 were African-American, 1,951 were Native American, 95 were Native Alaskan, 1,038 were Asian or Pacific Islander and 539 were Hispanic. The UI also had 1,739 foreign students.

"We are certainly working on diversity. We're working on diversity not just within the country, but we're certainly working on it," Barron said. "In terms of Iowa's population, the campus is definitely a diverse place, but in terms of the rest of the population we certainly have a ways to go."

A wide variety of churches, along with mosques, synagogues and religious organizations ranging from the western Judeo/Christian traditions to the Eastern mystical religions — can be found in Iowa City and Coralville.

Religious diversity is common to the UI campus, said Chris Johnson, course coordinator for Judaism/Christian Traditions and Quest for Human Destiny in the UI School of Religion.

"When it comes to religion, there is quite a diversity in Iowa City," he said. "People tend to identify themselves in lots of different ways. They will describe themselves as coming from a wide variety of traditions."

Festivals and ceremonies of all religions are held throughout the year and people representing nearly every religion can be found at the UI.

A countless number of Christian churches ranging from A to Z can be found listed in the Iowa City White & Yellow Pages.

There is a great variety among Christians at the UI, said Kirk Johnson, UI campus director of Campus Crusade for Christ.

"There is definitely a diversity among Christians," he said. "There are Christians who would hail from all kinds of denominational backgrounds. Sometimes the only common thing they share is the relationship with Jesus Christ."

The Ali'ert/ Hillel Jewish Student Center, 122 E. Market St., is another UI religious organization. Of the 800 Jewish students at the UI, more than 350 participate in activities sponsored by the center, said Elliot Zashin, director of the Ali'ert/ Hillel Jewish Student Center.

"We provide students with a place to come to for help," Zashin said. "It's more of a cultural and social organization. We appeal to people who relate on both a religious and non-religious basis to the Jewish culture."

Zashin said the center sponsors a variety of educational, religious and social activities and also celebrates many Jewish holidays.

The Islamic Society of Iowa City, 114 E. Prentiss St., and the Aga Khan University Congregation, 602 E. Washington St., are also prominent places of worship for many UI students and Iowa City residents.

The Daily Iowan

From selling music to selling beer, UI students do pretty much anything for a buck.

When you live in an area as competitive as Iowa City, there are lots of opportunities for UI students to make money. However, some opportunities are more available than others. Therefore, a student interested in obtaining a job must be persistent and have a knack for being in the right place at the right time.

Although finding work may be difficult, most employed students enjoy their jobs because they're manageable and provide them with spending money.

Lack of money was UI alumna Sadhna Palondikar's motivation for finding a job as a hostess and waitress at Mondo's Tomato Pie in Coralville.

"I wanted to get a job so I wouldn't have to rely on my parents for extra spending money," she said.

When waitressing, Palondikar only makes a standard $2.75 plus tips, but she said the tips can be highly profitable.

"Tips can range anywhere from $40 at lunchtime to $100 at dinner," she said.

Palondikar said she makes $6 an hour as a hostess, seating customers and estimating the length of time customers have to wait to be seated.

"Hostessing is knowing the floor plan really well. Knowing where to put people and dealing with stressful situations," she said. "You learn to keep a smile on your face, because not everyone is a happy customer."

Palondikar said despite the stress that comes from dealing with lunch and dinner crowds, working at Mondo's is enjoyable because of her co-workers.

"Because most employees are students, you're working but it's also a social time," she said. "It's not the job that keeps me working there; it's the people — they're great."

However, since 95 percent of Mondo's employees are students, Palondikar said getting time off for holidays can be difficult.

"Mondo's is pretty flexible with scheduling because there are so many people working there," she said. "Getting time off for vacations is hard because most people working are students. You learn to sacrifice a little bit."

For UI sophomore Alan Micek, going to bar is no longer a recreational activity — it's his job. Micek is a bar back at Vito's, 118 W. Gilbert St., and hopes the job will lead to a bartending position.

"It's a good job to have," Micek said. "It's the next best thing to going out."

As a bar back, Micek's duties include setting up the bar by stocking it with alcohol and washing all the glasses. He also makes sure the liquor is flowing throughout the night and that nothing in the bar gets destroyed by customers.

"It's extremely work at points throughout the night, and sometimes it's straight-up busting your ass," Micek said.

About three bar backs work Thursday through Saturday and one works during the week. They start between 8 and 8:30 p.m. and leave a little after 2 a.m. On weekends, bar backs usually work until 2:30 a.m., Micek said.

Micek said he works between 20 and 24 hours a week, earning $4.65 an hour plus a share of the tips.

"I work a lot of hours so I can get promoted to bartender," he said. "Some people only work one or two days a week just to hold a job."

Micek said although he wants a promotion, his original motivation for seeking a bar-backing job was to stack up his bank account.

"I hate going home in the summer with nothing in my account, then work all summer long to fill it only to spend it all by the next summer," he said. "It's like a vicious cycle: drain, fill, drain, fill."

Bar jobs are extremely popular, Micek said. Therefore, available jobs fill up quickly.

"It's a job that's normally full and it's pretty much the only way to get paid," he said. "We go in at the right time when they need somebody."

However, Micek admitted a bar job is not for everyone.

"You need to be relaxed with people," he said. "If you're really drunk people are going to annoy you, then it's not the job for you."

While Micek watches people party all night, UI junior Juniper Gahn listens to music all day.

Gahn is assistant manager of Co-Op Records of Iowa City, 119 E. Washington St.

"It's fun because you get to listen to music," she said. "If you're going to have a retail job, music retail is the best."

UI senior Chris Jones makes money by selling a little part of himself: plasma. Twice a week Jones goes to Sera Tek Biologicals, 404 S. Gilbert St., where he is hooked up to a machine that filters blood from veins in his hips to remove the plasma.

When giving plasma for the first time, clients are required to receive a full physical done by qualified Sera Tek employees.

Jones said it takes between 10 minutes and a half an hour to get screened and about 45 minutes to give the plasma.

"They stick you, tape you down and check all the screens," he said. "The little finger prick and the injection are exactly the same. It's not that bad."

For a little pain, Jones makes $30 a week in cash — $10 for the plasma and $20 for the second.

"All you do is pump your hand," he said. "You can watch TV, read or talk to the guy next to you."

Bijou Theatre co-directors Sally Shaffo and Josh Golin watch a movie with projectionist Stephen Pettinga.

Union cinema features novel and vintage films

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

Whether the Bijou Theatre is showing the classic "From Here to Eternity" or the flaming "Paris is Burning," UI students and faculty flock to see movies for only a few bucks.

Josh Golin — UI graduate student, research assistant and co-director of the student-run film board — said the Bijou prides itself on screening movies soaked with nostalgic sentiment as well as those that stir up a little controversy.

"We do try to bring in films that are somewhat provocative, that represent groups that are not represented in mainstream theaters."

Josh Golin, co-director of the Bijou film board

As the stage crew assembles the set for "Les Miserables," a touring crew member adjusts lights and projection equipment from a ledge on the first balcony of Hancher Auditorium. The musical ran for two weeks.

Superb shows to enhance Hancher Auditorium season

Tracy Naden
The Daily Iowan

The world-class events offered at Hancher Auditorium entice audiences while adding culture to the lives of UI students.

A variety of ground-breaking and educational programs are available throughout the 1995-96 season. Performance categories include the concert, jazz, vocal, family and chamber music series, Innovation Aftet, Broadway, and special events.

Students can order tickets from the Hancher Auditorium Box Office Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and until 8:30 p.m. on performance nights. Call Hancher for more weekend sales opportunities.

Ticket sales are already booming for Broadway shows "Grease" and "Tommy," said Wallace Chappell, director of Hancher. Ticket sales began April 19.

The popular Broadway musical revival "Grease" will immerse students in the world of poodle skirts and drive-in movies during the weekend of Oct. 6-8.

"Tommy" has a traumatized boy who becomes a pinball wizard, and provides exciting visual imagery and sound to help UI students break from reality.

"My hope is that any given year will present a wide spectrum of performance arts," Chappell said. "I'm really pleased with 'Angels in America'; it will be an entertaining and smashing weekend at Hancher."

"Angels in America" is divided into two parts; Millennium Approaches and Perestroika.

Joe Murphy/The Daily Iowan

Alek's father-in-law sings during a performance of "Alek." The Russian opera was translated into English for the performance at Hancher Auditorium.

The vaudeville revue "Stomp" is back by the wildest popular demand in Hancher's history, Chappell said. The special event will be held Nov. 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. and at 3 p.m. on Nov. 19.

Students can order subscription series, which offer the largest discount, or they can choose their own series of special events. Depending on the seating, prices for UI students range from $20-$40.

Parking woes plague drivers

Jami Peterson
The Daily Iowan

For many students coming to the UI, it may be best to leave their cars parked in the garage at home. "There's not enough parking places at all," said UI junior Pauley Reveiz. "It's overcrowdedness." Due to a lack of spots on campus, parking is - at best - hand to come by.

"If you can possibly get along without a car, don't bring it (to the UI)," said parking control supervisor Ellie.

"It's more or less a hassle to have a car here. Students should be able to get used to the bus system."

UI junior Pauley Reveiz

Ellie Hornung, parking control supervisor

"If you can possibly get along without a car, don't bring it (to the UI). We have very little space and a lot of cars trying to cram into it."

"It's more or less a hassle to have a car here. Students should be able to get used to the bus system."

Many students choose to avoid the parking problem by leaving their cars at home.

"It's more or less a hassle to have a car here," Reveiz said. "Students should be able to get used to the bus system."

The parking crunch on campus will not be a problem for students who apply for university lot permits early, said Linda Elliot, a secretary at the parking department.

"It's not too difficult if you come right away," Elliot said.

The early bird may get the parking permit, but be prepared to be the very early bird. "I got in line at 7 a.m. and had to wait in line for five hours to get parking," said UI junior Sonya Lane.

Residence hall students can pay $72 for a permit to park in the South Clinton Street lot or HawkEye Storage lot. The HawkEye lot, which is three miles away from campus, can be accessed by Cambus or Iowa City Transit routes, said Elliot.

Students who are commuting from outside of Iowa City can get permits to park in either the Finkbine or the Hancher Auditorium commuter lot for $38.25 per year.

These spots may be the most difficult to get, Elliot said. "We have a waiting list from last fall of people we couldn't get in (to the lot)," Elliot said.

Parking services also offers free permits that provide other parking options. An A permit allows students to park in the lot behind the Main Library for 30 cents per hour, while an A permit simply registers students' cars.

Parking elsewhere may be more costly. Those looking to park in other metered lots on campus and in Iowa City will pay 50 cents per hour.

Students may also be able to find private owners willing to rent spaces, but they should be prepared for the cost. Elliot said she has heard of someone paying $75 per month to rent a spot.

While a car may make life a little easier, the problems with parking on campus may outweigh the convenience.

"It's nice to have a car down here, but I wouldn't depend on it," Lora said. "It's easier to walk."

NONMAJOR PARTICIPATION ENOURAGED

Assorted bands supply music for everyone

David Lee
The Daily Iowan

Whether they are playing in front of 70,000 football fans in their shiny black-and-gold uniforms or are performing in black for a sold-out show at Hancher Auditorium, members of UI bands know they are part of one of the finest music programs in the nation. UI students can participate in a number of different bands, including the marching, symphony, and concert bands. In many instances, students are involved in more than one.

The most visible UI band is the Hawkeye Marching Band, which performs at home football games in Kinnick Stadium. Marching band director David Henning, who came to the UI two years ago, said he loves being with the students. "I think it's a very good band with great traditions," he said. "It's almost like a fraternity or sorority." Members of UI bands do not have to be music majors, Henning said. Eighty percent of the marching band's members are nonmusic majors.

The marching band also played for some halftime of National Football League games and will perform Nov. 12 at Soldier Field, home of the Chicago Bears.

Last season, the marching band performed at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis during a Vikings/Jets football game, and Henning said everyone in the stadium took notice. "We did as well (at the game), they asked us to come back - all expenses paid - to perform at a playoff game," he said. However, the band did not perform because the playoff games were during winter break, Henning said.

When the winter sports season begins, the pep band makes its presence known at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. This group is reserved for only the most enthusiastic musicians and Hawkeye fanatics. The pep band performs at home basketball games and wrestling meets. Members of the pep band are chosen midway through the fall semester from the marching band. Selected members of the pep band also accompany the basketball teams to post-season NCAA tournament games. UI sophomore Susan Chaney is a member of the marching, pep and university bands and plans on participating throughout her college career, she said. "It's fun for the people who want to play but don't major in it," she said. "It gives them an opportunity to play and it's a great place to meet people."

If students want to do something a little different than marching in front of 70,000 screaming Hawkeye fans or playing in a packed arena, the UI School of Music has plenty of other bands in which students can participate.

The symphony band is composed of the UI's top performers and plays a full schedule of concerts, including local and national tours. The concert and university bands also perform a large variety of traditional music for concerts. "We have a place for everybody," UI band director and music Professor Myron Welch said. "We don't turn anybody away from concert bands."

Anyone - regardless of their major - can participate in a number of different bands, he said. "The big thing we emphasize is that too often people come and don't think they can contribute," Welch said. "Band takes a lot less time than what students are used to in high school.

For students into jazz, the UI jazz program has produced many successful jazz musicians. Many of these music majors have gone on to careers such as the Pat Williams Trio, who are regulars in the Iowa City area. "There are some really good people who come out of (the program)," said trio leader Pat Williams. "It's the nature of the school and the UI to get all these people together."

No matter what area of music students are interested in or what subject students have for a major, they are encouraged to participate in the UI bands, Welch said. "Don't take no for your advisor," he said. "Talk to us."

Exhibits weave cultural tales in UI museums

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

When most incoming freshmen hear the word "museum" they probably think of national museums. However, there is a museum at the University of Iowa which people often do not know about -- but should know more about.

Last spring, a new exhibit was opened at the University of Iowa Museum of Art. The exhibit, "Prints of Contemporary Artists," was opened to the public with a reception for the artists. The exhibit was created by the museum's director, David Breslin, and included prints by many artists from around the world.

The exhibit was open for two weeks and attracted a large number of visitors. Breslin said he was pleased with the response to the exhibit and looking forward to creating more exhibits in the future.

The exhibit was sponsored by the University of Iowa Art Museum and was made possible by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. The museum also received support from the University of Iowa Office of the President and the UI Foundation.

The exhibit was open from March 20 to April 7 and was open every day from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The museum is located at 100 N. Gilbert Street, on the north side of the University of Iowa campus.

Call or stop by today to see the exhibit for yourself.

Guided Tours of the Museum are offered on the first Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. The next guided tour will be offered on Thursday, July 7 at 7 p.m.

PHILANTHROPIC EVENTS ADD TO EXPERIENCE

Greek community supplies more than a social life

Paul Michas
The Daily Iowan

Many students coming to the UI feel that the college experience should not only result in a degree, but should enable one to gain valuable leadership and time management skills as well.

Joining a Greek organization, better known as a fraternity or sorority, can be one way to gain such knowledge and experience which students can carry with them into the real world.

The Greek system has provided me with a lot of opportunities that I probably wouldn’t have had if I hadn’t joined my house,” said Kristen Carlstedt, president of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

“I gained valuable leadership skills and have had the opportunity to get involved with community service,” Carlstedt said.

The most common way students show interest in the Greek system is by going through formal rush, held a week before classes begin in August.

Students are introduced to each chapter in order to get a good perspective on which house may be best for them. The final decision is a mutual one between the prospective chapter and member so that everyone can be confident about the decision.

Once a student picks or pledges — a chapter, the Greek experience is what one makes out of it, said Bob Kendall, president of the UI Interfraternity Council.

The general stereotype of an animal house isn’t the only thing that exists,” he said. “Besides the partying there is an emphasis on scholarship and community service as well.”

The Interfraternity Council is a body of students elected to act as a liaison between the three councils and other organizations to provide support and friendship to those who share similar backgrounds.

Although minority chapters are an integrated part of the Greek system at the UI, minority students find that they join a house for a support group more often than their white counterparts.

“It’s offered a lot of outlets to improve my leadership and community service,” said Nellie Nevarez, president of Sigma Lambda Gamma sorority. “It’s a lot more like a support group.”

Minority chapters are not involved in formal rush with the traditional chapters in August. Instead, they depend largely on informal rush to recruit members.

Informal rush involves an individual member of a house introducing friends, acquaintances or other interested people to the chapter.

“Most minority houses don’t have a (live-in structure) at all,” said Eugene Malone, president of the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity.

“We are forced to rush out of the house sometimes.”

Owning a structure, which is a mainstay for traditional houses, is not part of the experience for minority chapters. These students are more attracted to the Greek system as much as possible, and the council encourages interested UI students to give formal rush a try and make their own decision, Kendall said.

“By going through rush, you’re giving a house a good honest look,” he said. "I believe you will benefit by giving to your house and your house will benefit you in return."

Service, are two parts of a multi-faceted campus effort to increase safety awareness on campus and provide an additional measure of security for men and women as they travel the UI campus at night.

Students living in UI residence halls can use SAFEWALK as a safe alternative to walking around campus alone late at night.

Train-safe volunteers walk students to UI Hospitals, Clinics, and Fraternity and Sorority houses, parking lots, athletic complexes and to downtown Iowa City businesses from 7 p.m. to midnight Sunday through Wednesday and 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. Thursday through Saturday. The program is housed in a central place on campus – the Women’s Resource and Action Center, 130 N. Madison St.

SAFEWALK can provide peace of mind for many students, UI junior Patti Ferrell, one of the program’s coordinators, said.

“If students are worried and don’t know their way around or have a feel for how to take the quickest and most well-lit route to get from place to place, SAFEWALK can help put their minds at ease about what’s out there,” Ferrell said.

Residents defy alcohol policy

Daryl Phillips (Daily Iowan)

Underage drinking is a problem at the University of Iowa where 18-year-olds are frequent visitors in residence halls. Students have found a way to evade the rule, said Coleman, assistant director of residence life for UI Department of Residential Services, said drinking in the residence halls is not a concern because so many incoming UI students evade their newfound freedom by booting it up.

It is a terrible image that neither the university nor the college is proud of what college is about, but it is true, said Coleman. "You can tell how much drinking goes on here by the number of bars in the dorms and the number of bars in the dorms," said Coleman.

If a student is caught violating the rules, the alcohol is used up and the student must meet with the hall coordinator. The amount of alcohol and the number of people involved are the main factors in determining punishment, said Coleman.

"Discipline ranges from referral to Health Iowa alcohol education programs to action," he said. "If a person violates probation, it is possible that they would be kicked out of the residence halls," said Coleman.

Sophomore Mark Blume written up and put on probation during the fall of 1994 after he lived in Flower Residence Hall. The incident did not involve alcohol drinking, he said.

"I said he and his roommate were very responsible and did not drink twice a week in rooms for more than a semester without being caught," said Coleman. "If you are caught drinking, you don't draw attention to yourself; you don't get caught," said Blume. "If you have large quantities of alcohol and keep your head down, you can get away with it," said Blume.

Allowing students to have a voice in what happens at the University of Iowa is the primary goal of the UI Student Government, said Jeremy Johnson, UI senior and vice president of UISG.

“We want to hear from the students,” Johnson said. “And it’s really easy to get involved with UISG. There’s something in it that’s going to interest anybody. There are so many programs that we do, and we want to have everybody give student government a shot.”

UISG is responsible for overseeing UI student organizations and also represents student views. It disperses money to student groups each spring to fund organizations’ program costs.

Made up of a legislative, judicial and executive branch, UISG works through a system of checks and balances. The maximum number of seats that can be occupied by senators is 75. There are currently 68 UISG senators.

Elections for president and vice president are held in the spring. UI senior Tim Williams and junior Keith Fennell were elected as president and vice president, respectively.

Allowing students to have a voice in what happens at the UI is the primary goal of the UI Student Government, said Jeremy Johnson, UI senior and vice president of UISG. "We want to hear from the students," Johnson said. "And it's really easy to get involved with UISG. There's something in it that's going to interest anybody. There are so many programs that we do, and we want to have everybody give student government a shot." UISG is responsible for overseeing UI student organizations and also represents student views. Made up of a legislative, judicial and executive branch, UISG works through a system of checks and balances. The maximum number of seats that can be occupied by senators is 78. There are currently 68 UISG senators.

Elections for president and vice president are held in the spring. UI senior Tim Williams of Naperville, Ill., and Johnson, of Bettendorf, were sworn into office April 1 as president and vice president, respectively. The legislative branch of UISG is made up of senators representing students in the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate, the Undergraduate Activities Senate and the Graduate and Professional Student Senate.

UISG President Tim Williams and Vice President Jeremy Johnson are out to make politics more fun and personal. Williams and Johnson handed out free pints of Ben & Jerry's ice cream during this year's election and garnered 61.8 percent of the student vote.

There are 26 residence units to be filled by students: 14 from off-campus housing, six from the residence halls, five from at-large housing and one from family housing. Each student is selected through petition and election.

Representatives from independent groups select eight additional students for the Undergraduate Activities Senate: one Asian, one disabled, one international, one Chicano-American, one American Indian, one from a black student union, one from the Interfraternity Council and one from the Panhellenic Association Council.

The Graduate and Professional Senate's legislators represent the academic and nonacademic concerns of postgraduates. The senator seats are filled from the set contingents.

The judiciary board is comprised of students from the Student Activities Board, the Student Judicial Court, the Student Elections Board and the Student Traffic Court. Members are selected by recommendation and interview.

THEY CURE WHAT AILS YOU

Student Health Service focuses on awareness

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

There's no place like home — especially when you're sick. But when students get sick at the UI, they have their own doctor's office.

The Student Health Service, located in the Steindler Building on the west side of the Iowa River, offers confidential health services covered by a $42 health fee charged to each student's U-bill.

"We provide general care (students) receive at home," said Dr. Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Service.

Khowassah said women's health, mental health, allergy shots, physicals and immunizations are some of the many services offered. With the laboratory facilities at the center, lab tests and X-rays can be done, although there is an extra fee charged for those.

"We are the health service for the students," Khowassah said. "We have a good clinic — not only staff wise, but the kind of care we provide we feel is excellent."

Student Health Service — which has 16 physicians, including a psychiatrist — is separate from all other medical units, including UI Hospitals and Clinics. It is accredited by the Joint Commission Accreditation of Health Care Organizations, the group that accredits clinics and hospitals across the country.

Another service Student Health Service offers is the Health Iowa program, an educational branch of the center, Khowassah said.

"It's a much more pro-active program," said Pat Ketcham, director of Student Health Service. "We're not waiting to see them when they're sick. We provide information and knowledge that will perhaps steer them away from problems they may get into."

Pat Ketcham, director of Health Iowa

Ketcham said students have many misconceptions about alcohol, drugs and sex. She said they often come to college thinking everyone goes out, drinks and has sex.

In a 1993-94 survey of UI residence hall residents, students thought 80 percent of the student body had been arrested in the last six months on charges including operating while intoxicated, public intoxication, possession of alcohol under the legal age and vandalism. The actual number was 4.6 percent.

Students also thought 89 percent of the student body had missed class or work because of a hangover. The number was actually only 27 percent.

There's a huge gap in what is actually occurring and what the perception is," Ketcham said.

Student Health Service is well-equipped, Khowassah said. In the 1993-94 school year, there were 39,000 visits. Health Iowa reached out to 16,000 students that year.

Student Health Service is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. Khowassah said evening hours may be added.

When classes are not in session, the center is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1-4:30 p.m.

One of the best things about college life is the food served in the UI residence hall dining rooms — or maybe not. If you’re looking for tacos and your parents are in town, there are plenty of dining alternatives in Iowa City.

Since the average UI student is on a tight budget, a quick tour of the less-expensive eateries may be in order. Many Iowa City establishments offer lunch specials that make it possible to eat for $2.50.

Cheap eats

North Linn Street offers some of the least-expensive grub in town. Hamburg Inn No. 2 Inc., an Iowa City classic, shares the block with Pearson’s Drug Store and Chill and Grill.

The Hamburg Inn, 214 N. Linn St., offers daily lunch specials — ranging from spaghetti to tacos — for under $2.

The lure of the lunch counter is what makes Pearson’s Drug Store, corner of Linn and Market streets, so unique. Its specialties are sandwiches ranging from peanut butter and jelly for 65 cents to chicken or egg salad for around $1.30. In addition, a Campbell’s soup vending machine serves up something good and hot. To cool off, a Pearson’s malt is just the thing.

If Linn Street is out of the way, Joe’s Place, 115 Iowa Ave., is a closer-to-campus alternative for the budget gourmet. Its lunch specials include three tacos for $1.50 and a sloppy joe and chips for $1.25. Joe’s also serves salads and sandwiches as well as homemade soups.

Tasty bites

For those who have a bit more money to spend, downtown Iowa City offers good food and atmosphere at fairly reasonable rates.

Jim Mondanaro has a big share in the Iowa City dining scene. Mondanaro owns Mondo’s Sports Cafe, 212 S. Clinton St., Mondo’s, 211 S. Clinton St., and Jim’s, 11 S. Dubuque St.; and Givanni, 109 E. College St.

Mondo’s is the sports bar where burgers, chicken wings and dinner salads are the hits.

Pearson’s Drug Store, corner of Linn and Market streets, is the home of an old-fashioned lunch counter. Along with soups and with a plethora of TV sets showing — what else? sports. Expect to pay about $10 for a meal.

Givanni’s serves up Italian fare. The decor is new wave, with bare brick and neon lighting. Waiters and waitresses clad in black bring marinara, Alfredo; and my favorite, Capellini Neapolitan, to the table. Italian drinks and desserts complete the experience for $15 and up.

When people walk through the door of Micky’s, they are transported from Iowa City to Ireland in a flash. With essentially the same menu as Mondo’s, the restaurant is set up around a fantastic oak bar. The food is good, but the TV sets detract from the atmosphere.

Expect to pay $10 per person.

Ethnic fare

For an Asian experience at its finest, Mandara Indian Vegetarian Cuisine, 9 S. Dubuque St.; Yen Ching Cafe, 130 S. Dubuque St.; Sahara, 320 E. Burlington St.; and India Cafe, 227 E. Washington St., provide their services.

Masala and India Cafe offer Indian cuisine, Sahara serves Middle-Eastern fare and Yen Ching dishes out Chinese meals.

Masala serves only vegetarian dishes. Sahara and India Cafe offer food for omni­vores. Swwarnas, gyros and other dishes take the place of burgers and fries for about the same price: $5 and up.

Yen Ching is a good choice for inexpensive Chinese eating. For $4, one gets an appetizer, a bowl of soup and an entrée. The food is good, and for the price, it shouldn’t be missed.

Super subs

Since Iowa City gets hot in the summer, a nice cool sub can really hit the spot. Since everyone knows no two sub shops make the same kind of sandwich, Iowa City offers four downtown locations for subs.

Big Mike’s Super Subs, 20 S. Clinton St., may look familiar to those who have eaten at Jimmy John’s — Chicago’s hit on Big Mike’s — because Jim­my and Mike are brothers. The subs are long, skinny and served with a lot of lettuce, but they taste good.

Subway of Iowa City, 130 S. Dubuque St., and Blimpie, 118 S. Dubuque St., are national chains, and the sandwiches there are the kind one could get anywhere else in the country. The benefit is that everyone knows what to expect for the money.

For the best value and the best sandwich in town, Sub Shop, 19 S. Dubuque St., offers enormous sandwiches piled high with meat, cheese and vegetables for $3.50. Just half of these behemoths is more than a meal.

South of the border

Speaking of enormous food, Panchero’s Authentic Mexican Food, 32 S. Clinton St., is known for its giant burrito. The “home of the 2-pound burrito” was voted as having the best food overall at 1995’s “Taste of Iowa City.” An Iowa City legend, says someone once weighed a Panchero’s burrito and it topped 4 pounds.

Although a recent Mexican tourist contested Panchero’s authenticity, the restaurant draws throngs of hungry students — drunk as well as sober — looking for tacos and quesadillas in addition to the burrito as big as your head. Panchero’s serves both vegetarian and meat-based meals.

Pizza possibilities

OK, here’s the pizza section. Gumby’s Pizza, 702 S. Gilbert St., is the least expensive. The Peppy sticks rule, and Gumby’s takes credit cards.

Pizza Pit, 214 E. Market St., has the spiciest sauce and the thinnest crust. Paul Revere’s Pizza, 325 E. Market St., delivers both spaghetti and pizza.

Sit-down pizza restaurants offer the best fare, though. The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., serves both New York-style and Chicago-style pizza and is a perennial contender for the best pizza in town.

The fare at Pagliari’s Pizza, 302 E. Bloomington St., costs a lot but is worth the money. Crisp crust, fresh toppings and a long tradition make the pizza tasty, but don’t ask the waitresses for Parmesan.

Pizza and beer, a time-honored tradition, come together beautifully at the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St. More than 115 imported brands of beer and nearly that many toppings make the Sanctuary a great bet. Live jazz and folk music certainly help the ambiance, too.

Although this list is long, it certainly doesn’t include all the places where students can eat in Iowa City. When you’re feeling bored or blue, cheer yourself up with a treat at one of the many fun places to eat. And when the Ramen noodles get boring, remember there are alternatives.

Bars serve more than ale to discriminating revelers

From dance bars that cater to underage students to laid-back local bars and places just for drinking beer, Iowa City has no shortage of pubs.

Devon Alexander
The Daily Iowan

College is supposed to be about broadening one’s horizons, expanding one’s mind and finding oneself. However, many UI students end up finding themselves knee-deep in sweaty, drunken peers in area bars.

Luckily for some, not every bar in Iowa City is always packed, and not all bar patrons are sweaty. Iowa City offers a wide variety of drinking establishments for the adventurous partier.

One of the benefits of going to Iowa City bars is that there are many that admit 18-year-olds. Many of these pubs are the knee-deep, sweaty kind with overly played Top 40 tunes while guzzling gallons of beer and watching juvenile fights.

These bars include The Field House bar, 111 E. College St.; Union Bar, 121 E. College St.; and One-Eyed Jake’s, 18-20 E. Clinton St. These are the main three bars for the younger crowd.

At The Field House bar, the big attraction is free-beer night, where a $5 cover is charged at the door and patrons may drink as much as they want until 2 a.m.

If drinking bores you, there is always dancing. The Field House plays a lot of Top 40 but on a good night, “My Sharona” may come through the speakers.

Painting, the Union is the place. Its big draw is ’80s Night. Here, students of all ages gather to pay homage to the pop gods and goddesses of yesteryear. In addition, a frequent drink special is 2-for-1 Sex on the Beach, for those who haven’t yet learned the joys of princes and princesses as well, since they fines.

Wednesday Comedy Night, which is one of the best in town.

For those who don’t want to dance but like to party and haven’t been lucky enough to acquire a fake ID, the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., will take the underage under its beer-soaked wing. The Column is big and serves the best late-night slice of pizza in town for $1.

A more relaxing atmosphere for young people who are “bad to the bone” is the Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave. It boasts cheap burger baskets and the most pool tables in town, along with live music in the upstairs part of the bar.

Live music is a big part of nightlife in Iowa City. Bringing in national and local bands, many big-name bands come through. In 1994-95, Live, Weezer, James Taylor, Nine Inch Nails, The Poster Children and The Jayhawks played various venues in Iowa City.

Local bands that draw good crowds include High and Lonesome, Dagobah, Blues Intangibles and Sheltering Sky.

City is Gabe’s, 330 E. Washington St., which draws a variety of musicians from folk to alternative.

If drinking with underage masses doesn’t appeal to the older student, have no fear. Iowa City has a number of bars for students 21 and up.

Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., a new bar which opened in May, hopes to provide live music in a good atmosphere, picking up slack from the now-defunct Iowa City Yacht Club and The Metro.

Vino’s, 118 E. College St., takes patrons back to the age of bell bottoms and butterfly collars with its “fro-fru” drink for those who haven’t yet learned the joys of beer.

RT Grants, 826 S. Clinton St., and One-Eyed Jake’s are two more hide-outs for dancing queens and kings alike and princes and princesses as well, since they allow underage revelers into their confines.

One-Eyed Jake’s also sponsors a Wednesday Comedy Night, which is one of the best in town.

Notable UI alumni boast impressive careers

Sara Teasdale
and Patricia Harris
The Daily Iowan

Many UI students may wander the campus and wonder about their future and what it holds. Will they leave their mark and become another accomplished alumnus? The list of Pulitzer Prize-winning famous actors and corporate giants the UI has produced grows longer each year.

Journalism

- Margaret Walker Alexander, author, director and professor. Alexander is the former director of the Institute for Study of History, Life and Culture of Black People, professor at Jackson State University and author of "Jubilee," which preceded "Roots." Alexander received her doctorate from the UI in 1965.

- Tom Benson, "NBC Nightly News" anchorman. Despite a poor academic record, which led him to quit school after his freshman year at the UI in 1956-59, Brokaw is not forgotten as a UI alumnus.

- Marquis Child, author and journalist. Child won a Pulitzer Prize while working at the St. Louis Post Dispatch. She wrote many books, including "The Farmer Takes a Hand."

- Paul Conrad, editorial cartoonist. Conrad is a former editorial cartoonist for the Denver Post. He is now a cartoonist for the Los Angeles Times.

- George Gallup, creator of the Gallup opinion poll. Gallup founded the Gallup and Serral Society (an international fraternity for high school journalists). He developed opinion survey techniques while at the UI that led to the establishment of the American Institute of Public Opinion (the Gallup Poll) in 1935.

- Jean Brown Kinney, author and vice president. Kinney was the former vice president of Benton & Bowles advertising firm and was inducted into Printers' Ink, the magazine Hall of Fame.

Fine Arts

- Robert Bly, poet, writer and founder of the men's movement.

- MacDonald Carey, actor. Carey was an actor on the soap opera "Days of Our Lives" from its beginning more than 25 years ago until his death last year. He also held roles in "Wake Island" and many other films.

- Darragh Clough, reknowned playwright.

- Michele Crider, opera singer.

- Ria Dove, poet.

- Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre, a comedy troupe which has appeared on TV, radio and film. Duck's Breath was formed in 1974 by five UI theater students and playwrighting program students, including Jim Turner, Merle Kessler, Dan Coffey, Bill Allard and Leon Martell.

- Paul Engle, author and educator. Engle was the founder of the UI Writers' Workshop and the UI International Writers' Workshop.

- Simon Estes, bass-baritone opera star. Estes ended seven years of study in premed, theology and social psychology at the UI when he was accepted to the Juilliard School of Music in 1963.

- Norman Felton, producer. Felton was nominated for Academy Awards for "Dr. Kildare," "The Eleventh Hour," "The Lieutenant" and "The Man From U.N.C.L.E."

- Mary Beth Hurst, actress, starred in "The World According to Garp."

- Al Jarreau, jazz vocalist. A five-time Grammy award winner, Jarreau received a master's degree in psychology in 1964.

- Barry Kemp, TV producer and creator of "Newhart" and "Coach." Kemp received a bachelor's degree in communication and theater arts in 1971.

- W.P. Kinsella, author of "Shoeless Joe," the basis for the 1989 Oscar-nominated film "Field of Dreams."

- Margaret Walker, a Writers' Workshop student from 1976 to 1978.

- Shirley Rich Krohn, cast director. Krohn was a member of Broadway shows and Hollywood films, including "Kramer vs. Kramer."

- Richard Maibaum, script writer. Maibaum received both his bachelor's and master's degrees at the UI and wrote scripts for all of the James Bond films from "Dr. No" through "The Spy Who Loved Me."

- James McPherson, fiction writer and Pulitzer Prize winner for his novel "Elbow Room." McPherson received his master's degree in fine arts in 1971.

- Hope Ryder, filmmaker and author. Ryder made documentary films on animal life in Africa. She also wrote a book titled "America's Last Wild Horses."

- Jane Smiley, novelist. Smiley, in the 1990 novel "Heart's Needle."

- Mark Strand, former U.S. Poet Laureate. Strand received his master's degree in 1962.

- Margaret Walker, poet and novelist. Walker received her master's and doctorate in 1940 and her doctorate in 1965. Walker was inducted into the Iowa Black Alumni Hall of Fame in 1985, but was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize for her newplay "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." I.C. forecast calls for unpredictable weather

Jami Peterson
The Daily Iowan

An old joke says if you don't like the weather in Iowa, just wait a minute and it will change. Iowa City's weather is no exception. Springtime temperatures can be 60 degrees one day and 30 the next. The rest of the seasons aren't any easier to forecast.

"It's unpredictable at best," said UI senior Paul Godwin. "You're either freezing your ass off or sweating your ass off."

The rapid changes in weather are nothing new to the area, said state climatologist Harry Hillaker.

"Iowa... would certainly be known for having variable weather," said Hillaker. "Our weather is much more changeable than the coastal areas."

If there is anything predictable about Iowa City weather, it is the weather's unpredictability.

"There is a much greater variability in the course of the year," said Hillaker. "It's always something different," said UI sophmore Jason Hunter.

The changing weather gives Iowa City its infamous scorching summers and frigid winters.

"Most of the year it's pretty nice," Hunter said. "But there are those times of year when it's not nice."

Winters in Iowa City are milder by Iowa standards but can still get bitterly cold.

"The worst thing about the weather (in Iowa City) is the wind in the winter," said UI senior Kristie Ouverson.

Students returning to the UI for the start of the year will get a taste of Iowa's summers, if they haven't already. Although it is not the hottest month of the year, the average high in August is 85 degrees, said Hillaker.

"It can still get plenty hot," he said.

Some students enjoy the variable weather and the distinct seasons.

"I like the change of seasons," said Ouverson. "I couldn't imagine living somewhere without seasons."

For some, the changing weather is a somber, bitter reminder of the calendar.

"I never forget what time of year it is," said Godwin. "The 'unseasonably' 'warm' spring weather that Iowa City gets sometimes enjoys, with mercury often rising up to the mid 70s in early March, is also a plus."

"You get to wear shorts in March," said Godwin.

Despite the complaints about the weather, there are actually times when students wish for greater weather extremes.

"It's never bad enough that they cancel classes," said Godwin.

Generally, though, students seem to like the weather in Iowa City.

"Overall, it's pretty nice," saidhunter.
A weather enthusiast enjoys, with mercury rising up to the mid 70s in March, is also a plus. "It's nice to see the complaints about winter, there are actually students want to wear shorts,” said Godwin. "But winter is not always bad enough that we cancel classes," said Godwin.

"It’s pretty mild," said Godwin.

Unique landmarks animate local atmosphere

The Daily Iowan

A green Fiberglass dinosaur, an ominous grave marker and a peculiarly shaped fountain are three outstanding points of interest in the world of Iowa City oddities.

The Dense Pig: A locals' favorite attraction, the statue is often shielded from unwanted visitors with a green Fiberglass bolted to a cement slab to deter would-be thieves. However, the dinosaur lost its head on March 24, 1993, when pranksters sawed it off. The corporation flew in a new head and experts from California to repair the monument.

The original head was found in a muddy field after the new head had already been attached. Since then, the original head has become a trademark for the Iowa City Police Department, said Sgt. Craig Lihm.

"By the time the case was done, the station had already repaired the dinosaur," Lihm said. "One of the officers -- on a whim -- decided it would be fun to mount."

The head has made the rounds of all the offices in the station, Lihm said.

The Sinclair Dinosaur:
Three Sinclair Marketing stations grace the Iowa City/ Coralville area. The businesses in Coralville and at 2153 ACT Circle and 731 S. Riverside ave. in Iowa City boast the big green Fiberglass dinosaurs that symbolize the Sinclair Oil Corporation.

The huge, AstroTurf-green brontosaurus made its debut in Pennsylvania as the company's trademark in 1930 or 1931, said Wendell White, director of the corporation's human resources department in Salt Lake City, Utah.

The 6-foot-tall, 10-foot-wide green dinosaur in front of the ACT Circle station is a popular local attraction, said station manager Bryan Bays.

"People stop by a lot, it's pretty frequent," he said. "You always get tourists stopping by, taking pictures of their kids on it. The kids think they're riding Dino or something.

The mascot is bolted to a cement base in one hour. The statue known as the Black Angel is among the many interesting and captivating Iowa City landmarks. She can be found in Oakland Cemetery, 1000 Brown St., stands one of Iowa City's most popular, eerie and "off the beaten path" landmarks: the statue known as the Black Angel.

Standing about 8 feet tall, the angel's wings are outstretched, and her downturned face seems to look upon the graves of Rodman Foldenauer. The black stone monument was erected in 1818.

Local lore about the ebony angel's mystical power abounds: One popular myth says anyone who kisses the angel at midnight will die instantly. Another claims anyone who looks into the angel's eyes will die an untimely death. Still another claims anyone who kisses the angel's lips will die within one hour.

Most legends agree a man who had committed a horrible crime purchased the angel as a marker for his wife's grave. Tales say the husband's shady past and possible infidelity caused the statue to have supernatural and deadly powers.

"Local legend asserts the angel was brought from Italy and fell into the sea during transport, changing the exterior from shiny bronze to jet black. However, cemetery maintenance worker Bob Destach said the statue has a more humble, domestic origin.

"It was made in Chicago; it's not from across the seas like many stories say," Destach said. "It's printed right on the thing."

Touching the infamous angel made UI junior Roman Antolic believe in its "magical powers."

"I touched it and we felt cold winds come down the hill. One guy put his hand underneath the wing -- he got a little singe on his hand and he burned some hair," Antolic said.

The Pedestrian Mall Fountain:
During cold winter months, the fountain on the Pedestrian Mall is dry and looks like a piece of modern art. In the summer, however, it comes alive with children splashing in the water flowing around the structure commonly known to UI students as "Three Ladies Peeping."

The fountain evokes fond memories for UI junior Louise Bierig, who said she liked the fountain a lot better before she knew the slang terminology for it.

"One night, it was raining and lightning and thundering, and some of my friends and I danced in the fountain," she said.

The fountain's official name is the Governor Lucas Square Fountain, in honor of former Iowa Gov. Robert Lucas. Completed in 1979, the fountain cost $76,000 and was paid for by private donations.

"That is what I've always heard -- people saying, 'What is the real name?' Most people refer to it as the Ped Mall fountain or just 'the fountain,'" she said.

Students bulk up at The Field House
Tracy Naden
The Daily Iowan

Aerobics, jogging, weightlifting and a variety of intramural activities are only a few of the recreational opportunities provided by The Field House to help students stay in shape and relieve stress.

The Field House, located next to Rowow and Slater residence halls, is open from 5:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. during the week and from 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. on weekends.

The recreational facility provides a wide variety of rental equipment for students looking for challenges in the weightlifting room.

Ten basketball / volleyball courts, 22 racquetball courts, and badminton and squash courts are reserved at the Division of Recreational Services office in The Field House. Volleyball court reservation fees are $5; racquetball and squash court fees are $2. The basketball courts are free.

The Fitness Loft, located on the fifth floor of The Field House, is a high-quality fitness center with cardiovascular and weight-training equipment. The Fitness Loft boasts rowing machines, stationary bikes, treadmills, Stairmasters and 13 pieces of strength and conditioning equipment. Fees are $4 per workout or $50 for a semester pass.

Since many students have tight strokes or just to stay fit can sign up for $40 at The Field House, the Fields House holds several athletic possibilities. Members of the men's swimming team are shown working out at The Field House pool last fall.

Students looking to perfect their stroke or just to stay fit can enroll in the Master Swimming Program, which is offered to those who can swim continuously for 20 minutes.

Fifteen different intramural sports -- ranging in cost from about $1 to $80 -- are offered during the fall semester. Students can participate in the facilities in basketball, volleyball, flag football, tennis, canoe races and golf. Teams can sign up in room 2216 of the Field House.

Spring intramural sports include wrestling, table tennis, darts, softball, floor hockey, Frisbee golf, volleyball and racquetball.

ENTHRALLED WITH RADIO AT YOUNG AGE

Stefanie O'Reilly
Special to The Daily Iowan

UI junior Justin Quagliata doesn't worry about falling asleep when he's working "Under the Covers," his morning show on KRUI.

Quagliata's disc jockey shift runs from 4-7 a.m. Fridays. For Quagliata, it's an adrenaline rush.

"People always ask me if I fall asleep," he said. "I stay up because I'm high off this. This is what I want to do for the rest of my life.

Quagliata, a native of Shamong, N.J., said he came to the UI in 1993 because of its journalism program and its radio station.

"I knew we had a radio station and I said, 'I want to be on it,'" he said.

"I stay up because I'm high off this. This is what I want to do for the rest of my life."

Justin Quagliata, KRUI DJ with a 4-7 a.m. shift

Quagliata explained as he grabbed the microphone to plug a casting call. In his last show for KRUI, he will give the opportunity to be a disc jockey with a 4-7 a.m. shift.

"We have freedom here (at KRUI) that most stations don't because we don't have a play list," he said. "Every hour we're playing whatever we want from the KRUI music library. However, DJs must keep a log of what songs are played and requested during a show.

"Radio is not random at all," Quagliata said.

He explained that every CD in the studio is coded with a colored sticker depending on what type of music it contains. The stickers correspond to a KRUI play list that dictates the order in which the CDs must be played.

For example, CDs with bright red stickers are played the most because they are topping alternative charts or are being played by other college radio stations.

Quagliata said that most stations don't Wednesday and having his own shift gave him the best of both worlds.

"People don't understand why I do it since I don't get paid, but I absolutely love it," he said. "It's an escape for me."

UI sophomore Justin Quagliata spent last semester nights spinning records. He was the Disk Jockey studying journalism and English for "Under the Covers" from 4-7 a.m. Fridays.

"I definitely feel I made a positive decision in hiring him," she said. "He's very ambitious. He still enjoys what he's doing, and that's what's most important.

Alpert said Quagliata was given a shift because he is responsible and sounds very professional on the air.

"This is the only aspect of my life that I prepare in," Quagliata said. "That's why I think this is the job for me."

UI junior Joe Skala, KRUI news director, said Quagliata's disc jockey shift has improved since he hired him in the fall.

"He's taken it to another level," Skala said. "He comes in, he's excited. And he's got a lot of energy."

"I want to do for the rest of my life," Skala said. "I want to be on it,"

Quagliata added there is also a feeling of power in being on the radio because he can basically play whatever he wants from the KRUI music library.

"It's one of the best student broadcasting facilities in the nation, run completely by students," said John Barker, general manager of KRUI. "And it's a sold source of music and entertainment in Iowa City that students can be part of."

The primary goal of KRUI is to teach students to use broadcasting equipment properly, Barker said.

"The major goal of KRUI, in general, is to afford the students with broadcast equipment so they can learn about the broadcast industry and the technical aspects of the equipment," he said. "We also provide the students in the Iowa City community with a broadcast alternative in music, news and sports, and they can enjoy themselves in the process."

KRUI plays alternative and modern rock 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Currently, there are 25 DJs who work four-hour shifts. The weekend anchors have added theme shows to their routine, including "Toast to the Boogie," a funk show; "Midnight Mix," a dance show; "Swinger's Club," a disco show; and "Blues Explosion," a blues jam.

Megan Stumph, a UI junior majoring in communication studies, has worked for KRUI since she was a freshman. She was originally hired as a volunteer to help set up the studio doing filing and typing. Now Stumph works as a DJ every Tuesday afternoon from 2-6 p.m. She is also the administrative director for KRUI.

"(KRUI) is my life," she said. "These are my friends, my family. I don't know what it would be like if I didn't have this station. It's fun, you meet a lot of people, and you get exposed to a lot of new music.

There are also 25 news reporters on staff who write and deliver news reports over the air five times a day, five days a week.

KRUI has become a professional student organization in the last two years, said Amy Alpert, KRUI news director and UI senior majoring in journalism and political science.

"The number of people on staff has increased," she said. "We do more of our own reporting; we're not just getting news over the wire anymore. We're a lot more serious now than we were before."

National and international stories, released over Associated Press wire, are added to local stories written by UI students to produce a five-minute news broadcast.

Ten sports writers cover UI home games. They also travel with the Hawkeyes to selected games. Sports reporters obtain press passes that allow them to cover events free of charge, and they learn something in the meantime, Barker said.

There are currently nine student directors at KRUI. Students applying for the position of director must go through an interview process with the UI Student Government. Positions are available at the end of the spring semester.

Students interested in public broadcasting have the opportunity to be a disc jockey or a sports reporter for KRUI 89.7, "the sound alternative" of the FM dial.

"It's one of the best student broadcasting facilities in the nation, run completely by students," said John Barker, general manager of KRUI. "And it's a sold source of music and entertainment in Iowa City that students can be part of."

Local government encourages student involvement

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

As members of the Iowa City community, UI students are led by more than just the student government. The Iowa City City Council and the Johnson County Board of Supervisors both hold meetings in Iowa City — which are open to the public — and make decisions that affect UI students.

City Council regulations that impact students include control of the city's public safety organizations — including police and fire services — as well as housing rehabilitation. The council has also been concerned with the development of the downtown district, and that area's economic development.

"The lines of communication have been established and nurtured."

has been one of the council's key issues.

"This is a community / university city and we realize that," Mayor Susan Horowitz said. "Maintaining the health of downtown Iowa City helps the city and benefits the students."

The City Council also became involved in the UI Student Government last November, when the two groups held a joint meeting during which UI students were able to ask the council questions about policies and past decisions. Horowitz said the meeting was a great way to open the avenues of communication between the council and UI students.

"The lines of communication have been established and nurtured," she said. "A lot of people came in asking questions and they already had pre-judged answers. And they ended up being surprised, because there are rational reasons for the way things are done."

Other major issues with which the council has been concerned recently are the installation of new water and wastewater facilities and the addition of more affordable housing to the city, Horowitz said.

The council appreciates the students' points of view, Horowitz said, and would like them to attend meetings and get all sides of an issue before making a judgment.

Council meetings are held in the Civic Center, 410 E. Washington St., at 7:30 p.m. on alternate Tuesdays, with work sessions at 6:30 p.m. on alternate Mondays. The meetings are also televised live on the public-access cable channel.

Councilors Ernie Lehman, Karen Kubby, Naomi Novick, Jim Throgmorton, Bruno Pigott, Larry Baker and Horowitz are the current members. The next council election will be held in November 1996.

Debbie Hassman, a UI third-year pharmacy major, casts her vote in the UI Student Government elections last March. Only 33 percent of students voted in the election. Despite low turnout for university elections, community government officials urge students to participate in city and county government.

"The lines of communication have been established and nurtured," she said. "A lot of people came in asking questions and they already had pre-judged answers. And they ended up being surprised, because there are rational reasons for the way things are done."

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors also makes some decisions which affect UI students, but is more involved in issues like secondary roads, the county budget, zoning matters and data processing renovations.

Don Sehr, vice chairman of the board, said the board controls taxes, which affect rent for students, and also runs social programs for the county.

The board meets at 9 a.m. - 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. - 3 p.m. Thursdays at 9 a.m. - with work sessions on Tuesdays at 9 a.m. at 913 S. Dubuque St. The meetings are also televised live on the public-access cable channel.

UI offers support network

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Three local resources that deal with such issues as rape, domestic abuse and sexual discrimination are available for students seeking counseling, advocacy or information.

Rape Victim Advocacy Program

The Rape Victim Advocacy Program, 17 W. Prentiss St., was one of the first comprehensive rape crisis centers in the country, said Ashley Sovern, director of education at RVAP.

"We support, advocate and give information to victims of sexual abuse and their significant others," Sovern said. "And all services are free of charge."

The program provides one-on-one counseling, support groups and a resource library, she said. This year, RVAP also began providing free, 12-hour self-defense workshops.

The approximately 130 volunteers at RVAP provide services to victims of sexual harassment, incest and domestic abuse, as well as rape, Sovern said. RVAP also sponsors the group People Out Working to End Rape, which educates the Iowa City community by presenting workshops.

Domestic Violence Intervention Program

The Domestic Violence Intervention Program started as a 24-hour crisis hotline in 1976 and grew to include a shelter in 1978, Director Cris Kinkead said.

The program's purpose is to serve battered women and children and to act as an advocate in court, law enforcement agencies and hospitals. The organization also provides support groups, counseling services, outreach programs, referrals and shelter for abused and homeless women and children, Kinkead said.

She said the shelter houses about 80 people a month and has personal contact with 1,500 women a year.

Women's Resource and Action Center

The Women's Resource and Action Center, located across from the Union at 130 N. Madison St., started as a volunteer effort in 1971 and is now a part of student services, Director Monique DiCarlo said.

The center works toward the elimination of all forms of oppression, said DiCarlo.

"Our mission is to create a community that affirms all people and acts as a catalyst for social change and women's collective growth," she said.

WRAC provides counseling, information, referral services and advocacy on behalf of women at the UI and throughout the state, DiCarlo said.

Crisis Centers

There are several places to turn if you are in need of assistance:

- Rape Victim Advocacy Program (RVAP), 17 W. Prentiss St., 335-6001
- Crisis Center, 321 E. 1st St., 351-0140
- Domestic Violence Intervention Program (DVIP), 351-1043
- Women's Resource and Action Center (WRAC), 130 N. Madison St., 335-1486
- Midwest Action Plans, Inc., 1200 West 10th Street, 351-1043

Prevention tactics reduce risk of rape

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Reports of rape to the Rape Victim Advocacy Program jumped from 20 during last July, August and September to 42 during October, November and December, Director of Education Ashley Sovern said.

She attributes this rise to new students coming to campus eager to make friends quickly, before really getting to know acquaintances.

Sovern suggests several risk reduction strategies, but stresses that whether they are followed or not, sexual abuse is never the victim's fault.

- Attend the awareness workshops sponsored by RVAP that are held in every residence hall during the first few weeks of school.
- Contact RVAP about its free self-defense training sessions.
- Think about how alcohol and drug intake affect your judgment.
- Support your friends and their safety. Go to activities in groups and make up code words for when you're uncomfortable in a situation.

Most importantly, Sovern said, is to trust your instincts. "If you feel unsafe or don't know who to trust, trust your gut instinct," said Sovern. "A lot of women think they're just being paranoid or silly and that the guy's probably fine. But the definition of paranoid is being afraid of something that's unlikely to happen, and sexual assault is not unlikely to happen."

The phone numbers for the Rape Victim Advocacy Program hot lines are: 335-6001 and 1-800-284-7821; and the Domestic Violence Intervention Program hot lines are 351-1043 and 1-800-373-1043.

Summer in Iowa City

The price is right
Dan Vosingh, a bartender at Joe's Place, 115 Iowa Ave., refills a customer's beer. Several bars feature specials throughout the summer months. Joe's has Cup Night — the first cup of beer is $1.50 and refills are 50 cents.

Heat to beat
Steven Kinney, 9, of Iowa City, cooled off in the Pedestrian Mall fountain in July. Temperatures soared into the 100s for a few sweltering days last summer.

RAGBRAI
Nearly 10,000 RAGBRAI (the Register's Annual Great Bike Ride Across Iowa) stopped in Coralville in late July. Several took the opportunity to ride through a shower, of sorts. This makeshift waterfall was sponsored by the Coralville Volunteer Fire Department. The weeklong ride across the state takes riders to several towns and cities. Coralville was the second to last stop on the route. This was the 23rd annual ride. As part of the festivities, Coralville was ready with 100 kegs of beer and 80 port-a-potties. Coralville's theme was Camp Bike '95.

Farewell
Iowa women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer resigned in July to take the head coaching position at Rutgers University in New Jersey. Stringer was with the Hawkeyes for 12 seasons.

DI editor drops hints on decoding course guide

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

It's the dreaded question that will be asked ten zillion times before the Tuesday of finals week: "What classes are you taking?"

Shriek! (Violins from the "Psycho" movie soundtrack screech in the background.)

As you quickly flip through the Schedule of Courses, your head is swimming in a virtual septic tank of digits and abbreviations while you attempt to decode the magical meaning behind "GER" and all those darn colons.

Calm down. Take a deep breath. You are about to read a brief compilation of words of wisdom and anecdotes that you can hold close to your heart as you begin your deep relationship with the god ISIS.

Everything you need to know about registering for classes by one who has been there and survived:

1. Despite what those perky freshman orientation advisers tell you, the Schedule is NOT your friend. The haphazard booklet is actually the sequel to "The Anarchist's Cookbook" and was penned for the UI by a wayward Borg-for-hire using a secret combination of course numbers to hypnotize freshmen into signing up for five classes per semester and then paying for them for the next millennium or so.

Even if you don't understand my nerdy "Star Trek" references, know that you too will be assimilated.

2. Short Anecdote: A friend of mine (who shall remain nameless) signed up for 16 hours of classes with "basic" and "elementary" titles in the first semester and wound up with a 1.2 grade-point average. Elementary Numerical Analysis, Basic Athletic Training and Basic Quantum Physics will get you every time.

3. Ditto the warning on class titles starting with the words "introduction," "fundamentals of" and "beginning." Usually, they are anything but.

4. And save "methods of" and "readings in" until you've declared your fifth new major and are ready to become the turban-wearing intellectual you always knew you were cut out to be.

5. Freak out Grandma when she asks what you're planning on doing now that you've reached the higher echelons of academia and answer, "Just studying sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll, babe." Learn just how mind-altering LSD and marijuana are in the psychology department's behavioral pharmacology class.

6. Rebel against the UI's "unusual or unexpected" classroom materials policy by taking Literature and Sexuality or Sexual Topics in Art History where pornographic Picassoes abound.

And, of course, prove you ain't nothin' but a hound dog by taking the only in-depth course on "the King" in the nation — Elvis as Anthology.

7. Anecdote No.2: Another Student's Guide to Overcoming the Physical Education Requirement will land you in Relaxation Techniques (coed massage required), hatha yoga, tai chi (without sword) and bicycle riding. While the weekend hiker's class does involve a good deal of physical exertion, remember to take it the weekend Mother Nature decides to dump 10 feet of snow on your Huffy after only a few thousand feet of pedaling and you're four required hours will be taken care of.

11. Just as there is no free lunch, there is no such thing as an easy A. "Rocks for Jocks" is a myth purported by the Geology Association of America's underground to trick unsuspecting freshmen into learning a million types of sedimentary rocks. And Modern Astronomy has nothing to do with nightly star gazing or knowing whether you're a Scorpio or a Libra.

There you have it. With this list, you can impress both the folks back home and friends in party situations with your awe-inspiring schedule.

But you must promise to never give the secret away to your orientation advisers. They just wouldn't get it.

RiverFest showcases local arts

Michele Kuetz
The Daily Iowan

The UI has celebrated the Iowa River and the spring season for 18 years. RiverFest, a tradition that began as a three-day event, has evolved into a nine-day festival held the last week of April in Hubbard Park.

Kevin Jansen, UI alumnus and director for RiverFest 1995, said the ritual was started by a few students who wanted to commemorate spring. Many activities for UI students and the Iowa City community are offered throughout the week, but the biggest day is Super Saturday, Jansen said.

The Battle of the Bands is a showdown of six regional bands that perform for prizes such as recording time, guitars and cash. Besides the music of local bands, there are three stages that offer entertainment. The music of Mainstage is geared more toward college students and hosts many bands, said Jansen.

Two years ago, Blues Travelers played Mainstage. The sound stage has more varied music, Jansen said. The third stage is the multicultural stage, where various student and ethnic groups can perform traditional dances and music. Multicultural food also is available in tents around Hubbard Park throughout Super Saturday.

Spread out around the park are tents of various student groups promoting their organizations.UI junior Bonnie Bone said this is a good way for students to get involved in activities.

"I like the different art aspects. You see everything there — the students' work and local artists," Bone said. "It's a good idea to go to RiverFest just to see all the things that go on on campus," she said.

Another big event on Super Saturday is the Riverbank Art Fair, Jansen said. Local artisans display and sell their goods, such as homemade sweaters and beaded necklaces. The fair is set up along the bank of the river behind the Union. Bote, who grew up in Iowa City, has gone to the fair many times.

"I like the different art aspects," she said. "You see everything there — the students' work and local artists."

Other RiverFest events include a comedy act and a lecturer invited by the UI Lecture Committee. Comedian Henry Cho was the 1995 RiverFest comedy act and journalist Hunter S. Thompson was the scheduled lecturer, but he cancelled due to a bout with the flu.

The annual RiverFest River Run is in its 16th year, said Jansen. It includes 5K and 10K races as well as wheelchair races. The event is rounted across downtown and the UI campus.

The Sunday following Super Saturday, Acacia fraternity hosts its "Taste of Iowa City" in Hubbard Park. Local restaurants sell their food and compete to carry the honor of having the best food in Iowa City, according to "Taste of Iowa City" judges.

In the last six or seven years, Jansen said RiverFest has had a new friend: Elliot the duck, the official RiverFest mascot. Every year, Elliot can be found on RiverFest T-shirts.

"Elliot the duck is a big part of RiverFest. He is loved by everyone, especially those he surprises with gifts.

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

For the past three seasons, the Iowa football team has been a poster child for mediocrity. The Hawkeyes have compiled a three-year record of 16-16-1, one of the main reasons Coach Hayden Fry has instituted the slogan, "Think Big," for the 1996 season. Fry, who leads the Hawkeyes into the Big Ten in 1996, is looking to jump-start an Iowa team that has been spinning its wheels in the 1990s.

The most immediate effect of the new slogan will be the plays called on the field. In order to contend in today's college football arena, plays must have a heavy impact, Fry said.

"If you analyze football ... it's no longer based on taking the ball and being able to drive 80 or 90 yards with consistency," Fry told reporters before the annual intrasquad spring game last April. "Teams can't do that any more. Most of your games are won today with big plays -- big plays on offense and big plays on defense."

Fry has returned and will be the plays called on the field. In order to do that, you've got to have big-play people."

"Perhaps Iowa's biggest off-season acquisition wasn't a player, but an ex-Hawkeye fresh from his retirement from the NFL. Chuck Long, arguably Iowa's greatest quarterback of all time, was named defensive backfield coach June 29 after nine seasons in the NFL, most of which were spent in Detroit."

"I was fortunate to play nine years in the NFL and I can say that I beat the averages," Long said. "But I still have a passion for the game, which is why I'd love to return to coaching."

Long, who finished second to Bo Jackson in the voting for the 1985 Heisman Trophy, is the only Big Ten player ever to pass for more than 10,000 yards in a career, a big part of which was his senior season. The then-senior captain -- believed to be the only player to have ever participated in five bowl games (81-85) -- tallied nearly 3,800 hundred yards passing and 27 touchdowns on route to his second Rose Bowl appearance.

Still, Long's ability to coach defense is bound to be called into question. "I have a unique talent for the game," Fry said. "Certainly not many people know defensive backs better than someone who has spent 15 years reading defenses."

"The Iowa football season kicks off Sept. 8 when the Hawkeyes host the University of North Carolina in Kinnick Stadium..."

Standout starters and new players anchor mens hoops

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Following a season filled with heartbreaks, the Iowa men's basketball team hopes to make a run for the Big Ten Conference title in the 1995-96 season with a solid nucleus.

Standout starters and new players anchor mens hoops

Four one-point Big Ten losses in five games set the tone early for a Hawkeye squad that finished seventh in the conference with a 9-9 record.

The Hawkeyes (21-12 overall) will be returning four starters - junior guards Andre Woolridge, Chris Kingsbury, senior forward Kenyon Murray and junior forward Jame Settles.

Woolridge played his first year of college ball at Nebraska, where he earned Big Eight Freshman of the Year. He then transferred to Iowa and sat out the 1994-95 season.

Woolridge was named Third Team All-Big Ten by The Associated Press.

Kingsbury gained national recognition last year for his three-point range. He was honored with the AT&T Long Distance Shootout Award for most three-pointers made during the last 10 games of the season.

In addition to being named Ohio's Mr. Basketball during his senior year of high school and breaking Iowa's all-time three-point total in just two years, Kingsbury was named Second Team All-Big Ten in the AP and Coaches Poll after averaging just under 17 points per game.

Murray will be Iowa's lone starting senior. He won Michigan's Mr. Basketball title the year after Chris Webber - a member of the Fab Five from the University of Michigan and considered one of the Big Ten's top defensive players.

Settles is what makes the team tick. The junior standout collected Big Ten Freshman of the Year honors in 1994, beating out heavy preseason favorite Wisconsin's Rashard Griffith.

A back injury sidelined Settles last season through the Big Ten season. He returned to lead the Hawkeyes to an NCAA Tournament bid, but never returned to early-season form.

"Jess had a tough time with this back thing," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "He means so much to this team and he hates having to sit out."

Picking up the slack during the 6-foot-8-inch forward's absence were sophomore Ryan Bowen and senior Russ Millard.

Bowen emerged last year as Iowa's top freshman. Big Ten play was a struggle for the young forward, but Davis said the improvement in Bowen's game was noticeable.

"Ryan's struggled a little, but he's starting to find his legs and work his way up," Davis said.

Going into his senior season, Millard hasn't even played four full seasons. His plans to redshirt as a freshman were cut short by the death of forward Chris Street.

Citing a lack of depth underneath the basket, Davis took the redshirt off Millard in early spring. Millard played his entire sophomore year and showed signs of greatness. A 25-point effort against Duke helped to bring Miller to the forefront.

"However, Iowa learned that Millard would not be eligible for the first semester of his junior year because he failed to meet academic standards."

He returned second semester but fell prey to pneumonia and missed most of the last half of the spring semester.

Iowa's other returning players include Kent McCausland, a redshirt sophomore; Mon ter Gaspard, a senior backup point guard; and sophomore Greg Holmors.

The Hawkeyes will add four top recruits to their squad next season in the area they need the most - height.

Iowa's lack of an inside presence was obvious last year during Big Ten play. To help fill the gap, the Hawkeyes signed the 6-foot-11-inch Guy Rucker, 6-foot-10-inch J.R. Koch, 6-foot-9-inch Alvin Robinson and 6-foot-5-inch Trey Bulpit.

"I think Guy has a chance to be a terrific big man," Davis said. "He's got the body, athletic ability and attitude. He's very exciting."

Women's basketball shoots to regain top-ranked status

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Rebuilding after a losing season is always tough. But it won't be any easier without the services of one C. Vivian Stringer.

After 12 seasons at the helm of the Iowa Hawkeyes, Stringer announced her decision to become the head basketball coach at Rutgers University in July.

During her tenure with the Hawkeyes, Stringer compiled a 239-84 record which gave her the most wins of any men's or women's basketball coach in UI history. Stringer also led the team to two Final FourAppearances, six Big Ten titles and 10 20-win seasons.

Stringer said she enjoyed her years at Iowa, but felt it was time to head back to her roots in the East.

"I will always cherish my years at Iowa, but I feel that it is time for me to move on," Stringer said. "I am extremely appreciative of the love and support that I have received during my 12 years at Iowa. I will keep in my heart a deep love for my team, coaches, administrators and all my dear friends at Iowa."

Despite losing Stringer, the Hawkeyes appear to be ready to get back into action.

"I think we are so hungry to kick everyone's butts that kicked ours," sophomore Tiffany Gooden said just minutes after Iowa's season-ending loss to No. 8-ranked Penn State in the second round of the Big Ten tournament.

The 11-17 Hawkeyes did have their butts kicked a few times during a very trying season. The team came into the season with seven freshmen and four seniors and ended the season with four freshmen and three seniors.

The anterior crucial ligament injury was probably the biggest demon for the Hawkeyes in the 1994-95 season. Then senior Simone Edwards and freshman Malikah Willis, who happened to be two of Iowa's four tallest players, both went down for the year with knee ligament tears.

And senior Tia Jackson, who sat out the 1993-94 season with an ACL tear, was plagued by a fully healed knee all season.

She missed only two games in her final season, despite admittedly playing with constant pain.

In her final game, Jackson scored 25 points and pulled down 11 rebounds despite being knocked out of the game for five minutes and playing on an elbow to the side of the head.

Jackson scored 1,160 points in her career, the 8th best total in Iowa history. She added to that figure with a team-high 357 points in 1994-95 and led the team with a 3.7 point-per-game average.

Gooden was the team's second leading scorer. The Big Ten Freshman of the Year averaged 12.5 points per game. She led the team with 15.3 points per game in Big Ten play and scored a season-high 36 at Michigan State. Gooden was named National High School Player of the Year by Parade magazine.

The highly touted group never performed to its capabilities in its rookie season, but all seven will return as sophomores. Willis should be healthy after a year of rehabilitation. Angela Hamblin and Tanica Kirby will return from time off due to eligibility problems. And Shannon Perry, Tangela Smith and Nadine Demond will join Gooden as returning sophomores with starting experience under their belts.

Smith was also a candidate for Freshman of the Year after scoring 3.4 points per game in Big Ten play to go with her 8.2 rebounds and 2.7 blocks.

Two seniors and two juniors will provide the Hawkeyes with some extra experience. Edwards, a 6-foot-4-inch center from Kingston, Jamaica, will return from injury, attempting to fulfill her dream of dunking in a game.

Senior point guard Karen Clayton will resume her starting role, where she tallied over three assists and nearly five points per game.

Junior Jenny Noll now has two years of experience to go with her 6-foot-4-inch frame. Those two ingredients should make her a force in the middle. Susan Koering will also return for her third year with the Hawkeyes.

Iowa certainly has the ingredients to return to Hawkeye form in 1996-97. Now, according to Gooden, all the team has to do is play up to its capabilities and anything is possible.

Tennis team survives tough season

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team only managed to post a 5-3 record and a seventh place finish at the Big Ten Championships, but the statistics don't tell the whole story.

At least half of Iowa's losses could be attributed to a murderous schedule which featured several ranked teams and a five month road trip.

The team was led by senior Laura Dvorak. Dvorak posted an 11-8 singles record and the No. 1 position amongst the All-Big Ten Conference team.

Senior Cara Cash teamed up with new doubles partners to post 11-2 doubles record. The pair was almost unstoppable in Big Ten Conference play during the regular season. They had a 9-1 record in the conference.

Dvorak and Cashon were lost to graduation, but Iowa will be aided by the return of seniors Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette. Boros produced an 11-7 singles record while Willette finished at 6-13. Campbell should also make an impact as she returns for her sophomore campaign.

Six runners to pace cross country

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's cross country team never hit full steam during the 1994-95 campaign, but the Hawkeyes still managed to make some noise.

Senior Erin Boland led the Hawkeyes to an eighth place finish in their second season as Iowa's head coach.

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

In a year when it was looking for its 100th win since 1974, the Iowa women's swimming team had a rough go of it in the 1995 season, finishing 6-7 in dual meets.

The Hawkeyes lost their final dual meet of the season on Feb. 3 to Southern Illinois, 169-124. However, Iowa coach Pete Kennedy's squad wasn't exactly running at full strength.

Three sophomores Hawkeye swimmers, Kristen Belles, Sanja Statham and Jami Strauss, were out with the flu.

"We go out and swim tough, but it seems like we can't catch a break," Kennedy said after the loss. "I'm not saying having those swimmers would have won the meet, but I think they would have made a difference."

"The Big Ten Gold Medal Championships weren't much of a challenge for Iowa, which finished last both years."

Wrestling team keeps up winning tradition

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa wrestling team started and finished its last season in the same position: the driver's seat.

Iowa entered the season as the top-ranked team in the country and never relinquished its championship role. The Hawkeyes mopped up their opponents en route to an undefeated season, their 22nd consecutive Big Ten Conference title and the team's 15th national championship.

Coach Dan Gable's slogan for the season was "zero tolerance," and the Hawkeyes demonstrated that they don't tolerate losing. They opened the season with an impressive road victory, including a 33-6 thrashing of No. 2 Penn State.

In January, Iowa returned to Carver-Hawkeye Arena and continued to wreak havoc on the competition. The Hawkeyes finished 5-0 at Carver-Hawkeye with victories over No. 11 Clarion (40-3), No. 3 Arizona State (29-7) and No. 5 Oklahoma State (28-10). Iowa also recorded its first shutout since 1992, when it pounded Northwestern 40-0. Iowa won its dual meets by an average margin of nearly 30 points.

Iowa's only scare at home came when Minnesota recorded four victories in a dual meet in February. But the Hawkeyes had no intention of losing to the No. 9 Gophers two years in a row and held on for a solid 24-12 victory.

Erik Stroner, UI junior and heavyweight, said the home crowd was a great motivation...

"...I think we had a great season; it's just that it could have been better if we would have won more individual championships."

Dan Gable, Hawkeye wrestling coach for the team.

"Iowa has some of the greatest fans in the sport," Stroner said. "Iowa has the biggest crowd support of any college wrestling program. When I wrestled at Hawkeyes, we were lucky to get 200 people for a dual meet. I think the lowest attendance we had here for a dual meet was 4,000."

Iowa also produced a few more highlights during the regular season. The Hawkeyes routed intrastate rival Iowa State 32-3 and defeated four nationally ranked opponents to capture the National Duals title in Lincoln, Neb.

After the regular season, Iowa traveled to Bloomington, Ind., for the Big Ten Conference Championships. The Hawkeyes ran away with the team title, outdistancing second-place Michigan State by nearly 80 points. Six Hawkeyes won Big Ten titles. Winners were UI freshman Jeff McGinness (126); UI sophomores Mike Mena (118), Mark Ironside (134) and Lincoln McLravy (150); and UI seniors Ray Brinzer (177) and Joel Sharratt (142). Four other Hawkeye wrestlers placed at least fifth at the tournament.

Iowa concluded the season at home in Carver-Hawkeye with the NCAA Championships. The Hawkeyes captured their 14th national championship in front of a sellout crowd of 14,064. Iowa blew away the competition, finishing the tournament with 134 points. Oregon State placed second with 77.5, followed by Michigan State with 69.5. A record 81,028 fans attended the four-day tournament.

However, the Hawkeye faithful were nearly brought to their knees when Iowa stumbled in the championship round. Top-seeded McLravy and Sharratt both lost their only matches of the season in shocking upsets. Two-time NCAA champion McLravy lost a 13-10 decision to Steve Martinetti of Illinois, while defending NCAA champion Sharratt fell to Oklahoma State's J.J. McGrew, 6-6.

Iowa's lone national champion was McGinness. He won the 126-pound title over Penn State's Sam Shirko, 6-4, to finish 30-0 for the season. Nine Hawkeye wrestlers finished as All-Americans by placing in the top eight spots at the championships.

Gable, who has coached the team to 13 of its 15 national titles, said it was hard to celebrate the national championship following the disappointing losses.

"When you're a team that has won as much as Iowa and you have some things that are not as good as you wish they could be, it's very difficult," he said.

Despite having only one individual champ, Gable said he was pleased with the team's overall performance.

"When you've got nine guys in the top six, that's a good job," he said.

Mena said the Hawkeyes did a good job of combining Iowa's tradition of excellence in wrestling, although they failed to produce many individual champions.

"On the whole, it's hard to make the argument that we had a bad season. I think we had a great season; it's just that it could have been better if we would have won more individual championships," he said.

This year's team looks to be just as sharp.

Sharratt, Brinzer and all-American Matt Nerem have been lost to graduation, but seven starters — McLravy, McGinness, Mena, Ironside and UI seniors Bill Zadick, Erik Stroner and Daryl Weber — will return.

MEN’S ATHLETICS

Cross country marked by experience
Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Iowa men’s cross country Coach Larry Wieczorek said that this experience was one of his team’s strengths.

So following a disappointing ninth place performance at the Big Ten Cross Country Championships, the Hawkeyes responded like true veterans rebuilding to finish 10th out of 32 teams at the NCAA District Championships.

Iowa was led by senior Matt Gerard, who finished 35th with a time of 32:03. Senior Troy Higdon also ran well finishing 56th. The freshmen trio of Jared Pittman, Mike Bakker and Chad Feeldy rounded out the Hawkeye scoring by finishing 81st, 69th and 75th respectively.

The 10th place finish matched Iowa’s best district finish ever under Wieczorek. Iowa finished with 270 points and was only two points behind eighth-place Central Michigan.

Wieczorek said he was pleased with the team’s strong efforts.

“It’s a real credit to the team that they bounced back,” Wieczorek said. “They could just go through the motions, but instead they rose to the occasion.”

Despite losing four seniors, the team hopes to receive further recognition during the 1995-96 season. Pittman, Bakker and Feeldy will return for their sophomore campaigns. Seniors Chris Peters and Rod Reko will join junior Dave Novotny to provide added depth.

Swim team dives into next season with four all-Americans
Chris Snider

Although the Iowa men’s swim team lost depth and leadership of the team to graduation, it should remain a Big Ten Conference powerhouse in 1995-96.

Gene are the Polish duo of Ralaf Szukala and Krzysztof Cwialni, along with team captains B.J. Blair, Jim Mulligan and Erik Marchiello, who led the Hawkeyes to a perfect 8-0 dual-meet record last season. And gone are over 30 NCAA all-Americans.

But returning are four all-Americans, including UI senior Jose Hidalgo, sophomore Jerry Blauer, junior Tim Schaeull and Marco Mincone, along with a talented group of sophomores.

Hidalgo, an all-American diver, will pace Iowa’s top-notch group of divers who — despite the loss of Blair — will still be a force.

Rod Reko (218) and Matt Gerard (211) compete at the Hawkeye Invitational last October. Iowa also hosted the Big Ten Cross Country Championships.

“Diving will be one of our strongest areas, with Jeff Steins — a redshirt freshman — to take B.J. Blair’s place,” Coach Glenn Patton said.

Along with Hidalgo and Stein, the Hawkeyes have a super junior in Tete Gil, who narrowly missed a trip to the NCAA meet last season.

The Hawkeyes should also be very strong in the breaststroke.

“The breaststroke is in good shape with Marco Mincone coming back and Brian Brinkley, Ian River and Todd Hamer backing him up,” Patton said.

Blauer, who really stepped up his performance level late in the 1994-95 season, will be back to defend his all-American status in the backstroke. Schnulle will once again compete in the freestyle sprint events.

Patton also feels his sophomore class would some strength next year.

“They’ll be very, very important,” Patton said. “We have some fine young swimmers who competed in the Shadows this year. Next year, swimmers such as Brian Brinkley, Tyler Holcomb and Brad Quint will have to step forward and reach that next level.”

The Hawkeyes will begin their 1995- 96 season in early November.

The expectations for the Iowa men’s gymnastics team were certainly high heading into the 1994-95 season.

Trowers said...

“I think we’re one of the top teams in the nation, though I don’t want to say the best,” said UI senior Hugh Laur. “Our only goal is to win the NCAA.”

At the Big Ten Conference Championships, Iowa managed to finish second, behind the surprising Minnesota team. Still, Iowa finished with its second-highest score of the year and kept its top ranking.

In the 1994-95 season, the Hawkeyes were led by then UI juniors Aaron Cogar and Jay Thornton.

Thornton followed up a strong sophomore season — during which he was an all-American on the floor exercise and the horizontal bar — with a superb junior year.

“My ultimate goal is to win all-around at the nationals,” he said. “I think I have a lot better shot at it this year than I did last year.”

As far as the team is concerned, Thornton said he could not have asked for a better season.

“It’s been great,” Thornton said. “Our team is kind of like a little family. Everybody works together, sticks together — and it has been a great experience.”

Iowa’s home meets are held in the North Gym of The Field House. The Hawkeyes are led by Coach Tom Dunn, who has been at the UI for 14 years.

The Iowa track and field team is hop ing for another banner season in 1995-96.

After sprinting to the top of the Big Ten last season, the Hawkeyes look to move ahead of the Big Ten pack this year.

Despite the loss of star sprinter Andre Morris to graduation, the Hawkeyes should remain a Big Ten powerhouse in the sprint events.

Three of the four members returning — who led the 4 X 100 and 4 X 400 relay team to the top of the conference — are senior George Page and sophomores Chris Davis and Ed Rozell.

Another talented sophomore, Jeff Trowers, will lead the way in the 110-meter high hurdles. Trowers finished second in the high hurdles at the Drake Relays last season.

“We’ll have a lot of strength in the sprinters again,” Trowers said. “We’re not freshmen anymore. We’re more mature and we understand how the system works.”

The Hawkeyes should also be strong in distance events this year.

Eight-hundred-meter runner Dave Novotny, 1,500-meter runner Chad Feeldy and 5,000-meter runner Jared Pittman all held team-bests times last season. All three will return this year.

“Our distance is coming along,” Davis said. “They’ll be in real good shape next year.”

Other key returnees include middle distance runners Peter Eisheid and Regi Hawkins, along with hurdler Jonathan Tullette. Junior Rod Berko returns in the stephachasis.

Field hockey team sticks to game plan

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The UI field hockey team hopes to start the 1995-96 school year the way it finished 1994-95. Last year, the Hawkeyes struggled early in the season but found their stride near the end. In jeopardy of missing the NCAA tournament entirely, Iowa won the Big Ten Conference tournament to gain an automatic bid.

From there, the overachieving Hawkeyes cruised all the way to the Final Four, where they were finally defeated by No. 1 North Carolina.

With the loss of only three seniors, the Hawkeyes hope to continue their success this year.

The team's goals include a Final Four appearance, a Big Ten championship and a national championship. The Hawkeyes, who lost their first game ever on Grant Field last season, will also be looking to go undefeated at home this season.

Leading the Hawkeyes into action, will be a talented group of UI seniors, including Jessica Eesch, Kristen Holmes, Nancy McLinden, Ann Pare and Emily Smith.

"With the graduation of leading scorer Debbie Holland," said former head coach Shelly Fawbush, "the Hawkeyes will be looking for a more balanced attack this season."

"We've been working this spring on cohesiveness, on playing together as a unit," said Jessica Erouchmal, UI senior and all-American goalkeeper. "We're not relying on one person to be the star."

The Hawkeyes will begin their journey to the Final Four in early September. All home games are played on Grant Field, located just southwest of Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Volleyball team serves up stellar year

Big Ten Coach of the Year Linda Schoenstedt guided the 1994 Iowa volleyball team to an incredible finish.

Picked to finish dead last in the Big Ten, Iowa finished third in the conference, winning 24 games and a spot in the NCAA tournament.

"I knew we would be better than expected, but third place is past what I could have hoped for," team member Jennifer Webb said. "Considering where we've come from, this is awesome. The last two years have been hell, but now it's paying off." Webb, who was named to the team's dreams. With all but one player returning, Iowa should be a conference favorite in '95. If junior outside hitters Fawbush, Webb and Jill Oleschinger will lead the Hawkeyes squad in '95. Also returning will be UI senior setter Lisa Dockray, UI senior middle hitters Shavana Moskalik and Tiffany Melzig. UI juniors Heather Calamess and Teri Flem­ing, UI sophomore middle hitter Jennifer Bell and UI sophomore setter Carie Simonian.

Iowa redshirt freshman Katie O'Brien will see her first action in '95 as well.

Women's gymnastics team loses balance

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

It was a roller-coaster ride for the Iowa women's gymnastics team in 1994-95.

The Hawkeyes entered the season with high hopes but were decimated by injuries throughout the year. Iowa lost key performers and UI seniors Kim Baker, Amy Bolton; UI junior Shelly Burns; UI sophomore Molly O'Conner; and Cathy Terrell to injuries throughout the season.

Perhaps no injury was more disheartening than Baker's. Baker led the Hawkeyes all year in virtually every event. She qualified for the NCAA regionals but was forced to miss it due to a wrist injury.

The surgery on her wrist was successful, and Baker should be ready to go again.

"With Kim Baker being out of the lineup, it is a major shakeup," coach Diane DeMarco said. "The margin of error becomes much smaller."

Despite the injuries, Iowa pulled together for a successful season. In addition to Baker, UI senior Jodie Gray and UI sophomore Grace Lee also stood out.

Lee performed admirably in her rookie season in every event. Gray was outstanding on the balance beam and in the floor events. She won four regionals titles.

"We've had some really great team efforts as well as individual efforts throughout the season," DeMarco said.

Iowa softball backed by long string of successes

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Under the leadership of Coach Gayle Blevins, the Iowa Hawkeyes softball team has grown into a national powerhouse.

The Hawkeyes have finished either first or second in the Big Ten Conference each of the past six seasons and fin­ished No. 9 in the nation three times.

"We have all come with a dream of making Iowa softball the best it can be," Blevins said. "No one can ask any more than that, and yet we ask no less."

Blevins' commitment to excellence at Iowa earned her the 1991 National Softball Coaches Association Division I Coach of the Year and Midwest Region Coach of the Year honors.

In 1989, the Hawkeyes had advanced to their first NCAA post-season tournament and captured their first Big Ten Conference regular season title. The next year, they made it back-to-back Big Ten crowns.

"The dream — to be the best we can be — is quickly unfolding," Blevins said. "Iowa softball has risen to national prominence, and yet I firmly believe our best is yet to be."

The softball season begins in early spring, with all home games played at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

Crew team proves itself in first year

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

1994-95 marked the first season for women's crew as a varsity sport at Iowa. The squad was split into two levels of ability: novice eight and varsity eight.

To say that the team's maiden voyage was a success would be an understatment. At the final competition of the year, the novice team bested 40 other represented universities and colleges at the Champion International Collegiate Regatta.

With UI sophomores Marvin Levinson as coxswain, the novice eight claimed first place, with fellow Big Ten Conference collegiate Ohio State coming in second. Boston Col­lege finished in third place. The varsity eight squad also came away with some success. In the second level final, Iowa finished in third place.

But it was the novice eight that stole the spotlight. The Hawkeyes dominated from the get go, never showing signs of sluggishness throughout the regatta.

"We had a fantastic showing," said novice Coach Lisa Glenn. "We were by far the fastest team out there."

The eight-member crew comprising the victorious novice squad included UI sophomores Molly Manternach, Karen Kazmerzak, Anne West and Jennifer Bucklin; UI juniors Shelly Ehrmann and Shari Sekenske; and UI seniors Jennifer Wassen, Angie Petry.

Women's crew, which often holds practices before dawn, had been a club sport for several years before being granted varsity status last season.

Track team marked by standouts

David Schwartz

Daily Iowan female Athlete of the Year Yolanda Hobbs didn't let the end of the school year subdue her exceptional performance during the 1995 season.

At the Big Ten Conference Track and Field Champions­hips, the senior advanced to the finals of the 200 meters after posting a time of 23.39 seconds, a personal best. Also qualifying for the finals was UI sophomore Tan­ja Jančar, who topped Hobbs with a 23.57.

In the finals, Hobbs and Reid made strong showings by finishing second and third, respectively.

Hobbs also came in third in the 100 meters, tying Indiana's April Bailey at 11.74. Hobbs qualified for the finals with a time of 11.64.

Also making waves for the Iowa black and gold was Rebecca Kato. The freshman, high jumper leaped 5 feet, 7 inches, good for sixth place.

Iowa finished ninth overall at the championships, with only Penn State finishing with less points. The Hawkeyes had been in last place heading into the final day of competition. Illinois came in first.

Despite Iowa's ninth place finish, Coach Jerry Hassard was happy with his team's efforts.

"This was not a tremendously dynamic weekend for us, but we did place a number of our athletes," Hassard said.

"We did have a lot of events that we didn't run."

"That was the brighter side of things."

UI spirit squads commit to more than cheering

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

They may not hit the winning shot or kick the winning field goal, but the Iowa cheerleading and pompon squads are a large part of the UIL's athletic tradition.

Much like Iowa sports teams, the squads spend most of the year training. They practice two hours a day for five days a week during the school year. The squads are also present at every Iowa football and basketball home game, where they attempt to fire up and entertain thousands of spectators.

Members of both squads said they have to do a lot more than just look glamorous for Hawkeye fans.

“We definitely see it as more of a sport than just people realize it is,” UI senior and cheerleader Trisha Steuer said. “We work out basically year-round because of football and basketball. There is a lot of athletic ability involved, so I would never consider it as just an activity.”

Michelle Anderson, who coaches both squads, agreed a lot of hard work is involved.

“I can’t say it’s a sport because they don’t have competitions on a weekly basis, but I don’t look at it as an activity, either,” she said. “They’re treated like athletes by the university, but they don’t get scholarships.”

Both squads are run by UI Athletics. Team members must follow academic eligibility guidelines set up by the Big Ten Conference and the NCAA.

The two squads have tryouts each spring, but beginning are at an extreme disadvantage. Most of the pompon squad members have strong dance backgrounds in several areas, such as ballet, funk and jazz. Cheerleaders must be able to do basic tumbling, jumps and stunts. In addition to regular practices and games, the squads also take part in several community activities each year. They visit nursing homes, hospitals and local schools and participate in parades and other nonprofit events.

UI senior Vu Nguyen said community service is one of the bonuses of being a cheerleader.

“Because we care so much about the kids, the community looks at us like we’re celebrities, so it’s kind of neat to do that kind of stuff,” Steuer said. The biggest thrill is performing for fans.

“It’s a great feeling when you’re out there and you get your job done and everyone starts to respond to your cheers,” she said. “Especially in tournaments in Carver-Hawkeye Arena when the fans were on fire and everyone was yelling. It feels great to know that we started such great fan support.”

Anderson said injuries are rare, but emphasis is placed on safety. She said dance and cheer leading routines must be executed to perfection in practices before she will allow the squads to perform them for audiences. The squads also have a full-time trainer who deals with injuries.

One member of the pompon squad hoped she could affect the outcome of a sporting event.

“I wish we could alter the outcome of the games, but we’re more for the crowds,” UI junior Kristie Kaufman said. “We’re trying to get the crowd into the game and to entertain them during halftime or time-outs.”

Although nothing unusual happens at most sporting events, Anderson said things occasionally get out of hand during football season. Rowdy Hawkeye fans have been known to bombard the field with projectiles during Iowa home games, and members of both squads often become inadvertent targets.

Nguyen said he’ll never forget last season’s Homecoming game against Indiana, during which a fan threw a raw chicken onto the field.

“It started to become a joke,” he said. “It was like people said, ‘What’s the worst someone can throw?’ I think some chicken hit the field.”

Steuer said she didn’t think fans were purposely targeting the cheerleaders.

“We didn’t feel like they were throwing things at us because we were the cheerleaders,” she said. “We felt that no matter who was in that end zone, things were being thrown. When a player, official, security guard or anyone came down there, they became a target for the fans.”

Following the Indiana game, security guards carried video cameras at home games to catch throwers in the future.

Anderson said things get better after fans realized the harm they could cause by throwing objects.

“When one of the girls is 6 or 7 feet up in the air doing a stunt, even something as small as a marshmallow can cause a serious injury,” she said.

Despite these incidents, Anderson said fans are starting to gain respect for both squads.

“A lot more people are starting to realize that the (squads) are not just out there for the attention that they get or being in the spotlight,” she said. “People are starting to realize that they are athletes and how much practice time it takes to get to the level they’re at.”

The cheerleading and pompon squads also attend a summer training camp in Milwaukee to work on basic skills. Both squads are planning to compete in national competitions this year.

UI fraternity members wing it as lovable Iowa mascot

David Schwartz

Roaming the sidelines of Kinnick Stadium, diving across the parquet of Carver-Hawkeye Arena and showing up just about everywhere else you can imagine is Iowa’s favorite son.

No, not Tom Brokaw; it’s Herky — Iowa’s faithful mascot.

Roaming as one of four members of Delta Tau Delta fraternity, 222 N. Clinton St., selected each year to don the yellow and black tights and 30-pound mask and receive the attention of thousands of screaming Hawkeye fans.

“You’re just out there in front of everybody and you’re like a hero,” said Pete Peterson of playing Herky. “Kids like to beat on your head a lot, which sucks,” he said. “Nobody realizes how much that hurts. But when they come up to you at games and ask for your autograph, that’s when you really know what Herky means to Iowa.”

During football games, Herky portrays trade off after every quarter to cope with the intense heat. During an early season game, the temperature in the costume can get up to 155 degrees.

Peterson said while he enjoys the football crowd, basketball is where the action is.

InjUrY,

There’s no lack of time for Peterson’s time as Herky is dedicated to appearances for charity.

“The best thing to do is go into a day care center and look at all the smiling faces,” he said. “They just look up at you, and you realize how great this job is.”

Peterson said when it comes down to performing in front of 60,000 people or small children, he’ll take the children.

“Making the kids smile — that’s what it’s all about,” he said. “I love the kids and Peterson said the most rewarding aspect of the job, but it’s hard to compare to kids.”

UI athletes balance time between sports and studies

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

Athletic competition is only half the story for student athletes at the UI; they must also fight a battle with the books.

There is no denying that sports take up a major chunk of student athletes’ lives. Division I athletics is a major business.

Still, student athletes must find a way to keep up with considerable academic workloads.

"I think it can be difficult for a lot of people," UI senior and Hawkeye baseball player Matt Austin said. "But if you take pride in your work — be it on the field or in the classroom — then it is not all that tough."

Austin said it is important to always have one’s priorities straight when trying to balance sports and academics.

"Academics definitely come first for me," he said. "I couldn’t imagine college without baseball, yet it wouldn’t be college at all without the schoolwork and everything I put into that."

Strategies differ among athletes on the best way to succeed in sports and school.

Many athletes choose to take lighter course loads during the season in order to make things easier.

"I try to focus on gymnastics more during the season because I’m taking fewer (semester) hours," UI senior and gymnast Jay Thornton said. "During the off-season, I focus harder on school and on the Hawkeyes."

For other athletes, sports are a supplement to academics and do not dictate course loads.

"Baseball definitely takes up a lot of time, but there is usually plenty of time left over for studying," Austin said. "I try to take advantage of the time I have."

The academic requirements mandated by the NCAA do not pose many problems for most Iowa athletes.

"I think (the requirements) are fair," Thornton said. "I haven’t come across any problems with them. I don’t think it’s too difficult. You just have to balance your schedule and make sure you know what you’re doing."

The UI offers several services to student athletes in order to take some of the pressure off them. Each student athlete is assigned an academic adviser who helps plan the athlete’s schedule. Free tutoring is also offered.

"A big difference in college from high school is that there are fewer tutors and making use of those things that they offer to us," said UI alumna and former Hawkeye gymnast Yolanda Hobbs. "You get free tutoring which helps to get that extra help. It is important to make sure you use those resources that they have available."

"You get free tutoring which helps to get that extra help. It is important to make sure you use those resources that they have available."

Still, most student athletes in college have dealt with the conflict between sports and academics for many years and have already developed methods to deal with it.

"Since I grew up with (the conflict), I was pretty much used to it in college," Terrell said. "You pretty much develop a set schedule. You usually have classes in the morning and practice usually three or four hours in the afternoon. Finally, you study at night."

Of course, by putting so much time into sports and academics something is inevitably lost. Most often time for socializing and relaxing is pushed aside.

"One of the hardest things for me was finding time to relax or to spend time with other friends at home," Terrell said. "You don’t realize how hectic your days are like until you have a day off."

Still, Terrell said the positive aspects of her experience as a Hawkeye gymnast outweighed the negative ones.

"I’ll always have the friendships (with teammates) no matter what," she said. "They were in the gym with me every day, and we all got along in my four years (at the UI)."

Tennis prodigy serves success

Chris James

When Tom Derouin decided to play tennis for Iowa, he might have been wary of playing in one of the top conferences in the country and facing hard­ nosed opponents in match after match.

But much could it faze a guy who has brought a 146-14 record career record, a state title and three all-state selections with him to college? Probably not a whole lot.

The junior from Moline, IL, has adjusted just fine and

"There are some days I just don’t have the time. But I manage to get things done because I know that my schoolwork is just as important."

Tom Derouin, UI sophomore tennis standout.

played some of his best tennis of the spring for the Hawkeyes’ men’s team. Derouin has posted a 4-0 mark in Big Ten singles play and an equally impressive 3-1 mark in doubles.

"It isn’t surprising since Derouin has been around the game since age 7."

"I came from a family of six and we all played tennis," Derouin said. "My dad played tennis in college and my older brother plays a lot of tennis, so that’s what really motivated me to keep with it."

Derouin played tennis under his father, who was the coach at Moline High School, and blossomed from there. He also kept busy in the off-season by playing basketball for four years at Moline.

"It was good to have my dad there for me as the coach of the team and my personal coach. It really helped me develop my game quicker and better."

Derouin finished third in the state his sophomore and junior years and won it all his senior year. He lost only six matches his last three years of high school and also made it to the team title his senior year.

When it came time for Derouin to pick a college, he said it was a pretty easy choice.

"West Virginia, Kansas, Illinois and Michigan recruited me, but I really liked the program at Iowa," he said. "I knew a lot of the guys on the team and Coach Houghton impressed me, so those combinations made the choice pretty easy."

Derouin said men’s tennis Coach Steve Houghton said he was equally impressed with Derouin.

"Tom is probably one of the hardest workers I’ve ever coached. He’s competitive and has played good, consistent tennis for us the past two years he’s been here," Houghton said. "The scary thing is he’s only getting better."

Derouin had no trouble adjusting to the collegiate level as he posted a 13-2 singles and a 5-4 doubles record in the fall of 1993. His 12 wins led the team. Derouin claimed the championships at the Iowa State and Ball State invitational and finished second in the No. 3 singles match at the Midwestern Intercollegiates.

"My freshman year gave me a lot of experience," Derouin said. "I was lucky enough to be on the team when we had five seniors."

"It wasn’t easy," Derouin said he knew Derouin could be a factor at the highest level after his freshman year.

"Tom had a real solid first year and I knew that he could compete with anybody in the Big Ten," he said.

Derouin kept on rolling, compiling a 13-6 singles record and a 5-3 doubles record in fall 1994 and spring 1995. He also recorded one of the biggest upsets of the season when he defeated defending Big Ten singles champion Peter Pustai of Michigan.

Derouin has had success not only on the court but also in the classroom. In high school, he was a member of the National Honor Society and has continued his academic success in college. Derouin said it’s sometimes tough to balance academics and athletics.

"There are some days I just don’t have the time. But I don’t really feel that I sacrifice anything because I know that my schoolwork is just as important as my tennis."

The Iowa men’s tennis team probably wishes the University of Illinois didn’t exist.

The Hawkeyes had put together a respectable 7-6 record before they lost a 4-3 decision to the Illini. After that the roof caved in, as Iowa lost its last seven matches to finish 7-13 overall and 1-9 in the Big Ten Conference.

To add to its misfortune, Iowa spent most of the season without the services of UI seniors Bryan Crowley and Bob Zampini. Crowley returned during the season, but was bothered by a bad shoulder and couldn’t do much to help the Hawkeyes down the stretch.

Iowa finished ninth at the Big Ten Tennis Championships with no Hawkeyes advancing to the second round.

The team hopes to bounce back next year with the return of senior Mattias Johnson and junior Tom Derouin. Johnson was 22-9 in singles play and 12-8 in doubles action. Derouin finished at 19-13 in singles play and had a 13-7 doubles record.

The team is coached by Steve Houghton.

A 500 record kept Iowa from making the Big Ten tournament. Since only the top four teams advance, Iowa’s final series of the year — against Penn State — was the end of the road for three key Hawkeye seniors.

Tri-captains Steve Fishman, catcher and Jeremy Lewis and Matt Ostrom, outfielders, made up one-third of Iowa’s starting lineup and accounted for nearly 75 percent of the team’s home runs.

Returning will be designated hitter Jeff Schley, who earned second-team all-conference honors. Schley finished the 1995 season with a .314 batting clip and 19 RBIs.

Also making his way back to Iowa Field will be senior Kurt Belger. The ace reliever finished with 12 saves — a Hawkeye record — and struck out 28 batters en route to becoming Iowa’s first, first-team all-Big Ten selection since 1992.

Iowa pitcher Kurt Belger warms up during practice last spring.

Baseball looks to replace strong hitters

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

If the Iowa baseball team had never played a Big Ten Conference opponent on the road, it would have been set for a run through the Big Ten tournament.

As tough as the Hawkeyes were on their conference rivals while playing at Iowa Field, they were equally tormented on their opponents’ home fields.

Iowa compiled a combined record of 9-3 against Big Ten opponents while playing at home, but fell to 5-11 on the road, a trait that would continue to help the Hawkeyes through the Big Ten postseason play.

Returning will be designated hitter Jeff Schley, who earned second-team all-conference honors. Schley finished the 1995 season with a .314 batting clip and 19 RBIs.

Also making his way back to Iowa Field will be senior Kurt Belger. The ace reliever finished with 12 saves — a Hawkeye record — and struck out 28 batters en route to becoming Iowa’s first, first-team all-Big Ten selection since 1992.

"The Place With The Expert Service Backed By An Expert Staff"
Iowa: the true home of the superfans

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

It starts on the first Saturday of September, when you and 70,000 of your closest friends pack into Kinnick Stadium for a football game. The next weekend, you wake up a little earlier and join the tailgating scene. Then you swing by Melrose Market and pick up a bag of marshmallows to join an Iowa tradition and pelt the band, the law and anybody else (except, of course, the cheerleaders) who looks at you wrong.

Maybe the next game you paint a huge "T" on your chest and work your way into the front row, only to lose your three friends who are now spelling "OWA" amidst the crowd of people.

Once or twice, you find yourself actually leading the chants of "asshole" as someone lays a cheap shot on one of our heroes in gold and black. You've made your first futile attempt to make a name for yourself in the world of the Kinick faithful. You'll soon be a legend, much like the drunk UI athletic program unique for years is the support it receives from its fans.

But you don't stop with football. In a manner not unlike Kevin Costner in "Field of Dreams," you are drawn to Grant Field for a field hockey game. Shortly after that, you actually begin to understand what is going on at a field hockey game, and have become excited about a sport you had never before seen — or possibly heard of — in your life.

Then you skip out on studying to spend a day watching the tennis team terrorize their opponents or a night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena watching the wrestling team spike all over the competition. And before you know it — you're hooked!

"You've caught "Hawkeye fever."

For me, it began while watching the likes of Steve Carlino, Chuck Long and Gerry "Sir Jam A Lot" Wright. And as anyone who grew up in Iowa will tell you, once you catch it, you're a fan for life.

One thing that has made the UI athletic program unique for many years is the support it receives from its fans. Just ask the football team. Despite a drop-off in the team's record the last couple of seasons, 70,000 fans still pack into Kinnick Stadium to cheer on the Hawkeyes every game. Better yet, ask Michigan State. Possibly the two greatest tennis teams in the world battled for the Hawkeyes last year, first in football and again in basketball.

When the 2-5 Hawkeyes played host to the 2-4 Spartans midway through the 1984 gridiron campaign, it wasn't exactly the ABC game of the week. But someone forgot to tell that to the Iowa fans.

The Hawkeyes' faithful simply would not let the Hawkeyes lose, helping them to a 19-14 upset (if you will) over the Spartans.

"Hawkeye fever simply would not let the Hawkeyes lose, helping them to a 19-14 upset (if you will) over the Spartans."

And as anyone who grew up in Iowa will tell you, once you catch it, you're a fan for life. That was one victorious on a last-second shot. Maybe the next game you'll have a chance to capture the Big Ten title, and so will the fans.

"Thank God for Iowa fans and Kinnick Stadium. That was one of the more electrifying crowds since I've been here," Fry said.

"It seems to be typical or traditional that the Iowa fans get into the ball game. There's no question that inspired our players." Then came basketball.

Every college in America will tell you that it has the greatest fans in America, but unlike most universities, Iowa can back its claim.

The Spartans came into Carver-Hawkeye Arena looking to capture the Big Ten title, while the Hawkeyes were trying desperately to get to the NCAA tournament.

The Hawkeyes looked at the game as a "must-win" and so did their fans.

Both teams played well, but the fans shook the roof off of Carver-Hawkeye Arena. In what could have been a scene from "Hoosiers," Iowa came out of a first-half deficit and won 69-57. It was the greatest moment in the history of the University of Iowa, as well as one of the greatest moments in the history of Iowa fans.
