Steinem speaks her mind

Feminism: 'Social, economic and political equality of people'

Gloria Steinem, a beacon of the feminist movement, will speak about political and personal trials facing women in a free lecture tonight at 8 in Macbride Auditorium.

Steinem, a founder of Ms. magazine and the National Women's Caucus, has been a prominent feminist leader since 1969. She is also the subject of a new authorized biography, "The Education of a Woman," by Carolyn Heilbrun, professor emeritus of English at Columbia University.

The renowned feminist and author recently granted The Daily Iowan an exclusive interview:

DI: How has the definition of feminism changed since you started rallying for women's rights?

GS: It really hasn't changed. It's still what the dictionary says, you know, the belief that — well, I would say the fact — but the belief in the full social, economic and political equality of people. The actions that need to be taken to pursue that goal — they change, but the goal stays the same.

DI: But there are so many people who say sexism no longer exists in today's world.

GS: Well, there are various stages of resistance to a profound change. The first one is usually to say it is not necessary — and that was true in the black movement. You would hear people say, "Oh, my maid is not interested in the Black Panthers," or hear men saying,

President Clinton speaks in the White House briefing room Tuesday to announce the warring parties in Bosnia reached an agreement on a governmental structure for a Bosnian state divided between Serbs and a Muslim-Croatian federation. Clinton hailed the move a step 'closer to the ultimate goal of a genuine peace.'

U.S. diplomat: 'Long and difficult path ahead of us'

A Guide to the Bosnian Conflict

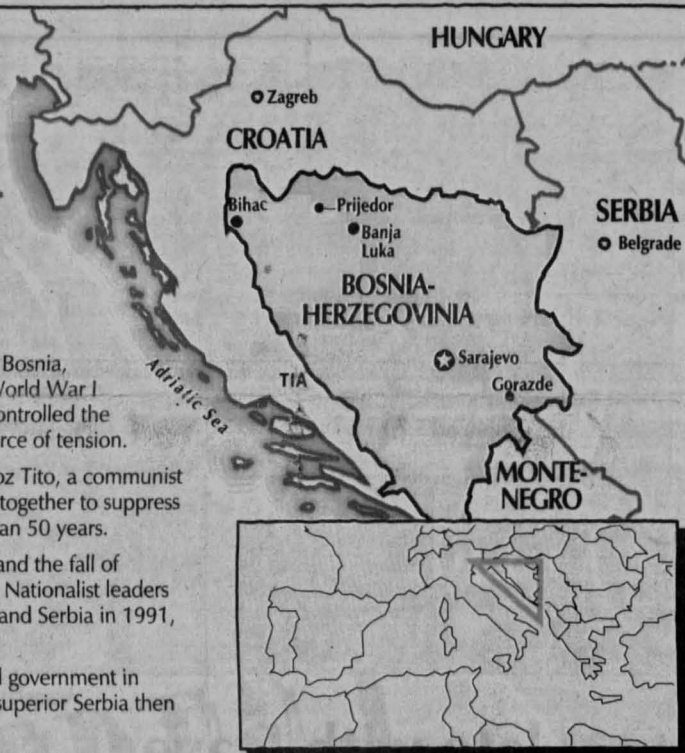

For centuries, Croatia, Serbia and Bosnia have held deep ethnic and religious differences and strong nationalist feelings. Throughout history the three were governed by different dynasties of the Ottoman and the Austro-Hungarian Empires.

The federation of Yugoslavia, which joined Croatia, Bosnia, Serbia, Macedonia and Kosovo, was formed after World War I by the Treaty of Versailles. The Serbs have always controlled the majority of the Belgrade government, creating a source of tension.

Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia were ruled by Joseph Broz Tito, a communist dictator after World War II. Tito and Russia worked together to suppress the ethnic uprisings between the groups for more than 50 years.

The situation turned violent with Tito's 1980 death and the fall of communism in 1989. Economic recession followed. Nationalist leaders were placed in the governments of Bosnia, Croatia, and Serbia in 1991, which renewed the ancient hatred.

Croatia and Bosnia pulled out of the Serb controlled government in Belgrade in 1991 and 1992, respectively. Militarily superior Serbia then started fighting to regain control of the regions.

Serbia

Eastern Orthodox and based in Belgrade

■ Started the fighting in 1992 to bring back the Bosnian government after they declared their independence.

■ For centuries had underlying belief to make other Balkans into Greater Serbia. The nationalist idea was renewed in 1987 when Milosevic rose to power in Yugoslavia.

■ Has abandoned Greater Serbia principle as the war has dragged. Is hoping to regain Bosnia.

■ Russia has been sympathetic to Serbs because of traditional Slavic religious ties.

Bosnian Serbs

Eastern Orthodox and based in Bosnia

■ Want their 'rightful' land in Bosnia.

■ After rejecting a 1994 peace plan, were cut off from Belgrade Serbs, but many believe they still have ties to Milosevic in Belgrade.

■ Militarily superior to the Bosnian Muslims.

■ Responsible for the majority of ethnic cleansing.

■ Have not been responsive to peace negotiations.

■ Target of the recent NATO bombings.

Bosnian Muslims

Muslim and based in Sarajevo

■ Declared independence from the federation of Yugoslavia in 1992.

■ Trying to protect their land from Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Croats who want to unify with their respective countries.

■ Militarily weaker than the Bosnian Serbs, due in part to the U.N. arms embargo against Bosnia.

■ Formed an alliance with the Croats.

Croatia

Roman Catholic and based in Zagreb

■ Croatia originally wanted land in Bosnia, but not any more.

■ Have formed a confederation with Bosnian Muslims mainly interested in stopping Bosnian Serbs and Serbia; Croatia sees this as an opportunity to build an alliance against their ancient enemy, Serbia.

■ Declared their independence from Yugoslavia in 1991.

■ Serbia originally declared war on Croatia for pulling out of the federation.

NEW YORK — Prodded by the United States, Bosnia's warring factions agreed Tuesday to guidelines for elections and a future government for their ethnically torn country, but remained far apart on how to stop the fighting.

"There is no guarantee of success, but (Tuesday's) agreement moves us closer to the ultimate goal of a genuine peace."

President Bill Clinton

All sides hailed the agreement as a step toward peace, but their varying interpretations of what it meant highlighted the arduous work which lay ahead in ending the 3 1/2-year-old war.

"There is no guarantee of success, but (Tuesday's) agreement moves us closer to the ultimate goal of a genuine peace," President Clinton said in a brief White House news conference.

RUSSIAN STUDENTS STAY MORE INFORMED THAN AMERICANS

UI fails to keep up on Bosnia

Chad Graham
The Daily Iowan

Though bloody images of the 3-year-old conflict in the former Yugoslavia saturate the news, many American UI students have a difficult time understanding what is going on in the Balkans.

"I know that someone over there is really ticked off about something," said UI junior Amy Hokomoto.

The war simply isn't discussed on campus because it is so far away, said UI senior Melita Pope.

"I've had a few classes where we've discussed it," she said. "People in the United States don't relate to the affairs of foreign countries."

UI freshman Jessica Murray

said the war "is not that big of a deal because it's not a threat to the U.S." Even though Murray said she had a limited knowledge of the war, she knows race-based killing has occurred in Bosnia.

NEW YORK — Superior Court Judge Lance Ito briefly cut off courtroom TV coverage of closing arguments in the O.J. Simpson murder trial Tuesday, testily complaining a camera's closeup shot could reveal Simpson's handwritten notes.

An hour later, Ito relented and

Oddities & Idiosyncrasies

Levi's counts on theft to enhance new ads

Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The ad campaign for Levi's new line of khakis seems aimed at the crowbar-and-brick crowd.

Levi Strauss & Co. began putting actual pairs of the $50 pants in its bus-shelter ads in New York City and San Francisco this week, and it fully expects people will break through the plastic panels to steal them.

In fact, the company is so sure people will stoop to vandalism to get at the pants that it designed the ads for pre- and post-theft presentation.

If the khakis are still there, the ad copy reads, "Nice Pants." Once the pants disappear, an outline of the khakis remains with the words, "Apparently they were very nice pants."

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani was not amused at the thought of New Yorkers shopping with crowbars on city streets. He condemned the ads as "a terrible mistake ... exactly the wrong message to be teaching to people."

But the mayor was sending just the message Levi's wanted: free publicity.

"The thought did cross our mind that some pairs might be stolen," said Brad Williams, senior marketing specialist with the San Francisco-based company. "But we think that adds to the talk value of the ads."

The pants appeared this week in New York City and San Francisco, in between the same hard plastic panels used for conventional two-dimensional advertisements. In all, 40 New York bus shelters had a pair of Dockers.

By Tuesday morning, at least one pair of pants was already gone from the West Coast, and the New York Post said several pairs were missing here.

"We factored the vandalism into their contract," said Doug Watts, a vice president at Gannett Outdoor Advertising, which rented the ad space in New York. Gannett charged Levi's an extra fee, anticipating the replacement of shattered plastic ($300 a sheet) and twisted panel boxes ($2,000 a piece).

The New York Police Department was taking a harder line:

An advertisement for Levi's new line of khakis graces a city bus shelter in New York Tuesday. Levi Strauss & Co. introduced the pants this week by displaying actual pairs of the $50 trousers at the bus shelters, where fashion-conscious criminals can smash through a plastic shield and augment their wardrobes.

Anyone caught pants-napping could be charged with vandalism and theft, said Officer Sara Carpenter, a police spokesperson.

The ads will run through the end of October, pants or no pants. But a warning to would-be thieves: The sample khakis are mostly waist sizes 32 or 34.

"Anybody bigger will be disappointed when they try them on," Williams said.

Dr. Seuss widow donates to library

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Not in a car. Not in a tree. But an upside-down library? That's different, you see.

The widow of Theodor Geisel, also known as Dr. Seuss, donated a reported $20 million to the main library at the University of California at San Diego.

The library will be renamed the Geisel Library in honor of Theodor and Audrey Geisel, it was announced Monday.

The whimsical eight-story building had caught Geisel's eye. Opened in 1970, it resembles a pyramid turned on its tip.

"The first time Ted saw the form of that building, he said to me, 'If I had turned my thoughts toward designing a building, it might have looked strangely similar to this,'" Audrey Geisel recalled.

Geisel wrote such children's classics as "Green Eggs and Ham" and "The Cat in the Hat."

Getting scammed while getting hitched

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leeza Gibbons was taping a show on wedding scams when she made a startling discovery: She had been taken to the cleaners, too.

The host of the NBC talk show "Leeza" was talking to a guest whose wedding gown came back from the cleaners stained. Gibbons then brought out her own boxed and sealed wedding gown to see if it had been cleaned properly seven years ago.

Gibbons

"This isn't my dress!" Gibbons said as she opened the box.

After further inspection, she found the box contained her headpiece, veil and petticoat, but her custom-designed gown was missing.

"My dress is not here, it's not here!" Gibbons said.

The "Wedding Scams" episode of "Leeza" was to be broadcast today.

Debbie Gibson gets tough in 'Grease'

NEW YORK (AP) — Pop star Debbie Gibson has graduated to a new role in "Grease," going from the sweet and virginal Sandy Dumbrowski to the tough-talking, wisecracking Betty Rizzo.

Gibson was Sandy in the London revival of the musical. She joins the touring company of the current Broadway version on Oct. 30 in Erie, Pa., and will stay with the show until March.

Johnson said Monday 1,000 bags of trash had already been picked up.

Burns cancels show for 100th

LAS VEGAS (AP) — George Burns won't play the Palace for his 100th birthday after all.

"We just felt he was not strong enough to do an hourlong show," his manager, Irving Fein, said Tuesday.

Burns signed years ago to perform at Caesars Palace on his 100th birthday, Jan. 20, 1996, and the Las Vegas resort sold out five performances Jan. 17-21.

In July 1994, the cigar-chomping comic cut his head when he fell in the bathtub.

He later underwent brain surgery to drain fluid that had built up as a result of the injury.

Fein said Burns was "sort of half-sorry, half-relieved" at canceling the birthday show. "It's tough to do an hour show and remember everything. It's a lot of pressure," the manager said.

Burns has performed birthday shows at Caesars Palace for the past several years but canceled the January 1995 appearance because of health problems. Earlier this year, Burns dropped other January engagements.

CAREERS DAY PREPARATION

Employers emphasize weight of interview

Stacy Forrest
The Daily Iowan

A sneak preview of Careers Day employers and their tips for interview success will be offered tonight at 7 in the Big Ten Room of the Union.

"Speaking with Employers" is the last in the series of programs designed to prepare UI students for Thursday's Careers Day, an annual event that allows students and alumni to meet with prospective employers.

Last week, programs offered tips on how to deal with employers and business fashion, and UI junior Amy McCleish said she believes the last program will be beneficial to UI students.

"At this stage in my college career, it's important for me to start thinking professionally in terms of a job," she said. "The program is going to help me better present myself when I'm in an interview situation."

Panelists for the "Speaking with Employers" discussion include representatives for The Principal Financial Group, Jewel Food Stores, Babbage's and Archer Daniels Midland.

John McTigue, director of human resource development for Jewel Food Stores, said the program helps students get an idea of what being prepared for an interview means.

"Students going into an interview need to take an inventory of their skills and accomplishments and what they will be able to contribute to the company," McTigue said. "If they go to the interview prepared, their confidence in themselves will show."

When employers are on campus, students should take time to meet them and listen to what they say, said Mike Theobald, associate director of the UI Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office. He said the program also allows students to ask questions.

"This type of program is very helpful for students because they get to hear firsthand from the people that usually run the interviewing process. We can say the same thing as the employers, but when it comes directly from the employers, then the students tend to listen more carefully," Theobald said.

The 19th annual Careers Day will be held Thursday in the Main Lounge of the Union from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. More than 130 employers from across the country are expected.

"Careers Day is very economical for students. It is a way for students to make contact with employers and not have to spend money trying to locate them and make phone calls," Theobald said.

UI junior Lori Laveck agrees with the economical benefits Careers Day offers.

"Having that many different employers from all over the United States in one place is a good way to get your foot in the door," Laveck said.

Students should dress professionally, bring copies of their resume and plan to target between 15 and 20 potential employers at Careers Day, Theobald said. All majors are welcome.

PHYSIOLOGY LANDS IN TOP 10 PERCENT

Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

Five UI doctoral programs were ranked among the top 25 percent in the nation by the National Research Council.

The UI political science, psychology, pharmacology, biochemistry and molecular biology departments were listed in the first quartile of the study titled "Research-Doctorate Programs in the United States." The physiology program received the highest rating with a listing in the top 10 percent.

Recruiting and reviewing faculty is a top priority in the doctoral programs. Alan Goodridge, head of the UI biochemistry department, said the number of outstanding faculty had a lot to do with the rankings.

"We've made significant improvement over the last 10 years," he said. "We are well-placed to become one of the best departments in the country, but we certainly have plenty of room for improvement."

Goodridge said his department's ability to attract top faculty comes from the financial support provided by the UI College of Medicine.

John Conybeare, chairperson of the political science program, also said good faculty is necessary to sustain a strong department.

"Like any department, we have a continuing need to hire good faculty, and to keep our faculty here to keep our standing," Conybeare said.

Faculty is also a major factor for Michael O'Hara, chairperson of the psychology department.

"It basically involves identifying and hiring the best psychologists to come to the department and be on our faculty," he said.

It's not too late...

False alarm disrupts class at Chemistry Building

Clouds of chalk dust triggered a fire alarm in the Chemistry Building Tuesday night, forcing classes to evacuate, but the commotion didn't faze one UI professor.

Acting Lt. Brian Greer, of the Iowa City Fire Department, said fire trucks were called to the scene at 7:41 p.m. The incident turned out to be a false alarm, apparently caused by janitors cleaning chalk erasers.

The fire alarm didn't stop all the classes in the building. UI chemistry Professor Les Sims continued to lecture, amid flashing red lights and the deafening noise of the alarm, while his class sat on steps on the south end of the building.

Students were able to re-enter the building at 8:05 p.m. when the alarm was turned off.

UI student charged with sexual abuse

A 33-year-old resident of Quadrangle Residence Hall was charged with the third-degree sexual abuse of a 15-year-old.

UI senior David M. Brooks was charged by the UI Department of Public Safety Monday with committing the Class C felony between Sept. 1 and Sept. 15.

Tom Baker, assistant to the dean of students, said he couldn't discuss the specific case but could speak generally about crimes committed on campus.

"When an individual is charged with a crime on campus, the university code of student life (Policies & Regulations Affecting Students) becomes relevant," Baker said. "In addition to the student's responsibility under criminal code, the student also has to take responsibility under student life code."

According to documents from the Johnson County Attorney's office, third-degree sexual abuse charges may apply if:

- an act is done by force or against the will of the other participant, whether or not the person is a spouse or cohabitant.
- the other participant is suffering a mental defect or incapacity precluding consent.
- the other participant is 12 or 13 years of age.
- the other participant is 14 or 15 years of age.
- the person used their authority to coerce the participant into sexual activity.
- the person is five or more years older than the other participant.

A Class C felony is punishable by imprisonment not to exceed 10 years and a fine between $1,000 and $50,000, according to the university code.

The incident could come under possible investigation by the university, said David Coleman, assistant director of Residence Life.

"If a university policy has been broken, the office of the dean will be investigating," Coleman said.

Brooks declined to comment Tuesday.

UI steamfitter injured

A UI Physical Plant employee was injured Tuesday morning when a car backed into him outside the Engineering Building at the corner of Washington Street and Madison Avenue, campus police said.

Steamfitter Roy Rios was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics after the accident, which occurred at 11:01 a.m. He was treated for a hip injury and discharged.

Lt. Leo Eastwood, of the UI Department of Public Safety, said the accident happened when Rios, who had been working in a utility tunnel beneath Madison Avenue, bent over to look into a manhole.

UI senior Robert S. Zumph, the driver of the vehicle, was charged with unsafe backing up, a simple misdemeanor that could be punishable with a fine of up to $100 or 30 days in jail.

A gamut of issues including access to pornographic material on the Internet were the focus of Tuesday's "Censorship In Cyberspace" panel discussion held at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.

The discussion featured four panelists from the Iowa City area and was fielded by Carol Spaziani. Although censorship was the main topic, issues involving copyright-law protection, privacy and government were also tackled.

UI freshman Wes Bachman said software companies could enable their Net-browsing programs to block access to pornography. He also went on to lambaste the proposed Acceptable Internet Use Policy at West High School, 2901 Melrose Ave.

"There are few arguments for the Internet policy," he said. "You can't just turn on the Internet and find pornography ... it has to be sought out."

"The issue is not just child versus parents — there's also government," said Lee Brintle, systems administrator of the UI's "Panda" system.

Brintle went on to point out the government's role in the Internet.

"As more and more people are on-line, we have to ask how easy it is to access certain information."

Bill may narrow access to Internet

Mark Panagakos
The Daily Iowan

Two bills which would limit Internet usage have been proposed by Iowa Sen. Charles Grassley.

His first bill, the "Anti-Electronic Racketeering Act," is a comprehensive attempt to prevent password-protected software (encryption) from being distributed over the Internet.

According to the bill, transferring unlicensed computer software would be a crime. In addition, law enforcement could receive a wiretapping order without location if a good-faith effort had been made to determine the location.

UI senior Tim Blank said the Internet should be able to be used to its fullest extent.

"The Internet is for people to use and people should be able to use it how they want and when West High School media specialist Denise Rehmke said the inability of teachers to watch over what students are accessing can become a problem when monitoring controversial material.

"We used to be able to gather sources as we saw fit," she said. "A lot of those barriers have changed ... Internet searching is much easier than it has been in the past. We used to assist students, now they can do it by themselves."

Brintle also pointed out that a lot of problems facing the Net aren't really all that new.

"In the early days of the printing press, there were a lot of the same problems as we have now," he said. "They just learned to deal with it appropriately as time went on."

"Information access control should not be done at the provider's site, it should be done at the service provider's level. Meaning that Internet users should not be policed by whoever that controls the Web site."

UI Government Documents Librarian Marianne Ryan discussed the government's reluctance to embrace the Internet.

"There's a perception among everyone that information is power. If electronic info is the wave of the future, then everyone should have access to government information," she said.

they want," he said.

UI senior Peter Anderson, an employee at the help desk at Weeg Computing Center, said Congress should not be considering any bills for censorship until members are educated about the Internet and its uses.

The argument over computer security and crime is similar to gun control, Douglas Jones, a UI associate professor of computer science, said.

"If you outlaw guns, then only criminals will have them," he said. "Who will have the encryption software? A personal computer is able to employ methods that are cryptographically secure. The problem is, who is it that should not be able to use these methods?"

When it comes to computers, "people are phenomenally ignorant to their threat to privacy," Jones said.

Iowa City school board president of the boarding Tuesday night.

Leff, who is beginning his second year as a member, was elected President Tom Bender, who said "express (his) opinion of the district," commended the Iowa City Community School District in his final speech.

"The Iowa City schools are in very good shape," Bender said. "The district is better and improving."

Bender also said he was pleased with both the school and the superintendent, Barb Grohe, the superintendent.

"She has a long-range vision for the district," Bender said. "I should try to keep it that way."

Bender congratulated elected members, Ed Marvin Lynch, and the board.

"The board is a diverse group of individuals. ... It bodes well for the district," Lynch said. "I have served since May, following Michael Howard. He was elected Sept. 6, with 100 votes."

Iowa City school board member Alan Leff was unanimously elected president of the board at its meeting Tuesday night.

Leff, who is beginning his eighth year as a member, replaces previous President Tom Bender.

Bender, who said he wanted to "express (his) opinions on the state of the district," complimented the Iowa City Community School District in his final speech before the board.

"The Iowa City community schools are in very fine shape," he said. "The district is striving to do better and improve on all fronts."

Bender also said he is impressed with both the school board and Barb Grohe, the superintendent of schools.

"She has a long-range view of the district," Bender said of Grohe. "We should try to keep her as long as we can."

Bender congratulated the newly elected members, Ernie Galer and Marvin Lynch, and said they will be assets to the board.

"The board is a dedicated group of individuals. ... The new blood bodes well for the district," he said.

Lynch has served on the board since May, following the death of Michael Howard. He won his own seat Sept. 6, with 93 percent of votes.

Iowa City City Council holds on transgendered issue

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

A proposed city ordinance which would give transsexuals and transvestites legal protection from discrimination will undergo revisions in its language, but is still likely to be voted on at the Iowa City City Council's next meeting.

The Human Rights Commission originally placed protection for gender identity under an expanded definition of sexual orientation. However, at Tuesday night's council meeting several Iowa City residents requested that gender identity — the gender a person considers himself/herself a part of — have its own category in the ordinance.

"Sexual orientation is very different from gender identity," UI Teaching Assistant in English and graduate student Brett Beemyn said. "Sexual orientation deals with sexual preferences, while transgendered people are taking the characteristics of a gender they feel they ought to be."

Beemyn, who teaches courses on gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered issues at the UI, said giving transgendered individuals their own category gives them the same status as categories such as race, age and gender.

He also recommended changing the definition of transgendered to include cross dressers, drag queens and impersonators because transsexuals and transvestites don't cover the entire spectrum of transgendered people.

"Cross dressing is done mostly for comfort — wearing clothing of the other gender is more comfortable," Beemyn said. "Transvestites wear clothing of the other sex for erotic pleasure, and that doesn't include all people who cross dress."

Iowa City resident Robert Neveu, a transvestite whose complaint of discrimination initiated the council's move to add protection for transgendered people, said he would also like to see transgendered protection put in a separate category.

"In my life, my sexual orientation is private; it's not outwardly visible," he said. "My gender identity is perceived. As soon as I open my mouth, there is an incongruity as to the gender I feel I am versus the gender I was born."

Neveu complained to the council in June that an employee of Sera Tec Biologicals, 408 S. Gilbert St., allegedly refused to let him donate plasma due to irregularly high hormone levels and an increased risk of HIV infection. Neveu, who goes by the name Cynthia Burke, is taking estrogen pills while awaiting a sex change operation. Neveu also alleged the employee said he was disruptive to other clients due to his female garb.

Neveu was told by the Human Rights Commission that nothing could be done about the complaint because there was no law in the books which outlawed discrimination based on transvestitism.

Prosecutor Clark pieces Simpson puzzle together in closing remarks

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The anguish of three families almost overwhelmed a prosecutor's closing argument in O.J. Simpson's murder trial Tuesday when pictures of bloody victims set off sobs which echoed through the small courtroom.

The drama came after a furious Superior Court Judge Lance Ito blacked out TV coverage for an hour, then reopened the camera's eye for the presentation by prosecutor

Marcia Clark, who literally assembled a picture puzzle showing Simpson as the killer.

Clark, delivering a closing argument which built in power throughout the day, disavowed her own police witness as a racist and ridiculed a defense contamination-conspiracy theory as "far-fetched."

Each point she made to the jury — about shoe prints, strands of hair, bloodstains and fibers from the carpet in Simpson's Bronco — were pieces in a murder puzzle, Clark said.

As she assembled these "pieces" throughout the day, an actual picture puzzle was projected on the giant screen overhead. When all the pieces were in place, it showed Simpson's face.

The families of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were convulsed in tears when murder photographs earlier used as evidence were flashed on the big courtroom screen and Clark described the slayings.

Simpson's grown daughter, Arnelle, wept into her hands as her aunts comforted her, and Simpson himself was overcome. His lawyers brought him water and tissues for his tears.

"When you look at these pictures, ladies and gentlemen, you see rage. You see fury. You see overkill," Clark told jurors, touching on the prosecution theme that Simpson killed his ex-wife in a fit of rage.

"This is not the mark of a professional killer," Clark said. "These are not efficient murders. These are murders that are really slaughters, that are personal."

Ito noticed jurors glancing toward the audience as sobs grew louder, but he did not interfere. Jurors focused mostly on Clark.

They took few notes but appeared to become increasingly engrossed in her steady, low-key summation.

She ridiculed the defense theory that Colombian drug dealers did the deed, saying the true killer was obsessed with a woman and "found the one way to keep her under control where she could never slip out of it again — and that man is the defendant."

Japan bank suffers losses due to dirty dealing

NEW YORK (AP) — In a scandal strikingly similar to the one that brought down Britain's venerable Barings Bank, a bond trader at Japan's Daiwa Bank was charged Tuesday with doctoring records to hide $1.1 billion in losses.

Federal prosecutors said 44-year-old Toshihide Iguchi lost the money through 30,000 unauthorized trades over the last 11 years at Daiwa's New York branch.

"Something this size is unprecedented," said U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White.

The debacle was the latest in a recent rash of cases against traders accused of single-handedly concealing huge losses from bank superiors.

But the scope and size of Daiwa's loss left some financial market experts wondering how it could have gone unnoticed for so long in one of the world's biggest banks — particularly so soon after Barings' collapse.

Daiwa, however, said it is in no danger of collapse and expects to report a $70 million first-half profit despite having to write off the losses. It also said that no depositor or customer lost any money.

Iguchi, a permanent U.S. resident, was arrested over the weekend in New Jersey, where he lives, and ordered held without bail Tuesday. Appearing somber and wearing blue jeans and a striped sweater, he made no comment. His lawyer also declined to comment.

Iguchi could get up to 30 years in prison and $1 million in fines. He could also be ordered to make restitution.

Clinton: environmentalists' knight in shining armor

WASHINGTON (AP) — With opinion polls showing the public wants clean air, water and land, President Clinton has decided it is smart policy — and politics — to battle the Republican Congress over environmental protection.

The president gave notice last week he would veto two bills solely because they would harm the environment. And he probably will face yet another confrontation over a spending bill expected on the Senate floor today, making deep budget cuts at the Environmental Protection Agency.

For months, environmentalists have complained privately about the White House's inadequate response to the Republican Congress' steady assault on environmental protection — from attempts to gut the Endangered Species Act to legislation aimed at crippling EPA enforcement.

Last week lawmakers approved legislation that would slash conservation programs at the Interior Department and peppered a deficit reduction package with provisions on everything from allowing oil drilling in an Arctic wildlife refuge to increasing logging on federal forests.

"It was the week from hell," said Gregory Wetstone, legislative director of the Natural Resources Defense Council, a leading environmental group.

But it also was the week that Clinton promised without condition to veto any legislation that calls for oil drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. And he promised to veto the Interior Department's spending bill because of its impact on federal parks, forests and natural resource protection.

Environmentalists were ecstatic.

JERICHO, West Bank — Israel-PLO agreement signed Thursday still has significant time running out, senior Palestinian officials said Tuesday.

The PLO is waiting for Israel on a timetable for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Palestinian cities, said Saeb Erekat, a senior official of local affairs in the West Bank.

"At this moment, we are waiting for finalized dates for the withdrawal, and that's an issue in the whole process," Erekat said at his office. "I hope that we will see it soon."

The accord on Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank was initiated Sunday in Egypt. It calls for a pullout of Israeli troops from Palestinian towns and villages, and the city of Hebron, where soldiers remain in parts of the city to protect settlers living there.

Hebron, where 4,000 settlers live amid 120,000 Palestinians, has been the site of daily clashes in recent weeks. Tuesday, Palestinian militants pelted Israeli soldiers with stones and bottles, and three Palestinians were killed in the process. 70 supporters of the PLO marched through the town, firing weapons.

Under the accord, elections are to be held after redeployment of Israeli troops.

But Erekat, in charge of the elections, said there was no agreement on when the elections would begin or when the redeployment would be completed.

Erekat said it was agreed on a starting date for the pullback before the elections were signed.

"It's really very serious," he said. "Every effort is being made to move it forward."

Erekat said the PLO rejected one proposal for a timetable as too restrictive. Israelis were supposed to pull back with a new proposal. Last-minute talks

Israel, PLO map out troop withdrawal

Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

JERICHO, West Bank — The Israel-PLO agreement supposed to be signed Thursday in Washington still has significant holes, with time running out to fill them, a senior Palestinian negotiator said Tuesday.

The PLO is waiting to hear from Israel on a timetable for starting the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Palestinian cities in the West Bank, said Saeb Erekat, minister of local affairs in Yasser Arafat's Cabinet.

"At this moment we have not yet finalized dates for the redeployment, and that's a major hanging issue in the whole agreement," Erekat said at his office in Jericho. "I hope that we will be able to finish."

The accord on expanding Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank was initialed Sunday in Taba, Egypt. It calls for a step-by-step pullout of Israeli troops from Palestinian towns and villages. The disputed city of Hebron would be last, with soldiers remaining in some parts of the city to protect Jewish settlers living there.

Hebron, where 450 Jewish settlers live amid 120,000 Palestinians, has been the site of almost daily clashes in recent months. On Tuesday, Palestinian youths in Hebron pelted Israeli soldiers with bottles and stones. In Nablus, where three Palestinians have been killed in the past week, about 70 supporters of the peace agreement marched through the middle of town, firing weapons in the air.

Under the accord, Palestinian elections are to be held 22 days after redeployment is completed.

But Erekat, in charge of organizing the elections, said Tuesday there was no agreement yet with Israel on when redeployment would begin or what would constitute completion.

Erekat said it was essential to agree on a starting date for a troop pullback before the agreement is signed.

"It's really very serious," he said. "Every effort is being exercised now."

Erekat said the Palestinians had rejected one proposed Israeli timetable as too long, and the Israelis were supposed to come back with a new proposal.

Last-minute talks were expected

Associated Press

Israeli soldiers run past a Palestinian woman and her child while chasing Palestinian stone throwers during clashes in the occupied West Bank town of Hebron Tuesday.

to be held Tuesday night after the end of the Jewish New Year holiday, and perhaps even in Washington before the signing ceremony Thursday.

Palestinian sources said Tuesday that elections were not likely to be held before March, the deadline for Israeli troops to redeploy in Hebron.

Palestinians will elect an 82-member Palestinian Council to administer the autonomous areas.

Erekat said Islamic militants would not be barred from running for office. But he added that candidates or parties that "commit or advocate racism" would be disqualified. It was not immediately clear how those criteria would be applied.

Candidates or parties that "pursue the implementation of their aims by unlawful or non-democratic means" would also be disqualified, according to the elections agreement.

The militant group Hamas, which has claimed responsibility for a series of deadly suicide bombings in its campaign against the Israel-PLO peace process, has taken steps in recent weeks to set up a political party.

Voters will choose representatives from 16 districts in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Powell could run in Perot's party

John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ross Perot's pledge to build the "largest party in the country" got an intriguing boost Tuesday as Colin Powell opened the door to becoming its first presidential nominee.

Perot's announcement Monday night that he planned to form an Independence Party that would nominate a 1996 presidential candidate was enough to rattle both major parties, and they scrambled to assess whether the move made it more or less likely Perot himself would enter the race.

Before long, however, they also found themselves grappling with the prospect of some sort of Perot-Powell alliance, as the general-turned-author disclosed that Perot had called him over the weekend to tell him of his plans for a new party.

Asked if he would run as its candidate, Powell said: "Obviously it is something I would consider and he knows I would consider it."

Previously, Powell has said that if he decided to run, he would be inclined to do so as a Republican, in part because of the giant hurdles to getting on the ballot as an independent.

Democrats and Republicans alike were left with the question of whether Powell's interest was real, or just part of his effort to sell his new autobiography.

Equally important was whether Perot would build a new party only to allow himself to be eclipsed by Powell — or anyone else.

"Only people in Washington would ask that question," Perot said in an interview. "This is not about me."

Little was known about how Perot's Independence Party would be structured, financed and placed on state ballots and how its presidential nominee would be selected. Perot himself had few details, saying lawyers were working on the structure and budget. He said it would only run a presidential candidate in 1996 because "we can only do so much at once well."

Perot said the response was overwhelming and that more than 3,000 calls an hour were pouring into the headquarters of his United We Stand America organization — the springboard for the new party. But not all UWSA members were happy.

"Perot is doing his own thing," said Deborah Taylor, the elected chairwoman in Ohio. "We knew nothing about it."

For all the uncertainty, this much seemed virtually assured: the 1996 presidential race would be at least a three-way affair, perhaps even more crowded.

"There are either going to be three or four candidates vying in the center where the decisive votes are," said former Connecticut Gov. Lowell Weicker, who is considering an independent bid.

Perot spent Tuesday in daylight meetings at his Dallas office discussing the first hurdle, an Oct. 24 deadline to qualify the new party for the 1996 California ballot.

United We Stand volunteers Fred Bostwick, left, and Bill Mowrer answer telephones at the national headquarters in Dallas Tuesday near a picture of Ross Perot with the slogan "Take Your Country Back." Perot announced Monday he was officially starting a third party to compete with the Republican and Democratic parties. His 800 number flashed nationwide on televisions and brought in more than 800,000 calls in the first five minutes.

Five million petitions supporting the effort were being printed Sunday in newspaper ads across the state, and Perot organizers from across the country were converging to help register voters for the new party. Maine and Ohio come next, because of their 1995 deadlines.

Perot said he would abandon the effort if Congress passed a balanced budget amendment and a litany of campaign and lobbying reforms by Christmas.

But he said he was operating on the assumption they would not.

"If this comes into being, it will be the first party, not a third party," Perot said. "It will be the largest party in the country."

Perot said Powell was just one of several prospective candidates he had spoken to. He declined to name any others.

With Powell atop the ticket, analysts of all stripes agreed the new party could capture a third of the vote or perhaps more. But Times Mirror Center pollster Andrew Kohut asked: "The question is would Perot's ego ever allow it?"

GOP pollster Frank Luntz, who worked for Perot in 1992, predicted it would not.

"I find it very difficult to believe that he would create this without knowing that his people will turn to him first," Luntz said.

Citadel sits on application until court reaches decision

Bruce Smith
Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — A woman who wants to follow Shannon Faulkner into The Citadel's cadet corps has made her application, but it will be on hold until the courts decide whether the corps can remain all-male.

Nancy Mellette will be sent a letter saying "the issue is being adjudicated," said Terry Leedom, a spokesperson for the military college.

In a trial set to begin Nov. 6, a federal judge will consider whether a women's leadership program at Converse College, a private women's school in Spartanburg, is an acceptable alternative to admitting women to The Citadel corps.

Mellette, 17, is a senior at Oak Ridge Military Academy, a coed preparatory school in North Carolina.

Her father is a Citadel graduate and her brother is a Citadel cadet.

She wants to intervene in the lawsuit Faulkner filed challenging the constitutionality of a public school barring women from the corps.

Faulkner became a cadet last month after a 2 1/2-year court fight but dropped out after less than a week, citing the stress of the battle and her isolation.

Also Monday, the school received an application from another woman who wants to attend, making four in recent months. Leedom said all are on hold.

None of the others have filed to intervene in the lawsuit.

An Oct. 3 hearing has been set to consider Mellette's request to intervene and Faulkner's request to stay on as a plaintiff.

The Citadel wants her removed now that she has left school.

WITNESS PROBABLY KILLED DEGAN

Friend gives testimony in Ruby Ridge inquiry

Marcy Gordon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Choking back tears, a friend of white separatist Randy Weaver testified Tuesday that deputy U.S. marshals fired first in the shootout that killed Weaver's 14-year-old son and a deputy marshal, and the officers identified themselves too late.

"We were just walking along the trail ... making a perfect target of ourselves," Kevin Harris told a Senate hearing of the exchange of gunfire on Aug. 21, 1992, which killed Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan and Weaver's son, Sam, at Ruby Ridge, Idaho.

The deputy marshals were scouting Weaver's mountainside home-stand in anticipation of a military-style operation to arrest him on gun charges and failure to appear for trial. Weaver's wife, Vicki, was shot and killed by an FBI sniper the next day.

Also at Tuesday's hearing, former Justice Department attorney Jeffrey Howard testified he recalled learning the morning of Aug. 22 that Sam Weaver had been shot. He said he heard that from one of the top FBI officials now under suspension in a criminal investigation of Ruby Ridge.

But federal law enforcement officials have said they didn't know about the shooting for another day and a half, until they bulldozed the building where the Weavers' had placed the teen-ager's body. Howard said that during subsequent FBI and Justice Department investigations, he was never asked when he learned Sam Weaver had been shot.

Harris, now 28, stayed with the Weavers at various times over a 10-year period and was treated as an adopted son. He and Weaver were acquitted of charges of murdering Degan.

Several members of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on terrorism, technology and government information questioned Harris skeptically as the panel's hearings on Ruby Ridge entered their fourth week.

Harris conceded he probably killed Degan, but he insisted the deputy marshals' previous testimony to the subcommittee was false.

"I want to say this as clearly as I possibly can, so that there is absolutely no mistake about it in anyone's mind: What Mr. Roderick and Mr. Cooper say is false," Harris told the senators.

Deputy Marshals Arthur Roderick and Larry Cooper, who were involved in the shootout, testified Sept. 15 that Roderick shot the dog after it looked toward him. After that, they said, Degan yelled, "Stop, U.S. marshals," and Harris turned, fired from the hip and shot Degan.

"If I had wanted to shoot someone, I had the perfect opportunity when I saw the (deputy marshal) with the dog — he wasn't even looking at me," Harris testified. "But I didn't shoot him because I didn't have any intention of shooting anyone."

Harris said the shootout began when the deputy marshals shot the dog and then started shooting at him and Sam Weaver. He said deputies didn't identify themselves until "pretty much after" the shootout had ended. Harris said he fired his gun into the brush because shots were being fired at him.

Harris insisted he was in plain view of the deputy marshals when he went up to the body of Sam Weaver after he had been hit in the shootout.

Viewpoints

Attitudes reflect buried racism

It's no secret racism is alive and well in the United States. While most people maintain the situation has improved greatly, it must be realized that it is a dream deferred.

The racism in our country has taken on a different form. No longer is it acceptable to be blatantly racist. The Rodney King beating allowed whites to shake their collective heads and say "that's terrible." Mark Fuhrman has become something of an anti-Christ for his racist attitudes and use of the word "nigger."

A recent study by The Tennessean showed African-Americans get longer prison sentences than whites for similar federal crimes. Of 80,000 federal court convictions studied over 1992-93, African-Americans received an average of 36 months. The average sentence for whites was 33 months.

Interestingly, the South, which is usually thought of as the most racist region of the country, had the lowest regional disparity: 3 percent. Sentences for blacks in the Midwest were 12 percent higher than for whites.

African-Americans have long maintained that so-called "liberals" in the North aren't so anti-racist. While these whites speak anti-racist rhetoric, their actions often fall short of the ideal.

Malcolm X said he preferred Southern conservatives to Southern liberals. "At least they tell you how they really feel," he said.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Race relations reflect false improvement; subtle prejudices manifest in court trials and criminal sentencing.

Martin Luther King Jr., another major civil rights leader of the 1960s, had great success in his movement in the South. However, he was constantly frustrated and — for the most part — was defeated in his northern movement.

Of course, there are certainly other factors than race in the problem of African-Americans receiving longer sentences. It has become apparent that economics is the single most important role in the justice system. O.J. Simpson is obviously not the representative African-American. With his wealth and celebrity status, he is — for all purposes — a white man in court. He's got the Dream Team for a counsel and the status to back them up.

Still, it is interesting to look at similar high-profile cases. Two of the biggest rape trials of the decade were the Mike Tyson and William Kennedy Smith cases. Tyson is African-American. Smith is white. Tyson was found guilty. Smith was acquitted.

Unfortunately, rape is the most difficult crime to prove guilt or innocence. Tyson's and Smith's cases were separate cases with different issues involved. Still, it is interesting the African-American man went down.

However, everyday racism is even more subtle than the racism found in our justice system. Stereotypes, which many feel are harmless, can become very damaging.

In the world of sports, this subtle racism is very prevalent. African-Americans are depicted as talented, but often lazy. Whites don't have the natural ability, but make up for it with hard work. African-Americans don't really understand the game while whites have "great court sense." While whites work for whatever they achieve, it all comes very easy to African-Americans.

Of course, these notions are ridiculous. The real reason African-Americans are more successful in many sports is because they work harder. Most come from low-income environments where sports are often the only way out. It is no coincidence that the "rich people's sports," such as golf and tennis, are mainly white.

Attitudes are very difficult to change, especially when people don't realize they can be harmful. And they are the most dangerous when people don't realize this.

Updating civil rights is a waste, universal protection is law

The Iowa City City Council is considering approval of a new public ordinance that would amend the city's code to protect transsexuals and transvestites from discrimination in housing and employment in Iowa City. Councilor Bruno Pigott stated this proposal would give these people "the same protection as other people have under the law." Pigott goes on to say "it means a group, no matter how small, is protected from discrimination."

The question to be asked here: Do we really need this? While being neither approving nor condoning of such lives, we need to ask our leaders if it is really necessary, every time some group of people complains of discrimination, to amend our laws to include that certain group. It would be simpler to say in the city code that ALL people in the Iowa City community should be protected from discrimination.

No one approves of discrimination against any individual. However, the liberal view on discrimination policy is government should strive to explicitly state which groups of people are protected under law. This helps to foster the divisive and destructive climate we have today in American society.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Explicitly listing every minority group guaranteed equality in law is redundant.

We already have two items that protect all citizens of this country equally: the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. These two masterful documents are the cornerstones of civil rights for all Americans, no matter what race, creed, ethnicity or group they may represent.

Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that's what the founding fathers demanded from the British monarchy for ALL citizens of the American colonies. It is what every American soldier has died for since then in the defense of our country's ideals and government.

Conservative philosophy believes the individual should be judged on the basis of character, integrity and self-worth. These basic values transcend any classification of people in this world. Yet, the liberal mindset many have in this country has caused them to overlook these basic yet, fundamental issues.

Government should ensure the protection of its citizens' civil rights. Make no mistake of that. However, it should not have to continue to ensure change of all anti-discrimination policy to represent a group of people, when that group is found to be discriminated against.

Councilor Pigott, instead of adding new groups to our city anti-discrimination laws, let's change them to say ALL Iowa City citizens should be protected from discrimination. Our society has its differences. However, we are all human beings and should be equally treated as such.

Banned books bloom

Exercise your rights, your mind and your little apathetic body and pick up a title off the banned book list at the public library.

Banned Book Week, which lasts until Sept. 29, honors works that have been challenged or banned from libraries and school districts nationwide.

In Iowa's own Mediapolis school district, Judy Blume's novel "Forever" was added to the list this year because it "does not promote abstinence and monogamous relationships."

When I was in grade school, Judy Blume was the only alternative to magazines like Teenbeat, Bop and a whole slew of titles telling me how to manipulate by body to keep a boyfriend.

Promoting abstinence is the last responsibility of authors targeting growing girls. Their responsibility is to evoke thoughts and questions, not dependency.

Living and playing with the monsters I helped create

Like many other sports enthusiasts, I rushed out to buy a video game called "College Football USA '96" for my Sega Genesis a few weeks ago. This eagerly awaited game contains almost every realistic aspect of the college football world, including all 108 Division IA teams, conferences, rankings, MVP voting and even bowl games. The rosters are accurate for every team, allowing football fans to guide the current members of their favorite teams through a tough 12-game schedule.

The goal I had in mind was to take the Hawkeyes to their first national championship but soon discovered that whoever designed this game had little respect for Hayden's current squad. Eager to begin a season, I selected the defending champs, the Nebraska Cornhuskers, for my team. Little did I know, this video game would soon teach me about our society's scapegoat-seeking tendencies.

Sports fans — myself included — are quick to point fingers for the state of sports today. When something goes wrong, our society instantly looks for someone to blame — often overlooking the real culprit. So many sports stars act as though they are above the law because we have put them there.

I tried to keep my season as realistic as possible, which led me to pull Nebraska's tailback, Lawrence Phillips, out of the starting line-up after Nebraska's coach dismissed him from the team in real life. Phillips was arrested for assaulting his ex-girlfriend and was subsequently dismissed by coach Tom Osborne. On Sept. 19, Phillips pleaded no contest to assault charges in court. This is the same plea entered by a former University of Southern California running back a few years ago, when he was charged with assaulting his wife, Nicole Brown Simpson.

After righteously benching Phillips, I replaced him with the back-up tailback, Damon Benning. Prosecutors in Nebraska have decided not to file similar charges on Benning, who was arrested the day before Phillips, for allegedly grabbing his 19-year-old ex-girlfriend and pushing her. In all, three of Nebraska's running backs have been accused of roughing up their ex-girlfriends this year.

By the time I substituted the fourth-string running back for the Cornhuskers, I found myself facing a dilemma. My ground game simply was not that good with a fourth-string running back taking pitches from Tommie Frazier. I was forced to do what Tom Osborne, or any coach for that matter, would do — put Phillips back in the starting line-up and keep winning football games. It was an easy choice for me to make.

On the playing field of real life, the choice is not that easy for coaches to make. Their players are not just computer animations but real people whose off-field actions are just as important as what they do in the game. Professional and college athletes alike seem to be forgetting this crucial fact. Pick a sport and there are numerous examples to choose from:

Darryl Strawberry of the New York Yankees, Robert Parish of the Charlotte Hornets, Brian Blades of the Seattle Seahawks — the list goes on and on.

Sports fans — myself included — are quick to point fingers for the state of sports today. When something goes wrong, our society instantly looks for someone to blame — often overlooking the real culprit. So many sports stars act as though they are above the law because we have put them there.

We criticize coaches for not being able to control their teams, but we have given the coaches little choice in the matter. Losing too many games means empty seats; empty seats mean less funding for programs. The world of sports has become corrupt and fans are certainly a part of it. After all, it's our money that makes the sports world go round.

Having realized this horrible truth, I wish I could report I promptly went out and canceled my subscription to Sports Illustrated, sold my Hawkeye season tickets and threw my Troy Aikman jersey in the garbage. In all honesty, however, I took the Huskers to the Orange Bowl and finished with an 11-1-1 record. I am now trying to capture the national championship with Notre Dame.

N.Y. murderer —
put him to rest

Charles Albanese was put to death by lethal injection in Illinois the other day.

He had poisoned three of his relatives, mainly to get an inheritance and take over the family business.

The execution received only modest news coverage. And if there were any protests and candlelight vigils by opponents of the death penalty, I didn't notice.

Mike Royko
syndicated columnist for the Chicago Tribune

That's because executions have become common in this country. Except in cases of well-known serial killers, they receive minimal news coverage.

Which is understandable. Every poll and survey shows that the overwhelming majority of Americans favor the death penalty for killers.

So it's no longer the hot social and moral issue that it was a few years ago.

The question is why?

There is no evidence that the death penalty discourages future killers and reduces crime. If anything, some states that have killed the most murderers since executions were resumed have even higher homicide rates than before.

It's surprisingly expensive because our legal system permits seemingly endless appeals. Some anti-execution researchers say that in the long run it costs less to lock a killer up for life.

It's discriminatory because many who land on Death Row had a second-rate or over-worked lawyers. Few people can afford a legal "Dream Team."

And there is always the chance, slight as it may be, that an innocent person will be convicted and executed because of an incompetent defense or dishonest police and prosecutors.

But none of these anti-execution arguments seem to matter. If anything — the polls show — most Americans think that even more murderers should be zapped.

Is that because we have become a cold-blooded, hard-boiled, unforgiving, vindictive, mean society?

Nah. The reason Americans favor the death penalty is Joshua Torres. That's right. Joshua Torres, age 22, of New York. You probably haven't heard of him, but most New Yorkers have.

Joshua Torres has a girlfriend. And his girlfriend had a friend, a sweet young woman named Kimberly Antonakos.

Kimberly, a college student, had her own apartment in New York. Her father is a successful businessman.

A generous person, Antonakos invited Torres, his girlfriend and their child to share her apartment while work was being done on their place.

In return for her generosity and friendship, this is what Torres did, according to police:

He and two other men kidnapped her. They tied her to a chair in a vacant house and left her there.

They wanted ransom money from her father. But when they phoned him to make their demands, they were too stupid to understand how to leave a message on his answering machine.

So the father didn't get their message and didn't know his daughter had been kidnapped. If he had known, he would have gladly given them everything he owned.

After three days, Torres and his sidekicks decided to forget about the ransom and get rid of their victim, who had lapsed into unconsciousness.

They did this by pouring gasoline over her, igniting it and burning her alive.

Later, Torres killed one of his accomplices because he thought the gut might be having pangs of conscience and would squeal.

After several months, the police finally cracked the case, and last week, they arrested Torres and the other boys and charged them with murder, kidnapping and other crimes. They say they are confident they have enough evidence to convict them.

Assuming that Torres is convicted, can anyone offer any good reasons why he should be allowed to live? Even if he is locked up for life, he will still enjoy the flavors of food, the refreshing taste of a cold drink on a hot day, the exhilaration of a physical workout, the warmth of the sun, the escape provided by a book, a movie or a TV show. And, who knows, he might get to like the kind of sex that's practiced in many prisons.

After the premeditated cruelty of what he did to a fine, innocent, generous person, should he have even these limited pleasures that being alive would provide him?

No, Americans don't favor the death penalty because they are hard-boiled and lack a sensitive social conscience. Just the opposite. They favor the death penalty because of a heartless son-of-a-bitch like Joshua Torres.

Skorton is best bet for
UI president

To the Editor:

While going about my errands at the UI Department for Research, I met a woman who actually seemed to understand me. Wise, worldly and kind, she took me in and made me feel welcome — this, even though I have no advanced degree! She did not question my worth, my integrity or my claims upon existence. Later, when my work was publicly commended to the Nobel committee, she did not withhold her congratulations. Genuine, warm and sweetly human, she did what she could for me.

She thinks David Skorton is a prince of a fellow. She said as much then, before Dave was in the running for president of the UI. Seeing her admiration for the guy, I took a look at his resume to see what such a person is made of. I must say, he would seem like a splendid candidate. Aside from his impressive credentials and his reputation for being a really good kid, he's also one of our own. He's been here awhile and has demonstrated his commitment to the UI; unlike certain others — whose names escape me — whom the regents, in their lofty judgment, have previously visited upon us.

Call for historian's help

To the Editor:

I am a 62-year-old Maine man who would like to honor an unfortunate lad — Johnny Hendricks, a drummer who served in the latter part of the American Civil War. Johnny's years of birth and death are 1853-1865, indicating he was no more than 12. He is buried at Iowa City's Oakland Cemetery with numerous other Civil War soldiery, but Johnny did not survive the war, it seems, to become a veteran. I am not certain if he died in battle or from disease. Because he had no descendants, it is not likely anything about his brief life is known today. Who would have taken an interest? I hope to honor him with at least a brief mention in a national study on the youngest participants in the Civil War, Yankee or Rebel.

If Johnny Hendricks were born in or near Iowa City, he would have served in an Iowa regiment. Did he have siblings? His life story will be very brief if it can be retrieved at all. Perhaps a local historian, Civil War buff or genealogist might know a few isolated facts? I will reply to any helpful response. I have to find out if anything of him is known or survives today.

gave the approval.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon President Todd Johnson said, "It's a time to re-examine ourselves. I think the Greeks are doing the right thing by agreeing with the (ban)."

"We are seen as campus leaders," Johnson said. "I think together we can work it out."

Jones was not available for comment late Tuesday night.

Interfraternity Council President Bob Kendall said the meeting was a result of the recent death of Lambda Chi Alpha associate member Matthew Garofalo.

He said though the alcohol policies are evaluated every semester, they are "very good" and the UI's are among the most progressive in the nation.

"Anything can be improved," Kendall said.

Once fraternity members are briefed by their presidents,

Kendall said they will understand why the ban has been placed. Sororities are not included in the ban because national rules do not allow alcohol in their houses. Parties outside of fraternity houses also are not included in the ban.

"It's not the start of a dry campus," Kendall said, "or the demise of the Greek system."

Kirsten Roth, president of Alpha Phi sorority, said she supports the ban as a tool to rethink policies.

"I think this is good," Roth said. "It gives us time to re-evaluate our policies and see how we need to change the system. It's a good break."

Roth said she doesn't think there will be a negative reaction to the moratorium.

"I think people will be supportive when they have the information and understand the situation," she said. "The press release comes out (today) and it will clarify the situation."

She said the Greek system is not just about alcohol, so the ban should not disrupt life.

"The base purpose is to develop members and support them," Roth said. "Doing this is a step for us in re-evaluating the system."

Roth said the Greek system has been considering a move like this since Garofalo's death.

"It's not something that's come up suddenly," she said. "There's a lot of evidence that this should be done, and it's not something we're taking lightly. Serious things have happened that we need to address."

She said the alcohol ban will likely result in policy changes.

"Our top priority is the safety of our people," Roth said. "I don't know how that will be translated into policy."

STEINEM

"Oh, my wife is not interested in feminism," and so on. The current social order is justified by biology or God or Freud. Therefore, "there cannot be a change" is another excuse.

Once the change is underway anyway, which is what is happening now in the feminist movement, the second stage of resistance that is necessary, is to say, "Well, it used to be needed but not anymore," and that is what is happening now.

DI: Can women who stay at home or are pro-life be considered feminists?

GS: First of all, raising children is very crucial and should be honored and counted and be of a social and economic value. Part of the reason it isn't is because it is done by women, when it needs to be done by men, too. When it does, it becomes more valuable, but as it is, regardless of who does it, it has to have an attributed value.

Right now, the work mostly done by women at home and in that environment are the two things that have no economic value whatsoever. And that means that there is a kind of semantic slavery: Women who are called homemakers are called women who don't work, and that's not true. They work twice as much. That's an important goal of the feminist movement. The whole idea of feminism is to give each other the power to make a choice. It matters less what the choice is than that we have the power to make it.

So an individual woman who is pro-life, in the sense that she herself wouldn't have an abortion, is certainly supporting reproductive freedom. The only problem is if she tries to keep someone else from having an abortion. Then she can't. You've got to let that individual make their own decisions.

DI: What is the newest battle for feminism?

GS: The upcoming election in '96 is probably the most crucial and frightening one in my lifetime. ... There is a move on part of the right wing to convince us our vote doesn't matter so they can get their vote in and keep us from voting. But it is terribly important to vote.

Having said that, it isn't that change starts in the electoral college — it doesn't. It starts in the campuses, in communities and neighborhoods, but it can be stopped in the electoral. It's never been more crucial that we both are registered and get out there and vote and elect someone who will listen to the majority of the country.

DI: Does it make you uncomfortable to be considered a feminist icon, to have so many women look to you for a voice?

GS: If I feel they are looking to me to be like me, yes. The goal is to be like ourselves. If something that I do gives them the sense of possibility they didn't have before, I'm proud of that, grateful of that. But we can't ever try to imitate each other — they can use that in a way that I couldn't.

DI: Lesbianism and feminism are sometimes equated. Is that accurate?

GS: No, they are not exactly the same. All kinds of women are feminists — heterosexual women, homosexual women, bisexual women, white, black, Native American, Hispanic, old, young — no, it's not exactly the same thing. But feminism includes lesbians as it includes all women. But lesbians have often been especially courageous on behalf of all women because they have not had, and they have understood what it means to live without, a man's economic or social support.

DI: What advice would you give college women now?

GS: Remember that inside a person is a unique self that is a result of millennia, heredity and environment that is combined in a way that has never happened before and will never happen again. And the object, the point of education, should be to develop that self, not to become like someone else. Follow your interests, follow your feelings of joy — that's the signal.

Sager he was "annoyed" with the camera zooming in on Simpson's notes.

"Perhaps your eyes are better than mine," Sager replied. "I couldn't make anything out on the legal pad."

It suggested a fine of $10,000, which Sager called excessive, reminding the judge misconduct fines on attorneys in the case never exceeded $950.

"We're disappointed in the judge's decision," said Sylvia Teague, president of the RTNA. "The pool photographer had no intent to violate the court order on what could be shot. ... We're disappointed that Judge Ito thought it was appropriate to fine the media at all. He has ruled that we have to pay the fine and we will pay the fine."

In agreeing to turn the camera back on, Ito ordered the operator not to photograph anyone at the counsel tables below the shoulders.

He even praised the operator's work up to this point, saying, "You've done a heck of a job so far."

"I agree that the transgression was benign in its intent," Ito said.

Ito has used his "kill switch" prerogative over the courtroom camera before, first in January, when the operator inadvertently broadcast the face of an alternate juror, and again last week, when he barred coverage of the testimony of two mob-linked brothers to protect their identities.

the war-torn area, are familiar with the situation.

Lucia Zakharova, a UI graduate student from Russia, said the Russian people are looking for ways to end the conflict.

"It's not a question of who is right and wrong, but the war is bad and should be stopped," Zakharova said. "There are too many people dying."

UI senior Maria Sokolova and UI graduate student Natasha Kovrakina, both of Russia, said the conflict isn't discussed at the UI and they aren't as well informed since arriving at the university.

"I think we knew more because it was closer to our country," Sokolova said. "I occasionally keep in touch with what's happening when I watch news from all over the world."

The two agreed peace in the region would be possible if other countries, such as the United States and Russia, didn't get involved.

Though many U.S. citizens may not understand the conflict, Iowa City community members have taken roles in aiding war refugees.

Volunteers at the Crowded Closet, 1121 Gilbert Court, are filling boxes with non-perishable items for the Bosnian refugees, said Ken Layman, manager of the Crowded Closet.

After being filled, the boxes are sent to Pennsylvania and then to camps to be distributed to refugees.

The people who fill the refugee kits may not understand the political or economic side of the conflict, Layman said, but they do understand the humanitarian side.

"We had a good response with the first shipment of 50 kits that went out last week. We hopefully will have more with the last shipment in November," Layman said.

"The people that come in here want to help the people they see on the news."

PEACE HOPES

The main issue at the talks was how much power should be given to central authorities in a Bosnian state divided between rebel Serbs and a Muslim-Croat federation.

Bosnian Serbs rebelled in April 1992 against the Muslim-led government's decision to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

The Bosnian Serbs, who want to eventually unite their land with neighboring Serbia, had opposed a strong central government. The Muslims, who hope to keep Bosnia intact, wanted to make it as powerful as possible.

Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic in Sarajevo said the principles drafted Tuesday provided the "minimum of the institutions" needed to continue "the legal existence of our state."

Yet Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic hailed the agreement as "a confirmation of the existence of Republika Srpska," which is what the Serbs call their territory in Bosnia.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, the lead U.S. negotiator for Bosnia, called the agreement "one more important step on the road to peace" but warned, "We still have a long and difficult path ahead of us."

At the start of Tuesday's talks, held at the U.S. Mission to the United Nations, Secretary of State Warren Christopher urged the parties to seize "the moment in history" to reach a cease-fire. That did not happen.

Holbrooke said later a cease-fire was discussed but the two sides were too far apart.

Holbrooke and his team will fly to Sarajevo Thursday for another round of shuttle diplomacy, but Holbrooke said he did not expect to secure a cease-fire soon, "based on what we were hearing (Tuesday)."

Asked if he was satisfied with Tuesday's agreement, Holbrooke replied, "We can't be satisfied, the war is still going on."

The negotiations were the first since a U.S.-brokered agreement was clinched in Geneva Sept. 8. That agreement proposed keeping Bosnia's external borders intact while dividing the state roughly 50-50 between Serbs and the Muslim-Croat federation.

Tuesday's agreement calls for democratic elections to be held simultaneously in the Bosnian Serb and Muslim-Croat parts of the country at an undetermined date, after fighting ends and "social conditions permit."

International observers will determine exactly when things have improved enough for the elections.

The government of Bosnia will consist of a parliament, a collective presidency and a judicial system.

Two-thirds of parliament would be elected from the territory controlled by the Muslim-Croat federation, the other third from Bosnian Serb lands. Parliamentary action will be by majority vote, provided that includes at least one-third of the votes on each side.

Left undecided was how many people would make up the collective presidency.

Iowa leapfrogs two spots to No. 5

The Iowa field hockey team jumped two spots to No. 5. The Hawkeyes downed Ohio State and Penn State over the weekend, both in shutouts.

The Hawkeyes are the highest-ranked Big Ten team. North Carolina holds down the top spot for the third consecutive week.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Organized league sneaks closer to reality

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Hoping to capitalize on the growing popularity of women's basketball on the college level, a group of prominent players announced plans Tuesday for a national professional league.

Backed by former college stars Jennifer Azzi, Sheryl Swoopes, Lisa Leslie and Teresa Edwards, the American Basketball League hopes to begin play in 1996 with 12 teams.

"I think all of us have had this dream of having a league in our own country for quite some time," said Azzi.

Wearing an ABL T-shirt with the words, "It's a Whole New Ballgame," Azzi was joined by seven of her fellow players from the U.S. Women's National Team, who have signed on as founding players in the league.

NBA

Mad Max hooks on with Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vernon Maxwell, suspended for 10 games from the Houston Rockets last season for hitting a fan, signed Tuesday with the Philadelphia 76ers and will shift from shooting to point guard.

His signing comes five days after the 76ers added Richard Dumas, a promising forward whose brief NBA career has been marked by two drug suspensions.

"It's not a risk with Vernon Maxwell and Dumas — it's fun," coach and general manager John Lucas said. "Now I've got to do my job off the court with them, as well on the court."

Although terms of the contract were not disclosed, Maxwell said he had better offers from Charlotte and Indiana, but chose the 76ers because of Lucas.

He said Lucas, a former Rocket guard who has known Maxwell for the past seven years, has been "like a big brother to me."

The 76ers have called a news conference for today and are expected to announce the signing of Jerry Stackhouse.

Two weeks after facing the nation's top rusher, Iowa State's Troy Davis, the Iowa football team gears itself for one of the top passing games in the country Saturday when it hosts New Mexico State.

The Aggies are currently No. 8 in the nation in passing and quarterback Cody Ledbetter ranks No. 5 in total offense.

"They have one of the best passing teams in the nation," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "It's really great for us to have to play against a wide-open ball club like this going into the Big Ten."

The Aggies come to Kinnick Stadium with a record of 1-3, having lost three straight ball games after their season-opening victory over Texas El-Paso.

With the Big Ten season starting next week at Michigan State, the Hawkeyes are not about to look past the Aggies.

"They'll become a very fine football team," Fry said. "I just hope they don't gel against us."

The Hawkeyes come into the game as the No. 9 rushing team in the nation. Sedrick Shaw is averaging 140 yards per game. Rodney Filer is averaging 64.5 and Tavian Banks 51.5.

"I think for the most part, we've accomplished what we wanted to accomplish," quarterback Matt Sherman said.

Playoff race hits final stretch

Mariners widen lead in AL West

Jim Cour

Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Seattle Mariners are closing the season the way every team hopes it can. They are also on the verge of closing out the California Angels.

"Earlier in the season, everything was going right for them," Tino Martinez said Tuesday after the Mariners reduced their magic number to winning the AL West to three with a 10-2 victory over the Angels. "Now, it seems like everything is going right for us."

The Mariners, getting home runs from Jay Buhner and Ken Griffey Jr., won for the 22nd time in 30 games to move 13 games over .500.

Andy Benes (7-1) ran his winning streak to five games, giving up a home run to Garret Anderson in the fifth. Benes allowed eight hits in 7 1/3 innings.

They have a three-game lead over the Angels, losers of 27 of 36, with five games left on the schedule. The teams meet again today in the Mariners' final home game of the season.

"The way Seattle is playing, we'd be better off concentrating on winning the wild card," said Chuck Finley, who will start against the Mariners on today. "They're very, very hot."

California dropped to 1 1/2 games behind New York in the race for the fourth playoff spot.

"We've got to win tomorrow," third baseman Tony Phillips said. "It's the most important game of the season for us. If we drop four back with four left, that's not a good situation."

The Angels, who led by 11 games on Aug. 9, have lost 15 of their last 17 on the road and dropped nine games in the standings in the last 13 days.

Seattle has a season-high, seven-game winning streak and has won 15 of its last 17 at home.

"We have to put together a good, solid game tomorrow," Angels manager Marcel Lachemann said. "The choices are pretty clear. You either do it or you don't."

Rockies regain West advantage

John Nadel

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Larry Walker hit two home runs and Bret Saberhagen won for the first time in nearly eight weeks Tuesday night as Colorado moved back into first place in the NL West by beating Los Angeles 7-3.

With five days left in the season and one game left in this series, the Rockies lead the division by a half-game. Los Angeles leads Houston by a half-game in the wild card race.

Walker's second homer of the game off Tom Candiotti (7-14), a two-run shot to right-center following a leadoff walk to Dante Bichette in the sixth, snapped a 2-2 tie. It was the third two-homer game of the season for Walker, who has a career-high 34.

Ellis Burks hit a two-out, two-run single off Pedro Astacio in the eighth and Joe Girardi had a two-out RBI single in the ninth to give the Rockies some breathing room.

Saberhagen (7-6), who has been plagued by an inflamed right elbow and was pitching for the first time in 10 days, limited the Dodgers to seven hits and three runs, two earned, in 5 1-3 innings. He walked three and struck out three.

Five relievers came on for the Rockies, and 11 of the last 12 Dodgers hitters were retired.

Saberhagen, who threw 84 pitches, is 2-1 with five no-decisions since the Rockies acquired him from the New York Mets on July 31. The first win was a 9-4 decision over the Dodgers on Aug. 3 in his Colorado debut.

The Dodgers left 10 runners on base in the first six innings, 11 overall.

Los Angeles got an unearned run in the last of the sixth to make it 4-3, but blew a big chance to tie or go ahead. Raul Mondesi reached on an error by third baseman Vinny Castilla and took second on pinch-hitter Dave Hansen's one-out single. Mike Munoz relieved and gave up an RBI single to Brett Butler before walking Chad Fonville on four pitches to load the bases. Darren Holmes then replaced Munoz and retired Mike Piazza on a pop-up and struck out Eric Karros to end the inning.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the second on an RBI single by Raul Mondesi. The Rockies tied it in the fourth when Walker hit his first homer.

Top ten reasons the Cubs will fall short of the '95 Series

With the baseball regular season winding down, I stay true to my prediction that the Chicago Cubs will win the World Series — within my lifetime.

OK, so maybe the Cubs aren't going to the World Series this year, or next year, and maybe they missed the last couple of years, but I think I speak for all Cub fans when I say, "So what?"

Going to the World Series would ruin everything that the Chicago Cubs stand for.

There is too much pressure to win in sports. The Cubs remind me of my first little league team when I was seven. We didn't win a single game, but we always had our shirts tucked in and didn't get too dirty.

It's nice to know that there are still teams that don't put too much emphasis on winning, and just try to have fun and look good.

I've been a Cub fan for most of my natural born life and not once have I considered committing suicide because the Cubs didn't make it to the World Series. Okay, so I cried when womanizer Steve Garvey went to the series in '84, but I was eight years old and I got over it.

What I'm saying is, in the whole scheme of things, it doesn't really matter who goes to the World Series. Nobody remembers who won the series in 1937, at least none of the people I asked.

So you get a ring for winning the World Series. Big deal. I don't know many guys that wear rings (except married guys) and the ones I do, I kind of wonder about.

It's been close to 90 years since the Cubs went to the World Series, but at least they've been there. I don't think Seattle has ever been there. Of course they have some pretty good bands in Seattle, so it doesn't really matter.

But just in case you can't understand why the Cubs aren't going to the World Series, I offer you their top ten excuses.

10. Have you ever had one of those days? Well, we're having one of those centuries.

9. We're saving up wins to go undefeated in the year 2000.

8. Mark Grace and Sammy Sosa have already been to Disneyland. I think Shawon Dunston has been there about ten times.

7. Those darn Chinese Taipei kids always win it anyway.

6. World Series games coincide with FOX's new fall season and we already missed two weeks of 90210.

5. National audience will intimidate Harry Caray, causing him to speak in terms nobody understands and pronounce players' names backwards.

4. Day games at Wrigley and hangers-on don't mix.

3. Last place team gets all-important first choice in college draft.

2. Nobody watches the World Series anyway. The Super Bowl, now there's a sporting event.

1. We're still celebrating that big 1908 win.

nation of the line of scrimmage on the ground, the Hawkeye offense will look to fine-tune their passing game against the Aggies.

Sherman has thrown for 379 yards in two games this season, compared to 569 yards in his final two games last season.

"When we get into the Big Ten season, the defenses are tougher and the personnel we play against is better," Sherman said. "So we're going to have to fine-tune some things and be more fundamentally sound."

The game will start at 1:05 in

NL ROUNDP

Cubs pull past the .500 mark

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Steve Trachsel overcame his Wrigley Field jinx and Mark Grace set a career high with his 15th homer to lead the Chicago Cubs to a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Trachsel (7-13) won for just the second time in 14 starts this season at Wrigley.

He worked 7½ innings and gave up two runs and five hits with one walk and five strikeouts to snap a personal three-game losing streak.

Randy Myers, the third Cubs' pitcher, struck out three of the four batters he faced to get his league-leading 37th save.

Astros 2, Pirates 0

HOUSTON — The Astros scored two runs on infield grounders in the fifth inning and Greg Swindell combined with three relievers on a shutout as Houston gave itself a chance to tie for the wild card spot Tuesday night with a 2-0 victory over Pittsburgh.

The Astros awaited the outcome of the Rockies-Dodgers game later Tuesday. If Los Angeles won, Houston would be tied with Colorado for the wild card spot. If Colorado won, the Astros would trail the Dodgers by a half-game.

Brian Hunter went 3-for-4 and Craig Biggio was 2-for-3 for the Astros, who have won four in a row. Pittsburgh lost its fifth straight.

Expos 5, Marlins 4

MIAMI — Wil Cordero doubled home the tying run with two outs in the ninth and scored on Tim Laker's single as Montreal beat Florida, preventing the Marlins from setting a club record for wins.

Robb Nen (0-7) was one strike from victory when rookie Yamil Benitez reached on a single to third. Cordero then doubled into the left-field corner, scoring Benitez from first.

Braves 5, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA — Ryan Klesko had a three-run homer and four RBI and five Atlanta pitchers held Philadelphia to three hits as the Braves defeated the Phillies.

Klesko's 22nd home run came off Paul Quantrill (11-11) and capped a four-run first inning for Atlanta. In his last 21 games, Klesko has eight home runs and 21 RBI.

Padres 6, Giants 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Andy Ashby won his third straight start and Melvin Nieves homered for the second straight day, leading the San Diego Padres over San Francisco.

AL ROUNDP

Yankees get a little insurance

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Paul O'Neill hit a two-run homer and drove in three runs as the New York Yankees tightened their grasp on the AL wild-card berth with a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Yankees, who began the game without center fielder Bernie Williams, increased their lead for the fourth playoff spot to 1½ games over the Angels.

California lost 10-2 at Seattle on Tuesday.

Sterling Hitchcock (10-10) scattered five hits over seven innings and left with a 5-2 lead before the Yankees' shaky bullpen made it interesting by allowing two runs on four hits and a walk in the eighth.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 1

BOSTON — Zane Smith, trying to win a spot on Boston's playoff roster, went eight solid innings and John Valentin was 3-for-4 with a three-run homer, leading the Red Sox to a victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Smith (8-8) struck out four, didn't walk a batter and allowed six hits to earn his first win since Sept. 2.

Dwayne Hoesy homered and scored three times as the AL East champion Red Sox ended a three-game losing streak.

Detroit starter C.J. Nitkowski (1-4) allowed five runs on six hits in 4½ innings.

Smith, who didn't have a complete game this season, was on the disabled list until May 14 with a strained rib muscle.

He didn't start pitching well until July, when he won three consecutive starts.

Orioles 5, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Mike Mussina threw a five-hitter for his league-leading 18th victory as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Toronto Blue Jays.

Mussina (18-9) is tied with Greg Maddux of the Atlanta Braves for the major league lead in wins and has one more than David Cone of the New York Yankees, who pitches Wednesday against Milwaukee.

He struck out six and walked one in his third shutout and sixth complete game of the season. He retired 17 of the last 19 batters.

Mussina, who threw a three-hitter in his last start, a 13-1 win over Detroit on Sept. 21, needs one more win to set a career high.

Twins 13, Indians 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Trombly gave Minnesota its third consecutive strong start and Marty Cordova homered, doubled and drove in three runs to lead the Twins to a victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Sandy Alomar homered twice and Albert Belle hit his 47th for the AL Central champion Indians, who need to win their five remaining games to reach 100 victories. The 13 runs were the most allowed by Cleveland this season.

White Sox 7, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Alex Fernandez, staked to a 6-0 lead after one inning, pitched a six-hitter and notched his career-best seventh straight victory as the Chicago White Sox beat Kansas City.

Fernandez (12-8), 7-0 in his last 10 outings, struck out six and walked two.

The Royals have allowed 55 runs

Associated Press

New York's Paul O'Neill, left, is congratulated by teammate Rubin Sierra after hitting a 2-run home run in the third inning Tuesday in Milwaukee.

and 98 hits while losing seven of the first nine games of an 11-game homestand they had hoped would carry them to the wild-card spot.

Rangers 7, Athletics 6

ARLINGTON, Texas — Mark McLemore's two-out RBI single in the eighth inning broke the final tie and the Texas Rangers remained alive in the AL West and wild-card races with a victory over the Oakland Athletics.

Rusty Greer led off the eighth with a single off Carlos Reyes (4-6). He moved to third on pinch-hitter Jeff Frye's sacrifice bunt and a throwing error by shortstop Mike Bordick on Otis Nixon's grounder.

Warning tickets to be issued for UI bike parking violations through Sept. 30, 1995

The University of Iowa began issuing warning tickets for violations of the new 1995 bicycle parking regulations on Sept. 11. The warning tickets carry no fine. There will be no bill nor will any record of the violation go on a person's record until the warning period ends. The warning period will continue through Sept. 30, 1995. Beginning Oct. 1, 1995, bicycle parking violations will be subject to the fees and fines outlined in the new parking regulations. Copies of the regulations may be obtained from UI Parking and Transportation Offices in the IMU Parking Ramp and Hospital Ramp 3.

Reminders for Bicycle Parking and Operation:

- * Whenever possible, park your bicycle in a rack.
- * Don't lock you bike to trees, shrubs or handrails.
- * Don't park bikes inside UI buildings that are not designated for bike parking.
- * Don't park bikes in a manner that limits access to facilities.

THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA

- * Slow down when riding near pedestrians.
- * When passing pedestrians, always alert them as to which side you intend to pass.
- * Pedestrians always have the right of way.

Musicians champion pot fight

David Bauder
Associated Press

Blues Traveler and The Black Crowes are the stars of a new rock 'n' roll benefit album for marijuana, infuriating some experts who think the drug is already too hip among teen-agers.

"Hempilation," a 17-song compact disc on the wonders of weed, was released late last month and is designed to raise money for the National Organization to Reform Marijuana Laws.

Already, the organizers' claims that they are not looking to promote marijuana use among youngsters are being called a smoke-screen.

"Why anyone would want to take something that's dangerous and damaging and encourage children to use it is beyond me," said Joseph Califano, former Cabinet member in the Carter administration and head of the Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University.

Dennis Keeley

Blues Traveler was included in the recently-released "Hempilation" album dedicated to marijuana.

Drug references are nothing new in rock 'n' roll: The Black Crowes go back three decades to cover a Bob Dylan song with the refrain "everybody must get stoned" on "Hempilation."

Yet rocker Tom Petty recently learned that such references still make people nervous. MTV and radio stations recently forced Petty to alter a lyric that said "let's roll another joint." Radio stations preferred "let's hit another joint."

Even with rap groups like Cypress Hill creating their own genre in recent years with marijuana songs, there's been nothing quite like the unabashed celebration of the drug on "Hempilation."

The musicians incorporate almost as many styles of rock, rap and reggae as they do pet names for pot, all united by their love for the intoxicating high.

Marsalis jazzes up Hancher

Joshua Ferris
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City will swing open the doors and break out the brass today when it welcomes Wynton Marsalis and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra back to Hancher Auditorium.

The 8 p.m. show is part of a continuing exploration of historic jazz, which Hancher started several seasons ago, and promises to be a delightful explosion into the fusion of jazz old and new.

From Louis Armstrong to Charles Mingus, Jelly Roll to Thelonius, the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra resounds with the changing motions of jazz — from big band to bebop.

And yet the show guarantees to be more than a mere exercise in repetition. Wynton Marsalis, the 33-year-old artistic director, composer and head trumpeter for the orchestra, plays anything but stale music.

After all, jazz is about improvisation, variation and change. As Marsalis himself has put it, "This is a living, breathing orchestra that plays every single night with the same objective: to swing as hard as possible at all times."

In addition to the elegance and expertise of some of today's most cosmopolitan and cutting players,

Jack Vartoogian

The fresh Lincoln City Jazz Orchestra, led by Wynton Marsalis, above, will treat local residents to a performance at Hancher Auditorium at 8 p.m.

there is something of a hometown delight expected in tonight's performance. Playing alongside Wynton's brass will be one of Iowa's musical triumphs, the young Ryan Kisor. Kisor, who won the Louis Armstrong trumpet competition as a teen-ager, hails from Sioux City and has already embarked on a strong solo performing and recording career. Marsalis is part of a new generation of jazz musicians that, many critics claim, has been reinvigorating jazz with fresh, irrevocable insights. It is in Marsalis' attempts to fuse classic and modern jazz that critics find an undeniable step in the evolution of this ever-changing genre.

NBC Thursdays tune out bad television

Sam Paxton
Daily Iowan TV Columnist

There is a fine line between quality TV and bottom-of-the-trash-can TV. Only the true TV connoisseur can tell the difference.

I have always watched too much television. Many of my earliest memories consist of TV. Oh yeah, I loved "Three's Company," "Moonlighting" and "Sledge Hammer" ... all the classic shows.

But unfortunately, I have been a fan of bad television. It is embarrassing. I used to watch "Melrose Place," "90210" and "Days of Our Lives" ... hey, I'm sorry, "Days" fans, but I know you all feel the same way I felt. It sucks, but you can't stop watching, right? Case in point: the Possession of Marlena plot this spring and summer. I mean, c'mon!

Notice I said I used to watch those shows — shows that are bad, but still get watched for entertainment value. Only until I realized the difference between TV and Quality TV did I see one can watch good shows and be entertained at the same time.

What is that difference? NBC shows.

Yes, NBC. There have been more quality NBC shows on Thursdays than on the entire CBS network. Why are these shows better? Clever writing, casts that click together and a knack for setting trends.

Let's take a quick glance at a few of these shows, shall we?

"Seinfeld" started the recent NBC resurgence. Its cast of four do-nothing New Yorkers was the most innovative show on television. They talked ... and that was about it. They argued about things ordinary people argue about. It wasn't about some lady who — get this — solves a murder every week for 12 weeks. Please. If someone can realistically do that every week, call Lance Ito. That is unrealistic, but Seinfeld isn't.

"Frasier" is perhaps the most underrated show on the tube ... even with an Emmy. The humor is incredibly witty, especially for those who thought Frasier was the funniest character on "Cheers." And with Frasier, you get Niles, probably the funniest character on television today.

The point is clear. Only morons don't think "Frasier" is funny. Sometimes you have to think ... and thinking is good.

"Friends" is probably the best show on television. I know, I know ... "Friends" is now the bandwagon show, but I don't care. Who couldn't love the cast: the sensitive guy, the dim guy, the smart-ass guy (all hot, I'm told). And the three gorgeous women with feelings and quirks seem to jump from bed to bed with the frequency of a cheap ham radio. It may sound sexist, but makes for good comedy. I mean, how many guys did Rachel and Monica sleep with last year?

"ER" is the most entertaining when watched with a doctor in the vicinity. The show is relentless, fast-paced and bloody. But I'm telling you, if possible, watch it with a doctor. As Dr. Benton worked on a bloody patient on one episode, my friend's dad — a doctor — could be heard screaming at the TV, "Oh man, Benton, you just killed him for the fourth time. If this was real, he'd been dead 10 minutes ago."

Now, by eliminating bad TV and watching only the great NBC shows, my life has meaning and clarity ... man, I need to get out more often.

Philadelphia's The Winebottles are nothing if not flexible. In lead singer Doug Murray's words, "I think if we get some balls, more time and more money, I think we can go in every direction that slaps us in the face." Their recent CD, Ride My Pony, contains the prevailing musical influences of U2, R.E.M. and the Gin Blossoms. See them tonight at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., at 10.
