UI won't bow to threat of suit 'We're not simply going to say yes to their current demands'

Ann Haggerty
The Daily Iowan

The UI is not going to give in to the requests of two former professors of the Playwrights Workshop who claim administrators violated their constitutional rights, UI attorney Mark Schantz said Sunday.

The professors' attorney, Kelly McClelland, said he will file a lawsuit against the UI if Schantz doesn't respond to their requests by the end of the month.

Professors Shelley Berc and Lavonne Mueller are each asking the UI for $115,000 to $65,000 for distress and $50,000 for back wages. Berc is asking for a salary increase of about $20,000 to $75,000.

However, Schantz said the UI is currently working on a different proposal.

"We're not simply going to say yes to their current demands," Schantz said. "We're going to make a proposal, but not the same one (Berc and Mueller) have made. We think a number of their demands are inappropriate."

The UI allegedly discriminated against the women because of their gender, then retaliated against them and created a hostile work environment for them, McClelland said.

McClelland is the same lawyer who won damages for three UI dental hygiene professors this spring in a retaliation suit against the UI.

Schantz said he plans to make a written response by the end of the month and the UI is in the process of deciding exactly how to respond.

"We will try to respond the best way we can by the 29th, if we can," he said.

McClelland's demand that the UI respond to the women's requests comes two weeks after he filed charges with the Iowa Civil Rights Commission in Des Moines on Berc's behalf. Charges must be filed with the Iowa Civil Rights Commission before they can go to court.

Berc and Mueller said they were unfairly removed from their teaching positions in the ## History of Playwrights Workshop dispute

- Professors Shelley Berc and Lavonne Mueller said the UI discriminated against them because of their gender, then retaliated and created a hostile work environment for them.
- The women were removed from the UI's Playwrights Workshop in August.
- Their attorney, Kelly McClelland, filed charges with the Iowa Civil Rights Commission on Berc's behalf.
- McClelland said if the school's attorney doesn't respond to the women's requests before the end of the month, he will file a lawsuit.

AN IN-DEPTH LOOK AT DRINKING PRACTICES AND ATTITUDES ON THE UI CAMPUS

Fraternity bash defies Greek policies

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

The UI Greek system has established policies it says help prevent incidents like Lambda Chi Alpha associate member Matthew Garofalo's death two weeks ago. To determine if all Interfraternity Council policy standards are obeyed, The Daily Iowan sent me to a fraternity party Saturday night.

A personal account

At least four rules specifically outlined in the IFC Risk Management Policy were violated at the fraternity party I attended, including serving alcohol to persons under the legal age and failure to check proper identification.

The fraternity's name doesn't matter and the place doesn't matter. This situation could apply to any bar or house party anywhere.

I should make clear that a similar version of my story probably happened in several different places throughout town — and the nation — Saturday night. The fraternity's name doesn't matter and the place doesn't matter. This situation could apply to any bar or house party anywhere.

When my friend and I arrived, we stood outside and wondered if a party was going on because the fraternity house was fairly quiet. A few minutes later, members of IFC's Gamma Committee, which consists of Greek chapter members and ensures drinking rules are being followed, walked out of the house.

Usually, a person must be on a guest list registered with the IFC. See PERSONAL EXPERIENCE, Page 10A

Alcohol death doesn't scare drinkers

The Daily Iowan Poll Drinking at the UI

The DI conducted a poll of 86 UI students to determine UI students' drinking habits. The results:

During the last month, I drank alcoholic beverages ...

During an average night out, I drink ...

Do you feel you know enough about how to take care of an intoxicated friend, and would feel comfortable taking responsibility for him or her?

Which of the following statements best represents your attitudes toward drinking?

An occasional drunk is OK as long as it doesn't interfere with academics or other abilities.

Drinking is fine, but a person should never get "smashed."

A frequent drunk is OK if that is what the individual wants to do.

Drinking is never a good choice to make.

Binge drinking still prevalent

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

The death of an associate fraternity member two weeks ago, due in large part to the over-consumption of alcohol, hasn't curbed or even slowed the amount of drinking on the UI campus.

UI junior Brendan Brown, who considers himself a binge drinker, said he's had an experience similar to Matthew Garofalo's, in which he threw up while he was passed out.

Brown said even though the incident made him re-evaluate his drinking habits, he still drinks regularly today.

"It happened to me before. It'll happen again," he said. "After it happened, I didn't drink for a year. It was something that made me think. I've been to stuff the school does. I had to go to alcohol classes at Student Health. I think they're doing everything they can do, taking into account that students drink and saying, 'Here's the picture you're getting into.'"

Students said the UI's attempt to educate students on the possible dangers of alcohol often go unnoticed and advice is quickly forgotten.

UI senior Todd Farrell said stereotypes about the excessive amount of drinking on college campuses work against educating students about the dangers of drinking.

"It's perceived more than it is," he said. "Stereotypes are exhibited rather quickly. People get impressed."

INTERIM PRESIDENT IS EXPERT

Nathan: Alcohol abuse plagues UI

Sarah Lueck
The Daily Iowan

Peter Nathan, UI interim president and international expert on alcohol, discussed the use — and in some cases abuse — of alcohol on college campuses, including the UI.

DI: What are your perceptions of alcohol use on campus? Do you think underage drinking is a widespread occurrence?

Nathan: The polls that have been taken of student alcohol use on campus and of alcohol use in Iowa (make me) think alcohol use, in common with other Midwestern campuses, is greater here than at campuses on the coasts.

In particular, my sense is that alcohol use in fraternities in particular is, in some instances, out of control. I'm sorry to say this isn't uncommon. It's estimated by some experts that close to half the active members of fraternities in American universities meet the diagnostic criteria for alcohol abuse or alcohol dependence.

Fortunately, when these young men graduate, their alcohol pattern returns to normal, but they still put themselves in jeopardy to develop long-lasting alcohol problems, not to mention what happened to Matthew (Garofalo). So, both on a short-term and a long-term basis, the drinking that happens by some young men in fraternities in universities is extraordinarily dangerous.

See NATHAN, Page 4A

Nathan's history on alcohol research

- Has published 12 books and approximately 150 articles on alcohol-related topics.
- Has treated dozens of alcoholics.
- Director of the Rutgers University Center of Alcohol Studies from 1983-90.
- Has been a member of the advisory council for the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.
- Garnered $4 million dollars in research grants during his 20 years as a director of an alcohol research lab.

WOMAN RETURNS TO COLLEGE

Student survives crash, begins classes at the UI

Ann McGlynn
The Daily Iowan

After experiencing complete memory loss for two weeks and suffering extensive physical injuries, UI freshman Stephanie Reilly has fought her way back into classes and has begun dealing with the car accident which almost took her life during the summer of 1994.

On June 27, 1994, Reilly was traveling west on Highway 92 between Keota, Iowa, and Oskaloosa, Iowa, when she attempted to pass a delivery van. After an eastbound semi went by, Reilly pulled out and collided with the vehicle traveling behind the semi, a white Mercury driven by an elderly couple. The couple was killed.

"My mom wouldn't tell me at first about (the couple being killed)," Reilly said. "It's really odd. Why did they have to die?"

The collision left her without memory for two weeks, a broken nose, a torn spleen, a fractured pelvis, a broken femur and several

SIMPSON TRIAL WINDS DOWN

Hark! The end is near

Deborah Hastings
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Here come the closing arguments. The beginning of the end of the O.J. Simpson trial. Sure, it's not THE END, but we can see it from here.

On Tuesday, barring natural or legal disaster, lawyers begin their final arguments before jurors who have recently looked downright comatose. Attorneys haven't looked much better. The trial could be tree dated by the circles under Prosecutor Marcia Clark's eyes.

But wait, is that excitement in the air? On Friday, when both sides rested and the Superior Court Judge Lance Ito suggested working overtime to speed the arrival of deliberations, jurors actually guffawed. Work late next week? You bet. Just get us the darn case.

"There's a certain crackle in the air from people who are understandably tired and propping their eyes open with toothpicks, like some of the lawyers at the table are doing," Southwestern University law professor Robert Pugsley said.

Oddities & Idiosyncrasies

Computer detective purges files from beyond

David Foster

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Computer sleuth John Jensen knows what e-mail lurks in the heart of America's workplace, and it's not a pretty sight.

Stupid jokes. Love notes. Sexist slurs. Breached confidences. All are in a day's work as Jensen dredges computer files for electronic embarrassments thought to be long gone by their authors.

Electronic mail has revolutionized how corporations communicate, allowing workers to connect with far-flung colleagues in an efficient and often freewheeling forum.

It might be less freewheeling if people knew how many "deleted" e-mail messages are actually saved in their computer systems. They can pile up like little time bombs until someone like Jensen arrives, carrying a court order and a stack of blank memory cartridges.

"Can you really delete e-mail? Sure," Jensen said. "Does it happen as a common practice? No."

Jensen is the founder of Electronic Evidence Discovery Inc., a Seattle company that has been going after computer evidence in civil lawsuits since 1987.

It's a specialized field, to be sure. Jensen's only full-time competitor is Computer Forensics Inc., another Seattle firm started by one of his former employees, Joan Feldman.

Business is booming for both of them.

The nation's estimated 25 million to 40 million users of e-mail are growing more comfortable — some say careless — with the medium. And more attorneys are recognizing e-mail's potential as a source of unguarded information about the companies they're suing.

"People are very candid talking around the coffee machine," said attorney Michael Patrick in Palo Alto, Calif. "They seem to behave the same way on the computer system."

"They think they're speaking confidentially, so they're off the cuff. They're very often insulting. What they don't realize is it's all being recorded, and often those recordings are stored for a very long time. When you send a message, you lose control over where it goes."

Los Angeles police officer Laurence Powell learned that lesson after the Rodney King beating in 1991. "Oops!" began a message that Powell typed into his squad car's computer. "I haven't beaten anyone this bad in a long time."

This year, an Air Force pilot's profane e-mail account of Capt. Scott O'Grady's rescue in Bosnia was made available on the Internet, much to the Pentagon's chagrin.

"Pray for the U.N. leadership to get a clue and let us blow these bastards back into the stone age," Capt. Scott Zobrist wrote of the Bosnian Serbs.

Air Force officials said Zobrist, stationed with O'Grady in Italy, sent the e-mail to a few military friends, never suspecting it would be forwarded — and forwarded again — until it was posted on the Internet for anyone to see.

Jensen has his own collection of e-mail tales.

"Hi David," began one message Jensen retrieved from the files of a company that had fired his client. "Please destroy the evidence on the (case) you and I talked about today.

Thx, Laura."

David's breezy response, titled "Evidence Destroyed," was equally incriminating: "Hi Laura. Ack yr msg. And taken care of. Aloha David."

Many workers think their e-mail

"They think they're speaking confidentially, so they're off the cuff. They're very often insulting. What they don't realize is it's all being recorded, and often those recordings are stored for a very long time. When you send a message, you lose control over where it goes."

Attorney Michael Patrick

is private. It's not. Federal law allows employers to monitor employees' e-mail, and even if they don't, e-mail is fair game in lawsuits.

When someone sues a company, the rules of discovery demand the company produce all relevant business records.

"The fact that they live in a computer rather than a file cabinet doesn't make any difference to the court," said Feldman at Computer Forensics.

Often files retrieved include e-mail thought to have been erased long ago. It survives because most computer systems are geared toward saving data, not deleting it.

Suppose one worker sends an ill-considered e-mail to a colleague at 5 p.m. The recipient logs on the next morning, reads the offending message and immediately deletes it, then phones the sender and makes sure the original is deleted, too.

Problem solved? Hardly. They've forgotten about their diligent computer system manager, who makes backup tapes of everything on the system every night, then stores those tapes for years.

Or suppose someone downloads an e-mail onto their desktop PC, storing it on the hard drive. Contrary to what most computer users think, a click of the "delete" key doesn't really erase that file. It merely renames it and makes that spot on the disk available for new data. The file remains, readable by anyone who knows how, until overwritten.

And so the files persist and multiply, aided by technological advances that continually add more storage capacity, more automatic backups, and more redundancies to safeguard data from accidental erasure.

"The computer is like a file cabinet that can open its own drawer, put a file on the copy machine and then slip the copy into another cabinet," Jensen said. "Sometimes I think it's alive."

Jensen and Feldman augment their high-tech detective work by advising companies how to become less vulnerable to computer snoops like themselves.

They recommend regular purges of old data, and they offer tips for avoiding e-mail blunders in the first place. Rule No. 1: Don't put anything on e-mail that you wouldn't want a jury to see.

QUOTABLE

"It's the non-dramatic, institutional racism that's the problem. Cultural bias exists and some people are punished on stereotypes ... so much so, it appears to be natural, it's so standard."

Rev. Jesse Jackson, on a computer analysis which found African-Americans tend to receive longer prison terms than whites

Daredevil gets 200 hours of community service

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A judge thinks Evel Knievel can teach children a thing or two.

Superior Court Judge William Martin ordered the 56-year-old ex-daredevil (real name: Robert Craig Knievel) to spend 200 hours coaching youngsters on the importance of bicycle helmets.

"It's a tough Knievel law," Knievel told Martin in pleading no contest Friday to keeping a .44 Magnum handgun, a .38-caliber revolver, two knives and a stun gun in his car trunk.

Police found the cache last year after his arrest on a charge of battering his girlfriend.

Krystal Kennedy, 25, later dismissed their fight as a "tussle," and was at Knievel's side in court.

Knievel may also face a fine at a formal sentencing in December for being a felon in possession of a concealable weapon.

TV special steers teens from sex

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Diane Sawyer to kids: You can't hurry love.

"This is the heart of family values," Sawyer said after taping a town meeting meant to discourage teen-age sex.

The program, "Kids Speak Out: Sex Can Wait," features honest talk about sex, pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases. It's aimed at 9- to 14-year-olds.

"If we can just link arms, we can try to solve this problem," Sawyer said.

"I believe in some absolute rights and wrongs."

The host of ABC's "PrimeTime Live" taped the show at the network's Detroit affiliate Friday. Affiliates around the state will air the show, sponsored by the Michigan Abstinence Partnership.

Art guru leaves Washington for rural life

LIVINGSTON, Mont. (AP) — John Frohnmayer's turned his back on the tumult of Washington for the simple life in Belgrade — Montana, that is.

The man who battled Jesse Helms and other conservatives as head of the National Endowment for the Arts will practice law in Bozeman and Livingston.

"It's amazing how often First Amendment issues come up in rural communities," he said.

Chairman of the endowment for 2½ years, Frohnmayer chronicled his experience in a book, "Leaving Town Alive: Confessions of an Arts Warrior."

R.E.M. adds 3rd Atlanta show after sellout

ATLANTA (AP) — It's the end of the line for R.E.M.'s Monster tour. Really.

The band added a third show to its tour-ending dates at the Omni after selling out two concerts in 32 minutes — and tickets were still selling briskly.

Fans snapped up more than 16,000 seats for the Nov. 18-19 shows Saturday, forking over $31.50 per ticket. The band immediately announced the third and final show, set for Nov. 21, and sold another 7,000 or so tickets by the end of the day.

R.E.M. kicked off its first tour of the decade in Australia in January, expecting it to last about a year. It's been interrupted three times for surgery: Singer Michael Stipe had a hernia, drummer Bill Berry suffered a cranial aneurysm and bassist Mike Mills had abdominal problems.

Ex-governor prizes political independence

ATLANTA (AP) — With his 80th birthday right around the corner, unrepentant segregationist Lester Maddox has been doing some thinking.

"I'm really not Democrat or Republican. I'm just Lester Maddox," said the ex-governor. "That's kept me in trouble most all of my life. And that's what I want to be remembered for — being true or real as I can."

Gov. Zell Miller threw Maddox a birthday party at the mansion Sunday. About 1,000 people were expected.

Maddox gained notoriety and the Statehouse after chasing African-American customers away from his chicken-and-hot-dog restaurant with a pistol and a pick handle in 1964.

He's survived prostate cancer, two heart attacks and a stroke, and he's never changed his views on race.

Singer claims God persuaded him to become pastor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seventime Grammy winner Andrae Crouch had a little chat with God before becoming pastor of Christ Memorial Church of God in Christ.

He'd led the church in an unofficial capacity since April, following the death of his older brother, the previous pastor, and was formally installed Saturday. The gospel singer's father founded the Pentacostal church in 1951.

At a banquet after the service, he said God spoke to him a week after his brother's death — when he fell to the floor and couldn't get up.

God said he wouldn't let him rise until he said "yes" to becoming a pastor — "I don't want you to say, 'uh-huh,' 'right on' or give Arsenio Hall's 'woof-woof.'"

Once Crouch said yes, he got up and "became totally happy in every area of my life."

Boycott leads to Wal-Mart picket

Christie Midthun
The Daily Iowan

Wal-Mart's use of "environmentally unfriendly" items and products tested on animals was targeted Sunday at a Rainforest Action Group demonstration.

The demonstration was a part of national "Buy Nothing Day," a protest organized to activate and educate consumers about corporate boycott campaigns. Shopping malls and complexes were targeted across the United States, Canada and the Netherlands.

Members of the group said they focused on Wal-Mart because the company buys from corporations such as Gillette, Procter & Gamble and Georgia Pacific, all of which

"If a big corporation like this were to say they wouldn't buy a product, it would have gigantic impact. If they would demand an alternative, they would get it."

UI freshman Greg Miller, on the protest at Wal-Mart to promote awareness among consumers experiment on animals.

"Gillette and Procter & Gamble both do unnecessary testing on animals," member Sally Konrady said. "There are alternatives to every single product that they can buy here."

The group passed out literature on Gillette and P & G, waved signs listing alternative products and passed around a petition asking P & G to stop using animals in the testing of consumer products.

Konrady said animal testing is unnecessary and other technologies, such as chemical tests and computer modeling, are more accurate methods of research.

Many customers signed the petition and said they would use more environmentally friendly items if they were made more available.

Megan McCabe/The Daily Iowan

Maureen Head signs a petition offered by Rainforest Action Group member Sally Konrady. The group was attempting to educate Wal-Mart shoppers on the national "Buy Nothing Day," created to call attention to "environmentally unfriendly" products sold at large chain stores.

Instead of being encouraged to buy more, Wal-Mart customers were advised to "shop safely and wisely."

"I think every place should offer more ecologically-safe items," said UI sophomore David Reynolds, a Wal-Mart customer. "Stores should watch which corporations they back."

Members from Women Take Back the Night and the UI Animal Rights Coalition were also on hand to show their support for the protest.

"We're talking about excessive consumerism," said Cat Moore, from Women Take Back the Night. "It's a continentwide effort targeting certain companies who are environmentally hazardous."

Wal-Mart, 1001 Highway 1 West, had no comment on the protest, but group members said they hoped to make an impact on items Wal-Mart offers its customers.

"If a big corporation like this were to say they wouldn't buy a product, it would have gigantic impact," UI freshman Greg Miller said. "If they would demand an alternative, they would get it."

Group member Becky Martin said she doesn't shop at places like Wal-Mart.

"I buy from (New Pioneer) Co-Op," Martin said. "I purchase natural products that aren't tested on animals. I try to be wise about what I buy."

Republican candidates gather, criticize IRS and Clinton

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

DES MOINES — When eight Republican presidential candidates gathered in Des Moines Saturday to talk taxes, they ended up attacking the Internal Revenue Service, President Clinton and each other.

At the forum, sponsored by Iowans for Tax Relief — a non-partisan political action committee, the candidates offered their proposals to reform the federal tax system.

"In place of our present tax system, I would provide the leadership needed to replace it with lower and fairer and flatter taxes."

Kansas Sen. Bob Dole

Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar said he would eliminate the IRS and replace the income tax with a 17 percent national sales tax.

Other candidates said they would replace the current tax structure with a flat tax, which would establish the same tax rate for all taxpayers.

Pennsylvania Sen. Arlen Specter said a flat tax would save Americans money through lower tax rates and less cost for tax form preparation.

"It's a win-win situation," Specter said, as he held up his proposed postcard-size income tax form.

The candidates at the top of the most recent polls also supported the flat tax.

"In place of our present tax system, I would provide the leadership needed to replace it with lower and fairer and flatter taxes," Kansas Sen. Bob Dole said.

Dole leads Texas Sen. Phil Gramm by a 2-to-1 margin in most Iowa polls.

Gramm said he supports the flat tax but also wants to limit spending. "The most fundamental tax reform is not spending the money in the first place," he said.

Officials for Iowans for Tax Relief said the event was the first national forum on taxes and spending for presidential candidates.

"Our goal is to not get the average stump speech," said Ed Failer Jr., associate finance director for Iowans for Tax Relief.

Although taxes and spending were the focus of the event, some candidates returned to their campaign messages.

Commentator Pat Buchanan used the event to discuss his views on foreign trade. Buchanan said he would impose a 10 percent tariff on Japanese imports and a 20 percent tariff on Chinese imports to protect American workers. Buchanan said he favors tariffs on products from countries which have restrictive trade policies.

Former Ambassador Alan Keyes included social issues in his tax speech. Keyes said social problems and a decline in personal responsibility have led to budget deficits.

"It's not a money crisis," he said. "It's a moral crisis."

The GOP candidates also criticized President Clinton.

"Bill Clinton and the Democrats want the federal government to do the spending," Gramm said. "I want the family to do the spending."

Dole criticized Clinton for relying on the government to drive economic growth.

"His ideas are out of step with the free world," he said.

Failor said President Clinton was invited to the forum but was unable to attend.

Some candidates also attacked the Republican front-runners.

Lamar Alexander said both Dole's and Gramm's welfare reform bills were too long and would require too many regulations.

"We're not here to substitute our arrogant empire for the arrogant empire we just kicked out," he said.

Keyes said Dole's support of farm subsidy programs was "agri-socialism." Keyes said he would eliminate the Department of Agriculture.

No straw poll was held in conjunction with the event. David Stanley, president of Iowans for Tax Relief, said the focus was not on who's ahead, but on where the candidates stand on the issues.

If you think there's room for more than one opinion...

you're right.

Books are a great way to learn about many issues—things we have a hard time talking about. We may not agree, but if we read, reason, and think, books will help us to a better future.

BANKERS EXCLUDED FROM PROCESS

36 Iowa schools endorse direct loans

Associated Press

CEDAR FALLS — The government's new direct-loan program is winning raves among students and college administrators.

Under the old system, the loan process included a local bank or guaranty agency, but in 36 Iowa schools this year, bankers have been cut out of the process. Students can apply for loans directly from the government through their schools.

"They're starting classes with none of the financial worries they had under the old system," said Earl Dowling, director of financial aid at Iowa State University, in Ames. "This is an effective system.

It's a student-friendly system."

For the second year in a row, he said, the number of students with loans in hand on the first day of classes increased more than 30 percent.

Direct lending started with 104 pilot schools last year, including Iowa State. After intense recruiting efforts by the U.S. Department of Education, the list was expanded to 1,400 schools nationwide, including all three state universities in Iowa — the UI, Iowa State and the University of Northern Iowa. The list also includes several community colleges, small private colleges and beauty schools.

Among the new schools to the program is the University of Northern Iowa, where the number of loans paid to students by the first day of classes more than doubled — from 1,315 last year to 4,100 this fall.

"There's almost no comparison. (Students) almost all have their loans on time. And if there's something wrong with the loan, it's easier for. If I had my way, we'd consider something like that, but I don't think it's feasible. I do think we're going to take a real serious look at our present policies.

Praise for the program is not universal, however. Critics — including bankers who are losing a chunk of the lucrative student loan business — characterize the program as untested and expensive.

Drinking problems are not by any means confined to members of fraternities, but it's perhaps more problematic in those places. So, yes, I think we have an alcohol problem on campus; I think we have a substantial alcohol problem on campus. I don't think it's confined by any means to students. I think we need to admit that alcohol use by faculty and staff in some instances is a problem.

I don't think we can just go on with business as usual. By the same token, I don't want to blow this thing out of proportion; I don't want to disrupt people's lives. There are many, many people on campus for whom alcohol is not a problem. But for people for whom alcohol is a problem, we need to offer a better solution.

DI: What improvements can the UI make in the area of education?

Nathan: We have, I think, a pretty active alcohol education program. Health Iowa does a really good job working with students to provide greater knowledge about the effects of alcohol, on behavior and on the body. I think Health Iowa also works hard to change attitudes toward drinking.

Unfortunately, I think alcohol use has gotten to be kind of a rite of passage, a measure of adulthood and maturity. If you're drinking a lot, that's proof positive that you've reached maturity. In some groups, it's kind of a macho thing to do. And we'd like to change attitudes, to put it in its proper perspective. There are lots of ways to be mature and grown up without misusing alcohol.

We're going to redouble our efforts to provide meaningful alcohol education in the university community. We're going to work hard to try to provide better help for people who are just beginning to experience alcohol problems — students and faculty.

I think that's one of the problems; we don't have adequate treatment facilities for people who are just beginning to have alcohol problems and who don't know where to turn. As a result, perhaps, their problems get worse.

I think we need to work with the community to see whether there are things the UI and the community together can do to head off some of the alcohol problems — drunken driving being one of them, and public intoxication. ... I think we need to develop better ways to work with Iowa City.

We have to re-examine our alcohol use policies. I personally think we can do better than we've done.

DI: The University of Colorado recently decided to have a completely dry campus. Has the UI thought about doing that?

Nathan: In a sense we have what's close to a dry campus, on UI property at least. It would be pretty hard to declare private property alcohol free — property the UI doesn't own and isn't responsible for. If I had my way, we'd consider something like that, but I don't think it's feasible. I do think we're going to take a real serious look at our present policies.

DI: How would Matthew Garofalo's death have been different, in your opinion, if he had died in a residence hall rather than a fraternity?

Nathan: I'd like to think, and I do think, that it would have been much, much harder for him to consume as much alcohol as he apparently did in a residence hall. I think the controls in residence halls are such that I'd like to think this couldn't have happened.

He did a lot of drinking, and I think it's real tough to do that kind of drinking in a residence hall for that period of time. ... The UI has a strict policy against serving alcohol to underage students at organized parties. ... As we understand it, this was not an organized party; it appears it was just a few young men drinking.

To the present time, that's not something that's been part of the alcohol policy. That may be a change we have to make — extending the UI's interest in even casual drinking; that's something we'll have to consider.

DRINKING HABITS

sions from the media, with society influencing them."

Every year, Student Health Services does a Health Practices and Interest Survey to assess student behavior. Last year it surveyed 800 students.

Julie Rohovit, the alcohol education programming coordinator for Student Health Service said the surveys give Student Health officials an idea of what happens on campus.

"It never fails that alcohol (education) is way down on (students') priority lists," she said. "With the recent campus experience, drinking behaviors may not change, but students' response to someone who's had too much may change."

Farrell said he's not drinking as much as he used to, but still considers himself a binge drinker.

"I'm sort of winding down on the drinking stage," he said. "With the (Garofalo) incident in mind, it has made me think more about acting responsibly. I don't see how somebody would be able to drink and not have it cross your mind at one point or another."

Brown said when students come to college, they expect alcohol to be readily accessible.

"It's a big part of how we define the college experience," he said. "I've thought about the health risk. Most people aren't thinking about it when they go out."

The UI was one of two Iowa schools interviewed for the Harvard School of Health survey, which included 15,000 students at 115 schools, about alcohol use on college campuses. The report defined binge drinking as five or more drinks in a row in two weeks for men and four or more drinks for women.

"Among college students, binge drinking is a problem," Rohovit said. "The Harvard report confirms what we already know. We're right in there with the national average. Attitudes have not changed significantly and we're still trying to find effective prevention techniques."

Mary Peterson, program associate for the UI Student Activity Board, said people who excessively use alcohol may be skirting danger.

"When you're young, you're a risk taker," Peterson said. "That doesn't mean you're a bad person. I don't think students go into it (a situation with alcohol) thinking it's destructive."

Peterson said she doesn't know the answer to making students aware of dangerous activity.

"I've been doing this for many years and there's not an answer," she said. "We have to use every type of forum of life skills to make an impact. We get frustrated; we want people to learn quickly or more than they want to."

NewsBriefs

Weekend scuffle shatters bar window

A fight in the Pedestrian Mall Saturday night left a front window at Vito's shattered, and an eyewitness said the brawl led to another assault on a random passerby.

A UI junior who witnessed the event said the fight broke out at about 1:30 a.m. in front of Vito's, 118 E. College St.

The witness said a man pushed another against the window closest to Hardee's, 125 S. Dubuque St., and it cracked and broke. The man who hit the window fell to the ground, the witness said.

Three men, who didn't seem to be associated with the first man, began kicking the downed man in the head and ribs, the witness said.

"The three guys just came out of nowhere and did what they wanted to do," she said.

The manager of Vito's wasn't available for comment Sunday, but bartender James Tony described part of the event.

"Some guy put some guy in a headlock and threw him at our window," he said.

After the men ran off, the witness said she checked to see if the downed man was OK while her friend called an ambulance.

As she approached the man, she said a passerby got hit by a different man and was knocked out. The witness said she didn't think the two men who were assaulted had any connection to each other.

"I think the second guy was just a random guy in the wrong place at the wrong time," she said.

Both men were taken away by ambulance.

The witness said police were nowhere to be seen during the fights.

Peace in Balkans:
an uphill battleDusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Aggressive U.S. diplomacy, NATO's military muscle and the Bosnian government's stunning battlefield victories could combine to bring peace to the Balkans after more than four years of war.

But in a region where nothing is predictable and warring sides have rarely kept their pledges, announcing a swift end to the fighting in Bosnia and Croatia is an optimistic gamble.

Following up on their Sept. 8 agreement to split Bosnia about 50-50 between the rebel Serbs and the Muslim-Croat federation, the foreign ministers of Serb-led Yugoslavia, Croatia and Bosnia are to meet in New York Tuesday to focus on details that have stymied all previous peace attempts.

Sources close to U.S. mediator Richard Holbrooke said the main topics during the meeting, chaired by Secretary of State Warren Christopher, will be a cease-fire, the maps of division and constitutional issues.

Thanks to Holbrooke's shuttle diplomacy between the warring sides and NATO air strikes on Serb positions, "there is now a real chance for peace in Bosnia," President Clinton said Saturday. "We must seize it."

But in staking out their positions in recent days, the warring sides have shown how difficult achieving peace may be.

The Muslim-led Bosnian government demands full control of Serb-besieged Sarajevo and territory that would link the capital with Gorazde, the last remaining government-held enclave in eastern Bosnia. They also want Banja Luka, the largest Serb-held town in Bosnia, to be demilitarized.

Bosnian Serb leaders insist on the return of land in central and northwestern Bosnia that was retaken from them by government and Croat forces. That offensive reduced Serb holdings from two-thirds of Bosnia to roughly the 49 percent the rebels would get in any peace settlement.

The Serbs also want their land within Bosnia to be virtually an independent country. The Bosnian government and Holbrooke want to retain some central state structure common to both halves of Bosnia.

Differences also remain within the Croat-Muslim alliance. Many of the recent military gains were made by Croatian forces, who showed little enthusiasm for sharing territory with the Bosnian government. The government, meanwhile, has always feared being squeezed out by Serbs and Croats.

It is not clear how much the Muslim-Croat victories and massive NATO air strikes on Serb positions have helped the peace process.

Some analysts say the victories will make agreement on borders that much simpler. But others fear they may prompt the Croat-Muslim alliance to continue the offensive or demand more territory than the U.S. plan offers.

"It is highly doubtful that Muslims and Croats will now accept a plan that is giving them only what they already have on the battlefield," said the independent Belgrade weekly NIN. "Why wouldn't they now demand some major concessions from the Serbs?"

The foreign minister of Serb-led Yugoslavia, Milan Milutinovic, and his Bosnian and Croatian counterparts, Muhamed Sacirbey and Mate Granic, will also discuss the constitutional framework of Bosnia — in particular whether it will establish some sort of central rule for the two entities.

The three ministers are supposed to prepare the way for a big conference on former Yugoslavia that would bring together the leaders of all warring sides in former Yugoslavia for a final peace settlement. Bosnian government radio has said that may take place in October in Washington.

N.Y. bombing trial waning;
jury continues deliberationsLarry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Prosecutors in the biggest terrorism trial in U.S. history accused Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman and nine others of hatching a "monstrous" plot to kill thousands of people in a series of bombings in New York.

But by the time the jury began deliberating Saturday, the defense had put the tactics of the nation's top law enforcement agency on trial, accusing the FBI of plotting to frame the defendants to revive its reputation.

"This case is about one of the biggest and most embarrassing moments in the FBI's history," defense lawyer John Jacobs told the jury in U.S. District Court.

Abdel-Rahman, a blind, Egyptian religious leader, is charged with leading 14 Muslims in a plot to bomb the United Nations, the FBI's Manhattan offices, the Holland and Lincoln tunnels and the George Washington Bridge — all in a single day.

Three defendants pleaded guilty, a fourth testified for the government and a fifth will be tried later.

The remaining 10 defendants, if convicted, face maximum prison sentences ranging from life to 20 years. Deliberations continued Sunday and are expected to last about two weeks.

The sheik, prosecutors say, is a Muslim fundamentalist who saw the United States as Islam's worst enemy. He also is accused of inspiring others to kill Rabbi Meir Kahane in 1990, bomb the World Trade Center in 1993 and plan to assassinate Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak during a U.S. visit.

Abdel-Rahman's alleged role was giving followers religious sanction to bomb, assassinate, kidnap and kill to persuade the United States to change its Middle East policies.

When the trial began nine months ago, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Khuzami accused the defendants of devising "a battle plan that was so horrible, so monstrous, so vicious that if it had been successful the lives of every person in this city and in this nation would be changed forever."

Prosecutors played dozens of taped conversations that were secretly recorded by FBI informant Emad Salem. They showed videotape of five defendants allegedly mixing a bomb in a garage — although a prosecution expert testified the device lacked the right mix of ingredients to explode.

Prosecutors provided the jury with transcripts of speeches in which Abdel-Rahman urged attacks on the U.S. military in the Middle East. And they spent weeks showing evidence from the Trade Center bombing, even though none of the defendants was directly charged in the attack.

But authorities may have stretched the evidence, said Vincent Cannistraro, the CIA's chief of counterterrorism operations from 1988 to 1990.

"I think law enforcement may have provoked a greater conspiracy here," Cannistraro said, "in an effort to show they were on top of things after the World Trade Center."

The defense accused FBI agents and Salem of concocting the bomb plot so they could race in and play hero.

COMPUTER ANALYSIS CONDUCTED

African-Americans tend to receive longer prison terms

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — African-Americans get prison sentences which are about 10 percent longer than whites for similar federal crimes, according to a computer analysis published Sunday.

Whites convicted in 1992-93 received an average sentence of 33 months, while blacks got 36 months, The Tennessean reported. The computer study examined all 80,000 federal court convictions during the two years, comparing cases where the seriousness of the crime and criminal histories were equal.

The study found the highest black-white sentencing disparity — 13 percent — in the West.

The South had the lowest regional disparity, with 3 percent. Sentences for blacks were 12 percent higher in the Midwest and 10 percent in the Northeast.

Latinos received sentences comparable to whites. Too few Asians and other minorities were convicted of federal crimes for a statistically valid comparison, the newspaper said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson blamed the disparity on the subconscious cultural bias of the majority white justice system. The federal court system has 82 African-American judges and 1,382 white judges.

"It's the non-dramatic, institutional racism that's the problem," Jackson told the paper. "Cultural bias exists and some people are punished on stereotypes ... so much so, it appears to be natural, it's so standard."

But Richard Conaboy, chairperson of the U.S. Sentencing Commission, said some of the differences may be attributable to factors in sentencing the study did not take into account, such as a defendant's work record.

The seven-member Sentencing Commission was created a decade ago to equalize federal criminal sentences. It keeps the records analyzed by The Tennessean.

An analyst at the Sentencing Commission, whom The Tennessean did not identify, faulted the newspaper's method, saying examining crimes by category may not reflect differences within categories.

French teen opens fire on family, villagers

Associated Press

TOULON, France — Fresh from murdering his parents and brother in their home, a teen-ager walked to the next village Sunday and calmly opened fire on a quiet town square, killing eight more people before turning the gun on himself.

The murder-suicide in southern France was the country's worst multiple killing since 1989.

"It was like he was hunting birds," said Guy Sintès, the owner of a cafe on the square in Cuers, a sunny village near the Mediterranean port of Toulon.

Television footage from the scene showed sidewalks and a car splattered with blood and a bullet hole through a shop window.

"The people are devastated, totally traumatized. The village is in shock," Cuers Mayor Guy Gigou said.

The boy was identified as Eric Borel, 16, but the impetus for the killings was unclear.

Neighbors of his family, interviewed on French television, described him as taciturn and said his room was plastered with posters of Hitler and neo-Nazi themes.

Villagers with eyes red from crying sat on the ground, shaking their heads as they recalled traumatic scenes: An old woman shot as she walked her dog, an elderly man gunned down on his way to the cafe.

Two victims were killed while withdrawing money from a cash machine and another while playing boules — the Provençal bowling game — on the village square.

Sintès said he watched the killer retrace his steps toward a man he had wounded in the stomach to shoot him again in the head, killing him.

"He was very calm, very poised. He put the gun to his shoulder, held his gun steady, adjusted his aim and fired," Sintès said.

The killings began in the village of Solliès-Pont, about six miles north of Toulon. There, the 16-year-old boy used a hammer and baseball bat to kill his father, mother and brother.

The boy then walked to Cuers, about three miles north, where he began shooting at random in a parking lot, outside a bank and in the town square where villagers shopped.

He killed seven people and wounded nine others before he shot himself, police said. One of the injured later died, bringing the total to eight.

"He was shooting at anything that moved. He was firing everywhere," a woman living in Cuers told France-Info radio.

Another witness from the village said the boy did not appear agitated.

A rescue team carries the coffin of a victim killed by a teen-ager out of the stadium in Cuers, a village north of the Mediterranean port of Toulon, south of France, Sunday. The 16-year-old boy bludgeoned three family members then opened fire in Cuers killing eight people, wounding nine, before turning the gun on himself.

"I saw him go past my shop with his rifle, at around 8:00 this morning. He was walking calmly, he wasn't in a hurry," said Frederic Bares, who runs a newsstand in the village.

"At first I thought he was a hunter. He was about 25 meters from my place when I saw him shoot a passerby, a shopkeeper who I think was hit in the head," Bares said on French radio.

As he ran to call police, he heard other shots, he said.

Police found the seven bodies of the victims scattered in streets throughout the village.

Rescue teams prepared a morgue in the village gymnasium and an emergency medical post in the soccer stadium. Three helicopters flew to the town to transport the wounded to Toulon's hospital.

France has tight gun-control laws for handguns, but not for hunting rifles, which can be purchased by anyone with a hunting license.

Minors require parental permission.

Sunday's massacre was France's worst multiple killing since 1989, when a man shot 14 people, including his mother and sister. He was later acquitted due to insanity.

Such incidents are rare in France.

In all but one of the 13 multiple killings since 1989, the victims were family members of the killers.

NOT A WIN OR LOSE CASE

'Parents' denied custody of fosterling

Associated Press

WEST CHESTER, Pa. — More than a year after a 4-year-old African-American girl was removed from her white foster family's care, a judge has granted permanent custody to an African-American social worker who sought to adopt her.

Chester County Common Pleas Judge Alexander Endy rejected an independent report by psychiatrists that Alexa Fell should be returned to William and Debi Fell, who cared for her for the first three years of her life.

Endy said Alexa should remain with Darlene Herring, with whom she has lived since July 1994.

"Alexa's need for love, stability, corrective rehabilitation, socialization and psychological well-being will be best-served by her adoption by Darlene Herring," the judge said in Friday's ruling.

The decision clears the way for Herring to adopt Alexa, said Michael Churchill, the Fells' attorney. He said the Fells had not decided whether to appeal the ruling.

Alexa, born to a drug-addicted mother in Chester County, was given to the Fells when she was 4 months old.

At first, she was to be adopted by her aunt, but the aunt decided she didn't want Alexa and the Fells sought to adopt her.

But the county Department of Children, Youth and Families removed her on July 22, 1994, after naming Herring, who lives outside Washington, to be her adoptive parent. Herring's name appeared on a list of people interested in adopting a child.

She was not professionally involved in the case.

The Fells filed a civil rights lawsuit in federal court, contending they were rejected because the agency wanted to racially match parents and children.

The Fells and the county agreed to settle the lawsuit by letting independent psychiatrists decide where Alexa should live.

Their report, filed in July, said Alexa's behavior "reflected deeper bonding" to the Fell family.

Herring challenged the ruling and said the Fells, who have parented 32 foster children, neglected and abused Alexa. The Fells deny the accusations.

"I think it's one of the worst rulings that I've seen in 30 years of practice in terms of disregard of the evidence and in terms of its hostility toward foster parents," Churchill said.

Herring could not be immediately reached; her telephone number is unlisted.

Endy issued his decision after a series of closed hearings which began in August.

The case "should not be perceived as a contest, but rather a search for the best result for the child, in which the child is the winner and there is no loser," he said.

PRESIDENT SUPPORTS AFFIRMATIVE ACTION

Powell could steal Clinton supporters

Jim Abrams

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton voiced his support for affirmative action to an African-American audience that included two men who might launch campaigns to drive him from the White House, Jesse Jackson and Gen. Colin Powell.

Clinton received a cordial greeting Saturday night when he told a Congressional Black Caucus awards dinner he would defend affirmative action programs because "if it were not for Clinton

But on Sunday, two prominent African-American Democrats, former Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder and former Black Caucus head Rep. Kweisi Mfume of Maryland, both indicated they could support a Powell challenge to Clinton.

"If he's right on the issues, I could support him," Wilder, who briefly ran for the 1992 Democratic presidential nomination, said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Mfume, a friend of Powell's, said he would support the Democratic nominee, presumably Clinton, "at this point," but added "things have a way of changing in this world and in this town."

Clinton's lock on African-American support has been undermined this year by his shift toward the middle on such issues as welfare reform and balancing the budget in the face of the powerful conservative agenda being pushed by Republicans in Congress.

On affirmative action, he has pledged that programs guaranteeing all Americans a fair shot at jobs and educational opportunities will stay, but has also agreed to take a second look at such programs to ensure they are working properly.

Jackson, speaking Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation," said his candidacy remains a "live option," but said Clinton would deserve to win if he focuses on the issues of jobs and education rather than welfare reform and crime.

Jackson, who has criticized Powell for not coming out strongly on African-American issues, said the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff had the "right stuff." Powell's values are such that "if he has the will to go deeper, he certainly has the skill and the appeal," Jackson said.

Mfume questioned whether Powell's current popularity could last. "It's a courtship right now. Whether or not it becomes a marriage remains to be seen."

Powell, currently on a national tour to promote his memoirs, has not stated whether he will be a candidate, or whether he would run as an independent or a Republican.

Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, who is seeking the GOP nomination, said on NBC's "Meet the Press" he thought Powell was "a little too liberal for our party this year." Powell has said he supports affirmative action and gun control and is pro-choice.

Former Education Secretary William Bennett, a leading GOP conservative, said on ABC he could support a pro-choice candidate, depending on his views on other issues.

Bennett said Americans see Powell as a potentially strong leader. "The American people look at him and say, 'Maybe this guy can talk to the American people, can talk to the young people and get them back in some sense of good direction.'"

Professor's protest means $1,000 for custodian

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An Ohio State University professor has donated $1,000 of his salary each of the past four years to protest other educators' big paychecks.

This year, William Eldridge's donation is going to Gene Goudy, a 61-year-old janitor who makes $14,000 a year.

"I'm redistributing it to a janitor to illustrate how difficult it is for these people to make a living," said Eldridge, a sociology professor who earns $46,392 after his voluntary reduction.

Eldridge was angered this year by a 31 percent pay raise OSU President Gordon Gee received from university trustees. Gee now makes $220,000.

In previous years, Eldridge's $1,000 has gone to the university's general fund, the lowest-paid staff member at the OSU's College of Social Work and the college's Black Student Association.

Goudy is all for the professor's protest.

"I think it's great," he said. "I wish there were more people who would do this. It's awful thoughtful of him."

Pope calls for ban of arms sales to Africa

CASTELGANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Wealthy nations are helping to increase Africa's suffering with policies that favor arms sales over humanitarian aid, Pope John Paul II said Sunday.

"The eyes of the African children are watching you," said the pontiff, who returned last week from a three-nation African trip.

During the visit — the pope's 11th to Africa — John Paul sharply criticized the West for not doing enough to help Africa and demanded a ban on arms sales to the continent.

"I feel it's necessary to bring Africa to the conscience of the world — to the world of opulence — that doesn't care if resources are taken from the poor and invested in deadly arms," the pope said in an address at his summer residence outside Rome.

The pope is scheduled to visit the United States Oct. 4-7.

Angolan factions hope to rebuild country

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Leaders of both sides of Angola's civil war briefly set aside their hostility Sunday and joined in an appeal for international aid to rebuild their shattered nation.

President Jose Eduardo dos Santos and rebel leader Jonas Savimbi met on the eve of a U.N.-sponsored conference to raise money to rebuild a country crippled by 35 years of almost continuous warfare.

The meeting was only the third between the two long-time foes since an agreement last November led to a fragile cease-fire. Both leaders declined to comment after the hour-long meeting.

Historic peace accord bodes cooperation in Middle East

Donna Abu Nasr
Associated Press

TABA, Egypt — After all-night talks, a shouting match and an angry walkout by Yasser Arafat, Israel and the PLO agreed Sunday to sign a pact at the White House ending nearly three decades of Israeli occupation of West Bank cities.

The agreement, the second phase of the 1993 Israel-PLO peace treaty, was hailed by Palestinian leaders as a major step toward creating their own state. Other Palestinians said it gave them too little, and militant Jewish settlers vowed to do anything necessary to scuttle it.

"It is a tremendous attempt to bring people that were born in the same cradle, who were fighting on the same fronts, to agree on a new future."

Israeli Foreign Minister
Shimon Peres

The 460-page pact allows for Palestinian self-rule in 30 percent of the West Bank — containing most of its Arab population — after a step-by-step Israeli pullout. Israel has occupied the lands since the 1967 Mideast War.

The plan also allows for Palestinian elections. The accord was initialed in Taba, an Egyptian resort on the Red Sea, by the chief negotiators, Ahmed Qureia of the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel's Uri Savir, just before the Jewish New Year. The signing in Washington is set for Thursday.

"We will work so that this new year will be a real year of peace," said Arafat, the PLO chairman. "This agreement will open the door for a better future ... to create a new Middle East of security and peace."

The agreement followed night-long talks that capped more than 80 hours of tense negotiations. Earlier Sunday, a shouting match erupted between Arafat and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and the PLO leader stormed out.

Arafat was angry that Israel refused to expand the borders of the self-rule enclave in Jericho. There were also reports he wanted a more specific timetable for the release of about 5,000 Palestinians in Israeli jails.

But Arafat relented after Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin promised to discuss the prisoner issue in Washington before Thursday's signing, Palestinian sources said.

Other officials said talks got back on track after intervention by U.S. Mideast coordinator Dennis Ross and Egyptian officials.

Peres called the accord "history in the real meaning of the word." "It is a tremendous attempt to bring people that were born in the same cradle, who were fighting on the same fronts, to agree on a new future," he said.

President Clinton called the agreement "a big step on the road to a just and lasting peace in the Middle East."

Clinton telephoned five Israeli and Arab leaders — Rabin, Arafat, King Hussein of Jordan, President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and King Hassan of Morocco — to invite each of them to a formal signing ceremony Thursday at the White House, said White House spokesperson Ginny Terzano.

The spokesperson said all accepted except Hassan, who cited a scheduling conflict and said he would send a representative.

Extremists on both sides of the political divide in Israel and the West Bank pledged to wreck the accord.

Militant Jewish settlers warned of bloodshed and vowed violent opposition. And as news of the pact spread in the West Bank, Palestinian youths hurled stones at Israeli soldiers in two cities. In Nablus, a youth was killed in the fourth day of clashes.

In Hebron, protesting youths were disappointed the agreement will not bring a full Israeli withdrawal. Some troops are to remain to protect the 450 settlers living among the city's 120,000 Palestinians.

The agreement detailed security measures aimed at preventing conflict between radicals among the 140,000 Jewish settlers and the 1 million Arabs in the West Bank.

A summary of the agreement said it would "allow the Palestinians to conduct their own internal affairs, reduce points of friction between Israelis and Palestinians and open a new era of cooperation and coexistence based on common interest, dignity and mutual respect."

Rabin said Palestinians would get control over 30 percent of the 2,270-square-mile West Bank, which is about the size of Delaware.

The accord distinguishes between the seven cities where there will be full autonomy — Jenin, Nablus, Tulkarm, Qalqilya, Ramallah, Bethlehem and most of Hebron — and rural areas where overriding security authority will remain in Israeli hands.

The 12,000-strong Palestinian police force is expected to carry out joint patrols with Israelis in some areas. But the Palestinian police will not have authority to arrest Israelis.

The Israeli withdrawal will clear the way for Palestinians to elect an 82-member self-rule council with legislative and executive branches. Palestinians want elections before Jan. 20, but some said they would wait until March, the deadline for an Israeli troop pullout from Hebron.

Israel's Channel Two TV said a pullout would begin within 10 days of the White House signing. But Israeli officials said it might be weeks before the first troops start withdrawing.

Air Force crew dies in training flight

Maureen Clark

ELMENDORF AIR FORCE BASE, Alaska — The metal shreds that were once a giant AWACS plane smoldered Saturday in the charred birch wood where it went down, while relatives of the 24 crew members learned of their loss.

"In an accident this catastrophic, it's difficult to find what parts are exactly what," said Col. Charlie Lambert, head of an interim team of investigators. He said the cockpit voice recorder was recovered and the wreckage of the four engines identified.

The board of officers which will investigate Friday's crash began arriving at Elmendorf, two miles north of downtown Anchorage, as other investigators picked through the rubble for clues.

The last two crewmen were identified and all the families were notified Friday and Saturday, Air Force spokesperson Kathy Fawcett said. The Air Force released a list of the crewmen's occupations and most of their hometowns.

The Air Force set up a telephone number staffed by chaplains and other counselors for relatives in need of comfort.

It was the first crash of an Airborne Warning and Control System plane since the Air Force began using them in 1977.

Rushing reform is immoral

The new Republican-controlled House of Representatives took only 30 days in January to vote on the much-heralded "Contract with America," while the more stable Senate took much longer.

No more. The heat of the summer recess has charged both wings of Congress.

The Senate last week passed a wide-sweeping welfare reform package and proposed several changes to the nation's Medicare program, while House Republicans unveiled the outlines of their own broad Medicare reform proposals and looked to cut billions of dollars from the Medicaid budget.

The House moved at the speed of light in the spring and they now appear ready to move twice as fast. House Republicans are in such a rush to reform Medicare, they don't plan to waste time by holding superfluous hearings. The GOP plans to hold hearings for only one day.

The majority party is demonstrating a recklessness which reveals the utter contempt and disdain they hold for the people of this country.

Medicare affects every person in the United States over 65; 67 if Senate Republicans get their way. Yet, the majority party isn't even pretending to care what voters think of their proposals, which they refuse to expose or explicate to the minority party or

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

House Republicans are being reckless in their pursuit of Medicare and Medicaid reform.

the general public. Nor do they care how the Medicare changes will affect tens of millions of the elderly and their families.

Our own Rep. Jim Leach has held more hearings to discuss President Clinton's old investments than the House will hold to learn about Medicare reform.

To underscore this incredible inequity, House Democrats last week held the first in a series of their own unofficial hearings outside in the rain on Capitol Hill.

In other areas of Congress, a House committee has approved shifting to states much of the control of Medicaid — the government-financed medical coverage for poor people. In effect, this would completely remove the federal "safety net" that has helped the people, communities and churches which cities and states have historically been unable or unwilling to help. The Republicans are taking the "aid" out of Medicaid and the "care" out of Medicare and are leaving millions of people to suffer on their own.

The effects of Republican haste will be long-lasting and devastating. The majority party is systematically dismantling more than 70 years worth of legislation. Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal and Lyndon Johnson's Great Society are being scraped and thrown away for the sake of political gain and to finance favors for big businesses and other special interest groups who are bankrolling the "Republican Revolution."

The current temperament in Congress demonstrates how far the country has drifted away from the philosophy of Vice President Hubert Humphrey, who in his last speech in 1977, said "the moral test of government is how it treats those who are in the dawn of life, the children; those who are in the twilight of life, the aged; and those who are in the shadows of life, the sick, the needy and the handicapped."

The new GOP Congressional majority is failing this simple and humane moral test. They should be ashamed of themselves.

Wise choices common sense defray power of 'the alcohol problem'

Given the recent alcohol-related tragedy on campus, one hears urgent pleas about solving the "alcohol problem" on campus. We all wish for solutions reducing excessive use of alcohol and the negative consequences of such abuse. But simple solutions ("just say no") don't work because we don't fully understand why college students — our friends, our roommates, our daughters, our sons — knowingly jeopardize their health.

One way to frame the alcohol problem is to understand the very real barriers college students face in addressing alcohol use. Typically, we provide scare scenarios ("you are going to be an alcoholic") and/or shame college students by calling them fools and reprobates.

There are three barriers worth considering and challenging: beliefs, living environment and peer pressure. Before addressing these three, it should be noted that the larger social context of student drinking is supportive and promotes excessive drinking. Research shows a majority of traditional college students drink alcohol (over 80 percent) and most are not of legal drinking age. It is part of the college culture — from tailgating at sporting events to fraternity parties. Alcohol is big business for campus communities.

These are some of the realities which underlie the following barriers for students who seek residences which include opportunities for social interaction and friendships without the pressure of excessive drinking.

GUEST EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

As the UI community tries to fathom the alcohol-related death of a fraternity member, people should remember the "just say no" kind of warnings won't help college drinkers.

The first barrier has to do with beliefs; the generally positive expectancies college students have about drinking. Pleasure ("drinking makes me feel good; drinking is fun") and confidence ("drinking makes me feel comfortable in social situations") are major expectations college students have. The challenge is to recognize the undesirable attributes — hangover, nonconsensual or coerced sex, vandalism, drunken driving and death — which are usually denied ("It doesn't happen here").

The second barrier is the college housing environment one chooses. Many peer-living environments (such as fraternities) encourage excessive alcohol consumption as normal behavior. A challenge for colleges is providing living environments for students who seek residences which include opportunities for social interaction and friendships without the pressure of excessive drinking.

Finally, peer influence is also an important predictor of alcohol use. That is, students who associate with more friends who are drinkers tend to drink more than students who associate with fewer friends who are drinkers. Challenging peer pressure is a daunting task requiring social skills and maturity with which most of us struggle throughout our lives.

In the "alcohol culture" of campus life, it usually isn't a dichotomy between excessive drinking or abstinence. We need to create more options (e.g., responsible drinking or having only one drink or a nonalcoholic drink at a party), make better choices (e.g., living environments, friends) and assume more responsibility (e.g., develop assertion skills, ask moderate, light, or nondrinkers how they confront peer pressure).

Although it may sound easy, it is not. What it is, is facing the complexity, reality and power of the alcohol problem with creative options, wise choices, a few good friends and a lot of common sense.

Shows too much

Saturday night I went to see "Showgirls."

I just couldn't pass up the opportunity to see Jessie Spanno (Elizabeth Berkley) from "Saved by the Bell" naked. I thought it would be hilarious.

And it was for a while — the combination of bad acting, horrible one liners, glitz, glam and cheap skin shots (which, by the way, were all penis-free) were at about the caliber of tastelessness I was expecting. But when the seamstress character was laid out on a bed and beaten and raped by three men, I could barely move. A man sitting next to me in the theater could hear it, and he walked out.

The thing was, that wasn't the first rape scene in the movie. In one of the dance scenes (including lots of leather and motorcycles), the lead dancer is raped as a part of the choreography by four male dancers. It's not at the center of the shoot though. It's almost subliminal. And it's almost sexy.

"That's the business," Kyle MacLachlan said. "That doesn't suck," Jesse Spanno said. I say, "Showgirls" is every woman's nightmare.

Ditch swimsuits and songs — Miss America should vacuum

Last weekend my roommate and I were watching a little tube before we got ready to go out. He was flipping through channels when he came upon the Miss America pageant. Since "WWF's Monday Night Raw" is only on Mondays (hence, the name) and the "Amazing Adventures of Hercules" was over, we decided to watch it. I have to tell you, I actually enjoyed it and really got into the whole interactive TV, call-in-and-change-the-world theme they had going. It really kind of impressed me.

It was so official. They had at least a dozen scientists in white lab coats just to make sure the results weren't skewed or tampered with in any way. Now, why you need a dozen scientists in lab coats to answer a phone and check either the yes or the no box is beyond me. But, I guess the producers figured if they were going to run a poll, they were going to go the whole nine yards.

This perfectionism inspired me, and after I finished off my fourth or fifth beer, I decided to call in and "rock the vote" a little. I called like seven times but kept getting the same response from the voice on the other line. "Sir, for the last time," the voice said in a nasally twang unique to scientists in white lab coats, "this is a vote to decide whether the swimsuit portion of the competition is conducted. Naked is not one of the options."

"Oh, now I get it, Franco," I said, kind of slurring my words a little. "You only count the votes you like. Well, listen you fascist, my kind of democracy doesn't work that way, and my kind of America isn't run that way. So, why don't you get on a plane and go back to the motherland."

I hung up and we started watching a little more. Then I got an idea and called back.

"Hi, yeah, it's me again, the psychopath. Sorry about that," I said. "Anyway, I got another vote. I vote the contestants are no longer allowed to sing in the talent part of the show. All they do is belt out crappy show tunes and it's starting to make my melon ache. I vote for talent they should come out and vacuum, or wash dishes or something."

(That was just a joke. There was no deep meaning behind it and it wasn't any kind of indictment against women in any way. I love women. In fact, my mother's a woman. That last comment was

*I called like seven times but kept getting the same response from the voice on the other line. meant to be taken in a lighthearted way. It resides in the joke world. As Dennis Miller said, "there is a real world and there is a joke world, and the joke world can get a little tough, so wear a cup.")

That time the operator didn't even give me the dignity of a response and I got nothing but a dial tone. I was undaunted, though. I had a voice and I demanded to be heard. I called back.

"Yeah, hello it's me again," I said. "No, no, wait — don't hang up. I got another vote. I vote for the rest of the show Kathy Lee Gifford is not allowed to dress up like the wicked stepmother from 'Snow White.'"

Click. I called back.

"Yeah, hey it's me again. There must be something wrong with your line because I keep getting cut off. Anyway, I got another vote. No, no I'm serious. No, wait, don't call the cops — this is a real good one. I vote that for the final act of your little show, Regis has to fight Miss America 1941 to the death. Is that a ratings booster or what? Am I not a genius? I don't have all the logistics worked out, yet. I mean, you'd have to erect a Thunderdome right there on the set and I don't know if you've got that kind of square footage. Also, Miss America looks like she's in pretty good shape for an old lady. We'd probably have to give Regis a club or something to even it out, but those are just details. See, I'm not into details, I'm more of an idea man, ya know. I remember this one time when ... hello, hello."

Apparently the operator was so impressed by my idea he hung up without even saying goodbye. "Ah, democracy," I thought as I leaned back and opened up another cool one. "You've got to love it. God bless America."

Handcrafted bomb uncovered near Detroit distribution center

DETROIT — A homemade bomb was dismantled Sunday outside a Detroit Newspapers distribution center, and management said 1 million papers were transported past striking union workers.

A bomb squad went to the Detroit center after police received a threat between 8 and 10 a.m., police Officer Fatima Cotton said. There were no injuries and no suspects.

The bomb was "sort of a car battery with a fuse and some nails taped or glued to it," executive deputy police chief Benny Napoleon said.

Union officials condemned the action.

"This is deplorable," said Joe Swickard, spokesman for the Newspaper Guild. "It serves no positive purpose."

Six unions representing 2,500 employees struck Detroit Newspapers, which runs the business and production operations of the Detroit Free Press and the Detroit News, on July 13. The strike began after management refused to further extend contracts that expired on April 30, and key issues were wages and work rules.

The newspapers are publishing with the help of managers, replacement workers and employees who have crossed picket lines.

Pickets outside the distribution center briefly blocked trucks preparing to deliver the Sunday edition. Five people were arrested on disorderly conduct charges and released, Cotton said.

FEMALES MAKE UP 40 PERCENT OF AUDIENCE

Political radio shows gain popularity among many American social groups

Darlene Superville

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Contrary to the conventional wisdom, "angry white males" aren't the only fans of political talk radio, according to a new survey of talk radio stations released Sunday.

The TALK DAILY nationwide poll of more than 3,000 people who said they listened to a program the day before or on the day they were questioned found that women make up a surprising 40 percent of the audience.

Meanwhile, the stereotypically angry, white Republican male comprised a meager 22 percent of the listening public, according to the new daily digest of some of the nation's leading political talk radio shows.

The survey also found that most listeners are not Republican and 90 percent are registered to vote. They also are more likely than the general public to have college degrees and to have higher incomes.

And nine programs claim more than 60 percent of the listening audience.

"So much of the conventional wisdom has been that the audience is angry, Republican men and the audience is actually more diverse than that," said Bill Adams, who is starting the daily fax reports on talk radio next month.

The telephone survey of 3,035 adults, conducted in July and August by Adams' public opinion research firm in Arlington, Va., has an error margin of plus or minus 2 percentage points.

"Dozens of these (hosts) claim to be on everywhere and have huge audiences, but we wanted to see who had a large enough national audience for us to track," Adams said.

According to TALK DAILY, the top nine political talk radio hosts are: Rush Limbaugh; convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy; Bob Grant and Tom Leykis (tied); Michael Jackson, Ken Hamblin, Chuck Harder, Iran-Contra figure Oliver North and Michael Reagan (also tied).

The 10th host was impossible to identify, Adams said, because the rest of the audience is split among dozens of local and regional programs.

Of the top nine, Leykis and Jackson are considered liberals; the rest are conservative. Except for Grant of New York City and Jackson of Los Angeles, all of the programs are syndicated nationally each weekday.

TALK DAILY will track these nine shows plus the leading programs in Seattle, Dallas and Atlanta. For the next few months, it will also monitor talk shows in Des Moines and Manchester, N.H., because of the upcoming 1996 presidential caucuses and primaries in those two states.

The reports will pay close attention to coverage of the presidential campaigns and issues, President Clinton and members of Congress, Adams said.

Subscribers will receive their first overnight fax reports on Oct. 3.

Among the poll's other findings:

- Three-fourths of the talk radio audience is younger than age 60.
- Republicans comprise just 38 percent of the audience.
- Nine of 10 political talk radio listeners are registered to vote, compared with six of 10 Americans.

- Listeners tend to be better educated, with 39 percent holding college degrees, compared with 21 percent of Americans overall.
- In terms of annual family income, 30 percent of listeners exceed the $60,000 mark, while just 20 percent of the general public have similar incomes.
- Two-thirds of listeners say talk radio is a very or moderately important source of political information and ideas.

OFFICIALS SUSPECTED FOUL PLAY

Woman charged with murder for suffocating infant

Mike Drago

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A woman suspected of trying to strangle her 2-year-old son has confessed to her mother she drowned two of her infants and smothered a third, the first when she was just 14.

Claudette Kibble, 23, was charged with murder Friday in the 1990 suffocation of 9-month-old Quinten.

She was not charged in the other deaths because she was a minor at the time, authorities said.

Investigators had long suspected foul play in the death of Quinten, the 1988 death of 8-month-old Edward and the 1986 death of 1-year-old Joshua, born when Kibble was 13, but they couldn't prove anything until this week, when she confessed to her mother, who contacted authorities.

"I want you to know this is horrifying. It's a living nightmare," Judy Hay, a spokesperson for state Child Protective Services, said.

"From the very beginning we were suspicious. ... Without evidence, particularly a medical examiner's report, the hands begin to be tied."

In all three cases, Kibble had taken the child to a hospital, claiming he was suffering from seizures. The Harris County medical examiner's office ruled two of the deaths were caused by seizures and left the third undetermined.

Cecil Wingo, chief investigator for the medical examiner's office, said his office has reopened the case several times since 1990 at the request of prosecutors, but the children bore no signs of abuse which would allow officials to prove Kibble had harmed them.

"We knew that something was wrong. We just didn't know where to go to find out," Wingo said. "We don't have a crystal ball."

On Tuesday, Kibble admitted drowning Joshua and Edward and suffocating Quinten with a pillow. Sgt. Dave Ferguson refused to discuss details, including any motive she may have given.

Kibble, already in custody on a charge of attempting to strangle 2-year-old Calvin, appeared Friday before state District Judge Ted Poe, who ordered a psychiatric evaluation to determine if she is fit to stand trial.

Calvin and his 6-year-old sister, Quintenett, have been in state custody since July 1994, not long after Kibble took Calvin to a hospital.

Kibble's mother said she always had suspicions since the circumstances were similar in each case and her daughter was the sole witness each time.

"I had questions, too. I wondered, but the doctors kept saying they had seizures," Beverly Dupree told the Houston Chronicle. "I don't know what happened. I don't know why she did it."

Dupree did not immediately return a call from AP on Saturday.

Playwrights Workshop and were replaced by the head of the theater department, Alan MacVey. The women said MacVey is less qualified than them to lead the workshop.

The women also said MacVey physically intimidated them. Mueller said he lunged at her at a faculty meeting, and on a separate occasion, cornered Berc into a wall and threatened her unless she stopped talking badly about him. MacVey said he denies both charges.

Judith Aikin, dean of Liberal Arts, said five or six committee members interviewed Berc and Mueller, students and other theatre faculty members over a period of several weeks last spring to decide the fate of the Playwrights Workshop. She said her decision to remove the women from the workshop was a result of the committee members' recommendations, which were based on the content of these interviews.

Mueller said she and Berc requested MacVey be removed from the Playwrights Workshop or move the workshop out of the theatre department.

Instead, the committee retaliated when it decided to remove the women, McClelland said.

the women time and the opportunity to appeal their removal from the Playwrights Workshop, McClelland said.

However, Aikin said the women never approached her before or after the decision to keep the workshop in the theatre department and remove the women from their teaching positions.

Schantz said the UI is surprised by some of the women's allegations. "I don't think gender discrimination is going on," he said. "I think it's about people having disagreements about academic issues that need to be resolved."

Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations, said the UI is surprised by the women's actions. She said the UI is not worried about the case.

"We feel we are on solid ground," she said. "Our actions were justified with regard to the professors' behavior."

Rhodes said the committee reports contain the reasoning behind the UI's action in removing the women from the Playwrights Workshop. She said the UI cannot release the reports because of confidential personnel matters.

McClelland should be the one to release this information, Rhodes said.

"(McClelland) is the one who got the media involved, so he should be the one to answer the media's questions," she said. "If he doesn't do this, it questions the validity of (Berc and Mueller's) claims."

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

to get into an exchange, which is a party jointly hosted by fraternities and sororities. We met a sorority member outside and walked in to the party as her guests.

The door checker asked us our names and if we were minors — which we both are. The door checker is required, as outlined in the Risk Management Policy, to ask us for two forms of identification.

However, our checker didn't ask to see our identification; she only asked if we had them with us. She marked our hands with an "M" and told us IFC had been to the party once. She told us if we saw a red light flashing while we were downstairs, we should put down our beers.

The basement was packed. We had no problem getting served alcohol; the people behind the bar didn't even ask to see our hands. We were warned again at the bar that if IFC came, we should put down our beers. We also saw beer bottles lying around — which are prohibited by the policy.

Nonalcoholic beverages such as soda were available, but I didn't see any unsalted food — another party requirement outlined in the policy. Unsalted food must be offered as an option since salted food contributes to dehydration.

Because I don't drink, I stood back observing the party, occasionally dancing, while everyone moved around, clutching cans or cups. The situation was very similar to what I have seen in various downtown bars.

I considered briefly whether people were thinking of Garofalo. I didn't see anyone passed out or fall down drunk. Mostly, people just seemed to be enjoying themselves.

The Interfraternity Council made the Risk Management Policy to prevent tragedies caused by alcohol abuse, but at this particular party, things didn't happen as outlined in the policy, and the Gamma Committee's presence wasn't enough to enforce the rules.

REILLY

deep lacerations. She was in the hospital for three weeks, and for one of those weeks she could not breathe on her own. Doctors also had to place a permanent filter in her heart to prevent blood clots.

"I was supposed to die, but I was wearing my seat belt," Reilly said. "You have so many questions when something this tragic happens to you."

The only physical reminders of the accident are photographs of Reilly's mangled car, scars on her legs and stomach and a bracelet telling of the filter in her heart.

Although the scars are daily reminders of the accident, she has no memory of the day.

At first, Reilly said she wanted to visit a psychologist and figure out what happened — how fast she was going, what the conditions were. However, she later decided she wants to keep the memory hidden.

Reilly was not issued a ticket for the accident, but because of the seriousness of the accident her license was revoked until last summer.

After returning home from the hospital, Reilly said she had "lots of time to think about life."

Reilly's mom, MaryAnn White of Washington, Iowa, said she noticed a change in her daughter and the family after the accident.

"It pulled everyone a little closer together," White said. "(Stephanie) realized everyone really did love her."

Friends and family helped in any way possible, from bringing flowers to taking a walk with her, Reilly said.

"When I came home I was so awful. They didn't care at all," she said.

Even though she was thankful for their support, Reilly said it was difficult to have others waiting on her and she would attempt to do things for herself, despite the pain.

Getting into the bathtub was difficult and taking a shower was intimidating because of the slippery floor, she said.

"I didn't want anything to hold me back," she said. That determination made her a "fast healer."

Reilly's high-school friend, UI sophomore Karmell Wehr, agrees Reilly's positive attitude is what helped her heal quickly.

"She's truly a person that's sure of herself," Wehr said. "She has this terrific outlook on things."

Because of the injuries, Reilly wasn't able to start school at the UI last fall. Now, going into her second semester, she's taking 18 semester hours in order to catch up.

"I want to get back in control with my life," Reilly said.

Reilly runs a few times a week and is looking forward to a career in broadcast journalism. Even though injuries from the accident have healed, Reilly said she may face arthritis or a hip replacement in the future due to the accident.

"I've learned to appreciate things a lot," she said.

SIMPSON TRIAL

Not to mention everyone else involved in this lumbering spectacle.

From snappy lawyers to weary journalists to the frequently cranky Ito, the strain of this year-old trial is visible.

"I think everybody is completely on edge," said Loyola University law school professor Laurie Levenson, whose legal commentary on the case appears in newspapers and on television broadcasts.

The behind-the-scenes support system for all the hype surrounding this trial is mind-boggling. Since last year, TV crews have run up to 80 miles of cable at the downtown Criminal Courts building and at the makeshift compound across the street known as "Camp O.J."

Two hundred-fifty phone lines snake through the courthouse's 12th-floor press room; 650 have been installed at Camp O.J., home to television journalists. The latest estimate for press members with credentials is 1,000 — and no one in charge of issuing those credentials seems to know how many of that number are reporters coming in for closing arguments who haven't been present for much else.

Even though the weariness factor is high, some of the anticipation initially present in this case has returned. And there is new excitement as well, the kind normally associated with horses putting on speed when they smell the barn.

"It's very similar to the feeling in Rodney King and even the (Reginald) Denny case," Levenson said, speaking of the final days in both high-profile cases. "The expectations are high. The adrenaline is running. You can feel it in the air."

Susan Yan, a public information officer for Los Angeles County Superior Court, said she has received at least five calls a day for the past two weeks from frantic reporters wanting courtroom seats for the trial's final days.

No way, she tells them. The 24 media passes were given out long ago. "We're not going to bump anybody out who's been covering it for God knows how many days now,"

Two hundred-fifty phone lines snake through the courthouse's 12th-floor press room; 650 have been installed at Camp O.J., home to television journalists. The latest estimate for press members with credentials is 1,000 — and no one in charge of issuing those credentials seems to know how many of that number are reporters coming in for closing arguments who haven't been present for much else.

Yan said.

Yan said she is amused by the rush for seats during the final days of a proceeding that is called, in total seriousness, "The Trial of the Century."

"They didn't call for the DNA part," Yan said, laughing. "Wonder why?"

Even Clark, who seldom admits to any weakness in court, slipped last week. Ito had asked a question. Clark's brain malfunctioned. "I'm so tired, your honor," she said by way of explaining she had no answer at all.

Stan Goldman, a Loyola law school professor and Levenson colleague, also does television, newspaper and radio commentary for the Simpson trial. "I haven't had a free Friday night in a long time," he said.

But Goldman isn't complaining. "I got into a Hertz rental car in Florida and the driver looked up and said, 'Professor Goldman!'"

He recently went to meet a friend for dinner, who informed him that someone wanted to meet him.

"Peter Falk shows up," Goldman said, clearly impressed. "I'm a big fan of Peter Falk. And we spend two hours discussing 'Columbo' and O.J. Now when else would something like that ever happen?"

Pugsley, whose commentary is likewise all over the place, is plenty interested in this coming week.

"I'm looking forward to it," he said. "Closing arguments should be very powerful. So much is riding on both sides. There is some excitement in the air that this case may be finally over."

Expos' Perez arrested on rape and sodomy charges

ATLANTA (AP) — Pitcher Carlos Perez of the Montreal Expos, one of the top rookies in the majors, remained in police custody Sunday, more than 24 hours after being arrested on charges of rape and aggravated sodomy.

Team officials were unsuccessful in getting him released on bond.

Perez, 24, was being held at the Atlanta City Jail, accused of raping a 20-year-old woman he met for a blind date at a bar. He was arrested at the team hotel Saturday morning.

Angels mangle Rangers

Jaime Aron
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — California manager Marcel Lachemann gushed about all the little things his team did Sunday to stop the skid that had dropped his team from division leaders to wild card scramblers.

Then Lachemann paused, smiled and added the biggest reason: Jim Abbott's pitching.

"That," Lachemann said, "goes right at the top of the list."

Abbott threw a three-hitter and his teammates supported him by being fundamentally sound, a combination that made the slumping Angels again look like contenders in a 5-0 victory over Texas that ended a nine-game losing streak.

Tim Salmon had the biggest hits as he drove in two runs, both with two-out singles. His first-inning RBI hit gave California a lead for the first time in 84 innings.

But Lachemann was quick to point out that the run was set up by Tony Phillips' leadoff walk and a sacrifice bunt by Gary DiSarcina, fresh from the disabled list and newly inserted as the No. 2 hitter.

By the end, practically every Angel came through. Eight starters either scored a run or drove one in and there were several nice defensive plays, the biggest by Damon Easley to save a run in the seventh.

"It was almost too simple," Salmon said. "We got good pitching, good defense and timely hitting. It was like, 'Wow, that was easy.' But when you're going

Hawks settle for split

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

Things were going pretty smooth for the Hawkeyes until Amy Lee got rolling.

The Wisconsin sophomore single-handedly took care of the Iowa volleyball team on Saturday, forcing the Hawkeyes to settle for a split in its opening weekend of Big Ten play.

Friday night, Iowa took care of business by topping Minnesota, 7-15, 15-11, 15-4, 15-10.

Saturday, the Badgers won the final two games of the match to defeat Iowa, 7-15, 15-8, 5-15, 15-5, 15-10. Lee blasted home a game-high 22 kills, and finished with a .375 hitting percentage. She had 11 kills in the final two games.

"Amy Lee careered against us," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "We just couldn't stop her. We didn't play defense or block. She was a one-man team. Credit goes to her; I thought we had an answer to everyone else."

While Lee was on fire, the Hawkeyes' big guns struggled. Junior Jennifer Webb finished with a team-high 15 kills, but her hitting percentage was only .167. Katy Fawbush, a junior, finished with only 12 kills.

Iowa was playing without senior middle hitter Tiffany McDaniel. McDaniel sat out due to a strain of her anterior cruciate ligament. She is going to have an MRI done to make sure it is not torn.

Freshman Katie O'Brien stepped in for McDaniel and performed very well. She finished with seven kills and a .545 hitting percentage.

"I thought Katie did a terrific job," Schoenstedt said. "I was pleasantly surprised."

Sophomore Jennifer Bell joined Webb and Fawbush in double figures in kills for the Hawkeyes, finishing with 10.

Bell had a superb game for the Hawkeyes Friday, finishing with 15 kills and a .500 hitting percentage. She also had 25 digs.

RYDER CUP

Europeans edge defending champions

Ron Sirak
Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Nick Faldo stood at the bottom of the hill, 93 yards from the 18th green, feeling the enormous pressure of the Ryder Cup.

His ball was in the rough and he desperately needed to get down in two for his European team to have a chance to defeat the United States.

One bold wedge shot later, one nervy putt later, Faldo had beaten Curtis Strange and the U.S. players were sitting in shocked silence as the Cup they could not lose was all but on the Concorde and headed for Europe.

It was Philip Walton who officially gave Europe a 14½-13½ victory when he closed out Jay Haas on the last hole of their match Sunday at Oak Hill Country Club, but it was Faldo who made the outcome a forgone conclusion.

Trailing 1-down with two holes to play, Faldo won them both when Strange made two bogeys and the Englishman made two pressure putts, giving Europe the crucial point.

"I was trying not to think whether my match was going to be the turning point, but I could sense it," Faldo said. "I scrambled for two pars, but to try and play golf while you're nearly shaking, it's a different game. You really have to play from the heart. To do something here for the team, it's so emotional."

At No. 17, he made an 8-footer for par while Strange, who lost all three of his matches, missed a 12-footer.

Savor it for now Rams, It won't last

A friend of mine told me this weekend that we weren't giving St. Louis sports enough coverage.

Or maybe he said we weren't giving St. Louis teams enough respect — I wasn't really listening. Anyway, the Rams had to go and beat the Chicago Bears Saturday, so my friend, who's probably still gloating, will get his wish. I'm going to write about the Rams.

But don't think that means I'm giving them any respect — the Rams still have as much of my respect as the baseball St. Louis Cardinals do. The reason I'm writing about the Rams is because I'm worried about fans out there who might think the St. Louis Rams are the story of the 1995 season.

The stories of the 1995 season are the other three undefeated teams. Miami, Dallas and San Francisco are not only the three best teams this year, they may be three of the best squads to set foot on a football field this decade.

First of all, I'm drooling for the NFC Championship already. Last year San Francisco was a pretty comfortable favorite and in the two preceding years, Dallas was the better team. This year, however, I think it's a wash. The NFL's two best teams will put on a show when they battle for the 1996 Super Bowl.

And when one of those teams does reach the Super Bowl, we will finally see a good game. Make no mistake, Miami will not only make the Super Bowl this season, but will compete with San Francisco or Dallas for four solid quarters.

Hell, they might even win the thing.

(A keen reader may have observed that I said Miami is going to the Super Bowl. Yes, it's only four weeks into the season and I've already backed down from my Cleveland prediction, but so what? Like anyone's really sticking with Pittsburgh or New England. I know I'm not the only one who screwed up.)

So here are my unofficial, unresearched, don't-hold-me-to-them, Super Bowl odds:

RYDER CUP

Then at No. 18, Faldo drove into the left rough and had no choice but to lay up. With about 93 yards to the green, he knocked a wedge shot to about 4 feet.

Strange also missed the green, chipped to about 8 feet, and when he missed his par putt, Faldo had the chance to win the match. He stalked the putt, stood over it, had his caddie, Fannie Snecsson, crouch behind him to check his alignment, froze over the ball, then rolled it dead in.

"That's probably the best scrambling par I've ever made in my life," Faldo said.

The point put Europe ahead 13 1/2-12 1/2 and meant the U.S. team needed to win Phil Mickelson's match with Per-Ulrik Johansson and halve the Haas-Walton match to keep the Cup with a 14-14 tie. And Haas was 2-down with two to

NFL ROUNDUP

Rams hang on to burn Bears

Associated Press

All this comes a bit late for NFL fans in Los Angeles.

The Rams, now in St. Louis, went to 4-0 Sunday with a 34-28 victory over Chicago, while the Raiders, back in Oakland, went to 3-1 by scoring 48 straight points in a 48-17 victory over Philadelphia.

"I felt my first game here that this was a team that had the potential to go the playoffs," said Rams quarterback Mark Rypien, who replaced Chris Miller late in the game.

Rams 34, Bears 28

At St. Louis, the Rams won their fourth in a row by remaining turnover-free for the fourth straight game, scoring on Toby Wright's 73-yard fumble return and three TD passes from Miller before the injury.

Miller, who has yet to play a full season without injury in his nine-year career, was hit after throwing an interception with 9:42 to play and sustained a concussion. He said he'll play next week against the Colts.

The Bears (2-2) led 21-17 at half-time on TD passes by Eric Kramer to Keith Jennings, Curtis Conway and Michael Timpson.

However, Miller capped two time-consuming drives in the third quarter with TD passes to tight ends — 1 yard to Marv Cook on fourth down and then 12 yards to Troy Drayton.

Raiders 48, Eagles 17

At Oakland, Calif., the Raiders trailed 17-0 after one quarter, and, as it turns out, they had the Eagles right where they wanted them.

The Raiders reeled off 48 straight points, getting a pair of touchdowns on fumble returns by linebacker Rob Fredrickson and defensive tackle Austin Robbins in a 48-17 victory Sunday.

Giants running back Rodney Hampton grabs a pass from quarterback Dave Brown and pushes off New Orleans Saints safety Sean Lumpkin in the first quarter Sunday at Giants Stadium.

Associated Press

Oakland (3-1), in its second home game since returning from Los Angeles, scored 28 points off five turnovers, including an interception and fumble by Randall Cunningham. Cunningham was benched in favor of Rodney Peete for the second time in four games. The Eagles are 1-3.

Peete, who came on with 38 seconds left in the third quarter after Andy Harmon recovered a fumble by Jeff Hostetler, was pressured by Aundray Bruce on his first pass attempt and threw a wobbly pass that Terry McDaniel intercepted. The turnover led to Harvey Williams' second touchdown run, a 4-yarder with 10:39 remaining.

Vikings 44, Steelers 24

At Pittsburgh, rookie defensive backs Orlando Thomas and Corey Fuller each scored off turnovers while Robert Smith had 115 yards, including a 58-yard TD run for the Vikings (2-2), who forced seven turnovers.

Warren Moon threw two TD passes to Cris Carter while becoming the first pro quarterback to throw for 60,000 yards in his career. Pittsburgh slipped to 2-2.

Giants 45, Saints 29

At East Rutherford, N.J., Rodney Hampton ran for 149 yards and set a team record with four rushing TDs as the Giants won for the first time in four games and left the Saints winless. The Giants amassed 474 yards against the NFL's worst defense. Vencie Glenn had two interceptions.

Buccaneers 14, Redskins 6

At Tampa, Fla., Errict Rhett ran 10 yards for a TD and Alvin Harper, in his first regular-season game as a Buc, caught a disputed 7-yard TD pass from Trent Dilfer. The game was sealed by the defense. The Redskins drove to the Tampa Bay 1 in the final seconds, but Martin Mayhew intercepted a Gus Frerotte pass.

Harper was ejected for touching an official after his TD catch originally was ruled an incompletion.

Atlanta 13, New York Jets 3

At Atlanta, Kevin Ross led the Falcons' defense with a fumble recovery and interception, and Jeff George threw for one touchdown. Morten Andersen added field goals of 37 and 36 yards for Atlanta (3-1). The Jets are 1-3.

San Diego 17, Denver 6

At San Diego, Natrone Means carried for a career-high 27 times for 115 yards and his first two touchdowns of the season as the Chargers (3-1) held Denver (2-2) without a touchdown.

A week earlier, Elway pulled off the 35th game-saving drive in his 13-year career, but the only scoring the Broncos got Sunday was two field goals from Jason Elam.

Houston 38, Cincinnati 28

At Cincinnati, Chris Chandler threw a career-high four touchdowns in the first half for Houston (2-2). He completed 23 of 26 passes for 356 yards, falling just short of Vinny Testaverde's league record of 91.3 percent completions (21 of 23).

The Bengals (2-2) helped Chandler immeasurably as they repeatedly blew coverages and gave up 400 yards in total offense for the second consecutive week.

Cleveland 35, Kansas City 17

At Cleveland, Earnest Byner ran for one touchdown and caught a short pass for another TD as the Browns (3-1) handed the Chiefs (3-1) their first loss.

Byner spun 7 yards up the middle for a TD on Cleveland's second drive of the game, then caught a 3-yard pass from Vinny Testaverde for the clinching score with 10 minutes to play.

Testaverde also threw a 4-yard scoring pass to Andre Rison in the third quarter.

Dallas 34, Arizona 20

At Irving, Texas, Emmitt Smith rushed for 116 yards and had 53 yards receiving as the Cowboys got off to their best start in 12 years at 4-0. Dallas got out of the blocks 7-0 in 1983. The Cards are 1-3.

Smith fell hard on his elbow late in the game. X-rays were negative and the elbow was only bruised.

Packers 24, Jaguars 14

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — With a pair of touchdown passes, Brett Favre joined some select company.

Favre tied an NFL record held by Dan Marino, Johnny Unitas and Don Meredith when he threw for at least two TDs in his 12th straight game, and the Green Bay defense stymied Jacksonville for a 24-14 victory.

Green Bay (3-1), off to its best since a 4-1 beginning to the strike-shortened 1982 season, could have beaten the expansion Jaguars (0-4) even worse, but the Packers had a pass intercepted near the goal line, missed a field goal, failed to cover an on-sides kick and gave up a long punt return which led to a Jacksonville touchdown.

Still, the Jaguar offense couldn't take advantage of its chances — even with the return of left tackle Tony Boselli, the No. 2 overall selection in the April draft who missed all of the preseason and the first three games with an injury.

Associated Press

Minnesota wide receiver Cris Carter celebrates a third quarter touchdown reception against the Steelers in the game in Pittsburgh Sunday.

St. Louis Rams quarterback Chris Miller is sacked by the Chicago Bears Jim Flanigan during the second quarter in St. Louis.

COLLEGE ROUNDUP

Trojans stomp on Wildcats

Associated Press

Either Southern Cal's offense was awfully good, or Arizona's defense wasn't. According to the opinions of Trojans coaches and players, it was both.

Kyle Wacholtz threw three touchdown passes, two in the second quarter, as the fifth-ranked Trojans (3-0) beat Arizona 31-10 Saturday night, knocking the previously 25th-ranked Wildcats out of The Associated Press poll.

"We were dynamic in moving the ball," Southern Cal coach John Robinson said.

"They came up against a very fine defense and played extremely well."

Not so, said Keyshawn Johnson, who caught one of Wacholtz's TD passes.

"I thought they were better," he said. "I give the secondary no respect. So much for the Swarm."

Against the Desert Swarm defense, the Trojans gained 405 yards, and Robinson's defense held the Wildcats out of the end zone until backup quarterback Brady Batten scored on a 1-yard keeper with 19 seconds left.

Wacholtz, who completed 8 of 9 passes for 138 yards, found Johnson for a 28-yard TD to open the scoring and Johnny Williams for 38 yards and another score still in the second quarter.

No. 1 Florida St. 46, Central Florida 14

Pooh Bear Williams scored three touchdowns and Danny Kanell threw for two against the Division I-AA Golden Knights. The Seminoles also had two safeties.

Marquette Smith, who began his collegiate career at Florida State, scored both of Central Florida's touchdowns on short runs and gained 121 yards. Warrick Dunn finished with 100 yards on 17 carries for Florida State.

No. 2 Nebraska 49, Pacific 7

Damon Benning ran for three touchdowns and Nebraska piled up 569 yards rushing before calling in the reserves. Benning finished with 173 yards before leaving with a sprained ankle in the third quarter.

No. 4 Colorado 29, No. 9 Texas A&M 21

Backup QB John Hessler replaced injured Koy Detmer and ran for two touchdowns and passed for one in Colorado's upset of Texas A&M. Doctors will decide in the next few days whether Detmer will undergo surgery or try to play with a brace.

In the meantime, Hessler looks like he'll do fine. He completed 10 of 20 passes for 177 yards without an interception.

No. 6 Penn St. 59, Rutgers 34

Bobby Engram caught three touchdowns passes and ran 58 yards with a fumble for another score. The win was the 20th straight for the Nittany Lions, but it ended with Rutgers coach Doug Graber yelling at Penn State's Joe Paterno, because of a late touchdown pass by the Lions.

No. 7 Ohio St. 54, Pittsburgh 14

Terry Glenn caught nine passes for a school-record 253 yards and four touchdowns, the longest a 75-yarder. Bobby Hoyer threw for 296 yards and five touchdowns in three quarters. Eddie George rushed for 121 yards for Ohio State.

No. 11 Virginia 22, Clemson 3

The Cavaliers won at Clemson for the first time in 19 games as Mike Groh ran for one touchdown and threw for another. Clemson's Nealon Greene twice lost fumbles in the second half with no defender close and the Tigers were called for 11 penalties in a steady rain.

No. 15 Notre Dame 55, No. 21 Texas 27

Marc Edwards rushed for two touchdowns and caught a scoring pass as Notre Dame beat a ranked team for the first time in two seasons.

Coach Lou Holtz, who missed last week's game after undergoing spinal surgery, called plays from the press box. He drew cheers when he came onto the field with a little more than a minute left.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

AT THIS RATE, YOUR FUTURE IS LOOKING BETTER AND BETTER.

High rates can make a big difference when you're saving for the future. So you may appreciate the fact that TIAA is currently offering one of the highest rates of return among guaranteed annuities anywhere — 7%.*

Of course, that's not surprising. TIAA's net rate of return has beaten the industry average every year for the past 47 years.*

Strong returns and solid ratings

TIAA's traditional annuity guarantees your principal and a specified interest rate, backed by TIAA's claims-paying ability, so you can rest assured your savings are secure.

It also provides the potential for additional growth through dividends—which we've declared every year since 1948.

What's more, TIAA has received the highest marks from all four of the industry's leading rating agencies for its stability, sound investments, claims-paying

NC-17 'Showgirls' falls short of eroticism, sinks into smut

Megan McCabe
The Daily Iowan

Jessie Spanno gambled and lost. "Showgirls" presented itself as a film packed with wisdom straight from bumper stickers: 'Life sucks' and 'Hell on wheels.' With "Showgirls," director Paul Verhoeven, ("Basic Instinct"), has just created another one: "Showgirls sucks."

Englert Theatre's Saturday night sold-out showing of "Showgirls" packed both floors of the theater. Moviegoers aching for life in the showgirl fast lane were left with a bad taste in their mouths.

"The movie sucked. All there was, was flesh," UI sophomore Jamie March said.

With glamorous people, costumes and the tantalizing promise of an NC-17 rating, "Showgirls" left viewers feeling used, abused and down five bucks. But in Las Vegas, gamblers can make an attempt to win back lost cash. The theater should have installed slot machines for customers to win back the ticket cost.

The movie began with viewers' vested interests in the quest for carnal female knowledge.

When asked why he chose to see "Showgirls," UI sophomore Joe Gapsinski replied, "tits and ass."

UI freshman Jeremy Johnson said, "Naked women. Why else would anyone see it?"

The film heats up after Nomi Malone (Elizabeth Berkley, better known as Jesse Spano in the teen TV show "Saved By the Bell") gets

Murray Close/United Artists

"Showgirls" skin-stars Cristal (Gina Gershon) and Nomi (Elizabeth Berkley) spend some "us" time in the strip dance "Avenging Angel."

a taste of real showgirl life, spending time backstage at the production of "Goddess."

Vying for the chance to make it big on the Las Vegas circuit, her skin crawls when Cristal and she must perform a private dance for Stardust's entertainment director Zack Carey.

Nomi, $500 richer, receives an invitation to audition for "Goddess." All suspense is lost when she gets the part and begins her driven quest for success.

Only one woman, Nomi's best friend, remained clothed. Yet, her dignity was stripped during a violent gang rape scene. Instead of working to solve the tragedy, Nomi is faced with blackmail. In what should have been a redeeming point of "Showgirls," viewers were left disgusted.

As the first major marketed NC-17 movie, "Showgirls" is a poor attempt. If one is looking for sex, look elsewhere. Much to many moviegoers chagrin, the nudity-excitement factor is lost before the first table dance.

UI senior Jason Meyer was immune to flesh 20 minutes into the film. His greatest thought on Nomi: "She's got great dental work."

Buy farmer-direct before market ends

Daniel Franc
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's most bustling locale isn't the Pedestrian Mall on a Friday night or the Union in the afternoon. It is the most unlikely of places — the Washington Street Parking Ramp on Wednesdays and Saturdays, where one might find an atmosphere more befitting a Turkish bazaar or an urban street market. Of course, this is the Farmers' Market, Iowa City's tax-free, farmer-direct, home-cookin' free-for-all.

There is a method to shopping at the market: thump the melons, squeeze the squash, fondle the loaves or maybe haggle the price.

Paul Beachy, a Kalona farmer, sums up the market this way: "Good crowds. A lot of variety. I recognize lots of faces." Beachy, a member of the Kalona Amish settlement — where automobiles are forbidden — hires friends to drive him to Iowa City.

Among the rows of spaghetti squash, oriental eggplant, beef jerky and purple sage, stands Ed Greazel, who is waiting for a hard frost.

"Let me out of this mess," Greazel said while pondering the endless work that goes with farming 14 acres of vegetables.

Aside from growing tomatoes and potatoes, Greazel features pumpkins and "peacocks that sound just like semis."

Harold Sarver mans an apple stand which is busy from spring to fall. One notable customer hails from the UI residence halls: "She buys one bushel of apples each week all season," Sarver said. "Apples are better than cigarettes."

Oddly enough, Sarver's apple aficionado, Jodie Newell, was at the Farmers' Market munching on apple No. 2 for the day (at 10 a.m.).

"I eat five Red Delicious apples a day, at least," Newell said. "Everyone I meet seems to eat more apples."

Newell, a dietitian, goes through a watermelon every two days. "The farmers' remember me here," she said.

Cyndi Griggs/The Daily Iowan

Iowa City resident Elizabeth Weinberg picks out corn from local farm owner Bob Shea Saturday morning.

Time is of essence for would-be corn connoisseurs or eggplant experts as the Farmers' Market will hibernate after the last weekend in October. The market is open Wednesdays from noon to 5:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 7:30 a.m. to noon. Arrive early for the Red Delicious apples.

Skeletons aren't fashion

Chiquita Banana and Carmen Miranda knew a thing or two about food and fashion — women are supposed to wear their food, not eat it! And a recent Harvard Medical School study proves them right!

on fashion

In a country where 90-pound, 4-foot-10-inch gymnasts die of anorexia because they think they're fat, we have a new study that advises all women to try and get a little closer to their skeletons.

Time magazine last week even called supermodel Kate Moss a "winner" because she's mastered the underweight "Auschwitz look."

It's the underweight women who live longest (and get the most dates, maybe?), the study hisses at us, paving the road for a whole new generation of gals who binge and purge for recreation.

Karen Carpenter, the eating-disorder poster girl of the century, was right. You can never be too rich or too thin.

If fat is really bad and being a "normal-weight" woman is worse, what's a fashionable girl to do if she doesn't want the body of a starving, 6-year-old pre-pubescent girl? It's easier to avoid joining the ranks of women who starve themselves to death than you might think.

Accessorizing with chic food needs to end — starting with the prerequisite and ubiquitous bottled water spotted on millions of women nationwide. How many men (besides the occasional bicyclist with 4 percent body fat) have you seen with liters of Evian held daintily in their thirsty hands? Not many, I'd guess — because most guys like to consume calories — Big Gulp Pepsi Colas and half-gallon containers of Quik chocolate milk. Waifs drink diet sodas. Real women need calories.

Go out and gain weight like the boys do — with some muscle. Hunky women like Gabrielle Reese, Flo Jo and Wonder Woman weigh a lot more than it appears, but of course you need some major bicep power when you're flying the Invisible Jet.

Next time the guy you're with snarfs down two Big Macs and a shake in the time it takes you to eat a cup of low-fat yogurt, remember that it takes more to sustain the average woman than it does the average mouse. I'm sure even Carmen Miranda snacked on her headdresses every now and then, maybe when nobody was looking.

It's really scary that we have yet another study telling women to diet and starve to reach some weight-to-height ideal. While popular fashion often relies on cookie-cutter imitation by the masses, the most extreme trends forced on fashion slaves need to have limits, especially the ones that promote the starvation look for women. Besides, cookie-cutter style is no fun unless you get to sneak a cookie from the jar every now and then.

Bizarre Willis twists reality

Jonathan Hansen
The Daily Iowan

Wesley Willis is a performer from the streets of Chicago. He has been diagnosed as a chronic schizophrenic. He uses stock background music pre-programmed into a Casio keyboard to accompany rap and poor singing about living on the streets in Chicago. He also has a greatest hits album out on Alternative Tentacles records, which is currently one of the top 10 CDs at KRUI.

Willis' appeal for most people is primarily humor. Song titles like "I Whipped Batman's Ass," are funny enough without even listening to Willis painfully croon the words. Many of the lines he shouts seem to come out of nowhere, with no discernible logic to the lyrics, often falling back on repeated phrases, such as the characteristic "Rock over London, rock on Chicago," which can be heard in almost every song.

Willis' music may be interesting for more reasons than simply humor. While most of the lyrics are laughable, songs like "Chronic Schizophrenia" offer moments of sincerity and insight from a perspective rarely articulated.

If you enjoy having eccentric selections in your record collection, Wesley Willis is an addition not to be missed.

Royals finally beat Cleveland

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin Appier and Jeff Montgomery combined on a five-hitter and Johnny Damon collected two hits and two RBIs as Kansas City beat the Cleveland Indians for the first time in nine tries.

Appier (15-9), who was 11-2 after his first 14 starts, had five strikeouts and four walks in 7 1/3 innings as the Royals snapped a six-game losing skid, their longest since 1992.

Kansas City was one out away from handing the Indians their fourth shutout loss of the year, but Brian Giles hit his first major-league homer, a two-run shot off Montgomery.

Brewers 5, Orioles 1
MILWAUKEE — Knuckleballer Steve Sparks limited Baltimore to three hits over 7 1/3 innings and the Milwaukee Brewers rode a four-run second inning to a victory over the Orioles.

Sparks (9-10) won for just the second time in his last 12 appearances and Milwaukee snapped a five-game skid, winning for just the sixth time in 26 games.

The Brewers got four doubles and four runs in the second inning, chasing left-hander Rick Krivda (2-7). Krivda threw just 37 pitches in 1 1/3 innings and fell to 0-5 with a 7.10 ERA in September.

Twins 4, White Sox 3
MINNEAPOLIS — Matt Merullo's bases-loaded single with two outs in the ninth Sunday gave the Minnesota Twins a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

LaTroy Hawkins (2-3) gave up a game-tying homer to Frank Thomas in the top of the ninth, his 39th, but finished with a five-hitter for his first career complete game.

Mariners 9, Athletics 8
SEATTLE — Tino Martinez's second homer of the game, a two-run shot in the bottom of the ninth inning, gave Seattle its sixth victory in a row.

In a wild back-and-forth game played before a crowd of 46,714, the Mariners took a 7-6 lead in the eighth, fell behind 8-7 in the top of the ninth and won it in their last at-bat as Dennis Eckersley blew a save for the ninth time.

Tigers 8, Yankees 3
NEW YORK — The Detroit Tigers rallied for seven runs in the eighth inning and beat New York, ending the Yankees' six-game winning streak.

New York, which began the day with a 1 1/2 game lead over California in the AL wild card race, also had its 10-game home winning streak snapped. The Angels played later Sunday at Texas.

Blue Jays 2, Red Sox 1
BOSTON — Pinch-hitter Carlos Delgado's sacrifice fly off Rick Aguilera in the ninth inning gave the Toronto Blue Jays a victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Joe Carter walked to lead off the inning, stole second and went to third on a single by pinch-hitter

Shawn Green. He scored when Delgado hit a fly ball to the warning track in left against Aguilera (3-3).

Juan Guzman (4-14) snapped a career-high, nine-game losing streak and Mike Timlin pitched the ninth for his fifth save, striking out Dwayne Hoesy with the bases loaded to end the game.

Cubs 3, Pirates 2
CHICAGO — Brian McRae hit a home run off Dan Miceli with one out in the 10th inning as the Chicago Cubs rallied for a victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

It was the first homer since Sept. 2 for McRae, who had been 0-for-4 in the game and 5-for-29 in six games before lining Miceli's 1-0 pitch over the right-field fence. McRae tied a career-high with his 12th home run.

Miceli (3-4) took a 2-1 lead into the ninth inning but couldn't hold it, blowing his sixth save in 27 opportunities.

Reds 6, Phillies 4
PHILADELPHIA — David Wells pitched eight effective innings and Mariano Duncan homered and drove in four runs against his former team, leading the Cincinnati Reds past the Phillies.

Wells (6-4), who was 10-3 for Detroit before being traded on July 31, matched his career-high with 16 victories.

Wells allowed three hits and one run, and struck out eight. He held the Phillies hitless until Tom Marsh looped a ground-rule double with one out in the seventh. One out later, Charlie Hayes singled home Marsh.

Marlins 4, Mets 3
MIAMI — Rookie right fielder Alex Ochoa lost two routine fly balls on a sunny day and allowed both to drop, leading to all of the Florida Marlins' runs as they beat the New York Mets.

Ryan Bowen (1-0) allowed three runs in five innings for his first victory since Aug. 7, 1994, when he also beat the Mets.

Bowen missed the first 4 1/2 months of this season with a knee injury.

The Mets have lost four in a row to drop back into last place in the NL East. The Marlins swept the three-game series, and have won five of their past six games.

Astros 1, Cardinals 0, 10 innings
HOUSTON — Milt Thompson scored on pitcher Rich DeLucia's throwing error in the 10th inning, and the Houston Astros stayed close in the wild-card chase with a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Astros began the day 1 1/2 games behind Los Angeles in the race for the extra playoff spot. The Dodgers, trying to catch Colorado in the NL West, open a three-game series with the Rockies on Monday.

Braves 5, Expos 4
ATLANTA — Mike Devereaux hit a two-out, two-run single in the 10th inning, rallying the Atlanta Braves over the Montreal Expos.

Devereaux, who doubled and scored the tying run in the ninth, gave the Braves their 25th win in their final at-bat, 16 of them since July 4.

The Expos took a 4-3 lead in the 10th on rookie Yamil Benitez's RBI single off Pedro Borbon (2-2).

Jeff Blauser drew a one-walk in the Atlanta 10th from Dave Leiper (0-2) and pinch-hitter Marquis Grissom grounded into a force play. After Rafael Belliard pinch-ran for Grissom, Luis Polonia hit a double.

Dodgers 6, Padres 2
LOS ANGELES — Hideo Nomo won his 12th game and helped out with his hitting, and Mike Piazza homered as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Diego, setting up the NL's biggest series of the season.

Los Angeles remained a half-game behind first-place Colorado in the NL West. The Rockies, 3-7 against Los Angeles this year, begin a three-game series at Dodger Stadium on Monday night.

The Dodgers stayed 1 1/2 games ahead of Houston in the wild-card race.

Rockies 3, Giants 1
SAN FRANCISCO — The Colorado Rockies held on to their slim lead in the NL West with a win over the San Francisco Giants as Armando Reynoso combined with two relievers on a four-hitter.

The Rockies, who have won 16 of 24, began the day with a half-game lead over the Los Angeles Dodgers, who were playing San Diego.

Hawks get Big Ten revenge

Paybacks are hell.

After losing a combined three out of four to Penn State and Ohio State last year, the Iowa women's field hockey team exacted a measure of revenge Friday and Sunday, shutting down the Lady Lions and Buckeyes 2-0 and 1-0.

Iowa coach Beth Beglin said she was pleased with the road victories.

"I'm very pleased to come out of this weekend with two shutouts," Beglin said. "We did a great job of passing and moving the ball around."

"Our distribution was nice. We played well and I'm very happy with the team performance."

The Hawkeyes shut down the ninth-ranked Buckeyes on Friday, holding Ohio State to only four shots on goal. Ann Paré continued to tear up the turf, scoring her tenth goal of the year to give Iowa all the cushion it needed. Juniors Diane DeMiro and Mandy Abblitt dished out the assist. Hawkeye goalkeeper Lisa Cellucci picked up three saves in the win.

On Sunday, the freshmen took over for Iowa as Quan Nim and Kerry Lessard did in the Lady Lions. Lessard netted an unassisted goal off of a deflection to put the Hawkeyes up, 1-0. With 36:43 remaining in the second half, Nim rebounded a Paré shot to put Iowa up 2-0 for Nim's second-career goal. Iowa took it from there, allowing only five shots on goal while raining 27 on PSU.

"It's a very difficult place to play and we were able to keep their crowd out of the entire game, which in turn gave us the momentum we needed for the victory," Beglin said.

Men sink at Wolverine Invitational

Bob Richards hit a hole-in-one for the Iowa men's golf team last weekend and for a brief moment the Hawkeyes had reason to celebrate.

However, in most cases, Iowa had to swing its clubs quite a bit.

The Hawkeyes limped home to a 16th-place finish at the Wolverine Invitational in Ann Arbor, Mich., after adding nine strokes to their second round score. Iowa was in 12th place after 36 holes, but capsized any hopes of an upper-division finish by shooting a final round score of 311.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Minnesota captured the team title with a score of 897. Iowa finished with 925 at the 21-team invitational.

Iowa coach Terry Anderson said the Hawkeyes just can't catch a break.

"We had streaks of brilliance, but overall we're not playing very well," Anderson said.

"When we're striking the ball well, we don't putt well and when we're putting well, we don't strike the ball very well."

Laine Brantner led the way for Iowa with a score of 228. Scott Carpenter (233), Richards (233), Chad McCarty (234) and Brian Rupp (239) also competed for the Hawkeyes.

Anderson said Iowa needs to do some soul searching before its next competition.

Women's tennis team successful in debut

The puzzle hasn't been put together yet, but all the pieces appear to fit.

The Iowa women's tennis team coasted to five finals victories in its season opener at the Husker Invitational Saturday and Sunday.

Leading the Hawkeye attack was senior Nikki Willette. Willette pummeled Wichita State's Jana Lonshek 6-0, 6-2 to capture the No. 5 singles championship. Then, Willette combined with senior Sasha Boros to post a 7-6, 7-6 win in the No. 1 doubles championship.

Iowa also recorded finals wins in three of its last four singles matches. Kristen McCracken (No. 4), Robin Niemeier (No. 6) and Lisa Harris (No. 8) all breezed to straight-set victories.

Iowa coach Jenny Mainz said she was impressed with the Hawkeyes' overall performance.

"We have a lot of depth on this team," Mainz said. "In some of the latter flights we had some really good matches and kind of breezed through some of them."

Although the Hawkeyes won five of the 13 tournament championships, Mainz said her team needs to develop more consistency in its service games.

"We didn't serve very well this weekend," Mainz said.

"We have to have a much higher first-serve percentage in order to be effective. Since this was an individual tournament, it didn't have a tremendous impact on us, but if we're doing that later in the season it's going to really hurt us."

Women's golf team stands in eighth place

The Iowa women's golf team stands in eighth place after the first round of the Wildcat Invitational.

Freshman Becky Sjöholm and senior Tanya Shepley are tied for 25th place with scores of 82. Iowa State leads the 15-team field.

CROSS COUNTRY

Hawks' game plan does the trick

Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Head men's cross country coach Larry Wiecek wanted a complete team effort Saturday at the Iowa Invitational at Finkbine Golf Course.

He was not disappointed. The Hawkeyes won the invite, with scores of 21-38 over Minnesota, 15-47 over Drake and 15-49 over Western Illinois.

"We had an outstanding team performance and everybody executed the game plan well," said Wiecek.

The Hawkeyes won despite Minnesota's Rick Obelman winning the race with a time of 25:14. Iowa's ability to run in a pack, and have finishers in spots two through five contributed to the Hawkeyes' successful performance.

"The real key was the teamwork. You can't win without having five guys come through," said Wiecek.

The Hawkeye game plan was to run in a pack and have their top five runners finish within thirty seconds of each other. Iowa was

Iowa fights off rally to down Western Illinois

The Iowa women's cross country team defeated Western Illinois University 18-37 at Finkbine Golf Course Saturday.

Iowa jumped out to an early lead, and was challenged by Western in the middle of the race, but took over in the last mile.

Junior Becky Coleman won the race with a time of 18:40, while senior captain Shawn Fleck paced the team with a time of 19:21, good for second place.

"I didn't expect as easy of a win, but we got the job done today," head coach Jerry Hassard said. "It was a great team effort and we had good concentration."

The benefits of a late-starting schedule appeared evident Saturday as Iowa jumped out to an early lead and then finished the race strong.

Coach Hassard claims the extra week off has given the team more time to train and prepare for the season.

"Our speed emphasis was shown clearly in the first mile and the final kick," said Hassard. "The finish was probably the best I've ever seen up the final hill at Finkbine."

Coleman agreed with Coach Hassard that extensive training has contributed to the increase in speed and success in the races' end.

"The last stretch at Finkbine is tough."

"We wanted to run the hill and not let the hill run us," Coleman said.

The meet was a good confidence builder, but Iowa will face a much stronger field at next week's Minnesota Invitational.

somewhat successful, having seven runners grouped together early in the race, and finishing with forty-one seconds between their top-five finishers.

At the top of the Iowa finishers was freshman Stetson Steele, who again turned in an impressive performance, finishing second with a time of 25:59. Steele's time was the second best ever by a Hawkeye at Finkbine, the lowest belonging to 1993 graduate Kevin Herd, a two-time all-American in cross country.

"My main goal wasn't to win, but to stay in a pack with my teammates. We wanted to finish strong as a team," Steele said.

Additional notable performances were turned in by red-shirt sophomore Chad Feeldy, who finished third with a time of 25:30, and freshman Chad Schwitters, who turned in a time of 25:54, good for fourth place.

"Chad (Schwitters) had a surprising performance," Wiecek said. "Anything near 26:00 at Finkbine is outstanding, so I couldn't be happier."

Weibring claims third Quad City title

Associated Press

COAL VALLEY, Ill. — While the United States' top players battled for the Ryder Cup and many others are taking breaks from the tour, D.A. Weibring wouldn't think of skipping the Quad City Classic.

Weibring, who was born in Quincy and attended Illinois State, became the tournament's first three-time winner Sunday, holing an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole for a one-stroke victory over rookie Jonathan Kaye.

"I've played well here whenever I've entered. This place does have special meaning for me," said Weibring, who the event in 1979 when it was the Quad Cities Open and in 1991 when it was the Hardee's Classic.

Weibring, 42, who won his only other PGA Tour title in the 1987

Western Open at Butler National outside Chicago, closed with a 4-under-par 68 for a 13-under 197 total in the rain-shortened event at Oakwood Country Club. He earned $180,000 to increase his season total to $514,931.

Kaye, who finished 32nd in the 1994 tour qualifying tournament, finished with a 65. He earned $108,000 to move into 92nd place on the money list and almost certainly retain his tour card.

Weibring started the round with a four-stroke lead at 11-under after the weather-delayed second round was completed Sunday morning.

Kaye birdied Nos. 2, 3, 7, 8 and 9 to tie Weibring at 12-under, but dropped two back on No. 13 when he bogeyed and Weibring chipped in for birdie.
