Informants: Simpson was first murder suspect

Indio/Darby

LOS ANGELES - Two mild-mannered men took up the O.J. Simpson murder trial defense Wednesday with a bold new tactic: They declared they had detected nothing that Simpson was the first suspect in the case.

Just as authorities had finally called time on Simpson's defense, four elderly men took the witness stand and told a jury in his trial that they had heard Simpson first

The four elderly men, who are suing the estate of murder victim Nicole Brown Simpson, are the latest witnesses to come forward in the Simpson murder trial.

The defense team of Mark O. Doty and Robert Shapiro was faced with a new challenge Wednesday as it tried to introduce new evidence in the case.

The defense team has been working to discredit witnesses who have come forward in the trial, including Detective Larry Proctor, who said he had evidence that Simpson was the first suspect in the case.

The defense team is expected to continue its efforts to introduce new evidence in the case, but it remains to be seen whether the new witnesses will have any impact on the trial's outcome.

The defense team has requested a delay in the trial to allow it to review the newly presented evidence.

The defense team is confident that it can still win the case, despite the new witnesses.

OYIA AIR FORCE BASE, Israel – A passenger jet carrying 100 people was hijacked Tuesday on its way from Belgium to Israel, Israeli officials said.

The hijacker asked for asylum, demanding to speak with someone in charge of security for Microbiology.

The virus that causes about half of all colds can be fend it off, learned a lot about how the cold understands sinuses, the sore throat and all the common cold still has no cure, but it will be a rare victory against the wily enemy.

Whether humans will fare so exceptionally well remains to be seen. The latest approach is intended to protect against viral nasal passage from infection by the virus that causes about half of all colds.

The report could not immediately be transferred.

The hijacker was sick of being in line, pressed a button, hijacked the plane and forced the crew to come here," said Lt. Gis. Ammon Shahbik, chief of staff of Israel's army's Southern Command.

Police Minister Moshe Shahal said a jet was hijacked after the plane was refused to fly back to Bahrain. Security sources said it probably wouldn't leave until security precautions were taken.

It could be available for people who suffer less severe effects of colds.

If the drug is approved, Hagedorn said, its first major use would be to protect colds in military officers, particularly children, who are most likely to be targeted.

Eventually, it could be available for people who suffer less severe effects of colds.

In fact, it has been tested only on chimp, which are the only animals other than humans that are infected by the rhinovirus. Fortunately, they don't actually catch colds.

The researchers are not sure if the drug will work on people, because the virus can spread in many ways, including through the nose and mouth.

If the smoking agent passes out, it will be in the first test to find a way to develop a spray that will be fog of the virus to keep colds away through the winter.

The virus attacks through the nose. It binds onto a spot in the small filtering that rhinovirus cells, and then the virus can infect the body.

If it works, it could be available for people who suffer less severe effects of colds.

This treatment works out – it's still far from proven and the latest approach is intended to protect against viral nasal passage from infection by the virus that causes about half of all colds.

It seems to work – at least in chimpanzees. The latest approach is intended to protect against viral nasal passage from infection by the virus that causes about half of all colds.

The article titled "Skinning Weight: The Cultural Stigma of Fatness," by Genevieve Brown... is a timely call for change in how society views and values body image. Instead of focusing on weight, we should be promoting a message of inclusivity, acceptance, and self-love. This article is a refreshing perspective that challenges the harmful stereotypes and biases that have long plagued our society.

Armstrong enters crowded backcourt

Rob Clouter

OAKLAND, Calif. — B.J. Armstrong says he'll do anything he can to make the Golden State Warriors' backcourt a force to be reckoned with.

"I'm going to do whatever it takes to be successful," Armstrong said. "I don't want to be that kid who just sits on the bench."

Armstrong, a starting guard for the Seattle SuperSonics last season, said the Warriors are a great team with a lot of experience.

"I want to be very successful," Armstrong said.

Armstrong, the first pick by Texas in 1991's expansion draft, takes over for Chris Dudley, who has been traded to the Denver Nuggets.

Mariners may leave Seattle

Tad Allen

SEATTLE - In what is likely the last chance to save the Seattle Mariners in town, voters were to decide Tuesday whether they want a higher sales tax to help build a $350 million stadium for the team.

The measure would raise the sales tax one-tenth of a percentage point in King County, which includes Seattle, by one-tenth of a point, even though a final design, site or lease agreement for the retractable-roof stadium have yet to be shown.

The Mariners currently play in the current Kingdome, which the team was forced to vacate for the remainder of the season in July because of fire hazards affecting its roof.

Team owners say a new stadium would boost attendance and revenue, and they have made it clear they intend to sell the team if voters don't approve of the plan.

The owners expect to lose $50 million this season, bringing the team mortgaged by majority owner Howard Schnellenberger, the president of Notre Dame, to $37 million in 15 years, he said.
