Nation's black community applauds verdict

ATLANTA — "Right on, O.J. We were with you!" members of an African-American business organization watching the verdict in a conference room cried out.

"The Juice is loose!" an African-American construction worker exulted, as he crossed a downtown street where a neighborhood group was setting up a celebratory cook-out.

On a subway platform, an African-American woman hoisted aloft the front page of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution's hot-off-the-presses final edition so riders on a passing train could learn O.J. Simpson had been freed. "Tipping it from side to side, she sang out the headline again and again, 'Not Guilty. Not Guilty.'"

And therein lies a lesson, said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Atlanta-based Southern Leadership Conference.

"I think white people have to take a new look," he said, "at how aggrieved and pained the African-American community is about our criminal justice system."

Skepticism of the Los Angeles Police Department, especially evidence of Mark Fuhrman's incendiary racist statements, resonated deeply with African-Americans, Lowery noted, and probably weighed heavily on African-American jurors.

"If Mark Fuhrman hadn't come into the picture ... it might have been puddle, a pittance from the instant jurors began their deliberations.

Jurors didn't need to talk about autorads and daughter ions, DNA and EDTA, blood and gloves and hairs and fibers and a Ford Bronco. They didn't need time to ponder prosecutor Christopher Darden's plea to rescue baby justice from the fire of defense deception.

"Not guilty," they voted, twice, in astoundingly short order.

How much of it was defense attorney Johnnie Cochran, Jr.'s impassioned plea for jurors to send a message against racism and police abuse and how much was Barry Scheck's meticulous exposure of flaws in the way investigators gathered their circumstantial evidence won't be known until the jurors tell their tale. The panel declined to talk to attorneys and reporters immediately after court adjourned.

But one thing is certain: The Dream Team legal defense that cost Simpson much of his wealth also won him his freedom by planting enough seeds of doubt to undermine everything the prosecution had in its arsenal.

"I think they looked at the evidence and said, 'We don't trust the LAPD.' That's the message," said defense attorney Harland Braun, who was in the

Key points in the final arguments

CLARK'S TEAM

Argued that for 78 fateful minutes on the night of June 12, 1994, no one saw O.J. Simpson. He had the "window of opportunity" to kill two people.

Clark drove home the point that the tensions leading to the slayings began building long before the fateful murder night. Darden then argued Brown-Simpson had been worn down by Simpson and she stayed out of weakness.

COCHRAN'S TEAM

Defense fought back, placing the time of the killings later than the prosecution did, and Cochran said Simpson didn't have time to get back home and crash into the wall air conditioner by 10:45 p.m., as Brian "Kato" Kaelin testified.

In the evidence of domestic violence, Cochran said the incidents were in the past and Simpson had not struck his wife since a fight in 1989.

LOCAL WOMAN'S FATAL INJURIES NOT CAUSED BY FIRE

Death in car blaze ruled murder

Christie Midthun
The Daily lowan

The death of a 38-year-old Iowa City woman found in her burned car last week has been ruled a homicide, authorities said.

An autopsy performed last Wednesday by State Medical Examiner Dr. Thomas Bennett and Johnson County Medical Examiner Dr. T.T. Bozek revealed Susan Pearl Kersten died of injuries sustained before the incident.

"The injuries she had were not caused from the fire or from the car running off the roadway," said Johnson County Sheriff Robert Carpenter. "From the first night we considered homicide as a possibility. There were certain things that indicated we had something other than a suicide or an accident."

Kersten's black 1987 Mercury was found in flames at around 11:45 p.m. on Sept. 24 in a farm field 1 1/2 miles south of Iowa City.

Oddities & Idiosyncrasies

Pizza men tell their sizzling stories

Moira Crowley
The Daily Iowan

The knights of the 20th century on their fiery steeds deliver more than hope and peace to the people of this land; they deliver pizza, hot and fast, in about 30 minutes.

Scott Crestodina, 20, said he has been delivering pizzas for Paul Revere's Pizza, 325 E. Market St., for the past two months. Crestodina said he delivers an average of 30 pizzas a night, collecting around $60 in tips.

Four nights a week, Crestodina cruises Iowa City, warming the backseat of his car with large pepperoni pizzas and sausage wedgies. It's the perfect job, he said, because of the freedom behind the wheel and the opportunity to smoke as many Marlboros as he wants.

"I like pizza," Crestodina said. "I eat a lot of it because it's free and it's my livelihood, but I don't have some deep relationship with it."

Most delivery drivers also maintain a strictly professional relationship with pizza and consider it a viable way to pay the rent rather than a new religion.

Allen Jermelond, delivery driver for Pizza Hut, Coralville, said he works during peak hours, from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

He races around town in his fuel-efficient Toyota Tercel, delivering pan-pizzas to a voracious noon-hour crowd.

Jermelond said he feels safe and confident in his job and is not concerned with carrying around lots of cash in Iowa City.

"It's one of the hazards for delivery drivers in the bigger cities," he said. "I've never been jumped."

Without the threat of muggers with switchblades, Iowa City delivery drivers concern themselves with other menial predicaments,

"I deliver to sororities all the time and they answer the door in their underwear. Every once in a while, it would be nice to be invited inside."

Scott Crestodina, pizza delivery man like tipping.

Jeff Lohr has been driving for Domino's Pizza, 529 S. Riverside Drive, for the past three years. Lohr said working in a college town has its benefits because students are usually good tipppers.

"If a driver is tipped well, he'll go back to the store and brag about it to the other drivers," Lohr said.

"The other drivers will usually remember the address and make a point of trying to deliver to them the next time."

Blane Penton who delivers for Gumbys, 702 S. Gilbert St., said he always appreciates a good tip, but he doesn't feel slighted when he's denied a little something extra for his effort.

"I wish everyone would tip," he said, "but it doesn't cost that much to deliver, with the gas and everything."

As far as customers go, Crestodina said most are congenial and sane. "You get to see into people's homes," he said. "Most of the time, I see a lot of people sitting around, drinking beer."

A couple of nights ago, he said, a corps of wasted friends ordered a pizza. Crestodina said he knocked on the door for several minutes before it was opened.

"Smoke just poured out of the front door," he said. "They forgot they ordered a pizza."

Penton said he once arrived with some pizza in the middle of a party and he decided to stay.

"I ended up staying there and drinking some beer," he said. "I didn't know who they were, but they were nice enough to invite me in."

Crestodina said he has never been wooed inside, but said there have been plenty of occasions where he wished he could stay.

"I deliver to sororities all the time and they answer the door in their underwear," he said. "Every once in a while, it would be nice to be invited inside."

Lohr said he has never been propositioned — directly or indirectly — by scantily clad women.

"I delivered to a pool party once," he said. "That's as scanty as it ever got. Some guys have all the luck."

Powell wants rappers with conscience

HOUSTON (AP) — Colin Powell said rappers should keep in mind how their music affects children.

Rappers

"should see if we can upgrade and uplift it a little bit," said Powell, who joined other black leaders in a private meeting with rap music artists and producers in New York last July.

As for the musical genre itself, Powell said: "It's not an artistry that I totally understand, but they are creative."

The former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — a possible 1996 presidential candidate — spoke with the Houston Chronicle Monday during a stop to promote his autobiography, "My American Journey."

Tatewin Means, a sophomore at Rapid City Central High School, also was the only one of five finalists to say Sunday that they wouldn't try again next year if they lost the pageant.

Means provided the voice for Powhatan in the animated "Pocahontas" and appeared in "The Last of the Mohicans" and other films.

Dr. Ruth gets back to her Jewish roots

NEW YORK (AP) — Be it swinging singles or swinging chickens, it isn't easy to ruffle Ruth Westheimer's feathers.

The "sex doctor" was on hand early Tuesday when Hasidic Jews gathered in the streets of Brooklyn's Crown Heights to prepare for Yom Kippur.

Participants in the ritual known as "shlug kaporos" or "swinging of the chickens" swing live chickens over their heads and recite prayers beseeching God's mercy. The birds are then slaughtered in accordance with Jewish law and are given to charities, where they become kosher meals.

Westheimer, a self-described Reform Jew, read aloud from a prayer book as a friend assisted in the swinging.

"This is my fourth year here," Westheimer said. "I come out of Nazi Germany. When I see how Judaism is alive like this, it makes me very happy."

Patrick Stewart hopes Capt. Picard stays on the Enterprise

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — After seven years in command of the starship Enterprise, actor Patrick Stewart has his feet firmly back on Earth.

Stewart said he's hoping to shed his better-known identity, Capt. Jean-Luc Picard, with a series of roles on film and the stage.

"I'm currently in a mode of looking for work that puts as much room between me and Capt. Picard's space suit as possible," Stewart joked before putting on a one-man show at the University of North Carolina.

The search has kept the bald, Royal Shakespeare Company-trained actor quite busy since "Star Trek: The Next Generation" ended in 1994.

Stewart is in a Broadway production of Shakespeare's "The Tempest." He completed a run of the same play in Central Park this summer.

He also has a starring role in the film "Jeffrey," a gay love story currently in theaters, and will appear as a ballroom dance instructor in the upcoming "Let It Be Me."

Stewart's performance Monday was a fund-raiser for A Center for Theatre, Education and Research (ACTER), which brings classically trained actors from the London stage to universities and high schools across the United States.

Congress couple expecting baby — it's a Republican!

WASHINGTON (AP) — Family values are growing on Capitol Hill.

Reps. Susan Molinari and Bill Paxon, the only married couple serving in Congress, are expecting their first child in May.

"This is just another sign that the Republican Party is continuing to grow in numbers," the New York lawmakers said Tuesday.

Rep. Enid Green Waldholtz, R-Utah, recently became the second sitting congresswoman to have a baby.

Molinari will be the third. Twenty years ago, then-Rep. Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, D-Calif., became the first.

UI students integral to Council candidates

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City City Council hopefuls pitched themselves, their proposals to draw new businesses into the city and — in a few cases — their desire to overhaul the current system at a public forum Tuesday night.

Although economic conditions and council "micromanagement" of affairs dominated the discussion, the candidates also touched on the importance of UI students to the community.

"As a downtown business owner, I see the students as a very important part of the economy," said Anna Buss, District A candidate. "When students aren't in class, they are downtown sitting in restaurants studying and spending — and they spend a lot of money. Young people are our future and they need to get out and vote."

Candidate Stan Bench said one of his top priorities as a council member would be to increase young people's participation in local government. He is one of eight people running for two At Large positions.

"I would work with student government leaders and see that spots on boards and committees were especially reserved for young people — both students and not," Bench said. "I would also push issues which concern students such as bicycle trails, and increased arts and festivals. I'd also like to have a skate park for kids here in town."

"Young people need to see an impact in government."

Dene Oneida, an At Large candidate, said the only way UI students will feel a tie to the community is if the city provides them with economic opportunities to stay in town after graduation.

"The students don't believe they're going to have any stake in the community," Oneida said. "They look around and don't see any opportunity. They can't command anything approaching the salaries available in Chicago or elsewhere. They have to make the choice of whether they stay in a place they like or just view it as a place to party, have fun, meet people, go to school, graduate and go."

"There needs to be more positive employment — more economic development. We need to keep them here."

At Large candidate Julianna Johnston said she also has plans to work students into the system.

"Students are an intrinsic part of the community," Johnston said. "We need to build ties, and one way is by starting student neighborhood associations to build a community commitment to big student areas."

"I would also boost student input in commissions, and send notices to relevant student committees when positions open up."

Although the competition for the two At Large seats is stiff, with eight candidates — including the incumbent Karen Kubby — vying for the positions, the biggest battle occurred between the candidates for District C.

Incumbent Bruno Pigott will meet Dean Thornberry in the election Nov. 7. No primary is necessary for District C or A because there are only two candidates. A primary will be held on Oct. 10 for the At Large Seats.

Thornberry attacked Pigott's voting record several times and said he wavers on important issues.

"I like Bruno — I don't know anyone who has ever met Bruno who doesn't like him. But I don't want him back on the City Council," Thornberry said. "I don't want this divided by the old cliché of liberal (Pigott) vs. conservative (Thornberry), but on which will be an independent thinker and which will make a decision and stick with it."

ELECTION PROCESS IMPROVED

UI Student Government cleans up constitution

Chad Graham
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Government vote to change its election process last night was one of seven changes made to the government's constitution.

The change requires the presidential and vice presidential candidates to have one senator from each senate run with them on a ticket.

Sen. John Gardner, a UI graduate and executive, proposed the bill to help the candidate become a more effective leader with three people helping him, he said.

"Having people to work with the candidate allows them to reach a broader area of campus," he said. "This would enable the new president to get a running start once he hits the ground."

The process moved slowly through the body because of discussion among senators about the bill being a hindrance to people who couldn't find three people to run with them, but Gardner said the slow movement was a normal process.

"There really isn't any opposition because there is a lot of interaction and friendly amendments," he said. "We started talking this summer about how to make elections better — and this is the way to do it."

Janelle Johnson said the bill won't hinder potential candidate's chances for running.

"When you're running for an office, you should be able to get three people to support you and run with you," she said.

The next major bill to hit the floor involved the campus radio station, KRUI, which has been fighting for 12 years to be officially recognized by the UISG.

The organization that originally oversaw KRUI has been "dead for years," Gardner said. "The committee that has been unofficially overseeing KRUI, was granted full power."

John Baker, general manager for KRUI, said the decision would be a welcome change.

"KRUI is the only student radio station where the students control their FCC license and not the university," he said. "It's great to have the student government recognize us."

The committee passed the majority of the amendments to curb redundancy in the constitution and make the body more respectable and manageable. In addition, some sections were deleted to make the document more understandable.

Lambda Chi charter suspended

Sarah Lueck
The Daily Iowan

The charter for the UI chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity was suspended indefinitely Monday by its international chapter.

Even though the fraternity will appeal the suspension this week, the 32 residents of the fraternity's house will look for housing in the meantime, said local Lambda Chi Alpha adviser Jeff Emrich.

"If the suspension is upheld, the house will be vacated," he said. "There are living concerns. It's impossible to find alternative housing (quickly) in Iowa City."

Emrich said he is working with the UI and local real estate agents to make living arrangements for residents of the Lambda Chi fraternity house.

The charter was suspended because some fraternity rules may have been broken in conjunction with the death of associate member Matthew Garofalo, Emrich said.

"The international office feels the information they have is enough," he said.

Fraternity members declined comment Tuesday.

UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones said the decision to suspend the fraternity's charter was made solely by the fraternity's international office. The UI will not begin its investigation until the police inquiry is completed.

"They have made the decision based on the individual organization's procedures," Jones said.

The international chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha would like to see the police investigation into Garofalo's death finished before a decision on the UI chapter's appeal, Emrich said.

"They would like to have the full information before a final decision is made," Emrich said.

He said if the chapter's appeal is not successful, the local chapter will no longer exist.

"The active members will be granted alumni status (upon graduation)," he said. "The associate members will be able to join another Greek organization if they decide to."

A fraternity can sometimes regain its charter after it has been revoked, said David Grady, director of campus programs and student activities.

"We've had several chapters where the national offices have, for whatever reason (not necessarily disciplinary), closed the chapter,"

he said.

Grady could not speculate on whether a fraternity has a harder time regaining its charter after a disciplinary suspension.

"We're just going to have to wait and see," he said.

The international chapter considered the image of other Lambda Chi Alpha houses across the country while deciding the fate of the UI chapter, Emrich said.

"There are over 200 chapters across the country," he said. "There's been a strong alcohol policy that members of chapters voted on. That does have a role."

Garofalo was found dead in the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house Sept. 8 due to pulmonary edema, or fluid in the lungs, triggered by the excess consumption of alcohol.

VERDICT 'SENT A CLEAR AND SAD MESSAGE'

Battered women outraged by Simpson verdict

Stacy Forrest and Mark Strahan
The Daily Iowan

O.J. Simpson's acquittal Tuesday dealt a blow to those advocating National Domestic Violence Awareness Month and fighting the abuse of women.

"The verdict definitely sent a clear and sad message of women in society, especially battered women," said Cris Kinkead, director of the Domestic Violence Intervention Program.

O.J. Simpson was acquitted Tuesday of the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. The prosecution accused Simpson of beating Brown Simpson on several occasions before her death.

At a discussion of the Simpson verdict Tuesday afternoon, co-sponsored by the Women's Resource and Action Center, 130 N. Madison St., and the Afro-American Cultural Center, domestic violence survivors spoke out against Simpson's acquittal.

"I'm outraged. My voice was silenced. I don't know where there is hope. Women are not safe — we have no power. I feel trapped. I don't know who to get angry with," said an anonymous survivor.

The jury's decision reinforces the message that abusers can get away with their crimes, Kinkead said.

"Because of this verdict, fear is still being instilled in battered women," she said.

Kinkead also said that since Simpson got away with domestic violence, abusers will use his example to avoid answering for their crimes.

"This (domestic violence) is why all this happened — two people are dead and three families will suffer," she said.

The Simpson trial's impact on domestic violence was clear from the start, Kinkead said.

"In the beginning, we had a lot of calls from victims saying that their partners were threatening them by saying, 'I'm going to O.J. you,'" Kinkead said.

One anonymous abuse survivor said Simpson's wealth guaranteed his freedom, and Brown Simpson seemed to be brushed aside.

"The system doesn't work for women. I don't have any faith in lawyers. Money talks; poverty doesn't. When I heard people cheering (the verdict), I thought Nicole was forgotten."

Monique DiCarlo, a staff member at the center, said battered women can escape an abusive relationship by listening to their instincts.

"The most dangerous time (for battered women) is when a woman takes control from her batterer and leaves. Trust yourself and your experience. There are many resources to help both in judicial and domestic violence programs," she said.

UI sophomore Christina Avelino said she saw an increase in violence since the beginning of the trial through her work with domestic violence victims.

"Simpson set an example to other men who do wrong acts against women. There was definitely an increase in women seeking help," Avelino said.

Though Tuesday's discussion targeted domestic violence, UI sophomore Angelique Ellis said the tapes of Detective Mark Fuhrman's racial slurs may have swayed the jury in Simpson's favor.

"I was surprised by the verdict," she said. "As how things go in the real world, I thought there wouldn't be any justice since Simpson is a black man. There was evidence there to put doubt in the jurors' minds — the detective came off looking racist. Simpson's lawyers did a good job overall."

Joey Thurman, UI senior and manager of the UI Afro-American Cultural Center, expressed concern that the judicial process did not work perfectly.

"We need to redo our justice system, (and) I'm very disturbed about that," he said.

TAX CUT IN QUESTION

Dole accused by Republicans of betraying Contract

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole's challengers for the Republican presidential nomination say he is backing down on the Contract With America.

Dole may consider a smaller tax cut than the $245 billion cut already approved by the House of Representatives, he said Sunday. House Republicans included the tax cut in the Contract, their 1994 campaign pledge.

Andrea Andrews, spokesperson for Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's campaign, said conservative Republicans have called Gramm's office to complain about Dole's decision.

"People expect you to keep your promises," Andrews said. "This shows a lack of guts to make the tough decisions."

Gramm is committed to the House's $245 billion tax reduction and will work against any compromise, Andrews said.

However, members of Dole's campaign said his critics have gone too far.

Dole still supports the goal of $245 billion in tax cuts, said Darrell Kearney, Dole's Iowa press secretary.

He said Dole was merely pointing out that other Republicans on the Senate Finance Committee had their doubts about the amount of the reduction.

Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch, Wyoming Sen. Alan Simpson and New York Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, all members of the finance committee, have questioned cutting taxes while a budget deficit remains.

Kearney said Dole was explaining that it may be difficult to get a $245 billion tax reduction approved by that committee.

"The senator made it very clear that he remains committed to the tax reduction package," he said.

Still, Dole's Republican challengers said his chances of winning the Iowa caucuses convincingly may diminish if he compromises on taxes.

"It's an example of a compromiser rather than a leader," said Brett Hall, press secretary for candidate Morry Taylor. Taylor will be in Iowa City today to address the Iowa City Republican Women's organization.

Democrats have been critical of the House plan to cut taxes. In a Sept. 17 visit to Iowa, Vice President Al Gore said Republicans were cutting social programs like Medicare to pay for tax cuts for the wealthy.

Andrews, however, said Dole's decision was probably motivated more by a desire to please special interests.

"I don't think there's a perception that it's a tax cut for the rich," she said. "(Dole's decision) is more for protecting special interests."

Despite the attacks from other campaigns, Kearney said Dole's campaign has not received any negative feedback from Iowa voters.

"I've received one call, and it was supportive," he said.

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson headed home Tuesday, picking up a life of freedom instead of starting life in prison. Acquitted of murdering his ex-wife and her friend, he pledged to track down the real killers who are "out there somewhere."

In a courtroom on the verge of exploding with emotion, a hush fell as Judge Lance Ito's clerk, Dierdre Robertson, read the two words: "Not guilty."

Simpson mouthed the words, "Thank you," at the jury, then clasped his hands together and was embraced by his attorneys.

Tears of anguish and shouts of joy burst from the three families whose lives were torn apart by the bloody June 12, 1994, slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

"Oh my God!" exclaimed Simpson's grown daughter, Arnelle, embracing her brother Jason.

"We did it!" a family member exulted to lead defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr.

Eerily, the Simpson saga ended much as it had begun, with the fallen football superstar being transported in a white van to his estate while news helicopters tracked him overhead. Tuesday's televised verdicts were the most-watched event since June 17, 1994, when Simpson, in a white Bronco with his friend Al "A.C." Cowlings driving, led police on a surreal slow-speed chase viewed by millions.

Cowlings was at the door to embrace Simpson when he came home. Later, family members gathered for a champagne party on the lawn of Simpson's lush estate.

"Last June 13, '94, was the worst nightmare of my life. This is the second," Goldman's father, Fred, said at a prosecution news conference Tuesday. "This prosecution team didn't lose today. I deeply believe this country lost today. Justice was not served."

At a defense team news conference, Cochran insisted the issue of race, which he played heavily in the trial, did not overcome the facts.

"This verdict speaks justice," Cochran said. "This was a case based upon the evidence."

He denied playing "the race card," saying instead that credibility had won out.

"Race plays a part in everything in America," he said. "But this stuff about playing a race card is preposterous."

But fellow defense attorney Robert Shapiro disagreed, saying he was "deeply offended" Cochran had compared the police detective who found the bloody glove to Adolf Hitler. He said he would never work with Cochran again and would never talk to attorney F. Lee Bailey.

"To me the Holocaust stands alone as the most horrible human event in modern civilization," Shapiro said. "And with the Holocaust came Adolf Hitler, and to compare this in any way to a rogue cop, in my opinion, was wrong."

He said of Cochran: "He believes that everything in America is related to race. I do not."

Although it was his decision to bring Bailey into the case, Shapiro said he was angry when the legendary attorney took a courtroom role and cross-examined witnesses.

"I will never talk to F. Lee Bailey again," he said.

Cochran said he hoped the Los Angeles Police Department would alter shoddy investigative practices exposed in the trial.

As the words setting Simpson free were spoken in court, his elderly mother, Eunice, seated in a wheelchair, wiped her eyes, held up her hands prayerfully and murmured words of thanks.

"I was always in prayer. I knew my son was innocent," she said at the defense meeting with reporters.

Across the room, Goldman mouthed the word "murderer" as the verdict was announced. Kim Goldman, who spent most of a year in court honoring her dead brother's memory, doubled over and sobbed along with a younger brother and sister.

At the courthouse, Simpson's older son, Jason, read a statement from his father:

"My first obligation is to my young children, who will be raised the way that Nicole and I had always planned."

... But when things have settled a bit, I will pursue as my primary goal in life

'THE MYSTERY STILL IS NOT SOLVED'

Verdict may not wipe Simpson's slate clean

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Was O.J. Simpson wrongfully accused or did he get away with murder? In spite of a jury's acquittal Tuesday, the question is likely to haunt him for the rest of his life, and he knows it.

Some may hail him as a victim of the system who overcame racism and police conspiracies to achieve justice. But many will see him as a rich man who bought his way out of a heinous crime.

"I can only hope that someday, despite every prejudicial thing that has been said about me publicly, both in and out of the courtroom, people will come to understand and believe that I would not, could not and did not kill anyone," Simpson said in a statement read by his son Jason.

But the question will persist: If Simpson was not the killer, who took a knife to the throats of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman and for what reason? Simpson said he would dedicate his life to finding the real culprits. But the chances of success seem slim.

"I don't think a not-guilty verdict here says that O.J. was not the killer," said Loyola University Law Professor Laurie Levenson. "It just says you did not prove it beyond a reasonable doubt. The reasonable doubt standard is the basis of our system, and it leaves a lot of gray area. ... The mystery still is not solved."

Police Chief Willie Williams said he had no plans to reopen the investigation.

"It doesn't mean there's another murderer," Williams said of the acquittals.

By refusing to discuss their deliberations, jurors left open the crucial question of whether they used the verdicts to send a message. "I think they looked at the evidence and said, 'We don't trust the LAPD. That's the message,'" said defense attorney Harland Braun, who was in the courthouse as an observer.

"It sounded like the jurors had an agenda," Levenson said. "All they needed was to fill out the verdict forms. ... But this verdict is going to be baffling to many people. If there's a message, people would like to hear from the messengers."

Johnnie Cochran Jr., the lawyer who led Simpson's Dream Team of attorneys to victory, credited the outcome to "hard work" by his battery of high-powered lawyers.

But the prosecution also worked hard, mounting the most elaborate case ever staged by District Attorney Gil Garcetti's office. They threw their hearts and souls into their task, as evidenced by Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden's breakdown as he tried to discuss the verdicts at a news conference.

In performing an autopsy on the prosecution case, analysts may find it was

JUROR CRIES TO DAUGHTER

'He probably did do it'

Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — One juror in the O.J. Simpson case told her daughter she thinks Simpson probably is guilty, but voted to acquit him because the fiasco over racist investigator Mark Fuhrman torpedoed the prosecution's case, ABC reported Tuesday.

Juror Anise Aschenbach made the comments in a telephone conversation with her daughter, the network reported, identifying the daughter only as Denise.

"She said, 'I think he probably did do it, Denise,'" the daughter said. "I said something like, 'Gosh, you're kidding me.' And she said, 'No,' and she's crying. So I said, 'Why? What happened? What was the thing?'"

"She said it was because there wasn't enough evidence. And I said, 'Why?' She said, 'Because of Mark Fuhrman.'"

Aschenbach, a retiree, put on her juror questionnaire at the beginning of the trial she once served on a jury and was the lone holdout preventing an unanimous verdict.

It was the most detailed report of deliberations to emerge as jurors mostly ducked reporters and went home after nine months of restricted phone calls, censored newspapers and supervised family visits.

"I'm so glad to be back. I feel free," said juror Brenda Moran, 45, a computer technician from South Central Los Angeles. "I think we did the right thing — matter of fact, I know we did."

She described sequestration as an ordeal but spoke of the bonds she developed with other jurors.

"We had a great time together. We kissed, we cried, we just talked, you know," she said. "We developed a bond together and we will remain friends."

Moran declined to talk in detail about deliberations, but indirectly addressed criticism that jurors may have made a hasty decision.

"You sit there for nine months," she said. "You heard evidence, so that's enough right there. You heard the evidence for nine months."

The evidence

The prosecution and defense gave a few pivotal elements very different interpretations.

The lost minutes

Prosecution: O.J. Simpson lacked an alibi, or even a plausible story, for what he was doing between 9:36 p.m. and 10:40 p.m. Reports from neighbors of a barking dog show the murders occurred around 10:15 p.m.

Defense: Simpson couldn't possibly have driven to Nicole Brown Simpson's home, killed two people, hid bloody clothes and a weapon, driven home, cleaned up and changed his clothes before greeting a limousine driver at 11 p.m.

A trail of blood

Prosecution: Simpson left bloody shoeprints and an extra large leather glove at the crime scene. In his rush to hide the second bloody glove, he dropped it behind his guest house. He also bled in his Bronco and in the foyer of his house.

Defense: Part of a conspiracy led by racist Los Angeles Police Detective Mark Fuhrman.

DNA

Prosecution: The chances of matching characteristics in a blood drop found at the murder scene and blood from anyone other than Simpson are less than 1 in 170 million.

Defense: Faulty or corrupt evidence collection tainted the sample. Blood was planted in an attempt to frame Simpson.

A violent past

Prosecution: Simpson was prone to jealous rages and had beaten Ms. Simpson repeatedly. This proved his motive.

Defense: Beatings were irrelevant, isolated events. The Simpsons had divorced amicably and moved on.

the killer or killers who slaughtered Nicole and Mr. Goldman. They are out there somewhere. Whatever it takes to identify them and bring them in, I will provide somehow."

Simpson also noted that many will surmise he is guilty, acquittal or no acquittal.

"I can only hope that someday, despite every prejudicial thing that has been said about me publicly, both in and out of the courtroom, people will come to understand and believe that I would not, could not and did not kill anyone," his statement said.

The jurors who acquitted Simpson in less than four hours of deliberations refused to speak with attorneys or explain their verdicts to reporters. The usually dapper jury came to court in uncharacteristically casual clothes. One black man smiled at the defense team as he entered the courtroom.

"We won," whispered defense attorney Carl Douglas, almost in amazement.

The verdicts, returned Monday but held overnight by Judge Lance Ito to give lawyers and families time to assemble, caught everyone by surprise. There was immediate speculation Simpson had been convicted because jurors had asked the court to read them a segment of testimony considered favorable to the prosecution.

Simpson's sister, Carmelita Durio, said the family spent the night on "an emotional roller coaster," praying together and steeling themselves for what lay ahead.

TV CREWS KEEP WATCH

Fuhrman lays low in Idaho after trial ends

Associated Press

SANDPOINT, Idaho — Former Los Angeles Police detective Mark Fuhrman kept a low profile Tuesday as a jury acquitted O.J. Simpson of murder charges.

Fuhrman went from star prosecution witness to pariah after explosive tape recordings surfaced in August to paint him as a racist.

Fuhrman and his wife, Caroline, moved to the lakeside community of 5,200 this summer after he retired from the Los Angeles Police Department.

Reporters and television crews from Spokane, Wash., kept vigil outside Fuhrman's modest, neatly trimmed house about two blocks from Lake Pend Oreille. No one answered their knocks.

Before he retired, Fuhrman testified at Simpson's trial that he found a bloody glove on Simpson's estate. He also testified that he had not used the word "nigger" in the last 10 years.

What's Ahead for Simpson

What the immediate future holds for O.J. Simpson following his acquittal on double-murder charges:

MORE COURT TIME — Simpson faces further legal action despite the jury's finding. Civil lawsuits have been filed by the families of victims Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

The lawsuits can proceed despite Tuesday's innocent verdict, and Simpson, who did not testify in the criminal trial, could be forced to take the stand in the civil cases.

WANTS CHILDREN BACK — Simpson's acquittal means he likely will ask a court to give him guardianship of his younger children, Sydney, 9, and Justin, 7.

The change must be approved in Orange County probate court, where Ms. Simpson's parents, Lou and Juditha Brown, were given guardianship of the children last year.

their mother's home the night she and Ronald Goldman were slashed to death outside.

Friends of the family said the children have been kept away from television coverage of the case.

Clinton axes budget despite congressional cuts

Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hitting Congress in its pocketbook, President Clinton vetoed the legislative branch budget Tuesday and told lawmakers he wouldn't budge until they make concessions on a larger spending feud.

Issuing the third veto of his presidency, Clinton rejected a measure that would let Congress spend $2.2 billion this fiscal year — a $200 million reduction from last year's budget. The move placed Clinton under attack by Republicans.

"President Clinton has put politics ahead of cutting government spending," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich said in a joint statement.

The White House said Clinton supported the bill and its cuts, but vetoed it as a sign of his frustration over the slow progress of budget deliberations. Though the fiscal year began Sunday, only two of 13 spending bills have passed Congress.

"I don't think Congress should take care of its own business before it takes care of the people's business," Clinton said in his veto message.

In another move aimed at putting Republicans on the defensive, Clinton approved a bill providing money for military construction projects, including family housing.

The approval came despite the measure's inclusion of $70 million in projects Clinton said amounted to wasteful GOP spending and pointed up the need for a line-item veto.

Both actions carried political risks for Clinton. In the latest round of political gamesmanship over the budget, the president actually approved one bill he said wasted taxpayers' money and vetoed another that would cut government spending — a bill he said he liked.

Clinton's action and the GOP response were the latest tit-for-tat in a war between the White House and Republicans over spending priorities, especially on Medicare, Medicaid, education and the environment.

The president has threatened to veto eight of the 13 spending bills.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston said Clinton had "no substantive grounds for a veto" of the congressional budget.

"The president can't have it both ways," said Livingston, R-La. "He can't lecture the Congress on political reform while vetoing the first real effort in 40 years to reform the Congress."

White House aides said the veto carried out a threat Clinton made weeks ago, hoping that it would make Congress look like the selfish party in the budget debate. Approving the military bill gave the president a chance to push again for the line-item veto.

Clinton said the $70 million in military projects approved by Congress — but not requested by the Pentagon — illustrate why "The taxpayers' deserve protection from this kind of wasteful spending."

Republicans made passage of the line-item veto a key part of their campaign "Contract With America" last year.

While the House and Senate have passed different versions, negotiators have not yet developed a compromise measure.

Democrats contend that the Republicans don't want to give Clinton that power.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said Clinton did not veto the military construction bill because the $70 million was just a small portion of an otherwise beneficial measure.

Vetoing it would have been troublesome for a president worried about a shaky relationship with the military.

Congress' budget and the military bill amount to a tiny fraction of the overall government budget which is tied up in the 11 spending bills Congress was still debating.

The White House was intentionally vague about what Republicans must do to get approval of their budget bill, which Clinton said he would sign "under different circumstances."

"The people of this country need to know that Congress is working with the president to resolve the overall questions that will lead to an acceptable budget for fiscal year 1996," McCurry said.

The congressional spending bill does not include lawmakers' salaries; their paychecks are tied up in another bill. But staff salaries and the cost of doing business on Capitol Hill are covered by the vetoed measure.

None of the funding was in immediate peril, because Congress approved a Clinton-backed bill to pay the government's expenses for six weeks while the budget debate drags on.

The bill that includes spending for White House operations is still pending in Congress. McCurry said Clinton would have vetoed it, too, if Congress had sent it to the president before acting on other spending legislation.

Car bomb injures Macedonian president

SKOPJE, Macedonia — A remote-controlled car bomb exploded today as the president of Macedonia drove by, ripping apart his armored Mercedes and seriously injuring the leader of the volatile former Yugoslav republic.

President Kiro Gligorov's driver was killed and his security officer and three pedestrians were injured in the assassination attempt, police said. One of the pedestrians was in critical condition.

Doctors said the 78-year-old Gligorov underwent surgery for head injuries, and would have to have more surgery for an eye injury. The doctors, who refused to be identified, had at first characterized the injuries as slight but later were more guarded.

They did not specify Gligorov's injuries, saying only that any head injury was serious for a man his age.

Police said two suspects in their mid-20s were arrested, but their identities were not known. No one immediately claimed responsibility for the blast.

Gligorov's armored Mercedes took the brunt of the blast. TV film showed the car with its front right door ripped open, and the rear right door where Gligorov sat was closed but penetrated by metal shards. A man who appeared to be badly injured lay on the pavement, gesturing for help.

The bomb went off about 100 yards from Gligorov's offices in Skopje, the Macedonian capital. The president's route to his office is well known, and the car often slows at the point where the bomb exploded because of heavy traffic. A small car in front of the presidential limousine was reported to have deliberately slowed down before the blast.

Windows as high as the ninth floor on nearby buildings were shattered when the bomb exploded near the Bristol Hotel.

Macedonia is a southern Balkan republic of 2 million people that seceded peacefully as the old Yugoslav federation broke up. But independence has aggravated the volatility in the republic, which has a large ethnic Albanian minority, and historically has had uneasy relations with neighboring Serbia, Bulgaria, Greece and Albania.

Macedonian President Kiro Gligorov's car, center, is seen in central Skopje early Tuesday in this image from video. A remote-controlled car bomb exploded Tuesday as Gligorov's car drove by, injuring the leader of this volatile former Yugoslav republic. The president's driver was killed and his security officer and three pedestrians were injured in the assassination attempt, police said.

Nations' first precautionary peace-keeping mission.

Local media speculated the bomb might be the work of Macedonian nationalists who would oppose compromises with the republic's neighbors.

Gligorov was a leading Communist official in the former Yugoslavia. He was elected Macedonia's president in 1992.

He had returned from a one-day trip to Belgrade on Oct. 2, where he talked with President Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia about mutual recognition. Serbia has not recognized Macedonia because of border disputes and out of solidarity with Greece, which claims Macedonia has territorial designs on its province bearing the same name.

On Sept. 13, Greece and Macedonia signed a U.S.-brokered agreement whereby Greece will lift its 1994 embargo on Macedonia after the Macedonian government changes its flag to delete an ancient Greek symbol and declares that its constitution does not imply claims on Greek territory.

Diplomats from the two nations met as scheduled today in Athens and began talks designed to normalize their relations.

Greece condemned the attack on Gligorov. Spokesman Telemachos Hytiris expressed the government's "abhorrence and condemnation" of the attack and the hope that stability in the region would not be shaken.

CHARLESTON, S.C. — A federal judge indicated Tuesday he will dismiss Shannon Faulkner as plaintiff in the lawsuit she brought 2 1/2 years ago to become the first woman cadet at The Citadel.

U.S. District Judge Weston Houck also took up the question of whether Nancy Mellette may take Faulkner's place.

"It seems to me Ms. Faulkner's claim in this case is moot," Houck said. "She has brought a lawsuit to obtain a particular result, she has attained the result, and for all intents and purposes has voluntarily given up the benefits of that result."

Faulkner became the first female Citadel cadet in August. She dropped out after less than a week on campus, citing the stress of her 2 1/2-year court battle and isolation as the only woman cadet.

She has since filed court documents stating she might enroll again if there are other women in the corps of cadets. But Houck said the fact she may reapply later doesn't affect the situation now.

He said he wasn't making a formal ruling, but would do so after he considered Mellette's motion to intervene and a motion by plaintiffs that the case be made a class action representing all women who want to be Citadel cadets.

Citadel attorneys said it's too late for Mellette to join the case.

Mellette, 17, is a senior at a North Carolina military preparatory academy. Her father is a Citadel graduate; her brother is a senior cadet.

Mellette arrived at court Tuesday morning with her mother and a group of attorneys. "Good morning," was all she said to reporters.

Houck will hold a trial next month on whether a women's leadership program at Converse College in Spartanburg is a legal alternative to women at the Citadel.

Insurance money and cheating scandal pulls 4-year prison sentence

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A former law student was sentenced Tuesday to four years in prison for plots to kill her husband and a school secretary she feared would accuse her of cheating on a test.

Jo Ann Plachy, 49, pleaded no contest to two counts of solicitation to commit first-degree murder and aggravated assault. She could have been sentenced to more than 30 years in prison.

Judge Ralph Smith gave her sentencing credit for the nearly eight months she has been imprisoned. He imposed 10 years of probation.

Plachy, with her hands and feet manacled, stood before the judge in a jail uniform as attorneys discussed the plea agreement.

She spoke only to answer the judge's questions, responding briefly in a low voice. She showed no reaction as she was led away by a deputy after the sentencing.

Attorneys for her husband, Reuben Plachy, and the law-school employee said they agreed to the terms. Her husband would not comment after the sentencing.

Plachy had been a second-year Florida State University law student when she was arrested in February for paying $1,000 to a man to carry out a murder-for-hire plot against Margaret Satterfield. The man cooperated with authorities.

Plachy said Satterfield accused her of cheating by obtaining a copy of an exam in advance. She said she feared Satterfield would tell school officials.

Investigators said Plachy sought to have her husband of 26 years killed for insurance money and so she would not have to share her future earnings with him.

Passionate recycler fired for being Earth-conscious

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Being a good environmental citizen cost Brad Reynolds his job. Reynolds was fired from Home Depot because, the company said, he spent too much time recycling.

"I thought I was doing the right thing," Reynolds said. "Now I'm sorry I even bothered."

Reynolds, 27, is a passionate recycler. At home he recycles even broken light bulbs and the cardboard from rolls of toilet paper.

It seemed natural for him to recycle at work.

"Just about everything in that store — computer paper, stacks of old newspaper ads, cans, bottles — goes into the trash compactor," Reynolds said. "I figured it's a big company, a big store, but I'm gonna do what I can to make a difference."

So Reynolds separated recyclables from the trash and took them home, where he left them on the curb to be picked up by the city's recycling trucks.

But Home Depot, which does recycle cardboard, said Reynolds' efforts interfered with his $9.50-an-hour job. The Atlanta-based company, the nation's largest hardware chain, warned him twice about recycling on company time.

Overnight delivery record highest ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service improved its rate of on-time overnight first class mail delivery to 87 percent and reduced its debt by $1.7 billion in the budget last year, the service's board of governors was told Tuesday.

The delivery record, determined by an independent audit, was the highest ever reached and was 4 percentage points better than a year ago.

"This is service you can count on when you plan to mail a birthday card or receive a Social Security check," Postmaster General Marvin Runyon told the board.

The best local service score among 95 cities was Wichita, Kan., with 94 percent of overnight first-class deliveries on time. San Diego, Salt Lake City and Billings, Mont., tied for second place with scores of 93 percent.

Korean students arrested for unsanctioned travel

Sang-Hun Choe
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Two students were arrested on their return to South Korea today from an unauthorized trip to North Korea that threatened to further heighten tensions between the two countries.

Chong Min-ju, 22, and Lee Hye-jong, 20, were arrested as they crossed the border at the village of Panmunjom. They were carrying a flag symbolizing Korean unification.

The two women were seen off by 600 North Korean students and officials, South Korean intelligence officials said.

On the southern side, police hauled away about 40 students on their way to the border to welcome Chong and Lee, the national news agency Yonhap said.

In Seoul, hundreds of students rallied to protest the arrests. About 30 were arrested.

Chong and Lee traveled to North Korea via Berlin and Beijing on Aug. 14 to take part in a unification rally. They also met communist leaders and laid flowers before the statue of late North Korean President Kim Il Sung.

The two Koreans remain bitter enemies since their division at the end of World War II in 1945. They have never signed a peace treaty ending the 1950-53 Korean War.

While shunning official dialogue with Seoul, North Korea has been inviting South Korean dissidents to discuss unification. South Korea prohibits trips to the North without prior government approval.

Several prominent South Korean dissidents and student leaders have been arrested and punished with long prison terms for unauthorized travel to the North.

BOSNIA CREATES TENSION

Tenuous U.S.-Russia ties jeopardize joint operation

Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Moscow's fight with NATO over the alliance's expansion plan and its U.S.-led bombing of Bosnian Serbs is threatening to wreck a U.S.-Russian peacekeeping exercise lauded

"We want to make Russia a part of the security dialogue by making them a truly active participant."

Defense Secretary William Perry

by the Pentagon as a landmark in military cooperation.

Pentagon officials speaking privately Tuesday said it appeared doubtful the Russian government would go ahead with the exercise, called "Peacekeeper '95." It is still officially scheduled to open at Fort Riley, Kan., Oct. 17.

Peacekeeper '95 would be the first time Russian combat troops are trained in the continental United States. More importantly, the Clinton administration had been counting on the Fort Riley event as an expression of Moscow's commitment to a new, closer form of military cooperation in the post-Cold War era.

In Moscow, a defense ministry official, speaking on anonymity, said Tuesday the government already had decided to withdraw from the planned maneuvers. Pentagon officials privy to planning for the exercise said that they did not expect a final answer from Moscow until Thursday but that Russian anger over the NATO bombing of the Serbs appeared to have doomed the venture.

At Fort Riley, spokesperson Army Maj. Ben Santos said officials there had no indication the Russians were backing out. "We continue to plan for the exercise," he said.

About 150 Russian soldiers and a similar number of Americans from the 1st Infantry Division at Fort Riley and from the 3rd Infantry Division in Germany are scheduled to train in Peacekeeper '95 from Oct. 17-28, Santos said. It was conceived as a follow-up to a similar exercise held last September in Russia.

In the midst of the NATO bombing campaign in Bosnia, the Russians first asked for a delay, then called off entirely a late-September meeting with U.S. officials to plan details of the Fort Riley exercise, U.S. officials said.

If the exercise fell apart it would mark the latest in a series of U.S. disappointments with Moscow on security cooperation.

Strain on the U.S.-Russian relationship and on ties between NATO and Moscow have intensified in recent weeks. The Russians are especially upset at NATO's plan to expand eastward to include countries on the Russian periphery such as the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland and other former Warsaw Pact members.

Moscow also strongly denounced the U.S.-led NATO bombing campaign against Bosnian Serbs last month. At one point, the Russians likened it to genocide.

Defense Secretary William Perry, in seeking to put the best face on Moscow's reluctant relationship with NATO, has in several recent public appearances built up the Fort Riley exercise as an example of important progress.

He mentioned it Thursday in St. Louis but for the first time hinted at trouble by saying the exercise was scheduled and that he hopes it will occur.

At a news conference Tuesday in which he previewed the agenda of a NATO defense ministers meeting that opens Thursday in Williamsburg, Va., Perry made no mention of the Fort Riley exercise but stressed the importance of improving ties to Russia.

"We want to make Russia a part of the security dialogue by making them a truly active participant" in joint military exercises and exchanges of defense data, Perry said.

TEEN-AGER CITED FOR UNDER-AGE DRINKING

Tipper's daughter caught tippling

Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It is distressing for any parent to have a teenage child cited by police for drinking. For a high-profile family like Vice President Al Gore's, it doesn't help to have it all played out in public.

Tipper Gore said Tuesday their 16-year-old daughter, given a ticket last weekend, is wrestling with the public attention as well as the severe disappointment of her family and friends.

Sarah Gore was cited Friday in suburban Montgomery County, Md., after a police officer saw her holding an open beer while sitting in a car outside a party.

The driver of the car was not drinking.

Civil citations also were issued to several other juveniles, police said. The maximum penalty for under-age possession is $500.

The family is dealing with Sarah's situation privately, the vice president's wife said, "talking to her like all families should to their teen-agers about the availability of alcohol and the fact the temptations are out there."

"She broke our rules and she broke the law. She's extremely miserable and unhappy, I can tell you that," Tipper Gore said in an interview on "Fox Morning News."

But Tipper Gore — a staunch supporter of drug- and alcohol education efforts — also lamented the ly hundreds of thousands of American households are facing the same problem," said Doug Hall, vice president of the Parents Resource Institute for Drug Education.

According to the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence Inc., 87 percent of high school seniors have used alcohol, and two-thirds of teen-agers who drink say they can buy their own.

Typically, they had their first drink around age 13, the council said, and many younger children report feeling pressured to drink by their peers.

All of which makes great anxiety for parents, Hall said.

"We know (Tipper Gore) knows the right things to do," he said. "People have to understand you can do everything right and something still can go wrong. It means you can't ever give up watching and being concerned about your children."

Last year, Tipper Gore said in interviews that she was concerned about the prevalence of teen-age drinking. She urged parents to teach their children not to drink and to forbid drinking at teen parties.

She cited a magazine survey of teens who said drinking was a worse problem than teen sex or drug abuse.

Healthier pope graces U.S.

Hugh Mulligan

NEW YORK — Placido Domingo, Natalie Cole and Roberta Flack will warm up his audiences.

Free tickets to his outdoor events are being scalped at prices that might be whispered in Shubert Alley for sold-out Broadway musicals — upwards of $100.

A healthier Pope John Paul II returns to the United States today with popularity ratings any politician would covet. A New York Times-CBS News poll released over the weekend found 92 percent of U.S. Catholic adults view him favorably and only 4 percent unfav-

Associated Press

Pope John Paul II waves to pilgrims and faithful as he arrives in St. Peter's Square on Sunday. In a solemn open-air ceremony, the Pontiff beatified 110 people, including clergymen executed during the Spanish Civil War and priests who perished during the French Revolution. The pope, who arrives in the United States Wednesday, has left his cane behind — and some of the concern over his health with it.

The English translation of the new "Catechism of the Catholic Church," a major project of his papacy, has sold an astonishing 2.3 million copies in hardback.

At the outset of his 18th year on the throne of Peter, Catholic population worldwide has passed the billion mark.

The Holy Father has made a remarkable comeback from the effects of a partial thigh bone replacement after a bathroom fall that caused the cancellation of a planned U.S. visit a year ago. Journeying to his fifth continent since then, the 75-year-old pontiff has thrown away his cane, and he walks with less of the pronounced stoop observed during his recovery.

Occasionally however, especially when he is climbing steps, the ruddy face is caught by the TV cameras grimacing in pain. To assist him during his recent African trip, elevators or hydraulic lifts were installed at several altar sites. The 75-foot high altar at Giants Stadium might pose a painful challenge to this aging mountain climber.

In addressing the United Nations Thursday, John Paul II will have a far greater presence than when he faced the world body at the outset of his papacy in 1979.

Such diverse figures as Czech President Vaclav Havel, Ronald Reagan, Zbigniew Brzezinski, who was Jimmy Carter's national security adviser, and the Rev. Vincent O'Keefe, whom he removed as acting Superior General of the Jesuits, look upon this pope as a moral battering ram in bringing down the Berlin Wall and European Communism.

In the words of Mikhail Gorbachev, "Everything that has happened in Eastern Europe these last few years would be impossible without the pope and without the important role, including the political role, he played on the world stage."

More recently the pope has energized Vatican diplomats to exert formidable pressure on two United Nations conferences, on population and development in Cairo, Egypt, and on women in Beijing.

For months now, the most polychrome pope ever to evangelize in Peter's footsteps has been studying Chinese in order to deliver his address in all the major languages

Away from the seats of power and the crowded bleacher seats, the shepherd from Rome will spend some time with the powerless and the unempowered.

He will have a casserole lunch with the homeless at a soup kitchen in Baltimore just down the block from the nation's oldest Catholic cathedral.

At Newark's Sacred Heart cathedral he will greet more than 120 cloistered nuns, some going out of their convents for the first time since taking their vows a half century ago.

"Excitement has been running high here since the day his visit was announced," Sister Mary Martin, prioress of the Dominican monastery of Our Lady of the Rosary in Summit, N.J., said in an interview on the eve of the pope's arrival.

Her 22 nuns, who leave the cloister only for medical visits and death in the immediate family, spend more hours a day in prayer and periods of "profound silence" than they do in almost a year watching permitted television programs of religious or historical interest.

They range in age from 43 to "the most excited of all" — 88-year-old Sister Mary of the Immaculate Heart, who renounced the world seven decades ago but would give her six-acre world, to see His Holiness.

During his five-day visit, the pope will confer with President Clinton, address the United Nations General Assembly and preach to huge crowds at the outdoor Masses in Giants Stadium and the New Jersey Meadowlands, at Aqueduct race track, on the Great Lawn in New York's Central Park and at Oriole Park in Baltimore.

The pope began 1995 as Time magazine's Man of the Year, his 12th appearance on Time's cover. His book, "Crossing the Threshold of Hope," was a best-seller in 20 countries.

Mother accused of murdering toddlers acquitted

Michelle Williams
Associated Press

McMINNVILLE, Tenn. — A 20-year-old woman who left her toddlers for hours in an overheated car while she partied in her boyfriend's motel room was acquitted of murder Tuesday but found guilty of lesser charges.

Jennie Bain Ducker was convicted of two counts of aggravated child abuse in the deaths of Devin, 2, and Dustin, 1. Each count carries a prison term of 15 to 25 years.

The children died June 6 after their mother left them strapped in their car seats for at least eight hours. The temperature inside the car reached an estimated 120 degrees. Ducker said it was an accident.

Immediately after the verdict, Ducker was taken into custody. She had been free on $75,000 bond. Sentencing was set for Nov. 9.

Defense lawyer Mike Galligan said Ducker was prepared to go to jail.

"I actually think she wants punishment. She feels very guilty," he said.

TISSUE ABNORMALITIES SOUGHT

Scientists, parents vie for Dahmer's brain

Associated Press

PORTAGE, Wis. — A hearing on whether scientists will get to study serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer's brain ended inconclusively Tuesday with the judge asking for more information.

Dahmer's mother wants the preserved brain made available for study to see if scientists can find any abnormalities that might have accounted for his homicidal, cannibalistic behavior. His father opposes the study.

The rest of Dahmer's body was cremated last month, as he requested in his will. The ashes were divided between his estranged parents.

His brain, preserved in formaldehyde, has been in the custody of the state pathologist's office in Madison, Wis.

The hearing began Tuesday in Columbia County Circuit Court on the request by Dahmer's mother, Joyce Flint of Fresno, Calif., to let scientists examine the brain tissue.

Lionel Dahmer of Akron, Ohio, addressed the court by speaker-phone and said he opposed the study because it was against his son's wishes.

Judge Daniel George asked Flint's lawyer, Robert Fennig of Milwaukee, to submit more information from Dr. Jonathan Pincus, a neurology professor at Georgetown University.

No deadline was set and no new hearing scheduled.

Dahmer was beaten to death Nov. 28, 1994, at the state prison at Portage, where he was serving life terms for the murders of 17 young men and boys.

Dr. Robert White, a professor of neurosurgery at Case Western University in Cleveland, has predicted that brain abnormalities will be found.

"I don't think what they're going to find's going to be revolutionary, but I see no reason why they should be prevented from examining it, since they examine many brains of people who die from ordinary causes," said White, who studied the brains of Lenin and Stalin at the Institute of the Brain in Moscow.

France sends police force to Comoros

Tom Cohen
Associated Press

MORONI, Comoros — Soldiers loyal to coup leaders took up position Tuesday and parked empty buses across an airport runway, seeking to block any attempt by French troops to invade the Comoros Islands.

"The use of guns to protect democracy is good."

Mohamed Taki Abdoukarim, co-president of Comoros

France, the former colonial ruler of the three impoverished islands off Africa's east coast, announced it was sending a small, elite police force to the Comoros. It already has sent warships to the area and put its 4,000 troops on the nearby French-ruled islands of Mayotte and Reunion on alert.

Coup leaders had hoped to turn control over to a civilian leadership and avoid a showdown with France. But an alliance of political leaders expected to assume control of the Comoros Islands collapsed Tuesday.

The three designated politicians could not agree on what role Frenchman Bob Denard, who led the Sept. 28 coup, and other foreign mercenaries would play.

Comorian soldiers armed with automatic rifles and machine guns were deployed at an abandoned airport near the harbor and at the national radio station in Moroni, the capital.

Three empty buses were parked across the airport's runway, apparently to prevent French troops from landing on the weed-filled tarmac, and soldiers chased off journalists.

The abandoned airport is closer to the capital's center than a newer airport on the outskirts of Moroni. Soldiers also have been stationed at the newer airport.

The increased military presence, which included armed guards at some government buildings, indicated coup leaders were preparing for a possible attack.

France said the 20 police officers — trained in handling terrorists and hostage-takers — were sent to the islands as part of a planned "pre-positioning" of troops. The French Defense Ministry would not comment on when they would reach the islands.

French Premier Alain Juppe last week ruled out military intervention to restore the government of President Said Mohamed Djohar. But similar assurances were given in 1989 shortly before 200 French troops landed in Moroni to chase out Denard.

The collapse Tuesday of the interim government showed the deep divisions over the presence of the mercenaries.

One of the coup leaders, Comorian Capt. Combo Ayoub, had named on Oct. 2 three opposition politicians he said would assume control and set up elections.

But Tuesday, one of them pulled out, saying he differed with the other two over whether the mercenaries behind the coup should stay in the Comoros or leave immediately.

Omar Tamou, head of the Udzima party, insisted Denard and the other mercenaries should get out and let Comorians decide their future.

The two men named as co-presidents — Said Ali Kemal and Mohamed Taki Abdoukarim — said the mercenaries should stay at least through elections planned for January or February.

"The use of guns to protect democracy is good," Abdoukarim said.

Associated Press

The Comoros Islands' two interim co-presidents Taki Mohamed, left with fez, and Kamal Said Ali, right with fez, are led by members of the Comoros military to their cars Tuesday. Taki and Kamal were nominated interim Presidents by the military council which seized power in a foreign mercenary-led coup on Sept. 28.

A meeting of all political parties Tuesday dispersed in chaos, with Kemal and Abdoukarim leaving minutes after it started and Tamou storming away.

In condemning the latest coup,

France, the United States and South Africa, as well as the United Nations and Organization of African Unity, called for the foreign mercenaries to return power to civilian leaders.

COMMISSION TO BE FORMED

Clinton offers apologies to radiation experiment victims

H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton apologized to the victims of secret Cold War-era radiation experiments Tuesday and promised greater openness to guard against future abuses.

"We will no longer hide the truth from our citizens," Clinton said at a White House ceremony where he accepted a report documenting three decades of government-sponsored experiments on people, often without their clear consent.

A 14-member advisory panel has recommended victims of the radiation experiments from 1944 to 1974 be financially compensated in cases where the government or researchers deliberately misled them, or where there was no medical benefit and they were physically harmed.

Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary said she planned to establish a task force to examine who might be eligible for compensation. Most of the experiments involved the Atomic Energy Commission, the department's predecessor agency.

Accepting the 900-page report, Clinton said, "The United States of America offers a sincere apology to those of our citizens who were subjected to these experiments, to their families and to their communities."

The panel documented some 4,000 radiation experiments, but said most "are unlikely to have caused physical harm." Nevertheless, a number of experiments, including the injection of 18 civilians with plutonium, were singled out as clear violations of ethical and moral standards.

"When the government does wrong, we have a moral responsibility to admit it," Clinton told an audience that included a number of relatives of some of the victims of the most troubling experiments.

Promising to prevent future abuses, the president established the National Bioethics Advisory Commission to help shape policy regarding research to assure protection of human test subjects. He also ordered a government-wide review to make certain the rights of anyone participating in a medical experiment are protected.

The advisory panel singled out only three experiments, involving about 30 people, where it said compensation clearly is warranted. It cited a half-dozen other cases that might be "candidates" for compensation if the test subjects were found to have suffered physical harm.

Clinton said most of the Cold War-era experiments were conducted in an ethical manner, but others — including the plutonium experiments — were wrong and often shrouded in secrecy "not for a compelling need for national security, but for the simple fear of embarrassment."

Clinton created the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments in late 1993 after disclosure of the plutonium experiments.

The committee members were "morally outraged" by the plutonium experiments and recommended victims' families receive financial compensation even if direct physical harm cannot be proven, said Dr. Ruth Faden, the panel's chairperson.

STUDY ON TUMOR GROWTH

Eating lean could play key role in cancer treatment

Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A low-fat diet substantially slowed the growth of prostate cancer in a laboratory experiment, and researchers said the findings suggest eating lean could become an important part of treating the disease.

Researchers at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York found human prostate cancer tumors grew only half as fast in mice eating diets with about 21 percent fat as in those eating diets with about 40 percent fat — the level eaten by many American men.

A report on the study will appear Wednesday in the journal of the National Cancer Institute.

"What we found was astonishing to us," Dr. William R. Fair of Sloan-Kettering said Tuesday. "Tumors didn't disappear, but the decrease in growth was really impressive."

Prostate cancer generally is slow growing, said Fair, and if it can be slowed even more "then it is possible that many men wouldn't need anything more than dietary manipulation."

Most prostate cancers develop around the age of 60, said Fair, and "if we are able to tell a 60-year-old that he could do something to slow growth of the cancer for 30 years, that's the same as a cure for most men."

In the mouse study, Fair and his colleagues injected human prostate cancer cells into special laboratory mice that can grow human cancers. At the same time, the mice were being fed a corn oil diet that included 40.5 percent fat, about the same fat content in the diet of the average American male adult.

Once the prostate cancer tumors started growing in the mice, the animals were divided into four groups and each group started receiving different levels of fat, ranging from a high of 40.5 percent to a low of 2.3 percent fat per calorie.

After 11 weeks, the mice were killed and tumor growth was measured. Blood chemistry from the animals was also compared.

Tumor growth was 2½ times greater in mice on the high-fat diet than for mice on the lowest-fat diet. For mice on a 21.2 percent fat diet, the tumor growth was about half that of the mice on the highest-fat diet.

Fair said the difference also was reflected in tested levels of prostate specific antigen, or PSA, in the rodents' blood. High levels of PSA are often indicative of cancer growth.

Mice on the leanest diet had PSA counts about 35 percent of the level of mice on the high-fat diets.

Dr. J. Michael Gaziano and Dr. Charles H. Hennekens, both of Harvard Medical School, said in a journal editorial the findings "have contributed important and relevant data to an emerging body of evidence on dietary fat and risk of prostate cancer."

They said the studies raise the possibility that diet can play a role in both the prevention and treatment of prostate cancer, but warned the findings have to be verified in human clinical trials.

Fair agreed the final conclusions must await human clinical trials, and he said such studies are now being planned.

Some questions are better left unanswered

It ended much like the way it started. Filmed from the sky, O.J. Simpson left the courthouse in Los Angeles in a white vehicle, very similar to the white Ford Bronco, only this time he wasn't trying to escape — he was set free.

Now that Simpson has been acquitted, his life will never be the same. Neither will those of the jurors. There will be constant speculation and intense scrutiny of the jury's decision, and the unanswered questions will plague the minds of all those who have paid attention to the trial.

The jury members do not want to be questioned by the news media or the attorneys. It is easy to understand their desire for anonymity, but this leaves the rest of the country to ponder the unanswered questions.

Was the decision of innocence made before the closing arguments even began?

Despite the instructions by Judge Lance Ito for the jury to consider all information before making a decision, eight months is too much time not to form an opinion. It is impossible to not assess guilt or innocence as a trial progresses. No judge can stop a jury from thinking, not even the almighty Ito.

Isn't four hours a short time to deliberate?

Most of the jurors had an opinion going into deliberation, and all it took was a bit of urging to get all twelve to agree. The jury did not want to be there any longer than necessary and this led to such a quick verdict.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Four hours of deliberation and the refusal of jurors to speak to the media has left people with reasonable doubts about the Simpson verdict.

Did race affect the decision?

Race cannot be ignored when attempting to understand the jury's decision. According to an ABC News Poll taken on Sept. 27, 76 percent of white people surveyed believed Simpson was guilty, while 72 percent of African-Americans believed in his innocence. This is a startling contrast, obviously divided along racial lines. Typical white middle-class people are not willing to believe the police do anything wrong. The African-Americans polled stated they are more familiar with the way the police mistreat people, and are constantly subjected to the racism of officers like Mark Fuhrman.

Did the jury feel compelled to acquit Simpson due to defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran's closing statement?

Cochran urged the jury to acquit and send America a message against racism. But it is impossible for 12 people to change attitudes so quickly. It was an unfair burden upon this single jury to end the world's racism. These people were responsible only for one thing — justice — and justice was served.

Did the jury decide the evidence was planted?

Testimony by former police officer and confirmed racist Mark Fuhrman poisoned the jury against the prosecution. The amount of planning and effort necessary to plant the glove and blood would be impossible. The jury probably felt the police did such a sloppy job while gathering evidence that the possible contamination could not convince them it was definitely O.J.'s blood.

Did the prosecution do their job?

The prosecution presented plenty of evidence, but it just was not enough. Considering how important Mark Fuhrman was to their case, the prosecution should have researched his character before putting him on the stand. He was the pin that popped the bubble of evidence. Fuhrman cast doubt to the validity of everything he came into contact with — including the gloves and blood. Prosecution also had a disaster with the gloves that just did not fit. The time line for the prosecution was a sad attempt to show Simpson had time to commit murder, but it was just a rough estimate, not evidence. Although the prosecution presented enough to support suspicions, there was considerable doubt leading to a verdict of not guilty. Guilt beyond a reasonable doubt must be achieved, and the prosecution fell short of this requirement.

What will happen to O.J. Simpson now?

He is a free man, but Simpson will never get his life back. There will always be suspicion of his guilt, and doubt surrounding his involvement in the deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. His reputation has been torn apart, and will most likely never be repaired.

The only thing we can be sure of is his ordeal will become a Trivial Pursuit question some time soon.

Calvin Klein infiltrates comic books, perfume promotes sex with a BANG!

Almost everybody has seen the ads somewhere, whether on television or in magazines. Calvin Klein's sexy and suggestive spots featuring very young people have certainly been controversial. The ads have been referred to as mere child pornography.

Now, Calvin Klein has brewed a new controversy. The company has announced that it will run ads for its perfume, cK one, on certain DC comic books.

cK one is being marketed as a perfume for both males and females, and is targeted at the younger generation. The DC comics that will feature the ads in upcoming months include Batman and Star Trek. DC comics insists that these comics are for adults and not for children.

Even if these magazines are aimed at adults, it is undeniable that young people read them. Indeed, comics such as Batman and Star Trek are usually interpreted by different people at different levels. While the theme of Batman may be dark and serious, children still see a simple superhero.

The question becomes: should these ads be run in comic books? Should they be run at all?

Whether we want to admit it or not, we are all affected by the barrage of images the mass media provides. We are affected not only by advertisements, but movies, television shows and news reports.

The values of our society are arrived at, in large part, by what the media dictates.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

People want what they see, and in Calvin Klein ads, models show all.

In the past, values have been instilled by religion, science and — most importantly — family. Now the mass media has replaced those institutions. It has become perceived reality.

In trying to fulfill what the audience wants, the mass media actually creates what the audience should want. And we find out what we should want is sex and sexuality. The Calvin Klein ads are an example of this. The mass media takes away the relational and tender aspects of sex and creates a combative view of it.

These ideas of what we should want or need, or what we should be like, are planted into every human's head. Of course, these ideas are much easier to plant into a young person's head, which has created the stir about DC comics running the Calvin Klein ads. But, to some extent, everybody is affected by these images.

Another damaging aspect of the mass media in general — and the cK one ads in particular — is the way they objectify people. Woman are usually portrayed as either a body part — tits or ass — or a set of body parts. Men are also being depicted more and more as objects.

Of course, the values handed to us by the mass media help create the consumer society we live in. We are perpetually bored, restless, anxious and have the need to buy something to change our image. People buy cK one so they can have the proper image, which is gorgeous and sexy.

But what can be done? The easiest thing to do is resort to censorship. But most agree this is not the thing to do. It is impossible to know where to draw the line about what should be in the mass media. It is also impossible to decide who should draw the line.

What is necessary is a little more responsibility shown by the producers and creators of mass media images. They need to understand the role they play in determining people's values for the sole purpose of making money.

It is also necessary for people in the society to understand the motivations of the people making these advertisements. The producers want to get into our psyche and tug at our insecurities in order to sell their product. We must be able to resist blindly accepting the values laid upon us by the mass media.

Pride in their ethnic identity binds people of color

You! The one with the permanent tan. Yeah, you. Are you in touch with your ethnic self? Do you know who you are? No?

You sick-o! This one's for you.

A close friend and a UI doctoral student in the department of psychology turned me on to a heavy concept — "Minority Ethnic Identity Development." These are theories which help explain how people of color develop — how we feel about ourselves and others, and how these feelings change throughout our lives.

Essentially, this concept is broken down into five stages: Stage 1, Conformity; Stage 2, Dissonance; Stage 3, Resistance and Immersion; Stage 4, Introspection; and Stage 5, Awareness.

In the 1993 book, "Preventing Prejudice," Atkinson et al. describes Stage 1 individuals as "[having] an unequivocal preference for the values ... of the dominant culture. They have a strong desire to ... acculturate into the dominant culture. Individuals in this stage have negative ... attitudes toward themselves as racial beings, as well as toward their racial group in general. ... [Attitudes] toward the dominant group are positive."

I remember trying to talk to a fellow Chicano after he recently joined a "white" fraternity. We grew up together and I wanted to know how he was doing. I asked, "Ey, bato, que onda?" His face turned beet red as his white friends laughed. Then, with a clever smirk, he asked, "Do I know you?"

Does the word "coconut" ring a bell? If I may translate, these are the brothers and sisters who:

- only date whites
 - prefer to associate with whites
 - look down on their own and everything associated with their culture
 - deny their heritage, history and native language
 - place higher value on blonde hair, light eyes and light skin
 - view "darker" features as less attractive
- Because they have negative attitudes toward their people, culture and "natural" appearance, they necessarily suffer from self-hatred. Of course, they would never admit it. It's much more subconscious than conscious. It's really sad.

I remember trying to talk to a fellow Chicano after he recently joined a "white" fraternity. We grew up together and I wanted to know how he was doing. I asked, "Ey, bato, que onda?" His face turned beet red as his white friends laughed. Then, with a clever smirk, he asked, "Do I know you?"

Needless to say, I kicked his ass the next day — not because his clothes matched — but because he turned his back on his people.

Stage 2 "marks the point when minority individuals begin to question their ... pro-white attitudes," according to Atkinson. This stage is often stimulated by:

- meeting someone of the same cultural group who displays ethnic pride and awareness — like me!
 - a personal, negative experience with white racism
- In Stage 3, "the minority individual comes to embrace his or her own racial/ethnic group completely," Atkinson writes. No longer in denial, the individual may:
- reject the values and norms of the white society
 - express interest in his/her culture, history and language
 - feel angry with the oppressive white society
 - hold negative attitudes toward whites

• hold positive — sometimes ethnocentric — attitudes towards his/her ethnic group

During Stage 4, individuals are less ethnocentric, but very in touch with their racial identity. They spend less time being angry at the "white man" and more time exploring identity issues. Although there is less resentment toward whites, there is still distrust of "the system." They realize not all white people are devils.

In the final stage, "(the) individual has a confident and secure racial identity and there is a desire to eliminate all forms of oppression, not just oppression aimed at one's own group. ... There is respect and appreciation of other cultural groups, as well as acknowledgment that other minority groups in America have their own unique history of oppression," according to Atkinson.

Of course, there's more to this concept. I've just scratched the surface. "Preventing Prejudice" has been used in psychology classes at UI. You can find it, and others like it, at the University Bookstore in the Union.

Don't freak. These are merely theories; theories that offer answers, not "THE" answers. So take them or leave them. It's up to you — but remember, your denial is your problem.

Steinem speech unimpressive

It was a great privilege to hear Gloria Steinem speak when she visited the UI, but the awkward way in which she embraced the "diversity" of the audience indicates this woman leader from the '60s and '70s is more "a blast from the past" than the wave of the future.

Steinem tried to link inequalities of race and class with inequalities of gender. However, she did not venture far beyond the simplistic "we are all in this fight together" sort of rhetoric which revealed the white women's feminist movement to be the race and class exclusive revolution that it was in the 1970s.

The landmark anthology "The Black Woman," written in the early '70s, vividly demonstrates the shallow way in which middle-class women incorporate women of color — not by including them in decision making processes, but by recruiting them to do part of the dirty work for the white women's campaign agenda. It surprises me to hear how much Steinem's words — or lack thereof — illustrated the early '70s complaints of such African-American feminist pioneers as Toni Cade.

In response to the remark of a young African-American man who noted the lack of attendance by young women of color, Steinem defensively talked about the inclusiveness of women's studies programs. She then said, "In the '70s we would give talks in teams of two — a black and a white woman. ... These days we would need a chorus line." Does this imply women of other races are the "showgirls" of the feminist agenda — that there wasn't a need for Latina, Asian and Native American women to be heard in the '70s?

GUEST EDITORIAL
POINT OF VIEW

Gloria Steinem stressed the importance of gender and race issues but alienated women of color in her sweeping "chorus line" comments.

Steinem also said surveys show more African-American women are interested in feminist issues than white women because they had already experienced oppression based on race. She said African-American women were quick to acknowledge oppression for what it is the second time around — hastily adding they are more likely to support themselves and their children because they face disproportionate poverty and job discrimination.

Compounding these ill-advised remarks, Steinem appeared to hesitate every time she said African-American, women of color and ethnic groups.

Steinem also exhibited biases against class and ethnicity in her remarks. She was quick to praise the women in college — particularly in medical school — without acknowledging the important roles women have taken on in nursing, a "pink-collar" job, or the need for family-supporting jobs for women who do not go to college.

Responding to a woman who asked how to approach and discuss feminist issues with people who have deep-held religious beliefs, Steinem said she chose not to negotiate with certain religious groups. It is difficult to acknowledge other religions, but what progress can be made in the development of the "traditionally female" skills of active listening and inclusion, if a woman refuses to hear? Many of the women Steinem said she would like to include in the movement are involved in some sort of "traditional, patriarchal" religion; in some cases religion may be integral to their cultural identity, as in the case of many Latina, Native American, African and Asian women I know. Does this mean there is no room for them in the feminist movement?

I have no doubt that Steinem has furthered the rights of every woman and a great deal of men in this country. I recognize her for the leader she is and has been for women of all colors, abilities and sexual orientations. Her talk, on the other hand, quite backed up her own statement that "we have a long way to go." We do have a long way to go. Steinem, are you with us?

Discrimination is as old as our founding fathers

To the Editor:

Just as surely as pigs cannot fly, so it is also true George Washington did not intend for transgendered people to reap the harvest of the Declaration of Independence. What Todd Versteeg fails to realize — and a common error for sure — is while his "founding fathers" surely did demand life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness from "the British monarch for all citizens of the American colonies," they had a sole group in mind when they wrote "citizens" — white upper and upper-middle class men.

Indisputably, our government has spent much time and effort in an attempt to disenfranchise, disembody, enslave, persecute, and/or disempower everybody else, at one time or another, since the day the Redcoats sailed for home. And all the while, it has been leaning on the very national ideals of which Versteeg speaks.

I respect Versteeg's attempt — naive and foolish as it is — at humanitarianism. However, this unaware blindsidedness is ultimately more dangerous than all the Klan members, skinheads and fag-bashers in America. Sadly, we need to have anti-discrimination laws. Pretending people are not oppressed or that "No one approves of discrimination" is clearly inaccurate and misinformed. I hate to be the one to break it to you, but ignorance just simply is not bliss.

Readership suffers through sensational reporting

To the Editor:

For the past three years, I have been living in Iowa City and have depended on The Daily Iowan reporters to provide me with news and information. However, recently I have been very disappointed with the insensitive and borderline tabloid news splattered throughout the DI.

The essence of reporting is to provide readers with factual and relevant information, not to use the paper as a tool to vent personal opinions and biases. Recently the university suffered the loss of a student. Regardless of his affiliations or acquaintances, he was a person. Like the rest of the student body, he had future goals and ambitions. Unfortunately, not only were his dreams cut short, but the DI used his ill-fate to exploit fraternities and sororities on campus. While underage drinking is a serious problem, the manner in which the DI has handled this issue is disrespectful and biased.

While drinking in excess is an issue which should be recognized, it is a decision made by every individual — not a particular organization. Having been a part of the Greek community for the past three years, I have yet to feel the pressure to drink the DI claims is resting upon my shoulders.

Please consider the positive aspects many organizations — including fraternities and sororities — bring to the community. If you are going to attack the issue of drinking, you should also consider interviewing high school students — the pressure to drink may be larger and drinking itself is often idolized in high school. In other words, you were quick to offer criticism and have yet to offer solutions or suggestions.

You should consider the entire student body in your reporting, not just your stereotypical opinions and views of the Greek system.

Wilburn deserves council seat

To the Editor:

Ross Wilburn deserves to be elected for the at-large seat on the Iowa City Council. In his work with the youth of Iowa City at United Action for Youth, Wilburn has learned to carefully listen and think before he acts. He understands the importance of careful and deliberate assessment of options before making decisions. As a long time resident of Iowa City, Wilburn has been active in and is familiar with the issues facing our community. These qualities make him an ideal representative for the council. A vote for Ross Wilburn is a vote for responsive and responsible government.

Drinking goes on beyond Greek doors

To the Editor:

Polite conversation, Coca-Cola and crackers and a violation of a state law ... where is this taking place? In every fraternity house on this campus on Saturday nights. In light of the moratorium placed on the Greek system on Sept. 27 by the UI, this scenario is likely to be a regular occurrence until the end of this semester.

Although the ban on alcohol at fraternities' social functions is geared towards preventing underage drinking, the limitations of this ban also include discouraging persons of legal drinking age. The press release issued on Sept. 27 clearly states, "Under the terms of this moratorium, chapters in good standing are free to organize activities and events as long as no alcohol is served or consumed." Now minors, by state law, are not allowed to possess or consume alcohol. Also by state law, those individuals who are at least 21 years old are allowed to possess and consume alcohol. In my opinion, under the terms of the moratorium, those of legal age are waived of their state given rights at these functions.

I believe the university has confused the issue of Matt Garofalo's death as a public, rather than private incident. Since this minor died in a fraternity house, the effects of this horrible loss have affected an entire organization of people, who are not related to this specific issue. Every night in Iowa City, just as many minors consume alcohol in bars and private residences as they could within the fraternity structure. If this death had occurred within either of these places, the university would not have banned drinking in all bars and apartments. The UI is completely unjustified in attempting to regulate these places — the very idea is absurd.

I believe the location of Garofalo's death is the driving force and the only foothold the university has in the coercion of the placement of the alcohol ban. By banning alcohol at fraternity parties, privileges of state law — as well as choice, freedom, maturity and privacy — are denied on one of the most liberal campuses in the United States. And it's not just a Greek issue, it's an issue that affects everyone on this campus.

"African-Americans are still second-class citizens in this country," Lewis said. "We can marry white women, but we're still second-class citizens."

Valerie Montague, describing the conference room celebrations as the verdicts came in, said she and others believed Simpson was acquitted because of doubts about the evidence — not because of fears that a guilty verdict would incite riots.

"I'd hate to think that," said

Montague, president of the Atlanta Business League, a Chamber of Commerce-like group representing 450 African-American businesses.

On Atlanta's Auburn Avenue, the street where the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. grew up and is buried, preparations for a joyous sidewalk party quickly began.

"Let freedom ring!" Joe Carter said, echoing the words of a patriotic song that King himself had borrowed to exhort African-Americans a generation ago. Then he wheeled out a barbecue grill.

What was being celebrated?

Carter, president of the activist group Creative Community, explained many African-Americans saw Simpson's acquittal as more than just a victory for a murder defendant.

"The right-wing Republican attacks on affirmative action, welfare reform, all of that — I think O.J. became an embodiment of all of that," he said. "In the minds of everyday African-American people, O.J. became a symbol."

"People are celebrating today," Carter said, "because ... justice did prevail."

who live on South Johnson Street ran out of their apartment screaming, "He's not guilty!" and setting off firecrackers.

UI junior Brock Muench and his friends decided to shoot the firecrackers five minutes before the verdict was announced.

"I told my friends we had to go out in the street and announce to everyone the verdict," he said. "I thought more people would do what we did. Everyone I passed on campus was talking about the trial."

Muench said he couldn't wait to go out and drink some beer to celebrate.

"I'm so happy that it's over. America was held at hostage for months," he said. "I'm not really pleased with the decision. I do think he's guilty, but given the evidence, the jury had no other choice."

Elsewhere on campus, UI students flooded the Union around 11:50 a.m. Tuesday to watch the trial results. A chorus of cheers and groans of disgust resounded near the big-screen television as the clerk read the not guilty verdict.

UI senior Jason Stoops was at the Union to study and said he knew people would be watching the Simpson trial, but said he was surprised to see the standing-room-only crowd.

"Everybody was glued to the TV set," he said. "There was wall-to-wall people. It looked more like a Friday night at the Union (bar) than a Tuesday afternoon at the IMU."

The announcement had many students dropping everything during their lunch hour to tune into the trial. At Mondo's Sports Cafe, 212 S. Clinton St., all TV sets — which normally broadcasts sporting events — were showing the dramatic conclusion to the lengthy Simpson case. While being seated, some people insisted they be placed near a TV set.

UI senior Stephanie Steigleder met her friends at Mondo's specifically to watch the outcome of the trial.

"It's a circus," she said. "I watched the trial a lot. It turned into more of a TV show than a trial."

Mondo's entertained a huge lunch crowd, manager Heidi Stambaugh said.

"I expect it to be busy," she said. "It's probably one of the biggest trials of the century, and he's a sports figure. We're a sports bar so we decided to show it."

UI junior Lantonia Haney wasn't surprised with the Union crowds. She said she went there to see students' obsessions with the verdict and because of the big-screen television.

"The entire trial was dramatized," she said. "I was pleased to see that many people watching, but it was also disappointing realizing that most people there were caught up in the 'who won this soap opera.'"

After the announcement, Haney said she was frustrated with some students who said race was a big factor in the decision.

"I'm an African American and I never thought of it as a race issue," she said. "I was surprised that so many people turned it into a black and white issue."

VERDICT ANALYSIS

the time line on the night of the murders — testimony that seemed to play right into the prosecution's hands.

But instead, whatever doubts jurors had about their reasonable doubts were apparently answered in the reading back of the first part of limousine driver Allan Park's testimony. It was all jurors wanted to hear before rendering a verdict, after less than three hours of discussion.

Park said he didn't see the Bronco when he arrived at Simpson's house at 10:22 p.m., about the time prosecutors said Simpson was off murdering his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Park did see Brian "Kato" Kaelin searching for the source of thumps on a wall shortly after Park received a 10:52 p.m. cellular phone call from limo-service boss Dale St. John. This timing would support the prosecution's claim that the thumps occurred later than the 10:45 p.m. time Kaelin estimated.

And the limo driver was considered among the most credible of prosecution witnesses. He talked to both sides, had no agenda and did have phone records to back up his minute-by-minute reconstruction of the early events at Simpson's house.

Legal analysts said a vote to acquit immediately after rehearing Park's testimony didn't make sense. But then, they also said the jury would be deliberating for days and weeks; instead it was hours and minutes.

And there were other time-line witnesses as well, some favorable to the defense: the couple on the blind date who didn't see the bodies when the prosecution said bodies should have been there and the woman with two watches who heard a barking dog later than prosecutors said a dog should have been barking.

The jury may have decided that even a person with Simpson's fast moves couldn't have killed two young people, ditched bloody clothes and a knife, bumped into an air conditioner at 10:45 p.m. and caught a limo ride to the airport, all by 11 p.m.

The larger issues — police corruption, racism, sloppy lab work — did not provoke the kind of long, heated arguments in the jury room most analysts had expected.

The times didn't fit, so they had to acquit.

LOCAL MURDER

Residents of the Iowa City Regency Mobile Home Park said they heard an explosion and saw a glow in the sky that night.

Hills Fire Department firefighters extinguished the fire and discovered Kersten's body in the burned-out car. Kersten was identified by dental records.

Officials aren't confirming the type or the extent of the injuries involved.

"The investigation is continuing, and we do have leads that we are following," detective Bob Dolezal said. "It's my understanding we won't (release autopsy reports) until after the investigation is over."

The incident may have some residents fearing for their safety, but Carpenter said people shouldn't panic.

"I don't think it's a death that needs to have the community all excited," Carpenter said. "Of course, there is always concern with an incident like this, but the public doesn't have to fear for their lives."

Kersten lived in the Regency Mobile Home Park, a half-mile away from the scene of the incident. A manager of the mobile home park said she didn't know Kersten personally but hoped the authorities would find her assailant.

The case is being investigated by the Johnson County Sheriff's Office, Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation, the State Fire Marshal's Office, Hills Fire Department and the Iowa State Highway Patrol.

Officials are asking anyone who may have information or who may have seen Kersten or vehicles or anyone walking along Highway 923 in the vicinity of Indian Look-out Hill or the Regency Mobile Home Park to contact the Johnson County Sheriff's Office.

son to work around. All of us are having a hard time knowing we're not going to have her forever."

Coleman's office was inundated with calls from colleagues, members of the press and friends Tuesday, Bacher said. While Coleman told those in New Mexico of her new position, individuals at the UI reacted to the appointment.

The fact she is the first female UI president, as well as the first in the Big Ten, was not a big issue with Coleman.

"I think the challenges are the same for men and women," Coleman said after her selection Monday night. "Once you move onto the administration level in the university system, it is the same."

UI freshman Stephanie Brem said even though she believes it is good to have a woman in the president's office, it won't have that big of an effect.

UI football coach Hayden Fry, whose relationship with former UI president Hunter Rawlings III was not always the best, said he is happy to know Coleman is originally from Iowa.

"She'll at least be knowledgeable about the values of the people of the Midwest and be knowledgeable about the state of Iowa, the students," he said at his weekly press conference Tuesday. "To me, that's very important."

Rawlings wanted to ban freshman from suiting up and then contributed to elevating academic standards above NCAA and Big Ten requirements, keeping some Iowa athletes off the field.

Coleman will earn $190,000 per year as the UI president, live in the presidential home and receive other benefits. She was selected from a pool of 325 that was narrowed down to three finalists: Coleman; David Skorton, UI vice president for research; and Karen Hitchcock, interim president at the State University of New York at Albany.

Bowe-Holyfield will go ahead as scheduled

NEW YORK (AP) — Backers of the third Riddick Bowe-Evander Holyfield fight confirmed today that the bout will go on as scheduled Nov. 4 in Las Vegas, the same night that Mike Tyson fights Buster Mathis Jr. in the same city.

There had been speculation that Bowe-Holyfield on pay-per-view would be moved to another date to avoid competition with Tyson-Mathis, which will be shown for free on Fox earlier in the night.

But Bowe-Holyfield organizers decided to stick with the Nov. 4 date after concluding that the Tyson bout won't hurt their pay-per-view sales.

"When you go to a restaurant and they give you free appetizers, you're still going to buy dinner," said Holyfield's promoter, Dan Duva.

Ross Greenburg, who will produce the Bowe-Holyfield telecast, said he expects the Tyson bout to be over by the time Bowe-Holyfield begins at 10:30 p.m. CST. If the Tyson bout isn't over by then, Greenburg said, the Bowe fight will be delayed.

NBA

Nets sign O'Bannon to three-year deal

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Ed O'Bannon, the ninth player selected in last June's NBA draft, signed with the New Jersey Nets on Tuesday.

Under terms of the league's new rookie salary scale, O'Bannon has a three-year contract that will pay him between $3.25 million and $3.90 million.

Despite leading UCLA to the NCAA title a year ago, O'Bannon seriously injured his knee as a freshman, causing him to drop in the draft.

But the Nets were optimistic the 6-foot-8 forward's knee would remain strong and his offensive skills would help a team that finished 30-52 and missed the playoffs last season.

"Ed is a young man who has gone through some adversity and has proven to be a winner," general manager Willis Reed said. "I think he will bring a lot to this team this year. We look forward to having Ed on the floor for a very long time."

Edney, Kings reach contract agreement

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Tyus Edney, the Sacramento Kings' second-round draft choice, reached a contract agreement with the team today.

Edney, the 47th player chosen in the 1995 draft, began working out with the Kings this morning.

Terms of the agreement were not announced.

Foreign fans will have say in All-Star balloting

NEW YORK (AP) — Fans in foreign countries will get to vote for starters in February's NBA All-Star Game.

All-Star ballots will be printed in French, Spanish, Italian, German and Dutch in addition to English and distributed worldwide through Foot Locker sporting goods stores.

The starting lineup as determined by fan balloting will be announced Jan. 25.

Healthy Hawks will head to East Lansing

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

What a difference a year makes. When the Iowa Hawkeyes faced Michigan State last season, they were a bruised, battered team, starting their fourth string quarterback, Mike Duprey against the Spartans. At 2-5, the Hawkeyes were barely clinging to a distant hope of making a bowl game.

But a victory over the Spartans began a Hawkeye winning streak that has yet to end.

Iowa will again face the Spartans this weekend in East Lansing, Mich.

This year, Iowa stands at 3-0, second in the league in total offense, and most importantly, almost totally injury free.

"Thank goodness, right now we are in as good a shape as we've been at this point in the season," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "We only have six players nursing injuries with any significance."

Two of those players are considering redshirting and the other four could play this weekend, Fry said.

Receiver Ricchard Carter, who sprained his shoulder against New Mexico State, hasn't worked out this week, but is expected to play against Michigan State.

The Spartans are missing starting quarterback Tony Banks, but Todd Schultz has done a great job filling in. Schultz led the Spartans to a 25-21 victory over Boston College last weekend.

Schultz has completed 22-of-31 passes this season for 241 yards and two touchdowns, since Banks went down with an ankle injury.

The Spartans are 2-1-1 under first year coach Nick Saban. Saban coached the MSU secondary and was defensive coordinator from 1983-87, so he is no stranger to Iowa football.

"I expect it to be a typical Iowa team that is well coached and well prepared," Saban said. "They're on a roll and feeling confident, no doubt. That's a by-product of success. This will be another big challenge for our team."

Fry is also expecting a challenge.

"Michigan State is tremendously improved since the opening game (a 10-50 loss to Nebraska)," Fry said. "This is a very, very fine football team. They played very well against Purdue, then really came on against Boston College."

The Michigan State defense, which simply tried to out-muscle opponents in the past, will play multiple defenses under Saban.

"We're going to have to adjust during the game and change our call at the line of scrimmage when we have to," Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman said. "It'll be a difficult game. We're going to have to

Injuries can't slow tenacious Webb

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

Jennifer Webb has a problem with the Big Ten Conference coaches.

Webb, a junior on the Iowa volleyball team, was a first team all-Big Ten player last year. This year the coaches left her off the preseason team.

The coaches assumed that a serious knee injury suffered by Webb in last year's NCAA tournament would slow her down. Webb tore her right anterior cruciate ligament in the first round.

"The people that were really harsh on me were the other players and coaches on other teams," Webb said. "They obviously didn't think I'd be back. That's rude to me."

SUNS NEED TO DUMP 'SIR CHARLES'

Barkley doesn't fit into championship plans

As if Phoenix Suns fans don't get scorched enough by the sweltering heat in their desert climate, Charles Barkley has decided to burn them some more by returning for this seasons NBA campaign.

The "round mound of rebound" still thinks he has the magic left to bring Phoenix some NBA hardware, claiming he's only returning this season because he thinks he can contribute to a Suns' run at the NBA crown.

Unfortunately, Sir Charles' return just flushed Phoenix's title chances down the toilet this year and maybe longer.

First of all, Barkley isn't a team player. He basically demands the ball constantly, thinking he has the moves he once did in the late '80s. The defense knows Barkley's egotism and double-teams him.

Instead of passing to a team loaded with capable shooters though, Barkley usually throws up an erratic prayer and then cries for a foul.

Defensively, Barkley is pathetic. He is fat, slow and lazy. He allows quicker players to go around him, then blames his centers for not helping out. He also lets taller opponents post him up, without much of a fight. Here his rivals either score or draw a foul, and then he again begins to weep.

I do admit I make Barkley out to sound much worse than he is, but this is the way he looks next to the athletic Suns. His lazy, pathetic play is more suitable for the Los Angeles Sports Arena and the Clippers.

This is because Phoenix is an up-tempo, run and gun, finesse team. A humpty-dumpty figure like Barkley can't run with the conditioned Suns. Kevin Johnson, Dan Majerle, A. C. Green and Danny Manning are all experienced veterans who collectively can run the break, shoot the trey, rebound, post-up and play defense success-

Simpson

Associated Press

Fans cheered in Buffalo, site of some of O.J. Simpson's most glorious moments in football. But the reaction of the football world was as varied as the public reaction to Simpson's acquittal Tuesday on murder charges.

In Buffalo, hundreds of people packed a bar owned by Bills quarterback Jim Kelly and most reacted with delight when a Los Angeles jury found Simpson innocent of killing his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend, Ron Goldman.

"I'm definitely happy. I guess you could say I'm happy because I know the way O.J. was," said Kelly, who was at Rich Stadium in Orchard Park, N.Y.

"I knew him even before this, but my heart goes out to the two families of the deceased. Knowing O.J. the way I did, it was hard for me to believe that he did it."

That was the reaction of the mostly white crowd at Kelly's Sport City Grill.

Patrons were hushed and tense as they watched the verdict that freed one of the city's most revered sports heroes read on more than a dozen televisions throughout the establishment.

On hearing the first "not guilty," bartenders gave each other high-fives while patrons hugged each other and wept.

"I was very relieved," said James Binner, the bar's manager. "The anxiety in the room was unbelievable." Elsewhere, coaches and players showed a strong interest in the verdict.

In Kansas City, coach Marty Schottenheimer of the Chiefs, who played for Buffalo, interrupted his weekly press luncheon to watch it. A Chiefs aide had been told to monitor the television and interrupt the gathering when the verdict was to be announced.

But the reaction was muted.

Running back Marcus Allen, who like Simpson won the Heisman Trophy at USC and was married in Simpson's Los Angeles home, has steadfastly refused comment throughout the trial and had no comment on the verdict.

Schottenheimer's only comment was: "I learned a long time ago that if you don't have information, you shouldn't have an opinion."

Miami coach Don Shula was equally diplomatic.

"Now that the jury has judged O.J. Simpson not guilty, I hope he can get on with his life," Shula said. "It was a difficult time for all the parties involved in the trial, and now it is important to heal the wounds that the trial opened."

At the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, staffers watched the announcement in the trial of the first member ever tried for murder. No one spoke, and there were no cheers or disappointment.

"That's what juries are for and trials are for," said Pete Elliott, the executive director. "It's now over and I think the whole public is glad to have it over."

Butch Davis, coach at the University of Miami, postponed his news briefing and invited about 30 members of the media into his office, where they watched the verdict in silence.

Reggie McKenzie, an All-Pro guard who blocked for Simpson in Buffalo said from Seattle, where he is director of player programs for the Seahawks:

"All in all, from day one, I was the person that believed in O.J.'s innocence. I always said he was not guilty, and I think that's documented."

"I'm happy for O.J. and his family, and I really feel for the Brown family and the Goldman family," McKenzie said. "They cannot replace the two people that they lost, and it's very unfortunate and I really hope the killers are found."

But he added that he believed Simpson would continue to suffer.

"I think there will always be a cloud over his head," McKenzie said. "Even if somebody came out today and said, 'Hey, I did it,' there will always be some people who will think that O.J. had something to do with it, and I don't think he'll ever be able to live that down."

Another Simpson supporter, guard Nate Newton of the Dallas Cowboys, blamed the media.

"Give the man back his life," Newton told reporters. "You took it away from him, now who's going to praise him?"

Linebacker Cornelius Bennett of the Bills, who is black, was disappointed that racial issues were so prominent.

"It's sad that it came down to that because two people got killed," Bennett said. "It should not have been presented that way."

And there were those who were disappointed with the verdict.

"I can't believe it," said Henry Cooperman, a life insurance agent. "I'm just totally shocked. He got away with murder."

go in very organized and know what we want to do."

Kickoff is scheduled for 11:20 a.m. Saturday.

Kickers stack Iowa roster

Of the 64 Iowa players allowed to dress for this weekend's Big Ten game, four of them will be kickers.

Zach Bromert, the freshman who stole the show, making 8-of-8 extra points against New Mexico State, will continue to handle the extra point duties and all kicks within 37 yards (when the ball is spotted from the 20-yard line on in).

Brion Hurley will handle all kicks beyond 37 yards. Todd Romano will do the kicking off and Nick Gallery will continue to handle the punting duties.

Although he admits he has never done it before, Fry doesn't feel taking four kickers is hurting his team.

"Because they interchange. Hurley is the back up punter. Romano is first-team kick-off guy, but Hurley's the back up on that. Gallery is a back up tight end," Fry said. "So we're getting a lot of mileage out of all of them."

Fry also noted that there are a lot of similarities between the demeanor of Bromert and Hurley.

"He never says a word," Fry said about Bromert. "He's extremely quiet. I bet if you put Zach Bromert and Brion Hurley in the same room together for a week, they wouldn't know the other guy's name. They're the most quiet, focused kids I have ever seen."

Hawkeyes rank with nation's best

Matt Sherman is ranked No. 5 in the nation and No. 2 in the Big Ten with a quarterback rating of 173.07.

Sedrick Shaw is No. 15 in the nation and No. 5 in the Big Ten averaging 127.3 yards-per-game rushing.

Nick Gallery leads the Big Ten in punting with an average of 52.3 yards per punt.

Tim Dwight is No. 5 in the nation and No. 2 in the Big Ten in punt returning with an average of 16.4 yards-per-return.

The Hawkeyes are No. 5 in the nation in rushing offense, No. 18 in rushing defense, No. 7 in total offense, No. 10 in scoring offense and No. 9 in scoring defense.

Sherman back to 100 percent

Matt Sherman, who has been nursing an injury to his ribs, is back to full strength.

Sherman said his ribs were taking a beating, especially during the Iowa State game, but are fine now.

"My ribs did play a part (in my performance), but that's injuries, you've got to learn to play with them," Sherman said.

Sherman expects the offense to keep opening up like it did against the Aggies.

"I think we're finally realizing, if we take advantage of our weapons, good things are going to happen," he said.

WEBB

can't do anything and if they do tell me that, I'd do it anyway."

Webb is certainly back. The 5-foot-11 middle/outside hitter leads the Hawkeyes in kills (244) and is second in digs with 176.

The wiry Webb is the hardest hitter on the Hawkeyes and brings a great deal of fire to the team.

"Jen leads a lot by example," coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "She's going to be our hardest hitter and she's going to make some great defensive plays."

"If she's on, she's going to get other players going. She works hard and is capable of carrying the team on her shoulders."

Webb, a California native, was originally recruited to come to Iowa by the Hawkeyes former coach, Ruth Nelson. After Nelson left, Webb had doubts about attending Iowa, but was convinced otherwise by Schoenstedt.

"I didn't think I was going to come here," Webb said. "But then Linda called me and I was totally impressed."

"I knew that I was here to help build the program. That's another reason I came to Iowa, because I knew I was going to play."

In 1991, the year before Webb arrived, the Hawkeyes were 7-27, 2-18 in the Big Ten.

Webb finally got her chance to play in 1993, and responded by finishing second on the team in total attempts (790), kills (285), block assists (89) and solo blocks (17).

Last year, Webb helped lead the Hawkeyes to a fantastic season. Iowa finished 24-9 and 14-6 in conference play. Webb led the team in kills with 468.

Webb said the memory that sticks out most from last year is the Hawkeyes' big win at Illinois, 4-15, 15-12, 15-12, 13-15, 15-11.

"That place is a zoo," Webb said. "They set up people behind the bleachers with the sole purpose to heckle you while you serve. Just to walk out of there and have the place all quiet was great."

While Webb doesn't spend much time thinking about who her heroes are, she said she admires a wide range of people.

"I really look up to our coach, Patty (Dowdell)," Webb said. "I wouldn't really call her a role model, but I respect her ability and opinion on things. I also like (Iowa basketball player) Jess Settles because he works so hard."

"I never really said, 'oh I want to be like that person or play like that person,'" Webb said.

Webb is one of the more emotional players on the team, although she doesn't consider herself a vocal leader.

"If I lead, it's more by example," Webb said. "I just try to play as hard as I can and hope others can feed off of that."

Webb said her biggest strength is her aggressiveness on the court.

"I'm always taking swings at balls, even when I shouldn't," Webb said. "I'm a hard worker and do what needs to be done."

Schoenstedt summed up the type of player Webb is.

"She's got a big heart for the game," Schoenstedt said. "She's a tremendous player."

fully without Barkley.

Don't even argue that the Suns play better with him in the lineup. This fact is true only because Barkley is so much the center of attention when he's playing that the team doesn't know what to do when he's not around. Barkley has ruined this team.

Five years ago, with a nucleus of Johnson, Tom Chambers, Jeff Hornacek, and a young Majerle, the Suns challenged for the title without Barkley. Playing without "Captain Ball Hog" would take a little getting used to, but the team the Suns have now is way better than those in the late 80's and could easily compete for a championship without "Sir Weight Watchers."

I would hope that Suns President and CEO Jerry Colangelo would see Barkley's hindrance to the team and trade him, while he still has value. What about a swap with Portland for Cliff Robinson? In Robinson, Phoenix would be getting a younger, more versatile athlete who can shoot like a guard and rebound like a center. Imagine the starting lineup of K. J. Majerle, Manning, Green and Robinson. The Suns would also be deep with Wesley Person, Elliott Perry, and Joe Kleine providing breathers off the bench, not to mention the addition of rookies Michael Finley and Mario Bennett.

The mindset and attitude of Finley and Bennett is the last reason Barkley should be sent via UPS to another city or to his favorite fairway. Barkley has already managed to divide the formerly unified Suns into his friends and Johnson's, and his loud-mouth antics are rubbing of on many of the team's younger players. Finley is an outstanding talent the Suns stole in the NBA draft, and could be a future superstar if raised properly without Barkley.

If Barkley stays, nothing but tragedy lies ahead for Suns fans. Unlike the rising Phoenix for which their city is named, the Suns will set ... permanently.

NEWEST BULL

Jackson downplays concerns about Rodman

Rick Gano
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Dennis Rodman's game is as unique as his personality and now he will have to blend those talents with two stars who were once bitter rivals, Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen.

Rodman, the NBA's top rebounder for the last four years, was voted the league's best defender in 1990 and 1991 and helped the Detroit Pistons win a pair of championships.

Four straight times in the playoffs the Bulls and Pistons met in emotional and intense series and Rodman's aggressive defensive tactics often angered the Bulls. He was fined $5,000 after one game for flagrantly pushing Pippen, who required six stitches in his chin.

Detroit won the first three post-season meetings before the Bulls finally broke through en route to their first of three straight titles.

"I don't know if you can put him as the baddest of 'The Bad Boys,'" Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. Bulls fans disliked center Bill Laimbeer just as much as they did Rodman.

"Anybody who enjoys basketball and would say if there is a ballplayer who can rebound and defend in the league that could bring a certain status to the game, a certain amount of control from that position, Dennis is the one who's changed the course of the game," Jackson said.

"You see it in Michael on the offensive end, you see it in Scottie on the defensive end."

Jackson consulted with Pippen and Jordan before deciding to go ahead and let general manager Jerry Krause trade with San Antonio for Rodman, whose career has been a troubled one on and off the court. Jackson said Rodman and Jordan had played some ball together in Los Angeles where Jordan has been shooting a movie this summer.

"I talked to our team leaders and they said this guy is one of the best players in the game, it would be tough not to go for him," said Jackson. The Bulls made the deal by giving up backup center Will Perdue.

Another plus for the Bulls is that Rodman, who's averaged an incomparable 17.7 rebounds a game the last four seasons, doesn't need to shoot the ball to be effective in an offense where Jordan, Pippen and Toni Kukoc do most of the scoring.

Last season he collected 20 or more rebounds in a game 20 times, including a season-high 30 against the Houston Rockets. Rodman, who averaged seven points during a turmoil-filled season with the Spurs last year, said he can play with or against anyone.

"I have no problem with anybody in the world. I can deal with anything," Rodman said in an interview with XTRA-AM.

"Conflicts. It doesn't matter. The main thing you do on the basketball court is you communicate in the basketball world. Once you're off the court, you go your own separate ways."

But Rodman, who is set to make $2.5 million in the final year of a contract this season, said he isn't going to Chicago just to play with certain players. And he's not crazy about his contract, either.

"Chicago is cold as hell. If I decide to go there, it's not because of Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen or anything like that. That don't mean nothing. I don't bow down to any man, whoever they are or what stature they have," he said. For starters, Rodman has reportedly already made an unusual request.

He wants to wear jersey No. 91, a number the Bulls would have to get approved by the NBA.

PENN ST. - OHIO ST.

Lions want to forget Badgers

Michael A. Giarrusso

Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. —

When fifth-ranked Ohio State visits Beaver Stadium Saturday, Penn State will be playing as a true underdog for the first time in nearly two years.

The No. 12 Nittany Lions (3-1) are used to the role of the hunted, the team everyone gets fired up to play. On national television Saturday, the Buckeyes (4-0) will be in that role, while Penn State will be fighting to stay alive in the race for a Rose Bowl berth.

"I don't really remember the last time I felt like that," guard Jeff Hartings said Tuesday. "Probably the time we played Ohio State two years ago."

That was the game before the 20-game winning streak began, a 24-6 victory by the Buckeyes.

Coming off a shocking 17-9 loss to Wisconsin, Penn State players are glad to have a highly ranked opponent so they can prove that they have not slipped, said Hartings, a teammate of Buckeye quarterback Bobby Hoving at St. Henry High School in Ohio.

"I'd hate to have to go in and play Temple this week," Hartings said. "I think playing Ohio State when everybody's talking about them and nobody's talking about us — all the commenting is going to be about how great Ohio State is — we're going to be in the perfect situation this week to pull off a big upset."

Penn State's motivation is to avoid going 0-2 in the conference.

"Right now we have a lot more on the line," quarterback Wally Richardson said. "It's still possible to win the conference with one loss but it would be really hard to do it with two, so it's real important that we go out there and win this game."

Buckeyes remember last year's blowout

Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — It is not as if fifth-ranked Ohio State has never forgiven Penn State for last year's humiliating 63-14 thrashing. But then again, it's not as if the Buckeyes have forgotten, either.

"I think there's always carryovers, I think there's always elements of what happened in the past," coach John Cooper said Tuesday at his weekly news conference as his fifth-ranked Ohio State team prepared for Saturday's game at No. 12 Penn State. "Whatever it takes to help get this team ready to play, obviously we'll do it. We'll remind them of last year's game."

But it doesn't sound as if the Buckeyes need to be reminded.

Cooper said someone had posted last year's score on a bulletin board inside the team's practice facility.

What happened was a 28-point landslide in the second quarter that put the Nittany Lions ahead 35-0 at halftime. Penn State ended up running for 286 yards and passing for 286 more while making the Buckeyes pay dearly for their three interceptions.

Penn State went on to win the Big Ten title and the Rose Bowl and go unbeaten.

Quarterback Bob Hoving said there isn't any comparison between the team that was embarrassed last year and this version.

"We're years away from that, from what happened last year," Hoving said. "We're a different team."

But Hoving also conceded the Buckeyes hadn't forgotten the severity of the beating.

"I don't think you can do that at all," he said. "I don't think you can erase those bad memories."

ILLINI QUARTERBACKS

Weaver moves ahead of suspended Johnson

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — A rules violation, not poor play, cost Johnny Johnson his job as starting quarterback, Illinois coach Lou Tepper said Tuesday.

Johnson has been suspended for at least part of Saturday's game against Indiana at Bloomington, Ind., because of an unspecified violation of team rules.

Tepper said, the job is now Scott Weaver's to keep.

"If he goes out and performs well, there's no question Scott will be the starter the following week," Tepper said. "We feel very good about him."

Johnson, a senior, started the first four games of this 2-2 season. He has completed 48 of 95 passes for 497 yards and only one touchdown — last in the Big Ten in passing efficiency.

Weaver has completed 15 of 23 passes for 136 yards and a touchdown. He came on in relief of Johnson during Illinois' last game, a 7-0 victory against East Carolina.

"Certainly he merits starting on his own actions," Tepper said of the junior.

Johnson held a clear advantage over Weaver after last spring's practice. After the completion of training camp in August, Johnson's edge was still significant. But Johnson's season-long inability to move the team — Illinois has only one offensive TD in their last two games — has pulled the two even.

"Johnny has really lacked confidence," Tepper said. "He has not thrown the ball as well as he did in spring and he did in fall camp. He just hasn't made as many plays as we would hope he would make. Hopefully, he can regain that confidence and be effective again."

If Weaver is injured against Indiana, Tepper said, Johnson will play.

"I'm not going to hurt the team because of that," Tepper said. "I like the way Johnny has responded. He has been understanding and not putting blame on anybody else. I think he'll be ready to play should we have to have him."

Cincinnati's Benito Santiago is greeted in the dugout by teammates after a two-run homer Tuesday.

Reds steal one on the road

John Nadel
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Cincinnati Reds sent a quick message Tuesday night — their shaky play during the season's final month, especially on natural grass, meant nothing.

The Reds scored four runs in the first inning on a two-run double by Hal Morris and a two-run homer by Benito Santiago and beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-2 in the opener of their NL playoff series.

Cincinnati had lost 10 in a row on grass and 18 of its last 31 overall during the regular season, but the four-run rally with two outs in the first and the pitching of Pete Schourek made those factors moot.

Schourek, 2-0 with a 1.13 ERA against L.A. this season, allowed only five hits in seven innings, walking three and striking out five in his first career postseason game.

He allowed only three baserunners in the first four innings and was pitching with a 7-0 lead when he finally allowed a run in the fifth.

The game was played before a paid crowd of 44,199 — well below a sellout. They didn't have much to cheer about by the time the Dodgers came to bat in the first.

Ramon Martinez allowed one-out singles to Barry Larkin and Ron Gant to put runners on the corners before getting Reggie Sanders on a foul popup. Morris then sliced a 1-2 pitch into the left-center gap and Santiago followed by hitting a 2-1 pitch into the left field seats.

Just like that, it was 4-0, and the Reds had all the runs they would need.

The Reds extended their lead to 7-0 in the fifth. Sanders scored on a sacrifice fly by Santiago. Bret Boone and Jeff Branson followed with a doubles.

and the starter for Game 2 tonight. He struck out as well, and the Braves made their great escape.

With two outs in the top of the ninth, Jones homered to right-center off Rockies closer Curtis Leskanic. Jones also homered in the sixth during a rally that produced a 3-3 tie.

Dwight Smith's two-out, pinch-hit single in the eighth gave the Braves a 4-3 lead, but Colorado countered on Ellis Burks' RBI double in their half.

Rockies reliever Mike Munoz retired the first two batters in the eighth but surrendered a single to Ryan Klesko. Darren Holmes replaced Munoz and gave up a single to Javy Lopez. Smith, batting for Jeff Blauser, singled to right for a 4-3 lead.

Maddux, the best pitcher in the majors with a 19-2 record and 1.63 ERA this season, wasn't masterful. But he was artful in escaping repeated jams thanks to 14 groundouts, including four double plays. Maddux lasted seven innings, allowing nine hits and three runs.

Seattle Mariners batter Ken Griffey Jr. watches his fourth inning home run clear the right field fence during Game One Tuesday.

Yankees overcome Griffey barrage

Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Don Mattingly had waited his whole career, his whole life, for this game. Nothing was going to ruin it, not even Ken Griffey Jr.

The New York Yankees became baseball's first wild-card team to win a playoff game, overcoming Griffey's two home runs to beat the Seattle Mariners 9-6 Tuesday night in their AL playoff opener.

A standing, stomping crowd of 57,178, the largest at Yankee Stadium since it was remodeled for the 1976 season, saw Mattingly, David Cone and the Yankees take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-5 series.

Mattingly, playing in the postseason for the first time in his 14-year career, delivered an RBI single and a double. Playoff veterans Wade Boggs and Ruben Sierra both homered and Bernie Williams doubled home the go-ahead run during a four-run seventh inning that made it 8-4.

"It was everything I had supposed it would be," Mattingly said. "It was wild. It was a great place to be tonight. I'm sure some people might not agree, but I can't think of any place I'd rather be."

Griffey did his best to spoil it, going 3-for-5, driving in three runs and scoring three times for the Mariners, who arrived at their New York hotel shortly before 4 a.m. EDT Tuesday. They were delayed because of Monday's play-off win over California at the Kingdome, a victory that meant ace Randy Johnson will not be able to face the Yankees until Game 3 at the earliest.

"It's just one game," Griffey said. "I've got to do something to help the ballclub tomorrow."

Griffey helped Seattle score twice in the ninth off John Wetteland before the reliever retired Jay Buhner and Mike Blowers with two runners on base to end the Yankees' first postseason game since 1981.

The crowd let loose with one last resounding cheer when Wetteland fanned Blowers to finish the victory. Attendance and enthusiasm was down at Yankee Stadium this season, as it was in most baseball cities, but it was hard to tell this night, from the moment Mattingly got an ovation when he stepped on the field to the final out.

"I thought there was such a passion and energy," said Yankees manager Buck Showalter, who displayed rare emotion when he pumped his fist during pregame introductions.

"I've talked with Willie (Randolph) and Reggie (Jackson) about what it's like to play a playoff game here, and tonight I really got a feel for it," he said. "There was such an electricity in the air."

Griffey highlighted Seattle's first postseason game with a solo homer off the upper-deck facade in the fourth inning and a long, two-run homer in seventh that tied it at 4. His performance was reminiscent of George Brett's three home runs at Yankee Stadium for Kansas City in a 6-5 loss to New York in Game 3 of the 1978 AL playoffs.

Still, it was not enough to stop the Yankees in their 35th year of postseason play, the most in the majors. New York broke the 4-4 tie in the seventh against loser Jeff Nelson and two other relievers, keyed by Williams' RBI double and Sierra's two-run homer. Williams singled home another run in the eighth with his third hit.

Cone, 3-2 in seven career postseason starts, pitched eight innings and allowed four runs and six hits. He had not pitched since Wednesday, when he won despite a blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand.

"I'd like to blame those home runs to Griffey on the blister, but that's just a great hitter," Cone said.

Randy Velarde was hit by a pitch from Nelson to start the seventh and Boggs, out of action since leaving last Wednesday's game with a sore left hamstring, singled off Bobby Ayala for his third hit.

Williams followed with a drive that turned around Griffey in center field and hopped off the wall for a double that made it 5-4. After Paul O'Neill had a sacrifice fly, Sierra homered to deep right-center.

Mattingly hit an RBI single with two outs in the sixth that put New York ahead 3-2. After Chris Bosio allowed another hit, Nelson relieved and Mike Stanley singled home another run. Griffey tied it at 4 in the next half-inning.

Boggs showed no ill effects from his injured hamstring when he gave New York a 2-0 lead with his first home run since Aug. 9.

Dan Wilson drew a bases-loaded walk on a full-count pitch from Cone with two outs in the sixth, tying it at 2.

FANS UPSET

TV plan doesn't aim to please

James Prichard
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Cleveland Indians fans here have waited 41 years to see their team play in the postseason. Now many won't get a chance to watch all of the Indians' playoff games because of regionalized TV coverage.

And they're not happy about it. "It's just another example of arrogant fools who don't realize where their bread is buttered," said Dennis Carney, 45, an Indians fan from Columbus.

With an extra tier of postseason games added this year, Major League Baseball, ABC and NBC — and the networks broadcasting the first round of the playoffs — decided not to show all contests nationally.

Instead, games seen in some areas of the country won't be seen in others.

In the past, the starting times for league playoff games were staggered to allow the networks to televise all the games in their entirety.

NBC will run the first two games of the playoffs Tuesday and

Associated Press

Cleveland Indians' Carlos Baerga slides home to lane in the sixth inning Tuesday. At press time, the score past Boston Red Sox catcher Mike MacFarlane was tied 4-4 in the 12th inning.

Wednesday; ABC will broadcast Game 3, and, if necessary, Games 4 and 5.

Prioritizing the games has been a no-brainer in some markets. In the Rocky Mountain region, for instance, NBC affiliates in Montana, Wyoming, Utah and Colorado will see the National League series between the Colorado Rockies and the Atlanta Braves. Affiliates in California and Nevada will see the Cincinnati Reds against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

But it presents a dilemma in places like Ohio's capital city of Columbus, which lies halfway between Cincinnati and Cleveland.

Columbus NBC affiliate WCMH planned to air the Indians-Boston Red Sox opening game Tuesday — not the Reds-Los Angeles matchup, which begins at the same time. The following night, it will air the Reds game.

Doug Gealy, WCMH general manager, knows that won't make all fans happy.

"It's unfortunate both teams can't be shown," Gealy said Monday. "You're going to have some upset people no matter what happens."

WSYX-TV, the ABC affiliate in Columbus, will give priority to the Indians when it picks up the remaining playoff games.

If that series ends before Cincinnati's, the station would broadcast the rest of the Reds' games.

'Sarita' plays out frantic passion

Jason Jenn
The Daily Iowan

A lifetime of passion is evoked by the UI's Second Stage Series production of "Sarita." The performance can be seen daily this week at 8 p.m., and at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Sunday in E.C. Mabie Theatre of the Theatre Building.

Written by one of America's leading dramatic writers, Maria Irene Fornes, and directed by UI faculty member Carol MacVey, "Sarita" is the story of a young Cuban woman's struggle to contain her overwhelming passions. Set in New York during the 1940s, "Sarita" spans the title characters life from age 13 to 21 — a period in which she tries to weigh obedience against her burgeoning sexuality and discovers her world is about the visceral, and that love is her guide through it.

It was passion that also guided the story to the director.

"I've wanted to do this play for a long time, since 1989," MacVey said. "There is such a fragrance of language in her (Fornes) pieces — she is interested in the essence of things."

MacVey's original vision was to use no set, props or theatricality in telling the story. Since then the production has evolved into containing those elements, but in a limited way — by giving only what is necessary and letting the "gut" of the show speak for itself. One way in which MacVey lets this happen is by creating a very intimate environment, using the stage's natural architecture to give an urban backdrop and pushing the audience close to the action.

MacVey has experienced the work of Fornes before, in workshops which the writer actively instructs across the country.

Joseph Strathman

Sarita (Saffron Henke) and Mark (Chad Jacobson) discuss adventure in a scene of "Sarita," playing through Sunday in E.C. Mabie Theatre of the UI Theatre Building.

"What strikes me about Irene's writing is that she truly writes for the theater, which is to say that she really attends to the tyranny of that small space," MacVey said. "She is a poet of the theater."

UI senior Saffron Henke, who plays Sarita, was also taken by the power of the writing and the character.

"Sarita lives so fully and so moment to moment — she lives from 13 to 21 what most people live from 21 to death. Her passions are so great."

MacVey is happy to see her production finally underway and feels the theater is a service for the community.

"Sarita" is part of the UI observation of Latino Heritage Month. Admission at the door is $6 for adults, $3 for UI students, senior citizens and youth. Seating at each performance is limited due to the intimacy of the space. The production contains material of an adult nature. For additional information, contact the Theatre Arts Department at 335-2700.

'Devil' offers dark mystery

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

As the weather gets colder and harsher, so does the cinematic scene. From feel-good romances and Schwarzeneggerian bulletfests, the studios turn to complex dramas and Oscar bids. It's a cycle as inevitable — if not quite as old — as the changing of the colors of the leaves.

Hence the release of "Devil in a Blue Dress," a complex drama not intended for anyone who's still panting for the season's last Stallone-induced cinematic testosterone rush. "Devil" is a quiet and mostly serious noir mystery seemingly transplanted from the 1940s — with the welcome addition of 1990s color cinematography.

Denzel Washington stars as "Easy" Rollins, a subdued, polite World War II veteran trying to cope with the loss of his job. He's apparently a hard worker and a skilled machinist, but his skin color's working against him — even the most culturally enlightened whites in this 1948 California setting can't resist treating him like a particularly talented pet.

So when a friend of Easy's directs him toward a one-time job where his race is an asset, he takes the offer despite his doubts. He's to receive $100 for tracking down a white woman who may have disappeared into L.A.'s seizable black community. Daphne Monet (Jennifer Beals) used to be the girlfriend of Todd Carter, the front-runner in the L.A. mayoral race, but when she dropped out of sight, he dropped out of politics. Supposedly, all Easy has to do is let Carter know where his true love's gone.

But if it were that simple, this would be a very short film. Easy's first lead drops dead, and he finds he's being set up for her murder. Daphne surfaces — in a slinky blue dress, of course — to complicate the issue. The other leading mayoral candidate is uncommonly interested in what's going on. The plot thickens faster than the surface layer of residence-hall soup.

Washington, as always, does a fine job in his role as the slightly baffled, slightly grim victim of all this plot warfare. Unfortunately, he's set up as little more than a gear around which the story revolves. As an actor, he's superlative, but as a character, he's completely overshadowed by the more charismatic and exciting people around him — particularly his partner Mouse (Don Cheadle). Mouse, a hyperactive semi-psydirector Carl Franklin is obviously a fan of 1940s noir fare like "Double Indemnity" and "The Big Clock." Stylistically, this could be an effort to make a new Hitchcock film, from the cheesy flashbacks to the straightforward, hard-hitting storyline that allows little time for breath, let alone reaction and contemplation.

But Franklin takes the film a step further. He shares some of Hitchcock's skill for complex plots which unravel at breakneck speed, but he also skillfully takes on racial and social issues Hitchcock wasn't at liberty to get into. Franklin isn't preachy or obtrusive about racism, segregation and inequality; they're deftly integrated in his storyline in such a way that viewers can pick up his ideas, instead of getting hit over the head with them.

Like the recent "Kiss of Death," "Devil" is a 1940s film that couldn't have been made in the 1940s. In "Kiss," the modernization consisted of blood, fake brains and pointless nudity. "Devil" leaves all that aside in favor of a social conscience. This first salvo in the fall Oscar wars may be part of a standard, predictable cinematic seasonal cycle — but that's the only thing predictable or standard about it.

chopath — who can't seem to help leaving a trail of corpses wherever he goes — would probably fit better into "Pulp Fiction" than he fits into "Devil." But he provides a welcome sense of grim comic relief to the otherwise gravely serious story.

But as is often the case with mysteries, the stars are of virtually negligible importance compared to the watertight script. Writer and

His Purpleness falls flat

Todd Norden
The Daily Iowan

Prince (Enigma Man, The Artist Formerly Known As Prince, His Purpleness, whatever ...) has recorded another disc with The New Power Generation titled the gold experience. This disc covers Prince's favorite topics — sex, fantasy and more sex.

If Prince is to become a musical legend, he must incorporate some other subject matter or musical style, because this disc is like a porno movie. It's titillating at first but becomes uninteresting with increased listening.

Kicking off the disc is "p control" (guess what the "p" stands for). The song generally bumps along with definite attitude but turns into another cheesy club tune because of the limp lyrics. "Good morning ladies and gentlemen/ boys and motherfuckin' girls/ I'm here to rock your world." C'mon, this guy is a ladies man? It gets a little worse with the next song "endorphinmachine." Could anyone actually sound like Motley Crue with funk layered on top? Yes, Prince can.

"we march" is hands down the best song. There's a hip-hop funk vibe with a catchy soulfulness and clever sampling of marching sounds and sirens layered over beautiful backup harmonies.

The final song, "Gold," contains the line "all that glitters ain't gold." That sums up "the gold experience" well. You know Prince has the talent — but where does it shine through on this release? Is this a new experience? Actually, it's the same old — just on a different disc.

Randee St. Nicholas

The man formerly named Prince swings and misses in his new album, the gold experience. The Minneapolis native is featuring his themes of sex and fantasy again.
