Homegrown Skorton sparkles

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan
UI presidential candidate David Skorton answers questions at a press conference Wednesday morning.

The Daily Iowan

When the UI's own David Skorton did his presidential interviews, his home-court advantage was apparent.

At his three public appearances, the UI vice president for Research joked with members of his interview panel and impressed onlookers with his in-depth knowledge of the UI.

The only internal candidate so far, Skorton said he knew several factors in his favor would make the interviews more pleasant, but said he also had several handicaps.

"It's much more comfortable (for me) to go through these interviews than people who don't know members of this community," he said. "There are two downsides: Anybody around has to have some baggage, and the record shows most public research universities don't appoint their own."

"It's much more comfortable (for me) to go through these interviews than people who don't know members of this community. There are two downsides: Anybody around has to have some baggage, and the record shows most public research universities don't appoint their own."

If chosen as president, Skorton said he would accelerate former UI President Hunter Rawlings' initiative to allow any undergraduate student the possibility in participating in scholarship and research, and added it would be critical to make sure the resources to support such activities be present.

He also shares Rawlings'

the mandates of the (Iowa state) Board of Regents," he said. "We'll try to remove it, but if the regents still desire that, we'll honor it."

Many of those present at the symposia said they either knew him or had worked with him, and thought he was a strong candidate.

"He's very much aware of the role of public institutions," said Darrell Eymann, chairman of the Department of Chemistry. "(Of the candidates named) he has undoubtedly the most knowledge about the history of the institution and its problems."

Shams Ghoneim, a research assistant in pathology, said she was impressed with Skorton because of his commitment to research, and said he answered some questions bet-

COUNCIL RUN BEGINS

Candidate garners funds at local bar

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

There were campaign posters, voter-registration cards, buttons — and cold beer on tap.

As the 1995 Iowa City City Council race gears up, a lot of candidates are shooting for one of the four open seats. None, however, seem quite as creative as Stan Bench, manager of Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

Bench held a fund-raising concert on the top floor of the bar Sunday night and said he hoped to raise $1,000 for advertising and campaign costs.

Although it was a chance for the public to meet the candidate, conversations were difficult due to bands — ranging from Bolivian pan pipes to garage punk — playing on the stage.

As a candidate, Bench described himself as a "progressive" and said he was trying to reach out to young people.

"We're focusing on registering people to vote," he said. "We're really targeting Generation X."

The students could "rule this town" if they all voted, Bench said, and he has what he thinks are pro-student policies.

"I consider myself to be a strong environmentalist, favoring green spaces and parks and bike trails," he said. "I also came out in favor of reviewing the 21 drinking age and lowering it to 18."

While a bar manager may not be a typical politician, Bench said he has had a lot of experience that makes him a good candidate.

"I've worked for Democratic politics in the state of Iowa," he said. "I was a staff member and a press secretary for members in the state party."

Most of the people at the show said they came to enjoy the music and show support for Bench.

Andy Botts, a Kirkwood Community College student who befriended Bench at Gabe's, said this was the first rally he has attended. Botts said he will support Bench in the election.

"I plan to vote for Stan," he said. "He'd bring a lot of energy and youth to the council, and it sorely needs it."

Supporters of Bench said he was a great guy and suggested some non-standard reasons he'd make a good council member.

"He's a good golfer," said Doug Roberson, an employee of Gabe's. Roberson also added Bench was "intelligent, really charismatic and a progressive, open-minded thinker."

Bench's friends aren't the only

MAJORITY OF RAPES DEFINED AS ACQUAINTANCE

New school year heightens concerns about safety

Stacy Forrest
The Daily Iowan

Students often know to be conscious of danger while walking home alone at night, but rape experts say students can't stop thinking about safety just because they've locked their door.

Eighty percent of sexual crimes occur in homes and are defined as acquaintance rape, said Nicole Cook, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, 17 W. Prentiss St. And along with studying, the new school year brings an increase in sexual crimes, assaults and the students' awareness of personal safety.

Cook said many returning students on campus know when the younger students are in town and may try to take advantage of them.

"Often times alcohol is involved and used to disorient the students and get them to go places — such as back to a room — or do things they normally wouldn't do," Cook said.

Walking home with someone you know and not a stranger who said he'd walk you home is a good idea, Laurie Haag, program developer of the Women's Resource Action Center, 130 N. Madison St., said.

"Freshmen women need to realize it's smarter to walk home with other females or male friends they know," Haag said. "Sometimes guys will want to walk a girl home from the downtown area to make them feel safe, but at the same time he might have other plans once they get home."

Cook said there has been an increase in phone calls coming in on the crisis line and attributes it to the beginning of the school year.

"Now that there are more people in the community, there is a greater demand for our services," Cook said. "There is a tendency for the number of phone calls to decrease in the summer months."

RVAP is not the only center experiencing an increase in demand for services. WRAC also has seen things pick up.

"New students are coming in and picking up information on the various programs we sponsor," Haag said.

One way the UI has battled the

Fuhrman tapes erupt in flurry of hostility

Michael Fleeman

LOS ANGELES — The voice of Detective Mark Fuhrman repeatedly using racial slurs, declaring police can stop anybody because "you're God" and expressing a willingness to kill filled the courtroom Tuesday as the O.J. Simpson judge determined whether the statements were relevant.

The explosive tapes were played for the first time in public over the strong objections of prosecutors. The scratchy recordings have Fuhrman, in a seemingly normal, casual tone, repeatedly using an epithet against blacks and spewing venom toward women officers, police command staff, liberals and criminals — particularly gang members — drug dealers and

Oddities &amp; Idiosyncrasies

Magic volcano lures 'cosmic muffins'

Steve Geissinger
Associated Press

WEED, Calif. — Ellin Stamps says she saw a refugee from a lost continent who lives in the volcano at Mount Shasta.

Sharon Rose says UFOs have flown over the volcano and a disembodied voice rumbled "Welcome, you're home," when she first saw the mountain. And the giant faces of spirits occasionally appear to Irene Annell Binder.

Scores of New Age believers have flocked to the two towns at the base of Mount Shasta to immerse themselves in the volcano's magic, avail themselves of its healing powers and access its gateway to the spirit world.

Many got their first look at the mountain in 1987, when 5,000 people held a "harmonic convergence" to celebrate a planetary alignment. Some never left.

Since then, Weed and Mount Shasta — timber and tourist towns 260 miles north of San Francisco — have emerged as New Age capitals with a combined population of more than 7,000.

Believers — nicknamed "cosmic muffins" by some longtime residents — have made the 14,161-foot peak a central part of alternative lifestyles that include meditation, holistic medicine and a focus on spiritual consciousness.

"We're in the beginning of the New Age and this is a safe place for it to happen," Rose said.

Many have set up shops to share information about the mountain and New Age practices. Others publish pamphlets and newspapers.

The summer edition of Mount

Shasta's New Directions includes an interview with Princess Sharula Dux from Telos, which is a Lemurian city within Mount Shasta.

Lemurians are defined as highly civilized refugees from the ancient kingdom of Mu, now submerged beneath the Pacific Ocean. They supposedly are tall, communicate by extrasensory perception and appear and vanish at will. They are reputed to live in an elaborate underground tunnel system within the mountain.

Stamps, 55, a self-described spiritual healer, said she saw a Lemurian at a point overlooking the mountain.

"He was 7 feet tall and had long golden hair. I wanted to call him a hippie, but it was my mind trying to rationalize," she said.

She said she was paralyzed until the Lemurian vanished. It seemed like a brief episode, she said, but two hours had elapsed on her watch.

Binder, 50, said she keeps her eyes on the mountain as much as possible.

"One of the faces I see is of Eve, as in the Bible. I see the same faces over and over. They're spiritual somehow," Binder said.

Mount Shasta is one of the volcanoes in the lower 48 states that scientists believe will erupt in the coming decades. Its last eruption was in 1786. Mount St. Helens, another volcano in the range, erupted in 1980.

American Indians have long considered the mountain spiritual. The Klamath and Modoc tribes told of a cataclysmic battle between the sky spirit chief Skell, who lived atop Mount Shasta, and Llaol, spirit chief of the underworld.

Associated Press

The town of Mount Shasta, Calif., sits in the shadow of its volcanic namesake. The mountain, which last erupted in 1786, has attracted a following of worshipers who believe it has powers of healing.

Leno spends liberally for classic autos at estate auction

CHATSWORTH, Ga. (AP) — Antique cars are no joke to Jay Leno.

The host of "The Tonight Show," known for his love of classic cars and motorcycles, spent $450,000 for an antique automobile during an auction last weekend of the estate of the late carpet magnate Ed Weaver.

Leno, through a representative, bought several cars, including a 1934 black Murphy Duesenberg speedster for $450,000.

Film to highlight life of murdered musician Selena

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The life of slain Tejano singer Selena will be the subject of a movie by the director of "Mi Familia."

Abraham Quintanilla, Selena's father, said in a statement Monday he will be executive producer in a joint venture with his Q Productions and Esparza-Katz Productions.

Moctesuma Esparza and Robert Katz produced "Gettysburg." Gregory Nava was co-writer and director of "Mi Familia," or "My Family," starring Jimmy Smits.

An international casting call is planned to fill Selena's role. Filming was scheduled to start in February, with release planned for August 1996.

Selena, 23, was fatally shot March 31 at a motel in Corpus Christi, Texas. The founder of her fan club, Yolanda Saldivar, is charged with murder and her trial is to begin Oct. 9.

Dead fans sue over injuries suffered at campground

ST. CHARLES, Mo. (AP) — Four Deadheads are suing for injuries suffered when a deck collapsed at a campground after a Grateful Dead concert.

The lawsuits, each seeking more than $25,000 for negligence and personal injury, were filed against campground owner Pinewoods Enterprise Inc. and promoter Douglas Bledsoe. Calls to the company and promoter Tuesday weren't immediately returned.

The deck collapsed July 6 at the Pinewoods Camping and Fishing Park near Wentzville, after the show in suburban St. Louis.

Hundreds of Deadheads were camping there and many had gathered on the deck and a patio below during a thunderstorm. In all, 108 people were treated at hospitals.

Robert O'Neal, lawyer for injured fan Scott Dolman, said his client's neck was broken and he "spends most of his time in a wheelchair."

Two of the lawsuits were filed July 31 and two were filed Friday.

Popular comic Cheech seeks vast fan following

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cheech Marin, the counterculture comedy partner of Tommy Chong, is looking for a "womb-to-tomb" fan base.

Since the 1978 dopehead film "Up in Smoke," Marin directed himself in "Born in East L.A." and provided the voice of no-good hyna Bonzai in "The Lion King."

The 49-year-old Marin plays the bartender in "Desperado," starring Antonio Banderas, and is now filming "From Dusk Till Dawn," directed by Robert Rodriguez and written by Quentin Tarantino.

"Part of my new process is to get a fan base that goes from womb-to-tomb," Marin said in a recent interview. "There are little kids that listen to 'Cheech and the Bus Driver,' and like, grandfathers that still listen to old Cheech and Chong albums."

NBC axes head 'SNL' musician for 1995-96 season

NEW YORK (AP) — The faces on "Saturday Night Live" this fall won't include the grimaces and contortions of flaxen-haired band-leader G.E. Smith.

Smith, the guitarist who headed the house band since 1986, was fired for the 1995-96 season, NBC said. The network offered no reason Tuesday for his dismissal.

Smith has two replacements as musical director: "SNL" saxophonist Lenny Pickett and pianist

Cheryl Hardwick. He goes the way of most of the cast from last year's show, heavily criticized as unfunny. Only three of the 15 cast members will return this fall.

Smith, briefly married to the late Gilda Radner, is touring with the band Generic Blondes and unavailable for comment; in the past, he has played with Bob Dylan and Hall & Oates.

Netherlands royal foots bill for care of 3 orangutans

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands heeded the call of the wild.

She picked up the $1,570 tab for the care of three young orangutans at a center for rehabilitating the primates on Borneo Island, the official Antara news agency said Tuesday.

The Samboja Forest Research Center returns orangutans to their natural habitat in the Kalimantan forest in the Indonesian part of the island, owned jointly with Malaysia and Brunei.

The queen visited the center Monday and chose a 1-year-old orangutan and two 8-month-olds to adopt. Orangutans are protected as an endangered species.

Beatrix, her husband Prince Claus and son Crown Prince William Alexander will head home today after 10 days in Indonesia.

The two Currier Residence Hall residents said they go outside to shoot hoops to avoid the heat from their rooms, which are not air-conditioned. The high temperatures will be around 95 degrees with southwest wind 10-20 mph. Thursday should be sunny and less humid with a high around 85 degrees.

POMERANTZ TO AID IN OVERSEEING PROCESS

Regents pass audit proposal

Shawn Cole
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa state Board of Regents unanimously approved a $224,000 audit of the public universities in a telephonic meeting Tuesday morning.

The decision to award The Pappas Consulting Group Inc. with the contract for the first regents university audit in eight years was met with little controversy.

The only point of contention was whether Marvin Pomerantz, interim president of the board, would be the main individual to oversee the audit.

Pomerantz said it would not be efficient for nine people to run the audit, and because he had been elected president, he thought it appropriate he lead.

"I'd be a liaison," Pomerantz said. "It's not practical to have nine people working with a consulting firm. We can't have nine people micro-managing the firm."

Regent Tom Collins agreed nine people would be too many, but said one might not be enough.

Other regents agreed, and regent Ellen Grey Kennedy agreed to work with Pomerantz.

The board went with the recommendation of Robert Barak, deputy executive director of the board, to select the Pappas firm over the other two finalists.

Collins has said there was concern a bid by KPMG Peat Marwick was not comprehensive enough, although the firm said it could do the audit for $134,410.

Alceste Pappas, a Pappas firm consultant, worked with the state universities in the last audit, and Pomerantz said that was another factor in the firm's favor.

In its proposal, the Pappas group said it will participate in biweekly meetings with the Oversight Committee and submit monthly progress reports to the board.

Students intern among political elite

Cassie Golden
The Daily Iowan

UI senior Amy Stokesberry was hoping to land a job as a photo intern at her hometown paper, The LeMars Daily Sentinel.

Instead, she spent the summer on the White House photo staff covering press conferences and events. "The first day I started, they handed me a camera and sent me to cover Clinton's announcement to normalize relations with Vietnam," Stokesberry said. "It was pretty intimidating standing in the back with reporters and photographers from CNN, Newsweek and The New York Times."

Stokesberry heard about the internship from a friend and decided to apply through the UI Center for Career Development and Cooperative Education. The office helped 10 students this year obtain internships in Washington, D.C.

me improve my people skills when dealing with angry constituents."

When Messer was not doing research or writing memorandums, she took turns with other interns answering phone calls from Iowa citizens.

Messer, who was not paid for her work, lived in the Georgetown Law Center residence hall on Capitol Hill and walked to work every day. There are only a few paid internships available in Washington, and the cost of living is high, Messer said.

"Overall, it was pretty expensive. The dorm alone cost $1,400 for the summer, but the experience was invaluable," Messer said.

Fitzgerald said students begin getting their resumes ready in the fall semester and apply in late January and early February. The center helps students organize their resumes and provides information on all available internships.

The summer was not all work for Stokesberry and Messer. They rented a car one weekend and went to Virginia Beach and Williamsburg, Va. However, the nightlife was hindered by the difficulty of transportation, since neither of them had cars.

"I partied in Georgetown a few times this summer. It was great but $4 for a glass of beer," Stokesberry said.

Stokesberry met President Clinton three times while working at the White House and also attended Clinton's birthday party where she met Jimmy Buffet.

"I saw so much this summer that I would have never seen," Stokesberry said. "It gave me so much confidence to know that I can succeed and realize that I can do it."

Both women said their experiences have made them more aware of political issues and added changes in the system must start at the individual level.

"I used to be more worried about parties or what I was going to wear, but now I want to find a way to make a difference," Stokesberry said.

Governors question meat-market prices

Dave Wetzel
Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. — Midwestern governors are appealing for a federal investigation of the meat-packing industry, saying lower cattle prices aren't being reflected on grocery shelves.

"The costs of production have gone up. The price of the product at the production level has gone down. But the prices to the consumer ... have stayed the same, or gone up," North Dakota Gov. Ed Schafer said.

"We need to come to grips with what in fact is going on out there, and try to get a handle on it," Schafer said at the closing session of the Midwestern Governors' Conference on Tuesday.

A meat industry spokesman said processed beef prices have declined in the face of a glut and that packers cannot control retail charges.

"The prices at wholesale are reflecting what's happening in the live market," said Jens Knutson, an economist for the American Meat Institute. "We've got a mountain of meat. We're going to have a mountain of meat next year."

Although cattle prices are down, the slump follows about five years of prosperous times for stockmen, Knutson said. Schafer said the cost of a 500-pound calf has declined from $500 in 1993 to $300 this year.

Meatpacking company officials said they were not bothered by the prospect of a probe.

"We'll cooperate with any study. It boils down to that," said Mark Klein, a spokesman for Cargill Inc. in Minneapolis.

UI faculty, staff rules redefined

Ann McGlynn
The Daily Iowan

The Faculty Senate approved a conflict-of-interest policy, despite debate, Wednesday, just in time to ensure continued federal funding for the UI.

The policy, differing slightly from the present UI code, consists of rules outlining time and financial conflicts for UI faculty and staff. A financial conflict policy had to be put in place by Oct. 1 to meet federal-funding guidelines.

"If we pass it today, we're not done with it," said Warren Piette, Senate president. "We cannot view this as finished."

Concerns of confusing language were brought up by several Senate members, as well as faculty attending the meeting. One phrase was changed to delete redundancy, but concerns about the document's readability were left unanswered.

This is a very complicated subject," said Sheldon Kurtz, vice president of the Senate and head of the policy committee. "It's a complicated document with complicated rules."

Concerns of where the line between personal and professional life are drawn were also voiced.

Senate member Michael Flanagan said an executive officer may carry the policy too far and require faculty and staff to report every outside activity in which they participate.

"Conflict of commitment can be carried too far," he said. Kurtz said this may be the longest rule in the operations manual, at 28 pages of single-spaced type.

The policy differs from present UI code by eliminating a requirement for an employee to disclose more than one day per week spent on professional compensated activities, clarifying that nine-month employees who take more than three days off during a semester for outside activities do not have to count Saturday and Sunday, allowing nine days per year for those with 12-month contracts, requiring disclosure if an employee is away from class for more than two consecutive days and requiring disclosure of outside non-professional activities.

The document also outlines examples of what needs to be disclosed.

Outside professional activities of an expected nature — including holding office at a journal, serving on a professional review board and presenting scholarly papers — do not require disclosure.

However, having a financial interest in a company which supplies goods and services to the university, funds the employee's research or competes with another company supporting the employee's research must be disclosed.

Schwan's compensates for salmonella poisoning

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — A judge has given final approval to a settlement for more than 13,000 people across the country who say they were sickened by Schwan's ice cream.

Hennepin County District Judge Danielson had tentatively approved the settlement in February.

Under the plan approved by Danielson on Monday, those who say they developed food poisoning because of tainted ice cream will receive payments from Marshall-based Schwan's Sales Enterprises ranging from $80 to $75,000. The payments depend on the severity of a victim's illness.

Thousands of people in at least 28 states became ill last fall after eating Schwan's ice cream from batches contaminated with the salmonella bacteria. The source was traced to tanker trucks that hauled ice cream mix to the Schwan's plant. Investigators found the trucks earlier had carried raw eggs.

As of Aug. 1, more than 13,000 claims had been filed as part of the class-action suit, said Mark Reinhardt, a St. Paul attorney for the plaintiffs. He said he expected the number to increase to 20,000 by the Sept. 15 deadline to file claims.

"I think we ended up with a settlement that satisfied a whole bunch of different needs," Reinhardt said. "That's a unique type of settlement. Most of the time you just get 'x' cents on the dollar."

Watchdogs out for opening of China women's conference

Kathy Wilhelm
Associated Press

HUAIROU, China — Chinese officials will open the world's largest meeting of women today by releasing thousands of doves, yet the delegates themselves feel caged by tight security that they fear will get in the way of a successful conference.

Temper flared over China's effort to contain the more than 20,000 participants in the Non-Governmental Organizations Forum on Women in Huairou, a rural suburb 90 minutes' drive from downtown Beijing.

Although China had said free shuttle buses would be available to take them into Beijing, women who inquired about them were directed to taxis charging $24 each way.

Other participants complained police searched their luggage on the driveway outside their hotels and apartments, looking for forbidden political or religious materials.

China is believed to have located the forum of private groups in Huairou because of its fears that the delegates' debates, protests and pamphlets would infect Chinese with a spirit of dissent.

Chinese officials announced Tuesday that marches or protests could be held only in one designated place, a Huairou schoolyard, and could not target China itself.

The forum of private groups is being held in conjunction with the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women, a smaller and more sedate gathering of government delegations opening Monday in Beijing.

The NGO women say they need to be able to travel to the U.N. conference to lobby delegates. And they want to mingle freely with each other to exchange ideas, make useful contacts and raise funds.

That is where the disorganization and security restrictions chafed. Delegates trying to find out where friends were staying got blank stares from registration workers. Those staying at Huairou's newly built apartment blocks who tried to exchange phone numbers found no numbers marked on the phones.

Many hotels told guests they could not bring other people to their rooms for conversation. Most barred non-guests altogether.

"To me it's madness," said Sonia Bendorf of Brazil.

"I don't mind that there's a leak in the toilet so there's water all over the floor. What I mind is the isolation and the lack of facilities to do the work we've come to do. How will I go to the events I'm invited to? There's where I'll meet my donors."

NGO Forum leader Supatra Masdit, of Thailand, said there had been "a lot of rumors about all the bad things," but she downplayed them.

Delegates are "very happy with the setup so when the forum starts everyone will have a good time setting their own agenda," she said.

However, she acknowledged hearing complaints about too much security and said she told the Chinese about them. The Chinese replied that they want to ensure the women's safety, she said.

Delegations began setting up displays in dozens of tents and buildings scattered over a 104-acre site.

At the African tent, women tacked a huge map of the continent on one side along with posters declaring: "No To Violence Against Women."

Women from Kuwait used a compass to find Mecca, the Muslim holy city, before saying their prayers.

Some women said they sympathized with China's difficulties in staging its biggest international gathering ever, but felt China was creating problems by treating the women like a contagion.

For example, Chinese authorities have reportedly gathered blankets and bathrobes at key points around the city to throw on women who — Chinese rumor has it — are plotting to march naked.

"That's such a perfect example of how they're spending so much energy worrying about this weird threat instead of organizing buses," said Marion McNamara, a research administrator at Oregon State University. "Somewhere, someone is not clear what this conference is about."

Her colleague, Rochelle Rainey, said their purpose was to collaborate with each other. "But we will raise hell if opportunities are denied to us."

SARAJEVO — On a simple wooden table overflowing with flowers, a one-line message remembered the 36 people killed and 80 maimed in a Serb mortar blast outside Sarajevo's market.

Though downtown Sarajevo was deserted, its 280,000 residents stunned by scenes of carnage from the previous day, mourners and occasional passers-by stopped for a moment at the memorial, a splash of color on the gloomy street. A policeman guards the site of the Monday's massacre near a marketplace in downtown Sarajevo Tuesday. The shelling Monday, which killed 37, was the worst attack on Sarajevo's civilians in the 40-month-old Bosnian war since Feb. 5, 1994, when another mortar shell struck the same marketplace and killed 68 people. Serbs denied firing both shells.

despair will remain in our hearts forever," said Miralem Efendic, a 23-year old Bosnian army soldier. A single teardrop dribbled down his face.

His best friend and brother-in-arms was wounded the day before when the 120 mm mortar shell slammed into a group of street vendors and shoppers.

U.N. officials blamed Bosnian Serbs for firing the deadly shell.

More than 24 hours after the carnage, doctors in the two main Sarajevo hospitals continued their feverish efforts to save the lives of critically wounded people.

"We are talking about multiple injuries. Every patient has several wounds, and we always have to decide which injury is the dominating one," said Dr. Faruk Kon-jodzie, the director of Kosevo hospital.

"I am still terribly shocked. I don't know what to tell you. I could scream. Scream," said Janja Pasic, 64, from her Kosevo hospital bed. She was hit in her back and in one of her legs.

Meanwhile, the city's undertakers prepared the dead for burial. For fear of more shelling and sniping, all funerals will be hurried affairs taking place only at dusk or at dawn.

As the Muslim burial company "Bakije" in downtown Sarajevo readied the coffins, mourners cast a final glance on their dearest.

"Is this really the last time that I am seeing you?" cried Dzenana Kovacevic, bending over a coffin to kiss her dead husband, Mirsad, 29.

RESEARCH POINTS TO MAGNESIUM POISONING

Excess antacid can result in death

Brenda Coleman
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Swilling antacid or gobbling tablets for your upset stomach could cost you your life.

Fourteen deaths, 31 hospitalizations and four cases of disability linked to magnesium poisoning have been reported since 1968, researchers from the Food and Drug Administration reported in the August issue of the American Medical Association's Archives of Family Medicine.

"Maalox and Mylanta — people just drink them like water," said Dr. Man Fung, lead author of the report. "They don't even think about it."

Consumers and doctors often underestimate the danger and may not recognize the symptoms of magnesium poisoning from overuse of antacids and other medications, wrote Fung and Drs. Michael Weintraub and Debra Bowen.

Symptoms can include clumsiness, weakness, paralysis, drowsiness, confusion and coma.

Magnesium is an important nutrient in foods and in drinking water. It is common in over-the-counter antacids, laxatives and pain relievers.

Taken as directed, such products are safe, Fung said by telephone from the University of Pennsylvania Cancer Center, where he is now on staff.

Excessive use, though, especially by susceptible people, can lead to magnesium poisoning, he said. Susceptible people include the elderly, longtime diabetics, people who have had digestive surgery and anyone taking medications that slow the digestive system, such as narcotics and some antidepressants.

Elderly people are susceptible because their kidneys, which rid the body of magnesium, are not as efficient.

Longtime diabetics sometimes suffer nerve damage to the bowel, which allows more magnesium to be absorbed by the body.

Relatively high levels of magnesium are found in many laxatives containing citrate of magnesia, milk of magnesia and Epsom salts, the researchers said.

Many antacids contain lower but still significant amounts of magnesium, including, in many cases, Maalox, Mylanta, Gaviscon, Digel, Gelusil and Roloids, the researchers said.

However, Tums and some types of Maalox and Mylanta contain no magnesium. Fung said brand name alone doesn't always indicate whether a product contains magnesium; consumers should look at the list of ingredients on the label.

Pain relievers containing magnesium include Doan's, Arthritis Pain, Formula, Ascriptin and Bufferin.

Robert Kniffin, a spokesman for Mylanta's manufacturer, Johnson & Johnson-Merck Consumer Pharmaceuticals Co., said, "Our product is safe when used in accordance with the package labeling, which is quite clear."

Mark Ryan, spokesman for the makers of Maalox, Ciba-Geigy Corp., refused to comment.

Alleged rapist baits teenage victim on-line

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — A Florida man used a computer on-line service to persuade a 15-year-old Maryland girl to run away from home and meet him in Orlando, where he raped her in a hotel room, investigators said.

The man then allegedly took the teen-ager to his Fort Lauderdale home, where she used his computer to contact a friend back home who helped her flee. Details of how she got away were not immediately disclosed.

James Latona, a 40-year-old contractor, was charged with sexual battery and freed on $5,000 bail.

The arrest is one of the latest in a series of cases involving adults allegedly cruising cyberspace, looking for children for sex.

Sheriff's officials said Tuesday that Latona met the teen-ager in a chat room of the Prodigy on-line service.

Latona arranged for a plane ticket and promised he would not ask for sex, sheriff's spokesman Steve Jones said.

She arrived in Orlando on Aug. 13. Detectives said Latona forced her into sex the next day.

When Latona let her use his computer, she immediately contacted a friend, who helped her flee Latona's house the next day, investigators said.

After her return to Maryland, she contacted the Orange County sheriff's department, which had the girl telephone Latona and draw him into a tape-recorded conversation in which he implicated himself, Jones said.

Latona was arrested Aug. 22. He could not be reached for comment. His telephone number is unlisted.

The girl's hometown was not disclosed. Jones said only that she lives in a small town in northwestern Maryland.

LITTLE ROCK — The Whitewater figure with the closest financial ties to President Clinton pleaded innocent Tuesday to federal fraud and conspiracy charges unrelated to their partnership in a land deal.

James McDougal pleaded innocent to the 19 of 21 counts naming him in an indictment also charging his former wife, Susan McDougal, and Gov. Jim Guy Tucker. He was released on his own recognizance.

McDougal is charged with wire, mail and bank fraud, and lying to regulators about loans from Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan. He and his wife owned the thrift until it was taken over by federal regulators in 1986, three years before it failed at a cost of at least $65 million to taxpayers.

Tucker, who held interests in businesses that received loans from Madison, pleaded not guilty Monday. Susan McDougal's arraignment is Thursday.

They all face trial Oct. 10. If convicted, each could receive up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $250,000 for each count.

Cases of child abuse in day care crumble

Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — One by one, the sensational cases of the 1980s built up a lurid allegations of mass child molestation at day-care centers.

First it was the McMillan case in Los Angeles, then the Kelly Michaels case in New Jersey. On Tuesday, a Massachusetts judge granted a trial for two women convicted of molesting children eight years ago.

The cases toppled for different reasons. In Tuesday's case, the judge said the defendants denied their right to face accusers because the children were allowed to testify with their backs to the courtroom.

But the common thread was doubt about the veracity of the claims from children who were under pressure to talk to psychiatrists and prosecutors at a time when fears of abuse were sweeping the country.

"There's no doubt that in the mid-'80s, there was national attention paid to child abuse, spousal abuse. At the case of child abuse, there was an array of prosecutions based on child reports and many of them went to mush," said Arthur M. a Harvard Law School professor and legal consultant to "Good Morning America."

Referring to the Massachusetts ruling, he said: "I think it represents a recognition that you have to balance the rights of the accused very carefully against the rights of the children not to be inflicted with more trauma."

Given the perspective of judges and juries have questioned whether the children's traumatic recollections of abuse really happened or were planted in their heads by adults.

"Very often people can take these memories into peculiar minds," said Jack Demick, a man of psychology at Suffolk University and an expert in developmental psychology.

In the Massachusetts case, decided Tuesday, some children spoke of being abused by a man in a "magic room," while others said they were hung naked from a tree or watched teachers discipline animals.

Violet Amirault and her daughter, Cheryl Amirault LeFavre, convicted in 1987 of abusing youngsters at the family's Acres Day School in suburban Malden. Violet Amirault's husband, Gerald Amirault, also worked at the school and was convicted in a separate trial.

Zaire threatens to drive refugees out

Carolyn Henson
Associated Press

GENEVA — Frustrated by the United Nations' inability to get more than 1.2 million Rwandan refugees to go home, Zaire said Tuesday they'll be forced to leave if they don't go voluntarily by the end of the year.

The U.N. refugee agency dismissed the deadline.

The policy was announced by Prime Minister Leon Kengo wa Dondo after meeting for several hours with U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Sadako Ogata.

"The UNHCR is fully committed to mobilization of the resources and support necessary for the repatriations to take place, but it cannot commit itself to any rigid time frame," said UNHCR spokesman Ron Redmond.

Zairian soldiers began expelling refugees at gunpoint on Aug. 19, causing some 173,000 refugees to flee into hills and forests around the camps, without food or water.

That prompted fears of a humanitarian disaster on the scale of last year, when millions of refugees flooded into camps that quickly became vast fields of disease and starvation.

The refugees mostly were members of the Hutu ethnic group who were fleeing rebels led by the rival Tutsis.

The rebels eventually took control of the country, and the refugees are afraid that if they return, they may face retaliation for last year's ethnic massacres that killed some 500,000 people — most Tutsis slaughtered by Hutus.

Zaire stopped its expulsions late last week after UNHCR agreed to resume its voluntary repatriation program.

Since then, however, only about 400 have agreed to return.

Kengo said Zaire would lay down monthly quotas for repatriations, but he declined to say what they would be.

The talks between Kengo and Ogata were described by the UNHCR as a first step in a series of meetings to tackle the refugee crisis in central Africa.

Ogata is to embark Wednesday on a 10-day tour of the region, including Zaire, Rwanda, Burundi and Tanzania.

Key concerns are rising violence in the camps and the activities of Hutu extremists among the refugee populations.

Explosions in the area of the camps Monday, believed to be the work of Hutu extremists, prompted UNHCR to order recommend aid workers to leave.

Associated Press

Rwandan refugees retrieve wood at the Kibumba camp, near Goma, Tuesday. The Zairian government has given the UNHCR until Dec. 31 to repatriate all Rwandan refugees or risk forceful expulsion. More than 100,000 Rwandan refugees reside in this camp, with an estimated 1.2 million total in Zaire.

But the common thread was doubt about the veracity of testimony from children who were under pressure to talk to parents, psychiatrists and prosecutors at a time when fears of abuse were sweeping the country.

"There's no doubt that in the mid-'80s, there was national attention paid to child abuse, sexual abuse, spousal abuse. And in the case of child abuse, there was an array of prosecutions based on child reports and many of them went to mush," said Arthur Miller, a Harvard Law School professor and legal consultant to ABC's "Good Morning America."

In the Massachusetts case decided Tuesday, some children spoke of being abused by a clown in a "magic room," while others said they were hung naked from a tree or watched teachers dismember animals.

Clinton nixes raft ride to bury nose in a book

Lawrence Knutson
Associated Press

JACKSON, Wyo. — After 14 days of hiking, camping, horseback riding, wildlife watching, a rodeo, a ragtime concert and marathon golf, President Clinton canceled a second white-water rafting venture Tuesday, put up his feet and read a book.

"He just stayed inside, relaxed with his family and read one of the books from the stack he brought along," said deputy White House press secretary Ginny Terzano.

"He's been outdoors exercising every single day, nonstop," she said.

"I think he just woke up this morning and decided to take it easy and spend time with his family, to sit back and just relax," she said. "And that is what he is doing."

But Terzano also said Clinton stayed abreast of the business of the presidency, receiving a briefing on the attempted assassination of Eduard Shevardnadze, the president of the former Soviet republic of Georgia.

"He is relieved he is safe," Terzano said.

She said the president also was briefed by National Security Adviser Anthony Lake on the situation in Bosnia.

And she said he began going over his briefing books for his trip to Hawaii later in the week, where he will lead ceremonies marking victory in the Pacific and the 50th anniversary of World War II.

Later in the day he was to attend a party for people who have invited them to their homes during his vacation, the guides and drivers and other people who helped with the details of a presidential vacation, and the press corps, which has covered his rounds here.

The president plans to leave Jackson Hole for Hawaii early Thursday morning.

McVeigh defense shuns penalty hearing

Paul Queary
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Timothy McVeigh's lawyers turned down a chance to appear before a committee deciding whether to seek the death penalty against the bombing suspect. The defense contends the process is a sham because President Clinton and Attorney General Janet Reno have prejudged the case.

In a letter released Tuesday, lawyer Richard Burr said the defense won't appear at a Sept. 5 meeting of the Capital Case Review Committee, which reviews recommendations from federal prosecutors seeking the death penalty. Normally, the committee hears arguments from both sides and makes a recommendation to Reno, who then makes the final decision.

McVeigh's attorneys maintain the process has been tainted because Clinton and Reno stated publicly in the days after the bombing that those responsible for the bombing would face the death penalty.

However, the defense left themselves an opening to appear at next week's meeting. McVeigh's lawyers have filed a motion seeking to have the entire Justice Department removed from the decision, and Burr said the defense will participate in the meeting if the motion fails.

In arguing for the removal of the Justice Department from the case, Burr wrote, "We believe that the process of deciding whether the government will seek the death penalty against Mr. McVeigh cannot be meaningful unless that process is conducted independent of the Justice Department."

It's unlikely that motion will be ruled on before the committee is scheduled to meet. But Burr urged the Justice Department to postpone the meeting until after a judge rules on the matter.

A spokesman for U.S. Attorney Patrick Ryan in Oklahoma City did not immediately return phone calls Tuesday evening.

Prosecutors have said they intend to seek the death penalty against McVeigh and Terry Nichols, the prime suspects in the bombing.

Meanwhile, McVeigh's attorneys filed a supplement to their motion asking U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley to step aside.

The filing cites one of several commemorative T-shirts that have been sold in the court clerk's office. The shirt bears the message, "Those lost will never leave our hearts or be forgotten, April 19, 1995 ... United States District Court, Western District of Oklahoma."

Court employees say the shirt was privately produced by a staff member to raise money for charity.

Lugar: 'Nasty' campaigns prevail in Republican race

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Sen. Dick Lugar said other Republican candidates for president are throwing "raw meat" at dissatisfied voters instead of offering constructive solutions to problems.

Many of his fellow campaigners are running "extremely misguided, mean-spirited and nasty" campaigns, the Indiana senator lamented.

Lugar, who recently spent a week campaigning in Iowa, said slaughterhouse workers in that key political state who are concerned over stagnant wages are ripe for negative pitches claiming illegal immigrants are siphoning away jobs and income.

Instead of discussing real problems and real solutions, other candidates call for walls on U.S. borders or a freeze on immigration, he said.

"Raw meat," Lugar said Monday. "Raw emotion for people who sense the political system is not working well for them."

"Some Republicans think that's the road to the White House," he said.

The Chinese government conducted military exercise and launched missiles near Taiwan in July and August, 1995 to threaten Taiwanese and has scheduled the third military exercise in September, 1995.

We strongly condemn the action of Chinese government which only shows their complete ignorance of democracy and basic human right. We have the right to choose our own political system.

Mitsubishi has changed all of that with our incredible Three Diamond® Card promotion. From August 24, 1995 to September 11, 1995, if you purchase a Mitsubishi TV, Big Screen or VCR, there's no down payment, no required monthly payments, and no interest building up from month to month. ## Homeless: Change can happen

Maybe it's easier to overlook the homeless when it applies to adults. It is easier to be indifferent and cast them off as the "slackers" of our society.

It is tempting to look at them and think, "Get a job." After all, we live in America, the land of opportunity. We have been taught that anybody can make it with a little hard work.

It is a little harder to rationalize the problem when it is our nation's children who are homeless.

Most Iowans would like to believe poverty is far-removed from our little farming state, but that is not the reality.

Perhaps it surprised people to read some 9,849 Iowa children are homeless (The Associated Press, Aug. 25). Those figures include children living in shelters or friends' homes.

Of the 18,234 homeless in Iowa, more than half are children (AP, Aug. 25). Indeed, the problem of the homeless is a nationwide problem.

But what do these statistics mean to us, anyway? Well, if anything, they make us strip away that mythic America created by politicians and the media.

We would like to think of the United States as the home of the free. For many in this country, however, freedom is just a word.

The United States is indeed a land of opportunity — if you are on the right side. It is the land of opportunity for the wealthy white man, to be sure. But it is not the land of opportunity for most — certainly not for the children living on the streets.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

In order to end the homeless problem, its source must be understood.

Unfortunately, it takes more than sympathy to help ease the problem of our nation's homeless. But the first thing that must change is our attitude.

While finding someone to blame for the problem helps soothe our conscience for a while, it doesn't solve much.

We have tried to blame the individual. Right now, a popular ideology is to rid, or at least reduce, financial aid given to those in poverty. But people concerned about their reputations are not willing to blame the individual child.

We have tried to blame the politicians. Indeed, they are the people in power. They have the capability to make change. But our political system, with its array of powerful special-interest groups and concern for getting votes, makes it difficult to make any radical changes.

We have tried to blame the society. We live in a country obsessed by wealth. The rich don't appear to be satisfied until they have everything, no matter who they hurt. But the society is an abstract idea which can't really be pinpointed.

So many of us have just blamed God. After all, if he really cared about everyone, why would he allow so much suffering? Of course, this is a question that has plagued everybody since the time of Job.

Well, what are we left with? Apparently, all we can do is make people aware of the problem and try to come up with a solution that is realistic for today's world. What that solution is presents a more difficult question.

Times are pretty harsh right now. It is easy to wonder if we'll ever understand how much we depend on each other. It is easy to become cynical.

It will take more than love to tackle a problem as troubling as those living without a home. It will take a clear understanding of the problem and a commitment to change it.

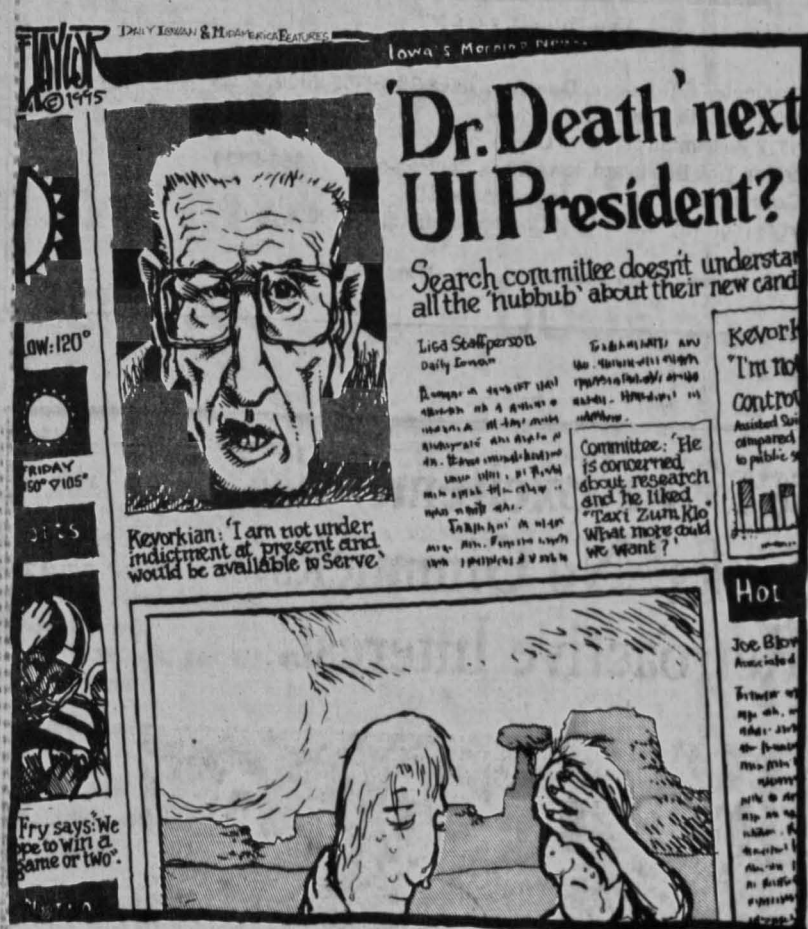

The problem of homelessness is not going to disappear on its own. It's not going to disappear by being wished away. Between 1988 and 1994, the number of children in Iowa without even nominal housing increased almost sevenfold (AP, Aug. 25).

Change can happen. It is possible. While we can't lose sight of reality, we also must remember the possibilities.

U.S. employment standards rely on unified effort, awareness

It has long been held on faith that workers in the United States are among the safest and most fairly treated in the industrialized world.

Thanks to such legal safeguards as a national minimum wage, a 40-hour work week and organizations such as the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, conditions in the American workplace outshine those in China or even neighboring Mexico.

For the latter half of this century, Americans have trusted the safety of their workplace, and it has become a great source of national pride.

However, four weeks ago, a sweatshop called SK Fashions was closed down in El Monte, Calif., for failing to register its operation with state officials. Some 72 Thai nationals were brought to this country, promised more fortune but forced deeply into debt and indentured.

For as long as seven years, these women and men worked 17 hours a day, six days a week, manufacturing clothing which found its way to Macy's, J.C. Penney Co., Target and scores of other stores.

They slept in a single large room above the shop and were bound in by razor-sharp fences. They were not allowed to leave the apartment complex which served as their workplace.

As many as 13 national manufacturers were investigated and most were fined for their connection with SK Fashions.

Such a discovery is a slap in the face for America's ideal of democratic capitalism, which considers its workers as a valuable and much-needed social caste.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Retailers and consumers must be responsible for gathering background on products.

While it would be nice to think of the El Monte sweatshop as an unfortunate anomaly, such is not the case. Liberal estimates place more than 150,000 workers in sweatshops in the Los Angeles area alone.

It has become common for garment manufacturers to contract their workload to smaller organizations that cut their costs at the expense of employee safety and livelihood.

Solutions to these situations do not come easily. New laws would be redundant because national laws already forbid these practices. If it is said these laws are merely nominal, our government's actions have not shown them to be so.

Fines for the El Monte incident reached as high as $35,000, and Robert Reich demanded $5 million in back wages be paid by the companies involved. When violations are known, businesses are indeed reprimanded.

However, criminals do not advertise, and violations of the law are not easily found. While sweatshops thrive, neither the consumer, the retailer nor the government know the ultimate source of any garment on the shelves.

Retailers rarely know much beyond the name of their distributor and the name on the shirt tag. The consumer sees only the tag and the name of the store. Each middleman along the route is forgotten, and the manufacturers have become little more than a footnote.

If America is to preserve both the reputation and the reality of a fair and ideal workplace, this situation must change. Wholesaler, retailer and consumer alike must take the responsibility of knowledge upon themselves.

At the very least, distributors ought to request the names of all subcontracted manufacturers and provide such information to the retailer.

Such information is not far outside the bounds of current consumer right-to-know laws and would help make distributors at every level more accountable for the goods they market.

Both manufacturers and distributors may be inclined to shy away from dealings with more dubious contractors, and clear footprints will be available to consumer, retailers and government. This will enable each to take greater responsibility for every item bought and sold in an American store.

Only 100 years ago, squalid, inhuman conditions were the norm in the American workplace. As a nation, we must make a step toward accountability and ensure, in both our purchases and our business practices, the "Made in America" label can be seen as an emblem of national pride.

Tiny totes top trendy pouches

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

In recent years, handbags have become remnants of the past, and smaller, more convenient modes of transporting lipstick and cash have taken over the accessories market. Here's a rundown of the alternatives:

Most "I'm a tourist":

Hip pouches — Although they're one of the few alternatives that men can take advantage of, butt bags have faded from popularity but can still be found in plenty at tourist attractions around the country.

Most annoying:

Mini backpacks — OK, 90210 is entertaining, but we don't have to emulate every trend they dream up, do we? Silver even?

Most chic:

Wallets on a string — Since these compact carryalls are about a fourth of the size of a regular handbag, getting one in leather won't cost you an arm and a leg. Plus, there are so many on the market that you can find one with as many add-ons as you can fill.

Most compact:

Residence hall keychains — Meant for IDs, these little, black and gold lowa advertisements become holders for money, several forms of identification and all your "free" credit cards from the Union.

Most nostalgic:

The pouch on your Kangaroo — If we could only go back to elementary school days, when all we needed to store was a few coins and a M.A.S.H. game.

Playing the race card hinders proper path of justice

"Something called racism obviously exists," Andrew Hacker explains in his book "Two Nations: Black and White, Separate, Hostile, Unequal."

"As a complex of ideas and attitudes, which translate into action, it has taken a tragic toll on the lives of all Americans," Hacker continues.

"Unfortunately, the term has been so used and overused that it loses serious meaning. It has served as a rallying cry, a bludgeon, and a diversion from other issues."

This description is painfully accurate in examining the role of racism in court, particularly in the two high-profile cases currently unfolding before us.

U.S. Rep. Mel Reynolds was convicted last Tuesday of having sex with a minor and attempting to hinder the investigation following the allegations. Reynolds chose to play the race card in his defense, claiming the whole case was nothing more than a racially biased, politically motivated attack on a black congressman.

Prosecutor Andrea Zopp, with a firm grasp of the obvious, told the jury, "The defendant sits here today not because he's a congressman, not because he's an African-American, but because he committed a crime." After 14 hours of deliberation, Reynolds was convicted on all counts. Reynolds still faces trial on obstruction of justice charges stemming from this case, and other charges on mishandling of campaign and congressional finances are pending. Yet more racial attacks on this less-than-honorable congressman?

The ongoing saga of the O.J. Simpson case continues to play the race card as well. Johnnie Cochran Jr., who is quickly becoming the Don King of criminal defense, happily proclaimed in court, "This is a bombshell!" after disclosing transcripts of the now-famous Fuhrman tapes.

The tapes capture the embattled, former Los Angeles Police Department detective in an apparent contradiction of his earlier testimony.

Cochran and his fellow Dream Team disappointments would have us believe that by exposing Mark Fuhrman as a racist, the case against Simpson no longer holds water. Pay no attention to the fact that Simpson has no alibi of which to speak, and disregard all the abuse files accumulated throughout Simpson's relationship with Nicole Brown Simpson.

Racism must not be reduced to simply a diversionary tactic in court — our society will pay a terrible price if we devalue its meaning.

And all the evidence the police collected against Simpson? Throw it all out — Mark Fuhrman is a racist, and Cochran has the tapes to prove it. The next thing you know, Cochran will be accusing Fuhrman of driving the getaway Bronco.

The high-powered Dream Team needs a lesson in the obvious from Andrea Zopp. O.J. Simpson is not on trial because he's African-American, but because he is accused of murder.

It is not the LAPD on trial here nor is it Mark Fuhrman on trial. It is disappointing that out of all the brilliant legal minds composing Simpson's Dream Team, the only defense they seem to have is to use racism as a diversion from the case's facts.

Racism has taken a tragic toll on the lives of all Americans, just as Andrew Hacker said. Racism must not be reduced to simply a diversionary tactic in court — our society will pay a terrible price if we devalue its meaning.

Racism is the darkest conceivable aspect of humanity, and it should not be taken lightly. Bringing racism into the Reynolds and Simpson trials does more than simply perpetuate a problem that just will not go away; it provides racism with yet another way to impede the path of justice.

THE ECONOMICS OF RECYCLING

Old toilet paper rolls have a saving grace: napkin rings

At the risk of sounding sexist, I believe the brains of men and women work on different levels in certain areas of thought.

Mike Royko

The field of economics is one that comes to mind. More specifically, in that part of economics known as "saving."

I have always believed to save means stashing something of value, such as money, under a mattress or in an interest-bearing account.

But my lengthy research indicates many women don't share this economic theory.

My wife, for example, has a concept of saving far more sophisticated and complex than mine.

She will sometimes return home with a load of packages. When I ask what they contain, she excitedly says: "Oh, did I save us a lot of money today."

Wonderful. Saving is good. How much did we save?

"These blouses were marked down 50 percent. So were these skirts. And you just can't believe how much I saved on this sweater. They almost gave it away."

But how much did we save?

"Oh, lots."

Lots. That is her standard economic unit for measuring savings.

And when I ask how much the objects cost, she says, "Hardly anything when you consider how much we saved."

That should be a foolproof formula for accumulating wealth: spending "hardly anything" while saving "lots."

But my research has shown it doesn't work that way. I have calculated that if I define "saving" as she does, I would not only lose all hope of having a nest egg but in a short time I would have to declare bankruptcy.

I once mentioned our conflicting economic concepts, saying: "Your definition of saving could put me in the poorhouse."

She laughed and said: "That is absolute nonsense."

Why?

"Because there is no such place as a poorhouse, silly, so don't worry."

But it is the nature of men to worry about such things. That may be why we croak so much sooner than women.

And it is why prudent men such as myself are often described — to use a technical economic term — as "real cheapos."

We hate shopping, spending and frivolous waste. Or even serious waste.

Which leads me to a question I put to my wife and several female acquaintances the other day:

"Do you ever put your pantyhose in the freezer?"

Their responses were interesting.

My wife said: "What, is that your idea of how to stay cool in all this heat without turning on the air conditioning? If so, forget it. I'm not going to freeze my bottom to save you a few dollars."

I sent the same simple question by e-mail to a female colleague. She fired back a note saying: "What the hell are you talking about? Does that have something to do with the Mel Reynolds trial?"

Another said: "I'm going to forget you asked that question, but I think you should seek professional help."

They were a bit sheepish when I told them what the question meant.

I had been reading one of those newsletters written by penny-pinchers that gives unusual tips on little-known ways to save money.

One of the tips was putting pantyhose in the freezer somehow toughens the strands and makes them less likely to get runs.

In all, a dozen females were asked if they ever chilled their pantyhose. A few had heard of the idea, but none had done it — nor did any intend to do so.

When I urged my wife to practice this cost-cutting measure, she said: "Why don't you put your hat in the freezer while you are wearing it?"

She is a real kidder.

So I didn't bother to tell her about the finest money-saving tip in that newsletter.

I intend to use it myself and surprise her with its combination of creativity and practicality.

But I will now share it with the readers:

OK, when you use up a roll of toilet paper, what do you have? Of course, you have that cardboard tube.

What do you do with the tube? You probably throw it away.

A big mistake. What you should do is save those tubes.

After you have accumulated several, you cut them in half, giving yourself even more shorter tubes.

You then get some colorful paper and ribbons and glue the paper and ribbons to the tubes' outside surface.

And look what you have crafted — an entire set of gaily colored dinner napkin holders.

For mere pennies, I hasten to add.

Imagine, in a year's time the average household uses up several dozen rolls of toilet paper. By creating your own napkin holders, you can take care of your Christmas shopping as well as wedding, anniversary and birthday gifts.

There are other wonderful uses for the tubes, which I'll describe in a future column.

Meanwhile, have fun and save money making those napkin holders.

And for those who are not experienced in do-it-yourself projects, a final tip: Remember, don't use the tubes until the paper is gone.

Objectivity needed in DI bar article

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the article titled "Great Taste, Less Thrilling: Bars Cater to a Variety of Student Boozers" (DI, Aug. 24).

First, I believe the utterly biased article should have been printed in the editorial "Viewpoints Pages" section of The Daily Iowan, because it lacked objectivity and expressed the personal opinion and restrained thinking of the reporter, Moira Crowley.

Second, I feel a follow-up, objective article should be written to allow a fair and unbiased comparison of all Iowa City bars. The next reporter could use some of the following criteria to categorize the bars:

- Restaurant
- Bar
- 19 and older
- 21 and older
- Live entertainment
- Possible areas of comparison might include:
  - Prices/specials (weekdays and weekends)
  - Cover charge (weekdays and weekends)
  - Beer/drink selection
  - Type of food offered
  - Quality of service

Third, it is fairly obvious to anyone who has patronized various Iowa City bars that yes, there are different atmospheres which do not appeal to everyone. This is a matter of competitive business; each bar attempts to create its own niche in the marketplace. I wonder why the author thinks this type of competition is so bad. Does she prefer a limited or non-existent choice in the character of bars in Iowa City?

Fourth, it is my opinion that some bars provide a consistent and relaxing ambience — such as The Deadwood tavern, 6 S. Dubuque St., and the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St. — while other bars' atmospheres depend on the day of the week.

For example, the character of One-Eyed Jake's, 18-20 S. Clinton St., during its Comedy Loft is exceedingly different from its typical atmosphere on Saturday nights. And the atmosphere at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., or Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., changes according to the style of band playing. So to use an overused cliché to make my point, comparing bars without using objective criteria is like comparing apples to oranges.

In conclusion, if the DI wants to continue ranking bars, restaurants, music, theatrical productions, etc., it should only do so if the reporter is willing to be objective and non-biased. Otherwise, the DI reporters need to place their opinions in the "Viewpoints" section.

SKORTON

ter than the first candidate, Karen Hitchcock, interim president at State University of New York, Albany.

"He is a very strong candidate," she said. "Hitchcock was very pleasant, but she tended to respond to some of the specific questions with a global answer."

Others also said they were impressed with his ability to outline and focus on exactly what he thought was important for the UI.

The biggest problem facing the UI, Skorton said, was a change in the "social contract" between universities and government.

"After World War II, there was an unwritten contract between the federal government and universities to provide money," he said.

"The university would then assist the nation in research, development of health care and economic growth."

The national climate has now changed, Skorton said, and if he were president, he would fight hard to maintain current funding and get as much new revenue as possible.

"We will have to become more competitive (in getting) grants, but that is realistic only at the margin," he said. "We must look for other sources. Humanities is something I'm very concerned about, and a third approach is to continue reallocation — return funds from general funds back to the sources that brought it."

UI senior Brad Rounds, who ran the sound system at Skorton's first two symposia, said Skorton was a likable man who seemed to be very familiar with the UI.

"He raised some pretty interesting issues in undergraduate education," Rounds said. "He answered the questions fully and in detail, and I think he demonstrated a lot of knowledge about the various aspects of the university."

If elected president, Skorton said he would not be apologetic about undergraduate education.

"Education for undergraduates (at a research institution) is not better or worse than elsewhere — it's fundamentally different," he said. "I think the best way to learn is to work with the people who do creative things and discover new knowledge."

BOMBING

appeared to be a large fire burning past a frontline hill north of the besieged capital.

President Clinton, vacationing in Jackson Hole, Wyo., called the attack "an appropriate response to the shelling of Sarajevo."

"I think it is something that had to be done," Clinton said.

NATO said its attack began just after 2 a.m. (8 p.m. EDT Tuesday). It gave no details, and didn't say what targets it was attacking.

"We hope that this operation will also demonstrate to the Bosnian Serbs the futility of further military actions," said a statement released in Brussels, Belgium, by NATO Secretary General Willy Claes.

Claes said the attack was approved jointly by Gen. Bernard Janvier of France, the U.N. commander in former Yugoslavia, and U.S. Adm. Leighton Smith, NATO's southern Europe commander.

Western allies demanded retaliation after U.N. investigators concluded the Bosnian Serbs were responsible for the mortar attack near a crowded Sarajevo market Monday that killed 37 people.

Russian officials had argued against any attack.

The NATO attack was certain to alienate the Serbs, who peace mediators say have to make concessions before any deal to end the war would work.

The U.S. Navy said the aircraft carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt was diverted Tuesday to the Adriatic Sea at the request of Adm. Leighton Smith, commander of NATO forces in southern Europe.

In Sarajevo, a simple wooden table overflowed with flowers at the site of Monday's blast. A one-line message, wrapped in plastic against the rain, said it was "the last salute to cherished Sarajevans."

Hospital officials said a 37th victim died Tuesday afternoon.

Bosnian Serbs have accused the Muslim-led government of shelling its own people to create an outcry against the Serbs and force concessions from them. U.N. spokesman Alexander Ivanko, however, said an analysis showed "without any reasonable doubt" that Bosnian Serbs were responsible for the "unprovoked and barbaric" blast.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, head of the American delegation in Paris, was to travel to Belgrade, the Serbian capital, to meet with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

Serb-led Yugoslavia has endured more than three years of U.N. sanctions for inciting Serb rebellions in Bosnia and Croatia. Holding out the possibility that those sanctions might be lifted, negotiators are trying to persuade Milosevic to recognize both Bosnia and Croatia, and pressure the Bosnian Serbs into accepting a peace deal.

Holbrooke's peace bid was given a greater chance than previous ones because Serbs have been placed on the defensive by a series of losses to the Croats and their allies, the Bosnian army.

On Aug. 1, after the U.N. "safe areas" of Srebrenica and Zepa fell to the Serbs, NATO warned attacks on other protected zones such as Sarajevo would be met with a "firm and rapid response."

Serbs have responded to past airstrikes by seizing hundreds of U.N. peacekeepers hostage.

The last British peacekeepers were hastily pulled out of the isolated eastern pocket of Gorazde on Monday night, and U.N. vehicles were forbidden from traveling in or out of Sarajevo on Tuesday.

Officials said the only peacekeepers remaining on Serb-held territory were about 400 Russians thought unlikely to be taken hostage because of Moscow's traditional ties to the Serbs.

Bosnian Serb leaders welcomed the new U.S. peace initiative Tuesday, saying they were "ready to conclude a lasting and just peace." They agreed to a joint negotiating team with Serbia for any peace talks, in effect allowing Milosevic to negotiate for them.

That could push the talks ahead, if Milosevic wants to end the conflict and can persuade the Bosnian Serbs to give up some of the 70 percent of the country they now hold.

SIMPSON

pimps.

In a July 1994 interview, after Fuhrman testified at a preliminary hearing about finding a bloody glove on Simpson's property, the detective talked about his role in the investigation.

"I'm the key witness in the biggest case of the century," he said. "And if I go down, they lose the case. The glove is everything. Without the glove — bye-bye."

In a 1985 interview, Fuhrman described a cop's life: "It's like you're standing on top of a bunch of bodies. ... I mean, that's just the way you feel. You know, you got 200 niggers just trying to take you prisoner."

When asked on the tape by interviewer Laura McKinny whether police need probable cause to stop blacks, Fuhrman answers: "Probable cause? You're God."

At another point he says: "Most real good policemen understand that they would just love to take certain people and just take them to the alley and just blow their brains out," Fuhrman says.

Fuhrman's spokesmen have said he was just playing the role of a rogue cop to impress McKinny and make for a better story for her fictional project about the Los Angeles Police Department.

At least three times, McKinny said, Fuhrman describes actual events, each relating to the arrests of people without probable cause.

Juliana Johnston, an employee of the Iowa Citizen Action Network, 124 1/2 E. Washington St., was present and said some candidates are trying to run in a non-competitive manner.

"We're trying to be friendly to each other," she said. "With so many candidates, I think it's important to work with each other."

"I didn't arrest him under anything," Fuhrman says. "(I) just took him to the station, ran him for prints, gave them to the detectives to compare with what they've got in the area. ... I don't know what the Supreme Court says, and I really don't give a (expletive). If I was pushed into saying why I did it, I'd say suspicion of burglary."

At another point, Fuhrman speaks of taking a handcuffed suspect to a baseball field — "the scenic route to the station" — and beating him.

"When I left, Dana (apparently another officer) goes, 'No blood, Mark.' No problem. Not even any marks, Dana. Just body shots. Did you ever try to find a bruise on a nigger. It is pretty tough, huh?"

And in one of the most chilling sections, Fuhrman tells, without emotion, of a man paroled for murdering police officers: "If I would have arrested the son of a bitch, I would have killed him. If I ever see the son of a bitch and we're alone, I would kill him ... if there's nobody except him and me. Dead men tell no tales."

The tapes were played as McKinny, a North Carolina screenwriting professor, sat on the witness stand. She often looked on the verge of tears. In the audience, Kim Goldman, sister of murder victim Ronald Goldman, sat in the front row crying.

The jury was not present.

At the lunch break, Goldman's

Bruno Pigott, a current councilor seeking re-election, also paid the $5 admission fee and said he thought Bench was a good candidate.

"I came down to show support for Stan and his effort," he said. "Whoever wins is going to be a very good council member, and Stan's a hard-working candidate."

family lashed out at the judge for allowing the tapes to be played, even though the judge said he had already reviewed the tapes and read the transcripts.

"He gave the defense an opportunity to enrage people everywhere," Goldman's father, Fred, said. "It was an outrage."

Attorneys for Simpson played portions of the tapes and projected onto courtroom screens transcripts of sections no longer on tape in an effort to persuade Superior Court Judge Lance Ito to allow the majority black jury to hear the recordings.

The defense contends the tapes portray Fuhrman as a liar — he testified earlier in the trial that he hadn't used the racial slur in the last decade — and to show he is capable of planting evidence against Simpson. It was Fuhrman who reported finding the bloody glove behind Simpson's house the morning after the June 12, 1994, murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and Goldman.

The tapes had to be played so McKinny could authenticate them. Prosecutor Marcia Clark objected, saying she would concede the voice was Fuhrman's. Ito said he needed to hear McKinny place the sections in context.

The first interview, conducted April 2, 1985, was inadvertently taped over, McKinny said, but a transcription she made two days later remains.

out," Gordon said.

There are certain precautions students can take to ensure their safety. The RVAP periodically offers free nine- and 12-hour self-defense seminars, Rape Aggression Defense, for women, which include a simulated attack with a padded attacker.

"The main thing students need to do is be aware of their whereabouts at all times and trust their instinct. If a person feels like they are in danger, act on that feeling," Gordon said.

No-name Wagner throws near no-no

Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Paul Wagner, leading the National League in losses, came within one strike of pitching perhaps the most unlikely no-hitter in major-league history Tuesday night, sending the Pittsburgh Pirates past the Colorado Rockies 4-0.

Wagner (3-13) lost his no-hit bid with two outs in the ninth inning when Andres Galaraga got an infield single on a 3-2 pitch. Galaraga hit a grounder up the middle that second baseman Nelson Liriano backhanded far to his right, but his looping throw from far behind the bag was not nearly in time.

Until then, Wagner, winless in his last 11 starts and pitching only because 11-game winner Denny Neagle has an eye infection, didn't come close to allowing a hit. He permitted only two balls out of the infield against a Rockies team that was leading the NL in hitting and threatening to set a league record for home runs in a month.

Wagner walked three and also hit Vinny Castilla with a pitch in the seventh. But he struck out 11, got 13 more outs on ground balls and was consistently ahead in the count.

Wagner was trying to become just the second Pirates pitcher to throw a no-hitter in Pittsburgh. Nobody ever threw one in Forbes Field's 61 years, and John Candelaria pitched one for the Pirates on Aug. 9, 1976, against Los Angeles. That was the last no-hitter by a Pirates pitcher.

He ended Pittsburgh's six-game losing streak and pitched his second shutout in the majors.

Ramon Martinez of Los Angeles pitched the only complete-game no-hitter this season on July 14 against Florida. Wagner became the fourth pitcher to lose a no-hitter in the last inning this year.

There have been improbable no-hitters before in the majors — by Bobo Holloman in 1953 for the St. Louis Browns in his first major-league start, and by Bo Belinsky early in his Angels' career — but probably none was as improbable or unexpected as Wagner's might have been.

Wagner's only other victory as a starter this season came when he held the Rockies scoreless on three hits for seven innings in Pittsburgh on May 26 in a 4-2 win. He hadn't won as a starter since, and has twice since been bumped from the rotation.

Until Tuesday, Wagner was only 12-24 with a 4.66 ERA as a major-league starter, and Pirates manager Jim Leyland and General Manager Cam Bonifay were expected to decide after the season ended if he still had a future in Pittsburgh.

Agassi, Sampras dominate

Graf struggles to down Coetzer

Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Impervious to aces and immune to scorching heat, defending champion Andre Agassi blazed through the first round of the U.S. Open in 81 minutes Tuesday to push his winning streak to 21 matches.

Agassi, seeded No. 1, shrugged off 15 aces by Bryan Shelton, drilled all the balls he could reach, and turned a potentially tough opponent into just another patsy, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, as courtside temperatures soared into the 90s.

Playing gracefully and with nearly flawless precision from the baseline, Agassi picked up where he left off a year ago when he started his surge to the top of tennis. Shelton accommodated him by spraying 47 unforced errors — Agassi had only 14 — and double-faulting nine times while trying too hard to score an upset.

"I am used to that feeling of playing guys who are just playing, in a sense, outside themselves," Agassi said, dismissing the pressure of being the top seed at the Open for the first time. "I don't spend too much time thinking about the ranking very much."

Agassi rated himself a much better player than he was last year when he came into the Open unseeded and ran through a gauntlet of top players.

"I am executing with total confidence," he said. "I have definitely taken my lumps. I have definitely learned my lessons, some of them the hard way. But I guess, ultimately, I have never given up."

Two-time champion and No. 2 seed Pete Sampras was nearly as efficient in a 6-0, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Fernando Meligeni, an Argentine more at home on clay than on the Open's hardcourts.

But Sampras punched a hole in

41-2 LIFETIME

Forget Kinnick, give Grant Field a try

It's not the most well-known place on campus. In fact, most people don't know where it is at all.

It is Grant Field, surrounded on all four sides by tall black fences. Many UI students have walked by, perhaps on their way to Carver Hawkeye Arena or some other athletic field.

But few know of the greatness that takes place inside.

Grant Field is the home of Iowa women's field hockey, and if you've never been to a game, you are missing one of the most exciting experiences this university has to offer.

The field itself was named after Christine Grant, the Iowa women's athletics director since 1973. But the magic that takes place on the field comes courtesy of coach Beth Beglin.

Each fall, Beglin, along with a select group of athletes, transforms Grant Field into the university's own field of dreams.

The Hawkeyes are 41-2 in the history of Grant Field, including winning the first 36 games played there.

The sport is fast and exciting, comparable to ice hockey in some ways, but also very unique in others.

First-time viewers will probably have little idea why certain things are happening, but still will be intrigued by the fast-paced action. And, as you learn more about the sport, the more you become enthralled.

The sport is played on grass or artificial turf, but the Iowa version is played on turf, making speed the key.

The Hawkeyes seldom lack speed, most times, simply wearing down their opponents by halftime and then simply running over them in the second half. But as impor-

Beglin hopes Hawkeyes continue season-ending run

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

When a team loses its top four scorers from the previous season, logic says the next year is a rebuilding one.

But Iowa field hockey doesn't rebuild. It reloads.

These are the circumstances that face Head Coach Beth Beglin and her Hawkeyes heading into the 1995 campaign.

Iowa comes into the season ranked No. 8, but has already lost two of their top players in seniors Kristen Holmes and Emily Smith. Holmes is with the United States Olympic training squad and Smith is out with a knee injury.

Beglin said the duo's experience will be sorely missed.

"We're not quite as experienced as we thought we would be. Losing Kristen and Emily does hurt but we do have a solid nucleus of players coming back."

The Hawkeyes will look to seniors Ann

"There isn't one dominating team that's going to run away with it. Ohio State, Penn State, and Northwestern are going to be up there, but I think it's going to be nip-and-tuck all the way."

Beth Beglin, field hockey coach

Paré, Jessica Enoch, and Nancy McLinden to lead Iowa back to the NCAA Tournament for the 14th consecutive season. The Hawkeyes fell to North Carolina, 4-1, in last year's national semifinals.

Paré returns as last year's fifth-leading Hawkeye scorer, chalking up nine goals in 1994. Paré was also a CFHCA Midwest Regional Second Team All-American.

Enoch is a three-year starter at sweeper and was the only Hawkeye named to the NCAA all-tournament team at the national finals.

The versatile McLinden picked up a pair of goals last year and will see time at the back and midfield position. Junior Diane DeMiro will add punch to the lineup after tallying eight goals and one assist last fall.

On the defensive end Iowa will have to replace goalkeeper Rachel Smith, who recorded an .838 save percentage in 1994. Junior Jessica Krochmal, who started 17 games last year, and freshman Lisa Cellucci will vie for playing time.

Iowa finished '94 third in the Big Ten at 6-4 and 15-8 overall. Beglin said this year's race could be as wide open as ever.

"There isn't one dominating team that's going to run away with it," Beglin said. "Ohio State, Penn State, and Northwestern are going to be up there, but I think it's going to be nip-and-tuck all the way."

James Madison, North Carolina and Old Dominion are the teams Beglin said to watch for come tournament time. Big Ten rivals Ohio State and Penn State are ranked

No. 5 and 10, respectively.

Iowa hopes Grant Field will continue to be its opponents worst nightmare.

Even though the Hawkeyes lost their first home game in six seasons last fall, Iowa is still 41-2 at Grant Field, including a perfect 7-0 in NCAA Tournament games. Beglin said Iowa fans are one reason why the Hawkeyes have had such tremendous home-field success.

"When an opposing team is used to playing in front of 50 people and they come in and see 500 people it's intimidating. I hope that the students and fans continue to support us like they have in the past," Beglin said.

Iowa faces eight Top 20 teams in its first nine games, a fact not lost on Beglin.

"We don't have any breathing room when it comes to the schedule."

"We're going to have to play consistent and together. If this team can find an identity and mesh then we should be just fine," Beglin said.

the notion that all the men's matches are little more than a prelude to an inevitable final between him and Agassi.

"Everyone's assuming that, expecting that, but that's the last thing on my mind," Sampras said. "It would be great to get to the final and play anyone, and it would be special to play Andre. But there's a lot of time between now and next Sunday. I think I'm off to a good start."

"It's not like Martina and Chris. Everybody knew they'd get to the final each week. That's not going to happen in the men's game."

The women's top seed, Steffi Graf, took nearly an hour longer than Agassi to beat Amanda Coetzer 6-7 (7-1), 6-1, 6-4 and avenge a defeat against the scrappy South African at the Canadian Open two weeks ago.

AL ROUNDUP

Cleveland wins to go 42 over .500

CLEVELAND — Mark Clark pitched a career-best three-hitter Tuesday night as Cleveland beat Toronto 4-1 for its sixth straight win.

Eddie Murray singled home the game's first run in the fourth, becoming the 14th player with 1,800 career RBIs.

The Indians have won 10 of 11 to improve baseball's best record to 78-35.

Clark (8-5) walked two and struck out two in his first complete game of the year. The only run he allowed was Paul Molitor's 13th homer in the ninth.

Juan Guzman (3-10), activated from the disabled list before the game, pitched well but lost his fifth consecutive decision. He had gone on the DL Aug. 10 after experiencing pain in his armpit during his previous start.

The Indians finished Guzman with two runs in the seventh on RBI singles by Sandy Alomar and Kenny Lofton. Alomar drove in a run with a forceout in the eighth.

Mariners 6, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Andy Benes rebounded from two shaky starts and Ken Griffey Jr. hit a tie-breaking sacrifice fly to give Seattle the victory.

Benes (3-1), a trading-deadline acquisition from San Diego, allowed four runs on six hits over seven innings, striking out five and walking one.

Griffey's sacrifice fly scored Felix Fermin and sent Boston to its third loss in four games.

Knuckleballer Tim Wakefield

(14-3) failed in his third attempt for victory No. 15, allowing five runs on eight hits in six innings. He is 0-2 with a 9.56 ERA in his last three starts to raise his league-leading ERA from 1.65 to 2.51.

Norm Charlton pitched two innings for his third save. Fermin was 3-for-4 with three runs.

Royals 7, Brewers 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Johnny Damon's triple keyed a three-run sixth inning and Jason Jacome recorded his fourth straight win.

Jacome (4-2), a left-hander obtained from the New York Mets in a four-player deal on July 21, lost his first two starts with the Royals. He hasn't lost since Aug. 10, and won again with a seven-hitter for his second career complete game.

Damon hit a two-out, two-run triple in the sixth off Ricky Bones (8-10). Center fielder Darryl Hamilton, his back practically to the infield, got a glove on the ball, but it popped out and made it 3-0. Damon scored on a single by Tom Goodwin, who had three hits.

Twins 2, Rangers 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Brad Radke threw a three-hitter and Chuck Knoblauch homered and had two doubles.

Radke (10-12), a rookie, struck out three and walked two in his first career shutout and complete game. It lowered his ERA from 5.48 to 5.15.

Kevin Gross (7-13) allowed two runs and five hits in taking the loss. He walked three and struck out five in the complete game.

It was the Twins' second shutout of the season, the other by Kevin Tapani on June 3, against the Rangers and Gross.

Yankees 12, Angels 4

NEW YORK — Mike Stanley's three-run homer capped a five-run first inning and the Angels lost their fourth straight.

Stanley's homer, his 16th, came off Chuck Finley (13-9), who allowed eight runs in 5 2-3 innings.

Tim Salmon and J.T. Snow hit consecutive homers off David Cone (14-7) to pull California within 5-4 in the fourth, but the Yankees scored twice in their half of the inning and knocked out Finley when they scored again in the sixth.

New York had lost nine of its previous 10 games but jumped on Finley for five runs before there were any outs.

Cone, who has won five of his six decisions since joining the Yankees on July 28, walked four, struck out six and allowed five hits in eight innings.

Athletics 3, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Craig Paquette's two-run single in the ninth gave Oakland its seventh win in nine games.

Mark McGwire opened the ninth with a walk off Terry Clark (2-4). Pinch-runner Jose Herrera took second on a wild pitch and moved to third on a fly ball. After a groundout, intentional walk and stolen base, Paquette grounded a single past shortstop Cal Ripken.

Tigers 7, White Sox 5

allowed five hits over 6 1/3 innings and Franklin Stubbs had a homer, two doubles and a single.

Bergman (6-8) had given up eight earned runs in 10 1/3 innings in his two previous starts against Chicago.

NL ROUNDUP

Giants set back Phillies' hopes of wild-card berth

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds' double drove in half of San Francisco's four runs in a big seventh inning in a 6-4 victory over Philadelphia.

Terry Mulholland (4-10) was the beneficiary of the Giants' four-run outburst in the seventh, winning his second straight after losing a career-high nine in a row. Rod Beck worked the ninth for his 25th save.

Pinch-hitter Tom Lampkin, Deion Sanders and Robby Thompson, who snapped an 0-for-19 skid, hit consecutive singles off Paul Quantrill (9-9), with Lampkin scoring on Thompson's single to tie it 3-3.

Bonds, who struck out and was walked twice in his previous plate appearances, greeted reliever Mike Mimbs with a double.

After a walk to Matt Williams, Toby Borland relieved and one out later, Mark Carreon doubled in the fourth run of the inning. Carreon had a two-run homer in the second. Mulholland allowed three runs on eight hits in seven innings. He struck out three and walked none.

Philadelphia's Lenny Webster hit his first homer of the season in the second and added a run-scoring single in the eighth, his third hit of the day.

Kevin Jordan homered in the third, his second of the season against the Giants and second overall.

Quantrill went 6 1/3 innings, allowing five runs on six hits. He struck out six and walked four.

Cubs 10, Marlins 6

MIAMI — Ozzie Timmons had two doubles and two RBIs Tuesday night and the Chicago Cubs beat Florida, the Marlins' first home loss since July 27.

Florida had won 14 consecutive home games, the longest streak in the National League since Philadelphia won 16 straight at home in 1991.

Kevin Foster (9-9) got his third win against the Marlins this year, allowing four hits, two runs and four walks over six innings.

Shawon Dunston drove in one run with a double and Timmons, who entered in the game in a 3-for-18 slump, hit his two-run double to cap a three-run first for the Cubs.

Timmons led off the fourth with a double and scored when Scott Servais' single went under the glove of left fielder Jeff Conine. Servais then scored on a triple by Luis Gonzalez to make it 5-1.

The Marlins scored one in the fourth on an RBI single by Andre Dawson and the Cubs answered right back when Dunston got his second RBI in the fifth, driving in Mark Grace with a single.

Pinch-hitter Russ Mormon drove in a run with a single to get Florida within 6-3 in the seventh, but the Cubs scored four in the eighth on Rey Sanchez's third homer, Todd Zeile 14th, a two-run shot, and Gonzalez's RBI single.

The Marlins added two in the eighth on an RBI double by Conine and a wild pitch and one in the ninth on a run-scoring single by Alex Arias.

Chris Hammond (7-5) gave up seven hits and six runs in 4 1/3 innings, striking out four and walking two. Three of the hits came in the first.

Reds 4, Cardinals 1

CINCINNATI — Mariano Duncan hit a two-run homer in the first inning and Dave Burba allowed five hits over eight innings as the Cincinnati Reds beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

Duncan, subbing in left field for Ron Gant and batting cleanup, got his fifth homer of the season after Barry Larkin singled with two outs.

That was all Burba (9-2) needed as he allowed two of the five hits in the first inning. Burba, 5-0 since being acquired from San Francisco on July 21, struck out seven and walked one.

Cardinals starter Donovan Osborne (0-6), who missed all last season following reconstructive surgery on his elbow, remained winless since beating San Diego in August 1993.

After shutting down the Reds for four innings, Osborne allowed two runs in the sixth when Jerome Walton singled, Duncan walked and both scored on Benito Santiago's double down the left field line.

Astros 11, Braves 9, 13 innings

ATLANTA — The Houston Astros ended their team-record 11-game losing streak, hitting five home runs in a game for the first time in nearly 18 years and beating the Atlanta Braves.

Tony Eusebio led off the 13th with a home run, and the Astros added another run on a suicide-squeeze bunt by John Cangelosi.

The Astros overcame an early 6-0 deficit, then blew a 9-7 lead in the ninth. Derek Bell, who had four hits, Derrick May, Mike Simms and Brian Hunter also homered for Houston.

The Astros, with just their fourth win in 22 games, moved within one-half game of Philadelphia and Colorado for the wild-card lead. The Phillies and Rockies both lost.

Houston had hit five home runs in a game four previous times, most recently on Sept. 12, 1977, at Cincinnati.

David Justice homered twice and Fred McGriff also connected for the NL East-leading Braves, who have lost two in a row following a seven-game winning streak.

Eusebio hit his fifth home run on a 1-2 pitch from Matt Murray (0-2). Milt Thompson doubled, stole third and scored on Cangelosi's bunt.

Greg Swindell (9-9) pitched two innings for the win. It was the second relief appearance in 25 games for Swindell, who was scheduled to start Thursday against the Braves.

May's two-run, pinch-hit homer put Houston ahead 9-7 in the eighth.

EIGHT GAMES AWAY

Orioles set to honor Ripken

David Ginsburg

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — It's too expensive and valuable an item to be torn, so the Baltimore Orioles will simply put a commemorative seal on tickets to the games in which Cal Ripken is slated to tie and break Lou Gehrig's record of 2,130 consecutive games.

The Orioles have a series of events planned for Sept. 5, the day Ripken is to tie Gehrig's record in a game against the California Angels. They'll do even more the following night, when the durable shortstop steps into the record book for playing his 2,131st consecutive game.

"That's the day we really whoop it up," said Spiro Alafassos, the Orioles' event coordinator.

Some of the events and guests are being kept secret, in part to make it a surprise for Ripken, Alafassos said. But the Orioles have released some details.

On the 5th, former Baltimore manager Earl Weaver will throw out the first ball before the 7:35 p.m. game at Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

Weaver was the manager who inserted Ripken into the lineup on May 30, 1982 — and kept him there.

Baseballs used in the game will be put on sale to fans at Camden Yards, and the lights will be left on overnight after postgame ceremonies.

When the Orioles face the Angels on the 6th, Ripken's two children will be in charge of the ceremonial first pitch. Rachel, 5, and Ryan, 2, are to be given a turn before their father takes the field.

The national anthem will be performed by Branford Marsalis and Bruce Hornsby.

Ripken is not supposed to address the crowd after Tuesday's game, but will take the microphone Sept. 6.

President Clinton has indicated he wants to be among the crowd to witness the historic event. It will be Clinton's first night back from a three-week trip, including a 14-day vacation in Wyoming and stops in Hawaii and California.

"From what we understand, there's a good chance he'll be here," Orioles spokesman John Maroon said Tuesday.

Tickets for the game are going for up to $1,000 at ticket-selling agencies.

"People keep it in the back of their minds that there will be another World Series or All-Star Game, but we'll never see this again," Maroon said. "It's tough to keep it in focus because it's gotten so large."

NBA ROUNDUP

All-Star backs players' union

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Mitch Richmond, the Sacramento Kings' All-Star guard, has filed an unfair labor complaint against the NBA, claiming it has coerced players into voting against decertification of their union.

The complaint was filed Monday with the National Labor Relations Board in New York two days before the first of two days of player balloting on the fate of their union.

The complaint alleges that NBA

"It is simply a fact that the only way to assure that the 1995-96 season will begin on time is a 'yes' vote in (today's) election."

Russ Granik, NBA deputy commissioner

Commissioner David Stern tried to coerce the players into voting against decertification "by threatening publicly to cancel the season (and continue the current lockout) if the players vote to decertify," said attorney Dave Odom, who's representing Richmond.

On Tuesday, NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik said the league did nothing improper.

"It is simply a fact that the only way to assure that the 1995-96 season will begin on time is a 'yes' vote in (today's) election," he said.

"Unfortunately, the owners had no choice but to declare a lockout, and that lockout will continue until there is a collective-bargaining agreement in place."

"What I'd like to see is that we have the opportunity to vote separately on the two issues and that the two sides, the league's owners and the union, go back to the bargaining table and reopen negotiations," Richmond said.

Jordan, Stern lead troops to board room

NEW YORK — Together, David Stern and Michael Jordan have made the NBA a global sports phenomenon, a glitzy world where players are the show and everybody gets rich.

Now the NBA commissioner and the league's greatest player are adversaries, on opposite sides of a labor dispute that threatens to tear the NBA apart.

After receiving a barrage of conflicting faxes, confusing numbers and forecasts of doom from advisers and league officials over the past three weeks, NBA players begin a vote today — a second voting day is Sept. 7 — on whether to accept a controversial labor deal or dissolve their union.

In choosing, they will have to decide whom to trust — Jordan or Stern.

Jordan, who makes only a fraction of his money from his Chicago Bulls salary, says players should turn down the proposed agreement, instead urging them to throw out the union and seek a better deal in federal court.

"He (Stern) wouldn't accept the deal," Jordan said earlier this month at a meeting of players opposing the union. "Why would he ask the players to accept it?"

Stern, who locked out the players July 1, says take the deal or risk missing paychecks come November.

He won't criticize Jordan for leading the dissidents, instead choosing to blame the labor unrest on a handful of agents seeking to protect commissions on big rookie salaries.

"This is a mugging that the agents have perpetrated on the union," Stern said. "The victims will be the fans, the players and our game."

Similar rhetoric has been ringing in the ears of players in the three weeks since the deal was reached. Jordan's faction, the league and the union leadership have been lobbying furiously as they try to sway a divided rank and file.

The proposed agreement, which replaced one nixed by players in June, contains a rookie salary scale and would increase the salary cap from $15.9 million last year to $23 million in 1995-96 and to at least $28 million in 2000-01.

The deal retains some important cap loopholes — teams can still resign their free agents without regard to the cap — but abolishes others, such as the so-called "balloon payments" veterans like Patrick Ewing and Clyde Drexler have tacked on at the end of their contracts.

Union head Simon Gourdine embarked on a 17-city tour to meet with players and sell the deal. But he reached only 99, not all of whom were convinced the pact would help them as much as owners.

'Mad Max' in hot water over marijuana

HOUSTON — Vernon Maxwell, cut by the Houston Rockets in June after quitting the team at the start of the playoffs, faces a Sept. 5 court appearance after police allegedly found marijuana in his car.

Maxwell was pulled over Monday night along Houston's Richmond Avenue, the city's nightclub district, for running a red light. When police determined he had two outstanding traffic warrants against him, he was placed under arrest.

"Through the process of inventorying the car, illegal drugs were found in Mr. Maxwell's car," said J.L. Dotson, the assistant chief.

One small plastic bag of marijuana was found under a floor mat in Maxwell's white 1995 Mercedes convertible.

The total amount was about 1.2 grams, authorities said.

Maxwell's car was impounded and taken to a police storage lot. He spent the night in a police station lockup, then posted a $1,000 bond Tuesday morning. Accompanied by his attorney, he had nothing to say as he walked out of jail.

He faces a misdemeanor charge of possession of a controlled substance. Conviction could result in up to a $2,000 fine and 180 days in jail.

San Francisco quarterback Steve Young is focusing on leading the 49ers to a second consecutive Super Bowl victory and sixth overall.

between the 49ers of 1995 and the 49ers of '94. Chief among them is whether free-agent cornerback Sanders re-signs with San Francisco or opts to play elsewhere. Dallas is among the teams competing with the 49ers for Sanders' services.

"I don't think that we must have him," San Francisco coach George Seifert said. "But with the expectations and the things we have to do, you want to get all the talent you possibly can, whether it be Deion or any other player."

Ricky Watters, San Francisco's rushing leader the past three seasons, is among the talent the 49ers lost. Watters went to Philadelphia through free agency.

San Francisco also has 16 new players, including top draft pick J.J. Stokes. UCLA's career receiving leader, Stokes is expected to miss the first month of the season with a broken right hand.

"I think any time you have that type of change, there's a change in the chemistry of the team. All of that remains to be seen," added Seifert, a two-time Super Bowl winner as head coach who begins the season with an 84-24 career mark, the best winning percentage (.778) in league history.

Offensively, Watters' backup last season, Derek Loville, has moved in as halfback. Ricky Ervins joined San Francisco as a free agent to back up Loville.

Over the past several months, Loville has been reminded constantly he has only one career start in four years in the league. He bristles at suggestions San Francisco's running game is in trouble.

"I'm your halfback now. Get used to it," Loville said.
