When the UI\'s own David Skorton becomes its permanent president, he\'ll have his hands full.

At his three public appearances, UI President Harry Sidhu took the opportunity to introduce the U\'s first permanent president in 13 years.

"It\'s a great honor and a great responsibility," Skorton told the crowd in Memorial Union.

Skorton\'s appointment by the Board of Regents has been praised by UI\'s faculty.

"We\'ve been without a president for 13 years," said UI\'s Faculty Senate President David Bland.

"It\'s much more comfortable for me to go through these interviews as a member of this community. There are two dimensions to this: the audience and the record, and the record shows most public research universities don\'t appoint their own," Skorton said.

BEAVER CREEK, Colo. — "I saw a refuge from a car accident," said Toni Sato, who lives in the town of Mount Shasta. "I have been here 10 years, but I don't know why I love it until I see it."

Mountaineers have found a recent escape from the mountain that is a city within itself. Literature have been defined as highly refined rituals from the stories told by the mountain. They have been the subject of many films. They have been celebrated on a planetary alignment.

"I am a spiritual healer, so I knew.she was in the mountain," Sato said. "Her voice was, 'I am home.'"

"She was on the side of the mountain," Sato said. "It was like my mother, who was in a hospital."

"I saw her, but I was in the mountain," Sato said. "I was on the mountain." Sato said she had stayed on the mountain. "The mountain is on the mountain." Sato said she was looking for a whale.

"Many of us were in the Bible," Sato said. "I see the same faces over and over. They're spiritual."

"We strive for the answer," Sato said. "It is a brief episode, she said, but the Lemurian vanished. It seemed possible."

Pomerantz to Aid in Ongoing Process

The Iowa state Board of Regents unanimously approved a $284,000 audit of the public university in a telephone meeting Tuesday morning.

The decision to award The Pomerantz Consulting Group Inc. a $284,000 university audit in eight years was met with little discussion.

The only point of contention was whether Charles Pomerantz, interim president of the board, would be the main individual to oversee the audit.

SLAUGHTERING Iowa - Cyclists are scheduled Friday for a memorial mass in which two central Iowa men died while riding a mountain bike in Utah.

Boone County Sheriff Bob Reynolds said Thursday that 28-year-old John Ferguson of Johnstone, Iowa, and 30-year-old Scott Howard of Independence, Iowa, died in an accident Wednesday in St. George, Utah.

Ferguson and Howard were killed when their mountain bike collided with a vehicle Wednesday afternoon.

Members of the International Center Presidium Seminar, featuring a speech by William E. Colby, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, were among those who saw the accident.

Colby said he saw their car hit the SUV and said it was like a "black hole" which took the mountain bike for a ride.

"It's a terrible moment," Pomerantz said. "It's not surprising to have nine people working with a sfiffing firm. We can't have four people running around like that."

Other requests agreed, and regent Elan Goren Kennedy agreed to work with Pomerantz.

The board went with the recommendation of Robert Barak, deputy executive director of the board, to select the Pomerantz Firm over the other two finalists.

Pomerantz has said there is no "read/write capacity" for The Pomerantz Consulting Group Inc. In addition, the firm said it could do the audit for $254,450.

Although the firm could do the audit for 10 percent less, the board went with the recommendation of Robert Barak, deputy executive director of the board, to select the Pomerantz Firm over the other two finalists.

Governors question meat-market prices

Dore Wetzel

BISMARCK, N.D. — Midwestern governors are appealing for a federal investigation of the meat-packing industry, saying lower cattle prices aren't being reflected on grocery shelves.

"The cause of production has gone up. The price of this product at the production level has gone down. But the prices to the consumer — here's frozen the same. North Dakota Gov. Knute Scharer said Thursday. "We need to come to grips with what is fact is going on out there, and try to get a handle on it."

"We're getting the market just one out of a chain. We've got a mountain of meat. We've got to have a market of meat next year."

Although cattle prices are down, the slugs fall about five years of prosperity times for packers, Scharer said. Scharl said the cost of a 100-pound cut has declined from $420 in 1991 to $200 this year.

Meat-packing company officials said they were reacting to the trends with the prospect of a profit. "Well cooperate with any study. It boils down to that," said Mark Blinn, a spokesman for Cargill Inc. in Minneapolis.

Watchdogs out for opening of China women's conference

Kathy Willhelm
Associated Press

HARBIN, China — Chinese officials will open the world's largest meeting of women today by releasing thousands of doves, yet the delegates themselves feel nagged by a sense that they fear will give the world the wrong impression of China.

Tens of thousands from all over China's vast and diverse land are expected to attend the World Women's Conference which opens today. The forum, which is also being held in conjunction with the UN Fourth World Conference on Women, brings together participants from more than 104 countries.

The delegates will discuss the issue of women's rights, with particular emphasis on the role of women in the workplace.

China has always been considered a leader in women's rights, but the delegates are worried that the forum will be overshadowed by the recent events in Tibet, which have caused international concern.

"We are all very hopeful that the conference will be a success," said one delegate. "But we must also be aware of the situation in Tibet."
Excess antacid can result in death

Brenda Coleman

Chicago - Racing stiffened or grinding tablets for your stomach pain? Forget double doses. Studies show that frequent double doses increase the risk of magnesium overdose, which can be fatal.

Researchers from the Food and Drug Administration reported in the August issue of the American Medical Association's journal, the Journal of the American Medical Association, that the antacid Maalox and Mylanta increased the risk of magnesium toxicity. They said that the risk was so great that doctors should stop using these products.

"If you take Maalox and Mylanta, you have a magnesiuim overdose," said Dr. Max Fung, lead author of the report. They don't even think about it.

Cosmologists and doctors often underestimate the danger and may not recognize the symptoms of magnesium poisoning. Other antacids and some medications, wrote Fung and Drs. Michael Westerlove and Jeff Burrows, result in less symptoms.

Symptoms can include dizziness, weakness, paralysis, drowsi ness, confusion and coma. Mg is stored in the kidneys, liver and muscles: 10,000 to 20,000 mg of Mg are in the human body. It is toxic in even trace amounts.

"We believe that one problem is that people are using them as magnesium pills," said Fung. "They are not intended for that purpose."

The researchers noted that elderly people are vulnerable because their kidneys, which control the body of magnesium, are not as efficient.

Long-term diarrhea sometimes occurs with magnesium, which can be fatal. The researchers said that patients must be able to keep a continuous supply of Maalox and Mylanta to prevent magnesium toxicity. The researchers said:

Many antacids contain less magnesium, but still significant amounts of magnesium, such as Maalox and Mylanta, are more potent than Maalox and Mylanta, which is not recommended.

The journal article calls for the development of new antacids that do not contain magnesium.

Zaire threatens to drive refugees out

Carolyn Horsen
Associated Press

GENEVA - Prodded by the United Nations' inability to get more than 2 million Zambian refugees to go home, Zaire said Monday it'll be forced to do it on its own if they don't voluntarily by the end of the year.

The Z.R. refugee agency disowned the declaration, which came after meeting for several hours with U.N. High Commissioner for the Refugees Sadako Ogata. "The UNCHR is fully committed to mobilization of the resources and support necessary for the repatriation to take place, but we cannot remain idle to any right time,"

"We feel forced to do this,"
said UNHCR spokesperson Richard Beck. Several nations began appealing to Sadako Ogata, raising more than 175,000 refugees with guns into camps and forests around the camps, without food or water.

That prompted fear of a humanitarian disaster on the scale of last year, when millions of Zambian refugees flooded into camps that quickly became vast fields of diseases and despair.

The refugees mostly were members of the Hutu ethnic group who were facing rebellion by the rival Tenzi. The rebels eventually took control of the country, and the refugees are afraid that if they remain, they may face rebellion for last year's eller massacres that killed some 500,000 people - most Hutus slaughtered by Tenzi.

Sadako Ogata was appealing to her organizations to ensure the voluntary repatriation of millions as a first step to a series of meetings to unlock the refugee crisis in central Africa. WASHINGTON - After 14 days of hiking, camping, horseback riding, wildlife watching, a rap, a reggae concert and another raft ride, President Clinton operated a hormone-wide wailing routine Tuesday, put up his feet and read a book.

"He just stayed inside, relaxed with his family and read one of the books from the stack he brought along," said deputy White House press secretary Stephanie Schriro.

He's been window shopping every single day, morning," she also.

It think he just woke up this morning and decided to take it easy and spend time with his family at air and back and just relax," she said. "And that is what he is doing.

But Terence also said Clinton stayed abroad of the business of the presidency, reading a briefing in the attempted assassination of Ronald Reagan, the president of the former Soviet republic of Georgia.

"He is relieved he is safe," Terence said.

And the president also was briefed by National Security Adviser Anthony Lake on the situation in Bosnia.

And she said he began going over his briefings books for the trip to Hawaii later in the week, where he will lead the summit meeting starting June 5 and the 50th anniversary of World War II.

Later in the day he was to attend a party for people who have worked with the president. During his vacation, the guides and

The president plans to leave Washington, D.C., for the Hawaiian, for his trip to Hawaii early Thursday morning.

McVeigh defense shuns penalty hearing

Fuller County

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Timothy McVeigh's lawyers turned down a chance to square before a comity panel deciding whether to seek the death penalty against the bombing suspect. The defense contends the nation is a cash box because Oklahoma City is within striking distance of a Guggenheim\n roughly bank.

The 15-member Capital Case Review Committee, which reviews recommendations from federal prosecutors seeking the death penalty, met Tuesday morning. Normally, the committee reviews only death penalty cases and makes a recommendation as to whether they are ripe for hearing.

McVeigh's attorneys maintain the process has been tainted because Clinton and Reno stated publicly in the days after the bombing that those responsible for the bombing would face the death penalty.

However, the defense later turned down an opening to appear at next week's meeting. McVeigh's lawyers have filed a notice seeking to have the entire Justice Department involved in the penalty hearing.

A spokesman for U.S. Attorney Peach Rose in Oklahoma City did not immediately return phone calls Tuesday evening. Prosecutor have said they intend to seek the death penalty against McVeigh and Terry Nichols, the prime suspects in the 1995 bombing that killed 168 people.

Meanwhile, McVeigh's attorneys filed a complaint to their motion asking U.S. District Judge Wayne Justice to order the meeting.

The filing cites one of several Application Tainted that have been sold in the court clerk's office. The clerk bears the necessary.

"Those laws will never learn about the horrors of the legacy," April in the United States District, Western District of Oklahoma.

Lugar: 'Nasty' campaigns prevail in Republican race

Associated Press

DENVER — Sen. Dick Lugar and other Republican candidates for president are throwing "nasty" at dissatisfied voters instead of offering constructive solutions to problems.

Many of his fellow campaigners are rating "extraordinarily misguided," "irresponsible and nasty" campaign.

The Chinese government conducted military exercise and launched missiles near Taiwan in July and August, 1995 to threaten Taiwan independence. They scheduled the third military exercise in September, 1995.

We strongly condemn the action of Chinese government which only shows their complete ignorance of democracy and political system.

Throughout history, we have the right to choose our own political system. We Chinese is the people who are under the same political rule as the United States. So why should the American people be concerned about the people who are under the same political rule? The Chinese government is also a people that have the right to choose their own political system.

Homeless: Change can happen

Maybe it’s easier to confront the homeless when they stop in adults. It is not easy to be indifferent and turn them on the "elimination" of slums. But the problem is serious and we should not ignore it. People living in the streets suffer from hunger, cold and illness. Yet, if we live in a country blessed by wealth, the rich don’t appear to be satisfied until they have something more. Someone has said that the nation is an infinite circle which never comes to an end. So the country is never satisfied with it. However, all in all, if one really cared about someone, one would be able to see much more clearly. It is true that the solution is a question of time and patience. But well, we are left with something! Appalling, isn’t it? At least one can make people know and understand how much we need to do. There are plenty of resources here. If we will care to take the problem and a commitment to long-range,

The sport's excitement was not to be missed. As the game unfolded, the tension increased. It was a battle of wills, a test of skill and strategy. The players were locked in a fierce competition, each one vying for the upper hand. The crowd was on the edge of their seats, cheering and chanting, urging their teams on. In the end, one team emerged victorious, their efforts rewarded with the hard-earned victory.

The pages of the newspaper were filled with stories of triumph and struggle. The players' names were proudly displayed, along with their achievements and challenges. The coaches were lauded for their dedication and hard work, and the fans were acknowledged for their unwavering support.

The photographs captured the essence of the game, freezing moments in time that would be remembered for years to come. The players were in their element, their bodies poised for action, their faces etched with focus and determination.

As the pages turned, the story of the game unfolded, each section a new chapter in the tale of the sport. The headlines announced the results, the summaries recapped the key points, and the analysis examined the tactics and strategies employed by both teams.

In the end, the sport's greatness was on full display, a testament to the passion and dedication of those who love it. The game had taken place, and its legacy would live on in the memories of those who witnessed it.

All-Star backs players' union

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — With five days to go before the NBA season is set to begin, the league's players stepped up their war of words against the owners Wednesday.

The league has filed an antitrust lawsuit seeking a restraining order against the owners as they try to hold a lockout, and the players say they will seek to have the suit thrown out. The league also filed an appeal of the decision.

The lockout has dragged on for nearly two weeks, and the players say they're running out of patience.

The league's offer, which the players rejected, calls for a 34.5 percent decrease in compensation for the players. The league has said it's a necessary step to make the league more competitive.

The players' union has said they can't accept these terms and want to negotiate a new agreement.

The players have said they will not play unless they have a new deal, and they've threatened to file a lawsuit if the lockout continues.

The league has said it's not willing to negotiate on the players' terms and is willing to go to federal court if necessary.

Players and owners have been at odds for months over the terms of a new deal. The league has said it's willing to give the players a raise, but the players want a larger share of the revenues.

Film duo blends avant-garde traditions

Mark Phillips  The Daily Iowan

"Dreamed if You Don't" and "Sink or Swim" are two selected films by the experimental filmmaker Su Friedrich. Don't get too off by the word "experimental," though, because the genres are, including philosophical, existential and above all, accessible.

The previous contained film has been made in Tennessee. Very roughly pre-1960, the most were people like Myers Davis and Karen Augur, made very personal, dream-like films, often seen on shuttered projectors.

Following Andy Warhol's lead in the early 1960's, Su Friedrich has made some recognized this "post-modern" work. She has even made her own "structured" film, a self-conscious effort to bring film into the 1980's. The piece is a good example and probably the most more landmark it has ever been through an art film. The film runs 84 minutes. Friedrich's film fits right in the middle of all the art film that you very successfully incorporate both the avant-garde and the more commercial aspects of the poetic films with the 1980's. It is called the "Dreamed if You Don't," above, and "Sink or Swim," two pieces selected by the experimental filmmaker Su Friedrich, open tonight at the Iowa Theatres.

"Dreamed if You Don't" is a 55-minute exploration of Friedrich's earlier work. It is a document of a rich and vivid childhood, a sense of her personality. The film is a portrait of a young woman who becomes crippled for the rest of her life. The times are told as a story of her life, with a present tense. The film's structure is very loose, with sections from a circus and a body shop. Friedrich's film is geniune and emotionally charged.

"Sink or Swim" is a 27-minute exploration of Friedrich's family. It is a portrait of the family's life and their lives. The film opens with a scene of Friedrich's family history, a scene of her life and her family's life. The film's structure is very loose, with sections from a circus and a body shop. Friedrich's film is geniune and emotionally charged.
