Ann McGlynn Cassie Golden The Daily Iowan

While two UI presidential candidates withdrew their interest in the position Thursday, three UI presidential candidates were named as finalists.

Mary Sue Coleman, provost and vice president for academic affairs at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque; Karen Hitchcock, versity of New York, Albany; and David Skorton, vice president for research at the UI have been invited to meet with the regents on Monday in Des Moines, the final step before the next UI president is Mark Yudof, provost and executive vice president of the University of Texas at Austin and Judith Albino, president of the University of Colorado, bowed out of the race.

The controversy surrounding Albino's presidency at CU played too large of a role in the UI search, Albino said in a statement released Thursday.

"A university is best served when a new presidential candidate can talk about the future and does not need to continue to explain the past," Albino said. "I simply do not want to be the focal point for a discussion that is not constructive for either institution.'

Albino credited the search committee for a diligent and thorough search and said the decision was painful because she would have enjoyed serving as the UI president.

Yudof's wife, Judy, said he did not want to comment. However, "he made a very difficult career decision and decided to withdraw his name for the candidacy of the presidency at the UI," she said.

The Iowa state Board of Regents will interview these three candidates Monday.

Ross Perot's decision to form a third political party Sept. 25 does not worry Iowa Democratic and Republican party officials.

However, a UI political science professor said if Colin Powell were the party's candidate, he would have a better chance of winning the presidency than Perot.

A recent USA Today/CNN/Gallup poll showed a virtual three-way tie in a Powell-Clinton-Dole race. In two-way races, Powell led Clinton, opinion poll," he said. Republican Party of Iowa Chairperson Brian Kennedy said Powell s more likely to run as a Republican than with Perot's party.

"It's a hunch based upon more than intuition," Kennedy said. Kennedy said Powell would feel more comfortable in the Republican Party than in the Independence Party.

Democratic officials said support for Powell has grown the more voters see of the Republican candi-

"This is more out of dissatisfaction with the large field of Republican candidates," Ron Parker, communications director for the Iowa Democratic Party, said.

Even with the recent poll showing Powell leading Clinton, Democrats are taking a "wait and see" attitude toward Powell.

"Until he gets out here, meeting people face-to-face, it's a little early to gauge how he'll do," Parker said. Perot's party will likely encounter organizational obstacles if it enters the presidential race.

"It's sort of difficult to see where (Perot's) pocketbook and his ego will take him next," Parker said. Parker said Perot's organization did not hold together after his 1992 campaign. Kennedy said many of Perot's key organizers are now working for Republican candidate Morry Taylor, who's also a businessman rather than a politician.

Perot's Independence Party will not qualify as a political party in Iowa for 1996. Iowa Secretary of State Paul Pate said Perot could have formed a party in Iowa after he received 19 percent of the Iowa presidential vote in 1992, but he waited longer than the two-year state deadline.

Pate said an Independence Party candidate could still get on the 1996 ballot in Iowa, but the campaign would have to gather petition signatures just like any other

Walktoberfest to raise diabetes awareness

Thirty-two people honoring a friend who died of complications from diabetes will join a 10mile walk for research in search of a cure.

Iowa City resident Jenni Maschka has coordinated a group of friends and family members to walk in Sunday's Walktoberfest, an event organized to raise money for diabetes research. Maschka's group is participating in honor of Iowa City resident Sara O'Brien Sherman, who died in June.

"I felt like this was a positive way to remember Sara," Maschka said. "It wasn't very hard to get people to walk for her," she said.

in Iowa City around 9:30 p.m. NTSB's investigation will continue at the Iowa City Municipal Airport, where the wreckage of the Cessna was taken.

"We don't determine the cause at the accident scene." Silliman said. "We look at the aircraft, the engine and the flight profile. It's a long process and it's not until six or eight months later that we announce the probable cause," he Silliman said they will also get the air traffic controller tapes to determine whom the pilot talked to in the air. He said they are still determining who owns the plane. The on-site investigation will probably be done by tomorrow, Silliman said.

John Ockenfels, who owns an airplane similar to the Cessna 210, said witnesses didn't hear the plane engine running Wednesday night, although that particular kind of engine is louder than most.

"This was not an intended landing; it was an emergency landing," Ockenfels said. "The fact that two bottom (propellers) look normal, but the top one is bent back tells you that the engine was not operating and he didn't land because he

The wings caught in the electric wires above the scene were upside down, he said. The plane probably hit the trees and flipped upside down, ripping the fuselage off. It then landed on the ground.

The fuel tanks of the Cessna, like Ockenfels' own, are located in the wings, which made fire less likely, he said. However, he believes the investigators won't find fuel in the

"The wing was embedded in a power pole, which whipped the top right off the plane," Ockenfels said. This may have been the lifesaver for the other guys because it prevented a fire.

Cessna stopped making the 210 at least 10 years ago due to liability and a flooded market, Ockenfels said. However, the age of the plane shouldn't have been a factor. He valued the plane as worth approximately $200,000.

"This is an extraordinarily wellequipped airplane," Ockenfels said. 'It has a very modern panel and can fly in most weather. Ultimately, pilots are responsible for the operation of the airplane."

Gene linked to Jewish women provokes screening possibilities

NEW YORK (AP) — A genetic defect which may increase the risk of breast and ovarian cancer is common enough in Jews of Eastern European descent that doctors might want to offer screening for such women, researchers say.

So-called Ashkenazi Jews account for the vast majority of the nation's Jewish population, which is about 6 million. The defect appeared in about 1 percent of an Ashkenazi sample.

The mutation lies in a gene called BRCA1. Prior studies have shown defective BRCA1 genes cause a susceptibility to breast and ovarian cancer in some families where those cancers show up repeatedly.

More than 60 defects in all have been found in BRCA1. But each of them is much less common in the general population than the Ashkenazi mutation is among Ashkenazi

That means while screening all women for a defective BRCA1 would be daunting, doctors might want to offer Jewish women a relatively simple test to find the Ashkenazi mutation.

Scientists caution they need more answers before they can tell if such screening is justified. If it is, they said, the huge job could overwhelm the nation's current corps of people trained in genetic coun-

NASA puts up with 'luck of the draw'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) -Space shuttle Columbia began leaking explosive hydrogen fuel just hours before liftoff Thursday, forcing NASA to postpone the science mission for a week.

It was the latest in a series of problems plaguing the shuttle program in recent months, including pesky woodpeckers and scorched

"That's the luck of the draw," said a weary James Harrington, NASA launch director.

Liftoff tentatively was rescheduled for Oct. 5 to allow NASA to replace the leaky valve in main engine No. 1 — a new, redesigned

Flammable hydrogen gas began leaking from the engine into the atmosphere after NASA began filling the shuttle's external tank for a midmorning launch.

The tank holds 528,000 gallons of hydrogen and oxygen, twothirds of that hydrogen, to drive the three main engines during the climb to orbit.

The seven astronauts had not yet boarded Columbia for their 16day flight. Because of the danger associated with so much hydrogen, the launch pad is always evacuated during the three hours it takes to fill the tank.

HEBRON, West Bank - As Israel and the PLO sealed a West Bank autonomy accord Thursday, hardline Israelis marched in Hebron to accuse their government of treason and anti-Israel protests erupted in a refugee camp.

Still, most Israelis and Palestinians appeared indifferent or ambivalent to the long-awaited accord, which transfers one-third of the West Bank to PLO leader Yasser Arafat's control after a gradual withdrawal of Israeli occupation troops from West Bank towns. The White House signing ceremony, broadcast live in the West Bank, set off spontaneous protests at the Dheishe refugee camp, home to 15,000 Palestinians south of Bethlehem. Hundreds of residents tore down sections of a tall chain link fence the Israeli army erected around the shantytown to prevent stones from being thrown at Israeli WASHINGTON - The price of college rose about 6 percent this year - less than the double-digit jumps of the early 1990s but still twice the rate of inflation, the College Board said Thursday.

And the annual increase, roughly the same as last year, shows no signs of stopping.

Tuition and fees, not counting room and board, average $2,860 at public four-year colleges, $12,432 at private four-year colleges and $1,387 at two-year public colleges. Prices jumped less at two-year private colleges, 4 percent, to $6,350.

Those prices are daunting to parents and students, acknowledged Kathleen Brouder, spokeswoman for the board's financial aid arm. But college can still be affordable if families save, seek financial aid or take advantage of bargains, she

Or should it keep aid the same or less, and try to encourage colleges to hold tuition down?

Sharon Morris, a 38-year-old mother who works part time and attends the University of the District of Columbia, said losing aid could keep her from school.

"I probably wouldn't be able to finish my degree - or it would take me a lot longer," Morris said. "I would have to work full time and go to school part time."

But Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said colleges can do more. They benefit from student aid. I do think they have a responsibility to keep their prices down," Kassebaum said.

At public universities, tuition is up because states have provided less money since the early 1990s. States cut education spending because of increases in Medicaid and prison spending.

That has slowed somewhat, however, and many state colleges had smaller tuition increases this year. The 6 percent jump nationally reflects big tuition increases in California and New York

Show girls something Savage

Remember when Ricky Schroeder was on the television sitcom "Silver Spoons" in the early '80s? He played a blue-eyed, pre-pubescent do-gooder against Jason Bateman's naughty streak. Recently, Ricky (now called "Rick") had a bit role in the movie "Crimson Tide," where he recites a long string of obscenities. People who knew Rick was in the tiny scene looked for him in the credits and chuckled a bit at the irony.

In the controversial movie "Showgirls," where all the actresses (except women over 40 and a school girl) are shown nude, we get the similar effect of previous roles influencing current roles. In "Showgirls" it's on a larger and more dangerous scale. Elizabeth Berkley, who stars in the movie, is none other than Jesse Spanno from "Saved by the

Those who suffered through teen-age hell in the '80s grew up with "Saved by the Bell." It was the show "Silver Spoons" and "Different Strokes" proudly passed the golden milkshake to as the new leader in plots about prom, cheerleading and pulling the fire alarm. The candy-coated sitcom sports an array of culturally diverse high-schoolers, each equipped with their own shallow personality. One of these was Jesse - the

a new opportunity to see Berkley in "Showgirls." But instead of playing a modern teenager with a mind of her own, she's an exhooker trying to be a topless dancer in Vegas who gets used by men along the way. So what? She's just an actress who isn't getting typecast, right? Wrong. She's every college boy's junior-high fantasy dancing naked for them on the big screen. She is, in both the literal and movie semantic senses of the word, a virgin-whore.

The impact Berkley's past character had on the theater full of college guys was blatantly obvious. Right away they were shouting one-liners at the screen like "Hey, I wonder if she'll give Mr. Belding (the principal) a lap dance!" and "I bet Slater's won-dering where she is!" Whenever men in the audience shouted derogatory comments at the screen, they never called Berkley's character Nomi. They called her Jesse

What does this mean? It reinforces the insane idea that women are supposed to be virginal cheerleaders and naked showgirls Now, those who watched the first seasons at the same time. Though women and men been ingrained in our culture since sex the movie takes this idea to a new level. It links young girls who want to go to college and have feminist views with paid sex and big boobs, then puts it on the big screen for men to ogle. Welcome to the impossible,

The movie also affects younger people who know Berkley as Jesse Spanno, but aren't old enough to get into the movie. These 10- to 16-year-olds will still be exposed to the movie in previews and rentals. They'll still get in on the virginwhore mythology and probably take it more to heart because it's forbidden to them.

Sex is sex, and in movies it's everywhere. But in "Showgirls," the first NC-17 movie to be widely released, sex is more with Jesse Spanno than it is with Nomi. Perhaps Joe Ezterhas and Paul Verhoeven used Berkley because they knew her previous name in television would attract more young male viewers (as if naked girls aren't enough). It's pretty obvious they didn't use her for her acting ability. The sad part is, the movie drawing large crowds all over the nation; sign it's being accepted in our culture.

Would America ever widely accept a movie called "Showboys" starring Fred Savage? Probably not.

Words change naturally official languages stunt growth

The tenor of our attitudes toward bilingualism are in flux. This recurs every time the number of immigrants increases, and we worry about preserving the English language.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole last week remarked that bilingualism should be discouraged, especially in public schools. There is debate in Congress about eliminating bilingual ballots and tax returns. The reason: the percentage of foreign-born Americans is at its ger of being contaminated by foreign tongues. What this fear may hide is an undercurrent of xenopho-

English is the most dominant language today. It has surpassed French as the language of diplomacy. In commerce and computer texts, it is the No. 1 choice. Chinese native speakers outnumber English native speakers, but dissemination throughout the world gives English greater authority. Yet, here sits 5 percent of the world's population complacently and arrogantly refusing to learn other languages; clinging fearfully to a bogus notion of language purity.

The arguments for preserving that purity have no historical basis.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

There is no historical basis for making English the offical language of the United States.

Throughout the next 15 centuries, the language was mutated by invasions such as the Norman French victory over the Anglo-Saxons at the Battle of Hastings in 1066; cultural upheavals like the Renaissance, which introduced a fresh crop of Greek and Latin words and elements; and accretion through the colonial expansion of the British Empire.

To say English is not a living, malleable, pulsating language subject to growth (not deterioration, not contamination) through migrations and emergent technologies is ludicrous. One has only to look at the English of 14th-century author Geoffrey Chaucer to discover that truth: "Whan that Aprill with his shoures soote / The droghte of March hath perced to the roote, / And bathed every veyne in swich licour / Of which vertu engendred is the flour. ..." That is English - or rather — it was, in one phase of its evolution.

Move along little freshman, get on out in four years

"A good education is not vocational training because training is not education. Animals and slaves are trained, people are educated. The purpose of education is not a job, that's the purpose of apprenticeship. The purpose of education is human freedom.'

Milton Meyer said this in 1969 and it seems a good time to pull this wisdom out as a reminder for those in charge at the UI.

In the recent decision to increase tuition by another 3.5 percent, Regent John Tyrrell let us know that $88 makes "little difference" as it is " ... a good bargain for the quality of education received." But for the 88 extra bucks ($436 for out-ofstate students), I wish the regents would put that money where their mouths are and focus on education.

credentials - in health science and research but little has been said about teaching.

And when undergrads are slipped into the conversation, it's to brainstorm on how the university can push them out in four years. This cattle mentality works against education's loftier goals, and almost works to usurp those goals.

Whoa, pardner. It looks as if only a measly 32 percent of students are doing their part to keep up he UI's image and get their degrees in four years. And worse, 62 percent are taking six years.

The Iowa state Board of Regents has shown a growing concern for the traditional four-year deadline and implemented a new plan this fall.

The UI hopes to get the four-year graduate rate to at least 50 percent, and more than half of this year's freshman class has been enticed to sign up. It sounds great; anyone who signs the bottom line is assured of getting the courses they need when they need them: if they meet 11 requirements.

Only time will tell if the program will succeed. In the meantime the UI should focus on why so many are dallying behind. I've chosen to brand four groups in order to help the university out. Need to find their own patch of clover

This is the most crucial and most overlooked problem with the four-year plan. Not everyone walks into college knowing exactly what they want to do and the obligatory taste test of GERs isn't always enough. It takes some people a walk down the wrong path before they really know what they want.

I recall trudging behind an orientation adviser along with the other wide-eyed incoming freshmen more than four years ago. We were assured many of us would change our majors "at least once."

The four-year track requires freshmen to state a major and change only if they can still make it out in four years.

Pull their own weight

More and more students are working their way through college today, especially in light of recent cuts in financial aid. Their struggle made the regents proposal for a $300 post-graduate bonus for four-year grads all the more insensitive. The idea was trashed in a newer version of the plan, thankfully, but it seemed to emphasize the fact that the regents don't really understand today's students.

Student voices needed in UISG

Two weeks ago, the Iowa state Board of Regents met at the UI to discuss tuition increase for next school year.

The increase was set at 3.5 percent for in-state and 5 percent for outof-state students — the lowest proposed rates in the past 10 years.

Despite the modest proposal, we are concerned about the faster growing price of an out-of-state education. We are the only regent institution to have a separate increase rate for out-of-state students.

The 5 percent increase really adds up. Tuition for non-residents is proposed to increase about $450 next year and every consecutive year. That means incoming freshmen can expect to owe the university about $2,000 more for their senior year than their first year; $2,000 can put a strain on any student's budget.

The regents argue that state dollars cannot be used to subsidize a non-resident's college education. This makes sense because in-state students receive state dollars since they pay state taxes. Out-of-state students should not be entitled to money from the state of Iowa.

But it is important to realize non-residents are paying well over 100 percent of the total cost to educate a student. The rate of increase in out-of-state tuition is increasing much faster than the actual rate of cost

Our campus is largely composed of non-residents - between 35 percent to 40 percent of the population is out-of-state, a majority of which come from the Chicagoland area.

The regents believe they can raise out-of-state tuition without enrollment decreasing because their is demand from non-residents to attend the UI. They are looking to take advantage of this situation.

It was very difficult to argue with the regents about the proposals because we want to remain in good relations with the board for future endeavors. Good relations will prevent any unassuming increases in tuition, but it is crucial out-of-state students' voices are heard.

The problem remains, however, that all students are largely unaware of any issue surrounding tuition. Some of the administration has the impression students do not pay close attention to their bill. If students at the UI want to be taken seriously, they need to start voicing their concerns. The university works on behalf of the students - their work is supposed to reflect what students want and need, so people must let them know what they are thinking.

Tim Williams is the president of UISG.

Discrimination persists despite laws

If only ensuring equal rights and opportunities for all citizens were as easy as Todd Versteegh seems to believe. Unfortunately, it never has been and, most likely, never will be.

Even the most cursory look at United States history shows true equality has never been a given. Today, it remains largely a matter of interpretation. Though there may be general agreement that discrimination on the basis of qualities like gender or race is unjust and even un-Constitutional, there's little consensus on how the law should address it.

Like Versteegh, I believe all citizens should be guaranteed protection from discrimination. However, I realize putting this basic principle into aw is tricky and often controversial. For instance, I feel legal protection should include bans on discrimination in housing, employment and public accommodation. Many conservatives, perhaps including Versteegh, would disagree with me there.

Where Versteegh sees protection for "groups," I see protection for qualities that make up individuals. Stating qualities like gender, race, religion, age, sexual orientation and gender identity do not constitute a basis for discrimination protects every one of us. After all, each of us possesses these qualities.

While it may sound good to maintain that all United States citizens have been protected from Day 1, that simply isn't the case. Rather, our history has shown that the ideals outlined by the founders of our nation need constant interpretation and application. Anti-discrimination laws at the federal, state and local level are necessary if we want to assure true

Community discussion fuels new war on drugs

A remarkable thing happened in Pocahontas, Iowa, Sunday. A local group, the Chautaqua Club, hosted a thought-provoking discussion of the

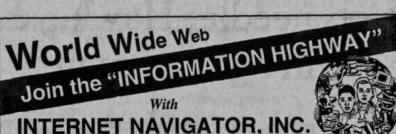

The headline speaker, Judge James Gray of the Orange County, Calif., Superior Court, told about 130 people the war on drugs is a failure. ludge Gray said our drug prohibition has made cocaine the most profitable crop in the history of the world. Money from the underground market in drugs has not only made organized crime incredibly wealthy and powerful but has also corrupted police, politicians and foreign gov-

Drug prohibition has resulted in an endless stream of drug dealers attracted by big, easy money. No matter how many drug dealers we arrest and imprison, more are ready to take their places. We now imprison more people per capita than any country except Russia, and the majority are jailed for drug offenses. But building more prisons to deal with drug abuse is like building more graveyards to deal with a deadly disease, according to Judge Gray.

Just because we are willing to look at different options to our current drug policy does not mean we condone drug abuse. On the contrary, those who refuse to consider alternatives are in effect endorsing the status quo, which is leading us toward more drug addicts, increasing crime, higher taxes and the loss of our civil liberties. As Judge Gray put it, if you want to keep getting what you're getting, keep doing what you're doing.

The Pocahontas drug policy symposium did not come up with any solutions, but we have begun the crucial process of talking together and listening to each other's concerns. We encourage you to do likewise in your own community. It will take a grassroots effort to bring about need-

Late in the game, when the wave has died, eight male marching band members spring into action in an attempt to revive the crowd with a coordinated kick line that has been a band tradition for over a decade.

The kick line members, accompanied by a 10piece band, perform their routine during the last half of football games to "The Stripper" from the musical "Gypsy."

"We tend to do the kick line in places where we feel secure and we won't get pelted. We usually do it in the student section late in the game, because their marshmallows and stuff have run out by then."

Ul senior Joe Du Sell, kick line member

Positioned side by side and often surrounded by the pompon squad, the dancers perform the suggestive routine, which involves a series of pelvic thrusts and arm movements, then they get into the kick line itself. The dancers finish off the routine by turning their backs to the crowd and fanning their hands behind them.

Known as "Soul Train" by his fellow band members, UI senior Joe

Du Sell has been a kick line dancer since his sophomore year. Du Sell said he got his nickname when he danced in the aisle of the bus on a bet during his freshman year. The incident led to his position in the kick line the following

"I enjoyed dancing and there was space available," he said. "After the 'soul train' incident, I was seen as the logical replacement.'

The kick line performs in various spots around Kinnick Stadium, but Du Sell said they often choose areas where the crowd

"We tend to do the kick line in places where we feel secure and we won't get pelted," he said. "We usually do it in the student section late in the game, because their marshmallows and stuff have run out by then."

The dancers are all males - a tradition that Du Sell said is

'We're not cheerleaders, but we're an attempt at a dance team," he said. "It's a tradition and it's neat to have guys just do it. We just go out there and have fun.

Often the kick line goes unnoticed by UI students, Du Sell said.

"It depends on the situation of the game, but we usually get a better response from the adults who have seen it for a while," he said.

UI senior Jason Plosch, who plays the trumpet during the kick line routine, said he enjoys spontaneously performing for

"I love it," he said. "It's a thrill for the band because it's something different than what we normally do. It gets us out of character. It's fun for us and for the crowd.'

UI senior and drum major Charlie Taylor said the kick line has been a marching band tradition for at least 10 years, and believes it is unique to the UI.

"It's really neat when you see it," he said. "It entertains a lot of people. We usually get a good crowd response." Although Taylor is not part of the kick line this year, he was involved with it during the past two years. "I get enough attention as a drum manager," he said. "I decided to leave some of it for the members. When I did participate in it, I had a lot of fun.' The marching band also performs the kick line at the Recreation Building, across the street from Kinnick Stadium, during the pregame show, an hour before every home game.

This routine is different than the show at the game, Plosch said. During this show, females in the marching band bend down on one knee on both sides of the dancers and swing white gloves back and forth in rhythm with the music. In the middle of the dance, the females yell "Take it off!" and the males who aren't dancers yell back, "Leave it on!"

Plosch said he doesn't know how this exchange of responses

September Under the tattoo needle: Hawkeye football players can't get enough

Evelyn Lauer The Daily Iowan

Members of the Hawkeye football team are sacrificing their bodies - not just on the field, but in the tattoo parlors, as well.

Tattoos are a growing trend among the UI football team, with about 90 percent of the players baring their skin to the tattoo artist's needles, UI sophomore Tim Dwight, a Hawkeye flanker, said.

"People who wear tattoos have a trademark of having bad-ass attitudes. That's the attitude of our team," he said. "We want to do things that people won't expect. We took a back seat and it's time for us to take control. It's something for the team to come together on."

A Big Ten Conference symbol colored in blue and yellow brands Dwight's right arm, which he hopes will bring him luck, he said. "Hopefully sometime in my flanker career we will win conference," he said. "Then I'll put 'champion' or a ed to get one, but I never had the Dwight got both of his tattoos this summer at Young Guns Tattoo Studio, 336 S. Clinton St., No. 21. Chip Swarzentruber, owner of Young Guns, said about 35 UI football players have come to his studio for tattoos of black panthers, tribal designs and other various symbols. He is surprised more of the football players don't ask for Hawkeye tattoos when they come

"Few related their tattoos to football. They tend to relate them more to themselves," he said. "Tattoos have become a great form of individual expression and college is just a stepping stone in their lives, so they tend to get something that means more to them as individu-

Swarzentruber said football players, such as UI junior Bill Ennis-Inge, defensive end, came to Young Guns for a black panther tattoo, which symbolizes power and took 21/2 hours to complete.

However, big, powerful football players even cringe under the needle, Swarzentruber said.

"The football guys come in and act all macho. Then I start and they'll tell me it hurts," he said. "I pick on them a lot -

'Come on guys, you get hit harder every day on the field.'" Once the outline of the tattoo is completed, the pain decreases, Dwight said. "It feels like a bee sting at first," he said. "It's not too bad; you shut it out after a while. It is painful the next day." Despite the pain, Dwight said he is planning on getting more tattoos next summer. "They're addictive. I want to get a hawk on my back and a tribal design on my ankle," he said. "I always want-guts until this summer.' Swarzentruber, who has 30 tattoos of his own, agrees with he got because it was "something

"I don't know what it is, but you want to get more," he said.

Most people who come in to Young Guns to get tattoos are worried about how their parents will react, Swarzentruber said.

"Everyone comes in and says 'My parents are going to kill me,' " he said. "I don't see too many dead people, though. I just see people coming in for more.

Dwight said his parents didn't get too upset by his tattoos. 'My mom freaked at first. 'Timothy, what are you doing to your skin,' " he said, mocking his mother. "She liked my Big Ten tattoo, but didn't like the barbed wire."

Dawkins attempts comeback with Celtics

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) - Darryl Dawkins, that old rim-quaking, quote-making interstellar traveler, has landed in Boston. And the man known as "Chocolate Thunder" might even stay awhile if he can lay off the chocolate.

He showed up at the Celtics camp Thursday, overweight, two days late, and determined to control his own fate as he seeks, at age 38, to return to the NBA.

Dawkins, who called his homeland "Planet Lovetron," says he's mellowed after five seasons playing in Italy and one with the Harlem Globetrotters. He's not as fluent in trash-talking — perhaps because European referees couldn't understand him.

And the days when he gave colorful names to his powerful dunks are gone. "I'm naming layups now," the 6-foot-11 center says.

He was with Philadelphia on Nov. 13, 1979 when he shattered a backboard in Kansas City, a dunk he rhythmically christened "Chocolate Thunder Flying, Robinzine Crying, Teeth Shaking, Glass Breaking, Rump Roasting, Bun Toasting, Wham, Bam, I Am

Can he still break backboards? "No," he admitted. "I can rattle them pretty good, though."

A football team that is 2-0 and has outscored its opponents by a combined score of 61-23 shouldn't be looking for answers, but the Iowa Hawkeyes are.

"I still don't know what kind of a football team we have," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said at Tuesday's press conference. "As far as having a quality opposition against us, we haven't faced that yet."

The quarterback, senior Cory Ledbetter, ranks as one of the top quarterbacks in the nation in passing and total offense.

His 315.75 yards of total offense per game is fifth in the nation.

One question facing the Hawkeyes is how good their defense, which has been the heart of the team so far, can perform against quality opposition.

CHICAGO - Randy Myers gave up a home run and then fought a fan who ran onto the field. The Chicago Cubs fell behind in the sixth, seventh, eighth, 10th and 11th innings but still managed to beat the Houston Astros.

Rarely had anyone seen anything like Chicago's 12-11 victory Thursday.

"That was crazy," Houston's Craig Biggio said. "Just when you thought you'd seen it all, along comes something like that. What a weird day."

Appropriately enough for such a wild game, the NL wild-card playoff berth was at stake. Chicago stayed alive with the win, pending the outcome of Colorado's game against San Francisco later Thursday. Houston went into the day a game behind the Rockies. The Astros and Cubs meet three more times to end the regular season.

1982 — even without the incident. The incident makes it that much

The incident came in the eighth inning after Myers, who leads the NL with 38 saves, gave up a tworun homer to pinch-hitter James Mouton, putting Houston ahead 9-

A man identified as John Murray, a 27-year-old bond trader from Riverside, Ill., ran onto the field toward Myers.

Myers saw Murray coming and was worried that the fan might have a weapon. So Myers threw down his glove and drove Murray to the ground with a forearm. The 6-foot-1, 230-pound Myers, who has game. The Aggies were ranked 98th in the Sports Illustrated preseason poll, and even New Mexico State coach Jim Hess is confident of an Iowa victory.

Howard Johnson and Shawon Dunston raced toward the scrum. Along with security personnel, they separated Myers and Murray.

"Number one, we're doing this for the payday," Hess said. "In no way are we a Big Ten team."

All the odds are against an Aggie win. A pathetic team, playing on the road against an upstart Big Ten opponent, with their own star player a wide receiver the victim of vicious double teams by Aggie opponents. I suppose the odds of New Mexico State leaving Kinnick Stadium with a win is about as likely as a private plane crashing into an Iowa City home.

I have a horrible feeling Saturday's game is going to be pretty boring by the end of the third quarter. The Hawkeyes should be up by substantial amount, Ryan Driscoll will be at QB - which means Hayden Fry will have a stranglehold on the passing game the cheerleaders shoving the same and the rent-a-cops will be back from their halftime all-you-can-eat lasagna bar

Before the game, they're great. If Iowa is winning, even better. However, if we're losing, there's nothing I hate watching more than a cheerleader thrust up into the air with her big smile, her fingertips waving to the crowd.

I feel like taking them by the shoulders, shaking them like a jug of instant Kool-Aid, and screaming, 'We're losing! Do you understand? We're losing. And maybe, just maybe when the Hawkeyes trail on the scoreboard, the fans don't want attitude down our throat that our parents gave to us trying to cheer us up after we lost that all-impor-

But I digress

Let's face it. If the Iowa coaching staff loosens its grip on the offensive leash, New Mexico State has no chance. The potent Hawkeye offense is just finding its stride, while the defense continues to spite its critics.

Iowa football compiled a 16-17-1 and get out there and compete. It's also great for the students and the fans - they really come alive, and it's nice to have so much support from them."

However, City High coach Larry Brown said the rivalry is a distraction for players, and the City coaching staff has been trying to conduct business as usual at practices this week.

"I think they're all just trying to ignore it as much as possible,' Brown said about the players. "A lot of the seniors are used to it from the past couple of years, and they understand where the media's coming from. ... We're just doing what we do to prepare every week."

"We've been approaching this as a normal week," Morgan said. "The players have to realize there are distractions, but I think this is a much bigger game for the fans and the media than, perhaps, for the participants."

Although West has the topranked offense in the conference, Morgan said the team's strengths can't be measured by rushing yards and tackling percentages.

Burmeister said West's biggest strength will be its desire to beat a power like City.

A win would be a bigger deal to West than to City," he said. "City just expects to beat West. The players, coaching staff and whole East side of town looks down on West. A win for West would be very exciting since City is known as having the best athletic program in the state."

Like Burmeister, Dwight is pulling for his alma mater.

"I think City will win, but it's going to come down to whoever wants it the most in the fourth quarter," Dwight said. "The first half won't prove anything because everyone will be sky-high on adrenaline. But I think we'll pull it out.

The Hawkeyes host Michigan today at 3 p.m. and Michigan State at noon on Sunday. Both games are at Grant Field.

Iowa is looking to lasso its third straight win in Big Ten play and take control of the Big Ten race after two tough wins on the road last week. Hawkeye coach Beth Beglin said it won't be that easy.

"It's going to be a battle this weekend," Beglin said. "Michigan and Michigan State are improving every year and they will be ready when they come in here. But I think we'll be just as ready. If we continue to play like we have been, then we should be fine.'

Michigan State rolls into Iowa City 5-3 overall, 0-1 in conference play. The Spartans are led by Rayna Hiscox, who has racked up six goals and dished out five assists. Hiscox leads the team with 17 points. Michigan State was victimized by the Hawkeves three times last year, including a 3-2 loss to Iowa in the Big Ten tournament. Michigan State is 0-27-1 with the Hawkeyes in the overall series.

Iowa sits at 7-2 overall, 2-0 in the Big Ten and is carrying momentum after road victories at Ohio State and Penn State. Hawkeye senior Nancy McLinden said there is no chance for a letdown after the two important road wins.

The Iowa volleyball team completes an eight-match homestand with two Big Ten matches this weekend.

Friday night, the Hawkeyes (8-5, 1-1) play host to Michigan. The Wolverines stand 8-5 overall, 2-1 in the Big Ten. Saturday night, the Hawkeyes will have their hands full with Michigan State. The Spartans have coasted to a 14-1 record, 3-0 in conference play.

MINNEAPOLIS — Eddie Murray hit his third homer in two games and Alvaro Espinoza hit his second of the season as the Cleveland Indians beat the Minnesota Twins, 12-4, in a game marred by the beaning of Kirby Puckett.

Puckett suffered a broken upper jaw when he was hit in the left cheek by Dennis Martinez in the first inning, two batters after Martinez hit Chuck Knoblauch.

Twins starter Frank Rodriguez hit Albert Belle with the first pitch of the second inning, leading to the ejection of Indians pitching coach Mark Wiley.

"Babe" 1/2 out of * If someone had told me there'd be a better kids' flick this year than "A Little Princess," I would have laughed, but here it is. It's about a talking pig who thinks he's a talking sheepdog. The special effects are impressive - but cheesy enough to be fun - and the script, by director Chris Noonan and George "The Road Warrior" Miller is fast, clever and cute

"Clockers" 1/2 out of **

Based on Richard Price's popular and critically acclaimed novel, the latest "Spike Lee joint" is the tale of two brothers; one a nihilistic "clocker" (a low-level drug dealer), the other a hard-working family man. The acting, as always in Lee's films, is brilliant. This may be his best film.

PART OF BIJOU MIDNIGHT SERIES

Superfly' swats at blaxpoitation

Aaron Han Joon Park

The Daily Iowan

Break out the polyester suits and leather bell-bottoms; the 1972 funk film "Superfly" grooves into Bijou's midnight series this weekend. Ron O'Neal plays Youngblood

Priest, a successful Harlem drug pusher. From the outside, he has achieved the American dream with our capitalist consumer society. He's got an "eight-track stereo, color TV in every room and (can) snort half a piece of dope every day." His visible material wealth also includes an $18,000 Cadillac convertible, flashy clothes, gold jewelry, and both a white and a black

Despite all these trappings of the good life, Priest isn't satisfied with his situation. To escape the triple bonds of the Harlem underworld, corrupt cops and white racketeers, Priest plans a final drug deal. With $300,000 in cash, Priest and his partner plan to obtain 30 kilos of cocaine and turn it into a cool million. By employing their network of 50 dealers, they plan to split with the profits after a four-month business cycle.

They begin their plan and find trouble. Two of their close friends are iced by the police, they get enlisted to work for "the Man," Priest's partner turns on him, and in the final showdown with the Man, Priest defeats three thugs with his martial arts ability only to face down the Man's revolver.

It seems like his only choices are working for the Man. At this point, Priest reveals his master stroke by identifying the Man as the Deputy Police Commissioner and revealing the $100,000 contract he has on the Man and his entire family should anything happen to him. To drive home his point, Priest states he has

"Superfly" is a film about power - black power. It gives no apologies and it offers no sugar-coated view of life. Not only is black beautiful, but it is powerful. Unlike Sydney Poitier's film characters, Priest represents a viable, sexual, assertive and arrogant black male hero who could go up against the daily life.

white establishment and beat the Man at his own game.

The film touched base with a black audience anxious for some glimpse of black male self-assertion and for some comment on the terrors and tensions of contemporary black urban life. Outstanding cinematic moments include a still photograph sequence of the cocaine pipeline and an extended tub love sequence complete with bubble bath. The latter scene was a favorite of many female audience members and resulted in O'Neal's placement on Playboy's 1970's list of cinema's most important sex

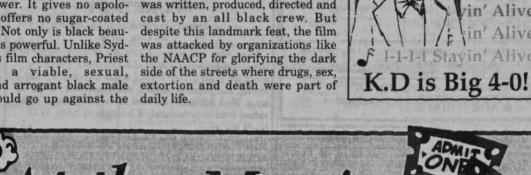

The film features an original soundtrack scored by Curtis Mayfield. It received a Gold Disc standing in one year, selling over 2 million copies. The "Superfly" theme and "Reddie's Dead" each sold over a million copies each.

Within eight weeks of its release in 1972, Gordon Parks Jr.'s film "Superfly" had grossed $5 million from a $500,000 production budget. Eventually grossing $18 million, "Superfly" was the first film that was written, produced, directed and

Steelers want revenge

Associated Press

Nine months can change a lot of things.

Last January, the San Diego Chargers went to Pittsburgh for the AFC championship game and shocked everyone - including themselves by beating the Steelers.

But nobody would be shocked if they win Sunday on their return to Three Rivers. Despite their trip to the Super Bowl, the Chargers weren't supposed to be this good - three straight wins after a narrow openingweek loss in Oakland.

The Steelers, on the other hand, are nowhere near the team that was favored by a touchdown in the title game last year. They've lost the ball 17 times in four games, as many turnovers as they had all of last season and continue without Neil O'Donnell and Rod Woodson.

Nebraska faces formidable opponent

Dave Zelio Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. - It's supposed to be the toughest test of the season so have our hands full.' far for No. 2 Nebraska. So why is Washington State, coming off an upset of nationally ranked UCLA and with a defense that hasn't given up a rushing touchdown all season, a 29-point

"Probably because people have seen film of Nebraska and seen film of us," "They are a great team and we will Nebraska (4-0) leads the nation in scoring (60 points per game), rushing (507.yards) and total offense (688.5

The closest game of the season was a 50-10 rout of Michigan State.

Nebraska tackle Adam Treu figures the Cougars and their No. 4 national quipped Cougar coach Mike Price. ranking in rushing defense (69.7 yards per game) will give the offensive line a chance to work on technique. Technique?

"Well, we're not sure how good we are," Treu said. "We need a tough game that goes four quarters to show us how we compete. Something to gauge ourselves."

The Daily Iowan

After surrendering nearly 30 points a contest last year, the Iowa defense was supposed to be the soft spot in the Hawkeyes' armor.

But through the first two games of the 1995 season, the Iowa defensive line hasn't shown many signs of being penetrable. Iowa is ranked third in the nation in scoring defense, allowing only 11.5 points an outing.

The early improvements from the front five are one of the reasons the Hawkeyes overcame an early deficit against Iowa State two weeks ago.

One noticeable difference is Iowa's rushing defense. A year ago, the Hawkeyes allowed 219.6 yards a game on the ground compared with only 110. 5 yards so far this season.

The Hawkeyes allowed Iowa State's Troy Davis to rush for 139 yards on 25 carries, but 63 of those yards came on a touchdown run early in the game. Iowa also

"Our philosophy is that we want to make as many big plays as we can whether it's stripping the football, recovering fumbles, interceptions, quarterback sacks or tackles for losses," Austin said. " As a defense, we want to make sure that we do that, and the

a new defensive tradition, Austin

"We need to establish our own identity and take great pride in the things we do," Austin said. "Obviously, if you have a great defense week in and week out you're going to have a good chance to win that football game."

Redshirt freshman Jared DeVries, who is team leader with five quarterback sacks, said the defensive line is motivated by its

"We took the saying that we're the question marks and we even made up T-shirts that say 'defense' and have a big question mark on them," DeVries said. "The defense is gaining confidence. We feel confident that if our offense isn't scoring we can score for them."

Ennis-Inge said the true worth of the Hawkeye defense can't be determined until after the season.

"We really can't answer that until the end of the year when we see how the defense played as a whole through all 11 games," he said. "We feel that if we go out there and do our job and give the offense the ball, great things will happen."

The starting defensive linemen for the Hawkeyes this season are DeVries, Lloyd Bickham, Jon LaFleur, Ennis-Inge and Eric Hilgenberg.

Knight returns to Iowa defense following one-year layoff after surgery

Chris Snider

The Daily Iowan

Tom Knight is back in a Hawkeye uniform.

After missing the final five games of last season and the first two of this year because of a knee injury, Knight will see his first action in nearly one full year this Saturday."I was cleared two weeks ago, but I guess we decided to kind of play it safe and take the extra two weeks to make sure I was good and ready to go," Knight said.

Knight, a junior defensive back from Marlton, N.J., first injured his knee in 1993. He tore his PCL against Penn State in the third game of the year and received a medical redshirt, sitting out the remainder of the season.

After going through rehabilitation and missing spring practice, Knight returned for the 1994 season, but aggravated his injury playing on the turf at Oregon. He continued to play, but things only got worse.

I've accepted the things that have happened. The only thing I can do now is move forward.

—Tom Knight, lowa cornerback

"After the Indiana game, it got to the point where the swelling and the soreness was too bad and the doctors decided it was best to have surgery," Knight said:

So last November, Knight had PCL reconstructive surgery on his left knee, during which the doctors took a deceased person's Achilles tendon and put it into Knight's leg.

Knight wasn't told whose tendon it was.

"They did tell me a tiny bit about it and that part was that maybe it was from a younger person," he said.

The hardest part about rehabilitation for Knight was not being able to play on Saturdays.

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Tom Knight will be in a Hawkeye uniform this week for the first time since undergoing knee surgery last November. Knight is listed as the No. 2 cornerback for the game and will see action.

"I think anytime you're injured, it's obviously frustrating, especially in my case when I got hurt and did come back to play last year a little bit," Knight said. "Being on only thing I can do now is make the best of a bad situation."

There was a little concern that Knight, who was a starting cornerback last season before going down, would return full strength.

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Tom Knight makes a tackle last season against Michigan. The Hawkeyes lost the game, and the next week against Indiana lost Knight for the remainder of the season.

But he has quieted the skeptics.

"Since I've been back and they've seen that I'm still the same player I was, it's not a concern for anybody anymore," he said.

But the final test still awaits this Saturday.

"I'll feel a lot better about it mentally when Saturday comes," Knight said.

Going against New Mexico State's passing attack should give Knight an idea exactly where he is in his preparation.

"As a defensive back, anytime we get the chance to play someone who is passing, it's exciting," he said. "This will really be a good test for me. It's something that I'm going to welcome as a challenge because it gives me an idea where I'm at.

"I've been successful in practice, but obviously practice is a lot different than games. It gives me a chance to be out there amidst all the emotions and atmosphere."

In the end, Knight feels having the surgery was well worth it.

"I think it is, only because I think I made the right decision in just doing rehab first," he said.

"At least I knew that I gave it a shot (without surgery)."

Knight is listed as the second string cornerback for Saturday's game and is expecting to get between 20-30 plays on Saturday.

"We have some good guys that have moved up since my absence and have played well," he said. "Really, for me, it's just a matter of getting out there and getting my feet wet."

Knight, who played wide receiver in high school, had offers from other schools to play offense, but instead came to Iowa where he knew he would be a defensive specialist.

"This is one of the few places that recruited me only as a corner, but I think that I made the decision that I was only going to play defense," Knight said. "I've always had more of a defensive mentality. I always got a little more excited playing defense.

"When you're a defensive player, I think it changes your mentality, as far as what you're going to be doing. The offensive guys get all of the attention, but I think you accept that when you play defense. You're more a part of a group."

Why fly when you can run?

With the West coast offense quickly replacing the run-n-shoot, the Iowa Hawkeyes have neglected them both, deciding to simply run the ball down their opponents' throats.

"All the fans and all the media thought we could just throw the ball deep or make long runs," Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman said. "We knew going in (to the season) that to be a Big Ten contender, we had to get the power running game going, get the two-to-three tough yards every other play and rely on our offensive line and our fullbacks and our running backs.

"Then, when we have to throw the ball, we can do it with consistency and gain positive yardage."

The Hawkeyes have relied heavily on the running game early in the 1995 campaign, rushing the ball 102 times, while passing a mere 39 times. With Sedrick Shaw, Tavian Banks and Rodney Filer all having success out of the backfield, and the Hawkeyes easily outscoring their opponents, they have elected not to throw.

"We didn't want to put all the emphasis on the passing game right away because we can always fall back on it," Sherman said.

Shaw has rushed for 102 and 178 yards respectively in Iowa's two season-opening victories, moving up to No. 7 on the all-time Iowa rushing list. He currently ranks No. 4 in the Big Ten and No. 9 in the nation

Filer broke for 113 yards against Iowa State on nine carries and Banks has more than 100 yards on the season despite nursing a sprained ankle against the Cyclones.

With all of the backfield success, Iowa has had little time to get the passing game going, but must shore it up before the start of the Big Ten season to contend.

"Sedrick and Tavian are two tremendous football players. We've got to keep them happy," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said.

"You start talking about receivers, whose going to get the ball? We've got a big 'ole tight end who could possibly be an all-American, and we need to get the ball to him. We've got (Willie) Guy, (Tim) Dwight and (Demo) Odems who are three excellent receivers. We need to get the ball to them.

"Sherman, he needs to throw the ball. And how are you going to run the guys when Sherman is throwing? So, we've got some good problems."

Sherman and the Iowa passing game has had to take a backseat to the rushing game. With Iowa constantly pounding the ball on the ground, Sherman's opportunities have been limited.

"I don't really think about it, but it is in the back of your mind," Sherman said.

"Tim is a good example because he can make outstanding plays if you just get the ball in his hands somehow. I go the the sidelines and tell coach Fry we need to get the ball into Tim's hands and he agrees. So we'll think of little schemes to get the ball in those guys' hands to make the plays."

Currently, Sherman has attempted fewer passes than any first-string quarterback in the Big Ten. He has 20 completions in 38 attempts for 379 yards, one touchdown and three interceptions.

When used, the passing game has been effective. Sherman has thrown for more yards per attempt than any quarterback in the league, but he's done it against UNI and Iowa State. The Hawkeyes are averaging close to 10 yards per attempt and 19 yards per completion.

Dwight leads the Hawkeyes in receiving yards and is No. 9 in the conference averaging 49.5 yards per game. Scott Slutzker and Guy are averaging 43 yards per game, and Odems is averaging 42 yards per game.

But as the season trudges on, Fry expects someone to emerge as the top receiver.

"As we go along things will change," Fry said. "We're just looking for someone to come front and center so we don't have to split time (between Guy and Dwight)."

Sherman said that the players understand if they don't get the ball all the time.

"Everyone understands it's a team game," he said. "One game might be Tim's game and another game Willie might catch all the balls or Sedrick might get all the yards rushing. It's one of those things where we've got to spread it out, but at the same time, we've got to win games, that's most important."

With one more game to go before the Big Ten season begins, the Hawkeyes need to elevate their passing game, while at the same time keeping the running game sharp.

"We do want to work on passing game, so we're able to stand by it. We have great athletes on the outside, so if we get the ball in those hands good things will happen," Sherman said.

That means getting the passing game back to the level it was last season, when Sherman threw for over 600 yards in the final two games. The Hawkeyes will need a more balanced attack in order to contend with Big Ten opponents.

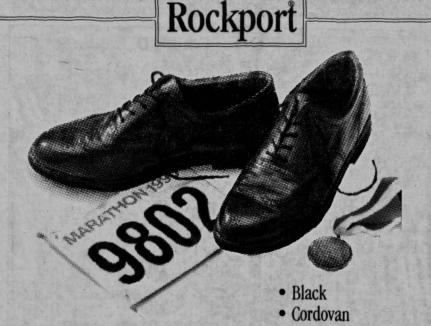

"When we get into the Big Ten season, the defenses are tougher and the personnel we play against are tougher so we're going to have to fine tune some things and be more fundamentally sound," Sherman said. Photos by Jonathan Meester The Daily Iowan

"I really didn't know until all the recruiters started coming," he said. "I just played and had fun. I wasn't thinking about playing college ball."

He considered attending most of the Texas schools, Oklahoma State and two Big Ten schools before finally settling on Iowa.

"Believe it or not, I considered attending Minnesota early in the process, but then I found out how cold it gets there," Filer said. "It gets cold here, but not that cold."

When it came time to choose, Filer followed in the footsteps of Iowa noseguard Maurea Crain, who attended Filer's high school.

Filer also liked the amount of confidence Hayden Fry showed in his abili-1993.

This season, Filer was faced with the task of replacing one of the most successful fullbacks in Iowa history, Kent Kahl.

"They're both very good blockers and they run very hard and they're great athletes," Sherman

"I had great confidence in Kent last year that we could give him the ball on third-and-two, when we need 3 yards, and he could do that. And Rodney is the same type of person. He wants the ball in those types of situations."

Filer felt some pressure to replace Kahl, but not by his team-

"By the media more than by the team," Filer said. "The team knew what I could do. It was just a matter of getting out there and doing it."

Filer takes a somewhat different approach to playing fullback than Kahl did. Kahl was a straight up runner, but Filer, who was first string fullback and second string running back in high school, can also show a few moves.

But that doesn't mean Filer doesn't enjoy taking people headon at times.

"If I can make more yards running over people, I'll do that," Filer said.

This season, Filer has found himself being pushed by freshman Mike Burger, who made the switch from tight end to fullback.

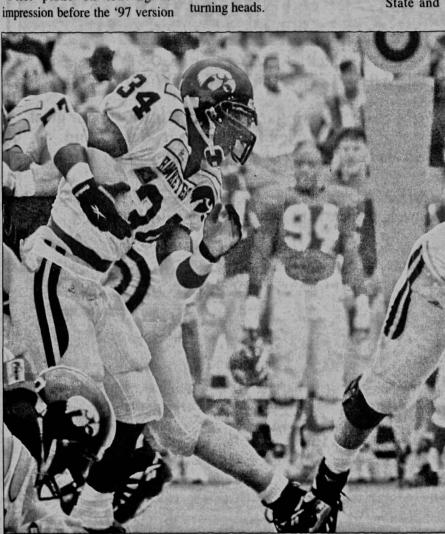

"I look at it as not full competition, but competition in some ways," Filer said. "Burger is a great blocker, because he was a tight end. I like to run the ball. He just pushes me to be a better blocker, to be a true fullback, a hard-nosed blocker."

Burger is also benefiting from the competition.

"I can learn from him and hopefully he can learn a little bit about me," Burger said.

The switch from back-up to starter hasn't been too difficult for Filer.

"I really haven't changed anything," he said. "I just work hard. I might speak up more, trying to get everyone ready to play."

Week off gives Hawkeyes recovery time

Roxanna Pellin

The Daily Iowan

A week off suited freshman fullback Mike Burger just fine.

Burger suffered a concussion against Iowa State Sept. 16 that knocked him out of the game.

"We were warming up, and the next thing I know it's about the second quarter, so I blanked out for the first whole quarter. It was scary once you realize what happened. I was just kind of spacing out."

After reviewing the film, Burger's still unsure when the injury occurred.

"We must have hit just perfect with our helmets or something," he said. "Maybe my head hit the turf or I hit someone else's helmet."

Iowa coach Hayden Fry said he didn't even know Burger was hurt while the freshman was in the

"He couldn't even answer me on the sidelines, yet when I told him the play, he ran in," Fry said. "There's no telling what he told (Matt) Sherman.'

Burger, of Harlan, Iowa, moved from tight end to fullback this season, where he backs up junior starter Rodney Filer.

Despite the injury, Burger is anxious to play against the Aggies.

"I'll go into that first play just as hard or harder than I did," he said. "I'm ready to get back into it. I could have got a lot more playing time at Iowa State, but I got hurt. I'm ready to get back on the

Fry said Tuesday overall the team is healthy, including cornerback Billy Coats, who missed the Iowa State game with an ankle

Freshman running back Denvis Manns rushed for 139 yards on 21 carries in the Aggies' 36-24 loss to New Mexico last week. Manns is the third player in school history to rush for more than 100 yards in a game on more than one occasion. He had 115 yards against Nevada.

Manns, of Lufkin, Texas, caught the eye of Fry in high school.

"Their freshman running back, we came very close to offering a scholarship to," Fry said. "He didn't start the week before last, but in two weeks he's rushed for more than 100 yards. As they get used to coach (John Paul) Young's defensive schemes, they'll become a very fine football team. I just hope they don't gel against us."

Quarterback Cody Ledbetter became the Aggies' all-time total offense leader with 379 yards against New Mexico.

"I think he's one of the top five quarterbacks in the country," Aggies' coach Jim Hess said. "If he's tall enough, he has some pro possibilities. That's for the pros to decide."

But Fry hasn't lost confidence in any of his kickers.

"They don't miss in practice. They're just super," Fry said.

"The only way you can evaluate a guy though is what he does on game day. I used to be a real good pre-game warmup passer. When the bullets started flying, I wasn't too good."

The astroturf in Ames played a big role in Iowa's performance, Fry said.

Aggies' Davis makes first trip to Kinnick after passing up the Hawkeye program

Roxanna Pellin

The Daily Iowan

Lucious Davis' trip to Iowa City this weekend is one that he could have made as a senior in high school.

But the subzero temperatures of the lowa climate kept New Mexico State's leading receiver in school history from making a parecruiting stop in lowa City.

Davis

"They recruited me in high school, but I don't think they remember me," Davis said. "I had one visit left, and I had to pick between Iowa and New Mexico State. I didn't pick Iowa because my high school coach said it gets too cold there. Coming from Houston, I couldn't handle that."

The Aggies should be grateful for Davis' decision. He is the school's all-time leader in receiving yards with 2,084 and touchdown catches (21). A third-year starter, Davis has 110 career catches, fourth best in Aggie history. Before the season began, he was unanimously picked as an all-Big West first team selection.

"He's very good at reading coverage," Aggie coach Jim Hess said. "He has a very big knack for scoring touchdowns. He scored three against Florida last year."

Now he's shooting for the career reception record of 130 held by Alvin Warren. Davis needs 20 catches in the next seven games to break the record.

"I think about it all the time," he said. "It's been really difficult lately because I've been double teamed and it's hard to get the ball. That's what's frustrating, I can't do anything. I have no control. I didn't eatch my first pass until six minutes left in the game (against New Mexico).

It's been really difficult lately because I've been double teamed and it's hard to get the ball. That's what's frustrating, I can't do anything.

- Lucious Davis

"Last year I kind of figured, 'I can catch this many per game.'
But this year I can't do that."

The Hawkeyes' scoring defense ranks third in the nation, allowing an average of 11.5 points per game against Northern Iowa and Iowa State. But in passing defense, Iowa is fourth in the Big Ten, allowing 183.5 yards per game.

Davis said he expects to be the target of Iowa's "bump and run, in-your-face type defense."

"I'm hoping we can get them to back off and play deep zone. Hopefully we can threaten them."

The Aggies' 1-3 record also has been a source of frustration for Davis, who has been on New Mexico State teams that have gone 6-5, 5-6 and 3-8.

"I take them all hard," Davis said of the three early losses, "For one, I'm tired of losing, Last year we had a losing season, I would really enjoy it if we go 7-4, 8-3.

"It's frustrating because I'm a senior. I want to leave with a good record. But I'm only one person."

But a losing record doesn't indicate the level the Aggies are capable of playing, Davis said.

"If you could see our games, you'd think the same thing," Davis said. "Our team is known for making mistakes, and they DAVIS' CAREER cost us big time. And when we lose, we lose. We don't lose by three or four points, we lose by 20 or more."

The Aggies opened the season with a 45-17 victory against Texas El-Paso before dropping to Nevada (45-24), Georgia (40-13) and New Mexico (36-24).

Davis said he's excited for the chance to finally check out lowa on Saturday.

"Our team doesn't get to play this kind of competition," he said. "They get to play good teams every Saturday. For us, this is one Saturday out of 11. This (game) can tell you how good you really are."

Reading the defense helps Hawks

If you think college football is still just X's and O's, you may be in for a big surprise.

No longer do coaches simply draw up plays and hope their guys can out-muscle the other team. The entire world is becoming more complicated and high-tech, and college football is keeping up — on the field and in the classroom.

"If they're good students, they become better football players for us on offense," lowa coach Hayden Fry said. "Defense, it's more, 'Go get the guy with the ball.'"

Once a play is called, and the Hawkeyes are at the line of scrimmage waiting for the snap, the mind games start. Time players put in watching films and studying defenses now outweighs time players put in on the practice field and in the weight room.

"You've got physics majors, premed majors out at wide receivers. They've got to read the coverage. The ole tight end's standing up there like a periscope. He's reading the coverage. He's calling out the blitzes," Fry said.

"If the play (the quarterback) has called, run or pass, is not right, he's got to change that sucker or we're going to get knocked in the head."

That's when you see lowa quarterback Matt Sherman calling an audible, or at least appearing to call one.

"Sometimes he'll make dummy calls to make them think we're changing, and then they'll change their defense into what we anticipated the first time," Fry said.

In reality, it all starts even before that, with the play being called. The Hawkeyes have a player — usually back-up quarterback Ryan Driscoll — standing on the sideline with a headset on, sending in signals.

"Some of them are live. Some of them are dummy. Some of them mean something. Some of them don't," Fry said.

If the opposing team wants to find out the play for sure, Fry offers some advice.

"If the guy across the field can read my lips, then he can zero in on us, because I'm calling the plays," he said.

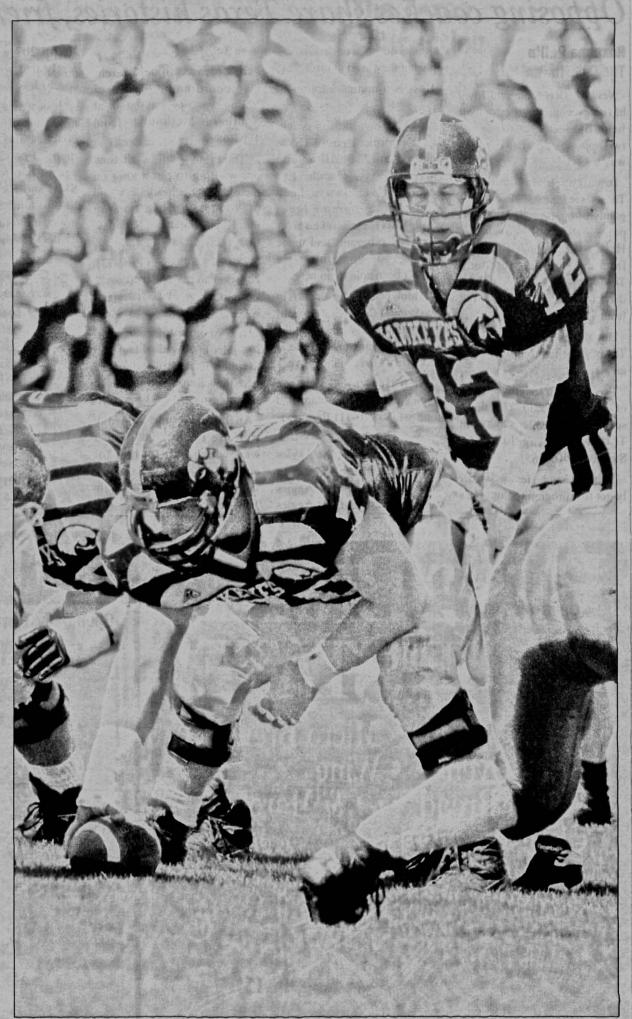

But no coach needs to be told this. Most teams have been doing it for years.

"The other teams watch. They have binoculars on us," Fry said. "All the stadiums we go to where the press box is across from us, it's for a reason. They've got those binoculars right down on the opposing coaches faces, calling signals."

lowa's opposing sideline is across from the press box, meaning the same strategy holds true for the Hawkeyes.

"We do and it's amazing through the years how much we've picked up," Fry said of reading the oppo-

"In fact, I don't mind saying we've won a few ballgames just because we've picked up signals and we flash them into our guys. There's a lot that goes on."

Joseph Strathman/The Daily Iowan

There is a lot more that goes into the lowa offensive strategy than many people realize. Quarterback Matt Sherman surveys the Northern Iowa

"It's not just playing sand lot football. Those other guys don't like to cooperate, but it all adds to the intrigue of football, the study time te the youngsters put in," Fry said.

"You'd be amazed how we can pick just one guy on the defensive team by his stance or alignment will tell us what all the other 10 guys are going to do. You're continually looking for tipoffs or keys that will give you the advantage."

Ties that bind

Opposing coaches share Texas histories, friendship

Roxanna Pellin

The Daily Iowan

New Mexico State and Iowa have never met on the football field. But that's not to say the two opposing coaches don't go way back.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry's Texas ties have given him plenty of opportunities to cross paths with Aggie coach Jim Hess, who graduated in 1966 from the University of North Texas, where Fry was athletic director and football coach from 1973-78.

During his tenure at North Tegas, Fry tried to hire Hess as an assistant.

"He's been a longtime friend of mine," Fry said. "He did a super job at smaller schools in Texas, San Angelo State, Stephen F. Austin.

"I think Coach Hess will really get that program going. He's already doing wonders based were 3-8. on what they used to do."

Hess is a mutual admirer of

"If I have any idols in coaching, it's (former Houston Oilers coach) Bum Phillips and Hayden Fry. Coach Fry because I've always been around his programs (geographically). He's taken over some bad programs and made them good. Something we haven't been able to do here.

"I think he's the best coach in the country. (Penn State coach) Joe Paterno's never had to take a bad program and make it good. (Fry's) very innovative."

When Hess took over the Aggies in 1989, the team had gone winless (0-11) the previous season.

In his first season, the Aggies were 1-10. His best season came in 1992 when the Aggies went 6-5. Last year, the Aggies

New Mexico State's defensive coordinator John Paul Young was Fry's assistant at Southern Methodist from 1967-68.

"Those guys will be all fired up, wanting to put a knot on the old coach's head," Fry said of Young and Hess coming into Kinnick Stadium Saturday.

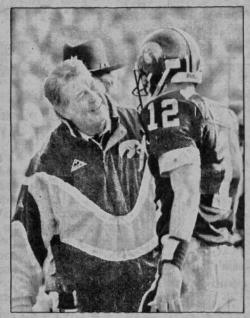

While Fry coached at Southern Methodist (1962-72), Hess began his college coaching career as an assistant at Hess went on to head coaching jobs at Angelo State and Stephen F. Austin, where he was the winningest coach in school history at 47-30-2.

An Iowa victory Saturday will give Fry his 208th career win, which will tie him for ninth in the nation in coaching victories with Brigham Young's LaVell Edwards.

With 207 wins, Fry is currently tied with (former Rice coach) Jess Neely.

"Jess was a great friend of mine, one of the all-time great coaches and a great gentleman," Fry said. "I coached against him for many years at SMU and Rice and never did lose to him. That was one of my claim to fames down there. That's a real honor."

Talented Texans make way to Division I

Roxanna Pellin

The Daily Iowan

Two consecutive state championships, six trips to the state playoffs and more than 20 Divison I players in the last eight years.

Those are just a few of the accomplishments of coach Art Briles and the Stephenville (Texas) Yellow Jackets, according to one of the team's former stars, Iowa freshman offensive lineman Shalor Pryor.

Saturday's game against New Mexico State will bring back more memories of high school for Pryor. The Aggies have five players on the roster from Stephenville, including starters senior quarterback Cody Ledbetter and senior center Heath Haedge.

Pryor has chosen to redshirt this season, but thinks he'll dress for the game Saturday. Just getting a chance to see some of his former teammates will be exciting, he said.

"A lot of people say that the friends you make in college are the ones you keep for life," Pryor said. "But for me, my high school buddies will always be my best friends because of the ties of winning and we had so many players go on to Division I programs."

From Pryor's class, Jobe Lewis and Jeffrey Thompson are defensive backs, and Travis McKinney plays offensive tackle for the Aggies.

Jason Bragg is a freshman at Texas A & M. Lineman Carter Lowery is at Texas Tech, and quarterback Glenn Odell is at Houston.

Last year, the Yellow Jackets' offensive line averaged 6-foot, 3-inches and 250 pounds. The team is riding a 32-game winning streak in Class 4A. Stephenville was ranked No. 5 in the nation last season.

Stephenville, which is about an hour outside of Dallas, has a population of about 17,000 and one high school. And like in most parts of Texas, high school football has tremendous fan support.

"It's a great atmosphere for young people to play football and get an education," Briles said. "It's the only show in town."

The Yellow Jackets play their home games at Carlton State's stadium, which holds 8,000. They have played in front of crowds as large as 35,000 and 38,000 at Texas Stadium and the Astrodome.

Coming out of high school, Pryor could have gone to any school in the nation, Briles said.

"He's a very focused, very mature young man," Pryor said. "He's good for Iowa football because he's going to graduate with honors.

"He was probably t h e strongest kid in Texas."

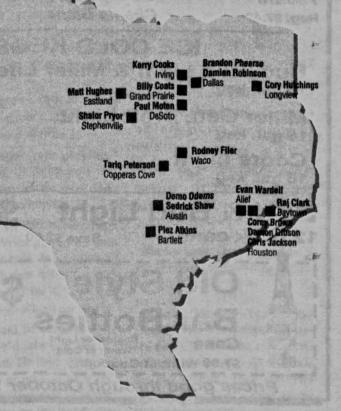

Shylor won the state power lifting title as a senior in high school. He lifted 425 pounds in the bench press. He squatted 750 pounds and 650 dead lift.

He chose Iowa over Miami because "it was more me," Shylor said

"Stephenville is a small town and Miami definitely isn't," Shylor said. "We had great fan support, and I could see that's the way it is here."

The Daily Iowan

When Jared DeVries recorded four quarterback sacks in Iowa's annual spring game, he proved to his teammates that he could be a starting tackle in the Big Ten.

Since then, he's proven the same thing to Northern Iowa and Iowa State.

DeVries is making his presence felt in his first full season with the Hawkeyes and in just two games has established himself as one of the Big Ten Conference's premiere pass rushers.

On five separate occasions, the redshirt freshman from Aplington, Iowa, has shown enemy quarterbacks how to get in touch with the ground. DeVries' five sacks, for 57 yards of loss, rank him third in the Big Ten in total sacks behind Illinois' Simeon Rice and Michigan's Jason Horn. DeVries is also the conference leader in sacks per game with 2.5.

DeVries said the key to his success is just acting instinctively.

"I just think about what my assignment is and hope I won't screw up," DeVries said. "On the pass rush deal it's just thinking what you might be able to use against your guy. More than anything it just happens naturally. You don't have much time to think."

Iowa defensive line coach John Austin said DeVries has been a positive addition to the Hawkeyes' front five.

"He's an aggressive hard charging player, "Austin said. "He gives us big play potential every week."

In addition to his sacks, DeVries has also contributed with nine tackles.

DeVries said he is surprised by Iowa's third-place national ranking in scoring defense, but said the Hawkeyes haven't received many strong tests so far.

"I'm sort of surprised but yet we can't judge ourselves on just these two games," DeVries said.

"Not to take anything away from UNI and Iowa State, but they're not offensive powerhouses."

Despite his impressive past defense statistics, DeVries said he still needed to improve on his run defense.

"That's my weakest point right now," he said. "I lack in experience and I can't really tell certain blocks and get a little too far up field."

Austin agreed that DeVries lacked experience, but said it wasn't a serious drawback.

"It's his first year playing," Austin said, "I think he's just learning every single week, and he'll continue to improve."

At Aplington-Parkersburg High School, DeVries played on both sides of the ball. In addition to being an all-state defensive end, DeVries rushed for 4,575 yards during his high school career.

DeVries said he came to Iowa because he'd always been a Hawkeye fan. He said sitting out last season proved to be a real challenge, adding that he wasn't used to sitting on the bench after starting for four years in high school.

t3. Lethinglover indichine-treat teaers er 29 acht

"It was hard to sit out because there was nothing I could do for the team except help them prepare during the week and practice," he said.

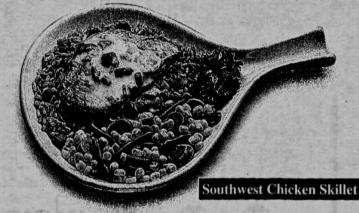

DeVries said recording a sack or a tackle for a loss is equivalent to running for a touchdown, but he noted that every once in a while he wishes he could get a carry on offense.

"I'd like to sometimes," DeVries said. "Maybe we could have a mini version of the 'Fridge'," DeVries said.

But for now, Devries said he'll just concentrate on stifling opposing offenses.

"Coach (Hayden) Fry always jokes around that defensive players don't have to be real smart and all they have to do is tackle the guy with the ball," DeVries said. "I guess that's kind of the philosophy we take."

Food for four quarters

Hawkeye players fill up on Saturday's cereal, watch out for fatty foods

It takes more than pumping iron and running sprints to take on the toughest college football teams in the country.

It takes food; the right food.

Taco Bell and Wendy's are to be left by the waste side, while non-fatty, high-endurance foods take center stage.

So what do the players eat to prepare for a big game?

"I really don't eat that much before the game," freshman fullback Michael Burger said. "My nerves start acting up a little bit in the morning, so I just try to eat some fruit, maybe some eggs."

Most players said they eat a lot Friday nights, then curb their habits come Saturday morning.

"I eat as much as I can the night before, because I know that I don't eat much in the morning,"

Burger said. "Then we have a snack later on Friday night."

Sometimes it seems that we don't eat enough breakfast, because when we're out there in the middle of the third quarter, you have everyone out there hungry.

— Defensive line-

However, as defensive lineman Bill Ennis-Inge points out, it really depends on the individual player.

man Bill Ennis-Inge

"Most people have their own rituals," Ennis-Inge said. "Our pregame meals — and I guess Coach (Hayden) Fry brought this one in — we have steak, spaghetti, corn and baked potatoes."

Some players warned on the dangers of overeating, adding it's not how much they eat, but the types of foods.

"I really don't eat any fatty foods," Burger said. "I try to stay away from candy bars and fast food and all that.

"You're still gonna want to watch your weight, even if you're at the weight you want to be at because you don't want to start gaining fat."

Still, as Ennis-Inge is quick to point out, after years of training their bodies to consume mass amounts of food, the players can eat quite a bit. Just not too much on game day.

"Not too much, because you don't want to overdue yourself," Ennis-Inge said. "Now our bodies are so adjusted to where we're used to eating so much."

Defensive lineman Jared
Devries said the team is offered a generous Saturday morning breakfast spread.

"Saturday morning we get pancakes, waffles, eggs, toast and cold cereal," Devries said. "I don't eat a whole lot Saturday morning, but I do have about a half of a waffle and maybe some fruit."

Devries said he doesn't eat a lot before game time, but adds eating nothing would be a grave mistake.

"If you eat at nine, but don't play until one, you need a little something otherwise you'll get sick," Devries said.

However, Ennis-Inge said some players may let their nerves get the best of them by not eating as much breakfast as they should.

"Sometimes it seems that we don't eat enough breakfast, because when we're out there in the middle of the third quarter, you have everyone out there hungry," Ennis-Inge said.

When 250-300 pound athletes are denied food between an early Friday dinner and Saturday breakfast, hunger is inevitable. So to help thwart the munchies, the players are given a snack Friday night.

"Friday nights we get a cold sandwich and the drink of our choice," Devries said.

Come Saturday morning, most Hawkeyes settle for fruit and cereal, which means enough food must be consumed Friday night to put several all-you-can-eat restaurants out of business.

"There's a lot of food for us on Friday: Steak, pasta, potatoes," Devries said. "That's one reason I don't need to eat more on Saturday."

openers. Get your licks in while you can because next week is the real deal.

October is upon us, and this is

Indiana at Northwestern

Yawner or eye opener? Take your pick. Indiana is tough to read after narrowly escaping Southern Mississippi, 27-26, and losing to Kentucky, 17-10. This will be the Hoosiers' first road test of '95, and the Wildcats won't be gracious hosts. Northwestern is on the same roller coaster.

After stunning Notre Dame, the Cats turned around and blew a 21-point lead to Miami (Ohio), then destroyed Air Force. Indiana claimed a 20-7 win last year, but trails Northwestern 31-35-1 in the overall series.

Whoever doesn't play Jekyll and Hyde comes out on top.

Northwestern, 14-13.

Wisconsin at Penn State

The Nittany lions will be looking to make cheddar cheese out of the boys from Madison. But it won't be that easy.

Penn State lost one of its top defensive players, Aaron Collins, to a broken leg and didn't look impressive in a 57-34 win over Wisconsin still looks shaky even after blowing out SMU. These two teams have only met twice on the grid iron before, with Wisconsin coming out on top both times.

Barry Alvarez has never faced the Nittany Lions as a head coach. Don't look now Barry.

Penn State, 42-21.

Miami (Ohio) at Michigan

The Redskins will face more than the Wolverines' 4-0 record on Saturday. They will face the fruit of Bob Griese's loins. Brian Griese, a redshirt sophomore, will make his first start for the Wolverines in place of the injured Scott Dreisbach.

The youngster shouldn't have a very tough job when you've got guys like all-American candidate Amani Toomer on the other end. Miami already has one Big Ten team under its belt, but a Wildcat is no Wolverine.

Michigan, 35-10.

Arkansas State at Minnesota

This clash of the titans matchup is the first between the schools and promises to be a dandy one. Yeah, right.

The Indians were 1-10 last year and look more like the old Cleveland Indians. Minnesota is seeing orange after a tough loss on the road to Syracuse. The Golden Gophers are led by Heisman Trophy candidate Chris Darkins. Take two Arkansas State's and call me in the mornMinnesota, 30-10.

Notre Dame at Ohio State

This is the marquee game of the week, but it is no game of the century.

The win-one-for-Lou speech has lost its vigor and the luck of the Irish has run out. The Buckeyes are rolling behind Eddie George and Bobby Hoying.

Hoying is approaching 6,000 yards passing and more than 50 TD's for his career. George is over 2,000 yards and 25 TD's and looking better every game. Ron Powlus better have the game of his life.

Ohio State, 31-24.

Ball State at Purdue

Cardinal first year head coach Bill Lynch wasn't around last year to see the 49-21 drubbing that Purdue layed on his team. Things don't look much brighter as Purdue will be ready after a frustrating 35-35 tie with Michigan State last week. The Boilermakers are 1-1-1 and will be tuning up for Minnesota next Purdue, 28-7.

Boston College at Michigan

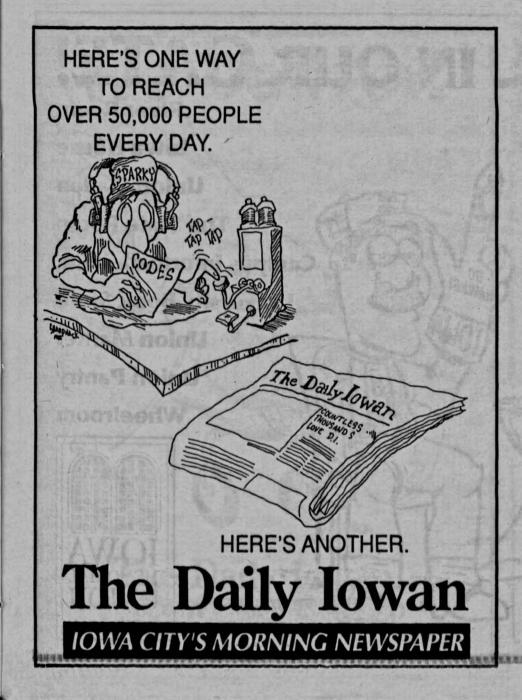

The Spartans won't get a break before the Big Ten wars commence. After being embarrassed by Ohio State in the Kickoff Classic, the Golden Eagles have turned things around.

Boston College upset then-No. 20 Virginia Tech, 20-14, on the road Sept. 7 and lost to Michigan by 10 the following week.

The Eagles are also coming of a bye week. Michigan State finishes its non-conference season after a disheartening tie to

Hawks remain undefeated with victory over Aggies

The last time the Iowa Hawkeyes started the season 3-0 was 1991, when they finished 10-1 and went all the way to the Holiday Bowl, where they tied Ty Detmer and BYU, 13-13.

The last time Iowa went 3-0 before that was 1986, when it finished the regular season 8-3 and beat San Diego State, 39-38, in the Holiday Bowl.

Although the new bowl alliance doesn't allow Big Ten teams to play in the Holiday Bowl, the Hawkeyes are still on their way to 3-0.

New Mexico State is going to come in and try everything under its hat to beat Iowa, but it won't work. The Hawkeyes have had a week off to ponder what they did right and wrong in their two season opening victories, and you're going to see a refined Hawkeye football team on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes mainly tried to run the ball and eat up the clock against UNI and ISU, but with Michigan State and the start of the Big Ten season lingering next week, they are going to open things up and mix the offense up a little more.

Sedrick Shaw will still get his 100 yards and could possibly get the 157 he needs to go over 2,000 for his career, but expect Iowa to try and establish the passing game as well.

Matt Sherman should finally be able to show how much he has matured and if he is ready to lead Iowa to the Rose Bowl in the next two years.

Tim Dwight, who was kept pretty quiet against the Cyclones, is like a bomb ready to explode. Look for him to return a punt for a touchdown against the Aggies.

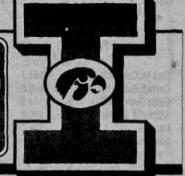

Speaking of punting,

Iowa has the best punter in the Big Ten in Nick Gallery, but he has only had to punt five times because the Iowa offense has been getting the job done. Don't be surprised if Gallery, who likes to and can do more than punt the ball, sees more action at tight end on Saturday than at punter.

Even if the Iowa offense can't make the NMSU defense look bad, the defense will continue to pace the Hawkeyes.

Iowa's defense came into 1995 with a lot of question marks, but it has responded in a big way, holding its opponents to 11.5 points per game.

Even as well as the Hawkeye defense has done, it will be the first to tell you that it has been Pregame's Pick against sup-par teams.

The Hawkeyes are still hungry to show they can perform against Big Ten caliber teams. This is their last warm-up before the conference schedule begins.

And who better to face than one of the best quarterbacks in the nation, Cody Ledbetter.

Ledbetter has an NFL arm, and if the Iowa secondary is going to be good enough to stop the Bobby Hoyings' and the Darrell Bevells' of the Big Ten, it needs to stop the NMSU passing attack.

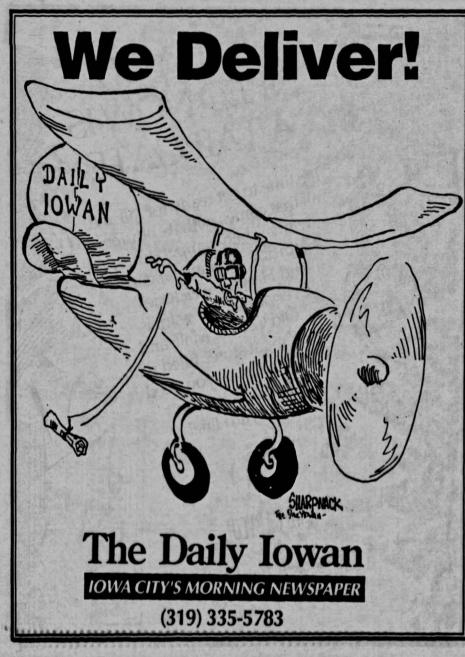

There is a lot of excitement surrounding the Iowa basketball team this year. It has been picked to win the Big Ten in many publications and picked as one of the top teams in the nation. The football team is very aware of this.

Hayden Fry and his boys are not about to let this town get too crazy about roundball this early in the season. The football team plans on making it's season last into late December or early January, forcing the full fledged basketball-mania to hold off a bit.

The Iowa Hawkeyes have never played New Mexico State, but Fry is no stranger to the program, having coached against the Aggies while at SMU and North Texas State.

The Hawkeyes are 1-0 against Big West opponents in their lifetime, and NMSU is 0-1 against the Big Ten. Make those ones into twos — Iowa 42, NMSU 17.

The UI athletic department and KKRQ Radio Iowa City will sponsor the first "Super Chevy Iowa Football Celebration" before the Iowa-New Mexico State game Saturday.

In the space adjacent to Grant Field located west of the Iowa baseball field, the event will begin at 9 a.m. and continue through kickoff.

Live music, appearances by Iowa coaches and athletes and door prizes will be included. Refreshments will be available, and fans can bring their own into

Tickets are $5 and will be sold at the door. More than 1,000 tickets have been sold.

Rick Klatt, assistant athletic director for external affairs, said 10,000 tickets are expected to be sold for the New Mexico State game to spectators who are not season ticket holders.
