Plane crashes, nearly missing house

Photos by Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

A small plane crashed into a tree between 402 Myrtle Ave. and 316 Myrtle Ave. about 9:40 Wednesday night. The plane was heard sputtering over Boyd Law Building and seen flying low over the houses in the area. After the crash the pilot told witnesses his plane had died twice in the air. Two men, passengers in the plane, were pulled from the wreckage by Iowa City resident Greg Gerdes and UI American history Professor Shel Stromquist. Local paramedics used the Jaws of Life to pull the third man, the pilot, from the mangled plane. All three were taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics. Stromquist said when he arrived at the wreckage, the three men inside were all conscious but unable to walk away unassisted. "They were obviously hurt because there was blood around," he said. "The pilot had his legs twisted around and pinned under the control panel. I think he had a broken leg."

An Iowa City man and his family were jolted from sleep Wednesday when a small plane crashed into a tree in his lawn around 9:40 p.m.

Virend Somers, 402 Myrtle Ave., said he was glad the plane didn't hit his house and harm his two children.

"We were in bed and we heard a loud bang. Then the lights went out," he said.

The plane was heard sputtering over Boyd Law Building and seen flying low over the houses in the area, eyewitness and UI sophomore Tricia Scarano said.

She said a loud bang followed the impact of the plane, which split apart, leaving pieces of the wing and tail suspended in power lines above the lawn.

'DREAM TEAM' DISPLAYS FLAIR FOR COURTROOM THEATRICS

Defense takes its turn

Cochran's mantra: 'If it doesn't fit, you must acquit'

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Pounding away at the theme, "If it doesn't fit, you must acquit," O.J. Simpson's lawyer launched an all-out attack Wednesday on Mark Fuhrman, depicting the detective who found the too-tight bloody glove as a "perjuring, genocidal racist."

"This man is an unspeakable disgrace," Johnnie Cochran Jr. declared, saying Fuhrman set out to "get" Simpson by planting the glove behind Simpson's house. "He's been unmasked to the whole world for what he is."

Jurors sat rapt as Cochran's voice rose to a shout in a packed courtroom during a late-evening session. He drew a scenario of corruption among officers propelled by vanity and the desire for fame, casting Simpson as their innocent victim.

BREAKDOWN OF APPLICANTS REVEALED

Search process: a long hard road

Ann McGlynn
The Daily Iowan

Only five of 325 have survived. The five UI presidential candidates announced thus far have endured background checks, scrutinizing interviews and fierce competition for the coveted position given up by Hunter Rawlings III in July.

A categorical breakdown of the 325 individuals nominated for the position by the UI Presidential Search and Screen Advisory Committee shows just how tough the competition has been.

Of the 18 nominees selected for off-campus interviews, all have held positions at Carnegie Research I Universities — the top research centers in the nation. Six of those 18 were women; one was a minority.

"The numbers suggest the pool has been pretty outstanding," Alan Goodridge, search committee member and head of the UI biochemistry department, said.

NEW FRATERNITY ALCOHOL POLICY IN PLACE

Greeks split on impact of ban

'I think the Greek system will completely evaporate on this campus now'

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily Iowan

Two fraternity brothers who live in the same house, eat together and even drink together may agree on many things, but the recent ban on alcohol at fraternity parties has placed them at odds.

UI junior Chris Ormsby, a Delta Tau Delta fraternity member, said Wednesday's ban on alcohol will drive the UI Greek system straight into the ground. "The ban is a bad thing," he said. "I think the Greek system

Not only does he think the ban is going to be detrimental to the UI Greek system, Ormsby said it will not be effective.

"No matter what you do, college students are going to drink," he said. "Now, without our parties, students are going to be forced to go to the bars or house parties. At frat parties, it's easier to control underage drinking compared to house parties where

GAROFALO REMEMBERED

Memorial invokes grief, solace

Sara Gadola

The day after alcoholic parties were banned from all UI fraternity houses, about 150 people attended a memorial service for UI Lambda Chi Alpha associate member Matthew Garofalo, who died nearly three weeks ago from excessive alcohol consumption.

Friends of Garofalo, 19, gathered around an altar covered with flowers in the Newman Catholic Student Center, 104 E. Jefferson St., and shared their feelings and memories about him.

UI sophomore Ann Burke, who had known Garofalo since junior high school, said she last spoke with him the day before he died in a class they had together.

Steinem words of wisdom fall on diverse full house

Kathryn Phillips
The Daily Iowan

Ann Qual brought her 9-year-old daughter, Emily Ann, to the Gloria Steinem lecture Wednesday night at Macbride Auditorium so she could learn what it meant to be a feminist in the '70s and what it means now in a changing society.

Emily Ann, a fourth-grader, said she already understood feminism meant overcoming the barrier of beauty standards and confined career options.

"It's men who are the ones who need to change," she said.

Steinem, self-proclaimed agitator of the feminist movement, elaborated on Emily's definition, stating men as well as women in all racial and social classes need to unite in order to change the sexism ingrained in our society.

"We've convinced ourselves women can do what men can do, but we haven't convinced ourselves men can do what women can do," Steinem said.

And she was greeted with a standing ovation for her words from the standing-room-only crowd decorated with diversity.

Steinem emphasized the crossover between the feminist fight for rights and the battles being fought by racial minorities and the queer community in her lecture sponsored by Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

The major goal of feminism is to overcome the separateness of the revolutions and embrace the crossover, she said.

"We have to stop laundry listing issues and see how much the issues are interconnected," Steinem said. "Women's issues are everybody's issues. Women's rights are human rights."

Tricia Zebrowski, UI assistant professor of speech pathology, said Steinem has been calling for this unification since '69 when she remembers thinking Steinem was radical.

"She only seemed radical then because she was misunderstood," Zebrowski said. "What's changed is people are more open to the feminist movement now and are starting to believe all people are equal and deserve a choice, not just women."

But the right wing insists on sidelining feminism from other movements because of the connection between power and reproductive rights, Steinem said.

"To preserve a race you must preserve racial separation," Steinem said. "You must restrict the reproductive freedom of women in the 'superior class' in order to maintain racial purity."

Understanding the way conservatives piece together the puzzle of discrimination gives clues to the immense power the masses really have, she said.

"The reason the gay and lesbian movement and the general movement for women's rights are connected is because both celebrate the fact of being in relationships that do not end in a conception within a patriarchal marriage,"

Monica Tripiciano/The Daily Iowan

Gloria Steinem was greeted with a standing ovation from the standing-room-only crowd at Macbride Auditorium Wednesday night.

Steinem said.

Within the feminist movement, however, work still needs to be done. The glass-ceiling and sticky-floor syndromes keep women from being promoted or earning the same wages as men. Women also attend to child rearing and house work three times more than men, she said.

"We can only understand the enormity of our task when we look backward and see how far we've come," Steinem said. "Today, even the most hard-nosed physicist will say the flaps of a butterfly's wings will change the weather hundreds of miles away. ... Each of us as an individual is strong, but together in this room, we make one hell of a butterfly."

CELEBRATING IOWA'S 150 YEARS

I.C. bicyclists share cross-country tales

Christie Midthun
The Daily Iowan

In a cross-country bicycling trek promoting Iowa's Sesquicentennial Celebration, six members of Bicyclists of Iowa City endured four months of snow, grizzly bears and flat tires — and said they still look forward to hopping on their bikes.

BIC sponsored a presentation of the trip Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. The trip, led by RAGBRAI coordinator Chuck Offenburg, began in May in Long Beach, Calif., and ended on Sept. 4 in Washington D.C.

Having a safe trip was one the group's major goal's when they started out.

"The first rule was that we had to check in at night, the second rule was that we had to wear helmets and the third rule was that no one dies," participant Sally Robinson said.

Other cyclists from around the United States and one from Germany joined the Iowa City cyclists. The group broke up into smaller riding groups with at least 265 cyclists on the road each day, Robinson said.

Each cyclist rode about 80 miles per day, most of which seemed uphill, the group said. Even through a few flat tires and a mishap with a motor home, the cyclists said they had a good trip.

"I got hit in the back by an RV mirror and flew into the ditch," Ted Halm said. "I just got back on and started riding."

Because of detours, the group also feared getting lost while they were riding through California.

"We were worried about getting lost," Ken Klein said. "The dreaded statement was 'we're not going to get there by dark.'"

Most cyclists camped or stayed in churches and schools when they finally did reach their nightly destinations.

Monica Tripiciano/The Daily Iowan

Sally Robinson tells her adventures of cycling across the United States to promote Iowa's Sesquicentennial Celebration. Bicyclists shared their travels with audience members at the Iowa City Public Library Wednesday night.

The group of cyclists was followed by an entourage of two Ryder trucks carrying luggage and supplies, and approximately 10 motor homes," Robinson said.

A truck promoting the Sesquicentennial Celebration also traveled across the country. Robinson said the members passed out pamphlets about Iowa every day.

At the meeting, BIC members Joanne Higgins and Greg Kovachy were awarded with the RAGBRAI Rider's Cup. Jim Green of The Des Moines Register awarded the two for their work on the committee that organized the overnight stay in Coralville during RAGBRAI, and for their on-going efforts in promoting cycling safety.

The electric bus provides Cedar Rapids with a cleaner, more ecologically sound alternative to the diesel buses of the past. The new electric buses are much quieter and do not emit any fumes contributing to air pollution. Also, the buses do not require brakes to stop; the electronic motor reverses its direction, which goes against the forward motion of the bus in order to bring it to a stop.

Electric bus makes spark in C.R.

Mark Panagakos
The Daily Iowan

A new bus has hit the streets of Cedar Rapids, but you wouldn't notice the differences unless you looked under the hood — to check its battery. In operation since Monday, an electrically run bus has given customers and managers quite a charge.

"They love it," Tom Petersen, IES Utilities senior communications coordinator, said. "We see a bright future in electric buses, pun intended."

Other than the decals on the front fenders proclaiming "Electric Powered," the blue and white bus looks just like the others in the Cedar Rapids fleet. A test ride proved the bus to be quieter than ordinary buses, with little engine noise and no diesel smell.

"I was impressed with how smooth the bus was," said electric bus driver Bob Wernimont. "It took about 20 minutes to get used to it. And I was thinking, 'My God, how good this must be for the Earth.'"

The 10-plus ton bus is also easier to handle than conventional buses, Wernimont said. There is no transmission, which contributes to a smoother ride.

"The only real complaint I've had so far was from some little old ladies," Wernimont said. "They told me that because of the side-ways-facing seats, they couldn't look out the front window."

"I was impressed with how smooth the bus was. It took about 20 minutes to get used to it. And I was thinking, 'My God, how good this must be for the Earth.'"

Bob Wernimont, electric bus driver

One of only two buses in the United States to run on pure electricity, the bus is a result of a $3 million grant from the Federal Transit Administration, which studies the feasibility of alternately powered mass transit vehicles.

The grant was enough to purchase five buses; the other four are expected by the end of the year.

The four electric buses and one diesel-fueled electric hybrid bus are similar in features to existing transit buses and include capacity for 36 passengers, air conditioning and space for four wheelchairs.

The electric engine weighs 40 pounds and delivers 235 horsepower. Power is stored in 112 lead-acid batteries, which store an average charge of four hours. Hoekstra projected the operating cost of an electric bus to be 50 percent lower than a conventional bus, owing to the lack of such things as exhaust parts or spark ignition.

The bus uses unusual electric brakes, which recharge the batteries as the bus slows. Not only can they be driven longer, they are also smoother and quieter, Wernimont said. Because the brakes only slow the rear wheels, front disc brakes are switched on during foul weather. An on-board computer records engine performance and transmits the information to Westinghouse.

Cedar Rapids Transportation and Parking Director Bill Hoekstra said he's seen a positive reaction toward the bus.

"We've had the bus on four different routes, and everybody seems to love it," he said.

Construction forces drivers, pedestrians to change paths

Seven UI construction projects, scheduled to begin in the next few weeks, will reroute pedestrians and motorists for up to 2½ months.

Construction of a fiber-optic ductbank, part of the UI telecommunications network, will close the sidewalk running from the east side of the Old Capitol to Clinton Street.

Trenching for the extension of chilled water lines to Schaeffer Hall will close the north-south walkway on the east side of the Old Capitol and the west side of Macbride Hall.

New landscaping will change the sidewalk at the east entrance to the Old Capitol and will replace other Pentacrest walkways.

Also, two sidewalk replacement and landscape projects will redirect pedestrians at the south entrance of Van Allen Hall and on the west and south sides of Phillips Hall.

Ten reasons for purchasing an Iowa City Transit monthly bus pass:

1. Save money - only $18 per month!
2. Convenient - no need to always have exact change.
3. Good for an unlimited number of trips.
4. Can be used on the Coralville Transit and CAMBUS systems.
5. Transferable - can be used by spouse, friend, or child.
6. Good way to meet people.
7. Allows you to be chauffeur-driven.
8. Good way to stay cool and dry on your way to work or class.
9. You can read The Daily Iowan during your ride.
10. You can just relax!

A Bosnian Serb refugee gathers her belongings at a makeshift refugee camp on the outskirts of the Serb stronghold of Banja Luka Wednesday. More than 100,000 Bosnian Serb refugees fled their homes during the combined Bosnian government and Croatian offensive against the Serbs in the last two months. Bosnia's factions have agreed on a complex formula for sharing power once the war ends, but major hurdles remain as there is still no cease-fire.

Balkan agreement would give Serbs legislative rights

Maud Beelman
Associated Press

SARAJEVO — The U.S.-backed proposal for power-sharing in post-war Bosnia may bring the suffering republic closer to peace, but it also risks a return to the ethnic gridlock which helped ignite war 3 1/2 years ago.

The complex formula settled on Tuesday in New York by the foreign ministers of Bosnia, Croatia and Serb-led Yugoslavia gives Serbs the right to veto any nationwide proposal, while creating the semblance of a strong national government.

Language drawn up with the help of Roberts B. Owen, an international law expert on the U.S. negotiating team, allows both sides to claim a measure of victory. That may be enough to keep the momentum for peace, despite the uncertainty whether the plan actually could work.

Michael Williams, once the chief U.N. spokesman in former Yugoslavia and now a Balkans scholar at the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London, said the power-sharing arrangement could lead to a paralysis. He noted that a similar balance of power was in place when Serbs rejected a majority Croat-Muslim vote to secede from Serb-led Yugoslavia, sparking the war.

"If it didn't work in 1991, how on earth is it going to work now given what's happened in the intervening three or four years, and isn't this a recipe for paralysis?" Williams said in a telephone interview.

Under objections from the Serbs and pressure from the Clinton administration, which is keen to keep peace talks on track as a presidential campaign approaches, the Bosnian government agreed to remove wording requiring election of a nationwide parliament and collective presidency by "popular vote."

The documents now say only two-thirds of the parliamentary assembly and collective presidency will be elected from territory of the Muslim-Croat federation and one-third from the Serb Republic, recognized as a distinct entity for the first time in a preliminary agreement in Geneva Sept. 8. How they are chosen is not specified.

That means the Serbs could stock those key institutions with the same kind of nationalist hardliners who broke away from Bosnia after Muslims and Croats voted to secede in 1992.

Serbs boycotted the vote, and claimed that under Bosnia's old legal arrangements balancing ethnic rights, Croats and Muslims had no right to leave the federation without Serb consent. With Serb participation, any move to leave Yugoslavia was effectively blocked.

The Sarajevo government has said the new principles ensure Bosnia has been preserved as a sovereign state within its international borders, and that Serb secession is no longer possible. That is nowhere explicitly stated, however.

In an interview Wednesday, Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said dropping the "popular vote" language was one of the government's biggest concessions, but necessary to keep peace talks alive.

He said the government was counting on U.S. pledges that wording promising "free democratic elections" mentioned along with the agreement would translate to direct, popular vote.

Once government institutions actually are formed, more intricate balancing of ethnic rights would be required.

Parliamentary majorities that approve legislation must also be balanced to include at least one-third of the deputies from both the Serb side and the Croat-Muslim federation.

Presidency decisions also will be by majority vote, but if a third of the members dissent, they may refer the matter to regional assemblies of the Serbs and of the federation. If either side rejects the measure by a two-thirds vote, it is dead.

Diplomats and international scholars said that kind of arrangement opens the door to Serb veto of any nationwide proposal. It also creates the possibility that each entity will adopt separate functions of a state, such as issuing currency, that are not explicitly prohibited.

Milan Milutinovic, the foreign minister of Yugoslavia, which has negotiating power for the Bosnian Serb rebels, said a Serb in the Bosnian government "can always, if he finds it necessary, stop any decision and ask for support from the parliament of Republika Srpska."

"Maybe that's the reason the Serbs have gone along with it," Williams said. "They know that realities are it will be difficult for a federal government to work, and in reality, political power will lie with the two entities recognized in the previous meeting in Geneva."

But he noted it was only constitutional principles agreed upon in New York, and not the details. "And as always in Bosnia, the devil lies in the details."

One diplomat from the former Yugoslavia, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said what the document laid out was less important than the time it might buy for negotiations.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke can use the time to attack issues like a division of territory and a general cease-fire, he said.

The Bosnian government, having seen many agreements collapse, does not want to sign a cease-fire until it has a signed peace deal.

An Israeli soldier checks the hands of a Palestinian patrol following rock-throwing clashes in the occupied West Bank town of Hebron Wednesday.

Israel treaty awaits final details

Nicolas Tatro

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres called it "a present to a world tired of wars" — the Israeli Cabinet's approval Wednesday of a plan to bring self-rule to most of the 1 million Palestinians in the West Bank.

The PLO's executive committee gave the accord approval the day before, and the Middle East peace-makers will gather at the White House today for a formal signing ceremony.

But there are still loose ends which could unravel the deal.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin will meet with PLO chairman Yasser Arafat prior to the signing, and President Clinton may have to do some arm-twisting to get the last details in place.

Three issues — a timetable for Israeli troop withdrawal, the size of an autonomous enclave around the West Bank city of Jericho, and the scope of Palestinian prisoner releases — must be resolved before today's signing.

The accord must also be approved by Israel's 120-member parliament on Oct. 5, and Nissim Zivili, secretary-general of Rabin's Labor Party, predicts a one-vote victory.

"Nobody knows what will happen if the final agreement is not approved," Zivili said Wednesday. "There is a danger that it could paralyze the process with the Palestinians."

A more immediate issue is the Palestinian demand for the release of prisoners from Israeli jails.

Israel has agreed to free 2,000 of the 5,500 now held — one group shortly after the signing of the West Bank accord, a second on the eve of Palestinian elections and the rest later. But Israel has refused to grant early release to about 350 Palestinians convicted of killing or wounding Israelis.

Arafat also wants Rabin and Peres to free Sheik Ahmed Yassin, spiritual leader of the Islamic fundamentalist group Hamas, which has carried out a campaign of suicide attacks in an effort to foil the agreement.

Israel has no plans to release any of the 1,700 Islamic activists rounded up since the Israel-PLO agreement was signed Sept. 13, 1993.

An Israeli official said Rabin would not budge on Arafat's demands to expand the autonomy zone around Jericho. The PLO wants territory along the shores of the Jordan River and the Dead Sea, border zones Israel does not want to give up for security reasons.

An Israeli official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the disagreements might lead to a last-minute crisis before the Washington signing. He said Clinton might have to do some arm-twisting to get the accord signed.

The West Bank plan was finalized last weekend after 14 months of negotiations.

It calls for a troop withdrawal from seven West Bank towns, followed by general elections in which the Palestinians will choose an 82-member Palestinian Council with executive and legislative powers.

Palestinian elections are expected to be held either in January or April, depending on when Israel completes its troop pullback. Israeli officials said that may depend on mundane details like the building of bypass roads so Israelis don't have to drive through Palestinian towns.

But there is no timetable for troop withdrawals yet. An Israeli official who demanded anonymity said there was an understanding the redeployment would begin soon in villages around the West Bank town of Jenin and would be completed by December.

"According to the agreement I reached with Shimon Peres, the redeployment ought to begin 10 days after the signature of the accord," Arafat said Wednesday. The provision did not appear in the 400-page agreement because of "some typographical errors in the text," he said.

To prevent possible attacks by Palestinian militants, Israel ordered the West Bank sealed off starting at midnight Wednesday and lasting through Sunday. A closure was imposed on the Gaza Strip at the start of the Jewish New Year Sunday evening. Tens of thousands of Palestinians will be unable to reach their jobs in Israel as a result.

The agreement faces stiff opposition from both militant Palestinians and right-wing Israelis.

About 200 Palestinians marched through Hebron's Old City on Wednesday, protesting that the accord will allow Jewish settlers to stay in the city where a settler massacred 29 Palestinians in 1994.

Israeli soldiers barred the marchers from entering the Tomb of the Patriarchs where the massacre took place.

Later, Palestinian youths threw stones at soldiers in what has become a daily ritual in the West Bank town. One teen-ager was arrested.

In Jerusalem, right-wing Jews prayed and protested the West Bank accord.

"Only prayer can help us," said Leah Wolf, who came to Israel from New York 18 years ago. "This is not a peace process, it's a suicide process."

OCT. 23 DATE SET

Clinton, Yeltsin to meet

Tom Raum

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton will meet with Russian President Boris Yeltsin in Hyde Park, N.Y., next month and will visit Moscow in April for an international session on nuclear weapons, the White House said Wednesday.

The Oct. 23 meeting with Yeltsin was timed to coincide with the 50th anniversary of the U.N. General Assembly, which will draw world leaders to New York.

Clinton also expects to meet separately with Chinese President Jiang Zemin, possibly in Washington, said an official who spoke on condition of anonymity. The meeting with the Chinese leader — which would be Clinton's third — comes as U.S.-Chinese relations begin to recover from a series of blows.

According to White House spokesperson Mike McCurry, Clinton talked with Yeltsin by phone for about 20 minutes on Wednesday about the meeting at Hyde Park — President Franklin D. Roosevelt's birthplace, about 90 miles north of Manhattan.

Clinton told Yeltsin he would attend the international session in Moscow to discuss issues of nuclear nonproliferation and the handling of nuclear materials.

Yeltsin announced the meeting last June at an economic summit in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Also invited were leaders of Britain, France, Canada, Japan, Italy and Germany.

In the phone conversation, Clinton and Yeltsin also discussed recent peace developments in Bosnia, McCurry said.

"The president underscored ... the importance the United States attaches to continued close cooperation with Russia" as the peace process moves forward in the former Yugoslavia.

The two presidents discussed Tuesday's agreement in New York by Bosnia's factions on a formula for sharing power once the four-year war ends.

Clinton told Yeltsin "we would welcome a Russian participation in the NATO-led force" that would go into Bosnia after a peace agreement to help enforce it, McCurry said.

Russia, which criticized the policy of NATO air strikes against Bosnian Serb positions, has been noncommittal on whether it would participate in such a force.

McCurry said that Hyde Park was selected as the site for the meeting between Clinton and Yeltsin because "that would evoke the spirit of cooperation between the United States and Russia that existed during World War II."

Observances marking the 50th anniversary of the U.N. General Assembly, which both Yeltsin and Clinton will attend, seemed like "a timely opportunity for both presidents to review the overall status" of U.S.-Russian relations.

In Moscow, Yeltsin's office said that in the presidents' discussions on Bosnia, Yeltsin particularly urged Clinton to try to get U.N. sanctions lifted against Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Yeltsin said that in his upcoming meeting with Clinton, he plans to talk about the question of NATO's expansion, a sensitive issue for Russia.

White House officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said that while Clinton would meet with other heads of state in conjunction with the U.N. session in October, Yeltsin was the only one he would see in Hyde Park.

Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen was meeting in New York with Secretary of State Warren Christopher to discuss arrangements for a Clinton meeting with Jiang.

Jiang and Clinton had previous private sessions in Seattle in 1993 and in Jakarta, Indonesia, in 1994.

Funding cuts approved by Senate

H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Over Democratic objections, the Senate passed a $62 billion spending bill Wednesday which would slash money for environmental protection, housing programs and veterans' benefits.

Democrats, who said in advance they lacked the votes to make substantial changes in the bill, urged President Clinton to veto it. The House previously approved equal or deeper spending cuts, so those differences must still be resolved.

The Senate approved the legislation 55-45 after Republicans rebuffed Democratic attempts to restore funds for environmental cleanup of toxic dumps, help for the homeless, health programs for veterans and a cherished Clinton national service program.

The legislation is the first of three broad domestic spending bills being considered by the Senate this week. Senate Minority Leader Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., called the bills "extremism on parade" and said the only recourse was to urge a presidential veto.

"There's no point in trying to fine-tune this mess," Daschle declared.

The Senate bill would cut the Environmental Protection Agency's budget by one-fourth to $5.6 billion, including a $430 million slash in its Superfund program for toxic waste cleanup. Clinton had sought an increase to $7.3 billion.

It also would cut housing programs by $5 billion, one-fifth of current spending, eliminate Clinton's Americorps national service initiative and reduce veterans' programs by $395 million.

Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska was the lone Democrat to join the Republicans in passing the bill.

The reduction in the EPA budget — though less severe than that approved by the House — still "places the American public at serious risk," said EPA Administrator Carol Browner.

DECLINING MEMBERSHIP A FACTOR

Male Elks organization votes to allow women members

Eric Fidler

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The way Gloria Freshour figured it, she'd worked on every major function the Brookings, Ore., Elks Lodge had put on in 17 years, so she might as well become a member. So she crossed out the word "male" on the application and wrote in "female."

She submitted it on the Fourth of July. "I was being very poetic about it," Freshour said.

But even with her years of volunteer work and the support of her husband, who is a member, the lodge turned her down.

No woman in the 127-year history of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks has ever worn the figurative antlers of an Elk.

That could change very soon.

Beset by declining membership and pressure from women seeking to join, the Elks' national legislative body voted in July to delete the word "male" from the membership requirements. That sent the matter to the 2,230 lodges for a final vote, which should be tallied by the weekend.

The vote on whether to admit women will be weighted according to the size of each lodge.

If a lodge has 500 members, and a majority of those casting ballots vote yes, the outcome is counted as 500 votes in favor.

The move is a recognition that the Elks have evolved away from the kind of organization where "you smoke and you drink and it's a sort of male bonding thing," said Robert Grafton, chairman of the Elks' advisory committee and a past grand exalted ruler, as the nation's top Elk is known.

The Chicago-based organization has spent more than $1 million fighting lawsuits filed by women who want to join the Elks, most prominently Sharon Schellenberg of Rochester, Mich., who first locked horns with her local lodge in 1988.

Her lawyer, Michael Curhan, said the Rochester lodge turned her down on the suspicion she intended to use her membership to help her real estate business.

"It was never her agenda to market the Elks. But I'm sure as a byproduct if she met people there and they wanted to list their house with her she'd say fine," Curhan said, adding that current members do not turn away business either.

Schellenberg won in lower Michigan courts, but the case is on appeal, and the Elks haven't been ordered to accept her in the meantime.

Formed in 1868 by a group of New York actors who wanted to get around the city's blue laws and have a drink together on Sunday — their sole day off — the group once admitted only white men.

Today, if you're a man over 21, believe in God and are of good moral character, you can join the Elks.

The Elks hold various social and charitable functions. Nationwide, the Elks gave out $134 million last year to various causes, including college scholarships and a drug awareness program for youngsters.

Membership, however, has slid to about 1.3 million men from an all-time high of 1.6 million in 1980.

WASHINGTON — Teetotalers in fury against demon rum. Farmers in overalls against Wall Street. Abolitionists in arms over the evils of human bondage.

And now Ross Perot is ready to march into history with the Anti-Masons, Free-Soilers, Know-Nothings, Greenbacks, Populists, Socialists, Communists, States Righters, Libertarians and the rest of the 200 "third parties" which have looked at the Republicans and Democrats and offered a pox on both their houses.

Not since Abraham Lincoln and the GOP replaced a Whig Party disintegrating over the question of slavery has a new party made it to the White House, although some of them have made a difference in trying. Only six have even won more than a million votes, and none has carried a single state since 1968.

What Perot is talking about doing in 1996 is far more ambitious than what he did in 1992, when he won 19 million votes at a cost of about $64 million from his own wallet.

That time he ran as an independent. This time he wants to start a new Independence Party, its candidate still to be determined.

But Perot is foregoing building a party which would run candidates for offices at all levels, at least for now. That dismays political scientists, who for years have drummed into students' heads that there's nothing sacred about the two-party system.

Theodore Lowi of Cornell University, former president of the American Political Science Association and long-time advocate of new parties, said a lone-ranger president would be unable to get much done without his own loyalists in Congress.

"It can't be a single-bullet presidency," Lowi said. "Even if they happen to win, they've got nobody to govern with. Even Ross Perot couldn't handle that. He'd be likely to resign after three months."

But running thousands of candidates would be formidable. It would require the petition signatures of 1.65 million Americans, said Richard Winger of Ballet

"It's a massively complicated machine whose function is to try to keep third-party candidates and parties off the ballot."

Bill Winter of the Libertarian Party

Access News in San Francisco. Walter Dean Burnham of the University of Texas guesses it would cost half a billion dollars or more.

Laws, which vary from state to state and change from year to year, make it tough.

"It's a massively complicated machine whose function is to try to keep third-party candidates and parties off the ballot," said Bill Winter of the Libertarian Party. His party's 291,627 votes in 1992 make it the nation's biggest continuous third party.

Another problem is Perot's constituency. It is middle-American, united chiefly by discontent.

"This is a centrist operation," Burnham said. "When is the last time you saw a really passionate centrist?"

John Anderson, a former Republican congressman from Illinois, tried to organize a new party in 1981, after running futilely as an independent in 1980. He gave up.

He needed the signatures of 800,000 Californians to get on the ballot there and signed up only 1,000.

Now Perot is trying the same trick, with better financing. He has only a month to meet California's extra-early deadline for getting 89,000 people to register for the new party.

After Dixiecrat candidate Strom Thurmond and left-leaning Progressive Henry Wallace ran and lost in 1948, their constituencies dissolved, leaving little residue.

Since Lincoln in 1864, only five third-party candidates have carried even a single state. George Wallace, an anti-desegregationist who complained about "pointy-headed bureaucrats," was the last, in 1968. He carried five.

But parties can lose and still matter. The Prohibitionists had to accept the return of booze, but their other ideas took hold.

They were the first to accept women as convention delegates and to advocate women's suffrage, the direct election of senators, the income tax, the prohibition of child labor and the creation of old-age pensions.

Because they had a party, not just a candidate, their ideas marched on even if they did not.

Cures for Cystic fibrosis, MD stall in gene research

Daniel Haney
Associated Press

BOSTON — In a sobering setback for gene therapy, two promising attempts to fix nature's inborn mistakes have failed to help victims of cystic fibrosis and muscular dystrophy.

Scientists in recent years have found the genetic flaws which cause both conditions. They are among the most common lethal inherited diseases, and the discoveries led to speculation that soon there would be cures: Just replace the bad genes with good ones.

The new reports suggest it won't be as easy as scientists had hoped.

Neither experiment was a complete bust. Some healthy genes actually were transferred. But the gene therapy came nowhere close to doing the patients any good.

Proponents of this approach caution against gloom, however. They say a quick cure is too much to expect in a field only about 5 years old.

Indeed, more than 100 other human experiments are under way in efforts to correct a variety of both inherited and acquired illnesses, including AIDS, cancer and heart trouble.

The disappointing reports were published in Sept. 21 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. In both experiments, researchers attempted to reverse inherited illnesses by giving victims the healthy genes they were born without.

People with cystic fibrosis carry a genetic flaw which results in thick lung secretions. This mucus harbors infections which eventually destroy the lungs.

Associated Press

Defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. points Wednesday to courtroom doors at the Los Angeles Criminal Courts Building that he says double-murder defendant O.J. Simpson will walk out of if found not guilty.

Attorneys rehash points in Simpson trial wrap-up

Associated Press

Key arguments made Wednesday by Prosecutor Christopher Darden and defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. during closing arguments in the O.J. Simpson double-murder trial:

Prosecution Points:

FATEFUL PHONE CALL: A call to Nicole Brown Simpson the day of the murders may have pushed Simpson over the edge, Darden said. Things got even worse when Simpson's girlfriend, Paula Barbieri, took off for Las Vegas without telling Simpson, and when the Brown family didn't invite Simpson to dinner after a dance recital during which Brown Simpson ignored her ex-husband.

DEADLY PLAN: After working himself up into an emotional rage because he was spurned by his ex-wife and his girlfriend, Simpson drafted a plan to solve his problems by killing Brown Simpson: "He always blamed her, and everything was her fault," Darden said.

MURDEROUS RELIEF: With each thrust of the knife into his victims, Simpson felt better, and after the murders, Simpson was so relieved that he walked — didn't run or even jog — away from the crime scene, as evidenced by the "space between the bloody shoe prints," the prosecutor said.

ROCKY RELATIONSHIP: The tensions that led to the murders started building long before June 12, 1994, said Darden, who pointed to the Simpsons' turbulent relationship. He said Brown Simpson had been worn down by Simpson, and she stayed with him because — in the words of a song — "the strong give up and move away and the weak give up and stay."

Defense Points:

NO FIT, MUST ACQUIT: Playing on the prosecution's gloves-didn't-fit fiasco, Cochran said of any evidence: "If it doesn't fit, you must acquit." He insisted that so much of the prosecution's case doesn't make sense that prosecutors couldn't prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

TIMELINE: Placing the time of the murders later than the prosecution did, Cochran said Simpson wouldn't have had time to get back home and crash into a wall air conditioner at 10:40 p.m. or 10:45 p.m., as Brian "Kato" Kaelin testified.

NO DISGUISE: Ridiculing prosecutors' suggestion that Simpson wore a dark knit cap to disguise himself, Cochran put on a similar hat and asked the jury: "Who am I?" He answered his own question, "I'm Johnnie Cochran with a knit cap on. From two blocks away, O.J. Simpson is O.J. Simpson."

DEMEANOR: Showing a videotape and a photograph of Simpson taken just hours before the murders, Cochran said the beaming, laughing Simpson didn't look anything like a killer.

NOT ENOUGH BLOOD: Cochran said that if Simpson had committed the murders, authorities should have found even more blood at his house, including on the doors, light switches and light-colored carpeting. Also, there was not blood around the glove found behind Simpson's house.

NO WOUNDS: Cochran showed pictures of Simpson's nearly unscathed body taken in the days after the slayings, arguing that a person who attacked two people in a short time would have struggled fiercely and sustained multiple wounds, many more than the few marks seen on Simpson's hands.

BIASED WITNESS: One of the prosecution's top witnesses, glove expert Richard Rubin, was "a soldier in the prosecution army," Cochran said, noting that Rubin had mentioned in a letter to prosecutors something about a victory party.

ATONED SINS: Of the evidence of domestic violence, Cochran said the incidents were in the distant past and that Simpson had not struck his ex-wife since a fight in 1989. "O.J. Simpson is not proud of that 1989 incident. You know what? He paid his debt to that," Cochran said, referring to Simpson's no-contest plea and probation sentence.

EXPLICIT LYRICS ARE THE CULPRIT

Warner breaks away from rap label

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Time Warner Inc. said Wednesday it is selling its stake in a company which distributes records for some of rap music's biggest — and most explicit — stars.

The decision to bail out of Interscope Records follows a growing outcry at the leading entertainment company's involvement in gangsta rap, known for violent, sexually explicit lyrics.

"This decision is not about any particular kind of music," Michael Fuchs, chairman and chief executive officer of Warner Music Group, said in a statement.

He said the move comes because the "joint venture no longer made sense for either party."

Last month, Time Warner tried to review lyrics which may prove objectionable, a demand that Los Angeles-based Interscope refused.

"The nature of our agreement with Interscope precluded us from any meaningful involvement or discussion regarding Interscope's music," Fuchs said Wednesday.

Ted Field of Interscope said in the statement, "From our respective vantage points, this was simply the right thing to do."

The 5-year-old Interscope, one of the industry's most successful start-ups, features artists including jailed rapper Tupac Shakur and alternative rockers Nine Inch Nails. Both Shakur and Nails' leader Trent Reznor have come under attack for their explicit lyrics.

Interscope also distributes Death Row Records, which handles the platinum-selling Snoop Doggy Dogg. Snoop's album "Doggystyle," with its violent and misogynist lyrics, became the first debut record ever to enter the charts at No. 1.

Last month, Death Row Records sued Time Warner, two company executives, and anti-rap activist C. Delores Tucker, head of the National Congress of Black Women, for allegedly launching a smear campaign against rap lyrics. Interscope had filed a similar suit two days earlier.

ing real low," Scarano said. "A few seconds later I saw a light in the sky and it sounded like thunder."

Two men, passengers in the plane, were pulled from the wreckage between 402 Myrtle Ave., and 316 Myrtle Ave., by Iowa City resident Greg Gerdes and UI American history Professor Shel Stromquist. Local paramedics used the Jaws of Life to pull the third man, the pilot, from the mangled plane. All three were taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Stromquist, 316 Myrtle Ave., said he was planning his lecture for today when he heard a big crash.

"I thought there had been an explosion," he said.

Stromquist called 911 after discovering a plane had crashed and said he went to the scene to assist the victims.

"I smelled gas but I was surprised there weren't any flames," he said. "Miraculously, it didn't hit the house."

Stromquist said when he arrived at the wreckage the three men inside were all conscious but unable to walk away unassisted.

"They were obviously hurt because there was blood around," he said. "The pilot had his legs twisted around and pinned under the control panel. I think he had a broken leg."

Another of the men suffered from shortness of breath, Stromquist said.

"(Somers) is a physician and he thought (the victim's) ribs were busted up," he said.

While waiting for paramedics to arrive with the Jaws of Life, Stromquist said the pilot talked about the moments before the plane crashed.

"The pilot said the plane had died twice in the air," he said.

Somers said his family and Stromquist's would need to find other accommodations for the night.

"We need to find somewhere else to stay until the FAA comes by and says what happened," he said.

Acting Iowa City Fire Department Chief Andy Rocca said the Federal Aviation Administration would be investigating the crash.

"We don't know anything right now. We will be on the scene through the night until the FAA comes and assists," he said. "The FAA has been contacted and will be on the scene. We are securing the scene and documenting it as it is. The FAA does have jurisdiction on all plane crashes."

Stromquist said the community needs to evaluate the flight pattern going into the Iowa City airport.

"I think this community needs to do something about safer approaches into the airport. Sooner or later, a real tragedy could happen," he said. "Two young kids were sleeping in the attic (at Somers' house), and if it would have hit there, it could have been a real disaster."

Somers doesn't plan to move his family from the neighborhood anytime soon.

"It was just a totally freak incident," he said.

UI graduate student Rob Jarvis, who lives in the area, said he wasn't surprised about the incident.

"Planes fly low around here all the time. It doesn't make me feel too comfortable living right by the airport," he said.

PRESIDENTIAL SEARCH

unranked list of candidates to the Iowa state Board of Regents. The regents will then select a president.

"When we get four people we're excited about, we'll send them on to the Board of Regents," Collins said. "That doesn't mean, however, that they are not excited about the five that have already visited campus."

Those who have visited the campus so far are Karen Hitchcock, interim president at the State University of New York at Albany; David Skorton, UI vice president for research; Mary Sue Coleman, provost and vice president for academic affairs at the University of New Mexico; Mark Yudof, provost and executive vice president at the University of Texas at Austin; and Judith Albino, president of the University of Colorado.

"The competition has been very, very tough," Steve Collins, head of the search committee, said. "I think we've covered most of the states in the country."

At the beginning of the search in January, 325 people were either nominated by others for the position or self-nominated. At least 38 of those were minorities and 79 were women.

An exact number of minorities is not available because not all candidates identified themselves as such, Collins said.

Those 325 were narrowed down to an "A" list of 32 individuals who were perceived to be of "high interest," Collins said. The committee ran extensive background checks on each member of the group, which comprises eight women and four minorities.

Search committee member Lea Haravon said she was concerned that women of color was not a category included in the breakdown, leaving the minority category only male because women are identified separately.

Susan Johnson, a search committee member who also served on the 1987 presidential search committee, said she has been impressed all along by the pool — especially by the women.

"The pool of women is 100 times better (than in 1987)," she said. "The pipeline of women into administration is getting bigger."

No on-campus interviews have been scheduled for this week, the fifth week of the search, Collins said. He would not say how many more candidates, if any, will be visiting the UI for an interview.

He said none of the evidence brought in by Fuhrman could be trusted.

"He's had it in for O.J. since 1985," Cochran said, alleging Simpson became Fuhrman's target after he answered a domestic dispute call at the Simpson estate and found out the black former football star was married to a white woman.

"Mark Fuhrman is a lying, per-juring, genocidal racist and from that point on, any time he could get O.J. Simpson he would," Cochran said as his presentation came to a climactic end.

It was a day of dueling summations as prosecutor Christopher Darden played Simpson's recorded rage and the haunting pleas of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson, while Cochran recalled the evidence gloves and other misplaced evidence.

Cochran's summation gained momentum toward day's end. He argued passionately, citing specific flaws in evidence and offered new theories on how police might have framed Simpson.

He promised to talk more about Fuhrman when his closing argument resumes today.

At times, prosecutor Marcia Clark glared at Cochran or rolled her eyes at his comments. Some jurors took notes. Others just listened.

Known for his rapid-fire oratory, Cochran began slowly and quietly, reminding jurors of their duty under the law, apologizing for the trial's length and telling them, "In the journey toward justice, there is no short cut."

As the evening wore on, he passionately outlined evidence he believes points to a broad frame-up masterminded by lying detectives, including Fuhrman.

GREEK DEBATE

there isn't regulation."

However, Ormsby's fraternity brother, UI sophomore Jeremy Thompson, said he heartily disagrees and believes the ban will effectively make it more difficult for students to drink.

"I think the ban will curb the drinking. Now there will be one less place for underage students to drink," he said. "It's too bad that one isolated incident had to affect everyone else. It's out of our hands and now we have to follow it."

The ban closely follows the recent death of Lambda Chi Alpha associate member Matthew Garofalo.

Under the moratorium officially announced Wednesday morning, fraternities are no longer allowed to serve alcohol at registered social events.

However, individuals who are of legal age are still able to consume alcohol in their rooms and the ban will have no effect on fraternity parties which are not registered with the Interfraternity Council, Bob Kendall, IFC president, said.

Kendall said the IFC will enforce the ban by performing regular checks two to four times a night at each fraternity. If alcohol is found at a regulated party at a fraternity, the chapter will be brought before the standards committee.

Although many Greek community members refused to comment on the ban Wednesday, some said the new policy won't really affect their social events.

Chris Klitgaard, president of the Sigma Nu fraternity, said his fraternity will simply move their parties to new places where alcohol is permitted.

"After the initial shock was over, most people are taking it rather well," he said. "We are still able to have parties off-chapter — at bars and hotels — so the ban won't have too big of an effect on us. It's part of the challenge to find new places to hold our parties."

A committee is currently being formed to re-evaluate policies about allowing alcohol at fraternity parties, said Beth Dinsmore, president of the Panhellenic Council. She said she is unsure how long it will take the committee to decide what changes if any need to be made.

"We're doing this for everyone's benefit," she said. "We have the full support of all the presidents. It's up to them to make sure their individual members support it as well."

Klitgaard said he believes the ban will have a positive effect on the Greek community.

"I think the ban is positive because it gives us the chance to prove to the community that we can have parties without alcohol," he said. "We can break down the stereotype of the Greeks."

GAROFALO MEMORIAL

friend," she said. "We dated for a year, and then when he (transferred) here, we became really close again. He knew me better than I knew myself."

Burke said Garofalo had an influence on everyone he knew.

"He taught everybody something in some way or another," she said. "He taught us how to laugh and be honest, but most of all he taught us how to love."

Garofalo's parents, Monica and Edward, who described their son in a statement read by Lambda Chi Alpha chapter adviser Jeff Emrich, said his passionate character meshed with his selfless spirit.

"He was a son who put a hole in the hall wall out of frustration because he couldn't stop the self-destruction of a friend. ... Matt was no saint — that wasn't his style. He faced any problems he had with a sense of determination.

"(Matt) was not afraid to say, 'I love you, Dad' or 'I love you, Mom.' ... He was a son who had a million things to do the day before he left for school, but who went to a Sox game with his dad because he didn't want to disappoint him."

Garofalo's friends took turns speaking about him; he "was the most trustful person," another junior high friend told the audience.

"He was always there for me. I'm sorry that he's gone," she said before she broke down in tears.

Garofalo, a UI sophomore, was found dead in the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house Sept. 8 due to pulmonary edema, or fluid in the lungs, triggered by excessive consumption of alcohol.

Emrich, who also attended Garofalo's funeral, said the memorial service was a step in the fraternity members' grieving process.

"This was a time for the chapter and the university to come together," he said. "The emotions are varied — we've told the guys to be supportive of each other. Talking is good."

Those dealing with Garofalo's death should depend on people close to them, Emrich said.

"We all need to express feelings to loved ones," Emrich said. "I encourage all of you to do the same. Enjoy life. It's so easy to get bogged down in the routine."

Father George McDaniel, an alumnus of Lambda Chi Alpha, said the Garofalo tragedy brought death closer to home for college students.

"The rest of us are still here — the rest of us have to go on," he said.

Unabomber deserved press

The Unabomber is a terrorist with a few good ideas, as last week's publication of his 35,000-word manifesto showed.

Too bad he doesn't also have a good editor or two.

Sure, he can thank the editors of The New York Times and The Washington Post who decided a little journalistic integrity and a great deal of ink and paper were worth less than the price of human life. But in succumbing to the Unabomber's threat "to send a bomb to an unspecified destination with intent to kill," the two bastions of virtue who jointly published the manifesto raised a lot of unanswered questions.

Should they have given in to the demands of a known terrorist? Will the Unabomber simply be encouraged to kill again? Just what is the nature of the Unabomber's problem with our society?

Yes, the manifesto should have been published, but not for the reasons stated by the editors of the Times and Post.

In a statement accompanying their publications, the newspapers state: "Both the Attorney General and the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have now recommended that we print this document for public safety reasons, and we have agreed to do so."

This reasoning implies that our most respected newspapers have handed

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

The Unabomber's manifesto should have been published for insight, not as a result of governmental pressure.

their editorial decisions over to the Justice Department. This is the wrong precedent to set in the case of terrorists who want their messages widely distributed.

Last week's publication puts the newspapers in a difficult spot for some time to come because the Unabomber also demands "the right to publish in the New York Times, Time or Newsweek, each year for three years after the appearance of an article or book, 3,000 words expanding or clarifying our material or rebutting criticisms of it."

So now what will The Times and Post do? If they intend on truly saving lives, they will have to publish the Unabomber three more times.

A more valid reason for publishing the manifesto would have simply been that the Unabomber makes some interesting and provocative criticisms of industrial society, and like it or not, he has established himself as a public figure, a leader in his field. If a major publisher gave its presses over to O.J. Simpson, an indicted double-murderer, why shouldn't major newspapers print the social criticisms of a terrorist?

The Unabomber begins his muddled treatise: "The Industrial Revolution and its consequences have been a disaster for the human race."

There are plenty of rational men and women who agree with this statement and plenty of rational editors who could justify publishing it.

The Times and Post should have had the integrity to admit they were publishing the manifesto because of what it said and who said it, instead of giving every terrorist in the country the idea that threats like the Unabomber's work. They also should have had the courage to edit out about 33,000 words.

For those unable to purchase the local editions of the Post, which quickly sold out and were not reprinted, the full text of the manifesto is also available on the Internet. This in itself represents an amusing irony, given the nature of the manifesto.

Byrdsong deserves unbiased trial, not a conviction by racist media

Iowa City's local news media should be ashamed of their recent coverage of the DeWayne Byrdsong case.

The Daily Iowan (Sept. 13) sank to a new low in racist journalism when it published this headline: "Coralville man who spray-painted car charged with domestic assault." Yet Byrdsong's trial on charges he made a false report of vandalism to police officers after defacing his own vehicle is not scheduled to begin until Oct. 5.

Why would DI editors convict Byrdsong in print before his trial even started?

The widespread acceptance of the idea of "reverse racism" explains the astonishing speed with which many members of an initially supportive community have turned on DeWayne Byrdsong.

"Reverse racism" is the idea that African-Americans, Latinos/Latinas and other U.S. minorities routinely exploit their minority status in order to steal jobs and college admissions from Anglo-Americans — especially white males.

"Reverse racism" is a big lie. The number of African-Americans and Latinos/Latinas enrolled in colleges and universities fell during the 1980s. And the income gap between whites and African-Americans actually widened throughout the so-called affirmative action years.

GUEST EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Byrdsong will have to prove his innocence because the media has already portrayed him as guilty.

The Byrdsong case is an alleged example of "reverse racism" because the motive attributed to Byrdsong for painting his own car with racial slurs is he sought to exploit his status as an African-American.

Prosecutors have not charged Byrdsong with insurance fraud. Rather, they have charged him with making a false report to police. And police claim Byrdsong wanted to appear as a victim of racism to win personal notoriety.

The police story is far from convincing. Police cite as evidence that Byrdsong visited a number of auto body shops gathering estimates on the cost of repainting his car. A spray can containing paint matching the type used to deface Byrdsong's car was found in his apartment dumpster.

In short, police ask us to believe Byrdsong concocted an elaborate deception aimed at getting the community to hold diversity forums and a fund-raising drive to honor him as an African-American.

But is it plausible that an African-American man resourceful enough to plan such a deception would make himself unforgettable beforehand by driving a Mercedes from auto shop to auto shop using his real name to obtain estimates? And why would this person toss a potentially damaging piece of evidence into a dumpster located a mere several yards from his doorstep?

Many people consider DeWayne Byrdsong's guilt a foregone conclusion because the idea of "reverse racism" seems obvious to them. The cops can identify no other suspects, so Byrdsong must have done it himself. That the police investigation started with "anonymous tips" has raised few eyebrows.

Byrdsong's side of the story will not come out until the trial. Whatever the trial's outcome, press coverage of the case reflects racism in the community. Police allegations should not be treated as established reality.

Won't stand by presidential sell out

To the Editor:

In presidential politics, it is often true that a candidate's rhetoric does not completely reflect their intent. These broken promises, however, pale in comparison to the outright deceit being foisted upon the pro-life community by presidential candidate Phil Gramm. In an attempt to snow pro-lifers into supporting him, he has hired Marlys Popma to woo pro-lifers into his glass house. While Popma, past president of the Iowa Right to Life Committee, may appear on the surface to be all roses, the truth of the matter is she has become one of the biggest thorns in the side of the pro-life movement.

While speaking last spring to the College Republicans at Iowa State University, a meeting attended by around 20 students, Popma said she would support a pro-abortion Republican over a pro-life Democrat. She went on to chastise another individual for being too pro-life, saying he was just like Pat Buchanan.

Well Popma can count me in as one of those Buchanan types too, because like Pat Buchanan I won't sell out the unborn for personal gain or a fat check from the Gramm campaign! A human life is far too precious to throw onto the trash heap of political rhetoric for self aggrandizement.

If Popma is the type of person Gramm is going to use to try to woo the pro-life vote, we all know what will happen (or more correctly what won't happen) if he is elected. As Buchanan said, "If they are not with you when they need your vote, where do you think they'll be when they don't need your vote?"

Aim low, boys — they're riding in on French poodles

Every now and then one of my dear, smart, articulate friends will approach me with an idea for a column. They usually run something like this: "Why don't you write about how people who order double cappuccinos ahead of you in coffee houses should be thumped on the head with an espresso grinder." Or "Why don't you write about how everyone in the world should be given one grenade to use at their discretion."

Needless to say, when my friend Tim called last week saying he had an idea for me, I braced myself.

"What's the idea?" I asked.

"France," he said.

"Excuse me?"

"France," he said again.

I waited for him to explain. He didn't. "Uh, what about France?"

He paused. "I think," he said in a hushed voice, "that France is laying the ground work for world domination."

"Oh," I said.

Tim explained how he had pieced together France's plot from a suspicious series of current events: France

When France takes over the world, the beret wearers will get to stay in special internment camps, while the rest of us are out digging truffles in chain gangs.

resuming nuclear testing; France limiting border crossings under the guise of preventing terrorism; the failure of the "Chunnel" to make a profit because France had begun a secret campaign to scare travelers from using it; Quebec seeking independence from Canada. According to Tim, we were maybe a year away from a complete shift of global power.

"What d'ya think?" he asked, when he was done.

"Uh, I'll keep it in mind," I said, not meaning it, but wanting to sound safe and non-threatening.

Then, a few days later, it came up again.

My mother and I were reading the paper and she ran across an article about how all the rain had ruined the grape crop in Northern California.

"France must have a weather machine," she said.

Which started me thinking some more about Tim's idea. And you know, for all the whining they do in France about the Americanization of the French language, there sure are a lot of French phrases in use here. "Raison d'etre." "Carte blanche." "C'est la vie." "Nome de plume."

And just think about all those French teachers all over the country pounding conjugation rules and boche de Noel recipes into their students' skulls. Who do they all work for, anyway? What are they after? No one in their right mind would teach high school because they wanted to.

And then there's the whole thing about the berets. Does anyone look good in a beret? No. And suddenly they're everywhere again. It can't be fashion, so it must be some sort of sympathizer code. When France takes over the world, the beret wearers will get to stay in special internment camps, while the rest of us are out digging truffles in chain gangs.

That's not even to mention all those baguettes at every Hy-Vee bakery in every town in America. A stale baguette makes a pretty good weapon, doesn't it? Coincidence? I don't think so.

But what sealed my suspicions is something that my cousin told me this week about her French teacher. She said the last time she went to class the teacher didn't show. The department said she's absent for medical reasons, but we know the truth. She's been called home.

Then this morning I caught my own mother adjusting a natty tan knit beret on her head.

"What's that?" I asked.

"Nothing," she said, quickly stuffing it into her pocket.

Time is short. We must protect ourselves from this evil menace. We must fight back, before we lose the entirety of our national identity. We must protect our borders from the infestation of a foreign dominant culture.

Why there are even rumors that France plans to install, a giant French amusement park somewhere in the Midwest. The audacity!

Mark my words, if we don't resist, we'll all be speaking French by Christmas. They'll probably make us all wear those funny little scarves too. And that's not to mention the snails.

It's time to stand up and be counted. It's time to fight la guerre. Seize la vie.

Women mem Fortune 500 b increase

NEW YORK four of five of the companies now have a woman on their board, according to a survey released Wednesday.

Data from Catalyst Consulting and Research said the portion of Fortune 500 companies with a woman on their board stood at 81 percent in 1993, up from 78 percent a year ago.

Also, according to research, one-third of the nation's top 500 companies have more than one woman on their board. That is up from 24 percent in 1993.

At the same time, the number of seats occupied by women on corporate boards rose from 14 percent of the 6,274 seats in 1993. That was, however, a slight increase from 13 percent last year.

The 1993 survey, since 1977, when it began, has found that the number of women on corporate boards has increased from 14 percent in 1977 to 81 percent in 1993.

Of the top 100 ranked by revenue, at least one woman was on the board, according to Catalyst.

Women membership on Fortune 500 boards increase

NEW YORK (AP) — More than four of five of the nation's largest companies now have at least one woman on their corporate boards, according to a survey released Wednesday.

Data from Catalyst, a nonprofit consulting and research group, said the portion of Fortune 500 companies with a woman director stood at 81 percent, up from 75 percent a year ago and 69 percent in 1993.

Also, according to the 1995 research, one-third — or 166 of the nation's top 500 companies — have more than one female board member. That is an 18 percent increase from 141 last year.

At the same time, only 9.5 percent of the 6,274 corporate board seats are occupied by women. That was, however, up from 8.7 percent last year and 8.3 percent in 1993.

The 1993 survey was the first since 1977, when only 46 women held seats on the boards of the top American companies.

Of the top 100 companies, as ranked by revenue, 95 have at least one woman board member, according to Catalyst.

4th arrest in gang-related death of toddler

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A fourth alleged gang member was charged Wednesday with shooting a 3-year-old girl to death as she rode in a car which took a wrong turn down a dead-end street.

The 16-year-old youth, who wasn't identified because of his age, was charged with murder and five counts of attempted murder, the same charges filed Tuesday against two adults and another 16-year-old.

Marcos Antonio Luna, 23, and Marvin Alejandro Pech, 18, had bail set at $3.5 million each. If convicted, they each face 15 years to life in prison.

Police were still searching for other suspects.

Stephanie Kuhen was killed Sept. 17 when the driver of a car she was riding in mistakenly turned down a gangland street on the way home from a barbecue. Her 2-year-old brother was shot in the foot and the driver suffered a minor back wound.

Mourners buried Kuhen in a private service Monday. A day earlier, about 200 people attended a public memorial service.

Authorities dropped their case against a 23-year-old gang member arrested last week. Vincent Caldera, whom Police Chief Willie Williams called "one of the most vicious and vile members of the Avenues gang," was the first person arrested in Kuhen's death, but wasn't identified by witnesses during a lineup.

Deputy District Attorney Michael Genelin said Tuesday Caldera would not be prosecuted for the crime.

First lady lambastes GOP Medicaid plans

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — After months out of the health care spotlight, Hillary Rodham Clinton returned Wednesday, criticizing GOP-backed Medicaid changes as unnecessarily cruel to children who are sick but poor.

In a speech before children's hospital officials, the first lady said $182 billion in proposed Medicaid savings would undercut the care they provide, since Medicaid accounts for nearly 80 cents of every dollar spent on a sick child.

"It is a lifeline, literally, for millions of children and families," she said. "Ripping apart this lifeline is not the American way."

The Republican-led Congress is dismantling Medicaid "at break-neck pace" to pay for a $245 billion tax break, Rodham Clinton said, with little discussion of the consequences. The debate, she said, is about statistics, position papers and crunched numbers when it should dwell on "our core values as Americans."

$100 bill: Franklin gets face-lift

James Rubin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ben Franklin is bigger, slightly left of center and maybe even looks a little more youthful on the new $100 bill.

The new-look founding father was on display Wednesday as the government took the wraps off its new bill to launch the first overhaul of U.S. currency in nearly 70 years.

The goal is to thwart increasingly sophisticated counterfeiters worldwide — not to improve aesthetics, officials said.

"We must stay ahead of the rush of technology," said Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin. Modern computers and color scanners could pose a threat to the greenback if the United States failed to act, he said.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, on hand for an elaborate unveiling ceremony by the Clinton administration in the Treasury Department's ornate Cash Room, said there is little cause for concern. Fewer than one of every 100,000 bills of all denominations in circulation is found to be counterfeit, he said. The Fed distributes currency through its regional banks.

The government is concerned mainly with forgers overseas, where about two-thirds of the $390 billion in U.S. paper money is in circulation. Greenbacks account for about one-fifth of the world's currency supply.

Under tight secrecy, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has been producing the new $100 bills for 10 days. It will be early next year before the general public can get its hands on them.

And it may be the turn of the century before all the smaller denominations — right down to George Washington on the $1 bill — are remodeled.

The government picked the $100 bill for the first makeover because of its favored status with counterfeiters.

The portrait of Franklin, a pioneer in campaigning for paper currency, is 50 percent larger than on existing bills and extends from upper to lower border.

His likeness has been moved left of center to protect against wear and tear when the bills are folded and to make room for a watermark portrait of Franklin that is visible when bills are held up to the light.

Franklin also appears a bit younger, but officials said only because his hair looks darker for reasons of contrast. The engraving is from a painting the National Portrait Gallery said probably was completed in 1785, five years before the statesman-inventor died.

Of the numerous security features in the new bills, some are hidden while others change the appearance of the notes dramatically.

In the lower right-hand corner, the denomination of the bill has color-shifting ink. The number 100 changes from green when viewed head-on to black when seen at an angle.

The watermark portrait of Franklin at the far right can be seen when held up to the light but does not reproduce on color copiers or computer scanners.

Some traditional identifying marks help retain the distinct look and feel of U.S. currency in both the $100 bills and the plans for other denominations. The size is unchanged. They still say, "In God

OFFICIALS 'LOOKING INTO' FUNERAL HOME

Boy's organs buried with other body

Kate Wiltrout
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Funeral director David Waite thought he was making the best of a bad situation when he slipped a bag of internal organs left over from an embalming into another person's casket for burial.

The decision came back to haunt Waite: The organs — which belonged to a toddler killed in a fire — were discovered when the casket was dug up during an investigation of an unusually high death rate at a hospital in Clinton, Ind., about 60 miles from Indianapolis.

Now state police have opened a second investigation — of Waite's funeral home in Clinton.

The organs belonged to 23-month-old Zachary Steadman, who died in November. After discovering the organs had been left behind when the boy was buried, Waite chose not to open the grave.

"We talked about it and agonized over it. We thought it was the best of the possibilities we had," Waite told The Tribune-Star of Terre Haute, Ind. "We wanted to protect the family from additional trauma and grief."

But family members are outraged. They want state regulators to revoke the license of Waite's business, Frist Funeral Home, in Clinton.

"We feel like somebody's responsible and should pay the consequences for whatever happened," Anita Steadman, the boy's grandmother, said in a telephone interview from Texas.

The boy's parents, Timothy and Kim Steadman, have divorced and moved to Texas since their son died in an apartment fire in Montezuma. Kim Steadman wouldn't comment when reached by telephone. Her husband could not be located.

In a statement Monday, Waite said the organs were removed from the toddler's body so it could be sutured after embalming. They were placed in a bag in the boy's casket, but when the child's mother asked to hold the body, the bag was removed.

"Our intention was to put the bag in the bottom of the casket after the viewing and before burial," Waite said.

But Zachary's casket was closed up and buried without the bag being returned. Four days later, funeral home workers found the bag and decided to slip the organs into the casket of a 73-year-old man who was buried a few weeks later.

The man, Russell Firestone, died in December at Vermillion County Hospital. State police exhumed his body for autopsy on Sept. 18 in an investigation into 147 deaths in the hospital's intensive care unit over a 22-month period ending in March.

Waite and his lawyer maintain no laws have been broken, but Prosecutor Mark Greenwell is looking into whether the funeral home may have broken state burial rules. The offense carries up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The state Board of Funeral and Cemetery Services also is looking into the case and could take action against the license of Waite and the funeral home if the attorney general's office files a complaint.

Waite said he doesn't know if the mix-up will hurt his business in Clinton, a town of about 5,000 people with one other funeral home.

He said he has received some cards and calls of support.

"This is an isolated incident," Waite said. "They can check any casket. This was the first, the only and the last."

Brown leaves women's sports info. department

Mindy Brown's decision to leave women's sports information has lit a fire under the women's athletic department.

Sports information director Cathy Bongiovi resigned July 20 and still has not been replaced. In the meantime, however, Brown took over the majority of her duties. Now that Brown is gone, Women's Athletic Director Dr. Christine Grant said she will try to fill the director's position as soon as possible.

The only problem is the department hasn't gotten a search underway yet.

"We haven't even begun," Grant said. "We haven't even received permission to start the interview process."

Grant took some solace in the fact that Robin Sempf, who was hired as a temporary helping hand will stay on for the entire semester and become the assistant director.

Brown will also stick around for a little while and, according to Grant, "help to the degree that she can" after she begins her new post with General Electric Capital Corporation.

Brown's primary responsibility as Marketing Communications Specialist will focus on desktop publishing and graphic design, which Brown said are her loves.

"This was a good time for the opportunity to venture into the business world to come about," Brown said. "I gained a lot of great experience through sports information and I'm ready to move on."

Stackhouse leads list of rookie signees

(AP) — Jerry Stackhouse, the third overall pick in last June's NBA draft, signed with the Philadelphia 76ers on Wednesday, becoming the highest selection so far to join his new team.

"The word to describe Jerry Stackhouse is 'ferocious,'" Philadelphia coach and general manager John Lucas said. "He's a competitor and a potential superstar."

Under the league's new rookie salary scale, Stackhouse will receive approximately $6.855 million over three years after leaving North Carolina as a sophomore.

Also Wednesday, the Milwaukee Bucks signed Shawn Respert to a three-year contract and the Washington Bullets signed Rasheed Wallace to a three-year contract.

CLEVELAND — Mark Price, a four-time All-Star point guard, was traded from the Cleveland Cavaliers to the Washington Bullets on Wednesday in exchange for a first-round draft pick in 1996.

The Bullets, who had the worst record in the Eastern Conference last season, had been seeking a high-profile, veteran point guard to run its talented but young frontcourt, which includes rookie Rasheed Wallace, second-year player Juwan Howard and third-year pro Chris Webber.

"With the addition of Mark Price, we feel as though we have accomplished that goal and have not had to part with any of our corps of young talent," Bullets general manager John Nash said in a statement.

Facing at least half a season without starting center Brad Daugherty and a need to add some youth to an aging roster, the Cavaliers felt they had to deal Price, general manager Wayne Embry said.

"But we are not going to concede anything," Embry said. "We have a core of young players now that we intend to build with."

Price, 31, a 6-footer from Georgia Tech who was Dallas' No. 2 pick in the 1986 draft, was acquired by the Cavaliers later that same day in exchange for a second-round pick in the 1989 draft.

Embry, Cavaliers owner Gordon Gund and coach Mike Fratello praised Price as a "truly great player."

"He's the kind of player I would pay to see," Fratello said. "That's because people can identify with him."

You see him on the street in a T-shirt and jeans and he's a little guy like you and me.

So you think you could play as good as he does — until you see what he does on the basketball court."

One of the NBA's best perimeter shooters, Price is coming off a season in which he was hampered by injuries. He broke a bone in his right wrist Jan. 14; a supportive screw was inserted during a surgery Jan. 25 at the Cleveland Clinic.

He missed 27 games because of that injury and another seven games for other minor injuries.

The wrist injury prevented Price from competing during the All-Star break for a third consecutive 3-point shooting championship.

The trade would seem to clear the way for Terrell Brandon, Cleveland's first-round draft pick out of Oregon in the 1991 draft, to emerge as the Cavaliers' starting point guard.

Brandon is coming off a broken arm suffered last season. Cleveland drafted guard Bobby Sura of Florida State in the first round of this year's draft.

CROSS COUNTRY

Hawkeye women need to step up

Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's cross country team has put together a remarkable fifteen-year streak of being ranked nationally. The streak started when communism was still evident in Eastern Europe and Magic Johnson was a mere rookie.

Since then however, communism has crumbled to an end, and Magic has retired from the NBA. Now, in 1995, it appears the cross country team may go the entire season unranked.

"We're in a phase where we are not as strong as usual," head coach Jerry Hassard said.

Leading the team in the fight to keep the streak alive will be No. 1 runner, junior Becky Coleman. Coleman's time of 18:40 at last year's Big Ten Conference meet was her season best and good for 36th place.

"In cross country, the best teams are all led by a top lead runner, so a lot of the development of our team this year will depend on Becky's improvement as a runner," Hassard said.

This added pressure doesn't seem to phase Coleman, who believes cross country is more of a team effort.

"I handle the pressure by knowing week by week, the team is not one person, but seven to eight people running," Coleman said. "Everybody's effort counts."

In addition to Coleman, the Hawkeyes have three solid sup-

Angels keep things close out West

Jim Cour

SEATTLE — The California Angels didn't want the Seattle Mariners to clinch a tie for the AL West at their expense.

"We didn't want to give them a chance to celebrate in front of us," manager Marcel Lachemann said after California kept the division race close with a 2-0 victory over Seattle on Wednesday night. "The guys didn't want that to happen and they didn't let it happen."

Chuck Finley (14-12) was the Angels' hero, allowing only three hits in 6½ innings before a screaming crowd of 50,212.

"That's the loudest I've ever seen it in the Kingdom," Finley said. "I felt like I was in the end zone out there. It was actually echoing in my ears."

Trying desperately to regain their momentum with time running out, the Angels cut Seattle's lead in the division to two games with four to go.

A victory by Seattle would have clinched a tie for the division title, but instead the Mariners had their seven-game overall and nine-game home winning streaks snapped.

"Tonight our bats took a little day off," Seattle manager Lou Piniella said. "Not because we didn't swing them well. Finley pitched very well. He moved the ball around, changed speeds and made the pitches when he had to."

The Mariners still like their chances of winning their first division crown.

"We're still hot," Mike Blowers said. "Any time you win seven of eight at home, you have to feel pretty good about that. We lost, but we still feel good about our situation."

Finley, pitching on three days' rest, ended a personal four-game losing streak with his first win since Aug. 24.

Finley focused on the Mariners, not the division race.

Associated Press

Starting pitcher Chuck Finley, of the Angels, throws during the first inning of Wednesday's game in Seattle against the Mariners.

"I knew we needed a good win, but I really didn't go out there with the thought the whole organization was riding on my back," he said. "I really didn't need to do that. I didn't want to overestimate the value of the game. All I thought about was pitching."

Finley was taken out after walking Mike Blowers and Rich Amaral with one out in the seventh. Troy Percival struck out pinch-hitter Doug Strange and Vince Coleman to end Seattle's seventh-inning threat.

Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his 35th save, finishing just the second shutout of Seattle this year.

Astros slip up in extra innings

Michael Lutz
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston reliever Todd Jones hurt the Astros' chances of winning the NL wild card Wednesday by walking the bases loaded in the 11th inning.

Mike Henneman was almost as much to blame, giving up a two-run single to Rich Aude that led Pittsburgh to a 6-3 victory.

The loss snapped a four-game winning streak.

"Really, it's not a crushing defeat," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "They're not going to lose ground on one of the teams ahead of them. I'm sure it's a tough loss but it's really not a crusher."

Pittsburgh scored three runs in the seventh, the Pirates' first runs in 19 innings, before Houston tied it in the bottom half.

With one out in the 11th, Jones (6-4) walked Al Martin, who stole second. One out later, Jones intentionally walked Orlando Merced and walked Jeff King. Henneman then gave up Aude's two-run single to center.

"This has got to be one of the toughest things I've had to face," Jones said. "The team was struggling and I didn't do my job. (Doug) Brocail pitched well, (Doug) Drabek pitched well but I let the team down."

MILWAUKEE — David Cone, working on three days' rest for the first time in four years, pitched eight strong innings and the New York Yankees beat Milwaukee 6-3 for a two-game lead in the wild-card race.

The Yankees increased their lead for the extra playoff spot over California, which played later in Seattle. New York closes the regular season with three games in Toronto beginning Friday night.

Cone (18-8) improved to 9-2 in 13 starts since the Yankees got him from Toronto on July 28. He allowed one run and six hits, walked three and struck out five.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Knuckleballer Tim Wakefield had his third straight poor start as the Detroit Tigers outslugged the playoff-bound Boston Red Sox.

Wakefield (16-7), who earlier this year was considered a contender for the Cy Young award, is 2-6 with a 6.02 ERA in nine outings since starting the year 14-1. He allowed 11 hits and five runs in seven innings.

Jose Lima (3-9) was the beneficiary of 14 Detroit hits. Travis Fryman hit his 15th home run and Tony Clark was 2-for-4 for his third multi-hit game of the series. Chad Curtis, Cecil Fielder, Bobby Higginson, Phil Nevin and Ron Tingley also had two hits apiece.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Scott Erickson pitched a three-hit shutout as Baltimore blanked Toronto for the second straight night in a victory that gave the Orioles a two-game sweep.

Erickson (13-10) struck out five and walked none in his second straight complete game, his fourth in his last five starts and his sixth this season. His second shutout of the year and the ninth of his career gave him a 4-0 record and 1.47 ERA in five September starts.

New York's Pat Kelly goes over Milwaukee's B.J. Surhoff to turn a double play Wednesday in Milwaukee.

Rangers 11, Athletics 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Rusty Greer's three-run homer highlighted a five-run first inning and Kenny Rogers matched a career high with his 16th victory as the Texas Rangers beat the Oakland Athletics.

The Rangers kept alive their slim hopes for the franchise's first playoff appearance in 23 years. Another loss by Texas or a victory by New York will knock the Rangers out of the wild card race.

Rogers (16-7) improved to 4-0 in September, keeping the A's in check on six hits over eight innings. Rogers struck out two and walked two, taking advantage of the big early lead by throwing strikes and letting the A's put the ball in play.

White Sox 6, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Barry Lyons drove in five runs and Mike Sirotko got his first major league victory, leading the Chicago White Sox past Kansas City Royals.

Sirotko (1-2), who spent the season in the minors before he was brought up Sept. 5, allowed three hits in eight innings, struck out eight and walked two.

Indians 9, Twins 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Albert Belle and Eddie Murray each homered twice to lead Cleveland to a victory over Minnesota, keeping a 100-win season possible for the Indians.

Belle, who hit his 48th and 49th homers, became the eighth player in major league history to reach 100 extra-base hits.

Stan Musial was the last to do it in 1948 with 103.

Belle has 12 home runs in his last 10 games.

Murray's second-inning homer gave him his 75th RBI of the season, tying Hank Aaron's major-league record of 19 straight seasons with at least 75 RBI. His fourth-inning solo shot gave him 477 career homers, moving him past Musial and Willie Stargell into sole possession of 16th place on the all-time list.

Cubs bash Cards
to stay alive in race

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Kevin Foster struck out a career-high 13 batters in seven innings as the Chicago Cubs remained alive in the NL wild-card race by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals 5-3.

The Cubs' sixth straight victory guaranteed that they'll go into their final four-game series against Houston with a slim chance for a playoff spot. They must sweep the Astros, one of the teams ahead of them, to have any hope.

Luis Gonzalez, Jose Hernandez and Ozzie Timmons had solo homers for the Cubs, whose pitchers struck out 36 batters in the three-game sweep of the Cardinals.

Foster (12-11) allowed two runs on eight hits, including Bernard Gilkey's first-inning home run — the major-league-high 32nd homer Foster has surrendered. But the right-hander spent most of the game either zipping his fastball past the Cardinals or confounding them with his curve.

Mets 5, Reds 4

Mets 9, Reds 2

NEW YORK — Bill Spiers, who entered the game hitting .176, singled three times and drove in three runs as the New York Mets completed a sweep of the doubleheader with a victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

In the opener, Robert Person allowed three hits and one run in seven innings in his first major league start as New York won.

In the second game, Jeff Kent singled twice and doubled to knock in two runs in support of Reid Cornelius (3-7). Cornelius allowed two runs on five hits in six innings. He struck out four and walked two.

With the score tied 2-2, the Mets scored four runs in the sixth. Spiers had a two-run single, Carl Everett added an RBI single, and the fourth run scored on a fielding error by first baseman Brian Hunter.

Dave Burba (10-4) allowed four runs and six hits in five innings.

Cincinnati trailed 2-1 before Lenny Harris hit his second homer of the season in the sixth.

In the first game, Person struck out seven and walked two in his first big league start. He was brought up Sept. 14.

"After the first hitter, I calmed down," he said. "I was pumped up, even more so after last night's game was rained out."

Person gave up his only run in the second, a leadoff homer by Hal Morris.

Padres 4, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Fernando Valenzuela allowed one run and four hits in 6½ innings, and singled in a run as the San Diego Padres completed a three-game sweep with a win over the San Francisco Giants.

Valenzuela (8-3), who has won six straight decisions, struck out four and walked three. He has not lost since July 8 and has won eight of his last nine decisions.

Trevor Hoffman, who pitched the ninth for his 30th save, saved all three games in the series.

Ray Holbert hit a solo homer, his second, Brian Johnson had an RBI double and another run scored on a wild pitch as the Padres scored three runs in the fifth. Valenzuela got his eighth RBI of the season in the seventh.

Braves 6, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Greg Maddux won his major league-leading 19th game, allowing three hits in six shutout innings as the Atlanta Braves beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Maddux, making his final regular-season start, won his 18th consecutive road decision, extending his major league record.

He finished the season with a 1.63 ERA, just above his 1.56 ERA of 1994. Maddux is the first pitcher with an ERA under 1.80 in consecutive seasons since Walter Johnson in 1918-19.

Maddux (19-2) struck out four, walked none and extended his scoreless streak to 21 innings. He allowed just one ball out of the infield: a ground single up the middle by Andy Van Slyke in the first.

Marlins 9, Expos 3

MIAMI — Jeff Conine became the first Florida player to reach 100 RBI in a season when he drove in four runs to lead the Marlins over the Montreal Expos.

Florida won its club-record 65th game, one more than the Marlins total in 1993, their inaugural season.

Pat Rapp (14-7) allowed three hits in seven scoreless innings, winning his ninth consecutive decision since Aug. 6 and increasing his club-record shutout string to 24 innings. He left following a 47-minute rain delay in the seventh.

INJURED PATRIOT

Bledsoe's backups have big shoes to fill

Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — Reporters flocked around the Patriots' new starting quarterback, Scott Zolak. From the edge of the crowd, a smiling Drew Bledsoe piped up.

"Can I ask a question, please?" he said playfully before rushing out of the locker room Wednesday.

Bledsoe wasn't answering any questions about his left shoulder that was separated Sept. 17 at San Francisco and almost certainly will keep him out of Sunday's game at Atlanta.

His agent, Leigh Steinberg, said that Bledsoe had a third-degree separation, the most serious, but that there was a chance he might play a week later against Denver.

"Surgery is not recommended in these cases," Steinberg said. "Hopefully, he'll have a productive season and then take a look at the shoulder again after the season."

New England coach Bill Parcells said that there was a chance Bledsoe would suit up Sunday and that rookie Jay Barker probably would be signed from the practice squad as Zolak's backup. Bledsoe could serve as the emergency quarterback if the other two get hurt.

"It's weird. You just feel out of place" Bledsoe said, an ice pack resting on his ailing, non-throwing shoulder. "I'm normally the guy they're looking to in practice. I'm heavily involved. Now I'm just a spectator."

Bledsoe, who has no touchdown passes in three games, hasn't practiced since being hurt when Ken Norton Jr. drove him to the ground after he released a pass in the second quarter. He played most of the rest of the game.

Parcells said Bledsoe's condition has improved but wouldn't say when his quarterback might return. He did say it wasn't a season-ending injury.

Bledsoe has struggled with the rest of the Patriots offense. They are 1-2 and have been outscored 62-23. Their only touchdown was a short run in the final minute that gave them a 17-14 season-opening win over Cleveland.

In the locker room Wednesday, the Patriots were loose.

As Zolak entered the room, reporters in hot pursuit, teammates shouted, "There's Zolak," and "Zolak's here."

When Zolak was being interviewed, placekicker Matt Bahr chimed in: "Is this going to affect his holding? That's what I want to know."

And when running back Dave Meggett was told that Parcells had mentioned that he might fill in at quarterback in a pinch, he said, "I don't know anything about that. ... If, God forbid, Scott and Jay got hurt, I'm sure Parcells has some friends in the Atlanta area. He could call a timeout and call them in before me."

First, the enthusiastic but inexperienced Zolak will get his chance. Zolak, in his fifth season with the Patriots, has thrown just 111 passes and started only four games.

Willie Jackson eventually moved back to receiver and wound up as the second-leading receiver in the second-leading receiver in Gators history with 162 receptions for 2,172 yards. He now plays for the NFL's Jacksonville Jaguars, where he continued to surpass expectations by catching two touchdown passes last week.

"Willie is a young man who has made progress every time he's stepped on the field," Jaguars coach Tom Coughlin said. "He's got to learn some things about the game, route running, deception, things like that, but he has good speed and he is a force when he's (running) downfield. He does have a talent for going and getting the ball."

Terry Jackson, meanwhile, is following in Willie's footsteps at Florida, separated from his brother by only 75 miles and a five-year age difference.

Terry, a redshirt freshman, started out as a defensive back for the No. 3 Gators but moved to tailback in spring practice when Elijah Williams and Fred Taylor were injured.

Jackson performed so well that he stayed at the position into the fall, though no one expected him get much playing time once Williams and Taylor returned. But when Williams and Taylor got hurt again, Jackson got another chance to shine.

"I knew if I got my chance I could perform at the same level as the other guys," Jackson said. "If they call my number, I'll get in. If not, I'll just wait for my chance. I'm just trying to get in there any way I can."

Jackson is averaging 7.2 yards per carry (282 yards total) and scored four touchdowns even though he's not as fast as Williams, and probably not as powerful as Taylor.

"He reminds me of Emmitt," Williams said. "Emmitt is not that fast, but it seems like no one can catch him and he breaks all the tackles. That's who Terry reminds me of."

AT BOTH LEVELS

Florida brothers make their mark

Paul Newberry
Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Florida coach Steve Spurrier marvels at the similarities between Willie and Terry Jackson.

Beyond their bloodlines, the brothers both played at a tiny high school in Gainesville and were awarded Florida scholarships almost as an afterthought. Both earned a chance to play only after other players were hurt.

"Willie was a backup wide receiver when we were scrimmaging one day during the spring," Spurrier recalled. "We ran out of running backs ... and Willie said, 'I can play running back.' He jumped in there and we taught him the plays right on the spot."

"The same thing happened with Terry last spring. Terry was out there when some guys got hurt and we said, 'Come on Terry, give it a try.' Lo and behold, no one could tackle either one of 'em."

ON TAP THIS WEEKEND

Buckeyes will conquer the Irish

Rick Warner
Associated Press

In 1968, when Lou Holtz was an assistant coach at Ohio State, he sat in the press box at Ohio Stadium and watched the Buckeyes beat arch-rival Michigan 50-14.

"After our last touchdown, we scored on a 2-point conversion," Holtz recalled. "After the game, they asked coach (Woody) Hayes why he went for two and he said, 'Because they wouldn't let me go for three.'"

Holtz will return to that press box Saturday when No. 15 Notre Dame (3-1) visits No. 7 Ohio State (3-0). The Fighting Irish coach is still recovering from spinal surgery but — as he did last week against Texas — he will call plays from his seat above the field.

The game has special significance for Holtz because he's an Ohio native who played at Kent State and was on Hayes' staff when the Buckeyes won the 1968 national championship.

However, the main reason for the big buildup is that the teams haven't played in 59 years. Notre Dame won their only two meetings, in 1935 and 1936. In their 1935 "Game of the Century" at Columbus, the Irish trailed 13-0 in the fourth quarter before rallying to win on a last-minute touchdown pass by Bill Shakespeare.

No current Notre Dame player has such a memorable name (receiver Cikai Champion comes close), and Saturday's contest won't be such a memorable game.

Although the Irish have won three straight since losing their opener to Northwestern, they haven't played a team as talented and versatile as Ohio State.

Quarterback Bobby Hoving, tailback Eddie George and receiver Terry Glenn give the Buckeyes one of the best offensive trios in the country, and the defense is led by All-Big 10 ends Matt Finkes and Mike Vrabel.

The Buckeyes are favored by 6½ points ... OHIO ST. 31-21.

BIG EIGHT SHOWDOWN

Sooners not living in the past

Owen Canfield
Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Oklahoma coach Howard Schnellenberger doesn't plan to spend much time watching it. Receiver P.J. Mills doesn't, either. He played in it and doesn't need to watch it again.

It is last year's game against Colorado, a 45-7 rout that could have been worse. Rashaan Salaam ran for 153 yards and four touchdowns — in the first half. The Sooners threw four interceptions, lost a fumble and were a cool 3-of-17 on third-down conversions.

"The one bright spot of the evening was the fact that Oklahoma was not shut out," says the Oklahoma media guide.

No. 10 Oklahoma gets a chance for redemption Saturday when the fourth-ranked Buffaloes visit Norman. Like last year, the game will

"The one bright spot of the evening was the fact that Oklahoma was not shut out."

The Oklahoma media guide on last year's loss to Colorado be at night and will be televised by ESPN. But Mills thinks that's where the similarities end.

"These are two different teams than last year, and I think you're going to have a different result as a result of that," he said.

Colorado doesn't have Salaam anymore. He was one of 10 Buffalo players who were drafted by the NFL. The Buffaloes don't have the same coach anymore, either. Rick Neuheisel has replaced Bill McCartney, who stepped down in a surprise move after last season.

Oklahoma also doesn't have the same coach. Gary Gibbs resigned under pressure, and now Schnellenberger has taken over, sparking talk among fans of a national championship once again.

"I think it's a new deal at OU," Neuheisel said. "I know coach Schnellenberger wasn't involved in that game and I know he's telling his players 'That's last year, this is this year.' And he's absolutely right. Last year means nothing. This year is the question."

"It's good to have lots of different names," said Mike Hoff, guitarist, bassist and vocalist for one of the Iowa City area's newest bands, Mad Dash for the Cake.

"It's important that we don't have a name," he said later in the same interview. What he's referring to is the many names of his all-acoustic band. The members of the band have made a point of changing their name on almost every flyer for every show. Originally named Mad Dash for the Cake, recent variations on the title have included Mad Dash from the Cave, Mad Dash for the Soggy, Mad

UI theatre descends into businessmen's hell

John Pszyk
The Daily Iowan

There are things they never teach you in business school. Tonight's performance of David Mamet's "Glenarry Glen Ross," in Theatre B of the UI Theatre Building at 8 p.m., promises a lesson in the dark side of business survival.

The play frames the lives of seven salesmen in their attempts to survive and succeed in the hellish world of real estate. They are involved in a contest for top sales. First prize: a Cadillac. Second prize: a set of steak knives. Third prize: you're fired.

The essence of the play is the nature of corruption. "We are not innately corrupt: it is the struggle for survival that forces us to destroy lest we be destroyed."

"(The play) is about morally reprehensible actions of people trying to take care of themselves ... what they are forced to do is cut-throat and it's ugly ... it is a (strong) comment on capitalism," actor Sean Williams said. It is the indented businessman, forced into the slavery of self-absorbed greed, who will survive.

Mamet is a playwright whose sparse and pithy use of language challenges both actor and director. Director Lad Brown has met that challenge with adeptness and grace. Brown was very patient and

The Daily Iowan

David Fincher's calmed down considerably as a director since his debut behind the camera of the awful "Alien3."

His second film, "Seven," loses the annoying visual distortion and hyperactive camera work in favor of a tighter, tenser style. With considerable assistance from a gripping script and some first-rate acting, he's put together a film fit to make audiences forget about his past and start hoping for his future.

First-time screenwriter Andrew Kevin Walker may have a shining career ahead of him as well, though it's not apparent until "Seven" gets fully into gear. He opens his story by piling on the cop-film clichés fast and furious.

Guess what? It's the old rookie-cop-meets-aging-vet formula, fresh from the can with no new twists added. Morgan Freeman is William Somerset, the hardened, experienced detective a week from retirement. Brad Pitt is David Mills, the promising, newly transferred detective with no big-city experience.

Guess what? They don't get along but have to work together anyway. Guess what? It turns out they make a pretty good team after all. As it happens, both men are perfectly suited for their roles and both give strong, enjoyable performances. Nevertheless, it's hard to forget they're playing characters straight out of the cookie cutter.

Fortunately, Walker leaves the worst formulas to the film's opening minutes and moves on to a dense web of plotting somewhere between "Angel Heart" and "Silence of the Lambs."

It seems the normal tranquil peace of New York City has been altered by the discovery of a particularly grisly cadaver: an obese man, force-fed over a period of 12 hours, until his stomach ruptured. A second, seemingly unrelated murder is even more discomfiting. A high-priced lawyer is forced at gunpoint to cut off pieces of his own body to provide a pound of flesh left in a set of scales next to his bloodless corpse.

Somerset's intuition and the murderer's unsubtle clues quickly point to an unpleasant conclusion — the killer is "preaching" with a set of murders based on the seven deadly sins. Gluttony and greed have already been crossed off the list, but the police can expect five more equally imaginative and grotesque murders to follow. Walker has an actively unpleasant imagination, and he uses it to the fullest without overdoing his theme. (Oliver Stone, take note.) He keeps the worst violence off-screen, though his characters describe it in gory clinical detail. Fincher complements this decision by recalling the deaths through grainy crime scene photographs and teasing images of the scenes themselves. The extreme nature of this metaviolence creates a nerve-wracking, subtle level of tension far above the average slasher mystery.

This conceit does get annoying as Somerset and Mills move through apartment after apartment in which light sources vaguely define, rather than illuminate rooms. Even Mills' own happy home looks like a cave full of flashlights. But Fincher's style does leave a lot of unpleasantness to viewers' imaginations, which already will be working overtime as Walker builds to a riveting — if overly abrupt — conclusion.

For Fincher, "Seven" isn't quite a triumph of substance over style. It's more like a triumph of some style over way too much style. For Walker, however, it's substance all the way. Together, they've assembled a story that'll make viewers cringe and leave them thinking.

Isabelle (Isabelle Huppert) plays the nymphomaniac ex-nun who befriends mysterious drifter Martin Donovan with amnesia in the wild film, "Amateur."

Fans of director Hartley should enjoy 'Amateur'

Mark Pittillo
The Daily Iowan

Writer-director Hal Hartley's new film, "Amateur," is an action-comedy about three oddballs whose descriptions are nothing more than elaborate jokes. Isabelle (Isabelle Huppert, "Heaven's Gate") is a virgin ex-nun who is — she claims — also a nymphomaniac. She believes the Virgin Mary has spoken to her, so she befriends a mysterious drifter named Thomas (Hartley regular Martin Donovan).

It turns out Thomas has amnesia. In the beginning of the film he wakes up lying on the street in a puddle without any knowledge of his past. On hand to reveal Thomas' secrets is Sophia (Elina Lowensohn, "Nadja"), porn star and Thomas' former wife. She was the one who pushed Thomas out a window and left him for dead. The film ranges in tone from deep philosophical seriousness to slapstick comedy.

Hartley is heavily influenced by the great French filmmaker Jean Luc Godard ("Breathless," "Hail Mary"), and I respect that.

Unlike Godard's best work, the Hartley films I've seen add up to less than the sum of their parts, and a lot of the parts ain't that great.

Hartley's humor is calculated and tries so desperately to be "zany" it's often embarrassing. "How can you be a nymphomaniac and never had sex?" Martin asks Isabelle. "I'm choosy," she replies. This is a typical Hartley joke, contrived yet somehow conventional.

This problem can't be blamed on the acting. Huppert, Donovan, and Lowensohn all deliver nice, minutely choreographed performances. The problem is definitely the writing. For hilarious examples of nutty, deadpan dialogue see Godard or any film by Atom Egoyan.

Now for the positive. There are some funny sections. Most notable are Sophia's phone conversation with the international criminal "Mr. Jacques," and the reminder to "get a receipt" for a slice of pizza given to one of Jacques' henchmen by his partner. And Thomas' situation — he turns from dastardly criminal to nice guy through amnesia — is provocative.

Hartley has become a technically skilled director. He's got Godard's mise-en-scene and editing rhythms down cold. There are lots of beautifully held long shots and crisp, funny action sequences. Makes me want to rent "Breathless" or "My Life to Live" again.

Risky documentary stares Nazi extremes in the face

Winfried Bonengel/Special to the DI
Neo-Nazi Ewald Althans spreads a little hatred in the 1993 film "Profession: Neo-Nazi."

Kevin Lawrence
The Daily Iowan

Winfried Bonengel's disconcerting 1993 "Beruf Neo-Nazi" ("Profession: Neo-Nazi"), allows neo-Nazis to speak for themselves with the hope that they will reveal themselves to be irrational and dangerous demagogues.

By not disputing directly with the featured neo-Nazis, however, Bonengel risks attracting some viewers to their rhetoric. This risk proved too much for some German states. They banned the film amidst heated debate over the its worth, even though a number of them provided financial support.

The film opens with a shot of the Toronto skyline to remind us the events it depicts are contemporary and in our neighborhoods. We then go underground to a Nazi rally, where the camera pans the crowd to show how incredibly ordinary the people are. To be sure, the stereotypical skinheads are present, flanking the seated crowd and chanting "White power!" But there are also grandmothers, children and even one Indian man who explains his Aryan heritage.

The primary character, Ewald Althans is deceptively well-mannered and handsome. Althans clearly sees Bonengel's attention as his chance to reach a wider audience.

The film follows Althans through Germany and Eastern Europe as he exercises his "profession," networking with other European fascist groups, speaking and reading and disrupting guided tours at Auschwitz.

What the film fails to mention is that after its release, Althans was ousted by Dutch journalists and ousted from the Nazi party for his homosexuality.

This controversial film is a step toward the ending of Neo-Nazi hatred.

MAD

"In my opinion, no electric instruments or amplification is the biggest thing that sets (the band) apart," said Mad Dasher Greg Peterson, who plays guitar, violin and sings.

The difference has earned them great response from crowds so far. At a packed Coffee Cellars show three weeks ago, Mad Dash effectively charmed their audience, which sat on the floor in a semicircle around the band and was invited to sing and play along.

"It seems kind of like sitting around a campfire. That's kind of the atmosphere," said Peterson.

"I like the idea of people participating," he said, suggesting the open-ended name is another way in which audience creativity is encouraged.

"Maybe we can have a show sometime in the future where the audience wrote all the songs," Hoff said, perhaps only partly joking.

slick interior and expensive sound system. In addition to some rock shows and a weekly blues jam on Monday nights, Gunnerz has been pulling in a lot of touring blues acts and hopes to bring more national acts in the future.

"We're a live music club. That's our emphasis," said Mark "Gunner" Grulke, owner of Gunnerz.

And, of course, there is still The Mill, 120 E. Burlington St., with regular folk acts and poetry readings, as well as Gabe's — the standard rock venue for big bands coming through the area for years.

"We rely on a really good balance between touring acts and local acts. If the local scene is strong, they tend to feed off each other. And there's more local bands right now than there were five years ago," said Doug Roberson, booking agent for Gabe's.

Of course, it remains to be seen which bands from this new generation will survive. It also remains to be seen which new music venues will survive.

"In the time I've been here, I've seen a lot of live music clubs open and close," Roberson said, in a sobering reality check.

While most in Iowa City seem hopeful, everyone is still waiting anxiously to see if these new venues will suffer the fate of those before them.

yet retain the raw edge of Mamet's style.

"It is easy to rely on the language: the language is powerful. Yet there is an emotional power behind the language. There is a beauty within the vernacular. ... (Mamet) has a concise use of language that is so compelling that (one) can only be led down that path," Brown said.

Phillip Lynch, who plays Roma

— one of the top salesmen, was inspired by "Glengarry" because it "leaves a lot for the actor to fill," he said.

The "rich bleak landscape" of the play is realized through a minimalist set and harsh lighting, which give the play an almost sterile look and feel. The affect works quite well since it allows the audience to focus on the action of the play.

These are desperate men and they will do anything — steal, maim perhaps even kill, to survive.

Rocker Watt adds I.C. to '15-year tour'

Jonathan Hansen
The Daily Iowan

If you don't know who Mike Watt is, you're probably thinking, "OK now, really. Punk legend?" And no one would blame you. Not many people deserve the title of legend.

If you know who Watt is, however, or anything of his 15-year musical career — including work in such invaluable bands as the Minute Men and FIREHOSE — you're probably not questioning the legendary status of the heralded bass player.

And even if you don't know of Watt's illustrious career, you may be aware of his recent solo album, ball-hog or tugboat?, which features nearly 50 rock heavyweights from the Beastie Boys, Nirvana, Pearl Jam, Sonic Youth, Dinosaur Jr., the Red Hot Chili Peppers and the Lemonheads, to name a few.

The record has been lauded by some as a worthy tribute to one of the most important musicians in rock today, and derided by others as a gratuitous, over-extended, good ol' boy ego trip. Apparently, Watt anticipated both opinions when naming the album with a question implicitly relating to himself: ball-hog (think basketball here) or tugboat?

It's likely either perception is fine with Watt; just let him play. Watt has a reputed passion for touring and playing live. He claims to have been touring for 15 years — straight.

Watt himself is certainly enough star-power to drive his appearance tonight at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., at 9:00 p.m. And with someone like Watt, you can never tell just what may happen.

Germany's soul is in the heart of Iowa

Todd Norden
The Daily Iowan

This weekend, the Amana Colonies will present, "a little bit of Bavaria" with Oktoberfest. The annual event features German heritage and culture, including scrumptious foods, skilled artisans, cold beer and oompah music for a festive and educational celebration.

Oktoberfest is a traditional harvest festival that is significant to the heritage and culture of the Amana Colonies. Oktoberfest has been presented in modern form for over 60 years.

"This is a chance to showcase the community's strong tradition in welcoming visitors from other areas," said Dave Kjolhede, executive director of the Amana Colonies Convention and Visitors Bureau. "It's a really good chance to see a little bit of Germany that you don't normally see when you visit (the Amana Colonies)."

Presenting the best of Germany takes quite a while for the Amana village. "It takes a lot of time to work on the entertainment, the parades and the additional food. Our Oktoberfest committee actually plans for this year-round. We have to consider if we need to make changes with our events or if we may possibly have to structure around different events to fit everything into a schedule," Kjolhede said.

There are plenty of different things to do and see this weekend. Consider touring Iowa's only operating wool mill. Take in the sounds of Sepp, the German zither player and yodeler. Learn how to cast pewter. Purchase a souvenir from the Oktoberfest craft show. Maybe even just relax, have a beer and watch Juggling Jack & His Magic Act or Fax the Mime.

If you're looking for the finest German song and dance, then pull on the lederhosen and join the people of Amana. Admission is free.
