Presidential prospects unveiled
Colorado president named UI research official picked despite past controversy

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

Although Judith Albino was asked by both the University of Colorado and the University of Iowa to become a presidential candidate, she has learned the UI is courting her as a potential president.

Albino is one of about six final candidates being investigated to replace Eastern Kentucky University President Larry Land that UI President Bruce Harreld has selected in about a month. The search committee for UI's new president has not released Albino as a candidate. The campus-wide Long Range Planning Committee will host an event Monday night to introduce Albino to students, who will also have a chance to ask questions. Albino will be coming back ever against the Virginia Cavaliers. The Actors and Idiosyncrasies Arts / Sports / Crossword

Judith Albino

David Skorton, UI vice president for research, said Monday that Albino is one of about six final candidates for UI president picked today by the UI President Search and Faculty Committee.

Skorton said Albino's experience at UI was an important factor in her selection as one of the six final candidates.

"This is a great day for the UI," Skorton said. "We are excited about this search and the opportunities that it presents."

WPI freshman orientation fun is in the cards

Matthew Denicourt had been on the "I, The Dilly Iowan," the official student newspaper of the WPI, for three years. When his classmate Rachel told him to trade cards, he thought it was an "odd" idea. But after attending a "friend" trading session, Denicourt finally decided to give it a try.

"I don't know why I waited so long," Denicourt said. "But after the trading card session, I realized that it's a lot of fun. I've made some great friends through trading cards." He added that the trading cards had also helped him get to know other students.

According to General Information Director Dean Chris Jachimowicz, "Trading cards are one of the most popular activities on campus this year." He encourages all students to participate in the trading card format.

The trading card format is a way for students to trade cards with each other. It is a great way to meet new people and make friends. If you are interested in trading cards, you can contact the Classified Ads Manager at 335-5849.

PLAYBOY PLAYMATE

Paul was last seen in Australia to promote his most recent film, "Friends," but now he's back on the campus of Iowa. Paul recently separated from his wife, Gates, and is now working on a new movie, "The Cageball." He said he's looking forward to playing cards with his Iowa friends.

NBC 25 reporter and fashion expert, Grant, recently attended a trading card session on the campus of Iowa. He was impressed with the enthusiasm of the students and said he would like to attend more trading card sessions.

Regents to vote on audit company

The Iowa state Board of Regents expects to choose a firm to conduct an organizational audit of three public universities — the University of Northern Iowa, Iowa State University and the University of Iowa — at its first meeting Tuesday.

Marcy Slappendel, interim president of the board, said he hoped the first audit in eight years would see the public universities return to the "fabric of the state." "The audit is critical in setting the strategic plan for the future," Slappendel said.

One of three companies being considered, the board decided to go with PricewaterhouseCoopers. The audit price is $350,000, Slappendel said.

"We look forward to what we can find out," he said. "Any company that does business with the state will take a look at it."

"The selection of this company is a very good decision.

Various campus and board members made presentations on the issues for consideration or discussion, including parking on campus.

The board also heard a presentation from Joe Rennebohm, a former University of Iowa student and current member of the Board of Regents.

"If I were back on campus, I would not go to the student union every day," Rennebohm said.

"We want to get a better bang for the buck," Slappendel said.

The board also approved a $90,000 contract for the audit of the UI, University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University.

Regents also set the Agenda for the next meeting, which is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 3.

"The audience is invited to attend," Slappendel said.

WASHINGTON — When Leona Harris, Sanders thought about dropping out of the U.S. Military Academy, she turned to poetry.

"The more you let me do, the fitter I'll be." Sanders said. "The more you let me do, the more I'll learn."

And Sanders graduated from the distinguished school last spring and is heading for a promising commission in the Army. Harris is now an intelligence officer in the Virginia National Guard.

"The idea is to try to break down mental barriers," Harris said. "The idea is to try to make people feel good and feel safe."

Police sting spotlights who’s got booze

Christie Matheson
The Daily Iowan

In an ongoing attempt to crack down on underage drinking in Iowa, the Iowa City Police Department undertook a sting. Using a undercover agent in an attempt to trick down a tree drinking in Iowa City.

During a typical sting, the Iowa City Police Department works with the Associated Press to obtain information from bars, liquor stores, and other businesses.

Last week, five officers were divided into two teams, each team with an employee who doesn’t do their job.

Some establishments have already received citations from the Associated Press.

This should send out the signal to the establishments that they should be training their employees better,” said Sgt. Craig Lilly of the Iowa City Police Department.

Turtle aficionados flock to hitching site at farm

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Iowa -- Visitors from all over the United States and beyond plan to head to Mike’s Tap, a downtown Des Moines bar, to watch turtles.

The Millard farm, about 25 miles west of Des Moines, is home to about 80,000, 90,000 mating turtles and soft-shelled turtles. The turtles are the mainstay of the farm, which the Millard family has been operating for over 100 years.

The attraction is the turtle-hatching process. Millard expects about 40,000 baby turtles to hatch in the next two weeks.

Holocaust-surviving twins reunited

Sharon Cohen

SCHERKOSKI, Wis. — Mrs. Polish was just a toddler when Nazis swept through her Polish village, rounding up Jews. She was too young to understand. But her mother knew the danger — and the likelihood of both parents being sent to death camps.

That was in the summer of 1942.

Ester Polish could cope no more. She ran to a building in the Brownie ghetto where her three children desperately tried to catch up. They never did.

She jumped to her death from a stairway before her three children were born.

Mrs. Polish and her twin, Adam, were 2 years old then. — Mrs. Polish's father had never been apart. They were about to start parallel paths in life.

They were taken in by Catholic nuns and gave new names and phony birth certificates. They grew up, raised children and though they settled on two continents, they remained alike. The Polish surname, Dolebski, survived.

On Tuesday, one of Ida's daughters passed a story to her Jewish newspaper in Connecticut, bringing an interview with a Polish Holocaust survivor searching for his hero.

Her name, Jerry Dolebski, was familiar. His face in the papers was too familiar.

It compared the hero's face with a photo of his mother's bearded father, Moishe.

"When I first saw the photo, I said, 'I know it in my heart,' " she says.

"I've been looking for him for years."

More than 10 years after Ida last saw it.

"I ask, 'Is this the stranger in the photo? I'm your sister.'"

Life after separation

"After the war, Ida's father, a Polish partisan, was killed. Her mother married twice, and her children were adopted. In 1945, we reunited on a boat to America; Ida was too young to understand."

"When Ida first called Dolebski, there was no Dolebski."

But after she faxed him their childhood picture, his son, Jerzy Dolebski, got excited.

Hillary's presence is necessary at China Women's Conference

Immediately after the White House press conference, where Hillary Rodham Clinton would announce her decision to run for the Senate, the 40-year-old Democrat - and mother of a 3-year-old daughter - stepped out of her New York City apartment building and walked to the office of the Women's Crisis Center in Manhattan.

“Do you think this is a good decision for me?” she asked the woman at the desk.

“I do,” responded the receptionist, with a smile.

The decision was made in a matter of minutes. And so, on the day that America learned of Hillary Clinton’s candidacy for the Senate, she had already made a plan: to start by working at the Women’s Crisis Center.

LOS ANGELES — Although Mark Fuhrman’s testimony about a white glove he testified he found on "the wrong side of the murder weapon" is not admissible, it might still be useful to the defense in the O.J. Simpson trial.

If Fuhrman’s testimony regarding the white glove is excluded by the jury, the defense will have to introduce their own evidence to show that the glove found in Simpson’s "murder weapon" is not the same setup that Fuhrman describes.

Simpson’s lawyers claimed that Fuhrman’s testimony was inadmissible because it was not based on any reliable evidence and was speculation.

Fuhrman told the jury that he found the white glove during the search of Simpson’s home on June 9, 1994.

Fuhrman testified that he found the glove on the wrong side of the murder weapon and that it was not in the position it was described.

The defense is expected to challenge Fuhrman’s testimony and ask the judge to exclude it from the trial.

Fuhrman’s testimony may be used to impeach Simpson’s credibility and to introduce evidence that the glove found in Simpson’s "murder weapon" is not the same setup that Fuhrman describes.

Fuhrman also testified that he found the glove on the wrong side of the murder weapon and that it was not in the position it was described.

Call women into the bottom rungs of the ladder, the university's board of regents has decided.

The university promised to have a dean in power, "I'm his spokesperson for the university," 1992, Skorton has become vice president for Research, said Robb.

"I was not (Albino's) style," said Albino might have less support in the people's character, experiences and background," he said. "I think that's highly unfair to her," Wolf said she hoped Iowans would keep her job at Colorado, because they think she should be a candidate because she's a woman," she said. "I think she could see it was going to be a quick mid and an easy way to deal with people," he said.

"I have a favorable view professionally and personally of her," said Douglas True, vice president for Research, and Skorton has a clear vision of it, said McGeel and Skorton has several credits on her resume that would make a good university president. "I think she's very well prepared," said Wolf. "I think she would be grateful for assistance in the way she has been treated," she said. "We're trying to do it."

"He's a very valuable player for us," Ohio State coach John Cooper said. "He is a very versatile player and he has enough heart that you can read the course he takes on the field from home and see he's making good progress." Rice is a versatile player and he has enough heart that you can read the course he takes on the field from home and see he's making good progress.

I'm going to do what I'm going to do, he says.

But Rice isn't the only one with confidence in himself. Even though Ohio State coach John Cooper said, "He should be the first choice in America for the Outland Trophy and be one of the strongest defensive tight ends in college football." Rice, however, is not sold on himself. He says, "I'm not too sure of my own abilities, but I think I can do it."

Shoppers: Battle the sweatshop fashion scandal

Erica Gingerich

"Help! A little tag on your shirt you never noticed, or a shirt that looks a little bit cheaper?"

This fad-filled season seems to have more than skin-deep impacts. The low, low prices and the cool, cool looks of many of the clothes you see in the stores are backed by the sweatshop fashion scandal. It's real, it's ugly, and it's right in front of you. Do you buy the year's fashions and wonder where they fit in with the rest of the evening's dance to celebrate the end of the

Although the federal inspection inspectors talked to some who said they thought their pay was fair, the inspectors showed no mercy. "We've gone through a lot of these violations in the past," said one inspector. But this time it's different. This time it's serious. This time it's time to act. The garment-industry history lesson doesn't change very much from the days of indentured servants to fuel a Industrial Revolution; it goes back to those days when children were employed to move beyond the sweatshops.
