Homecoming: Beer, bucks, a ban

UI alums revisit old haunts — spend big

Ann Haggerty
The Daily Iowan

St. Patrick's Day and New Year's Eve patrons aren't even in the same league as the flood of Hawkeye football fans who will overrun the city and send bar profits soaring this weekend.

Jim Bell, owner of the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., said Homecoming weekend usually boosts sales at his tavern by about 50 percent.

The controversial "Hoosier Daddy?" window display was scrubbed off the store front of Panchero's restaurant, 32 S. Clinton St., as it was deemed sexually offensive. UI junior Liz LaBelle from the Delta Delta Delta sorority helped work on the window display that was created Sunday afternoon and erased Monday morning.

Panchero's scraps spicy window display

Cassie Golden
The Daily Iowan

Since its Homecoming window display was deemed sexually suggestive, Panchero's front window now stands bare among businesses displaying Hawkeye spirit with painted slogans and pictures for Saturday's game.

The painted window at Panchero's, 32 S. Clinton St., was deemed offensive and ordered to be scrubbed clean Monday morning by the restaurant's management less than one day after it was painted.

"When I looked at the display, all that I saw was the Hawkeye kicking the player — I didn't see any sexual connotation at all."

Timothy Howe, 1995 Homecoming executive director

The window, sponsored by the Delta Delta Delta sorority and the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, depicted Herkey the Hawk leaning over the Indiana University Hoosier mascot in a provocative position, with the phrase "Hoosier Daddy?"

"When I looked at the display, all that I saw was the Hawkeye kicking the player — I didn't see any sexual connotation at all," said Timothy Howe, 1995 Homecoming executive director.

"I'm sure the Sig Eps and the Tri Deltas didn't have any sexual intention at all — it was completely unin-

Ban lands Greek parties in bars

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily Iowan

Even though beer can't be a direct part of their social events, members and alumni of the UI Greek community say they will still enjoy the Homecoming tradition of tailgating and partying.

An alcohol moratorium was imposed Sept. 27, banning alcohol from all fraternity social events within chapter houses. As a result, some fraternities have decided to move their Homecoming parties elsewhere so alcohol can be a part of the festivities.

Saturday night, Tau Kappa Epsilon members will host an exchange at the Union bar, 121 E. College St., with Kappa Sigma fraternity and Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

UI senior Jason Stoops, social chairperson and vice president of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity said this is a unique occasion because his fraternity usually holds Homecoming

Homecoming Events

HOMECOMING PARADE The annual UI Homecoming parade will be held today, starting at 6:15 p.m. Special sites along the parade route include:

- 1 Grandstand, float judging, honored guests and announcer
- 2 Handicapped and elderly seating at the First Christian Church
- 3 Marching band judging and announcer

PEP RALLY A pep rally will be held on the west side of the Union immediately following the parade.

FIREWORKS The "Fireworks Extravaganza" will take place on the banks of the Iowa River at 9 p.m. The grassy area northwest of Hancher will be open to spectators.

STUDENTS 'ANTSY'

Watch your back: It's Friday the 13th

Kristen Smith
The Daily Iowan

It's baaaaack! Friday the 13th is here, and it has the superstitious at the UI spooked.

"I hate Friday the 13th," UI junior Deirdre Huebner said. "I always think something bad is going to happen. I will go along as if it were a regular day, but it will be in the back of my head."

"If I had a midterm, I'd be a little antsy about it, and I would not go flying on Friday the 13th."

UI sophomore Ryan Zelnio

According to historical books, Friday has always been a day of bad luck. Add that to the bad luck of the number 13, and you have many people unnerved.

"I'm not superstitious overall," UI sophomore Ryan Zelnio said. "But if I had a midterm, I'd be a little antsy about it, and I would not go flying on Friday the 13th."

Huebner said she is not only superstitious about Friday the 13th, but about everything. She believes it stems from her Irish heritage.

"I always knock on wood," Huebner said. "And if I spill salt I always throw some over my shoulder."

Many people don't think this day is anything special.

"I don't believe Friday the 13th has any real significance," UI senior Molly Wismeier said. "I don't believe 13 is bad."

UI sophomore Laura Ippolito agrees.

"I'm not superstitious of Friday the 13th. But if I see a ladder I won't go under it — unless there is no other way around."

UI sophomore Michele Maiers said she is superstitious about everything, from opening umbrellas indoors to knocking on wood.

"One day I broke a makeup mirror and I cried all day long," Maiers said. "Seven years is a long time to have bad luck."

"If superstitions are true, why chance having a bad day," she said.

FORMER UI PRESIDENT INAUGURATED

Rawlings takes oath at Cornell

Associated Press

ITHACA, N.Y. — A classics scholar who wants Cornell University to apply "moral and intellectual leadership" toward solving social problems was sworn in Thursday as the Ivy League school's 10th president.

Hunter Rawlings III, 50, got the title that goes with the duties he took up July 1. He succeeds Frank Rhodes, 68, a British-born geologist who retired after almost 18 years at Cornell's helm.

In his inaugural address, Rawlings emphasized Cornell's central obligation to promote a vigorous intellectual environment that can

SIGN NEAR SIMPSON'S HOUSE: 'HOME OF BRENTWOOD BUTCHER'

Neighbors: 'O.J.'s not wanted here'

John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Ensnared in his mansion after 16 months in jail, O.J. Simpson may well face a future of freedom in exile, an outcast among the rich, the powerful and the glamorous who were once drawn to him.

The luxurious turf where Simpson lived, played and made millions now seems suddenly out of bounds for the former football star, even after a jury acquitted him of murder.

Some of Simpson's neighbors, including show-business executives, said he's no longer welcome

"It's a PR nightmare."

Oddities &amp; Idiosyncrasies

Famous memorabilia ... for a buck

Students at the University of Texas at Austin may be able to get some collectibles including Roger Clemens' baseball glove and the UT President's underwear.

The Cabinet of College Councils is planning to raffle items donated by famous alumni and other Texans at their annual 40 Acres Fest in April to raise money to establish merit-based scholarships for incoming students and cabinet officials.

At this time there have been no items collected, but they will begin collecting in the next few weeks.

The raffle idea had to go to the state Legislature to pass a bill that would allow student organizations to hold raffles. In the state of Texas, raffles are a form of lottery and any lottery that is not state run is illegal. The Legislature approved the bill June 15.

The cabinet is hoping to raise $15,000 by selling $1 raffle tickets.

Student shot in leg at on-campus dance

An Ohio State student was shot outside the Ohio Union after a back-to-school dance sponsored by the Delta Sigma Theta fraternity.

The student, James Knox, 19, was shot in the left thigh during an argument that took place after the dance.

Knox said there was a lot of traffic blocking the streets at 2:30 a.m. when he got out of the car to get his friend.

He then heard gunshots and started running for cover he said. Knox said he didn't realize he had been shot until he returned to his friends car.

"I saw a blood spot on my leg and I thought that I must have gotten grazed," he said.

Knox was taken to the Ohio State University Medical Center where doctors operated and removed a 25-caliber bullet.

Police have no suspects but are investigating the incident, University Police Lt. Roger Morgan said.

Knox was not a member of the fraternity.

Northwestern's women-employees few in number

Statistics released from a study by the American Council for Education show Northwestern University city lagging behind the rest of the nation in women administrators and faculty.

Last year, the Northwestern women faculty made up 27 percent of full-time and part-time faculty and less than 10 percent of full-time professors.

Of the eight vice presidents in the university, two are women.

David Merkowitz, director of public affairs for the American Council on Education said the study has shown substantial progress over the past few years. "We're far from achieving equity, but we're getting closer."

"NU is a positive environment for women," Marilyn McCoy, vice president for administration and planning, said.

Kansas fraternity bringing up the rear in GPAs

The Phi Kappa Tau fraternity at the University of Kansas failed to meet grade requirements set by the national chapter.

The house average GPA is required to be .1 above the average GPA of all male students at the university.

Last spring, the fraternity's GPA was 2.655. It was .075 below the average 2.73 at the University of Kansas.

If the chapter doesn't raise their GPA, they may be put on social probation by the national chapter. In other words, they would have no social functions from Thursdays to Sundays.

NEWSMAKERS

Welcome home, Miss America!

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Miss America Shawntel Smith came home to Oklahoma for the first time since winning the crown last month.

"I have been counting the days until I came back to Oklahoma," the 24-year-old Smith told a crowd of 300 Wednesday that included her aunts, uncles and friends.

Smith

Her tiny hometown of Muldrow on the Oklahoma-Arkansas line is throwing her a parade Saturday. The number of floats has increased from 25 to 85 in the past two weeks.

"My mom told me they would have to double up the entries so it won't take two to three hours," she said at a news conference Thursday.

O.J. counselor sees other side of legal system

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry Scheck got in a jam all his own Thursday when a police officer spotted him making an illegal U-turn.

Scheck, a member of O.J. Simpson's legal Dream Team, was driving with an expired license and improper registration, police said. He got three summonses.

"I made an illegal U-turn dropping off a friend at his Manhattan hotel," Scheck said. "I can't believe this is a story."

He won't contest the violations but "will investigate the license matter" to see if there is legal ground to fight it.

Scheck said his license expired during the Simpson case. He said the officer who gave him the ticket kept him sitting in his car for 55 minutes while he checked his paperwork.

Asked if he thought it was deliberate, Scheck said, "Lord knows what he was doing."

Filmmaker Bergman's infatuation pays big

NEW YORK (AP) — Ingmar Bergman's boyhood love for Lillian Gish had a happy ending: a $200,000 award from the late actress' estate.

The 77-year-old Swedish director is this year's recipient of the Dorothy and Lillian Gish Prize.

Gish, who died in 1993, created the honor in her will, stipulating that it go to a person "who has made an outstanding contribution to the beauty of the world and to mankind's enjoyment and understanding of life" through the arts.

Linn Ullmann, Bergman's daughter with actress Liv Ullmann, collected the award Wednesday on his behalf.

She read a statement from him thanking Gish and noting that, at age 9, Bergman fell in love with the actress after seeing her in a film.

"Ever since that Monday night in March, nearly 70 years ago, I have tenderly preserved my young love for Lillian," Bergman said.

Actress Bassett: 'Strange Days' are these

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Filming "Strange Days" made for some strange nights for Angela Bassett.

Associated Press

Dave Pallone, who wrote a book about his 10 years as a gay umpire, wants his job back. "I was fired because I was gay," he said Wednesday at the University of Massachusetts. His book, "Behind the Mask," was published in 1990.

Gay umpire wants out of 'retirement'

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Dave Pallone, who wrote a book about his 10 years as a gay umpire, wants his job back.

"I was fired because I was gay," he told about 750 people Wednesday night at the University of Massachusetts. "If they say I retired, then I want to come out of retirement."

An early-to-bed type, she found the nighttime film schedule on the Los Angeles streets grueling.

"There were all these people in these outrageous outfits," she said of an army of extras.

"And half of them, that's the life they live. Those are the hours they're up anyway. I mean, you would think these extras would be exhausted, but they seemed to be perfectly comfortable with that after-hours kind of living."

The film, co-starring Ralph Fiennes, revolves around a series of murders recorded on a new type of video device that allows users to relive the memories of others.

Bassett, whose portrayal of Tina Turner in "What's Love Got to Do With It" won an Oscar nomination, said she was pleased with "Strange Days."

"Just as an actress, and then as a black actress, to be this hero for the 21st century in this big action thriller, that's pretty amazing and exciting," she said.

Campaign invades UI tailgaters

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye football fans who are tired of their traditional tailgaters have a new option for the next two games. Pat Buchanan's presidential campaign will have tailgate parties before tomorrow's Indiana game and next Saturday's Penn State game.

Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar will also sponsor a tailgater before the Indiana game.

Buchanan's Iowa campaign has rented space at 609 Melrose Ave. for the next two Saturdays, Kristie Ouversen, a Buchanan organizer, said.

The campaign will provide free hot dogs, pop and beer, she said.

"They have to at least be interested (in the campaign) to get a beer," said Aaron Brandenburg, a UI senior and College Republican.

Buchanan will not be able to attend the tailgaters, Ouversen said, but he will be in Iowa next week. Buchanan will be in Cedar Rapids Oct. 17, she said.

Lugar will be able to greet his tailgaters personally. Rachel Schrepferman, campaign field director, said Lugar will be in Cedar Rapids and Iowa City tomorrow and will attend the game.

"They have to at least be interested (in the campaign) to get a beer."

Aaron Brandenburg, UI senior and College Republican

Even though Lugar is from Indiana, Schrepferman said Lugar may cheer for the Hawkeyes.

"I imagine he'll be rooting for Iowa," she said. "It's a big caucus state."

The Lugar tailgater will be held in the northwest corner of the Kinick Society parking lot, she said.

Staff members from Buchanan's national headquarters in Virginia will attend the Penn State tailgater.

"They heard we were doing this, and they thought Penn State would be the best game to go to," Ouversen said.

Democrats said Buchanan should not include imported beer or food at his party because of his views on immigration.

"He opposes immigration — legal or illegal," said Ron Parker, Iowa Democratic Party communications director.

"I hope he stays by his own standards and uses Amana beer and Hormel hot dogs." Both products are made in Iowa.

Parker also said Buchanan's campaign has gone flat in Iowa.

"The consensus is he's started fast and peaked," he said.

Ouversen, however, said the campaign is continuing to generate new supporters. She said the tailgater will help find people to work on the caucuses.

"I'll probably have to get more beer than I planned," she said.

TAYLOR, FORBES RUN FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS

Business, politics mix in '96 campaign

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

Morry Taylor and Steve Forbes are businessmen on a mission.

Both are seeking the Republican presidential nomination. Both say it is time for a businessperson, rather than a politician, to be in the White House.

But the candidates are not carbon copies of each other — Forbes and Taylor differ in their views on trade and in their personal backgrounds.

During an Oct. 4 visit to Iowa City, Taylor said he favors fair trade over free trade. If elected, Taylor would make it more difficult for Asian and European companies to ship their products to the United States, he said.

Forbes, however, opposes tariffs and other trade barriers.

"Steve Forbes is a rabid free-trader," said Gretchen Morgenson, a spokesperson for the Forbes campaign.

The candidates also acquired their wealth in different ways. Sean Walsh, a press secretary for Taylor, said Forbes inherited his wealth, while Taylor created his.

"Morry got where he is through hard work and courage, not his father's money," Walsh said.

Both candidates are spending their own money on their campaigns.

Forbes' campaign prefers to focus on its flat tax plan rather than on Taylor, Morgenson said. All taxpayers would pay a flat 17 percent rate under the Forbes plan, she said.

"The tax code is a source of power to lobbyists, lawyers and legislators," Morgenson said. "Once you scrap the tax code, you exorcise a lot of the corruption in Washington."

The flat tax is Forbes' top priority and is the focus of his TV advertisements, Morgenson said.

Taylor also supports a 17 percent flat tax, but his TV ads have a different target — Ross Perot's supporters.

"Perot voters belong in the Republican Party and with Morry Taylor," Walsh said.

In the ad, Taylor says supporting Perot's third party "guarantees us one thing — four more years of Bill Clinton."

Thus far, neither Taylor nor Forbes has challenged the GOP frontrunners. Republican Party of Iowa chairperson Brian Kennedy said Lamar Alexander, Pat Buchanan, Bob Dole and Phil Gramm are in the first tier of candidates.

However, both Forbes and Taylor are gearing up their Iowa campaigns, and Taylor already has 30 staff members organizing supporters across the state.

Morgenson said Forbes will probably have an Iowa staff in place by next week. Taylor has the early edge in organizing because Forbes entered the race late.

Marching to the beat of love in the Hawkeye band

Sarah Lueck
The Daily Iowan

When UI junior Deb Poschner made the decision to join the Hawkeye Marching Band, she didn't know it would change her life forever.

Poschner said if she had not joined the band, she would never have met her fiancé, UI senior Jason Paul.

"We wouldn't have met (without band)," she said. "We're really different people; that's the common interest that we had. That was the thing that brought us together."

Poschner, who played trombone, said she liked to listen to Paul play his trumpet.

"He sounded great," she said. "He played high and loud, and that turned me on."

The trumpets and trombones are feuding sections in the band, Poschner said, and this caused problems for her when she would sneak on the trumpet bus to be with Paul on band trips.

"I'd sit on the the trumpet bus, and I got in trouble," she said. "The bones were upset with me."

"We had to pull a lot of strings to get her on there," Paul said.

Poschner and Paul are not the only band members who have marched into each other's hearts.

Drum major and UI senior Charlie Taylor recently proposed to band staff member Kristen McKnight in front of about 1,000 fans at a show at the UI Recreation Building.

Taylor said he decided to propose in public largely because of the couple's band connections.

"We know each other from band, and all our friends are in band," he said. "I wanted to make sure all her friends and family were there, and I figured we might as well do it up big. I guess the rec building is big enough."

Band members said the phenomenon of band love springs from common interests, ample time together and band road trips.

"When you get 265 people in a hotel in some other location, sparks are bound to fly," said Tim Anderson, a fifth-year senior who considers himself a marching band old-timer. Anderson is currently dating UI freshman and band member Anna Rhodes.

Being in band automatically schedules time for couples to see each other, said UI senior and trumpet player Jason Plosch. He has been dating UI senior and mellophone player Emily Schlesinger for nearly three years.

"With a busy schedule, it's one place you know you're going to see each other," he said.

People get sweaty and gross at marching band practice, Poschner said, and it's a test for romantic relationships.

"You look your worst when you're in band, and you know they really love you when they see you at your worst," Poschner said.

Dating outside the band is considered "foul play," Anderson said.

"You don't even seem to know there are girls outside of band," he said. "It's not fair to date outside of the band — then no one can talk about it."

UI alumnus Kevin Mundt said he is very glad he was a band member — that's where he met his wife of four months, UI senior Elaine Mundt.

"We met at a band party during Hell Week," he said. "All my friendships are from band. It's a big social group."

How will marching band play a part in the futures of these relationships? Poschner said she and Paul will return to the games to watch the Hawkeye Marching Band, and their kids will perform in marching bands.

The only question is what instruments the kids will play.

"Trombone," Poschner said. "Trumpet," Paul said.

GUIDELINES BEING DEVELOPED

Report: more casinos can float into Iowa and profit

Greg Smith

Associated Press

MARQUETTE, Iowa — State regulators will adopt guidelines next month for new floating casinos on inland waters in the wake of a consultant's report Thursday that said the market is not saturated.

Will Cummings, managing director of Christiansen/Cummings Associates, told the Iowa Racing and Gaming Commission there is room for more gambling, although it would largely depend on the location of such ventures.

Currently, some $670 million is wagered at Iowa riverboats, those on the Illinois side of the Mississippi River, Native American casinos and parimutuel tracks, Cummings said. Of that, $350 million is bet by Iowans, he said.

If a gaming boat were located within 10 miles of every adult in Iowa, or in all 99 counties, wagering by Iowans would produce another $290 million in revenues, Cummings said.

"To me, that is not a large number," he told commissioners.

Although projections suggest "there is a limited amount of winnings from new casino facilities," Cummings said later "there is room for additional growth in Iowa."

Thinly populated areas might not be profitable because people would have to drive farther, Cummings said. That wouldn't be the case in more densely populated areas, such as Linn, Johnson and Polk counties, he said.

Commissioners are struggling with the question of how many more floating casinos the state can handle before the market becomes saturated. Currently, there are seven riverboats with two more scheduled to open the first of the year in Council Bluffs.

The commission earlier this year rejected a proposal by Argosy Gaming Co. of Alton, Ill., to float a casino on West Lake in the Clarke County seat of Osceola.

It was the second inland floating casino proposal by Argosy. Its first effort to put a boat on Gray's Lake in Des Moines was rejected last year in a special election by Polk County voters.

Commissioner Rita Sealock of Council Bluffs and Nancy Whittenburg of Spencer, in charge of coming up with proposals to establish guidelines for inland boats, were told by chairperson Richard Canello of Fort Madison to include riverboats in their proposals for next month's meeting.

"If we don't set up criteria to slow this down, we're going to have 100 gaming operations in this state," he said.

Sealock said she and Whittenburg looked at operations in Illinois, Indiana, Mississippi, Louisiana and Missouri "and it soon became apparent to me that Iowa had no long-range plans."

"It was just a shotgun effect," she said.

Among their proposals:

- Establish a minimum cruise length of 2 1/2 miles.

- A boat's design must reflect the history of the lake.

- A boat must not interfere with commercial or recreational uses of the lake.

- Establish procedures for five-year safety inspections and who would do them.

Cease-fire begins after false starts

Patrick Quinn
Associated Press

SARAJEVO — Bosnia's most hopeful cease-fire to date quieted almost all battlefields Thursday, but the government insisted Serbs must do more to lift the siege of Sarajevo before peace talks can start.

After weeks of heavy fighting, U.N. officials called Thursday's cease-fire violations insignificant. The government and rebel Serbs accused each other of new attacks in the bitterly contested northwest, but sat down to discuss how to firm up the U.S.-brokered truce, scheduled to last 60 days.

"We cannot militarily expect people who are within 200 meters of each other fighting suddenly to put their rifle in the air and say, 'Thanks very much, I'm walking backwards.'"

U.N. military spokesperson
Lt. Col. Chris Vernon

Associated Press

A Bosnian Serb refugee cooks food for her family in the Omarska refugee camp, some 40 kilometers west of the Serb stronghold of Banja Luka, Thursday. An estimated 20,000 Serb refugees have arrived in the Omarska refugee camp in the past two days.

The truce has not ended the siege of Sarajevo, and its residents cannot travel freely in and out of the city because the roads, which cross through Serb-held territory, can be dangerous or barricaded.

Sacirbey said it was vital for Sarajevans, after 3½ years of Serb siege, to "feel freedom and safety again."

"We will not attend the next round of peace negotiations if the roads from Sarajevo to Kiseljak and Gorazde are not opened," he told the Croatian weekly Globus.

In recent weeks, the government has had to drop similar demands under pressure from Washington to keep peace talks alive.

The United Nations said it registered 15 cease-fire violations across Bosnia on Thursday — two detonations in a Sarajevo suburb and 12 in northeastern Bosnia.

The United Nations has no presence in northwestern Bosnia, where the government and its Croat allies reported capturing two Serb-held towns, Sanski Most and Mrkonjic Grad, this week.

The Bosnian army accused Serbs of breaking the cease-fire around Sanski Most.

The Bosnian Serb army said government and Croat forces were jeopardizing the cease-fire in unspecified ways.

U.N. officials suggested skirmishes would not necessarily jeopardize the peace efforts.

"We cannot militarily expect people who are within 200 meters of each other fighting suddenly to put their rifle in the air and say, 'Thanks very much, I'm walking backwards,' " said U.N. military spokesperson Lt. Col. Chris Vernon. "It doesn't happen like that."

Aid workers were concerned Thursday with the fate of up to 400,000 refugees chased out over the past three months. Most are Serbs routed from Croatia and northwestern Bosnia.

"We are very, very concerned now what is going to happen to many of these people during the winter," said John Sparrow, spokesperson for the international Red Cross. "It is quite clear that there will be insufficient accommodation and people will be dying this winter as a consequence."

Blacks rally despite Farrakhan's tactics

Harry Rosenthal
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Eddie Staton is coming from Omaha, Neb., to Monday's rally of black men because he believes in the goal, not the organizer, Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

"I'm going a Christian, I'm going to come back a Christian," Staton said.

In Evansville, Ind., Justin Hunter said despite Farrakhan's role, he will be on the National Mall in Washington "if I have to fly, ride, walk or crawl."

Farrakhan said the antipathy toward him expressed by some "clouds the beauty of the message," but that it had been that way through history. "Moses, Jesus, Mohammed ... the message wasn't liked," he said in an interview on

"It's not just Minister Farrakhan's march, it's God's march."

Rev. Wendell Anthony, president of the NAACP chapter in Detroit

CNN.

Around the nation, preparations to attend the march ranged from nonexistent — many people said they are unaware of it — to massive.

Lionel Graham, handling march logistics in New York, said 250,000 men would come from his area alone.

Just how many are coming is anybody's guess, but Washington is preparing for traffic-jamming crowds, many from the local area, for what the organizers are calling a "Million Man March."

The school board in suburban Arlington, Va., canceled afternoon bus service because nearly half its drivers plan to attend the event.

The school board in Camden, N.J., 150 miles to the north, declared a school holiday because more than 250 of its 4,000 employees asked for the day off, with the numbers climbing. The district has 20,000 students.

"The potential exists for us not to have enough substitutes," said Superintendent Roy Dawson.

People who work in the nation's capital were advised to leave their cars at home and ride the subway. Washington is no stranger to big demonstrations, but they usually are scheduled on weekends. Officials are preparing for 11,000 to 12,000 buses.

Associated Press

The Rev. Wendell Anthony, right, president of the Detroit chapter of the NAACP, and others prepare to drop rose petals from Detroit's Belle Isle Bridge Wednesday. A small group gathered at the site to talk about the upcoming Million Man March and remember Deletha Word, 33, who fell to her death at about the same spot while fleeing her attacker after a fender-bender on the bridge Aug. 19.

Farrakhan conceived the event as "a holy day of atonement and reconciliation." He said without elaboration he did not want women at the event "because of the potential danger of the situation."

"We are not an army. We don't come with weapons. We've asked everybody not to come with so much as a penknife on their person," he said in the CNN interview. "This is a peaceful march, a peaceful demonstration."

"Our aim is not to shut the city down, but we did want to come on a Monday when government was in session so that the statement and the day of absence as well as the march would be felt around the country."

Farrakhan asked those who could not be there to observe "a day of absence" and called on black women to refrain from shopping and to spend the day with their children, teaching them the value of home, self-esteem, family and unity.

"One day of not shopping will not hurt us," said Elizabeth Rand of Columbus, Ohio. "Our dollars are felt, and the absence of our dollars will be felt."

Like Staton, many who expressed their intention to travel to Washington said they would do it despite Farrakhan, who has called Judaism "a gutter religion" and denounced whites, homosexuals and other groups.

"Clearly the issue of the march is something we support," said Dick Lobenthal, director of the Michigan Anti-Defamation League. "We regret that it has to be led by a bigot."

In the same city, Pontiac, John Humes said he is making the trip with 20 friends because "I feel the need to show the unity because we are a hurting race."

While the Rev. Jesse Jackson has endorsed the march, other ministers have appeared on radio talk shows to distance themselves.

Hunter, a 20-year-old student at the University of Southern Indiana, called the event a symbol of needed change in the self-image of black men, a demonstration that black men "are not all killing one another, are not all drug dealers and users, but that we are educated men who take care of business."

Odell Smith of Muskogee, Okla., chartered a 40-seat bus.

"We are, as a community so lethargic about agreeing on anything. I don't agree with everything Farrakhan has to say," but "I don't believe everything my dad has to say (either) but we can come together on a common cause. I look at it as an opportunity for unity. Any excuse is a good excuse if you want to stay divided."

Said the Rev. Wendell Anthony, president of the NAACP chapter in Detroit, "It's not just Minister Farrakhan's march, it's God's march."

STUDENT FREQUENTLY BULLIED

S. Carolina teen shoots teacher, self at school

Bruce Smith
Associated Press

BLACKVILLE, S.C. — A suspended student whose father said he sometimes got picked on because he was small walked into his high school Thursday, shot and seriously wounded a teacher, then killed himself.

A second teacher died, although authorities were unsure whether she was shot or suffered a heart attack.

Toby R. Sincino, 16, was expelled early last school year but was back on probationary status.

He was suspended again Wednesday after making an obscene gesture on a school bus and faced another expulsion.

Thursday, he walked through a back door at Blackville-Hilda High School armed with a .32-caliber revolver.

He strode by two classrooms and entered a third where he fired the gun at math teacher Johnny Thompson, 38, investigators said.

Sincino continued down the hall where he apparently confronted another math teacher, 56-year-old Phyllis Senn, who was later found dead in a teachers' work room, State Law Enforcement Division spokesperson Hugh Munn said.

No wounds were visible on her body and an autopsy will be conducted today to determine how she died.

Thompson was in serious but stable condition, said Rubenia Hammond, a spokesperson for Aiken Regional Medical Centers.

Sincino's father, Randolph, said his son was a small boy who sometimes was picked on by other students in this rural town of 3,000 people about 45 miles south of Columbia.

"The only time he had a temper is when somebody kicked at him. I know a couple of times when he tried to stand up for his rights," the father said.

A cousin, Eric McCrary, said other children would lock Sincino, who was less than 5 feet tall, in lockers or dump him upside down in trash cans.

Sincino's sister, Mary Ann, a high-school sophomore, said her brother was a private person.

"Toby always kept secrets. He always kept to himself. All we know is how his behavior was (and) it was good," she said.

Sincino's father said he didn't know about his son's suspension and the teen was not acting unusual when he left for school Thursday.

Sincino's body was found outside the school office door. He had shot himself in the right temple, Munn said.

Quake aftershocks torment Mexican coast

Susana Hayward
Associated Press

MANZANILLO, Mexico — A strong aftershock rattled this Pacific resort town Thursday just as rescue workers clearing the rubble of a flattened hotel neared a lobby where 20 earthquake victims are believed buried.

Thursday's quake lasted more than five seconds, causing panic but no reports of serious injuries or deaths.

At least 55 are known to have died in a stronger quake Monday, and that number is expected to rise as rescue workers pry through the wreckage to reach the lobby of the fallen hotel.

Thursday, workers recovered two more bodies including that of a boy, age undetermined, from what had been the third floor.

They said the boy had been dead only a few hours because rigor mortis had not set in.

Mexico's National Seismological Institute reported Thursday's quake measured 6.1. The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., gave it a preliminary reading of 5.5.

"Since Monday, the ground hasn't stopped shaking," said Maria Morelos, one of hundreds of people camping out in dozens of makeshift shelters after their homes were damaged or destroyed in the Monday quake.

"My God," she said. "When is it going to stop?"

At least 26 aftershocks have rattled this town of 60,000 since the 7.6-magnitude earthquake struck along some 200 miles of the western Mexican coastline Monday morning.

With cranes, drills and pickaxes, rescue workers continued their day-and-night quest to dig through the rubble of the flattened Costa Real hotel, where at least 20 bodies have been recovered.

Workers briefly stopped their labors to wait out the morning

Associated Press

Rescue workers at the Hotel Costa Real in Manzanillo, Mexico, look under rubble Thursday. The nine-story hotel collapsed in Monday's 7.6-magnitude earthquake, killing at least 55. A 6.1 aftershock shook the area Thursday but there were no reports of any damage.

National Protection engineer Arturo Lopez, one of hundreds of workers trying to pull bodies from the hotel's ruins, said about 20 people were believed buried in the lobby.

Officials doubted any survivors would be found.

Wednesday night, two passports discovered under mounds of crushed cement led officials to identify two Vancouver, Canada, tourists, whose bodies had been found earlier and were being kept in a refrigerated trailer morgue beside the hotel.

The families of Dirk Jan Boswyk, 58, and Judy Jang, 68, were notified and expected to take the bodies home, Public Ministry officials said.

At a news conference Wednesday night, the governor of Colima, Carlos de la Madrid Virgen, said the earthquake destroyed 17 schools, three health clinics in nearby communities and hundreds of homes.

The economy of Manzanillo, a tourist resort and port town that exports fish and fruit, has been hurt badly by the quake. De la Madrid said most activities at the commercial port have stopped because of damage to loading docks.

Some tourist hotels also suffered damage, but the region's best-known resort, Las Hadas, where the movie "10" was filmed, escaped serious harm.

Relief efforts are under way to aid hundreds of people who have left their damaged houses and are sleeping in makeshift shelters, including a soccer field where about 100 families are camped out.

SURVEY: SMOKING ACCESSORIES UNNECESSARY

Car makers dump ashtrays to make room for high-tech devices

Mike McKesson
Associated Press

DETROIT — Four of five American drivers don't smoke in the car or let their passengers light up. Is it any wonder Detroit is moving increasingly toward making the "ash receiver" optional equipment?

Chrysler Corp. made a splash at an auto show last year by introducing new cars without ashtrays or cigarette lighters — apparently the first mass-market vehicles since the 1930s without standard ashtrays.

"I figured for many years that people were using ashtrays for other purposes," said Tom Moulson, a senior vice president at Market Opinion Research, which released a survey Thursday on smoking and cars.

The Farmington Hills company found 78 percent of drivers said they never smoke in the car. Five percent smoke on some trips, while 17 percent almost always light up. Eighty percent said they don't let passengers smoke.

The telephone survey questioned 1,000 people in July, and its results have an error margin of plus or minus 3 percentage points. The survey did not ask how many of the 1,000 were smokers.

The findings bear out the conclusions of market researchers that automakers are moving toward smokeless vehicles for reasons that have little to do with health benefits.

"It was a matter of making the best use of space in the vehicle," said Chrysler Corp. spokesperson Pamela Mahoney. "By taking out the ash receiver they gain another cup holder."

At the 1994 North American International

Auto Show, Chrysler displayed its new Cirrus and Stratus cars without ashtrays or lighters, known in the industry as "ash receivers" and "cigar lighters."

Chrysler since has introduced other models without them, including the Chrysler Sebring, Dodge Avenger and the company's new minivans. For $15, buyers of those vehicles can add a lighter and an ashtray that fits into a cup holder.

Honda's new Civic models come without ashtrays and lighters, but they can be added by dealers as no-cost options.

Some automakers replaced ashtrays with a storage compartment, while some used the space for a cup holder. Some Ford models have a removable ashtray that can be replaced with a cup holder.

Students party at the U of Chicago library

What do you think of when you hear the word "college?" Chances are it's either class or partying. Whichever comes first says a lot about your priorities.

At the University of Chicago, students think of class first. The funny part is, the administration is embarrassed by the fact.

Last week, the Cedar Rapids Gazette and the Chicago Tribune both printed stories on UC. They cited the magazine Inside Edge's poll that put UC dead last on a scale ranking "the general tenor of its social life." They said the center of student life revolves around the library. They said free pizza is being offered at football games in order to attract crowds.

The articles also claimed the administration was circulating fliers around the campus with the library in the center of a circle-and-slash symbol.

It all sounds ridiculous. First, UC has a long tradition of academic excellence students are fully aware of when they sign up for class. Sixty-four Nobel Prize winners have come from the college. Secondly, who would believe an administration anywhere would make such a giant public relations faux pax and negate the exact reason so many students pay $20,000 a year in tuition? College administrators want to ban the library? What will the parents think?

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

UC students may be considered dull by their administration, but at least they have the brains not to waste their college education.

Upon first reading of the articles, the administration's campaign to spice up the social lives of students seemed to be prompted by UC's last place in Inside Edge's poll. Certainly it wouldn't look good for possible incoming freshman to think the entire student body at UC were a bunch of duds.

But the articles also mention a building on campus is being transformed into a brand new student center and the campus bookstore has been taken over by a Barnes and Noble and a Starbucks's coffee house.

Anyone who's ever been at the the Union on the UI campus knows what student centers are about. They're about selling a right arm for a cup of flat fountain pop. They're about $4 hamburgers and $6 tubes of toothpaste. They're about universities giving students a little plastic card and setting them loose without their mommies in an overpriced store where they can charge everything from winter coats to beef jerky. They're about squeezing even more money out students and parents.

UC isn't worried about their public image, nor are they worried about their students hitting the books too often. In fact, they're probably not worried at all anymore because the bookstore has gone corporate and the student center will add whole new dimensions to getting student's cash.

If UC wants to publicize their student center, that is fine, but they shouldn't have to trash the student body to do it. By being so tasteless as to circulate fliers telling students to ban the library, they lampoon the exact reason they are such a respected institution in the first place; because their students have their heads on straight.

Duncan Brown, a student at UC and editor of the school paper the Chicago Maroon, shed some light on the quality of student life at the college. Though there were no statistics to quantify his remarks, he said there was very little violent crime on campus — despite the fact it's on the edges of Chicago's south side.

He said there have been no alcohol-related deaths on campus that he could remember.

"A lot of social interaction revolves around books." On his own social life: "Last weekend I went to the library 6-9 p.m. on Friday and Saturday night, and then went out with my friends." Sounds like something administrators should be proud of: students exhibiting self-control and sound judgment.

The U of C administration is biting the hands of the students that feed them. The sad part is, they'll probably make them pay for it too.

Cultural differences within groups ignored by those who label

There's a certain fluidity around the issue of labeling people. Definitions, by taking into account masses and not individuals, fail to recognize distinct cultural differences within groups.

At a forum Oct. 5, in honor of Hispanic Heritage Month, a group of six professors and graduate students held a panel about living in the United States under the label "Hispanic." The label is viewed as a political identity and not a cultural identity and can be used to the advantage of those categorized under it, UI Director of Special Support Services Rolando Arroyo Sucre said.

Hispanic, as a label, has been a source of conflict. Technically, it refers to those who speak Spanish. But not every Latin American country has Spanish as its official language. Brazilians speak Portuguese. Haitians speak French or Creole.

And the label doesn't take into account the various cultural differences in Latin American countries. For example, Venezuelan culture differs from Cuban culture in food, music, dancing, history. The label insinuates the distinct cultures don't matter: it's easier to disregard differences for the sake of categorizing.

One panel member, a third generation Chicano, said in Los Angeles there are profound cultural differences under those labeled Hispanic. But people get stuck on the label and don't move forward to make the community more enriched. Keeping traditions alive is a personal choice. "We all have to share our commonalities but respect our differences," he said.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Being labeled Hispanic eliminates unique cultural distinctions between Latin American groups.

The label does have benefits though. In smaller communities, such as the UI, the labels Hispanic and Latino have brought the different Latino cultures together because they are a minority on campus. Members of the Latino-Native American Cultural Center come from several different countries; being categorized under the same label and sharing a similar history has made the students learn about other South American cultures.

Another panel member, who grew up in the Dominican Republic, said he was never exposed to a label until he came to the states.

"I am Latino or Hispanic because that's what the outside world sees," he said. "To me it is just a label."

But it can be used for benefits, as UI graduate student Israel Reyes said. The public is imposed on the private, but the culture is controlled by those in it. "An identity is a duel process of self and community development," he said. "We're trying to resist the label, but if we keep the term open to change, it is open to new voices."

The issue has become not how you're defined, but what you do with the definition. Although it's insulting not to consider qualities within cultures, those grouped under the label can move forward to gain political and economic advantage in the United States.

Americans are used to living in categories and definitions. The categories are nonexistent in Latin American countries, where there is essentially one race. In the United States, myriad cultures fight for political and economic rights. The labels are a way of defining the different groups; they're applied to affect masses, not individuals. While the communities lose distinct qualities, there's a lot to be gained as well.

Iowa — take it or leave it, but don't knock it

I'm not from New York, and I'm not from California.

I'm from Iowa.

Not only that — but I grew up on a farm, which makes me an anomaly in this town.

Maria Hickey appears Fridays
Page

This geographic info isn't a subtle invitation to my family's Thanksgiving dinner. It is an attempt to dispel an attitude, or at least to address the way many non-natives think of Iowa. It seems many find Iowans a sheltered, culturally devoid group of people with nothing better to do than grow corn. It wouldn't bother me so much if they stayed in their own corners of the world, but some have chosen to move here and to bring their notions with them.

These misconceptions don't exclusively arrive from the coasts, though. A large percentage of UI out-of-staters come from that suburban paradise to our east, which will remain unnamed. (When I was younger, my favorite thing to do when visiting my cousins in Chicago —

"I pitched the buck teeth and gingham dress somewhere on I-80," I reply.

whoops — was to loudly drawl in public about my lack of understanding since I, of course, was just a poor relative from "I-a-wa." My cousins would laugh and look around nervously.)

Actually, we spoke correct English sans drawl in my house, especially with my mother and her hypersensitive schoolteacher ears.

"Ahh, her mother hailed from the East," you say, while sipping your Cappuccino. No, in fact, my mom grew up in the house in which I was raised with a farming father and a housewife mother.

When I mention my rural roots it's interesting to watch people's reactions. They tend to step back and exclaim, "you don't look like it."

"I pitched the buck teeth and gingham dress somewhere on I-80," I reply.

Never mind that I've strolled through as many museums as bean fields and gone to as many operas as county fairs. The attitude is a long-lived one which my mom encountered when she went to school here and the same one her mother probably found at the UI in the '20s. It's kind of a family tradition.

I'm not oblivious to the state's shortcomings, believe me. We don't have an overwhelming landscape or even the lakes of our northern neighbors. (The lake I swam in as a kid was known as Brown's Lake — the name was apt.)

Even in high school my friends and I joked about the state's logo, "a place to grow." We thought the phrase "and then leave" should be added.

But as I near the time when I will move on, I have come to appreciate this state considered to be the middle of the Midwest. To me, we are not so much in the middle — a word that conjures average and staid. I like to think of Iowa as a centered place where the people are reasonable, independent, with common sense and a clear view of who they are.

My roots were all around as I grew up sleeping in the same room my uncle had as a child and climbing the same trees. When I played with my best friend at her house, it was one my great-grandfather had built in the early 1900s. And just down the road from where my grandpa spent his childhood, earned his living and raised his children, he dwelt in his new home, remaining at the head of the table on holidays and at the head of the family.

A stifling, constrictive lifestyle some would think, but I believe my relatives found a freedom I will have to work hard at achieving as I make my way into the world.

And when out-of-staters ask about my home state with incredulous looks, I'll tell them why Iowans are happy where they are.

For me, it's the crunch of gravel under my feet rather than the impersonal padding on pavement. It's the rural lights that are beacons rather than guards. And it's the withered faces of farmers with their wry humor that comes from depending on fickle weather and the even more fickle market.

And when they ask where Idaho is again, I'll simply shrug — I know where I'm from.

"Come out" from sin

To the Editor:

This moment I am sitting behind a table at the IMU, with a banner over my head that reads, "Campus Bible Fellowship." Beside our table is another table, with a banner that reads, "Gay Peoples' Union . . ." While walking by the two tables, many students have chuckled at the unmistakable contrast. But which table represents the truth? Is homosexuality right or wrong? Well, God says: "Do you not know that the wicked will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived: Neither the sexually immoral nor idolaters nor adulterers nor male prostitutes nor homosexual offenders nor thieves nor the greedy nor drunkards nor slanderers nor swindlers will inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Corinthians 6:9).

Remember, these are not my words — they are God's words! Additional God-words include: "The look on their faces testifies against them: they parade their sin like Sodom; they do not hide it. Woe to them! They have brought disaster upon themselves" (Isa 3:9).

Because of our tables at the Union and because of the emphasis on "National Coming Out Day," I italicized the words, "homosexual offenders," in the verse above. However, homosexual offenders is only one category of several who will not inherit the kingdom of God. "Drunkards," for example, will not inherit the kingdom of God either. Drunkenness isn't wrong just because it can kill and embarrass a given fraternity. Drunkenness is wrong because God says it is wrong. (Though it does work better to obey God's rules than to disobey God's rules).

Additionally, God says the "sexually immoral" will not inherit the kingdom of God. Whereas it seems old fashioned to say premarital sex is immoral, it is nonetheless immoral. Why? Because God says it is: "It is better to marry than to burn with passion" (1 Cor 7:9). And, oh, for you who have sensuous posters on your walls, lust is also immoral. According to Jesus, "Anyone who looks at a woman lustfully has already committed adultery with her in his heart" (Mt 5:28).

Whereas such a view of morality may seem constricting such laws in reality demonstrate God's love. Rather than being confused by a cacophony of everyone else's roll-your-own-at-home morality, God has defined morality for us. However, He has done more than define morality. He has provided a way for our immorality to be forgiven. God's one and only Son, Jesus shed His blood on the cross so our sins could be "washed" away. We can be "sanctified," "justified in the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Cor 6:11). Praise God! There is a way to "come out" from our sin!

Brogan lacks taste

To the Editor:

I was appalled by Mike Brogan's recent editorial on the Miss America contest. He demonstrated a crass lack of sensitivity to the recent alcohol-related death on this campus. It seems ironic that his juvenile, testosterone- and beer-laden editorial appeared on the same day that one-half of the front page was dedicated to the issue of alcohol abuse. Perhaps Mike should consider consultation with Health Iowa concerning his drinking behavior and a visit to the Women's Resource and Action Center to expand his views on gender.

Hotel employee testifies in Selena murder trial

Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A loud boom echoed through a motel, and then a calm-looking woman with a gun chased a screaming Selena through the courtyard, a maintenance man testified Thursday.

The witness, Trinidad Espinoza, identified the woman with the gun as Yolanda Saldivar, the former Selena fan club president charged with murdering the Grammy-winning Tejano singing star March 31.

Saldivar "was pointing it at her," Espinoza said. Then, "she just walked up, stopped. She walked back to the room." Asked if she looked sad, angry or excited, he replied, "No, just normal."

The testimony contradicted defense claims that a hysterical Saldivar shot the 23-year-old Selena by accident.

Saldivar's attorney, Douglas Tinker, said in opening statements that during a meeting with Selena at the motel Saldivar was waving the gun and it accidentally went off.

Tinker said his client went to A Place To Shoot, a gun store in San Antonio, on March 11 to buy a gun to protect herself from the harassment of Selena's father.

Two shop employees testified that after a background check came up clean, Ms. Saldivar was allowed to purchase a .38-caliber handgun on March 13.

She returned it two days later, but bought it again on March 26, five days before Selena was shot.

While denying he threatened Ms. Saldivar, Abraham Quintanilla Jr., Selena's father and manager, testified that he confronted her in January with complaints from parents who said they bought their children $22 memberships in the Selena Fan Club being run by Saldivar, but received nothing.

Quintanilla testified that Ms. Saldivar told him those parents were trying to get Selena items for free, but he said a review of club records made him believe she was stealing money.

Prosecutors contend the slaying was deliberate and took place after Selena went to the motel to fire Saldivar, 35, for allegedly embezzling $30,000 from Selena's boutiques. Selena was shot in a motel room, ran outside and collapsed in the lobby of the office.

Diane Munoz, above, a fan of slain Tejano music star Selena, holds her lottery ticket as she waits to hear if her number is called to be one of the 25 people from the public allowed to sit in the courtroom for the trial of Yolanda Saldivar, Thursday in Houston. Munoz' number was one of the 25 called. Some of the 85 people, who wish to be spectators in the trial of Yolanda Saldivar, (right) wait in the lottery line to get a number before a drawing.

Associated Press

Selena's mother had to be escorted from the courtroom as Espinoza gave his testimony, the most dramatic yet of the trial.

Earlier Thursday, manicurist Celia Soliz testified that the day before the slaying, Selena had expressed concern while getting her nails done about Saldivar's shoddy record-keeping and said she planned to fire her.

Soliz works at Selena Etc. in Corpus Christi, one of two stores owned by the singer.

"She was very upset," Soliz said, adding that she even followed the singer home that night because "I was worried about her."

The same evening, Saldivar, who lives in San Antonio, checked into a Days Inn where Selena was fatally shot.

In the days leading up to her death, Selena had been trying to assemble business records for income tax filing.

"There were some papers missing, bank statements, boutique daily sales reports," said Debra Ramirez, who was helping Selena organize the paperwork. "Yolanda had them."

Asked about Selena's reaction to the missing records, Ramirez said, "She was upset, kind of irritated."

Selena was shot as she met with Saldivar to retrieve business records.

AGENTS REVIEW EMPLOYEE RECORD

FBI combs crash area for links to saboteurs

Michelle Boorstein
Associated Press

HYDER, Ariz. — The FBI broadened its search Thursday for the saboteur who derailed an Amtrak train, checking tire tracks in the desert several miles away, knocking on doors in the sparsely populated area and interviewing railroad employees.

About 40 of the 90 agents who

"It's very broad. It's still open to everyone."

Robert Walsh, FBI agent running the investigation have been working near the site of Monday's crash fanned out to interview residents and others, said Robert Walsh, the FBI agent running the investigation.

About 20 other agents were sent back to their home offices from the crash scene 55 miles southwest of Phoenix, where Amtrak's Sunset Limited derailed on a sabotaged stretch of track and tumbled into a gulch.

One crew member was killed and at least 78 people were injured.

The saboteur unbolted a bar that holds two rails together, loosened or removed spikes and used a wire to bypass a system intended to warn crews of a break in the track.

Several copies of a letter alluding to the federal sieges at Waco, Texas, and Ruby Ridge, Idaho, and signed "Sons of Gestapo" were found at the scene.

Agents have been given access to Amtrak personnel records and are interviewing employees of the rail company and Southern Pacific Railroad, which owns the track, said Walsh, who heads the FBI's San Diego office. He cautioned against interpreting that to mean investigators have fixed on the theory the saboteur was a disgruntled railroad employee.

"That would be quite a stretch. If they really wanted to target the railroads, I think that's what they would have focused on more in the letter," Walsh said.

Agents also have collected information on anti-government militia groups, he said, again warning against concluding the FBI is leaning toward that theory.

"It's very broad. It's still open to everyone," Walsh said.

Agents even copied the subscriber list of an obscure railroad magazine that published an article detailing a 56-year-old case of track sabotage in Nevada that paralleled the Amtrak case down to disabling the warning system.

The magazine, Southern Pacific Trainline, which has 30 subscribers in Arizona and 1,800 total, was put in the mail in Kansas on Oct. 3, less than a week before the wreck.

In the morning agents in vehicles and on foot traveled several miles from the site to a spot where tire tracks were spotted from the air. They returned at midday, and Walsh wouldn't immediately say if they had a solid lead.

Investigators were hampered by temperatures that reached 114 degrees — causing at least one case of dehydration — and the normal hazards of the desert.

"You have to tell them how to avoid rattlesnakes, how to avoid cactus and how to avoid injury," Walsh said.

Attorney General Janet Reno again appealed for public help. The FBI has set up a hot line for receiving tips.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Settles tabbed Wooden award candidate

Iowa forward Jess Settles has been named as one of 25 finalists for the 1996 John R. Wooden All-American team and Player of the Year Award.

Criteria for the award, which include academics and athletics, were determined by the Awards committee.

Settles called the nomination,
"the best honor I've ever received."

Wooden was the legendary coach of UCLA during the '60s and early '70s and an all-American basketball player at Purdue University.

"I know that Coach Wooden stands for what's good with basketball and he's a champion and he stays humble," Settles said.

"I would love to sit down with him some day and just to be mentioned with him is the best reward
I've ever had."

Wisconsin's Bennett has qualms about height

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — New Wisconsin coach Dick Bennett said Thursday he's concerned about the lack of size and experience on his new team — but that's nothing new for the former coach at Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Bennett, hired last March to replace the fired Stan Van Gundy as coach of the Badgers, told reporters that "I think I have to find kids who are capable of playing bigger."

"If I can't find a guard who can play big, that will concern me," Bennett said. "Somebody has to make that jump. I'd like it to be two people."

At Green Bay, and before that at Wisconsin-Stevens Point, Bennett became famous for taking teams made up of unheralded players to winning records and postseason play.

His Phoenix teams reached postseason action five of the past six seasons, including three NCAA appearances. Green Bay came within 49-48 of knocking off Purdue in the NCAA playoffs last March.

NFL

Jets', Giants' home will be renovated

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Giants Stadium will undergo its first major expansion since opening in 1976 with the addition of 32 suites and 794 club suites in a $37.2 million project slated for completion before the 1997 NFL season.

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Iowa men's basketball coach Tom Davis shares a laugh with seniors Kenyon Murray and Russ Millard Thursday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Davis discusses outlook

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Accompanied by his three seniors, Iowa men's basketball coach Tom Davis spoke at a press conference Thursday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena to give Hawkeye fans their first glimpse of a highly touted Iowa squad.

Lining Davis' agenda was a concern not to put too much stake in preseason media predictions, the need for a force underneath the basket and a push to make sure Monter Glasper, Russ Millard and Kenyon Murray could get a word in edge-wise in the midst of a media blitz.

"We've got some good, solid veterans back," Davis said. "It's okay to be excited, but I don't put too much stock in (the magazine predictions). It probably makes winning a little harder."

Millard was quick to concur with Davis, who is beginning his 10th season at Iowa's helm.

"(The ranking) is just a number," Millard said. "We're all looking forward to the challenge that this season is going to bring."

But perhaps it was Glasper, the backup point guard, who put the upcoming season into perspective.

"Having a No. 5 ranking is something that will hopefully make us work harder in practice," Glasper said. "Hopefully we can stay in that ranking and play as hard as we can and realize that we're the hunted instead of the hunters."

After Davis and the seniors disposed of the media-hype questions, concerns turned toward Iowa's big men. More specifically, who will plug up last year's glaring hole in the middle.

Forward Jess Settles tied Hawkeye alum Jim Bartels for the team lead in rebounds last season with 6.2 per game. However, it's not known whether the junior's back has fully healed from the injury that forced him to watch four Big Ten Conference games from the bench.

Hawks want revenge

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Iowa sophomore quarterback Matt Sherman will try to lead the Hawkeyes to their seventh-consecutive win, dating back to last season.

Iowa wants to keep winning streak alive

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The day after Friday the 13th,
Iowa will be looking for lucky No.
7.

The Hawkeyes, 4-0 this season,
1-0 in the Big Ten conference, have won six straight games going back to last season. Something Iowa has not accomplished since they won six games to end the 1987 season.

Kickoff is scheduled for noon on Saturday at Kinnick Stadium against the Hoosiers.

Indiana (2-3, 0-2), coming off a loss to Illinois, is going to have to rely on back-ups to get the job done against Iowa.

Adam Greenlee will replace Chris Dittoe at quarterback. Dittoe was 57-of-117 this season for 742 yards before going down with a knee injury.

Greenlee, a senior walk-on, had thrown only one pass in his first three years with the Hoosiers.
This season, he is 13-of-27 for 91 yards, no touchdowns and three interceptions.

"He supposedly is a better runner, a better scrambler than Dittoe," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said about Greenlee.

Sean Glover, the Hoosiers' third-string tailback, will also be thrown into the starting spot.

Glover, a senior, has carried the ball 21 times this season for 42 yards. He will be backed up by two freshmen — Kenyon Hartfield and Eugene Jones — who have not played yet this season.

No. 1 running back Alex Smith, who ran for 232 yards against the

Hoosier fans are way too unrealistic

If there's one thing I've learned over the past week, it's that Indiana football fans are either idiots or clueless.

I placed calls to a few IU students (whose identities have been changed at their requests) to get their stances on this weekend's Hawkeye-
Hoosier matchup.
While I didn't expect their responses to be impartial — any Big Ten fan will support their team — I at least expected them to make sense.

I, however, am a professional journalist, obligated to be fair and unbiased, so I kept this code in

Bruce boosts Rams in NFC West battle

R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Isaac Bruce wouldn't let special teams mistakes and turnovers stop the St.
Louis Rams.

Bruce caught 10 passes for 191 yards and two touchdowns, his third 100-yard receiving day in four games, sending the Rams past the Atlanta Falcons 21-19 Thursday night in an unlikely battle for first place in the NFC West.

A sellout crowd of 59,700 watched what could be the final NFL game played at Busch Stadium. A news conference is scheduled for Friday to announce whether the $260 million Trans World Dome will be ready for the Rams-49ers game
Oct. 22, but it's likely the Rams (5-1) will have one more game at Busch.

Bruce has caught six touchdown passes in his first year as a starter. In the last two games, he has totaled 372 yards receiving.

He set up one of the scores when he ran 51 yards off a lateral on a punt return from Todd Kinchen to the Falcons 9 late in the first half.

The Rams have been successful on that play the last two games, but special teams, a big plus in their 4-0 start, nearly did them in this time. Kevin Ross returned a blocked field goal attempt 83 yards for a score in the second quarter and Eric Metcalf returned a wobbly Sean Landeta punt 66 yards for a score in the third quarter.

The Rams also had a fumble and an interception. After committing no turnovers the first four games, they've had four the last two games.

Tony Zendejas' second field goal of the game, from 45 yards with 11:58 to go, cut the gap to

VOLLEYBALL

Hawkeyes hope for reversal at home

Jon Basso
The Daily Iowan

Desperation time is not here yet, but it is getting close.

The struggling Iowa volleyball team will try to get back on track with a pair of home matches this weekend. The Hawkeyes have lost five straight conference games.

The Hawkeyes play host to Illinois and Indiana in Big Ten battles on Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m.

Iowa (8-9, 1-5) is coming off a rough weekend. The Hawkeyes were handled by a couple of Big Ten powerhouses, Penn State and Ohio
State. The Nittany Lions dropped Iowa 16-18, 12-15, 4-15, 6-15. The

Thomas leads Devils past Winnipeg

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Steve Thomas continued to do his best to make New Jersey fans forget playoff MVP Claude Lemieux by scoring twice to lead the New Jersey Devils to a 4-1 victory over the Winnipeg Jets on Thursday night.

Thomas, who was acquired just before the season in a trade for the disgruntled Lemieux, put New Jersey ahead 2:29 into the game, knocking the rebound of a Stephane Richer shot past Jets goalie Tim Cheveldae. Thomas, who had an assist in his first game, got his second goal midway through the second period with New Jersey skating with a two-man advantage.

Denis Pederson scored his first

NHL goal in his first game and Martin Brodeur stopped 29 shots as the Stanley Cup champions won for the second time in as many games.

Lightning 3, Canadiens 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Petr Klima scored twice as the Tampa Bay Lightning continued their home-ice domination of Montreal with a 3-1 victory over the Canadiens.

The victory improved the Lightning's home record against Montreal to 5-0-1 in their four-year history. They also hold a 6-3-1 overall series advantage.

It was the third straight loss opening the season for the Canadiens, who previously suffered embarrassing 7-1 and 6-1 losses.

Blackhawks 5, Penguins 1

CHICAGO — Jeff Shantz scored shorthanded and Patrick Poulin had two goals as the Chicago Blackhawks won their home opener, 5-1 over the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Gary Suter and Bernie Nicholls also scored for the Blackhawks, who got 28 saves from Ed Belfour.

Mario Lemieux ruined Belfour's shutout bid by scoring shorthanded with 8:11 to play but otherwise struggled.

Lemieux nevertheless has eight points in three games after missing most of the last two seasons with a back injury.

Blues 3, Stars 1

DALLAS — Grant Fuhr turned aside 35 shots to record his 292nd career victory and Brian Noonan snapped a 1-1 tie with a second-period power-play goal as the St. Louis Blues continued their domination of the Dallas Stars with a 3-1 victory.

The Blues (2-1-0) were outshot 36-19 but they beat Stars goalie Andy Moog three times on their first 13 shots en route to their 13th victory in 16 meetings with the Stars.

Meanwhile, St. Louis got strong goaltending from the 32-year-old Fuhr, who allowed seven goals in two periods last season in his previous visit to Reunion Arena while a member of the Los Angeles Kings. Only Moog has more career victories than Fuhr among active goaltenders with 313.

RAMS WIN

21-19. But the Rams ran out the final 6:36.

Chris Miller completed 27 of 38 passes for 328 yards for St. Louis and Jerome Bettis had his best day of the season with 88 yards on 19 carries.

Jeff George was 16 for 30 for 160 yards for Atlanta (4-2).

The Rams dominated the first half, outgaining Atlanta 292 yards to 109, but an 83-yard return on a blocked field goal attempt by Ross kept the Falcons in striking distance at 21-10.

St. Louis was in position to make it 17-0 on a 27-yard kick by Steve McLaughlin but Roger Harper got his arm on the ball, Ross picked it up, and evaded a couple of tackles to score down the sideline with 3:05 left in the half.

The Rams had a reply, with Kinchen executing a lateral on a punt return for the second time in as many games. Kinchen skipped the pass to Bruce on the opposite sideline, but Bruce scooped it up and returned it 51 yards to the 9. Bruce caught his second touchdown pass from that distance with 41 seconds to go in the half.

The Rams answered on Miller's 9-yard pass to Bruce with 41 seconds left in the half. The Falcons had enough time, though, to set up a 40-yard field goal by Zendejas on the last play of the half.

Miller's first pass of the game was dropped by Pat Carter, then he hit 11 in a row. The Rams took the lead with 1:45 left in the first quarter when a backpedaling Miller connected on a 59-yard touchdown to Bruce.

They made it 14-0 on Johnny Bailey's 12-yard run on a pitchout with 11:09 left in the half. Bailey ran behind a convoy of three wide receivers and tackle Wayne Gandy, and scored untouched.

Buckeyes took care of business 24-5, 25-21, 17-9 in a made for TV match.

"I think the team played well against Penn State and Ohio State, and the weekend before, against Michigan State," coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "We just haven't been able to match up well enough to win."

Junior Jennifer Webb continued her hot play, leading the Hawkeyes in kills both matches. Against Ohio State, Webb pounded out 13 kills. She finished with a match-high 24 kills against Penn State.

Schoenstedt said she will try to shake things up a bit this weekend, but doesn't have enough players to fool around too much.

"(Freshman) Katie O'Brien had a good week of practice," Schoenstedt said. "We're going to try to experiment with different players at different positions."

"We're going to start (junior) Heather Calomese in the middle and use O'Brien on the outside."

The Hawkeyes have struggled ever since senior Tiffany McDaniel went down with a knee injury. Although she will not travel this weekend, she is expected to be back in action in a week or two.

Iowa should have an easier time this weekend than it did against last weekend's foes. Illinois dominated in its non-conference schedule but has struggled in conference play.

The Illini stand 12-4 and 3-4. Indiana is 10-10 overall and only 2-5 in conference play.

HOOSIER FANS

mind while conducting the interviews.

Thus, I chose my questions carefully.

"Is it frustrating waiting for a Saturday game knowing that Indiana has no chance at winning?" I asked.

Despite my sensitive approach, I found Hoosier fans to be hostile and filled to the brim with malice.

"There isn't a chance in hell we'll lose to Iowa," IU fan Lamar Anson said.

After I pulled myself off the ground from uncontrollable laughter, I decided to call him back and get a score prediction, a prophecy he was more than willing to fulfill.

"52-6 asshole."

If you're anything like me, this score may have seemed a tad awkward. 52-6 — huh. And he blurted it out so definitively, as if he'd had this discussion with his friends in the past:

"That's right, Hoosier buddy, we're gonna score seven touchdowns and a field goal on their Hawkeye asses," he probably said.

What bothered me even more is that Anson said IU would never lose to a hick team like Iowa, but when I asked to define "Hoosier," he couldn't do it.

Jeff Golden was a bit more friendly. He valiantly defended his school's abilities, but could understand why I thought his team would lose.

"It's pretty upsetting, but we get over it," Golden said of the Hoosiers' gridiron woes.

But Golden — like Anson before him — eventually turned violent.

"That's bulls—t," he said after I forecasted an Iowa win. "We're still gonna kick Iowa's ass."

After all my work, I was still searching for some logic. Finally, I found it in Ellen Spiegler. She offered keen insight on what it's like trying to follow a mediocre football team and submits her theory as to why the Hoosiers are struggling.

"Yeah, it's been frustrating. We should be so good, but we're not," Spiegler said.

"Everybody is hurt, or we just suck, I don't know."

However, when I relayed to her the overwhelming probability of an Iowa victory, she balked at the idea and warned that I not speak in haste.

"I don't know," she said of a Hawkeye win, "we're not that bad."

I followed up with, "so do you really think Indiana can win on Saturday?"

"Well yeah," Spiegler said, "you're Iowa."

I'm not going to lie and pretend this didn't piss me off just a tad. Let me expand on that — this irked me more than the Anson-hick incident.

In a spiteful tone, I spat at Spiegler, "Do you have any idea what Iowa's record is?"

"No," she said, "but I'm sure it's not that good."

After that comment I thanked her for her time and hung up. I was distraught. These were Big Ten students I was talking to, attending school in a conference known for its academics as well as its athletics.

Yet still, they're all blind to the obvious: Indiana doesn't have prayer come Saturday.

IOWA ROUNDUP

Hawks head to Michigan for Spartan, Wolverine rematch

When the Hawkeyes visit Michigan and Michigan State this weekend, they hope it's not Deja vu all over again.

The Hawkeyes trailed both teams well into the second half before pulling off a pair of come-from-behind victories. Iowa edged the Wolverines 4-3 in overtime and eked out a 2-1 victory in the final seconds against the Spartans.

Iowa is out to its best start since 1992 and is currently ranked third in the nation. Hawkeye mid-fielder Nancy McLinden said Iowa is going to have to come more aggressive this time around.

"We can't come out and play like we did the first game," McLinden said. "We may not be so lucky. It will just be a matter of staying focused and playing our game."

Iowa dug itself a hole against the Wolverines, trailing 3-0 going into the second half.

"We weren't aggressive and we made poor judgements. Luckily Annette and Diane got things going," McLinden said.

Annette Payne and Diane DeMiro scored goals to lead the Hawkeye comeback. Against Michigan State, it was freshman Quan Nim who saved the day, scoring with 17 seconds left in regulation to break a 1-1 tie and give Iowa the 2-1 victory over the Spartans.

As if things weren't going well enough for the 9-2 Hawkeyes, goalkeeper Lisa Cellucci was named Big Ten player of the week on Tuesday. The red-shirt freshman has snagged 79 saves and has a .868 save percentage. McLinden said it's a big weekend for Iowa.

"These are our last road games in the conference. If we can pick these up then we should be able to capture the Big Ten title," McLinden said.

Women's Golf

After finishing 12th out of 15 teams at the Lady Northern Invitational two weeks ago, the Iowa women's golf team is looking to regain its knockout punch.

This weekend the Hawkeyes will compete against another tough field in Wichita, Kan.,

Iowa coach Diane Thomason said her team needs to make improvements in several areas including its attitude.

"We definitely need a stronger mental attitude," she said. "When you get a little bit down you've got to pick yourself back up and get going again and sometimes I don't think we're as good at that as we need to be."

Freshman Becky Sjolholm said the Hawkeyes are hoping to make up for lost time.

"It will be good to compete again," she said. "We know that we have a lot of work to do, but we think we can pull it together by the end of the year."

Despite the slow start, Thomason said she has seen some encouraging signs.

"In very subtle ways, I think we're moving ahead," she said. "I'm impatient, and so sometimes we don't move as quickly as I'd like for us to move."

— Shannon Stevens

Men's Tennis

While the Iowa men's tennis team takes a break from doubles action this weekend, the singles competition should be fierce.

Following a strong outing at the Ball State Invitational, the Hawkeyes will be put to a severe test when they travel to face some of the nation's toughest tennis players at the All-American Championships in Austin, TX. The field will include nearly 300 players from all over the nation.

Iowa coach Steve Houghton said it was essential for the Hawkeyes to get off to a strong start.

"It's critical that we win our first round matches, because if you lose you're out," Houghton said. "There are no consolation matches."

The match will also mark the fall debut for senior Garrett Olson, who has had a shoulder injury.

Tom Derouin, Marcus Ekstrand, Ryan Johnstone, Mattias Jonsson, Jess Patterson, Justin Pohn and Damir Seferovic will all see action for the Hawkeyes.

— Shannon Stevens

Men's Golf

When you're down to your last handful of bullets, you'd better take good aim.

That's the philosophy that the Iowa men's golf team is taking as it heads into its fall finale at the Northern Invitational.

Senior Bob Richards said the Hawkeyes want to end the fall season on a positive note.

"We know we're capable of playing good and we just have to show that in a tournament," he said.

"That's basically what we've been lacking the whole year. We've been playing pretty good at Finkbine and then we'll go to a tournament and our scores will shoot up pretty high."

Iowa coach Terry Anderson said he will try using a more experienced lineup to offset a disappointing performance at the Windon Memorial Classic.

"We've got experience and I'm going to try to make it work to our advantage," he said. "I think the guys have been around enough to believe in that experience and if they just have the patience then we're going to be o.k."

— Shannon Stevens

Women's Tennis

The Iowa women's tennis team will be lacking a little firepower when it travels to Bloomington, Ind., to compete in the Hoosier Invitational this weekend.

Iowa's two most experienced players, seniors Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette will head home to California to compete in the Riviera Qualifier, while the rest of the Hawkeyes take their chances against the defending Big Ten Conference champion Hoosiers and three other powerhouse squads.

Iowa coach Jenny Mainz said she's looking forward to trying out her squad of the future at the Hoosier Invitational.

"It's kind of nice because now I get to take eight people that are going to be with me for the next couple years," Mainz said. "Splitting the team up isn't that big of a deal because it's the fall. If anything, I think it's an advantage that I get to take more players to play."

Mainz said her two seniors will also have a chance to sharpen their skills against tough competition on the west coast.

"This is a golden opportunity for them to go out and play where they're comfortable," she said. "The best players in the country will be there and that's why I'm taking them."

— Shannon Stevens

CROSS COUNTRY

Men and women face in-state challenge

Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's and women's cross country teams are each going into this weekend's Iowa State Classic without a key runner.

The 32nd-ranked men's team heads to Ames without the 1994 Big Ten Conference freshman of the year, Jared Pittman, who is out with strep throat.

"This is Jared's second bout with strep throat," head coach Larry Wiecek said. "We don't want to run him and get his resistance down for the Big Ten meet, so we will sit him out."

Wiecek doesn't see the loss of Pittman as a major problem for the team due to the emergence of sophomore Mike Bakker in practice this week.

"There's no question that Mike can step up this weekend," Wiecek said.

"He's been doing really well in practice."

Assisting Bakker this week will be freshman Stetson Steele, the leading finisher for Iowa all season long. Steele has a 1st, 2nd, and a 3rd-place finish in his only three meets as a collegiate.

"Individually, I'm very happy with my performance, but I'd like to contribute more for the team," Steele said.

"This weekend will be a good chance to prove that I can run with the NCAA's best."

The women's team, on the other hand, will probably lose their No. 1 finisher, junior Becky Coleman. Coleman has a minor strain in her right calf that occurred while hurrying to a class.

"Chances are that I will stay out of the meet this weekend because we don't want to aggravate it for the Big Ten meet," Coleman said. "We want to make sure it heals as much as possible before I bang on it."

Like Steele, Coleman has been the top Hawkeye finisher since the first meet of the season. Her 4th-place time of 17:27 at last weekend's Maine Invitational was her personal best.

The Iowa women will also be without the services of senior Shawn Fleck, who will miss the meet to take her GRE test.

The loss of Coleman and Fleck will attempt to be nullified by juniors Briana Benning and Kirsten Pauling. Benning also set her personal best last weekend with an 18:25 time.

HAWKEYES

Hawkeyes last season, will be watching the game from the sidelines with three broken ribs. No. 2 tailback Michael Batts, who has carried the ball 49 times for 163 yards this season, was expected to replace Smith, but he injured his left knee in practice on Wednesday and will miss the game as well.

Last year, Iowa lost to the Hoosiers 27-20 at Kinnick Stadium in a game that saw quarterback Ryan Driscoll suffer a broken collarbone in the first half.

"They took advantage of our weaknesses the past two years, particularly the injured people," Fry said.

"We just couldn't fire shots, defensively or offensively. Knock on wood. Fortunately, we're pretty healthy this year."

The Hawkeyes looked sharp last week against Michigan State. Sedrick Shaw rushed 42 times for 250 yards, Matt Sherman completed 13-of-26 passes for 213 yards and Tim Dwight caught six passes for 115 yards.

The Hawkeyes currently rank No. 1 in the Big Ten in rushing offense, net punting, scoring defense and total offense. They rank No. 2 in rushing defense and No. 4 in total defense.

Individually, Sedrick Shaw leads the conference in rushing, is fourth in all-purpose yards and fifth in scoring. Matt Sherman is second in passing efficiency and third in total offense.

Nick Gallery leads the Big Ten in punting and Plez Atkins is tied for first in interceptions.

Iowa leads the overall series against Indiana, 32-22-4. Indiana has won the last two meetings, but Iowa has won eight of the last 11.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

primarily because of our lack of rebounding last year," Davis said.

A pair of sophomores will also be jockeying for playing time. Six-foot-nine Ryan Bowen started 19 games for the Hawkeyes last season, while the 6-foot-10 Greg Helmers was sidelined much of the spring semester with a sprained ankle.

However, Bowen's future may not lie underneath the basket.

"In the early part of practice, we're going to try to make a guard out of Ryan Bowen," Davis said. "When I say guard, I mean the No. 3 position that Kenyon Murray has held down virtually his whole career. To us that's a guard; it's a third guard position."

Three freshmen hope to see their share of war under the basket. J.R. Koch shows the most immediate promise and has caught the eye of the Iowa coaching staff. Koch will have the chance to show what he can do from Day 1, while Guy Rucker and Alvin Robinson's status are still uncertain.

"We're going to play J.R. Koch at (Settles') position in the early going and let him learn along with Jess and see how it goes," Davis said.

Davis said while he was confident in the abilities of his other three recruits (shooting guard Trey Bullett is the third), Koch was the only one he got to see play this summer.

Koch spent his summer evenings playing in the Prime Time Basketball League on the same team as Murray.

However, the most intriguing element of the front court is Millard. The senior from Cedar Rapids enters his final year of eligibility with less than four semesters of experience under his belt.

"The front court, in particular, starts with Russ," Davis said. "As a senior he deserves this role and he's shown signs over his career of being able to fulfill that."

KEY MATCHUP

Indians prepare for the Big Unit

Ben Walker

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — This is the type of matchup that can become an October memory, the kind of moment that can make a single baseball game seem so special. Randy Johnson vs. the Cleveland Indians.

The most intimidating, dominant pitcher the sport has seen in years going against the most fearsome, fearless lineup in the game today. Facing each other on Friday the 13th, with the fate of a whole season at stake.

For Johnson, Game 3 of the AL playoffs at Jacobs Field will mark the fourth time in 12 days that he's been asked by the Seattle Mariners to carry them with his long, lanky left arm.

"If we don't win those games, we wouldn't be here right now," he said. "It just so happens I was pitching those games. Because I have risen to the occasion for those games, there are expectations on me."

"Sure, it's fair," he said. "I think that is a responsibility I took on when I became the pitcher that I was. The same responsibility that I think a Greg Maddux, a Dave Stewart, Orel Hershiser or Roger Clemens have."

Hershiser did his part Wednesday night, pitching the Indians past the Mariners 5-2 to tie the best-of-7 series.

Now, it's Johnson turn, again.

He saved Seattle's season when he beat California in a one-game playoff for the AL West title on Oct. 2. Four days later, he helped the Mariners stave off elimination by beating New York in the opening round of the AL playoffs.

Associated Press

Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. watches the flight of his sixth-inning home run off of Cleveland pitcher Orel Hershiser Wednesday.

Then, the 6-foot-10 Johnson moved up even further in stature, as if it seemed possible. Just 48 hours after throwing 116 pitches, he pitched three innings in relief and wound up the winner as the Mariners beat the Yankees last Sunday in the decisive Game 5.

"I'm not really going to know what to do pitching with these extra days' rest," he said. "But, I think the rest will do me some good."

Johnson certainly has earned it. He went 18-2 in the regular season — the game against the Angels counts in those stats — and came within one victory of becoming the first AL pitcher since Hal Newhouser in 1945 to lead the league in wins, strikeouts and ERA.

Overall, the Mariners are 28-3 in games Johnson starts. He beat the Indians the only time he saw them, striking out 13 and walking none in a complete-game, eight-hitter at Jacobs Field on July 7. He's 8-3 lifetime against them despite a 4.20 ERA.

"Randy knows that every time he pitches against us we hit him pretty good," said Carlos Baerga, a career .324 hitter against Johnson.

"It will be a big game for us and I think that's going to be the key game for us to winning the series," he said.

Albert Belle, who homered 50 times this season for the Indians, has hit three career home runs off Johnson. He's also struck out 13 times in 36 at-bats, and is a .250 lifetime hitter against the Seattle ace.

"Albert Belle is a power hitter and I'm a power pitcher," Johnson said. "I've always challenged everybody with my fastball."

"I realize that batters time your fastball, and I will pitch him accordingly," he said. "I don't anticipate staying with a steady diet of fastballs. I'll have to throw some off-speed stuff."

In fact, it's those breaking balls, not necessarily his near-100 mph fastballs, that Johnson wants people to focus on.

YANKEE SLUGGER

The Straw could be in trouble yet again

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry's impromptu visit to a Manhattan nightclub this week could land him behind bars for violation of the six-month house arrest sentence handed down at his income tax trial.

"We've turned the case over to the probation department," Deputy U.S. Attorney Shirah Neiman said Thursday. The New York Yankees outfielder stopped inside a Manhattan nightclub Monday night without permission from his probation officer.

Strawberry was sentenced April 24 to six months house arrest following his guilty plea to a tax evasion. But the night after the Yankees lost their playoff series to the Mariners, he stopped inside the China Club to visit some teammates, said agent Bill Goodstein.

While Goodstein presented the incident as an honest mistake, federal authorities said they were checking to see if it violated the terms of Strawberry's sentence.

If the probation department investigation determines there was a violation, Strawberry could be

Gooden eager to resume career

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees, who acquired former Mets Darryl Strawberry and David Cone this season, are close to signing Dwight Gooden, according to published reports.

Gooden, who has not pitched in the major leagues since being suspended on July 28, 1994 for violating his drug aftercare program, negotiated for three days recently with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, the New York Post and New York Daily News said today.

The Florida Marlins, Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox are also believed to have shown interest in Gooden, but he has stated a preference to stay in New York, where he played for the Mets from 1984 until he was suspended.

Gooden, who has a career record of 157-85 with a 3.10 ERA and one Cy Young Award, will reportedly receive a three-year deal with team options for the second and third years.

"I'm hopeful we can get it done today," Gooden told the Daily News Wednesday. "George has been really great about this. He's been on this thing from the very beginning and I really hope we can get it done so I can play for him."

Steinbrenner said he had been working on signing Gooden.

"My people have been meeting with him," Steinbrenner said. "There are a lot of clubs bidding for him, so I can't say where we are."

Steinbrenner, who said he signed Strawberry to give him a chance to rebuild his life following a drug suspension, has said he's impressed with Gooden's recovery.

Otherwise, he must remain at home or in a hotel, and even was required to eat in his hotel room. He could not go to a restaurant unless room service was not available.

Goodstein said that his client was only in the club for 25 minutes and drank only ginger ale. Strawberry had permission that night to have dinner with Goodstein at an East Side restaurant; the agent said the visit to the China Club was an impulse stop.

posed vulnerability in the postseason comes from comparing his regular season statistics to his playoff numbers. The contrast is stark, if not stunning.

The same pitcher who went 19-2 this year with a 1.63 ERA, the fierce competitor who has won his last 18 regular-season starts on the road, the control freak who walked only 23 batters all season has been a regular Joe in the playoffs.

He entered the 1995 postseason with a 1-2 record and 8.10 ERA covering two games for the Braves against Philadelphia in 1993 and two for the Cubs against San Francisco in 1989.

In Game 1 against Colorado in the first round last week, he got a no-decision by allowing nine hits, three earned runs and two walks in seven innings. In Game 4, he allowed 10 hits and four earned runs but got the victory.

"We're so spoiled, me included, by what he does that we don't expect him to give up anything. Really though, he's pitched pretty good," Cox said.

Maddux explains it by the number of appearances in relation to the numbers they have produced.

"In the playoffs, things happen in such a short period of time that you have guys hitting .500, but the stats don't really mean that much. In the regular season, stats really don't mean much until after the All-Star break when you've played enough for them to be cumulative," Maddux said.

respectively follow. "Hand In My Pocket" replaces "Name" by the Goo Goo Dolls as the biggest alternative hit in the land. "Name" makes an enormous debut on the Pop Singles chart, coming in at No. 22. It also leaps onto the Album Rock chart and lands at No. 4.

AC/DC is back

As AC/DC's new album hits the chart, their latest hit, "Hard As A Rock," goes to No. 1 on the Album Rock chart.

"Hard," the first cut off their new Ballbreaker, reaches the top in only its fourth week. The Australian band replaces another from down under, as Silverschair's "Tomorrow" slips from the top.

Ballbreaker steps on the Album chart this week at No. 4. As rock music has dramatically changed in the last few years, AC/DC's sound has not. The top 5 showing is rare these days for a metal group.

Entering closely behind at No. 6 is the gold experience by the artist formerly known as Prince. All I Want by Tim McGraw, which debuted at No. 4 last week, slips to No. 5. Michael Bolton's Greatest Hits 1985-1995 goes from No. 5 to No. 7 in its second week.

Mariah Carey's latest album, Daydream, should debut at No. 1 this week. Candlebox shouldn't be too far behind when Lucy hits the chart in one week.

Mariah Carey's "Fantasy" holds at No. 1 for a third consecutive week on the Pop and R&B Singles charts. The single continues to

On the Pop chart, Coolio holds at No. 2 with "Gangsta's Paradise." Michael and Janet Jackson make a rare sibling competition at 3 and 4 with "You Are Not Alone" and "Runaway." Seal's "Kiss From A Rose" slips to No. 5, while receiving the most radio airplay for a 10th straight week.

'Hasta' opens audience to Cuban culture

Ernesto Acevedo-Muñoz
The Daily Iowan

Director Tomás Gutiérrez Alea's "Hasta cierto punto" (Up to a Certain Point, Cuba, 1983) is a bitter-sweet, constructive indictment of gender relations among the working class, artists and intellectuals from different levels of Cuban society.

In his self-reflexive style, Gutiérrez Alea's film tells the story of a screenwriter (Oscar Alvarez) who is researching Cuban dock workers for a film on machismo, one of the social problems "recognized" by the revolutionary government. As he videotapes interviews with men and women workers, he meets, and soon starts having an affair with, a brigade leader, Lina, played by Mirta Ibarra ("Strawberry and Chocolate").

Based on this predictable premise, however, Gutiérrez Alea and co-screenwriter (and director)

Juan Carlos Tabío ("Strawberry and Chocolate," "Se Permuta, Plaff!") put together a complex weave of dysfunctional personal and official relationships. The movie opens with one of the videotaped interviews in which a man says gender equality in Cuba can only advance "up to a certain point," and that men will and should always have the last word in relating to their spouses, partners and co-workers.

Departing from this opening statement, "Hasta cierto punto" goes on to expose, little by little, the dramatic implications of women's roles in Cuban society, which may prove, in the end, all but "revolutionary."

Following the story of Lina and Oscar, "Hasta cierto punto" manages to criticize in a sometimes humorous, sometimes dramatic way, not only the way in which Cubans (men and women) think about machismo but also the inherent hypocrisy of the government's efforts to educate people and fight the problem.

In his usual candid style, Gutiérrez Alea addresses a delicate situation with humor and honesty.

Like some of his previous and latter works ("Death of a Bureaucrat," "The Last Supper," "Strawberry and Chocolate") "Hasta cierto punto" is satirical, somewhat self-reflexive and certainly critical of Cuban society.

The sensibility of the main characters is presented in an inviting, understanding way that — in opposition to the movie's apparent simplicity — proves deceiving in its complexity. The balance in the end is critical, refreshing and sincere, making "Hasta cierto punto" consistent with the style and concept that has made the oeuvre of Gutiérrez Alea a favorite of Cuban and foreign audiences.

Hancher opens doors for quartet's world premiere

Steve Willard
The Daily Iowan

The Tokyo String Quartet and Pinchas Zukerman will premiere Marc Neikrug's String Quintet 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 13 at Hancher Auditorium. The program includes Schubert's "String Trio in B-Flat Major, D. 471"; selections from Bartok's "Violin Duos"; and Beethoven's "Storm Quintet in C Major."

Kikuei Ikeda, second violinist with the group since 1974, talked from Chicago to a Daily Iowan reporter: "Usually we play three different quartets — that's what we do 99 percent of the time. This season we commissioned a viola quintet from Marc Neikrug — he's a pianist as well — who plays with our friend Pinchas Zukerman. We thought we'd tour, do something different. Pinky likes to play a small trio with viola and cello, and we play the Bartok duo, so actually Pinky's playing all these pieces, and some of us get to relax a little bit while he plays an interesting program for us."

"(The Neikrug piece is) very, very different from the Beethoven quintet. The other pieces are a lot of fun, but the Neikrug piece is very serious. It's not a lighthearted dissonance or mechanical sorts of things; it's quite drawn out, broad music, not 'busy.' Whenever we have questions we go back to the score and talk about the character. All the decision-making comes from ourselves (as opposed to) trying to compare with other players. After so many years together we think as a quartet. The thoughts come at the same time. We like to sound as one instrument of course when the individual needs to come out on top of the other three, you have to do it."

"We have commissioned a few contemporary pieces and are talking about two more for next year."

"For our 25th anniversary (the quartet was founded in 1969), we played the complete Beethoven quartets in many different cities, a big moment for us. We didn't want any letdown, so we thought 'what can we do next?' We hope to play a quartet and piano quartet by Ezra Laderman, but that's still in the planning stage. For our 10th anniversary we commissioned a piece by Toru Takemitsu."

"I don't believe there's a bad audience. The responsibility comes from us: It's a mode of communication to the audience, and if we're not able to communicate to the audience, they tend to be on the other side of the line rather than being in the same room trying to share the same excitement, experience from music. Sometimes you feel it's true, before you play, even before you sit, walk on the stage 'oh this audience is wonderful.' Because I guess sometimes you feel this hunger to hear this music, and you don't really find that too many places, but I have experienced that and it's a wonderful feeling for the player, it's very inspiring for us ... unconsciously you give more effort. I was just talking to Pinky about this experience we had in the Israel Festival ... even before you put your bow on the string, there's a moment of excitement, when they're hungry. If you play 16 quartets (the Beethoven cycle), it's a challenge for the player and audience, too, and by the end — I think we did it in five concerts, in one week — it's electrifying."

"It's a question of communication. Wherever you go, a different type of audience: a Japanese audience is very quiet, they don't really go crazy ... very polite, and after the concert, then they show what they're feeling. In Italy they go nuts at the end of the first movement, and that kind of reaction is very different. I only go to quartet concerts once or twice a year; more often I go to piano concerts, lieder, or orchestral concerts. I do (quartet playing) all the time, spending more time with my quartet than my family, and I feel that's enough. I love the Schubert songs, lieder, Mozart opera, Wagner, some of the Italian operas. I learn a lot from them. Sometimes I wish I was a singer."

"We spent seven or eight rehearsals working on the Neikrug piece. (Working with Neikrug there were) a few questions of articulation: a passage marked with a tremolo which was quite far apart — did he want it under one bow? There are a few moments of silence. We weren't sure how long he wanted... He marked a whole bar rest, but because it's a slow tempo it might seem a bit too long. We might ask him to cut it in half!"

DEION'S CONTRACT

Jones picks another fight with NFL

Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Jerry Jones plans to fight the NFL's questioning of cornerback Deion Sanders' $35 million contract, the Dallas Cowboys owner said today, adding that he considers the league's position an attack on his team.

"This is suspicious to me. It's so transparent that the NFL is being selective," Jones said.

"They're trying to intimidate the Cowboys, they're trying to be a bully. We will not let them intimidate or bully us."

The league told the team to renegotiate its seven-year deal with Sanders to fit under the salary cap. The league has conditionally approved the deal but held that it violates the spirit of the $37.1 million-per-team cap, said Harold Henderson, the NFL's director of labor relations.

Jones said the contract follows the salary cap rules completely.

"This is not about Deion, what this is about is sticking it to the Dallas Cowboys."

"This is very disturbing," Jones said, adding that he expects to win the fight.

Technically, Sanders will make the NFL base salary of $178,000 for the first three years, but his pay will average $5.5 million per year including his nearly $13 million signing bonus.

"Sanders' contract is structured to avoid counting under the salary cap a very large portion of the compensation which Deion is to receive for his services during the early years of his contract," the NFL's Henderson said.

"In this respect, Deion's contract stands apart from every other in the league. In our view, the contract as currently structured involves salary cap circumvention."

The decision was immediately opposed by the NFL Players Association, which said the league has "no basis for challenging the contract in any way."

"Our agreement specially states that anything permitted by the collective bargaining agreement cannot be considered circumvention," said Richard Berthelsen, the union's general counsel.

"The league has already approved contracts for other players who have used the same techniques, including Andre Rison and Eric Allen."

Although the NFL is willing to let Sanders play immediately, his left ankle will keep him out of action Sunday.

"Deion is working on a limited basis. He's not going to play against the Chargers," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said Wednesday.

Sanders is recovering from surgery to remove bone chips in his ankle. He is tentatively scheduled to make his first appearance as a Cowboy Oct. 29 at Atlanta, where he used to play before signing with San Francisco before last season.

While Sanders is expected to play some as a receiver for the Cowboys (5-1), Switzer said the star's first task is to learn the defense.

"Obviously he won't open on offense," Switzer said. "He'll be a defensive player first. As we move along, if we can work him in the kicking game and in our offensive package, we'll do that."

Associated Press

Cowboy's Deion Sanders talks with head coach Barry Switzer during practice on Wednesday in Irving, Texas. Sanders said he was wearing jersey number 2 because that is the number he wore at Florida State.

The Chargers' power running and multiple-tight end offense isn't a good place to debut Sanders, Switzer said. The Pro Bowler is known as a premier coverage back but a poor tackler.

Sanders punctuated San Francisco's 38-15 win at San Diego on Dec. 11 when he intercepted Stan Humphries and returned it 90 yards for a touchdown with 32 seconds left, then danced in the end zone. Sanders said a fan poured a beer on his head after the game, and he vowed never to sign autographs in San Diego.

Big play potential

Sophomore cornerback Plez Atkins has four interceptions in four games, two of which he returned for touchdowns. He needs to pick off four more passes to tie Nile Kinnick's school record.

Time on the line

After a brief stint at running back in junior high, Hawkeye senior Matt Purdy has found a home on the offensive line. Blocking for running back Sedrick Shaw has provided motivation for the linemen.

Humble halfback

Despite catapulting to the top of the Big Ten in rushing yards-per-game, Sedrick Shaw continues to keep to himself and his close friends, leaving the nation wondering exactly who he really is.

Four feet better than one

The Hawkeyes have decided to interchange four kickers this season. Todd Romano, Nick Gallery, Brion Hurley and Zach Bromert all have their roles, making up Iowa's kicking machine.

Atkins continues to make big plays

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Iowa cornerback Plez Atkins gets one of his two interceptions against Michigan State last weekend in East Lansing.

Shannon Stevens The Daily Iowan

Nile Kinnick, Devon Mitchell, Merton Hanks and Plez Atkins?

In just a handful of collegiate starts, Atkins, a sophomore cornerback from Bartlett, Texas, has compiled a stat sheet that rivals those of some of Iowa's all-time best defensive backs.

Through the first four games of the season, Atkins has established himself as one of the premiere defensive players in the Big Ten Conference. Atkins has been a nightmare for opposing quarterbacks and is currently one of the Big Ten co-leaders in total interceptions with four.

In the Hawkeyes' last game against Michigan State, Atkins picked off two passes, making him only the 43rd player in Iowa history to record more than one interception in a game.

Atkins said the key to his early season success has been his religion.

"God plays a major part in my life every day and every second. That's the only way I can explain it," Atkins said. "That's my greatest asset on and off the field. That's the one thing I know that I have. That may be my advantage on the field."

Before each game Atkins said he likes to slip into a T-shirt that says "Jesus takes care of me" which includes his football number and the name of his hometown church.

Atkins said the shirt helps him maintain his focus on the field.

"I need to play with something with Jesus on it and then I'll be all right," Atkins said. "I wouldn't probably know how to play the game without God. He's given me all my talent."

Junior cornerback Billy Coats agreed that religion was a driving force for Atkins and some of the other Hawkeyes, adding that several players attended optional Bible studies on Thursday nights.

"Yeah, it definitely affects him," he said. "We talk about it all the time."

While Atkins admitted it would be nice to tie or break Iowa's single season interception record of eight held by Kinnick and Lou King, he said he wasn't focusing in interceptions per game. He has picked off four passes in four games, two for touchdowns.

"I see it and I hope that I can reach something like that," Atkins said. "That would be something to accomplish, but I'm not really focusing on it. I just want to do my own thing. If I have eight interceptions, then I'll consider it a blessing from God and go about my business."

Atkins said his teammates have also contributed to his increased defensive output.

"I'm thankful that God has given me some teammates that have helped me get four interceptions," Atkins said. "They're just as capable as getting interceptions as I am."

"I hope to get more, but I'm pretty sure that those guys will get some interceptions this year. Their time will come."

Coats said the other secondary members aren't jealous about Atkins recording the majority of the team's interceptions.

"Sometimes that just happens," he said. "We all want to do well and work together."

Perhaps more impressive than his interceptions are the numbers

Atkins records after the grab. Atkins has totaled 60 yards in interception returns and has run two thefts back for touchdowns.

Coats said Atkins is a leader by example on the field.

"He's very aggressive," Coats said. "He takes a lot of chances."

Atkins said he was just fortunate to earn a starting spot this season.

"I haven't really changed anything," Atkins said. "I've got a couple more games under my belt and a little more practice time."

Atkins' success isn't anything new. At Bartlett High School, he nabbed 41 interceptions, tying him for sixth among the nation's all-time high school leaders. Atkins also played quarterback where he was involved in 25 scoring plays during his senior season. Atkins ran for 20 touchdowns, threw three touchdown passes and caught two more.

Atkins said Iowa's pass defense was already solid, but noted that new defensive backs coach Chuck Long has added a dimension.

"He's just given us a quarter-back's perspective," Atkins said. "He's definitely helped us. He's fairly young himself, so he understands players from a young point of view."

Although Iowa's defense has been heavily criticized at times, Atkins said he's never considered the defense a weak link.

"I never felt that we were a question mark defense," he said. "We're just young and we had to come in and gel as a unit and play together."

"When something bad is happening to us or some other team is fixing to score nobody's yelling at each other," Atkins said. "We can bend, but we try our best not to break. That's the only thing we look for — no one to get down on each other because we know that we all have to play together."

Despite his impressive numbers, Atkins said he tries to keep things in perspective.

"I would definitely say that Jesus and my religion are key," Atkins said. "That's the key to success. He's got me this far and he'll carry me anywhere else I need to go."

Doing time on the line

Senior Matt Purdy, a lifetime Hawkeye fan, has grown into one of the premiere offensive linemen in the Big Ten conference

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Cuts, scrapes, bruises, jammed fingers and maybe, just maybe, someone will recognize you when you walk around on campus.

Such is the life of an offensive lineman in the Big Ten conference, a life to which Iowa senior offensive guard Matt Purdy has grown accustomed.

Purdy, who is living out a life-long dream to play college football, has been a starter on the Hawkeye offensive line for three years and has seen it go from an unexperienced group to a powerful machine.

"The line is growing as a unit. Everyone, especially myself, (Casey) Weiggman, (Ross) Verba and (Aaron) Kooiker, we've been together three years now," Purdy said. "We really know each other inside and out. We know every move that the guy next to us is going to make. It's hard when one of those guys is out of the game. It's like you're missing your right or left arm. We're a real close group."

Purdy grew up dreaming of playing college football, but it soon became apparent that his best chance would be as an offensive lineman.

Iowa guard Matt Purdy (69) blocks for Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman against Iowa State. Purdy,

a senior, has seen the Iowa offensive line grow into one of the best in the Big Ten conference.

"I'm not sure anything motivates a person to be an offensive lineman. I think it's just what your size dictates," Purdy said. "I was a running back in junior high.

"You just grow out of that running back mode and it's kind of where you end up. I think I turned into an offensive lineman about eighth or ninth grade and that's where I've been ever since."

But there is one person that motivates Purdy, a 1991 graduate of Cedar Falls High School, and the rest of the Iowa offensive lineman. His name is Sedrick Shaw.

"The only thing that motivates you is just the thrill of having a guy like Sedrick behind you," Purdy said. "You make a little block and he's going to spring it. He really impressed me on Saturday. He was crushing people. He breaks through and gets about five or 10 yards on our blocks and then he gets another 15-20 on his own. That's the thing that really motivates me, watching him succeed."

Purdy was twice voted an elite all-state selection by the Des Moines Register in high school, and was named the Big Eight conference offensive lineman of the year his senior season. The jump to the next level seemed obvious for Purdy.

"It's like every kid's dream. I started thinking about it probably when I first played contact football in third grade. I didn't know where I wanted to go, but when I came when he lived in Hawaii.

"I was always a Hawkeye fan. They were always on TV. I lived in Hawaii for a few years and I remember watching them, I believe in the Freedom Bowl, on TV out there. I remember watching. Hawaii is about six hours ahead. It was really late at night. I just remember that experience."

moved back to Iowa (in fifth grade), I kind of started following (the Hawkeyes) and following their success.

"Probably late in junior high, I decided it would be a great honor to play here and play underneath the coaches they had here, coach Fry especially. And Iowa had a great success with offensive linemen going on to the next level."

Purdy's father was in the military, so Matt, who was born in Iowa, moved around a lot. In fact, his fondest memory of watching the Hawkeyes while growing up Purdy's day starts the same as most college students, in class. But after class, he switches to football mode.

Purdy comes to the athletic facilities at about noon for his weight workout. Then he watches about an hour worth of films, has meetings and does offensive line drills.

"We're banging heads with our defensive scout team everyday," Purdy said. "There's no rest for us. Everyday is a constant battle. There's always something to

Shaw remains humble amidst hype

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

A few short strands of hair protrude through his head, freshly shaven only a few days ago.

He glances around, as if searching for something, probably the end of his interview. His demeanor is quiet, reserved, shy almost; hardly what you would expect from a major college athlete, especially one who just had the best day of his career, rushing for 250 yards, bald head and all.

But that's Sedrick Shaw, never a showboat, just a boy trapped in a man's body, fulfilling every boys' dream — to play college football.

He admits that most of his classmates don't know him as the star running back who helps his team to glory every Saturday, probably because he prefers to go low key.

"I'm just a basic person," said Shaw, who likes to play video games in his spare time. "I'm really kind of quiet, unless I know people really well, then I talk a lot. Other than that I just kind of keep to myself and to the guys that I hang out with on the football team. I really don't do a whole lot."

While not doing "a whole lot," Shaw has moved into the No. 4 position on the all-time Iowa rushing list and is currently the No. 3 rusher in the nation.

He comes across as almost too innocent, but Iowa coach Hayden

Fry knows he is for real.

"He's just like a little boy," Fry said. "He's the most polite, fun kid in the world. He's so humble. There's not an 'I' bone in him. It's all 'we' and 'the team.' That's just the way he was raised. It's really refreshing."

Shaw's 250 rushing yards against Michigan State last weekend was the second highest total by a Hawkeye, but he did it with other things on his mind. His grandmother was having triple bypass heart surgery back in Texas.

Shaw came to the University of Iowa in 1992, an all-American at Lyndon B. Johnson High School in Austin, Texas. He followed in the footsteps of his cousin, Larry Ferguson, a first team all-American running back at Iowa in 1960, although Shaw admits he's never met Ferguson.

Raised by his mother, who Shaw said worked several odd jobs, and his grandmother, who is recovering fine from her surgery, football soon became Shaw's ticket to a college education.

He writes his mother's name, his grandmother's name and the numbers "165" on the tape around his wrist for every game. The numbers are for giving 165 percent, an idea Shaw said he heard once that just stuck with him, and the others are just a simple reminder.

"My mother was a single parent raising me since I was a young child the age of three," Shaw said. "My grandmother raised three girls basically on her own, so I have a lot of respect for those ladies, and I really appreciate everything that they have done for me. The least I can do is come to school and try to get an education, show my appreciation."

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

And he has shown his appreciation. Shaw, an academic all-district selection in high school who wants to work with kids when his playing days are done, is studying sociology at the University of Iowa, and on the weekends, he plays a little football.

But nothing he does is little. The 6-1, 205-pound tailback seems to have everything rolling. Once strictly a finesse runner, he has found the balance of power and finesse that makes him a double threat out of the backfield.

"He's so unpredictable," Fry said. "One time he's going to drop his shoulder and run over you and the next time he's going to juke you. The next time he's going to spin and whirl."

"You don't know what that ras-cal is going to do, except move the down box. That you can be assured of."

Shaw has become a hometown hero hundreds of miles from the place he calls home.

But he still maintains close ties to his family in Texas, talking to his mother and grandmother at least twice a week. He also stays in touch with his father, a former semi-pro football player in Texas.

"Me and my father talk all the time," he said. "Me and my father are close."

In high school, Shaw ran track to stay in shape, running a leg on his school's national champion mile relay team. He also ran into LBJ football coach Jim Davis, a legendary high school coach in the state of Texas.

"He's a nice person. He's really down to earth," Shaw said of Davis. "He's a fair man. He tries to push you and motivate you to do the best you can."

Shaw said Davis taught him patience and how to work hard for what you want, two lessons Shaw has not forgotten.

When it came time to choose a college, Shaw liked the atmosphere at Iowa.

"It was a totally different atmosphere from where I grew up in," he said.

He also grew fond of former Iowa assistant coach John O'Hara, who died of a heart attack before Shaw played his first down in the Big Ten.

"He was the kind of person that no matter what type of day you were having, he could bring the best out in you and just make you smile," Shaw said of O'Hara. "The coaching staff and the place itself had a lot to do with me coming here."

Now constantly in the spotlight, Shaw isn't looking for personal accolades, preferring instead to emphasize the team aspect of the game.

"I'm not really concerned with how many carries I get. I just want to go out there and have fun and be a part of a team that can accomplish some great goals and have something special to remember," Shaw said.

He's seen a closeness on this current Hawkeye team that hasn't been there in the past.

Kickin' it

The Hawkeyes have finally found the solution to their kicking problems, using four kickers in games this season

Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

It appears the Iowa coaching staff has learned its lesson.

In 1984 Hawkeye kicker Rob Houghtlin was cut because Iowa was already carrying enough kickers. But he never gave up, and found his way back onto the team, going on to become a first team all-Big Ten selection.

This season Iowa isn't taking any chances and has no problem with carrying four kickers on the roster.

Senior Todd Romano, along with juniors Brian Hurley, Nick Gallery, and freshman walk-on Zach Bromert contribute to the Iowa kicking game.

"In the kickoff category, Todd has been doing a great job for us this year," special teams coach Mark Hendrickson said. "Hurley and Bromert have done everything we've asked of them this season, and we feel great with Gallery handling the punting duties.

"Every man understands what their role is and does the best they can for their teammates."

Hurley was the starting place-kicker entering the season, but after missing a field goal and making just four of six PATs, his role has been cut back to long field goals. He was 1-2 last weekend against Michigan State, missing from 47 yards, but nailing a 50-yard attempt.

"It was good to get a kick under my belt this year, especially a big one from that distance, but there are definitely some things I still need to work out with myself," Hurley said.

"I'm not where I want to be yet, and I'm going to keep trying to get there."

Gallery is the strongest of all the Iowa kickers. The first-team punter is leading the Big Ten Conference in punting with a 49.8 yard average and a long kick of 64 yards. More than half of Gallery's punts have gone beyond 50 yards.

"When it comes to punting the ball, we feel great that we have Nick Gallery, who's off to an excellent start this season," Hendrickson said.

Bromert is the real story though, arriving on campus just two months ago from Pensacola Catholic High School in Pensacola, Fla., with hopes of making the team as a walk-on. He's now listed as the starting placekicker, specializing in PATs and short field goals.

"I have a lot of confidence in myself and I knew I had a chance of playing, but I didn't think it would happen this soon," Bromert said.

Bromert's instant success has Iowa fans remembering the glory days of Houghtlin, the former all-Big Ten Conference player. Bromert, like Houghtlin, walked on and had almost instant success.

"I thought I was going to be red-shirted this year, but when they started struggling and coach kept giving me more chances, I knew they might need me to step in," Bromert said.

Dressing four kickers may seem a bit extreme to some people, but Hendrickson emphasizes that the complete kicker that the four men combined to make is an important part of the Hawkeye squad.

"As long as everybody is productive, having four kickers is very effective," Hendrickson said.

"We look at it as any position on the team that as long as the guys are successful, it's a good situation."

Depth in the kicking game does present some problems though. Increased pressure to perform and intense competition between friends are both challenges that seem to only be bothering Iowa minimally.

"There's definitely a competition between us because the three

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

of us are fighting for our job," Bromert said. "If somebody's not having a good week they have to move aside and let the other guys step up.

"When the other guys were struggling earlier this season, I got my chance and stepped up and did the job," Bromert said. "That's how it needs to be done."

Hurley admits there's added pressure with having four kickers.

"It's definitely tougher knowing that there's a replacement on the sideline ready to go," said Hurley. "I knew I needed to make a kick pretty soon or they would find someone else to kick."

But the Iowa kickers put each other at ease with their friendship and camaraderie.

"We all get along well and help each other out," Hurley said. "We all know what it's like and know what each other is feeling."

"If we're disappointed with our kicking and someone else is doing better than we are it's not like you're mad at them. You're mad at yourself for getting beat out."

Bromert also said Iowa's depth at kicker can be positive. He emphasizes the collective performance of the unit rather than a lone kicker.

"We all look to help each other," Bromert said. "We're not individuals, but we're part of a team and all we want is for whoever is on the field to do good. There's competition because all of us want to be successful. But as a team, we just want to collectively do well."

QB finally in spotlight

Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Everybody's looking for their 15 minutes of fame. This Saturday afternoon, Indiana fifth year senior Adam Greenlee will get his.

Greenlee was named the starting quarterback for the Hoosiers when Chris Dittoe went down with a knee injury last weekend at Illinois.

"It's awful tough because Chris and I are good friends," Greenlee said of the situation. "As a friend you're concerned and you hope he's all right, but as a back-up quarterback you have to prepare yourself to go into the game and perform well."

For five seasons, Greenlee has been on the bench as the Indiana back-up quarterback. Before 1995, his only action was at the tail end of a 59-29 victory over Kentucky.

"My biggest football memory is my first completion against Kentucky," Greenlee said. "It was kind of a high point. We were up big late in the game, and it didn't mean much, but it was personally important."

Playing at Kentucky and starting at Kinnick are two totally different things though, especially when you haven't started a game since high school. This added pressure, however, doesn't seem to faze Greenlee.

"I'm just excited," said Greenlee. "I'm not nervous and I don't think I will be. I've been waiting for this day for a long time and I'm going to try to take advantage of the situation and make things happen on Saturday."

Greenlee isn't kidding when he says he's waited a long time. The former walk-on has stuck it out with the Hoosiers for five years, despite getting little, if any, playing time.

"It's a great program and I have a ton of respect for Coach Mallory," Greenlee said. "We run a clean program and we're always in the hunt for the Big Ten. We had a lot of talent coming back this year and I really thought we had a chance for the Rose Bowl."

Spending all this time on the sidelines has given Greenlee a coach's perspective of the game that some of his teammates joke with him about.

"It's easy to stand back and look at things from many different perspectives rather than just a quarterback," Greenlee said. "I spend a lot of time watching things develop in practice and on film and it helps me a lot."

Greenlee will need a lot of help this weekend when the 10th ranked offense in the Big Ten travels to Iowa City. The Hoosiers have been struggling to put points on the board all season, and the loss of Dittoe, along with tailbacks Alex Smith and Michael Batts won't help.

"It's just a matter of time before the offense is going to click," Greenlee said. "We've had a lot of injuries this year and it's tough to get a cohesive unit on the field."

"We're just trying to work with what we have. Hopefully this will be the week we get everything together, but we're not going to get frustrated if things aren't going well."

Greenlee's list of goals for Saturday afternoon aren't much of a change from those he brought with him to Bloomington five years ago.

"My first goal was to play, there's no question about that," Greenlee said. "As time went on, the scholarship issue came up and following that, I just wanted to do what I could to help Indiana win football games."

A big supporter of Greenlee throughout his struggle for success has been his family, especially his parents.

"My parents have always supported me, my brothers and my sister," Greenlee said. "I can't even remember when I was 4 or 5 years old playing Pee-Wee baseball and not seeing both of my parents there for the game."

All the extra innings and overtimes were well worth the news Mr. and Mrs. Greenlee received following last weekend's Illinois loss.

"My parents were there waiting for me after the press conference," Greenlee said. "I told them that I was starting right away, and they were excited, we've got the whole group going to Iowa City this weekend."

Greenlee's family as well as his teammates know what he can accomplish, but this weekend will be Greenlee's chance to prove his skill to a national television audience.

"I'm just a small town kid who fell through the cracks and Saturday will be my chance to prove to everyone that I am a Big Ten Conference quarterback."

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Indiana starting tailback Alex Smith will watch this weekend's game from the sidelines with three fractured ribs. Smith rushed for 232 yards against Iowa last year.

Hoosiers face must-win game

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

With Michigan, Penn State and Ohio State still to go on their schedule, the Indiana Hoosiers, 2-3 overall, 0-2 in the Big Ten, find themselves in a must-win situation this weekend.

The Hoosiers are fresh off of losses to Illinois, 10-17, and a surprise Northwestern team, 7-31.

"It was a disappointment," Indiana coach Bill Mallory said of the Indiana loss. "As you access the game, our kicking game was solid, but it wasn't as good as it needs to be. We didn't get any big plays from it."

"Defensively, we played good enough to win. That's been the case in each of our three losses. The defense plays hard. Offensively, we're struggling. We're giving good effort, but we're just not making the plays when we need them. Turnovers are killing us."

Earlier in the season, Indiana defeated Western Michigan, 24-10, and Southern Miss, 27-26, as well as losing to Kentucky, 10-17.

Indiana needs to win four of its next six games to qualify for a bowl game, but the Hoosiers are not about to give up.

"We're going in there with the idea that we're going to win. We just have to do what we have to do, to get the job done."

said starting quarterback Adam Greenlee, who has never started a game for the Hoosiers. "Indiana needs a big win this weekend."

The Hoosiers will also have a new face in the backfield. Alex Smith and Michael Batts are out, leaving No. 3 tailback Sean Glover to fill the void.

Glover did not start a single game last season, but started all 12 games for the Hoosiers at fullback two seasons ago.

Backing up Glover are two freshmen — Kenyon Hartfield and Eugene Jones — who have not played yet this season.

The Indiana defense, although somewhat of a question mark coming into the season, is yielding just 287.4 yards per game. If you take out the five longest runs they have allowed (60, 58, 42, 42, and 39 yards), the defense is only allowing just 2.6 yards per rushing attempt.

Strong safety Aaron Warnecke leads the team with 57 tackles and defensive end Nate Davis leads with 7 tackles for loss.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry is hoping to exploit the Hoosier injuries.

"They took advantage of our weaknesses the past two years, particularly the injured people, and we just couldn't fire a shot," Fry said. "Knock on wood. Fortunately, we're pretty healthy and they've got a few guys hurt. So maybe we can turn it around."

National title still eludes Fry

Three Big Ten championships, a school record 10 wins in three separate seasons, a No. 1 ranking during the 1985 season, 11 bowl games, two national top 10 finishes and eight top 20 finishes.

That is just part of the résumé of Iowa head coach Hayden Fry, so why is this man not satisfied?

Currently, Fry ranks as the No. 9 winningest coach of all-time and the fourth winningest active coach, but the guys ahead of him have one thing he doesn't — a national championship.

In fact, two major goals have eluded Fry over his 34 years of coaching — a national title and a Rose Bowl victory.

"I'm just as amazed as anyone where I stand now," Fry said, regarding his position among winningest Division I-A coaches.

"I don't really put myself in that class because we haven't won the Rose Bowl, we haven't won the national championship."

Even Sports Illustrated recognized Fry's downfall last week. A letter to the editor from a Penn State fan proclaimed SI might as well give Fry a national title this year, since he's the winningest coach without one.

"I never really thought of it that way. Hey, I love that guy," Fry said, regarding the person who wrote the letter. "(But) it doesn't help me win."

■ Injury report

What goes around, comes around.

Last season, Iowa was a walking billboard for medical supplies. But this season, the injury bug has stayed away.

Indiana, on the other hand is hurting. The Hoosiers will be without starting tailback Alex Smith, starting wide receiver Eric Matthews and starting quarterback Chris Dittoe for Saturday's game.

"We're pretty healthy this year and they got a few guys hurt, so maybe we can turn it around," Fry said.

After suffering through injuries last year, Fry doesn't wish them on any team.

"The people that can keep their top people healthy are gonna have the best chance," Fry said.

"(Indiana coach) Bill Mallory's got a fine Indiana football team, but he's without his No. 1 quarterback and his No. 1 running back. I don't wish that bad luck on anybody because I've been through that, and it does make a big difference."

Iowa moves to 5-0 with win over injured Hoosiers

Pregame's Pick
IOWA	INDIANA
32	10
HAWKEYES	HOOSIERS

Tell your friends, Iowa is going to 5-0.

The Hawkeyes are rolling, having gone 7-0-1 in their last eight games, and are amidst their longest winning streak since they were ranked No. 1 in the nation 10 years ago.

The game is being televised to a national audience on ESPN 2. I'm not sure how national ESPN 2 is. I don't know anyone who actually has it, but at least Iowa is starting to get a little more recognition.

The Hawkeyes are ranked No. 23 in the latest Associated Press poll, their first ranking since 1992.

Indiana, on the other hand, is hurting. The Hoosiers are without their starting quarterback and top two tailbacks, a problem almost too astronomic to overcome, especially when one of those tailbacks is Alex Smith.

Back-up Hoosier quarterback Charles Greenlee had thrown only one pass in his career coming into this season, and Sean Glover is far from Alex Smith.

Even the Indiana Daily Student staff picked the Hoosiers to lose to Iowa, not by one or two points, but by 22.

Believe it or not, Northwestern is being mentioned as a Rose Bowl candidate this season. If Northwestern can do it, so can Iowa.

Under Hayden Fry, no fifth-year Iowa player has ever been denied going to the Rose Bowl. If Iowa doesn't make it this year, that streak will come to an end. But it is way too soon to talk about Pasadena, especially the way Ohio State is playing.

This Iowa team has the one ingredient necessary to overcome any obstacle and reach any goal — unity.

There are a lot of big name players on the current Hawkeye squad, but they have had no problem sharing the wealth and keeping people happy. The players have been able to look past the personal accolades and focus on team goals.

The excitement around the campus and the state regarding this team is tremendous and is growing every week. Football tickets for remaining Hawkeye games are going fast. The Penn State game is already sold out and standing-room-only tickets remain for Illinois.

Fans may have to hit the road just to get tickets to see the Hawkeyes play come November.

Another key to the Hawkeye success has been staying injury free. But even if the usual injuries start to pop up, Iowa should be OK.

The Hawkeyes have quality back-ups at most of the key positions. Ryan Driscoll and Tavian Banks are quality back-ups at quarterback and tailback, respectively. The Hawkeyes also have depth at wide receiver.

The Iowa defense has done a superb job this season. When the offense was not producing early on, the defense stepped it up and made things happen.

Iowa's defensive line and linebackers have held opposing running backs in check all season. They held the nation's leading rusher, Troy Davis of Iowa State, 61 yards under his average.

The secondary has allowed some pass plays, but it has come up with the big hits and interceptions when needed.

The Iowa defense will continue to dominate opponents, possibly holding the injured Hoosiers to single digit scoring.

Greenlee has thrown three interceptions already this season. Expect at least two more this week.

Last year, Indiana rolled into Kinnick Stadium and took home a victory. This year, things will be different.

Iowa 32, Indiana 10

This week in the Big Ten...

Buckeyes, Wildcats roll; Spartans sputter

Apocalypse now. Two weeks into the Big Ten season and Penn State is 0-2 and Northwestern is 2-0. Now that every preseason prediction looks like it was written by a person sniffing glue, we can finally get down to business.

I have to admit that even I didn't think the Big Ten would be this turned around. All is not lost as Ohio State is where it belongs (at the top), and Michigan will be up there come November. But Penn State is reeling and has proved itself more than human.

Northwestern is for real and has everybody in the Big Ten looking down the schedule to see when they might become the next victims. Don't forget a certain team from Iowa City that might be 6-0 heading into a Oct. 28 game for a Big Ten title. We won't name any names, but here is how this week's schedule stacks up.

Michigan State at Illinois

The Spartans are still trying to get the number of that train that ran over them in East Lansing last week, but they won't have time to rest heading into Champaign. Lou "Yawn" Tepper's offense is just waiting to explode...Uh, yeah.

Illinois has scored just 33 points in its last three games and even Illini fans want somebody to visit them in the home team's end zone. Illini quarterback Scott Weaver didn't look too bad against Indiana, going 16-of-28 for 213 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

Michigan State might have to rely on third string quarterback Damien Hiram if Tony Banks can't come back from a sore ankle. Either way Illinois will eek out another sleeper.

Illinois, 10-7.

Northwestern at Minnesota

I won't say that the Wildcats should look past this game because they are still the same team that lost to Miami (Ohio).

Northwestern coach Gary Barnett is hoping for some consistency, and Minnesota's Chris Darkins won't let Barnett sleep soundly this week. Darkins rushed for 231 yards in the second half against Purdue last week.

Too bad Minnesota usually only plays for about one half. Northwestern's defense, which has 17 returning lettermen, has proven it can shut down big play people. Wildcat running back Darnell Autry is one of the surprises of not only the Big Ten, but the entire country. This team is on a mission.

Northwestern 27-14.

Ohio State at Wisconsin

This game has almost the same meaning it did back in 1993 when the Badgers and Buckeyes tied 14-14, sending Wisconsin to the Rose Bowl.

Not this time around. Wisconsin pulled off a huge upset in Happy Valley, but it will be a reality check when they face Ohio State.

The No. 4 ranked team in the country is rolling and it looks like nobody can stop the Buckeyes. Quarterback Bobby Hoving leads the Big Ten in total offense with 1,383 yards passing and 15 touchdowns. Buckeye receiver Terry Glenn leads the conference in receiving with 752 yards.

Wisconsin quarterback Darrell Bevell, the school's career record holder in every significant passing category, and receiver Tony Simmons must be on to keep up in a game that will probably be a shoot-out.

It's just too bad that the Badgers will be firing blanks.

Ohio State, 35-21.

Penn State at Purdue

Penn State must find a way to stop the bleeding before even a second-place finish fades away.

To be honest, this might not be the game that ends the Nittany Lions' two-game losing streak. Purdue has a very potent offense with fullback Mike Alstott (620 yards rushing, 5 TD's) and surprise wide out Brian Alford, who is averaging 20.5 yards per catch.

The Nittany Lions' defense has been its Achilles heel, giving up a very un-Penn State-like 21 points per game. But Joe Paterno has more pride than anybody in the country and will have his team ready heading into West Lafayette.

The last time the Nittany Lions traveled to Purdue was in 1951 when Paterno was just an assistant coach.

Penn State gets back on track, but just barely.

Penn State, 24-21.

SHAW

"We are a very close team," Shaw said. "We like to laugh and giggle and crack a bunch of jokes together on the practice field and even during the games."

When talking to Shaw, you'll seldom hear him discuss himself. He prefers to talk about other people, always taking the spotlight off himself.

"It's probably something I can live without," Shaw said, referring to talking about himself. "Each and every game, you're not going to perform the same. You're just going to go out there and try to do your best.

"On any given day, anybody on our team can be the big man today. We have a lot of talented people on both sides of the ball. It's not something I get caught up in. I just want to be a part of a team, be able to do the best I can to help that team in some kind of way. If it's a run, it's a run. If it's a block, it's a block. I just want to be a part of a winning team."

Shaw also puts to rest any idea that there is competition between himself and tailback Tavian Banks.

"We try to help each other because one may see something on the field the other doesn't see, and we try to point it out to the other one," Shaw said. "Even in practice, we try to help each other with things. People may think one thing, but actually we're really close. We have a good time together."

When the compliments start to flow his way, Shaw begins to dish them back out, mostly to his offensive line.

"I think those guys are a great offensive line," Shaw said. "A lot of people want to talk about my success, but realistically, you have to credit those guys. Those are the guys who come out here and bust their butt each and every day on the practice field and in the weight room and in the game. Really my success comes from them."

But no matter who gets the credit, Shaw is the one whose name will go in the record books, and Shaw is the one people are paying to see.

As he closes in on Tony Stewart's career rushing record, Shaw has found another fan and friend in Stewart, who is now playing in the Canadian Football League.

"I've talked to him on several occasions when he came back to visit," Shaw said, coming as close to publicly talking about the record as he has all year. "He always encourages me. He tells me to keep my head on straight and stay focused and be a part of a team and just try to do the best that you can. He gives me a lot of encouragement."

PURDY

work on."

Growing up with his father in the military gave Purdy a different outlook on life than most kids his age.

"It taught me how to appreciate things I have," he said. "When we were in the military, you'd be at some place, you'd gain some success and you'd end up having to leave right away. So you've got to appreciate the things you have in your hand at the time and take them for what they're worth."

Purdy's parents have offered him strong support over the years.

"They followed me all over the country in the Big Ten. They drive everywhere. They've always been real big supporters of me," he said.

All of Purdy's hard work has paid off, with the success the Hawkeyes are currently experiencing.

"As the old saying goes, 'Winning is contagious.' Everyone's got that feeling inside their bodies, 'Wow, this is a great feeling.' A lot of guys who have never been 4-0 or, like (Mike) Goff, who has never had a winning streak past one game," Purdy said.

"It's rolling. Everyone's happy. The coaches are happy. The players are happy. You can tell just by going to class that everyone is real excited around campus. That's going to translate through us on the field."

When all is said and done, Purdy has a few things he would like to be remembered for.

"I'd like to be remembered as a guy who came out and gave it everything he possibly could. Obviously, I'm not the biggest person in the world, I'm only 6-2, 290 pounds. I just want people to remember I gave everything I could, was a good leader, and brought that winning attitude back amongst the Hawkeye fans and the Hawkeye team."

Former coach recalls happy Homecomings

Roxanna Pellin

The Daily Iowan

Forest Evashevski, the only coach in school history to win two Rose Bowl games, has only happy memories of all nine of his Homecoming games at Iowa.

But Iowa's 8-0 victory against Ohio State in 1952 is his favorite. It was his first season as the Hawkeyes' head coach, and the Buckeyes were ranked No. 1 in the nation, he said.

"They were all good. I don't think we ever lost a homecoming game," said Evashevski from his home in Petosky, Mich. "They were always happy occasions. But Ohio State was probably the best."

This Saturday, Evashevski returns to Iowa City as the 1995 Homecoming Honored Guest. During his nine-year career at Iowa, the Hawkeyes were 52-27-4 with Rose Bowl victories against Oregon State (35-19) in 1956 and California (38-12) in 1958. His 1958 team was named national champion by the Football Writers Association of America.

His Homecoming record at Iowa was 7-1-1, with his only loss coming in 1956, 17-14.

"I don't know how you could put enough honors on a man in terms of what he accomplished here," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said of Evashevski. "The biggest tragedy about Coach Evashevski is the fact that he was too young to get out of coaching when he did."

"Had he stayed here, I don't think Iowa would have experienced the drought that they had for all those years. He easily could have coached another 10 or 15 years and been successful. I am sure in some ways he regrets that."

Evashevski gave up coaching at age 42 and became athletic director at Iowa. He had coached at Hamilton, Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Michigan State, Washington State and Iowa and had turned down jobs to coach professionally, he said.

"I never looked back," he said. "I had great years as a player and a coach. I wanted to get out of coaching while I was still fresh."

Fry said he looked to Evashevski when deciding on whether to take the Iowa job.

"I called Evashevski and asked him if he thought we could really come in here and win," Fry said. "He said yes, but there were six things that you had to do and he listed them. We got four of them corrected immediately and the other two I've been working on all these years."

Evashevski couldn't remember the list.

"I do recall talking to Hayden," he said. "I told him what I thought he should require of Iowa if he was going to be successful. What they were, I would not or could not recall."

Evashevski said he hasn't been back to Iowa City for about 10 years, but looks forward to returning.
