Alleged pot deal sidelines football players

Two Michigan State University football players have been suspended indefinitely from the team for allegedly conspiring to deliver marijuana.

Robert Dozier and Jason Strayhorn were arrested and taken to jail. Bond was set at $50,000 each. Both players are subject to four years in jail and a $12,000 fine.

Dozier was a back-up running back and Strayhorn was redshirted during the 1994 football season.

High-tech recycling allows mechanical separation

Instead of handing returnables to an employee, recyclers in East Lansing, Mich., can now use an automated scanning system that cuts employee labor and recycling clutter. The recycling center at a local grocery store accepts cans and bottles according to category — glass, plastic or aluminum — into one of seven containers, which resemble vending machines.

Consumers press a button when they are finished depositing recyclable goods and the machine produces a credit receipt.

Ill. professor admonished for gradebook policy

A professor at the University of Illinois was transferred from a teaching position to an administrative position in the engineering department after he refused to turn in student grade books.

Louis Wozniak said students told him they would prefer not to have their grade books turned in — only their final grades. He said he saw no reason for the department to see the grades because the instructor makes the final decision on grades.

Officials in the department said they needed the grade books in case a student disputes a grade and an emergency befalls the professor who would usually deal with the student.

Nebraska mascot goes 'under the knife'

Herbie, the University of Nebraska's long-time mascot, will be replaced soon by a more "athletic, strong, powerful and entertaining" mascot.

The school is taking suggestions from the public for a new design.

The move to create a new mascot came this summer, however, officials said they are struggling for ideas. The decision was based on a survey of 900 season ticket holders, and recruiting, marketing and public feedback. Physical appearance, age, gender and racial issues all made Herbie's popularity wane, officials said.

Because Herbie appeals to children, he will still greet people outside the stadium before football games and be involved in youth activities.

NYU students leave lap of luxury for residence halls

Due to overcrowding in the residence halls, 200 students at New York University were placed in an off-campus hotel until rooms opened up.

"They were living in the lap of luxury," NYU's Director of Public Affairs, Virgil Renzulli said. "They had their own kitchens, big televisions, a health club and maid service. They didn't want to leave."

Attendance tested with ID swiping

Identification cards, once used for checking off meals in residence hall cafeterias at Michigan State University, are now being used in some sections of introductory economics to take attendance.

Economics professors are experimenting with an attendance-taking system that would require students to run their cards through a reader to check in for class. Attendance is part of students' grades in the class.

The system was tested on two separate days, and all 500 students were checked into class on time, reports said.

Father of the Bride 2 star faces child-actor problems

NEW YORK (AP) — Now, Mecauley Culkin's folks are fighting over whether his younger brother should be allowed to miss school for a publicity tour.

Christopher "Kit" Culkin wants 12-year-old

Kieran, whose older brother starred in "Home Alone," to stay in classes at the Professional Children's School, where he's not doing well.

His mom, Patricia Brentrup, contends the publicity tour will last three days and won't interfere with Kieran's education. Brentrup lawyer Stanford Lotwin said the school is especially designed to accommodate show business children, adding: "I think the school issue is a false issue. ... This is a continued power play to control everything."

Culkin, 50, and Brentrup, 41, separated after living together 20 years and having seven children. They are in a court fight for custody and professional control of the children, ages 6 to 19.

Kieran was scheduled to appear with other stars of "Father of the Bride 2" — Steve Martin, Diane Keaton and Martin Short — in news conferences next month.

Kieran recently finished filming the movie "Amanda" in Montana, where his parents fought over custody of the children.

Mariah Carey single debuts at No. 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Mariah Carey's new single is a record-breaker.

"Fantasy" makes its debut this week as the No. 1 song on Billboard's Hot 100 singles chart and its R&B singles chart, making her the first woman ever to achieve the double-barreled success.

Carey becomes only the second performer to open a single atop the Hot 100 chart, two weeks after Michael Jackson did the same thing with "You Are Not Alone."

But Carey's first week sales of 228,941 copies of "Fantasy" far outpaced Jackson's sales of 120,285.

Since 1990, Carey has sold more than 60 million records worldwide. Her new album, "Daydream," is due in stores Oct. 3.

Eddie Money shies from 'Owen Meany' fate for baby

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock singer Eddie Money has ruled out one name for his new baby boy: Owen.

Money, whose hits include "Baby Hold On," and his wife, Laurie, had their fifth child Wednesday.

The couple hasn't picked a name yet for the 6-pound, 15-ounce boy, the singer's publicist, Suzan Crane, said in a statement.

"We know for sure that we won't be naming him Owen Money," Crane quoted the singer as joking. Some other hit songs by Money include "Two Tickets to Paradise," and "Take Me Home Tonight."

Elvis Presley impersonator Joe Montana strums Presley's Hagstrom guitar in central London Thursday. The guitar, which Presley used in his 1968 "Come Back Special" concert, is expected to fetch between $150,000-$250,000 in an upcoming London sale of Presley memorabilia.

"I've always been prepared to be photographed and followed and stuff like that," said Clooney, whose aunt is actress-singer Rosemary Clooney and whose father, Nick, is a TV newsman.

"It's 16-, 17-, 18-year-old kids. Seven of them with video cameras. And they stand in front of you and they'll go — 'Hey, who's the fat girl you're with?'" the star of NBC's hit hospital show said in a recent interview.

Clooney says their goal is to get him angry enough to do something they can sue for — or demand money for the videotape.

Tammy Faye to showcase new motivational tapes

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Makeup!! Tammy Faye Messner, ex-wife of fallen PTL leader Jim Bakker, is returning to her old stomping grounds.

Messner takes the stage in Charlotte on Oct. 5-6 to sing, talk and sell motivational cassettes titled "You Can Make It."

A spokesperson promises "laughter — and tears — that can only come straight from the heart of Tammy Faye."

Messner lives in Palm Springs, Calif., with her husband, Roe, while working to reclaim the spotlight she shared with Bakker.

Construction to unify south-side campus

Stacy Forrest
The Daily Iowan

Students who currently park in the lot next to Becker Communication Studies Building will soon find their parking places turned into a pedestrian walkway, and will have to vie for spaces in a new, expanded lot on the other side of the UI Main Library.

Construction on a metered parking lot south of the library is scheduled for completion early next year. When the lot is completed, construction will begin on the walkway.

The new lot, an expansion of the current, mostly permit-parking lot, will hold about the same number of cars as both the current lots — 78 spaces.

"The south side is one of the main entrances to campus, this plan is going to make it more appealing to the eye," George Klein, UI physical plant director said.

The plan for the pedestrian walkway includes turning the area into a plaza with open lawns, benches and a walkway.

The north side of the library will be an informal picnic area with benches and walkways that will better connect the English-Philosophy Building, the Main Library and Becker Communication Studies Building, Wilson said.

This plan is designed to bring the campus together by making the area by the library more accessible to pedestrians, said Larry Wilson, associate director of UI Planning and Administrative Services.

"We've received only positive comments about this plan," he said.

The permit spots in the existing lots will be moved elsewhere on campus, Wilson said.

The entryways to Shambaugh Auditorium and Becker Communication Studies Building will be maintained, Wilson said. However, the steps to the entrance of the library will be removed in order to raise the slope even with the railroad tracks.

Construction is underway south of the UI Main Library for a new parking lot and a plaza.

"Washington Street slopes downhill toward the railroad tracks; once the landscaping is done, it will slope up, level out and then slope down again toward the tracks," Wilson said.

"What we are doing is distributing the steepness over a greater distance."

One of the concerns with leveling the plaza with the railroad tracks is the tendency for students to cross the tracks.

"In conjunction with the railroad, we've proposed to put a fence along the tracks to distract the students from crossing at that point," Wilson said.

UI law school reviewed; receives excellent rating

Melanie Mesaros
The Daily Iowan

The UI's College of Law has been praised by yet another publication — the latest Princeton Review gave the school strong reviews in its guide to law schools.

According to the publication, "... this inexpensive, midsize law school has long enjoyed a reputation for academic excellence that exceeds well beyond the borders of its home state."

College of Law Dean N. William Hines said one of the major criteria used were the impressions of students.

"The Princeton Review lets the students speak to students," he said.

Hines said the law school puts a lot of emphasis on giving students individual attention.

"We try very hard to be individual," he said.

"We give a lot of personal attention. A sharp contrast to some of the larger schools. ... We put a lot of effort into trying to help everyone find their niche."

Although Hines is pleased with the recognition, he said it wouldn't be right to get carried away.

"I'm glad that our students are pleased," he said.

"If they responded negatively, I'd be concerned."

Second-year law student Brad Obermeier said getting the students' opinions is an extremely important aspect to consider when looking at law schools.

"They are the best judge of what we will experience at law school," he said.

John Wicks, MBA and second-year law student, said he agrees with the school's high ranking.

"I think (the UI law school) has gotten the recognition it deserved," he said.

The Review also considers the UI law school one the least expensive with its annual tuition for residents totaling $4,137 and $11,454 for nonresidents.

The UI College of Law is listed as "selective" by the review.

It lists the median GPA as 3.45 and shows the acceptance rate as 32 percent.

FLOOD PROTECTION BANK SLATED WEST OF VOXMAN MUSIC BUILDING

UI planners take on beautification, bicycle issues

Stacy Forrest
The Daily Iowan

More parking, flood protection, campus improvements and the bicycle policy were discussed at the Campus Planning Committee meeting Thursday.

A flood protection bank is planned for the southeast corner of Voxman Music Building. The area will be raised to ground level to prohibit flooding.

"One of the benefits of this (bank) is that it will be a walkway and be made to look like a natural part of the campus," said Larry Wilson, associate director of UI Planning and Administrative Services.

A concern with the project is the re-routing of students using the walkways near Voxman Music Building, Wilson said. However, there will be temporary alternate routes.

Another improvement will provide more parking near Clapp Recital Hall. This project will result in a 118-space parking lot just west of the hall and will require the relocation of the entrance from Riverside Drive.

"The relocation of the entrance will consolidate and simplify the existing entrance," Wilson said.

Walkway repair, more bicycle parking and landscape renovation outside Phillips Hall on Iowa Avenue are other areas of concern for the committee.

"We are planning to add 56 bike stalls outside of Phillips Hall since it is a high-need area," Wilson said.

One of the main problems in planning bicycle stalls is distinguishing where students can park their bikes, he said.

According to the UI's bicycle regulations, bicycles attached to or rested against trees, shrubs, handrails, handicap parking meters or any other university facility can be removed and/or the owner can be fined.

Another concern of the committee is the operational violations of bicyclists, which include reckless operation around pedestrians.

Public Safety officers are stopping and advising bicyclists that are in violation of the regulations.

"There are so many people, that making this policy work is going to take some time," said Chuck Green, director of the UI Department of Public Safety.

Women engineers recruit in their field

Melanie Mesaros
The Daily Iowan

Trying to get a marble to roll through a tube of newspaper for at least six seconds was a challenge posed to local high school students by UI engineers Thursday to promote engineering as a career.

The experiment was part of a volunteer project by the UI's Society of Women Engineers said Kandy Thorsen, a UI junior majoring in mechanical engineering.

Thorsen and Mandy Alaks, a UI junior majoring in electrical engineering, spoke to physics classes at City High School, 200 Morningside Drive, about various kinds of engineering and worked with students on an experiment.

"I hope to get some more people interested and a lot more knowledgeable about engineering," Alaks said.

Engineers also went to West High, 2901 Melrose Ave., and Regina High School, 21509 Rochester Ave., to educate students about the expectations in engineering at the college level.

"When I was in high school I wish someone would have talked to me because I had no idea what to expect," Thorsen said.

City High physics teacher Marty Cory said the engineers held the same project last year. He said the activity was a good opportunity to promote women in science and hear about the different types of engineers.

"A large percentage of our kids go into engineering-related fields," he said.

The experiment was designed with specific goals in mind, Alaks said. "Our purpose is to introduce each (student) into different things you will encounter in engineering such as trial and error and team work," she said.

Carly Delso-Saavedra/The Daily Iowan

"Where is it? Where did it go?" asks Jenny Bresk, a senior at City High School, while constructing a tunnel during the Great Marble Race, sponsored by the UI Society of Women Engineers. Bresk, along with Chris Bircker and Ryan Murphy, race the clock in order to meet the required 6-7-second run without losing the marble.

Alaks said the students were put into groups by their teacher to reinforce the idea of teamwork. She said this makes the experiment's atmosphere similar to the real world of engineering.

City High senior Molly Nolan said she has always been interested in engineering.

"It was kind of neat to hear and actually see women engineers," she said.

City High senior Yuani Ruiz said it wasn't surprising the engineers were women.

"I have friends who are women engineers. It is nothing new to anybody," he said.

Cory said the physics classes he teaches reflect the growth in women entering the science field.

"We have almost gender equity. We don't see the usual bias," Cory said.

Although the UI engineers were from the Society of Women Engineers, Thorsen said the goal of the program was to encourage engineering as a career option for everyone, not just women.

"We want to get people interested in engineering. Not just women, men also," said Thorsen.

Media Day emphasizes modern education

Mark Panagakis
The Daily Iowan

Displays at New Media Day on Thursday were full of brand-new technological developments and user-friendly sales representatives, but the buzzwords were "multimedia" and "education."

"We fit in well here," said Michelle Brocardo of Adobe Software. "Adobe's products shine in the areas of multimedia and graphics. Media is what Adobe is all about. We're more of a technology and engineering company as opposed to marketing."

That sentiment was echoed by many of the vendors at the computer lover's paradise.

"We're looking at new and novel ways of doing what we've been doing," said programmer Robert McBurney of UI's Second Look Software, based out of Weeg Computing Center. McBurney is the programmer who spun Arachnid, a Web site creation tool.

Apple Computers previewed three new products, including QuickTime VR, a program which can turn a series of photos into a 360-degree panorama, explored via mouse.

QuickTime VR is revolutionary because it allows a near-virtual reality image to be shrunk to the size of a floppy disk, said Brent Hayward, Apple Senior Systems Engineer.

"You don't need any special hardware; it's all software-based," he said. "And you can sit down and work with it right away."

VR will retail at $499, while a more complete package including a digital camera will retail at $799.

Also on display was QuickDraw 3D, an improvement on the QuickDraw graphics system which is built into all color Macintoshes. QuickDraw 3D will allow midrange Macs to run high-end graphics and animation programs.

Silicon Graphics ran many demos during the morning, including one on Alias, a graphics program that was used in "Jurassic Park." Indy, a computer the size of a small PC, was also displayed.

Adobe Systems displayed PageMaker 6.0, a publishing program which was improved with a built-in graphics tool, and Aftereffects, a 2D animation program which adds special effects to graphics and animation files. Aftereffects will retail for $9.95, with an upgrade at $19.95.

Prentice Hall, publisher of many textbooks, also helps scout out innovative ideas for bringing learning to the computer. Two of them are Academic Authorware and Academic Director — programs which allow anyone to create interactive tutorials and presentations.

"Our role is to support the creation of intellectual property," Prentice Hall representative Brent Hayward, an Apple Computers representative, demonstrates the use of video conferencing at the New Media Day in the Union Thursday. Hayward explains how the technology in Apple's video system can be useful for doctors to share information simultaneously from remote locations.

Robert Kern said. "We are in the business of finding, distributing and helping educational materials."

Despite rankings, Dole enjoys support

Jay Dee

The Daily Iowan

Despite a drop in the polls and the threat of Colin Powell entering the race, members of Sen. Bob Dole's Iowa presidential campaign remain confident in his ability to carry the state on caucus night.

In Des Moines Register polls, Dole's support fell from 57 percent in May to 40 percent in September.

Steve Gibbs, director of field operations for Dole's Iowa campaign, was not concerned by the decline.

"There was no way anyone was going to hold above 50 percent," he said. "We still feel good with a 2-to-1 lead over the nearest rival," Gibbs said.

Dole's nearest rival is Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. Andrea Andrews, Gramm's Iowa communications director, said the recent poll, as well as Gramm's strong showing in the Ames straw poll, proves momentum is in Gramm's favor. Gramm tied Dole, R-Kan., at the Ames event.

"Our support is far reaching and deep," Andrews said. "I think Dole was complacent."

The Dole-Grumm race may be shaping up to be a battle between moderates and conservatives.

"Grumm has been consistently conservative," Andrews said. "Dole is a proud moderate."

Margaret McDonald, Dole's Johnson County chairperson, said Dole has proven himself as a worthy candidate.

"I'm a moderate Republican, and he's my choice," she said.

McDonald held an organizational meeting for Dole Wednesday in Coralville. Nearly 20 Republicans attended the meeting to select precinct organizers for the campaign.

McDonald worked on Dole's 1988 presidential campaign. She said she feels even better about Dole's chances in 1996.

McDonald said Dole's 1988 campaign was almost totally focused on Iowa, while Dole's 1996 campaign is organizing nationwide.

"(The campaign) is just about where it should be," she said.

Other GOP campaigns, however, said Dole's supporters could be persuaded to support other candidates.

"Dole has a lot of soft support," Katie Gillette, a spokesperson for Lamar Alexander, said. "There is evidence that he's not as strong as people thought."

Gillette said Dole's declining poll numbers show Republicans are looking for candidates not tied to Washington.

Gibbs, however, said every poll he has seen has shown Republicans feel favorably toward Dole. He said Dole's approval rating extremely high.

Gibbs also said Dole is running well in New Hampshire, New York and South Carolina — the first primary state in the South.

"Grumm is hardly on the map in New Hampshire," he said.

Dole supporters were not concerned about a potential Republican presidential campaign from Powell either.

"You don't just come in overnight," McDonald said. "Organization counts for something. Money counts for something."

"We'd welcome Colin Powell in the Republican Party," she said, "but maybe his time (to run) is down the road."

Dole, Gramm and Alexander will be in Des Moines Saturday to address the annual meeting of Iowans for Tax Relief. Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar, Pennsylvania Sen. Arlen Specter, commentator Pat Buchanan and businessman Morry Taylor will also speak at the event. Powell is on tour for his book.

L.A. gang member arrested for alleged slaying of toddler

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A paroled killer was arrested Thursday in the slaying of a 3-year-old girl who was shot when the car she was riding in took a wrong turn onto a dead end known as the "Avenue of the Assassins."

Vincent Caldera, 23, was arrested late Wednesday and his home near the shooting scene was searched early Thursday. He was booked for investigation of murder and attempted murder and held without bail.

Authorities implored the public to overcome fears of Caldera's street gang, the Avenues, and help identify three or four other young men believed involved.

"This is intolerable," said Mayor Richard Riordan. "Angelenos must simply not accept living in fear as part of their lives."

The toddler, Stephanie Kuhen, was one of six people in a Ford Thunderbird early Sunday when driver Tim Stone strayed onto the dead-end street in the Cypress Park neighborhood northeast of downtown. Unprovoked, suspected gang members encircled the car and opened fire before Stone got it turned around and drove off.

Early snow may put freeze on fall harvest

(AP) — A crossing guard dressed as Santa Claus and a radio station played "White Christmas" as summer snows fell, though farmers fearing a crop-killing freeze Thursday had to take things more seriously.

"We'll just have to play the hand we've been dealt and hope for the best," said Larry Greathouse, a farmer near Garden City, Kan., concerned his milo and soybeans could be devastated.

The National Weather Service issued freeze warnings as lows were forecast in the teens across much of farm country.

Farmers were forced by a wet spring to plant crops later than usual, leaving immature plants vulnerable to an early frost.

The clouds, cold rain and wet snow of Wednesday were largely gone Thursday, bringing some sunshine. But the clearing skies raised the specter of an overnight freeze, since cloud cover can act like an insulating blanket.

Roger Elmore, crop specialist at the University of Nebraska extension office, said some soybean farmers could lose up to 50 percent of their yields. He said a freeze — anything below 27 degrees for more than four hours — would cause about a 25 percent loss on more mature plants.

He said the last 18 days of a soybean plant's maturation were critical.

Squalor infests Balkan refugees

Jovana Gec

BANJA LUKA — Fighting waned Thursday around the northern Serb stronghold of Banja Luka, where tens of thousands of refugees battled filth, flies and hunger in a desperate struggle to survive.

For about 2,000 of these refugees displaced by Croat and Muslim onslaughts, home has become a former army building where flies swarmed around hundreds sprawled on straw and the air was filled with the stench of unwashed people and sweaty horses.

A man sleeping on the straw was too exhausted to be roused by the flies buzzing around him. A hungry child cried beside him.

"He hasn't eaten for 24 hours," said Rosa Strbac, pointing to her wailing 13-month-old son. "I cannot wash my children or feed them."

She, her husband and their five children, the oldest 12, fled enemy forces advancing on Bosanska Krupa on Saturday and came to Banja Luka on Wednesday night.

Like most of the refugees, they brought only personal belongings hastily thrown onto a horse-drawn cart.

They and others left their belongings on the wagons, covering them with plastic sheeting to protect them from the rain. There was no room inside — several refugees complained that they were packed so tightly at night they had trouble breathing. One of them said an elderly man died overnight next to a child.

In a nearby school, old people and children slept on school desks. Many of them were crying, their faces etched with humiliation and despair, as local officials displayed them to reporters on an organized tour.

Samir Duharkic, right, 2, and his brother Alen, 6, sit and play in the window of their family's ground floor apartment in central Sarajevo Thursday. The boys' father is a Bosnian government soldier on active duty. In the past five days a Bosnian government and Bosnian Croat offensive has captured some 4,000 square miles of Serb-held territory in western Bosnia.

The scenes of despair multiplied in makeshift shelters housing as many as 100,000 refugees. Hundreds of hungry and dirty people mingled with horses in knee-deep mud in the yard of one improvised refugee center in Rakovacke Bare, on the northeastern outskirts of Banja Luka.

Local aid officials were overwhelmed by the masses who swamped Banja Luka over the past week.

"We don't have enough food for everyone," said Miroslav Vjesic of the local Red Cross, as dozens of refugees jostled for handouts of canned goods. Medicine and other staples were in short supply, too, aid officials said.

Yasushi Akashi, the top U.N. official in the former Yugoslavia, said Muslim-led government forces were continuing to fight in the north, but not around Banja Luka. The focus of the battles shifted instead to Doboj, a Serb-held town 45 miles northeast of Banja Luka.

Doboj is an important road and rail junction, and the offensive there by government and Bosnian Croat forces appears designed to surround and isolate Banja Luka rather than capture it.

Bosnian Serb radio in Banja Luka said Serb units, apparently assisted by 1,000 paramilitary troops from Serbia, had halted the Muslim-Croat attacks on all fronts in northern, western and central Bosnia.

Local television showed their leader Zeljko Raznatovic, better known as Arkan, promising to help the rebels defend the region. Arkan's units have been blamed for some of the worst atrocities in Croatia and Bosnia.

APPOINTMENT DOESN'T MEAN ENDORSEMENT

Quayle to chair campaign PAC

John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a dramatic overture to social conservatives, GOP presidential front-runner Bob Dole announced Thursday that Dan Quayle would take charge of a political committee Dole has used to support Republican candidates for nearly two decades.

In becoming chairman of Campaign America, the former vice president did not endorse Dole's presidential campaign. But Dole aides predicted the association would solidify Dole's standing with Christian conservatives, an important Republican primary constituency.

"I can think of no American who is better qualified to lead the battle for Republican victories in the vital elections that lie ahead," Dole, the Senate majority leader, said in a statement. "Dan Quayle has been a trailblazer for issues and ideas that sparked the Republican revolution of 1994. At the helm of Campaign America, he is sure to keep up that fight."

Quayle was on the verge of entering the 1996 presidential race himself earlier this year, but abruptly changed his plans after assessing the daunting fund-raising and organizational hurdles. He later ruled out running for Indiana governor next year but said he would like to seek the presidency down the road.

Quayle has been looking for a way to raise his political profile, and should get the opportunity through Campaign America. Dole had used the political action committee to bankroll his travels on behalf of GOP candidates while expanding his own political network.

Quayle also has been interested in finding a way to help Dole short of an outright endorsement, which he considers premature, according to a close political adviser who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Tapping Quayle to lead the PAC is similar to an overture Dole made to economic conservatives earlier this year in arranging for Jack Kemp, the former congressman and housing secretary, to be named chairman of a Republican commission studying proposals for dramatic tax reform.

"Senator Dole is clearly looking for lots of ways to send messages to the conservative base of the party," said Gary Bauer, a former Reagan White House aide who runs the Family Research Council, a social conservative group. "I think the biggest impact will be a sense that Dole is for real in his more conservative stance, that he is putting a great deal of money where his mouth is."

Since the 1987-88 cycle, Dole has used Campaign America to contribute more than $2 million to scores of state, local and federal Republican candidates, according to computerized Federal Election Commission records.

In last year's campaigns alone, Campaign America contributed nearly $770,000 to 1994 GOP campaigns and committees. It has about $1.7 million in the bank and already has contributed $150,000 to 1995 and 1996 GOP hopefuls.

Clinton pledges joining of schools via Internet

Tom Raum
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — President Clinton proposed Thursday every school in the nation be linked to the Internet by 2000, a government-industry venture he likened to "a high-tech barn raising."

Clinton called the initiative "an enormous effort," comparable to building the nation's networks of railroads and highways.

He said for schoolchildren it was "just as essential as teaching them to read and write and the new math."

He was following up the announcement, made at a science museum in San Francisco, with a radio interview in Los Angeles in which he was to take questions sent in by users of the Internet, the global computer network.

Administration officials said specifics of the plan would be announced later in the fall, but the overall goal was Internet access for all elementary and high schools.

The project would begin with public schools and could also be expanded to include private ones, said Jonathan Sallet, Commerce Department director of strategic planning.

He said it was hard to put a price on the project because the full plan hadn't been completed. But he said the project would rely heavily on grants from business, especially from computer and communications companies.

With a furious debate now going on in Congress over budget cuts, the administration was wary of trying to come up with even a general estimate of what the government might have to pay. In addition to the private grants, local and state money would play a greater role than federal funds, officials said.

Clinton was on his 20th trip as president to California, a crucial state to his re-election strategy.

He noted all of California's 12,000 public schools will be linked together and through the Internet by the end of this year — paid for by a combination of funds from the state and grants from information and computer companies.

"If that can be done in California, we can do it in the rest of America," he asserted.

"We certainly credit the efforts of Gov. (Pete) Wilson," White House spokesperson Mike McCurry said, noting the California effort was being spearheaded by the Republican governor who is also a GOP presidential hopeful.

Clinton said his ultimate goal was a computer in every classroom which could in turn be connected to computers throughout the world.

Now only 3 percent of classrooms in the nation have computers, the administration said.

"I want to get the children of America hooked on education through computers," Clinton said after meeting with a group of third-, fourth- and fifth-graders. "Children with access to computers learn faster and learn better."

"Just as essential as teaching them to read and write and the new math, our mission is to connect every school in America by the year 2,000," Clinton said. "It will take the same tenacity and effort that it took to build the nation's railroads. So let us begin."

At a science museum and high-tech center here, the Exploratorium, Clinton and Vice President Al Gore discussed the Internet and computers with school children who showed them how they could connect with computers in other countries.

Clinton also was adding about $2 million to his re-election treasury, with $1,000-a-plate fund-raisers in San Francisco and in Los Angeles. He held similar fund-raisers earlier this week in Philadelphia, Miami and Denver in a cross-country blitz which ends today.

Teen births on promising decline

A.J. Hostetler
Associated Press

ATLANTA — America's teen-age birth rate dropped for the second year in a row, the government said Thursday.

Stephanie Ventura, a statistician at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said the reasons for the drop aren't clear, but she speculated more teen-agers are using condoms because of the risk of AIDS.

The birth rate among American teen-agers dropped 2 percent in 1993, the most recent year examined by the CDC. The rate fell 2 percent in 1992.

The figures mark a reversal of the sharp increases in the late 1980s, when the birth rate among teens jumped 5 percent or more a year.

"What's happened is noteworthy and encouraging," said Ventura, a statistician with the CDC's National Center for Health Statistics. But "we can't be complacent" because the teen-age population is growing.

For every 1,000 women ages 15 to 19 in 1993, 59.6 gave birth, down from 60.7 reported the previous year.

The drop actually occurred only among teens ages 18 to 19, whose rate declined to 92.1 births per 1,000 from 94.5 in 1992. For girls ages 15 to 17, the birth rate was unchanged at 37.8.

THE CONGREGATIONAL UCC CHURCH OFFERS THE "WHO IS JESUS" COURSE

A group of theologians who make up what is called "The Jesus Seminar" have written controversial books and articles that have challenged conventional beliefs about Jesus. They have raised the question about the difference between the Jesus of faith and the Jesus of history in such a way that it forces one to rethink their beliefs about the central figure of our religious faith. —Was Jesus even born in Bethlehem? Did the disciples invent the Last Supper and read it back into history? How many years was Easter Sunday? These are some of the questions with which we will wrestle. Each member of the class will be encouraged to answer for him or herself the question Jesus asks in Mark 8:29, "Who do you say that I am?"

There will be a fee of $10 to cover the cost of our text: MEETING JESUS AGAIN FOR THE FIRST TIME, by Marcus Borg. The Rev. Dr. Bruce W. Fischer will be teaching this 7-week class beginning October 1, on Sunday evenings from 7:00 to 9:00 at The Congregational United Church of Christ at 30 North Clinton Street. To register for this class call the church at 337-4301, or clip this ad and write your name and phone number on it and mail it to the church address.

11 CATS KILLED SO FAR

Lions on the loose, officials work to secure area

Hilary Groutage
Associated Press

LAVA HOT SPRINGS, Idaho — The elementary school was closed and dozens of law enforcement officers scrambled to stop lions, tigers and crossbred cats Thursday after they escaped from a private wild-animal compound.

"There's been 11 and possibly 12 killed and we know that three are still loose," said a Bannock County sheriff's dispatcher, who would not give her name. She said officials were hedging on the numbers because there were reports "a few more" of the big cats had escaped Thursday.

She said the owners of the privately owned compound, called Ligertown, were attacked by at least one of the cats after they escaped about 9:30 p.m. Wednesday. "Liger" is a term for a cross between a lion and a tiger.

The owners, Robert Fieber and Dotti Martin, were treated for minor injuries at Pocatello Regional Medical Center. They had tangled with authorities in past years over their wild-animal holdings. No other injuries were reported.

The compound is located just outside the southeastern Idaho town of about 420 people, 28 miles southeast of Pocatello.

About 50 sheriff's deputies from surrounding counties, SWAT teams, Idaho Department of Fish and Game officers and Idaho State Police troopers were on the scene.

A helicopter equipped with a heat-sensing device was being used to help search for the cats, which one deputy said appeared to weigh between 450 and 550 pounds.

"They're full-grown lions," the dispatcher said.

Late Thursday morning, a large male lion could be seen perched atop a shack within the compound, roaring loud enough to be heard a quarter-mile away. Two females were with him. Two sharpshooters were in place atop a van nearby, but their guns were not raised.

Lava Elementary School, with about 140 students, was closed Thursday morning.

"We want to keep everybody inside as much as possible," the dispatcher said.

In 1984, federal and state authorities in Oregon raided a game ranch Fieber had operated there and charged him with 54 counts of animal cruelty. He pleaded no contest to four misdemeanor counts alleging food sanitation violations and the other charges were dropped.

Feminism — the 'F-word' everyone should say

Everyone knows that commercial where a man looks out from the television and says sincerely, "I'm not a doctor but I play one on TV." Well, many women today are using the same phrase to talk about themselves. The man in the commercial thinks he can talk about medicine because he pretends to be a doctor. Women today think they can talk about feminist issues because they pretend NOT to be feminists. The phrase, "I'm not a feminist but ..." is uttered by too many mouths because some women still think feminism is a dirty word.

The dictionary definition of feminist is: "believing in equality for all women in social and political arenas." That's pretty vague, so here's a little quiz (in true women's magazine style) to finally clear things up and outline what it means to fess up to the F-word.

YOU ARE A FEMINIST IF:

- You get a bad taste in your mouth every time you hear about strip bars.
- You believe that women, in any area, are just as good as men.
- You would not have sex with Hugh Grant for $40.
- You would not have sex with anyone for $40.
- You curse the women on the covers of Cosmo for being so physically perfect, and then draw facial and armpit hair on them in black permanent marker.
- You have facial or armpit hair. (Hey — if you

- You use birth control.
- You raise your hand in class.
- You care about the well-being of other women.
- You own your own business (an arena mostly dominated by men).
- You think women should have orgasms during sex just as many times as men do.
- You make a clear distinction between your body and your mind.
- You think Barbie's physique is an unrealistic goal and refuse to use it as a gauge for your own personal appearance.
- You work.
- You don't work because you want to stay home and raise your children.

- You don't work because you volunteer your time for others.
- You believe "chicks" refers to young members of the poultry family, "foxes" to canine-type animals with reddish fur and "babes" to youngsters found in strollers — NOT YOU!
- You like to wear pants.
- You hold a political office. Even if your political platform is "anti-feminist," the fact that women hold offices is based on feminist ideals.
- You believe rape is a crime.
- You voted "no" in the swimsuit competition survey during the "Miss America Pageant."
- You vote for anything.
- You are in charge of something: vice president of your residence hall floor, head of communications in your sorority, picking up the kids in the car pool, news director at a large TV station, passing out flyers for the Equal Rights Amendment, your own life.
- You think June Cleaver is truly fictional.
- You refuse to eat at Hooters.
- You cheer wildly when Wonder Woman captures bad guys with her magic rope and golden bracelets, but absolutely hate her outfit.
- You say no.

- You aren't sitting around waiting for Prince. Charming to whisk you away to domestic bliss.
- You've ever used the words "male chauvinist pig."
- If dinner to you sometimes (or all the time) requires either a can-opener or several little packets of ketchup.
- You think miniskirts, high heels and girdles are from hell.
- You disagree and aren't afraid to say it.

If any one of these situations applies, it should prevent the words, "I'm not a feminist but ..." from crossing any woman's lips. All of these behaviors or attitudes make a woman a full-fledged, card-carrying feminist.

It's dangerous to rely on labels as a means of describing a person, but feminism is not a label. It is a belief based on human rights and respect for a particular gender. Women should be proud of who they are and not afraid to describe themselves with the F-word.

Risque ads could be used in school — steamy sex sells math and science to kids

Some people say advertising has become too provocative.

Calvin Klein was recently forced to pull ads for jeans after some said his ads showing adolescents in states of undress were pornographic. They had jeans on, of course, but nothing else.

This apparent defeat was actually a victory for Calvin Klein. He got free publicity, had provocative ads displayed before the public without paying for them and his company and product were labeled in an erotic way.

Of course, the company has peddled its product by equating jeans with sex ever since actress Brooke Shields suggestively pledged in ads that nothing came between her and her Calvin Klein jeans.

Thanks to Calvin Klein, the American public cannot think of jeans without thinking of sex — and vice versa. But it makes little sense because wearing jeans inherently hinders the whole sexual process.

But companies have long linked products to hedonistic pleasure, even though there's no direct link between sex and cars, beer or soft drinks. It's a wonder everybody hasn't jumped on the sexual advertising bandwagon.

For example, newspapers — with declining circulation and a stodgy image compared to television — could advertise by showing a woman in bed with alluringly tousled hair, reading the morning paper saying, "I like it first thing in the morning."

Would this ad really tell anything about the product? No. But it might pique people's prurient interest, causing

GUEST EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Erotic Calvin Klein models could inspire teens to learn more than the temptations of sex.

them to buy something they otherwise might find boring.

Look at the recent launch of Microsoft's Windows 95 computer operating system. Television ads for Windows 95 are set to the Rolling Stone's song "Start Me Up." You don't have to listen to this song closely to hear that its primary theme is painful, burning lust.

Yet Windows 95 isn't getting anybody but Bill Gates lucky. By tying lascivious lyrics to software, Microsoft has made the product exciting.

Those who campaign against sexual content in advertising say it gets children unnecessarily interested in sex, which could lead them into temptation and harmful situations.

But tying sexual ads to computer operating systems isn't such a bad thing. So what if these ads get children interested in computers? It's good that children learn how to operate computers so they can learn new math and language skills, and how to access pornography via the Internet.

Perhaps sexual advertising — this force of evil — could be turned into something positive. The ad agency that created Calvin Klein's now-banned ads could whip up something steamy to attract kids to math and science. Adolescents would then be attracted to these subjects in the same way smaller children are attracted to learning letters and numbers by watching cartoons and puppets on "Sesame Street."

Of course, sexy math and science ads would only be effective if adults forbid adolescents to watch them. If everyone praised the ads for doing something good, kids wouldn't care and would turn away.

This is the same sort of secret campaign going on to get kids to read Mark Twain's classic, "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn." High-minded educators have recently proposed banning the book for young adults. They say it is racist because it frequently uses what has come to be known through the O.J. Simpson trial as "the N-word."

The novel is far from racist; it shows a young white boy's gradual realization that blacks, who he thought were an inferior people, are no different from him. It's a lesson that still needs to be taught today.

But these high-minded educators can't praise the book to get kids to read it. They have to make it dangerous, they have to make it forbidden.

Calling the book racist is almost as true as saying the book is pornographic because Huck rafts down the Mississippi with nothing between him and his Calvin Kleins.

Dualing religious identities deserve individual voices

I never quite know what to tell people when they ask me what religion I am. I became a Quaker but was born Jewish. Kind of. While people never actually come up to me and ask, "What religion are you?" (because our society still tends to avoid topics like religion, sex and politics), it does sometimes come up in conversations around the Jewish High Holy Days (which are upon us) or Christmas (Dec. 25). A conversation might go something like this:

Lea Haravon
appears alternate Fridays on the
Viewpoints Pages

Non-Quaker Person: Do you want to get together on Sunday morning?

Me: No, I am going to Quaker meeting at that time.

NQP: Oh, you are a Quaker?

Me: Yes.

NQP: Oh, cool! So like, you don't use electricity and stuff?

Me: You are thinking of the Amish. Quakers believe in simplicity and non-violence. Besides, I am Jewish.

NQP: Oh.

Or, like this:

Non-Jewish person: Are you going home for Christmas?

Me: Not everybody celebrates Christmas.

NJP: Oh, Yeah. (pause) Will you be going home for Hanukkah?

Me: Hanukkah falls during the last week of classes this year. Besides, Hanukkah is not a very important holiday to Jews. But I do celebrate Christmas.

NJP: Oh. So you're not Jewish.

Me: No, I am.

NJP: Oh.

Or, like this:

Jewish Person: Are you going home for the High Holy Days?

Me: No. My family doesn't celebrate them.

JP: Oh, I'm sorry. I thought you were Jewish.

Me: I am Jewish.

JP: But your family isn't?

Me: No, they are.

JP: Oh.

I have neither multiple personalities, nor am I trying to intentionally confuse people I talk to. All of these conversations have happened, and all of the statements in them are true.

When I go to New Year services Sunday night, I will feel the slight anxiety I always feel when I step into a synagogue. These are my people. I belong here. And yet, I don't.

I think what many people I have spoken to do not understand is, for some Jews — particularly European Jews who survived World War II — a big part of being Jewish is being ignorant of much of the religion, even when one is raised in the culture. My parents grew up during the war in an extremely anti-Semitic European country. My mother was baptized Catholic and educated in a convent for this reason. She celebrated Christmas as a child, and so did I. I have never seen my parents in a temple. Like me, I don't think they'd really know what to do there. They know very little about the Jewish religion, and subsequently passed very little of it on to me. Fear kept them from our religion. Secrecy and ignorance kept me from it.

I remember coming home from first grade one day, asking my father what to say when people asked me what religion I was (unlike adults, my first-grade classmates blatantly violated the social norm of not discussing religion). "Tell them that we don't practice a religion," my father said. That is what I did. I did not find out I was Jewish until much later. But even now that I "know," I still sometimes wonder if I am "Jewish enough." Do I get to use this word to describe myself, or is it reserved for those who got the education and know the prayers?

When I go to New Year services Sunday night, I will feel the slight anxiety I always feel when I step into a synagogue. These are my people. I belong here. And yet, I don't. I don't know the songs, I can't read or speak Hebrew. And I worry those sitting around me who were raised Jewish will notice my silence and think "she doesn't belong." And I don't.

But I do. And I insist on being there, trying to uncover some knowledge I would have had, had my parents not been so scarred by the war that they were afraid to reveal to me this part of my identity.

Sometimes I wish I could find someone who would tell me that it is OK to say that I am Jewish — and mean it — even though I don't know the prayers. That part of being Jewish means, for some of us, being raised in ignorance, engendered by fear of anti-Semitic repercussions. I couldn't explain this to my curious first-grade friends, but hopefully I can begin to understand this now and explain it to myself. I am getting the words.

can be used randomly — there are no real guidelines."

Gothe said that while the two do not have sex during the performance, the audience could perceive their breathing and actions any way they wanted.

"They are just words on a floor, yet how people interpret them gives meaning to the words," Gothe said.

The policy not only puts limits on what is exposed to students, but limits professors as well, Gothe said.

"We should trust our faculty to have enough compassion to know what's important," Gothe said. "It's easy in a large institution to think something doesn't affect you, but eventually, it could."

The school bell and the chains were symbolic of the way people allow themselves to be regulated by society, Hachiyani said.

"We chain ourselves to the policy," Hachiyani said. "We're creating space to reflect on the policy — to think about it, make a decision and understand why they made that decision."

During Thursday's performance, Gothe scrubbed the female-oriented words and Hachiyani scrubbed male-oriented words. Throughout performances in the past two days, they reversed the sexual-orientation of the words they scrubbed to portray a message: the policy affects all sexualities.

"We're not saying that we're heterosexual or homosexual," Gothe said. "It covers all sexualities, it's very inclusive."

At the end of the performance, the artists put their dirtied jumpsuits back on hangers to symbolize spectators.

"The suits are people observing, and how those numbers are growing," Gothe said.

ALBINO

At CU, Albino has been instrumental in making the health science center one of the leading centers in the state, with 30 percent of all health care centered there, she said.

She said the CU health science center has been changing along with the changing face of health care, just as the UIHC has.

Efforts to network and partner with centers in Denver have taken place along with communication with Congress on health-care issues, she said.

Albino, who is the only candidate named thus far who is president of a university, said she has dealt with some of the most difficult situations in higher education today.

"The bottom line is that I have experience and a full understanding of the task on hand," she said.

Albino, who is the chairperson of the president's commission of the NCAA, said one of the difficult situations in higher education is gender equity in sports. The UI was a leader in sports equity and has made a strong commitment in that area, she said.

Albino said a balance between programs must be reached to ensure the continuation of equity.

"We don't want to cut one program to ensure the needs of another," she said.

Increased involvement in undergraduate programs was one of the accomplishments Albino achieved during her presidency, she said, with a substantial increase in undergraduate enrollment.

The undergraduate program at the UI is impressive, she said, and she would take measures to "strengthen and bolster" it by using technology to "expand and enhance the instruction we deliver."

The inevitable result is that our process takes longer," she said.

Issues surrounding Albino include allegations that Colorado Gov. Roy Romer and some faculty asked her to resign from her position as president of CU and that the Boulder Faculty Assembly gave her rankings of D+, D- and D.

DATING GAME

said before the game. "Sure, I'm doing it to find a date. You gotta live a little."

UI sophomore Anah McMahon, the evening's bachelorette, said members of her sorority talked her into being a contestant, but the prizes were also intriguing.

"I'm in it for the free limo ride," she said backstage. "I'm playing for fun. If Brian or I don't like our dates, we're going out."

"At the start of the game, contestants and audience members danced along to the original music from the TV show, 'The Dating Game.' The bachelor and bachelorette then sat up on stage and asked contestants the often-provocative questions that helped them pick their future date.

UI sophomore Allyson Goetschel, who belted out a version of R. Kelly's "Bump and Grind" in response to a question about "what kind of music puts her in the mood," became Robinson's chosen bachelorette.

"I didn't expect to win, but I'm really excited," she said. "I needed a man."

Robinson said he is looking forward to his date next week.

"I had a great time. I think it's a good idea that we're going out in pairs," he said. "Anah and I had a great time talking backstage. If nothing else, we'll have a good time next week."

After the bachelor picked his date, McMahon began by asking, "Where there's smoke there's fire. What could I do to set your heart aflame?"

Bachelor No. 1, UI junior Anthony Catalano, answered, "First of all you'd have to cook a good pasta and second of all, we'd work it off."

Catalano's spontaneous answers made McMahon choose him for her date.

"He's a nice guy," she said after the game. "I'm very happy with my choice."

Host of the game, Mark Nolte, a bartender and promotional chairperson at the Field House bar, said he hopes seeking singles will start to pour in for the weekly game.

maker put in yesterday."

"Frankly, I have doubts about feeling down because I have cancer. I doubt I could look any better on chemo. I doubt I could be any nicer about having cancer. I doubt I could be any classier while being on chemo. But I will not let cancer put me down."

The project has special meaning for Karen Godecke, a Cedar Rapids resident whose 15-year-old son is a cancer survivor.

"It is very well-done — it's like a shrine to the experiences of these children who are sometimes overlooked," she said.

More than 150 children, some of whom have died since the project began, participated in "Windows." It will be on display through Oct. 15.

This project gave these children a voice to say what they were feeling about their illness," Gwen Senio, coordinator of the Child Life Program, said. "The exhibit is really an emotionally moving experience."

In a series of workshops which began last November, artist Jane Gilmore met with the children every Friday. She invited them to create drawings and writings on the foil about their experiences, feelings and fantasies.

"At first I was nervous about the project, but the children handle their illnesses really well," said Gilmore, a UI graduate and art professor at Mount Mercy College in Cedar Rapids.

Gilmore received a $3,476 grant by an Artist's Project Grant from the Iowa Arts Council with additional funding from Project Art at the UIHC. Gilmore said the purpose of the project was to give hospitalized children and their families an outlet to open up and use their imagination as a survival tool.

"When I would stop and think about their different situations, it would make me sad," Gilmore said. "The kids were so matter-of-fact about their illnesses and their energy was so positive that sometimes I didn't know if they were the patient or a sibling (of a patient)."

Mark Towner, interim director for Project Art, said "Windows" is the most extensive artwork ever done for the UIHC.

"People are talking about this because it's such a strong piece about real people and real situations," Towner said. "It is the words and pictures the children have made expressing the pains and pleasures of being ill."

The project collaboration was completed this summer with the help of artist Rick Edleman. The project will be featured at the AIR Gallery in New York and may also appear in the Olson-Larsen Galleries in Des Moines.

Duplicates of individual tin sheets are available for $75 to help fund the project, Gilmore said. The entire project is also for sale, with the price available on request.

"I think it is fantastic. These brave children must feel so encouraged to let their feelings go," said Coralville resident Margaret Morgan, as she walked through the project.

© 1995 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association

Teachers Personal Annuity® now offers more flexibility with the new Stock Index Account... a variable account specifically developed for the long-term investor who is looking for more growth opportunities and is willing to accept more risk.

When you're planning for the future, every dollar counts. Now you have more choices to help you make the most of your after-tax retirement dollars. With Teachers Personal Annuity, you can select either our Fixed Account or our new Stock Index Account. Or, you may choose to allocate your money to both accounts. That way you can take advantage of the highly-competitive effective annual interest rate of the Fixed Account and the growth potential offered by the Stock Index Account. With both accounts, taxes on any earnings will be deferred until you withdraw them — which gives you a big edge over taxable accounts. However, if you withdraw money before age 59½, you may have to pay a federal tax penalty in addition to regular income tax. And remember — as a variable annuity, the Stock Index Account doesn't guarantee returns, which will fluctuate over time.

With a low initial investment, no front-end sales charges or transfer fees, and no surrender charge at this time, Teachers Personal Annuity can help bridge the gap between what you've saved and what you'll need during retirement.

convict Simpson of murder. Pre-meditation is required in a first-degree murder conviction. To convict him of second-degree murder, jurors won't have to find that Simpson carefully weighed his actions before committing a murder.

A first-degree murder conviction carries a prison sentence of 25 years to life. For second-degree murder, it's 15 years to life. If Simpson is convicted of multiple murder — a special circumstance — he would face life without parole. Before the trial, prosecutors decided against the death penalty for the special circumstance.

Legal analysts called Ito's decision a stinging defeat for the defense.

"It hurts because one of their concerns would be a compromised verdict in this case by jurors who may feel sympathy for Simpson, but want to convict him of something," Loyola University law professor Laurie Levenson said. "This gives them something."

Early signs show Seattle proposal in the lead

SEATTLE (AP) — With the future of the Seattle Mariners in the balance, a proposal to help build a $325 million stadium for the team led by a scant 310 votes Thursday following a partial count of absentee ballots.

Nearly 36,000 absentee ballots were tallied Thursday to clarify the results of a King County vote. That left the stadium proposal ahead 235,591 to 235,281.

About 15,000 absentee ballots remained to be counted, and no further vote totals were to come Thursday. Final results are to be posted Monday, said John Charles, county manager of records and elections.

Before the additional 35,915 votes were tabulated, the measure led by about 4,000 votes.

"It's not very encouraging for either side," County Executive Gary Locke said. "It been a roller-coaster ride. It's been frustrating and filled with anxiety."

The proposal calls for increasing the county sales tax from 8.2 percent to 8.3 percent to provide $240.8 million in public funds for a retractable-roof stadium.

The King County Council had scheduled an emergency session Friday to consider general-election alternatives if Thursday's count showed the ballot measure had failed. It was not clear late Thursday whether that session would be held.

Silence surrounds dismissal

The Daily Iowan

Thursday's announcement that Pete Kennedy has stepped down from his position as Iowa's women's swimming coach for the past 14 seasons has left a lot of questions unanswered.

One obvious reason for the move may be the team's sub-par performance since going undefeated in 1987. Last season Iowa finished last in the Big Ten and swam to an overall record of 1-7.

Another possibility that has surfaced in media reports is that past and present Kennedy swimmers were unhappy with their coach. Sophomore Jami Strauss had decided not to swim this season if Kennedy was still coaching, according to one report. Supposedly team captains had taken several complaints about Kennedy to UI Women's Athletic Director Dr. Christine Grant the past three years.

But Grant is not talking. Neither is Kennedy, Kennedy's lawyers or the women on the swim team.

Sophomore Nicole Redmond, who said the team was informed about two weeks ago of the Kennedy move, will not comment on rumors that players had complained about Kennedy in the past.

Redmond also would not comment when asked if the team's reaction was negative or positive.

Senior Rachel Bayster said the Hawkeyes would rather concentrate on the upcoming season.

"We're not commenting on the subject," Bayster said when asked about Kennedy. But, she added, "I don't think there's anything negative about the situation."

Bayster said the team is very excited about the season and are pleased with the appointment of assistant coach Trish Meyer to taking head coach for the season.

Grant, who announced Meyer's promotion and Kennedy's move to other areas of the UI department of sport, health, leisure and physical studies, told The Daily Iowan that it was "time for a change."

In a press release, Grant said, "Dr. Kennedy's teams were very successful, both academically and athletically, in the first years of his tenure at Iowa, and although the academic success of our swim program has continued to be excellent, we have not been as competitive as we would like to be, which I know was very disappointing for Peter."

Grant also doesn't foresee any negative feelings come out of the moves.

"I'm hoping that everything is going to work out very well for everyone concerned," she said.

Junior diver Kelly McCready said she didn't know everything that was going on, but said there were some mixed feelings about the decision.

Kennedy's household is issuing no comment, and calls were directed to his lawyer, Tom Hobart, who said there will be no statements for the time being.

Pirates hand Cubs yet another blow

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Pittsburgh's 1992 trade of John Smiley paid off Thursday night, as the players acquired in the deal — Denny Neagle and Midre Cummings — led the Pirates to a 4-3 victory over the fading Chicago Cubs.

Neagle (13-7) allowed seven hits in seven innings for his second consecutive win after he had gone five weeks without a victory. He struck out seven, walked none and retired his last 10 batters.

Dan Miceli pitched the ninth for his 21st save.

Cummings, who also arrived from the Minnesota Twins three years ago, broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run, two-out single in the sixth inning.

The man who traded Neagle and Cummings for Smiley was Andy MacPhail, then Minnesota's general manager but now the Cubs' president.

MacPhail's current team has lost 10 of 14 and dropped out of the NL wild-card race. Chicago began Thursday 5 1/2 games behind Los Angeles.

Steve Trachsel (6-13) dropped to 2-16 at Wrigley Field in his career.

Three of the four runs he allowed in his six innings were unearned because of two errors by shortstop Shawon Dunston.

Pittsburgh opened the sixth inning with singles by Jay Bell and Carlos Garcia.

After Angelo Encarnacion flied out, Neagle struck out but Bell was caught between second and third.

Dunston, however, threw the ball off Bell's back for an error and Garcia advanced to second.

Cummings then lined a 2-2 pitch to right for only his eighth and ninth RBI this season. He had been hitting .125 with runners in scoring position.

Garcia's RBI single in the second and Dunston's bases-loaded error in the third gave Pittsburgh a 2-0 lead. Luis Gonzalez tied it with a single in the fourth.

NBA TOURNEY

SI hit it right on the nose with idea

A couple of years ago I heard an incredible idea.

Sports Illustrated, trying to spice up the NBA's all-star weekend, suggested a number of replacements for the slug-gish, coma-like Schick Legends game.

Some of the NBA's all-time greats would compete in this sentimental game to recall an era when hardly anybody even watched the NBA.

Instead, the game had to be paused every two minutes when an old-timer would blow out a knee or twist his back the wrong direction.

It was while reading SI that I first heard the idea of a two-on-two tournament. Two or three players would be chosen from each team to represent their squad in what I feel would be even more exciting than the all-star game itself.

Instead of watching East vs. West in a defenseless bore, imagine seeing Scottie Pippen and Michael Jordan take on John Stockton and Karl Malone.

Or perhaps Kenny Anderson and Derek Coleman against Anfernee Hardaway and Shaquille O'Neal.

Actually, I don't know if it would be fair for centers to compete. Teams like the Golden State Warriors — who have several potential superstars — would surely get swatted by a team such as Houston's Drexler and Olajuwon.

Bring on the Big Ten.

The Iowa volleyball team opens its conference season with a pair of home games this weekend.

Tonight the Hawkeyes play host to Minnesota. The Golden Gophers stand at 5-3 this season. Last season, Iowa and Minnesota split two meetings, both teams winning at home. Prior to last year, the Gophers had beaten Iowa seven straight times.

Saturday, Wisconsin invades Iowa City. The Hawkeyes took both games from the Badgers last season. Wisconsin stands 7-5, 0-1 in the Big Ten.

"They're both good teams," junior Katy Fawbush said. "It's our first Big Ten weekend, so we're going to play our hardest and see what hap-

COLORADO VS. TEXAS A&M

Teams use speed as their biggest weapons

John Mossman
Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — Do not adjust your television set. The images you are about to see are being transmitted at normal speed.

Slow-motion replay will be essential when two of the nation's fastest teams meet Saturday on the quick surface of Folsom Field.

No. 3 Texas A&M meets No. 7 Colorado in a game that could have an early bearing on the national championship.

"It looks like a 440 team out there playing," Colorado coach Rick Neuheisel said of the visiting Aggies. "Every time I watch them, I feel like I'm putting the film on fast-forward. They certainly move around the field. That's as fast a team as we've seen for four or five years. Hopefully we can stay with them."

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum, whose team generally is regarded as among the nation's swiftest, said, "I see no difference in our speed and Colorado's. We've both recruited similar athletes and I think we have similar philosophies in trying to recruit speed on both sides of the ball. They present problems covering their receivers, and from an offensive standpoint they present problems trying to get guys open against their secondary and trying to protect against the speed they have in their front seven."

Perhaps the fastest on the field Saturday will be Aggies junior tailback Leeland McElroy, who has taken the early lead in unofficial Heisman Trophy balloting.

McElroy has rushed for 345 yards in two games and leads the nation in all-purpose yards (322.0 per game) and scoring (21.0). He has a career kickoff return average of 39.0, which would easily eclipse the NCAA record of 35.1 set by USC's Anthony Davis (1972-74). He averages nearly 10 yards every time he touches the ball and scores a touchdown every 10 touches.

"Certainly, he's a gifted player," Neuheisel said. "I see exactly why he's being pumped for the Heisman."

He's one of those once-in-every-so-often players who comes along and can really control a game by himself. He's just unique."

Slocum compares the 5-foot-11, 202-pound McElroy to Detroit Lions star Barry Sanders.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux became the major leagues' first 18-game winner, allowing five hits in eight innings as the Atlanta Braves beat the New York Mets 3-0.

Maddux (18-2) struck out nine and walked none before Mark Wohlers finished with a perfect ninth for his 25th save. Maddux lowered his ERA to 1.68.

Maddux also went 2-for-3, lifting his batting average from .121 to .145. He keyed Atlanta's three-run third inning with a one-out double off Dave Telgheder (1-2).

Philadelphia 3, Florida 1

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Mims, winning as a starter for the first time in two months, allowed one run in 7½ innings as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Florida Marlins.

Mims (9-6), relegated to the bullpen at the end of July, allowed four hits, struck out six and walked three.

It was the last-place Twins who played like a playoff team, getting strong pitching from starter Brad Radke (11-13) and a magnificent catch in center from Rich Becker to send the Royals four games back with nine to play.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 4

NEW YORK — Ruben Sierra hit a three-run homer and Randy Velarde had an RBI single in a five-run eighth inning that carried the New York Yankees to a victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

New York completed their first-ever, four-game sweep of the Blue Jays and pulled within a half-game of the idle California Angels and the Seattle Mariners in the American League wild-card race.

Orioles 13, Tigers 1

DETROIT — Baltimore's Mike Mussina became the winningest pitcher in the American League with his 17th victory, throwing a three-hitter as the Orioles beat the Detroit Tigers.

Mussina (17-9) struck out eight and walked four to move one victory ahead of Boston knuckleballer Tim Wakefield and New York's David Cone. His fifth complete game ties him for third in the AL.

RED SOX CELEBRATE

Bargain basement produces champion

Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox aren't the first team to buy a championship. They may be the first to do it while shopping off the bargain rack.

Scared away by David Cone's contract, outbid for John Wetteland and unwilling to pay the price for Bret Saberhagen, Boston assembled a collection of mark-downs, irregulars and last year's models to win its fourth AL East title in 10 years.

The Red Sox clinched the division Wednesday night with a 3-2 victory over Milwaukee, a win that not only put Boston in the playoffs for the first time in five years but also demonstrated why they made it.

Erik Hanson pitched five innings of no-hit ball. And when Hanson took a line drive off the knee in the sixth, Rhee Cormier pitched two perfect innings until Rick Aguilera retired the Brewers in order in the ninth.

Meanwhile, waiver claim Dwayne Hoesy scored Boston's first two runs before Jose Canseco singled in Luis Alicea with the game-winner. Not one of those players was with the Red Sox last season.

"It's a team that no one expected it from," said Mike Greenwell, the only holdover besides Roger Clemens from Boston's last AL Championship team in 1986. "So many questions going into spring training. People just didn't believe this team could do it, and we did it."

Boston came into the delayed spring training a consensus pick for fourth place in the AL East. That might have been fair, based on the team's winter roster.

But then general manager Dan Duquette started building on his nucleus, which was none too shabby with the likes of Greenwell, Clemens, Aaron Sele, Tim Lincecum, John Valentin and Mo Vaughn.

Duquette had sent Otis Nixon to Texas in December for Canseco, reuniting the slugger with his buddy Kevin Kennedy, who came over from the Rangers to manage. Third baseman Scott Cooper went to St. Louis for Cormier and Mark Whiten.

But as some of baseball's biggest names changed teams in the post-strike free agent market, Duquette stayed in his office, unwilling to part with prospects.

So he turned to the second tier (and below) of free agents, where he found Hanson, Zane Smith, Derek Lilliquist, Alejandro Pena and Mike Hartley for the pitching staff. He spent the money for

Minnesota, Steelers hungry for victory

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Here are the Minnesota Vikings, who gave their best last Sunday night and got the worst — a 23-17 overtime loss to Dallas.

Here are the Pittsburgh Steelers, who gave their best on Monday night and got the worst — a 23-10 drubbing from Miami. Greg Lloyd did indeed knock Dan Marino into next week ("next Saturday, anyway," said Bryan Cox), but the Dolphins prevailed.

So Minnesota, primed for a let-down, goes into Pittsburgh, also primed for a letdown on Sunday. The oddsmakers say the Steelers are 5 1/2-point favorites, presumably because they're home and less let down.

The problem could be Mike Tomczak, who kept throwing the ball to the Dolphins. The Vikings are also opportunistic, but inexperienced.

This one is hard to figure.

STEELERS, 17-14

Chicago (plus 2 1/2) at St. Louis
The undefeated Rams have a turnover ratio of 12-0, but there seems to be some sort of rule that teams that aren't good enough to go 4-0 stop at 3-0.

BEARS, 20-10

Kansas City (plus 4) at Cleveland

The same rule goes for the Chiefs.

BROWNS, 17-7

San Francisco (minus 10 1/2) at Detroit (Monday night)

The 49ers turned it around here last year. Can the Lions do the same?

No.

49ERS, 31-13

Arizona (plus 14) at Dallas

Arizona won one it shouldn't have in Detroit, but the Cardinals usually play well against the Cowboys.

Not this time.

COWBOYS, 29-3

Philadelphia (plus 7) at Oakland

Hey, a replay of the 1980 Super Bowl. The Raiders won that one, 27-10, which sounds about right.

RAIDERS, 27-10

Washington (plus 3) at Tampa Bay

Incentive for the Bucs is avoiding a 13th straight season of double-digit losses. The Redskins have only done that twice in a row.

BUCS, 29-28

Houston (plus 6) at Cincinnati

Dave Shula needs some momentum in the game before he meets his father again.

BENGALS, 14-12

Associated Press

Broncos wide receiver Rod Smith pulls down a game-winning 43-yard touchdown pass from John Elway last Sunday in Denver.

New Orleans (plus 3) at New York Giants

One of these teams may actually win a game.

GIANTS, 24-13

New York Jets (plus 5 1/2) at Atlanta

Do the Jets wish they still had Terance Mathis?

Why? They have rookie receiver Wayne Chrebet.

Coach Rich Kotite goes for two points and avoids overtime.

JETS, 22-21

San Diego (plus 3) at Denver

The Chargers have to make sure they get the ball last.

It may not matter.

BRONCOS, 20-11

Green Bay (minus 10 1/2) at Jacksonville

Where are those people who said this crop of expansion teams would be better?

PACKERS, 33-3

EDDIE GEORGE

Ohio State back takes heed from his mother

Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Before Eddie George became a standout tailback at Ohio State, his best friend — his mother — showed some tough love that turned his life around.

When Donna George saw the first signs of misdirection if not rebellion in her young son's life, she knew what had to be done.

She banished George from his comfortable life — surrounded by friends and admired by fellow athletes at his Philadelphia high school — to Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia.

Today, George is the star tailback at Ohio State, where Howard "Hopalong" Cassidy, Vic Janowicz and Les Horvath established the tradition of great runners, and where Archie Griffin followed in their cleats, winning two Heisman Trophies.

He just started to change and Ms. George — a single mother who worked as a TWA flight attendant and part-time professional model — didn't like what he was becoming.

"He was always a great kid, always very disciplined," she said.

"But as he got older, maybe 14 years old, he started growing up and peer pressure set in. He started doing what other kids said and started thinking whatever a parent had to say was some sort of jive.

"I noticed changes in his attitude toward education, toward clothes, toward not doing any housework, playing street hockey and hanging out with his friends all the time. It started getting out of hand."

Ms. George's brother Derrick had turned around after being sent to Fork Union.

RYDER CUP

Europeans jolted by loss of Ballesteros

Ron Sirak
Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — More than anyone, Seve Ballesteros represents the rise of European golf and its success in the Ryder Cup, the emotional core of a team that achieved hard-earned parity with the Americans.

But when the 31st Ryder Cup starts with alternate-shot play Friday morning, Ballesteros will be on the sidelines, benched in the first match for the first time in his eight Ryder Cups.

Maybe because his longtime partner Jose Maria Olazabal is not playing or maybe because his game is not going well, Ballesteros will watch the format in which his career record is 10-3-1.

"The captain has to play the people he thinks are in the best form," Ballesteros said Thursday after Bernard Gallacher announced his pairings. "That's all I have to say."

The 38-year-old Spaniard didn't finish better than 40th in any of the four major championships this year and had been struggling in practice. He started his final tune-up round with a drive that wildly missed the fairway to the left.

"He must not be hitting it straight," U.S. team member Tom Lehman. "I'm sure he'll be a huge factor in best ball, but maybe he's not playing well enough for alternate shot."

The question had been whether the European team is very experienced or simply very old. With Ballesteros and Ian Woosnam, playing in his seventh Ryder Cup, both sitting out the morning matches it's looking a little like old might be the answer.

However, the Europeans may find real depth in their bid to reclaim the Cup from the U.S. team if Sam Torrance and Costantino Rocca play up to their recent form and if Per-Ulrik Johansson plays as well as he has in practice.

The United States had no shocks for the opening matches. Captain Lanny Wadkins went with experience and paired long hitters with short hitters.

"We've got strong players with guys that are probably medium length," Wadkins said. "It's going to help the other players and just make things simpler."

He hopes his strategy will produce easier approach shots on the long Oak Hill Country Club for shorter hitters like Corey Pavin, Jay Haas and Jeff Maggert.

The first match of the day, at 8 a.m., has Lehman and Pavin taking on Nick Faldo and Colin Montgomerie. Fred Couples and Haas follow against Torrance and Rocca. Davis Love and Maggert play Howard Clark and Mark James.

The morning matches conclude with America's two most experienced players, Ben Crenshaw and Curtis Strange, taking on Bernhard Langer and Johansson.

Wadkins hopes Pavin takes command in his match with Lehman with Faldo and Montgomerie.

"Corey's a good leader," Wadkins said. "He likes a challenge. If he's going to take charge, he better get with it."

Pairings for Friday afternoon's better-ball matches will not be announced until after alternate shot play is over.

"A lot of that would depend on how the morning goes," Wadkins said.

Sitting out the morning matches for the U.S. team are Loren

Roberts, Brad Faxon and Phil Mickelson — all Ryder Cup rookies — and Peter Jacobsen, whose only Ryder Cup was 10 years ago.

Joining Ballesteros and Woosnam on the sidelines for the Europeans are rookie Philip Walton and one-time Ryder Cup player David Gilford.

Benching Ballesteros had to be a jolt for the Europeans. He has played in every Ryder Cup since the team was expanded to include Europe in 1979. When Europe took the Cup from the United States in 1985 for the first time since, Ballesteros got 3 1/2 of his team's 15 points.

Mainz, squad ready for debut

No more instruction, no more drills and no more friendly locker room conversations about regional opponents.

The Iowa women's tennis team is ready for battle.

The Hawkeyes will open their season in Lincoln, Neb., this weekend, when they compete in a field of seven teams at the Husker Invitational.

Iowa Coach Jenny Mainz said she's looking forward to her debut with the Hawkeyes.

"I feel like we should be the strongest team there," Mainz said. "We need to execute and really take advantage of this opportunity here in the beginning to get some experience and confidence."

Junior Robin Niemeier said the invitational will seem easy after a couple weeks of intense practices.

"I've never felt so tired in my life sometimes after we walk off that court at the end of practice," Niemeier said. "I think it's a good feeling to have. I don't think any of us will lose a third set due to being too tired."

Sophomore Krissy Campbell said the Hawkeyes would be hard to beat.

"I'm confident that we're ready and if we just go out there and stay focused I think we'll prove ourselves," Campbell said. "The Husker Invitational should be a good start for the season and will let us get some matches under our belt."

Nine Hawkeyes are scheduled to compete in the tournament, which begins today. The invitational field will include intrastate rivals Drake and Iowa State.

Men's golf team set for Wolverine Invitational

Laine Brantner wants some birdies, Terry Anderson wants some victories and everyone on the Iowa men's golf team wants to prove that last year's NCAA tournament appearance wasn't just another Cinderella story.

The Hawkeyes will go head-to-head with some of the top teams in the Big Ten Conference when they travel to Ann Arbor, Mich., to compete in the Wolverine Invitational this weekend.

Brantner, one of the senior co-captains, said he hopes a new set of golf clubs will help improve his game.

"I'm not even taking my old ones," Brantner said. "I haven't hit my irons very well this fall. I haven't hit a lot of greens so far and when I do hit the greens I'm not hitting it very close. It's kind of hard to make birdies when you're not hitting it close."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Iowa's coach, Anderson, said the Wolverine Invitational will provide another stiff test on the heels of a ninth-place finish at the Reliastar Collegiate Invitational.

"I'm not going to call this weekend a cakewalk. Almost every team from the Big Ten will be there," Anderson said.

"It's going to be a good little test to see where we stand, but I think because of the tournament last weekend we're going to be in much better shape."

—Shannon Stevens

Thomason hopes team lands on its feet

They tried to get off to a running start, but now their coach will settle for a steady crawl.

After rocky outings in its first two tournaments, the Iowa women's golf team is doing a little soul searching as it travels to Evanston, Ill., for the Northwestern Invitational.

Iowa coach Diane Thomason said she hopes the Hawkeyes can improve on their 1994 overall record of 8-13, but noted the competition wasn't getting any easier.

"This is a much tougher field than what we had here at the Hawkeye Invitational," Thomason said. "I'm excited to see how Jenny (Nodland) and Tanya (Shepley) play. They both had good tournaments here at Iowa and then I'm anxious to see some of the other team members, who did not play well, to see if they can come back from that."

Thomason said that Nodland should be a major player in the individual race after capturing a victory at the Hawkeye Invitational.

"I'm hoping that Jenny will see after last weekend that she is competitive with the field," Thomason said. "She'll have a good chance to be a top finisher."

Nodland, Shepley, Aimee Maurer, Becky Sjöholm, Lynne Carothers and Karen Schroeder are all scheduled to compete for the Hawkeyes.

Thomason said Iowa needed two players to shoot in the mid 70s and two players in the mid 80s to stay competitive in the 15-team invitational field.

"We're not a very strong team right now," Thomason said. "We're just really working on trying to improve every time so we'll get to be better by the end of the fall season."

—Shannon Stevens

Hawkeyes look for a little revenge

When the Iowa women's field hockey team hits the road this weekend, it will be looking to bag a couple of Big Ten opponents it went a combined 1-3 against in '94. Coach Beth Beglin said a little retribution is in order for Penn State and Ohio State.

"We owe both these teams big time," Beglin said. "Penn State swept us last year and we lost to Ohio State for the first time since I've coached here. So I don't have to tell the kids how important this weekend is."

Ohio State is ranked 11th in the country and stands at 3-1 overall. The Buckeyes are led by top returnees Britta Eickoff and Dawn Pedersen, who are hoping to lead the OSU to its second consecutive NCAA tournament.

Ohio State is a meager 1-26 vs. Iowa but claimed its first victory over the Hawkeyes, 2-1 in Columbus last year.

Penn State is 3-3 heading into this Big Ten tussle and is not nationally ranked. But the Nittany Lions upended No. 10 Connecticut last weekend, 1-0, in double overtime. Penn State is 5-8-1 in the overall series with the Hawkeyes.

Beglin said all cylinders should be firing by this time in the year.

"This is what counts," Beglin said. "We know that and hopefully we will come prepared to play."

—Chris James

CROSS COUNTRY

Coaches pumped for home openers

Wayne Drehs

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's and women's cross country teams head into this weekend's lone home meet of the season looking to gain experience and achieve victory.

The men's team will go up against Drake, Western Illinois and Minnesota at the Iowa Invitational Saturday morning.

The Hawkeyes go into the meet with a 9-7 record in dual-meet action. Iowa ran a group of freshmen and sophomores at the Bradley Invitational earlier this month, where freshman Stetson Steele won the meet with a record setting time of 24:47.

"We gained a lot of experience at Bradley by running the younger guys," head coach Larry Wiczorek said.

Saturday's meet will be the first for the entire team as a whole.

"We are very excited and have been training hard for the meet," said Steele.

Wiczorek stresses a good team effort this early in the season, rather than successful individual performances.

"I'd like to see our top five guys finish within 30 seconds of each other," Wiczorek said. "I'm looking for the team to perform as well as they do in practice, and if they do, they should be very successful."

The women's team will compete against Western Illinois in its first meet of the season Saturday, an late start for the Hawkeyes.

"We usually start a week or two earlier than this, but I don't think this delayed start will hurt us," head coach Jerry Hassard said.

Hassard thinks the wait will help the team's health because the team has gone through tough conditioning.

"A lot of times, players try to push their body too hard, too early, and that's when injuries happen," he said.

Iowa will be led by senior captain Shawn Fleck and junior Becky Coleman.

"Becky has been doing a great job leading the team in practice," Hassard said.

Like the men's team, the women will also run at Finkbine, which has an advantage for Hawkeye runners due to their experience by practicing there.

"It's very helpful to know the course and it should be good to have our first meet at home," said Coleman.

"If everybody stays relaxed and has fun, we should have an effective performance."

Arts Iowa City features Sara Bell's photomontages

Tucked away in the bowels of Jefferson Building is the recently renamed Arts Iowa City. Despite current construction to make the gallery more accessible, people are braving their way through the building's dusty halls and twisting stairs to catch its September opening. Works on display include photo collages by Mark Towner; pastel paintings, drawings and prints by Maria Cusumano; an installation by Brian Alve and photomontages by Sara Bell.

Arts Iowa City, formerly known as the Iowa City/Johnson County Arts Council has existed for 20 years. It came about as a result of urban renewal, art coordinator Dianne Kaufman said.

"It's a very good venue for students who are going through graduate school (to have) their art seen in the context of other work that aspires to the level of professionalism," Sue Hettmansperger, professor in the UI art department, said.

Arts Iowa City would not exist if it weren't for volunteers like Lila Rohrer. "I'm an artist and feel ... we have to put out an effort to keep the arts alive," Rohrer said. "I'm intensely fascinated by these bird collages."

The photomontage Rohrer referred to is "Raptor Houses," by UI student Sara Bell. Bell has assembled images of "snapshots" taken at the MacBride Raptor Center of injured birds that are housed at the center. For the installation of her piece, Bell "considered the whole gallery room as a house for raptors (or their visitors)." The photomontages of injured birds, some of which are in motion or staring directly into the lens, are arranged in the form of a house. In mounting the photomontages behind an arch-shaped window mat, Bell created an image which she described as "a door to a bird's house."

Feldman commences New Music

Steve Willis
The Daily Iowan

Sunday at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall, the UI Center for New Music opens its 1995-96 season with a free concert of intimate chamber classics by the 20th century's most fascinating and beloved composers: Igor Stravinsky, Bela Bartok, Morton Feldman, and D. Martin Janni.

Pianist Lecuona is featured on Bartok's "Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion," a loud work which she and CNM special guest Eugene Gaub first performed as college students. The sonata features a jumbo first movement — weighing in at 12 minutes and 1200 pounds — and two shorter, lighter movements which struggle against the portent of the opening.

If the Bartok piece begins in a country without trees, the bridge piece, Stravinsky's "Elegie" played by Deborah Dakin, presents a warm, dark snapshot of a single fallen chestnut.

Dakin also plays on the warmer, clear-eyed "The Viola In My Life" by Morton Feldman to open the concert and season with CNM director David Gompper. The piece represents a singular stretch of mental land marked by frustrated movements against time — played by the clocklike piano — or, as the composer says "like a bird trying to soar in a confined landscape."

'Dangerous' sweeps 'Billboard' charts

Music from the film, "Dangerous Minds," tops several Billboard charts this week. The soundtrack holds at No. 1 for the fourth week on the Pop Album chart.

chart. The single's already enormous sales should be boosted next week by Coolio's appearance and elaborate performance of the song last week on "The Late Show with David Letterman."

MTV Participants Cash In

Several performers and participants of the Sept. 7 "MTV Video Music Awards" showed an increase in sales this week. The big winner was Alanis Morissette, who is the early favorite to be next year's best new artist. Her album, Jagged Little Pill, shows the biggest increase in sales, remaining at No. 3 on the Pop Album chart. This year's best new artist, Hootie and the Blowfish, holds at No. 2 and closes in on "Dangerous" after their performance.

The race for No. 1 is wide open next week. Look for big debuts from Lenny Kravitz and Red Hot Chili Peppers.

Singles Chart Stable — for Now

There is not a lot of movement on this week's Pop Singles chart. Coolio, Michael Jackson, Seal and TLC continue to hold down the top four spots, as Janet Jackson inches up to No. 5 after her enormous debut last week. Look for the calm to change, however, as a couple singles get set to explode onto the chart next week. Mariah Carey's "Fantasy" will debut inside the top three.

Silverchair Grows Up the Charts

Australian teenage band, Silverchair, jumps to No. 1 on this week's Album Rock chart with Tomorrow. It ends Brother Cane's long run at the top.

'Shallow' psychofarce runs deep

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Most new directors take years to get their careers in gear. Danny Boyle does it in about 15 minutes with "Shallow Grave," a grainy, mesmerizing thriller that starts slow and builds to a blinding pace.

The film opens with three friends grilling prospective roommates with smarmy questions like "When was the first time you saw a dead body?" and "What makes you think we'd want to share a flat like this with someone like you?"

The insular trio consists of Juliet, a doctor fending off droves of suitors; David, a dull chartered accountant who compensates with occasional flashes of cynic wit; and Alex, an obnoxiously intrusive journalist who has more than a few things in common with his namesake from "A Clockwork Orange." There are tensions between them, but they're all minor or buried. Until...

Juliet (Kerry Fox, "An Angel at My Table") interviews one of the applicants alone and apparently finds him acceptable. Alex is too apathetic to get in the way, and David (Chris Eccleston) is too busy. So, after only a token spate of rude questioning, the new roommate moves in like a thief in the night.

Fifteen unremarkable minutes into the film, he dies mysteriously, leaving behind an unattractive naked corpse and a humongous suitcase full of money.

John Hodge's script quickly evolves from a chipper Gen X relationship movie, a la "Threesome" or "Singles," into a gritty modern take on "Treasure of the Sierra Madre."

Hodge takes a while to move from perky to terrifying, but he and Boyle both perfectly find their niches as they settle down to unfold their plot and unravel their characters. Psychosexual conflicts ensue, with Juliet handling the sexual part, David concentrating on the psycho, and Alex trying to mix the two. Together, Boyle and Hodge have built a distinctly grave — but certainly not shallow — film.

"Shallow Grave" runs through Sunday at the Bijou Theatre in the Union.
