UI tuition goes up — again

Increases unanimously approved

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

Without a protesting student in sight, the Iowa state Board of Regents Wednesday approved an $88 tuition increase for in-state undergraduate UI students and a $436 increase for out-of-state students.

In-state UI students will pay $2,470 in tuition and fees next year, with tuition and fees for out-of-state students rising to $9,068.

Law and pharmacy students face the largest tuition jump next year. In-state law students will pay $568 more, while in-state pharmacy students face a $440 increase.

UI interim President Peter Nathan said the undergraduate increase was below the rate of inflation.

"On balance it's fair," he said. Nathan said the law and pharmacy programs are making substantial program changes, which increased their costs.

"Law is increasing its commitment to clinical teaching," he said, "and pharmacy is initiating new programs."

While the regents unanimously approved the tuition increase, some voiced concern about possible cuts in federal student aid.

Regent Tom Dorr said the state universities should begin forming contingency plans to compensate for decreased federal funding.

"To think that it is not going to be cut is naive," he said. "What ultimately has to happen is that people must become more responsible for their own educational needs."

Nathan said students' options may become limited to borrowing more from banks, working more or not attending college.

"I'd hate for that to happen," he said.

Other UI officials said private funding may be needed to replace lost public funds.

"Our recruiting and efforts will stay at the same level, but we are looking to private funding," said Rusty Barcelo, director of Opportunity at Iowa, which works with minority students.

Nation's sport: Politically incorrect?

Associated Press

Cleveland Indians fans cheer while they await the arrival of their team at Cleveland Hopkins Municipal Airport Wednesday. Cleveland won the American League Championship Tuesday night over the Seattle Mariners 4-0. The team is facing criticism from American Indians who call the Indians' mascot insulting.

Chief Wahoo vs. the Braves: Native Americans feel under attack face the Atlanta Braves, whose fans cheer them on with an arm-pumping Tomahawk Chop.

That's no choice at all for Indian groups, which have vehemently protested baseball's Indian nicknames, mascots, chanting and whooping.

"It's offensive to see people dressed in chicken feathers, painted in what they call war paint, doing tomahawk chops and war whoops. None of that is Indian, and all of it is very demeaning," said Ray Apodaca of the Administration for Native Americans.

The Tomahawk Chop — who can forget Braves owner Ted Turner, Jane Fonda and former President Carter doing it during the 1991 playoffs? — has aroused particular ire. (Fonda later vowed to stop the hand motion. But cameras caught her doing a "modified chop" — without full arm extension.)

PICKS UP MORE GOP RHETORIC

Powell starting to sound more Republican

John King
Associated Press

WEST BLOOMFIELD, Mich. — On subjects from abortion to the religious right, Colin Powell's language is quickly evolving in ways that could make him more acceptable as a GOP presidential candidate.

Powell's shift is no accident. Aides acknowledge that Powell or associates acting with his blessing have contacted several leading Republicans for advice on how to better articulate his views on the House Republican agenda and various issues.

But even as he acknowledged the changes Wednesday, Powell disputed the notion he was making a calculated appeal to the GOP right.

The retired general cast the shifts simply as "sharpening my own thinking and views."

"I'm not trying to change my message from day to day to appeal to one constituency or another," he said before a book-signing session in suburban Detroit.

As if to prove his point, Powell said he believed the attention he has attracted during his book tour shows the Republican Party "is a broader party out there looking for leadership than just the part represented by the very active right wing."

"I'm not trying to change my message from day to day to appeal to one constituency or another."

Colin Powell, potential presidential candidate

Powell applauded the activism of the GOP right, but took issue with those who say he would have little chance in party primaries because he is a "Rockefeller Republican" with moderate to liberal views on social policy.

"The answer I give to them is, well, find your revolutionary who gets more than 8 or 9 percent of the

Oddities & Idiosyncrasies

Law partners pitted against each other in court

Deborah Hastings
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It had to happen sometime: Jacoby is suing Meyers.

They teamed up nearly 20 years ago to hang out a TV shingle that made them the K-Mart of American law. But that's all over now. Leonard Jacoby filed a lawsuit Friday against Steven Meyers, accusing Meyers of squeezing him out.

And there's nothing cut-rate about the money Jacoby is asking for.

He is demanding $2 million from his law school buddy and 23-year business partner, accusing him of breach of partnership, fraud and emotional distress.

Also named is Gail Koff, who started Jacoby & Meyers' East Coast operation in 1979 and can be seen on late-night TV, holding a hair dryer and warning viewers to beware of consumer injury and fraud.

And was a storefront law firm good enough for the man who helped make lawsuits the American way?

Apparently not. Jacoby has retained Quinn, Kully and Morrow, a well-respected downtown firm with offices next to the plush Biltmore Hotel.

How much is Jacoby paying his own lawyer? "We feel our rates are competitive," was all Michael Walizer would say.

Neither Jacoby nor Meyers returned calls Wednesday.

Koff and Meyers, Jacoby claims in his lawsuit, shunted him aside as the company downsized and restructured during lean times in the slip-and-fall business.

"Their conduct was intentional and malicious and done for the purpose of causing Jacoby to suffer humiliation, mental anguish and emotional and physical distress," the lawsuit said.

Jacoby & Meyers revolutionized American law by peddling its services to the middle class. Its first TV commercial, in 1977, hawked "two guys named Jacoby and Meyers" and a free consultation. The cost for a will was $75. Personal bankruptcy filings: $500.

By the 1980s, those names fronted 150 offices in six states — New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Arizona, California and Pennsylvania — and employed 330 lawyers.

But the cheap lawyering they pioneered helped undermine them. Smaller offices, with less overhead, followed their lead, bought a few seconds of TV time and gobbled up the market.

So the company reinvented itself to chase plaintiffs in the booming field of high-priced sexual harassment, consumer fraud and class-action product injury litigation.

Lawyers were jettisoned, leaving only 150 in about 20 storefronts in states including California, Arizona, Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey.

It was during this restructuring Jacoby claims he, as West Coast director, was brushed aside, "given short shrift" and forced to "argue with and harangue Meyers and Koff in order to receive any payment from the partnership."

In its new incarnation, Jacoby & Meyers has seen big wins. A New York State court awarded $3.7 million in a personal injury suit against a car rental company in 1994.

A negligence suit against a Long Island school where an autistic student choked on food ended in a $2.1 million award.

But even when soliciting bigger cases, the message and the medium favored by these two guys remain the same.

Early last year, Jacoby & Meyers ran ads in Arizona, New York and California, seeking clients who believed they had been harmed by the recalled asthma drug Albuterol.

More than 10,000 people responded, generating at least 47 wrongful-death cases in five states.

Simpson takes a swing at golf after one year

PANAMA CITY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — O.J. Simpson was chipper Wednesday as he played golf for the second time in as many days, despite being met by a throng of journalists and reports he missed his daughter's 10th birthday.

"I'm seeing my girlfriend, playing some golf. That's all I've done here," Simpson said. "I haven't talked to anybody about buying a home," he added in response to local rumors.

Joking Tuesday that he hadn't practiced in 17 months, Simpson smiled for cameras and stopped to sign autographs as he worked his way through the 72-par Hombre Golf Club with girlfriend Paula Barbieri looking on.

When asked Wednesday by one reporter if he had gotten married, Simpson laughed loudly and responded: "That would be a trick, to get married and nobody'll know."

Barbieri, whose family lives in the area, drove up as Simpson was finishing his round with the same foursome he played with Tuesday, said groundskeeper Bill Johnson.

Tuesday was his daughter Sydney's 10th birthday and she was back home in California, the New York Post and the Daily News reported Wednesday.

Joe Inman, a grounds supervisor who was invited to round out Tuesday's foursome, said the former football star's game started out shaky but improved on the back nine. Simpson, whose chipping-in-the-dark alibi was ridiculed by prosecutors at his murder trial, reportedly shot an 82.

"He's still in great shape, he just doesn't have the legs anymore. If it wasn't for golf carts, he couldn't play," Inman said.

It was the first confirmed Simpson sighting since he was acquitted Oct. 3 in the knife slayings of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

After the verdict, a tearful Simpson told Sydney and her brother Justin, 7: "I promise I will never leave you like that again."

Springsteen returns to his roots to rock

ASBURY PARK, N.J. (AP) — The Boss is back in town.

Bruce Springsteen joined his proteges Joe Grushecky and the Houserockers Tuesday night for a hard-edged 100-minute set at The Stone Pony, the club where he started out and where he drops back in every now and then, usually unannounced.

They performed Springsteen's "Murder Incorporated" and "Light of Day," along with Wilson Pickett's "Mustang Sally" and Van Morrison's "Brown-eyed Girl."

"I'm a Jersey girl. He's a Jersey boy. This is his home turf. To be 6 feet away from him is amazing," said legal secretary Linda Iorio, who has now seen Springsteen play 21 times.

Fergie urged to take a break from exercising

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sarah Ferguson's sweated off 14 pounds, and now her trainer's telling her to lighten up.

"She's one of those people you have to hold back a bit and say, 'Well, you don't need that much.' It's very hard to tell her to do less," Josh Salzman told TV's syndicated "Extra" in an interview which airs today.

Salzman has been the Dutchess of York's trainer since 1990, but only recently has she gotten motivated enough to shed those pounds and shape up.

"Everybody goes through ebbs and flows and people tend to be more disciplined at certain times of their lives and less disciplined at other times," Salzman said. "You can only do so much with a person when you see them for three hours a week."

Prince of Denmark aims for Frogman status

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — The prince has turned into a frogman.

Crown Prince Frederik, 27, using the nom de guerre Pingo, is taking part in a military drill in hopes of becoming a member of the Danish Navy's elite Frogmen Corps, roughly comparable to the U.S. Navy SEALs.

Two hundred soldiers will spend a week trying to capture Frederik and four other would-be members of the corps on the island of Funen, the newspaper B.T. reported Wednesday.

The five armed frogmen with camouflage-painted faces sneaked ashore early Tuesday, then vanished into the woods.

Residents have been asked to alert authorities if they see the interlopers, but the army shouldn't count on it.

"I'll invite (Frederik) and his friends in for some coffee or lunch. If they want to sleep in our barn, I'll let them," Gudrun Hansen told B.T. "Then maybe I'll turn them in afterwards."

Linda McCartney veggieburgers fatter than she thought

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Well, shucks. Ol' Andy Griffith's just a Shoney's kinda guy.

The Shoney's chain, with restaurants in the South and the Midwest, has selected him as its spokesperson.

Shoot-on-sight policy changes in response to Ruby Ridge

Marcy Gordon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration has adopted a tighter, uniform policy for federal agents' use of deadly force in response to the "senseless tragedies" at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, the Justice Department's No. 2 official told senators Wednesday.

The ousted deputy FBI director, meanwhile, testified anew that he did not approve the shoot-on-sight rules used in the fatal Idaho standoff, a position later backed up by Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick.

Under the new policy, law enforcement agents may use deadly force only when they have a "reasonable belief that the subject of such force poses an imminent danger of death or serious physical injury to the officer or to another person," Gorelick testified. "Deadly force may not be used if an alternative reasonably appears to be sufficient to accomplish the law enforcement purpose."

The FBI has been sharply admonished in the Senate hearings for its use of special orders at Ruby Ridge that said snipers "could and should" fire at any armed adult male spotted outside white separatist Randy Weaver's cabin.

The customary FBI shooting rule, by contrast, restricted the use of lethal force to protecting oneself or others from imminent harm.

An FBI sniper shot Weaver's wife, Vicki, as she stood behind the cabin door holding her infant daughter, on Aug. 22, 1992. A day earlier, the Weavers' 14-year-old son, Sam, and Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan died in a gunfight as federal agents scouted Weaver's property in anticipation of arresting him on a weapons charge.

Gorelick called the three deaths "senseless tragedies (that) did not have to happen."

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on terrorism and a leading critic of the FBI's use of special shooting rules at Ruby Ridge, lauded the new policy.

"Deadly force is used in America perhaps hundreds of times a day or more, and this will help establish a standard far beyond the federal agencies to law enforcement everywhere about the constitutional limits on the use of deadly force," Specter said in a telephone interview before the hearing.

The policy, which was approved Tuesday by Attorney General Janet Reno and Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, also spells out conditions under which agents may shoot in circumstances involving fleeing felons and escaping prisoners.

The policy requires federal agents to give verbal warnings before using deadly force unless those warnings would create a risk of death or serious injury. Warning shots are not authorized in most cases.

The new policy will apply to law enforcement agencies under Justice Department authority — such as the FBI, the U.S. Marshals Service and the Bureau of Prisons — and to Treasury Department agencies, including the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; the Secret Service; and the Customs Service.

It will replace the individual agencies' shooting policies, known as rules of engagement, which vary.

Five top FBI officials, including former Deputy Director Larry Potts, were suspended last summer during a federal criminal investigation into the destruction of some Ruby Ridge documents at FBI headquarters.

Potts approved the orders used at Ruby

Ridge, under which snipers "could and should" fire at any armed adult male, according to testimony last month by Eugene Glenn, the FBI field commander at the scene.

Potts disputed that in subsequent testimony, and again in an appearance at Wednesday's hearing.

"I didn't approve the 'can and should,'" Potts testified.

He said the deviation from normal shooting rules was made by lower-level FBI officials at Ruby Ridge after he had approved an earlier version which said "can" — but not "should" — shoot on sight.

Gorelick, appearing after Potts, endorsed his version of events. She said she believed the shoot-on-sight rules, including the words "and should," were approved not by Potts but by Glenn and Richard Rogers, the head of the FBI's hostage rescue team.

FAMILY RIDDLED WITH DEATHS

Tyler Moore's book paints dramatic off-screen life

Beth Harpaz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — On television, she could turn the world on with her smile, but Mary Tyler Moore's real life was filled with tears, according to a new autobiography that describes how she helped her terminally ill brother try to commit suicide by feeding him drug-laced ice cream.

The suicide attempt failed, and Moore's 47-year-old brother, John, died three months later in 1992 of kidney cancer.

But the actress, who portrayed squeaky-clean Laura Petrie on "The Dick Van Dyke Show" and Mary Richards on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," said she "would do it again," the Daily News reported Wednesday.

Moore's book, "After All," reveals her role in the attempted suicide and that of her husband, Dr. S. Robert Levine, a cardiologist. Published by G. P. Putnam, the autobiography is expected in stores early next month.

The book depicts a private life full of the sordid and sorrowful tales that are de rigueur for celebrity autobiographies.

It describes the alcoholism of Moore's mother and her own drinking problem, along with the sad life of Moore's only child, Richard, who accidentally shot himself to death at age 24. Moore's younger sister, Elizabeth, died at 21 from a combination of Darvon and alcohol.

Moore, 59, writes that her brother "called me one day to say goodbye."

"He had stashed hundreds of painkillers and had tried to end his life by taking enough to kill himself. He fell asleep before he could ingest enough to finally end his pain. He felt he could do it again."

Accompanied by her husband, the actress flew to her brother's California home from New York the next day.

Once he had swallowed as many pills as he could, "he asked me to mash them into ice cream," she says.

Levine called the drug company which held the code for her brother's morphine pump so he could increase the dosage, then "programmed the added infusion while I spoon-fed the potion," the actress writes.

Moore told the Daily News her husband's role "was difficult from an ethical point of view but he was never directly involved."

"It had taken a lot for Robert to overcome his instinct to cure but added to his guilt, now, was sorrow at having let John down," Moore writes.

The actress has a new role as the newspaper editor Louise "The Dragon" Felcott on the CBS drama "New York News." In a Tony-winning performance in the Broadway play "Whose Life Is It, Anyway?" in 1979, she portrayed a quadriplegic who tries to persuade her doctor to let her die.

Moore's agent, Wendy Morris, said she could not immediately reach the actress Wednesday for comment.

There is no office listing for Levine in New York, where he is licensed to practice medicine. Asked if the state Health Department would investigate Levine's involvement with the assisted suicide attempt, spokesperson Lois Utley said: "We don't really have many facts to go on. We really couldn't comment at this stage."

State guidelines permit doctors treating terminally ill patients to provide painkilling medication even when the patient is at risk for suicide, Utley said.

California Attorney General Dan Lungren was out of the office and unavailable for comment on whether Moore would face charges there.

Bosnian, Serb offices open to foes

Patrick Quinn
Associated Press

SARAJEVO — Pushed by American diplomats, Bosnia and rival Yugoslavia inched toward peace Wednesday with an agreement to open offices in each other's capitals.

Liaison offices would represent the highest level of formal contact between the two countries since Bosnia broke from the Serb-dominated Yugoslav federation three and a half years ago, triggering a rebellion by Bosnian Serbs.

U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke announced the deal in what he said was his last swing through the area before crucial peace talks among Serbian, Croatian and Bosnian leaders begin Oct. 31 in the United States.

Holbrooke said Wednesday's accord did not mean mutual diplomatic recognition between Bosnia and Yugoslavia, which now consists only of Serbia and tiny Montenegro.

"This is a small step on a long and difficult road," he said after meeting Bosnian government leaders in Sarajevo.

No date was given for when the offices would open.

U.N. officials said a week-old truce negotiated by Holbrooke appeared to be holding, although sporadic fighting persisted in northwest Bosnia. Each side blamed the other.

Holbrooke arrived in Sarajevo from Belgrade, the Serbian and Yugoslav capital, after talks with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

He said part of his mission was aimed at "getting the cease-fire fully implemented and respected."

"It's in place, but there are a lot of violations in all directions."

He headed for Croatia for talks with President Franjo Tudjman to make sure the Croatian army does not upset the peace process by marching into eastern Slavonia, the last bit of Serb-held territory in Croatia.

Serbs there revolted in 1991 after Croatia seceded from Yugoslavia, but the Croatian army last August retook most of the land they had seized.

Flush with that success, Croatian troops have threatened to retake eastern Slavonia as well, and have been involved in fighting in Bosnia, in alliance with the Sarajevo government.

A stable truce is crucial to the upcoming talks, where the warring sides must finalize a division of Bosnia between the Bosnian Serbs and a Muslim-Croat alliance and work out how they will share power in a future government.

If they succeed, an international peace conference would follow in Paris. A final settlement would be policed by a NATO force, possibly including 20,000 U.S. troops, as well as troops from non-NATO countries such as Russia.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the peace talks will be held at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, Ohio. Holbrooke, who will mediate the negotiations, pledged to keep them secret until they conclude.

With only 20 days to go, diplomats must still resolve the saber-rattling going on in neighboring Croatia.

Efforts to hold negotiations on eastern Slavonia have failed.

This week, Christopher sharply warned Tudjman, the Croatian president, against invading eastern Slavonia, saying it would "be very costly to Croatia in terms of its desires to become part of Western institutions."

GOP dismisses warnings of proximity to debt limit

Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Newt Gingrich backed away Wednesday from an offer to temporarily extend the government's borrowing authority, saying Clinton administration warnings of a crisis by Halloween could not be trusted.

In the latest exchange in a war of nerves, the Georgia Republican said Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin's projections that the federal debt limit would be reached Oct. 31 could be "a Halloween trick to try to scare people." Before agreeing to raise the debt ceiling for even a short time, Republicans would insist Rubin provide details on the government's borrowing needs, Gingrich said.

White House spokesperson Mike McCurry, expressing administration chagrin, said the standoff over federal borrowing "is now apparently going to be a crisis because Congress won't act to extend the debt ceiling."

Both sides know neither would benefit if a failure by President Clinton and Congress to break the impasse leads to an unprecedented default. The likely results would include higher interest rates, tumult in the financial markets and possibly greater interest in a third-party presidential candidate.

Nonetheless, Republicans plan to tie the debt-limit increase to their seven-year package for balancing the budget and cutting spending and taxes. It is a strategy lawmakers have long used to force presidents to handle issues they would rather avoid.

The administration, on the other hand, wants to see the debt limit extension separated from the budget issue, which would make it easier for Clinton to veto the GOP package. White House officials say that ideally, they would like to see the debt limit extended until after the 1996 elections, or at least until this Christmas, when the year's budget work may be completed.

Gingrich and Rubin spoke by telephone Wednesday and agreed to continue discussing their differences, said Treasury spokesperson Howard Schloss.

But he added, "There's no agreement" on extending federal borrowing authority.

By law, the government's total debt cannot exceed $4.9 trillion. The Treasury Department had said that limit would be reached Oct. 31, though the limited borrowing plans it announced Tuesday pushed that back a few days.

Treasury can resort to other strategies that could avert default, some of which could keep the government paying its debts for months.

But some of these, such as shifting large amounts of money from trust funds for Social Security and other programs, would be politically risky.

On Tuesday, Treasury said it would sharply scale back its short-term borrowing plans to help stay within limits. It blamed the disruption on recalcitrant Republicans.

Shortly afterward, Gingrich said lawmakers would agree to raise the limit until mid-November. That is when Republicans hope to have their balanced-budget package ready for Clinton, who has pledged to greet it with a veto.

But after meeting with House GOP lawmakers Wednesday, Gingrich said he and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., would consult before deciding whether to support extending the limit until Nov. 14.

"We have no belief the Treasury has accurate figures," Gingrich told reporters. "We have no belief that Rubin's advice is anything other than politics."

Newer conservative lawmakers, especially freshmen, have expressed reluctance to extend the government's borrowing authority unless a balanced-budget plan is in place. Their insistence means Gingrich cannot automatically count on their support for a debt-limit extension.

For his part, Dole was a bit more conciliatory, saying Congress would work to avoid a federal default. But he accused Rubin of "trying to destabilize the financial markets" and needlessly frightening Americans.

"No one wants a default, and scare tactics are no way to avoid a default," he said.

The maneuvering, meanwhile, was seemingly having little effect on financial markets.

DEFENSE CLAIMS AUTHORITIES WERE DISHONEST

Witness: Police misrepresented Saldivar's confession

Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — The police who took down Yolanda Saldivar's signed confession to killing Selena left out her claim that it was an accident, a Texas Ranger testified Wednesday.

"She hesitated to sign the statement because it didn't have the word 'accident' or 'accidental,'" Robert Garza said at Saldivar's murder trial. "It didn't reflect what she had stated, according to her."

Judge Mike Westergren ruled the confession admissible despite defense claims that police reneged on a promise, made during a 9 1/2 hour standoff with a suicidal Saldivar, to let her immediately talk to a lawyer.

The defense said a hysterical Saldivar shot the 23-year-old Grammy-winning singer accidentally at a motel March 31.

Prosecutors say the woman who rose from president of Selena's fan club to manager of her clothing boutiques deliberately killed Selena when they met to discuss the singer's accusation that Saldivar had embezzled $30,000.

Saldivar, 35, could get life in prison. The trial was moved to Houston because of heavy publicity.

The signed confession said: "I took the gun from my purse and Selena started walking towards the door, which was opened. I pulled the hammer back and I shot at her as she was walking towards the door, which was open."

It makes no mention of accident.

Garza, who watched the interrogation by Corpus Christi police through one-way glass, said what he heard Saldivar say was that she "pulled a gun out of her purse, held it to her own head."

"She said she had the hammer back. She said that in a gesture to Selena, she told her to close the door and the gun went off."

He said he filed a supplemental report because it looked to him like Saldivar wavered before signing.

"She hesitated to sign the statement because it didn't have the word 'accident' or 'accidental.' It didn't reflect what she had stated, according to her."

Robert Garza, Texas Ranger who testified Wednesday

But District Attorney Carlos Valdez said the promise was not binding.

"You can promise the moon if you come out," Valdez said. "And if they come out, they're going to pull down the moon?"

"They're going to promise anything that's necessary to save a life."

The judge sided with the prosecution and let the jury hear the confession.

Sgt. Paul Rivera, the homicide detective on the case, agreed Saldivar initially questioned the document.

"Before she signed the statement, she went back up and said: 'Right here, where it says I shot at her,' she said, 'it went off. The gun went off,'" Rivera testified.

Rivera said he reminded her: "You just told us you pulled the hammer back and shot at her. She said, 'That's right.' Then she signed the statement."

Baseball keeps shooting itself in the foot

After a long hiatus, the fall classic is back. Major League Baseball is trying to recover from last year's strike and a trashed image. A new playoff system is intact and the World Series is set to begin Saturday.

Baseball fans swore at the start of the season they would not forget what the owners and players did to the game last year. An ugly labor dispute wiped out the end of the season and the playoffs.

For the most part, the fans made good on their promise. Attendance was down for most of the season. Owners promised that once the pennant races came down to the wire the fans would come back.

The owners were right. Fans stormed the stadiums of the hot teams down the stretch. The Seattle Mariners, Cleveland Indians and Colorado Rockies were drawing record crowds as the teams neared playoff births.

The excitement of the sport was certainly lifted by the new playoff system. Instead of four teams heading into postseason, the league now has eight teams in postseason. Fans were excited once again. Playoff teams such as the New York Yankees, Indians, Mariners and Rockies had never experienced postseason, or hadn't for a long time. Baseball appeared to be back.

Somehow, however, baseball managed to screw it up again. While postseason fever had reached fans,

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Baseball coverage has been unbelievably inept — it prevented fans who disregarded the game boycott from seeing the playoff series.

most of them were unable to watch their teams play. Television coverage was provided by something called the Baseball Network. Instead of covering all the games at different times or days, the geniuses in baseball decided to schedule all the games at the same time. Each region would get one game and the viewers would have to settle for periodic highlights of the other games in a small box at the bottom of the screen.

If a person were a die-hard Yankee fan living in Iowa, he would be forced to watch the Reds against the Dodgers. If a person were a die-hard Rockies fan living on the East Coast, he would be forced to watch the Red Sox play the Indians.

Yankee fans had waited 15 years to see their team in the playoffs. Indians fans waited 31 years. The Mariners and Rockies were making their first appearances. Yet only a quarter of the nation could watch a given game.

What made the situation even more frustrating was the fact that the playoffs were thrilling. The Mariners and Yankees played one of the most exciting series in playoff history. But if a tree falls in a forest and no one is there to hear it, does it make a sound? The only reason the deciding fifth game of the series was shown in Iowa was that the other playoff series were all over.

Baseball was once known as the national pastime. Over the past decade it has lost that distinction. Kids are much more enamored with football and basketball. Perhaps the Baseball Network was trying to settle and make the game the regional pastime.

Of course, no one is willing to take the blame for the scheduling blunders. The television networks blame the owners. The owners blame the television networks. Sounds a little bit like the infamous strike.

This idiotic marketing of the game is nothing new for baseball. While basketball and football are smart enough to market their playoffs by scheduling the big games at times that everyone can watch, baseball never picked up on that lesson. Instead, baseball has in the past started postseason games after half the nation is in bed. Smart.

The only thing that can save baseball now is the game itself. The owners don't seem too interested in saving it. The ballplayers only seem interested in saving it if it will save them some cash.

Fortunately, the World Series will be shown nationally since there is no other baseball game to compete.

Don't be surprised, however, if baseball finds some way to mess it up anyway. They always do.

'Queer' used by activists

To the Editor:

Recently, I have noticed several quotes in which the Daily Iowan editors have replaced a given word with the word "homosexual" in brackets. While I understand the practice of occasionally editing quotes for clarity, I fear an error has been made.

I suspect that the word you have chosen to replace is the word "queer." I wonder if you realize that "queer" and "homosexual" do not have the same meaning. "Homosexual" is used to refer specifically to gay men and lesbians. The term "queer" is used to include bisexuals and transgender people along with homosexual men and women. It is chosen by many activists because of its inclusiveness.

If you insist on altering quotes, please do so with a knowledge of the words you are using and replacing.

GOP about to lose it

To the Editor:

Based on the fact that the GOP presently controls both houses of Congress, as well as the governorships of 30 states, one would think that the Republican Party is on the brink of its greatest success in its 141-year history. In reality, the party appears to be throwing away its appeal by succumbing to the desires of its most conservative members.

In their overzealous attempts to win the support of the so-called Religious Right (i.e. rigidity and intolerance), GOP presidential candidates have jeopardized their mainstream appeal. With the exception of Senator Arlen Specter, the current list of Republican presidential hopefuls have allowed themselves to be dragged into the right-wing fringe by charlatans and demagogues who preach an arch-conservative orthodoxy.

Has the GOP already forgotten the fanaticism and dogmatism of its failed 1992 Houston convention? Is it possible that the Republican Party still blames the news media for the Bush/Quayle loss in 1992? If the answer to both questions is "yes," we can all look forward to the GOP screaming "It's the media's fault!" until the end of the century.

Spirit should lead everyone

To the Editor:

Given the fact that homosexuals, bisexuals and transgendered people are not responsible for being queer, how can they then assert pride in being queer? The headline of the article "Come out in the open and be spiritually strong" wrongly implies spirituality has something to do with queerness. Everybody should try to be spiritually strong. Some queer people can be more spiritual than normal people. It should be noted that in the Jain religion, they are considered as part of the human family.

Inherent sexism is the root of violence against women

To the Editor:

Thank you for running Rima Vesely's editorial on domestic violence. It is extremely important this issue be discussed as often and as openly as possible in light of the Simpson verdict and the state of the times in which we live. However, I would like to point out to Vesely and others that it is not from a sense of apathy that police, neighbors, friends and relatives refuse to get involved in the fight to end domestic violence and rape.

The reason no one does much in a domestic violence situation (including police) is because much of the world, unconsciously or consciously, believes women are inferior and need to be put in their places. Many people, including women, have a deep-seated belief in the superiority of the male. They permit domestic violence and rape (domestic, date or otherwise) to continue in order to maintain the status quo, in order to keep the system in place and in order to avoid the most feared possibility of all: CHANGE.

Until we come to terms with the sexism inherent in all of us, we will always have to deal with these issues. Sexism, like racism, is passed on from generation to generation. Family structures and institutions (including governments) teach it the same way language and social skills are taught, overtly and otherwise. These values are not born in us; we learn them. No matter how often we cite the awful statistics, the point is that sexism leads to domestic violence and rape for a reason.

Of course it is horrifying. Of course it is wrong. But if we can learn something from the conference in Beijing, it might be that we are only at the beginning of what will be a long struggle and fight. It took so much and so many to come to the seemingly simple statements that "women's rights are human rights," and "women shouldn't have to satisfy their partner's sexual needs on demand."

The fact that we are still fighting to prove these self-evident ideas means it is not enough to question what to do, or what was done, in a domestic violence situation. We must question why the situation occurs at all, starting with the most basic tenets of the social fabric — starting with ourselves.

As long as we continue to blame victims (questioning what women choose to wear, questioning how women choose to act) and as long as we live in denial of our own internalized oppression built on the foundations of patriarchy, we will never end the cycle of abuse.

Just three more travelers ignoring each other

I should have bought the magazine. I had it in my hand at Midway — the latest Vanity Fair with Ralph Fiennes half naked on the cover — but no, I had to save three lousy bucks. Three dollars, after all, can go a long way toward saving the environment, finding a cure for AIDS and supplying medical care for Bosnian war orphans. It can also buy five Twix bars, which is what I ended up spending it on.

I should have bought the magazine because if I had, I wouldn't be sitting here, wedged between two enormous men in suits, with nothing to read but an In Flight magazine and the instructions on the vomit bag in my front seat pocket. I wouldn't be bored out of my mind, fantasizing about what I would have done if I had been the Jeff Bridges character in "Fearless." I wouldn't be wondering if the Miller sisters are really happy with all that fame and fortune.

If I had my magazine I would be thumbing through it, perhaps dabbing on a sample of Sun

I should have bought the magazine because if I had, I wouldn't be sitting here, wedged between two enormous men in suits, with nothing to read but an "In Flight" magazine and the instructions on the vomit bag in my front seat pocket.

Moon Stars or Fire and Ice, feeling completely distracted and a little wiser for having just found a facial recipe that can be made from a combination of peanut butter and kitchen cleansers.

Maybe I should explain. I have been up since six this morning, which is literally the earliest I have pulled myself out of bed all year. (I panicked for a full five minutes before I realized that it was supposed to be that dark.) By the time the sun rose at seven, I was in the car driving to Chicago to catch a flight to my step brother's wedding in Florida.

All going smoothly, I will arrive in Tampa just in time for the rehearsal dinner.

But all is not going smoothly. First of all, the guy on my left (with his suspenders and rose-tinted glasses — he looks like an accountant for the mob) has started ordering little bottles of Black Label scotch two at a time.

Rose-Tinted Glasses: I'll have two bottles of Black Label.

Flight Attendant: Do you want a glass of water with that, sir?

Rose-Tinted Glasses: Yeah, whatever, babe.

It's not the scotch that I mind so much. It's that with every bottle his elbow gets a little further settled into my lap.

Meanwhile, the enormous suit on my right (he is the biggest man I have ever seen wear a pink button-down shirt) has spent the last hour puzzling over the In Flight crossword. (Question: a three letter acronym that stands for zero access storage. Answer: V.A.S. — Need I say more?) He has also recently started humming to himself, which is actually a relief since it drowns out the little girl behind me who has been counting from one to eleven over and over again since we took off.

It's not that I don't like to fly — I just wish I could fly alone.

Oh no, Pink Shirt's staring at me. He's opening up his mouth — he's going to say something.

He's saying ... no wait, it was just a yawn. No, there he goes again. By God, he's talking. He's rattling away. He's saying that I look bored, that I look like I might want something to read.

I am nodding stupidly, a little in shock at the sudden unexpected human interaction. He is reaching into his briefcase. He is pulling something out. (Stock reports? A Big and Tall catalog?) He's handing it to me. I look down — it's the latest Vanity Fair magazine.

He slaps it on my tray table. "Here ya go," he said. "It's the one with Ralph Fiennes." He glances down at his own tray table and blushes. "I think he's pretty cute."

I look at him. Rose-Tinted Glasses looks at him. Pink Shirt goes back to his crossword and starts humming. Rose-Tinted Glasses orders two more bottles of scotch.

And there we are again, the three of us — half a row out of 29 — just three more travelers ignoring each other.

I sit for a minute. Then I tap Pink Shirt on the shoulder and point to the crossword. "V.A.S.," I said. He smiles and writes it in.

Then I flip the magazine open and start reading.

"It constitutes an unwarranted attack on us as a people in the same way that little black Sambo was an affront to African-Americans and that Frito Bandito was an affront to Chicanos," said Suzan Harjo, a member of the Cheyenne-Arapaho tribe and director of the Morning Star Institute in Washington, which promotes Indian traditions. "America can survive and flourish without its racist toys."

In Cleveland, Chief Wahoo adorns everything from hats to shirts to placards waved by fans.

Cleveland had a huge symbol of Chief Wahoo outside old Cleveland Stadium; he didn't make the move last year to Jacobs Field, named for team owner Richard Jacobs.

"As long as Mr. Jacobs owns the team, Chief Wahoo will be our logo," said Indians vice president Bob DiBiasio.

In Atlanta, Chief Noc-A-Homa, a man in a feathered headdress, used to do a war dance near a tepee beyond the outfield fence at Fulton County Stadium. The mascot left before the 1986 season in a salary dispute with the Braves.

Now the Braves are known

Ray Apodaca, from the Administration for Native Americans almost as much for the Tomahawk Chop as they are for having the best pitching staff in baseball.

"I was listening to the radio and one of the sports commentators said, 'When they do the Toma-hawk Chop, which Indians are they cheering for?'" Apodaca said. "I expect to see a lot of things that are going to be offensive in characterizations."

Cleveland got its nickname in 1915 during a newspaper name-the-team contest. Indians was suggested because of Louis Francis Sockalexis, a Penobscot Indian who was the first Indian to play pro baseball.

The Braves, who first played in Boston, were once owned by John Ward and James Gaffney, "chieftains" in New York's Tammany Hall political machine. The team was called Braves because they worked for these chiefs.

One of the trickier Series dilemmas will be shared by The Oregonian and Minneapolis Star-Tribune, two newspapers that have banned the use of Indian nicknames in their sports columns.

Paul Gelormino, deputy sports editor of The Oregonian, said the newspaper would continue to refer to the teams simply as Cleveland and Atlanta. And any reference to Chief Wahoo or the Tomahawk Chop will be avoided.

"If nothing else, they're pretty much cliches in a sense," Gelormino said. "Even if that wasn't our policy, we'd pretty much stay away from it anyway."

aunts and uncles and grandparents why it's important for their young people to participate in uniform" in the former Yugoslav republic.

A few lawmakers defended the administration, however. Saying he would probably support sending troops to Bosnia, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., ranking Democrat on the House International Relations Committee, predicted Congress would not insist on voting to approve the deployment.

"Members would probably rather let the president take full responsibility for the deployment to Bosnia," Hamilton said. "If it succeeds, they'll praise him. If it fails, they'll criticize him."

In a second day of congressional hearings, Perry, Christopher and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, portrayed the proposed troop deployment as the only way of staving off a wider war.

"What I would say to a mother in that situation, I would recall that twice before in this century the United States has had to send not a limited number of troops but an almost unlimited number of troops to take part in a war that started from Central Europe, once from the very city that we're talking about here now," Christopher said. He was referring to the outbreak of World War I in Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital.

To avoid such a catastrophe, the officials said, the United States must take part in a NATO peace-keeping force that would come in with heavy arms and establish a buffer zone between the warring parties after they have reached a peace agreement.

Christopher announced Wednesday Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, Ohio, will be the site of a new round of Bosnia peace talks between top officials of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia.

Facing general skepticism about the mission, the administration officials argued doing nothing would guarantee the Bosnian conflict continues. That would increase the risk it would spread to threaten U.S. allies such as Greece and Turkey.

At that point, Christopher said, "we would have to put in not 20,000 troops, but maybe 10 times as many."

Perry added the choice for the United States is not between going in or doing nothing but between helping establish peace or going in later at much greater risk.

"We do not have the choice between taking the risk and no risk but between two different qualities of risk," Perry said.

The administration is using Haiti as its model, noting the light casualties — one killed in action during the U.S. occupation that restored President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power.

But Rep. Tillie Fowler, R-Fla., called that comparison "absurd," saying Bosnia, with its heavily armed factions, more closely resembles Beirut, Lebanon, where the United States lost 241 Marines in 1983.

Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, chairperson of the House Budget Committee, told the officials, "I don't think you can get the votes for this. I don't think the case has been made." Under the administration plan, the 20,000 U.S. troops, including 2,000 to 3,000 reservists, would move into Bosnia as part of a 60,000-person NATO force. Shalikashvili said some troops could begin to pull out within months, assuming things go smoothly, and the entire force would be withdrawn after 12 months.

Introducing a new way to help bridge the gap between what you've saved and what you'll need during retirement.

Teachers Personal Annuity[®] now offers more flexibility with the new Stock Index Account... a variable account specifically developed for the long-term investor who is looking for more growth opportunities and is willing to accept more risk.

When you're planning for the future, every dollar counts. Now you have more choices to help you make the most of your after-tax retirement dollars. With Teachers Personal Annuity, you can select either our Fixed Account or our new Stock Index Account. Or, you may choose to allocate your money to both accounts. That way you can take advantage of the highly-competitive effective annual interest rate of the Fixed Account and the growth potential offered by the Stock Index Account. With both accounts, taxes on any earnings will be deferred until you withdraw them — which gives you a big edge over taxable accounts. However, if you withdraw money before age 59½, you may have to pay a federal tax penalty in addition to regular income tax. And remember — as a variable annuity, the Stock Index Account doesn't guarantee returns, which will fluctuate over time.

With a low initial investment, no front-end sales charges or transfer fees, and no surrender charge at this time, Teachers Personal Annuity can help bridge the gap between what you've saved and what you'll need during retirement.

vote and let me know when you get it," Powell said.

He did not single out anyone by name, but the remark was an apparent reference to the poll standings of GOP presidential candidates who lag well behind Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

Three in that group regularly compete for conservative support and have suggested they are best suited to carry out the 1994 Republican revolution: Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander and commentator Pat Buchanan.

As he delivered his modest salvo, Powell said he will decide whether to enter the race in mid- to late November. His book tour ends this week and he wants to spend some time discussing his future with family and friends.

While Powell denied any political calculation in the recent tailoring of his language, the shifts have come on issues prominent in GOP politics.

At the outset of his book tour, Powell raised several objections to the House GOP agenda and said of Republicans in general: "There is an edge to them and a harshness to them which tends to hurt those who are in a minority status."

This week, Powell applauded the ideological energy and commitment incorporated in the House GOP agenda. He said he wasn't opposed to its provisions as much as he was concerned "You've got to have a sense of compassion that goes along with this Contract-With-America revolution."

As if to answer questions raised by House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Powell forcefully defended the GOP approach to Medicare during a Monday television interview on "CBS This Morning."

"You've got to have a sense of compassion that goes along with this Contract-With-America revolution."

possible presidential candidate Colin Powell

Borrowing a favorite Gingrich line, Powell said Democrats were "demagoging on the issue" by suggesting Republicans wanted to use Medicare savings to pay for tax cuts.

Gingrich himself welcomed Powell's remarks, saying, "What he said the other morning was very helpful."

Powell also took pains this week to clarify his position on abortion. Without retreating from his support of abortion rights, Powell said he personally opposed abortion and opposed any federal financing of abortion.

This change in tone came shortly after Kenneth Duberstein, a veteran GOP operative and Powell confidant, contacted William Bennett and other social conservatives to say Powell wanted help clarifying his position on abortion.

Duberstein, at Powell's request, has sounded out GOP policy experts on other subjects as well. He also has spoken to several Republican campaign strategists who are not affiliated with any of the declared presidential candidates.

Among the latter group was Sal Russo, a California-based GOP media consultant, who refused to discuss the conversation. Despite Powell's recent moves, Russo said he still believed Powell would not run.

More and more, however, that is the minority view in GOP circles. "I've changed my mind and I think he will run," said William Kristol, a conservative activist who has been promoting a Powell candidacy.

His rhetorical shifts may satisfy some who are unhappy with the current GOP field but they have only intensified opposition among prominent Christian conservatives, who question whether his conversion is genuine or simply a political calculation.

opportunities for private individuals to endow scholarships, Regent John Tyrrell said.

"I feel that (scholarships are) a viable alternative, because the federal government is going to cut down on the support they give," he said.

Federal budget cutters have also worried officials at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. Edward Howell, UIHC director and CEO, said the current House budget plan would cut $7 million from the hospital's total Medicare reimbursement — a 9 percent cut.

"This is an important development that we are very concerned about at UIHC," he said.

As chairperson of the national Council of Teaching Hospitals, Howell has been lobbying Congress to reduce the severity of Medicare cuts on university hospitals.

Cuts in Medicare reimbursement to the UIHC could also impact the College of Medicine.

"When you hurt the hospital, you hurt the school," said Robert Kelch, dean of the College of Medicine.

Kelch said through cost-control measures, the UI is well-positioned to adjust to Congressional cuts.

"In contrast to parts of the country which were not pro-active, I don't think we're in (a crisis) stage at all," he said. "The optimist in me says we can beat those challenges."

Howell said the House and Senate have yet to reconcile their budget plans. President Clinton has threatened to veto the GOP budget, leaving next year's Medicare levels for the UIHC unsettled.

TURIN, Italy, (AP) — A Scottish soccer fan was stabbed Wednesday before the European Champions Cup game between Juventus of Turin and Glasgow Rangers.

Alexander Ralston, a 23-year-old from Glasgow, sustained a back injury.

Doctors at Mauriziano hospital said his condition was not serious and that he would recover in two weeks.

The Italian news agency AGI reported the Scotsman was attacked by a group of rival fans who tried to steal his scarf with Rangers colors.

About 3,000 Scottish fans, including actor Sean Connery, traveled to Turin and watched Juventus' 4-1 win.

Colorado players fear for teammate's safety

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — University of Colorado starting tackle Clint Moore failed to report to practice again Wednesday, and coaches and teammates said they were concerned.

Head coach Rick Neuheisel learned Wednesday from Moore's father that the senior captain is dealing with insomnia and personal stress.

"His father indicated to me that he was going to talk to him later this afternoon," Neuheisel said. "It's too bad. He's a nice kid."

Because of Moore's absence, junior Kyle Smith is expected to start this Saturday's game against Iowa State.

Raptors make deal to secure Miner

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Raptors acquired guard Harold Miner from the Cleveland Cavaliers on Wednesday for center Victor Alexander.

The Raptors will also get a second-round 1996 draft pick along with cash.

"I see Harold Miner as a guy who can play some backup at small forward and provide some scoring," Raptors vice president Isaiah Thomas said. "He can score and he's a talent."

The 6-foot-5 Miner averaged 7.3 points, 2.6 rebounds and 1.5 assists in 45 games with the Miami Heat last year. He was dealt to Cleveland in June for future considerations and a draft pick.

The Raptors already have Alvin Robertson and Vincenzo Esposito at shooting guard and Willie Anderson and Carlos Rogers at small forward.

"You can never have too many guys at one position who have talent," Thomas said.

"We're comfortable with Carlos at the spot right now and hopefully Harold can back him up."

The 6-10 Alexander, who played at Iowa State, was obtained by Toronto in the deal that sent expansion draft pick B.J. Armstrong to the Golden State Warriors.

'Huskers' Phillips returns to 'pay his debt'

Dave Zelio

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Lawrence Phillips, the star Nebraska tailback suspended last month for attacking a former girlfriend, said Wednesday he made a mistake but still wants a shot at the Heisman Trophy with the No. 2 Cornhuskers.

In an unexpected call to a talk show on Omaha radio station KFAB, Phillips said he "reacted without thinking" Sept. 10 when he attacked Kate McEwen, a Nebraska basketball player, at the Lincoln apartment of transfer quarterback Scott Frost.

"I'm here to pay my debt. However I've got to pay it, that's how I'll pay it," he said. "If they don't want to let me play, then I don't play. If they do, then I do."

Coach Tom Osborne said Phillips could return to practice next week after university officials decide on any disciplinary action.

The university is considering sanctions against Phillips for violating the student conduct code when he attacked McEwen, his former girlfriend. In similar cases, students have been required to make restitution to the victim and receive behavior education.

Once considered a leading Heisman contender, Phillips was kicked off the team hours after his arrest, but Osborne later said he was suspended indefinitely. Phillips pleaded no contest and faces sentencing Dec. 1 on misdemeanor assault and trespassing charges.

Phillips broke a five-week silence by calling Tom Becka's talk show on KFAB. Employees at KFAB, the flagship station for the Nebraska sports network, said they verified Phillips' identity with university and other sources.

Phillips said professional agents offered him $100,000 to leave school and wait for the NFL draft.

"I didn't do that. I stayed here. I'm going to go to school and try to do what's right," Phillips said during the 20-minute interview. "These people who are talking like they know me, they don't know me. It's killing me how they talk like they know what's going on. They don't."

Phillips was unsure if he would return to Nebraska next year, saying it depends on whether people want him to play. If so, he said, then "I'll come back and play. If not, then there's no need for me to be here."

Phillips can return to the team if university officials leave his student status intact. Osborne said Phillips would not be in playing shape at least until the Nov. 4 home game against Iowa State.

Some fans say the team can win without Phillips; others say he deserves another chance.

"It sends a terrible message," said Tom Shatel, a sports columnist for the Omaha World-Herald. "It sends the wrong message to women on campus and women everywhere. It could open the door for other athletes to say, 'Well, I was upset when I lost my temper. I have an anger-control problem and I just need some counseling and I'll be OK.' There's no accountability here."

Osborne has said Phillips and his victim would be better off if Phillips plays football.

Phillips, who had little structure as a teen-ager in Los Angeles, needs football for his self-esteem and self-worth, Osborne said. He said it would be better for McEwen because she would not be blamed if Phillips' football career was finished.

McEwen has received 24-hour

Field hockey storms to 12-2 clip

For Big Ten Conference field hockey teams the season is not over, but the fat lady is humming.

The Iowa field hockey team has slammed the door on most of the conference, leaving only Penn State barely breathing in the race for the title. The Hawkeyes sit at a perfect 7-0 in the Big Ten and 12-2 overall. Iowa is breathing down the neck of the top-ranked Tar Heels, as the Hawkeyes moved up to No. 2 in the nation this week.

If Jess Settles' back doesn't cooperate, all the preseason honors and accolades for the highly touted junior basketball player will be for naught.

Last season was a frustrating one for the forward from Winfield, Iowa. A chronic back injury, which Settles is adamant can heal without surgery, forced him to sit out seven games.

While Settles attempted to recuperate, fellow big men Russ Millard and Greg Helmers faced battles of their own. Millard with pneumonia and Helmers a sprained ankle. As a result, Iowa struggled in its inside game.

When Settles did play, he led Iowa in rebounding with just over six per game, but had to sport a brace for his ailing back.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Iowa plays host to intrastate rivals

Shannon Stevens

The Daily Iowan

With only two native Iowans on its squad, one might assume that the Iowa women's tennis team is a tad bit unfamiliar with its intrastate rival from Ames.

Not a chance.

After dividing its squad to compete in two tournaments last weekend, the Hawkeyes (1-0) will reunite at Klotz tennis courts, as they host the Iowa State Cyclones today in a battle for state bragging rights.

Iowa thumped the Cyclones 9-0 a year ago and holds a 27-0 advantage in the all-time series, but junior Kelly McCracken said the Hawkeyes aren't going to treat the match lightly.

"Even though we beat them 9-0 last year, we can't go into it thinking that we're going to walk over them because on any given day, a team can be better or worse than they usually play," McCracken said.

Iowa coach Jenny Mainz agreed saying she expected a fire fight.

"We've beaten them consistently in the past so they'll be gunning for us," Mainz said.

The Hawkeyes will try to capitalize on their strong doubles play to put away the Cyclones early. At the

No. 1 doubles spot, seniors Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette stand at 6-1 while sophomore Krissy Campbell and freshman Erin Wolverson are 5-2 at the No. 2 position. The McCracken twins (Kristen and Kelly) are scheduled to start at No. 3 doubles.

"I'm definitely looking for some good doubles play, a lot of movement, aggressiveness and poaching," Mainz said. "I look for us to get a good start and get up 1-0 in the doubles right away."

In singles action, Iowa will rely heavily on the arms of Kristen McCracken (5-2) at the No. 2 position and junior Robin Niemeier (4-2) in the No. 5 slot. Both players were undefeated before falling at the Hoosier Classic last weekend.

Although all of the Hawkeyes have played three or more matches in the last week, Wolverson said fatigue wouldn't be a factor.

"I'm not even sore from last weekend," Wolverson said. "Our team is in really good shape. We're ready to go."

Complicating matters for the Cyclones will be Iowa's impressive home record. The Hawkeyes haven't lost a single set at Klotz this season and have won seven of

AL CHAMPS

Indians end 40 years of despair

Ben Walker
Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Cleveland Indians were never lovable losers. They never had a cute ballpark like Wrigley Field or a colorful manager like Casey Stengel.

No, there was nothing nice about the Indians.

They were a terrible team playing in a place called the Mistake by the Lake. They'd been bad ever since Willie Mays robbed them with that catch more than 40 years ago, so brutal they inspired movies about a team that never won.

All of that made this win so much nicer.

Cleveland clinched its first trip to the World Series since 1954, beating Randy Johnson and the Seattle Mariners 4-0 Tuesday night to win the AL playoffs 4-2.

Winning pitcher Dennis Martinez and the rest of the Indians ran off the bench and met on the mound to celebrate the moment. Manager Mike Hargrove, who played seven seasons for the Indians and never finished higher than next-to-last, looked almost surprised that his team — the most dominant club in the majors this year — had made it so far.

"Maybe a little bit of disbelief, not really disbelief, but can this really be happening," Hargrove said. "So I guess maybe it was a situation where I had to pinch myself to make sure this was the Cleveland Indians and Mike Hargrove in this position. I found out that it really was."

The Indians, who won 100 games in the shortened regular season and swept Boston in the first round of the playoffs, will play the team with the record in the National League, the Atlanta Braves.

Game 1 of the World Series will be Saturday night in Atlanta. Greg Maddux, likely to win his fourth straight Cy Young Award, will start for the Braves, probably against AL playoffs MVP Orel Hershiser, 7-0 lifetime in the postseason.

"Now this team and staff is playoff-tested and they are ready for the World Series," Hershiser said. "The players who have lived through the Cleveland years of the depression of no wins, and the fact of 'Here we are, we've made it, we've got to do something,' there was almost an urgency of winning the games early on."

"You don't win 100 games just because of a great offense, they have some pretty good pitching over there, too."

Randy Johnson, Mariners pitcher, on the Indians

The last time the Indians won the World Series was 1948, when they beat the Boston Braves, and Bob Feller was their star player. The Hall of Fame pitcher was at the Kingdome to see Cleveland clinch this pennant — kind of the way it happened in the movie, "Major League."

The Indians did it behind Martinez, Carlos Baerga and Kenny Lofton.

Martinez pitched seven innings of four-hit ball, earning the first win of his career in the postseason and becoming the oldest pitcher, at age 40, to win a league championship series game.

"Finally I did something that we can all remember," said Martinez, who once pitched a perfect game for Montreal.

"We did something for the people of Cleveland. They've been waiting such a long time."

Baerga had three hits, including a solo homer that capped a three-run eighth and finished Johnson. Baerga batted .400 in the series.

Lofton, whose RBI single in the fifth made it 1-0, had the play of the game, scoring from second base on a passed ball by Dan Wilson in the eighth.

Lofton, knocked down by Johnson on the third pitch of the game, came back with two hits and batted .458 in the series.

"First of all, I'm glad for the city of Cleveland to be able to experience this because they haven't experienced this in 41 years," Lofton said.

Certainly not for a long time at old, empty Cleveland Stadium. Next week, though, the Series comes to gleaming, sold-out Jacobs Field.

The Mariners, for the fourth time in 16 days, asked Johnson to save their season. Relying on his slider more than his overpowering fastball, he kept his team close until the eighth.

Johnson received a standing ovation when he walked off the mound for the last time and waved with his right arm.

Maybe his left arm, the one he'd carried the Mariners on, was too tired. Hershiser, in the Indians dugout, stood and applauded Johnson's effort.

"You don't win 100 games just because of a great offense," Johnson said. "They have some pretty good pitching over there, too."

The Mariners won four games this year when a loss would have meant the end of the season, and Johnson won three of them.

But a two-base throwing error by second baseman Joey Cora in the fifth set up Lofton's go-ahead single. With Martinez matching Johnson pitch-for-pitch, the Mariners did not catch up.

The crowd of 58,489 gave the team one final standing ovation when Jay Buhner ended the game with a groundout. Some fans kept applauding until a few Mariners came back on the field.

They had cheered the "Refuse To Lose" Mariners through a remarkable run in which they overcame a 13-game deficit to win the AL West and an 0-2 hole in the first round against New York.

Despite the loss — a 2-for-23 slump by AL batting champion Edgar Martinez really hurt — it was a great season for Seattle, which made the playoffs for the first time in its 19-year history. The fans' enthusiasm, meanwhile, may have helped get the city a new stadium and keep the team in town.

TOGETHER AGAIN

Doc and Darryl reunite in New York

Hal Bock
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Doc and Darryl will be teammates again in New York.

The team and league will be different, and, hopefully, so will their off-the-field habits.

A decade after they helped the New York Mets win a championship, George Steinbrenner is hoping that Dwight Gooden and Darryl Strawberry still have something left.

Call the signings of Strawberry last summer and Gooden on Monday a blast from the past.

Strawberry, who once signed a $20.25 million, five-year contract as a free agent, was a $750,000 midseason pickup, petty cash for Steinbrenner. The Yankees owner paid $1.15 million guaranteed for Gooden, who once signed a three-year deal for $15.45 million. There are incentive clauses and options for the next couple of years but nothing like the money these two once earned.

Steinbrenner and Gooden believe they have a contract, but the Players Association disagrees.

What they have, according to the union, is an agreement on monetary terms.

"Until Gooden gets an agent, there's no deal," Gene Orza, associate counsel for the union said Tuesday.

Gooden's agent, Ray Negrón, was decertified by the union, and Orza warned that the association will go to arbitration to contest the contract.

The pitcher and the Yankees said when the union made its objection known, Gooden made the deal for himself.

Trojans, Notre Dame tangle on Saturday

Rick Warner
Associated Press

The last time Southern Cal beat Notre Dame, Ronald Reagan was president, Larry Holmes was heavyweight champion and Gerry Faust was coach of the Fighting Irish.

Since that 1982 victory, the Trojans have gone 0-11-1 against the Irish, including last year's 17-17 tie.

But Southern Cal is primed to end the winless streak Saturday at South Bend.

The Trojans are 6-0 and ranked fifth in the nation. The Irish are 5-2 and ranked 17th, but they barely beat Army last week and have struggled all season.

"We just do not play consistently in any area ... and consequently we never really take control of the game," coach Lou Holtz said.

Last week was a perfect example.

The Irish blew a 21-point lead against Army and narrowly escaped with a 28-27 victory after the Cadets came up inches short on a 2-point try in the final minute.

Notre Dame must play a lot better to beat Southern Cal, which has been winning with a stingy defense and mistake-free offense.

The Trojans are giving up only 9.5 points per game and have committed only three turnovers all season.

If they can avoid mistakes

Saturday, the Trojans (minus 3 1/2) will finally beat the Irish.

could live up to high expectations created by media and college basketball experts. But if you ask Settles, this year's squad could survive without him.

"Last year I was thinking about (a medical redshirt), wishing maybe at the time I could have done it," Settles said. "I couldn't hardly stand sitting on the bench, but if it would have happened, then that's just part of it."

"I think this year with the depth we have, they don't even need me. The freshmen will take it over and we'll be all right."

Not to say Iowa coach Tom Davis wouldn't mind having his potential all-American on the hardwood of Carver-Hawkeye Arena, while at the same time realizing he shouldn't push the junior star.

"I'll know better off, once practice starts (about Settles' health)," Davis said. "We're going to hold two-hour workouts, and if he can hold up after that and come back on Monday, then that's a pretty good sign."

Few who have seen Settles play will forget his uncanny intensity. Whether playing offense or defense, fast break or a half-court game, the 1994 Big Ten Freshman of the Year plays like it's the final five minutes of the NCAA tournament championship.

Then again, he wouldn't have it any other way.

"I'm still just a kid from Winfield who is honored to be here," Settles said. "I'll play hard every night for you and won't take anything for granted; I never will. I love the Iowa people, I love being in Iowa City, and wearing this uniform is the best thing that's ever happened to me."

Settles' ability to mix it up in the paint has helped build his rugged reputation. However, it was a different facet of his game that Settles worked on over the summer; a summer dedicated primarily to recovery.

"The thing I hated about this summer was all those teams I was going to get to play on with Tim Duncan (Wake Forest) and (Ray) Allen (UConn) and the coaching staff, all those great guys."

"So for those weeks I was kind of feeling down, but this summer was probably the first summer when I could stay home and just hang out with my family."

Settles' summer basketball agenda pertained solely to working on his shooting. He and his father flew out to Anaheim, Cal., to work with a shooting coach, a trip he's made for the last couple of years.

"It was kind of a nice break," Settles said. "We got to go to some baseball games, Disneyland and then shoot."

It's his well-roundedness that has earned him national praise.

"I love the Iowa people, I love being in Iowa City, and wearing this uniform is the best thing that's ever happened to me."

Jess Settles, Iowa basketball player

Street and Smith magazine said of Settles, "If there's a better all-around player than Settles, he's in the NBA."

Athlon Sports proclaimed, "If Settles' back is healthy, the Hawkeyes' offensive potential is frightening."

A prime example of Settles' explosiveness was his performance at last year's Rainbow Classic, a tournament held in Hawaii during the winter vacation.

Settles missed the three previous games against Long Island, Western Carolina and BYU-Hawaii. Opting to give the injury-prone back a try, Davis inserted Settles into the lineup. Iowa's opponent was nationally-ranked Duke, and somebody on the Hawkeye squad had to guard Blue Devil center Cherokee Parks.

So how did Settles react against Parks, a first-round NBA pick, as well as the three-game layoff? By scoring 28 points, of course, leading the Hawkeyes to an 81-71 upset victory.

"I got myself ready and for some reason God just allowed me to be ready over there," Settles said. "I don't know why, but he let me play those three games and then said, 'That's enough for you this year.'"

While some college players may hone their skills in pickup games and fancy camps, Settles prefers a more traditional approach.

"I'm more of a fundamentalist," Settles said. "I don't believe in playing a lot of pickup ball, so it was a good situation. I was back home this summer with my father working out, working on the fundamentals, so I guess that was good for me anyway."

Davis said he's somewhat worried by all the pressure put on his squad and on Settles, calling it distracting and presumptuous, but adds that the elementary education major is more than capable of handling the hype.

"(Settles) has proven what he can do," Davis said. "His timing's a little bit off, but you've got enough time to get the timing down, but you just worry about the overall health."

With all the expectations thrust upon Settles, it would be easy to become absorbed in the moment, losing touch with what got him here in the first place.

But not Settles.

"I remember saying when I decided to come to Iowa that I don't know if I'll ever score a point here and that it was just going to be nice to put on a uniform," Settles said.

"That's always been the sort of the approach I've taken, but I guess I have been able to put a few buckets in already."

PRESEASON NBA

Rockets play on, minus Hakeem

Stephen Wilson
Associated Press

LONDON — With or without Hakeem Olajuwon, the NBA champion Houston Rockets have a reputation to uphold at the McDonald's Championship.

"No NBA team has ever come out here and lost," said backup guard Sam Cassell. "We don't want to be the first. Let somebody else be the first."

Yes, NBA teams haven't lost in previous McDonald's tournaments, but this year's format is different and the competition tougher.

In the past, the tourney field has been made up of invited European club teams and a selected NBA team. This year for the first time, five league or national champions square off with the NBA champion in the event's seventh edition.

NBA teams have come close to defeat before in the McDonald's tournament. In 1990, the New York Knicks prevailed in overtime, 119-115, against Scavolini Pesaro of Italy. In 1991, the Los Angeles Lakers won by only two points, 116-114, against the Spanish club Joventut Badalona of Spain.

With that and the championship field in mind, coach Rudy Tomjanovich said there will be no let-down by his players.

"Enough has been made of the U.S. team not ever losing," he said.

"Our guys have already talked about that. So there's a pride factor."

The six-team field also includes league champions from Australia (Perth Wildcats), Italy (Buckler Bologna), Europe (Spain's Real Madrid), Israel (Maccabi Tel Aviv) and England (Sheffield Sharks).

Houston plays Friday against the Wildcats. The winners of Thursday's games will meet for the right to face the Rockets or Wildcats in the championship game.

"It's more than a glorified pre-season game," Olajuwon said. "It's a world championship. You can't play it down. The NBA is supposed to be the best league. We should win. This is going to be a real big bonus. To win a title before the season ever starts, that would make our season."

WRITING ON THE WALL

Urban roots grow in I.C.'s underground

Police call it an eyesore, but those who actually tote cans of spray paint call graffiti fine art. Graffiti artists define their work in almost poetic terms, and with great reverence speak of the concrete walls they have transformed from a drab gray into a multi-colored wonder.

It's "hip-hop culture, if you will," one said. Another: "Despite what Tipper Gore and Bob Dole may say, it's more than just violence and profanity strung together with a loose rhyme; there's a lot of meaning and thought provoking ideals behind it." And one artist who began his graffiti career by drawing in the backs of church hymnals said graffiti is history in the making — "They found graffiti in Roman ruins."

But this illegal pictorial language that covers concrete from one side of the UI campus to the other has increased by 200 percent in the past two years, police said. Regardless of how colorful and expressive graffiti may be, the Iowa City Police Department is vowing to keep the concrete gray.

Jonathan Hansen
The Daily Iowan

Though the Iowa City Police Department is battling a 200 percent increase in graffiti over the past two years, a local bar has turned the vandalism into a legal art display.

The 'Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave., recently hired local graffiti artist Hans Schmitter and Chicago artist DZine to paint a mural on three walls of the upstairs bar. Other graffiti artists were hired to paint the bathrooms downstairs.

The chance to decorate walls legally may launch a career for some graffiti artists, as it did for DZine.

"People are becoming really receptive to it," said Corey

Steward of the 'Que. "They're realizing it's not just a bunch of little punks vandalizing — it's actually art."

Artistic graffiti can be split into two categories: tags and murals. Tagging is basically signing one's name, often with a characteristic style, to a wall, while mural painting — or spray can art — is more artistically oriented.

Jim Howard, UI associate director of building and maintenance, said while the UI doesn't tolerate graffiti, some campus locations, such as in the tunnel by the Union, are less closely maintained than more visible places.

INTERVIEWS WITH THE VANDALS

BOBBY

"Bobby," a UI sociology major and an Iowa City native, was just arrested by local police officers Saturday. He was caught in the middle of putting up a large mural on the railroad bridge by the Main Library in the afternoon. He spoke on the condition of anonymity because he could be implicated and perhaps charged for other pieces of graffiti.

How long have you been painting?

"The big stuff? I'd say probably two months. Before that, tags. But I stopped that because, basically, it does nothing more than just show defiance and a lack of respect. I wanted to move beyond that, I wanted to progress, and I thought doing murals was a natural progression from tagging."

"Murals are obviously more risky because you could easily spend three hours doing it, where as a tag, you drop that in five seconds and you're gone."

"The idea behind tagging is basically to get places that are highly visible, so that people driving around on the street are going to see it, people walking to class are going to see it, and basically your name is going to be well-known. Like Reflex, you know. I could bring up Reflex at any party, any group gathering, and they're probably going to know who I'm talking about. That's an achievement in tagging. He's a winner."

"Street art like this is an actual art form, regardless of whether the cops want to regard it like that or not. It's something that you practice and you develop a skill, but tagging, that's just signing your name on a wall. But they don't regard it different at all. As a matter of fact, you go

LOOL CUAB

He goes by "Stupo Jazz" or "Lool Cuab," and he is a UI theatre arts major, an accomplished playwright and a vandal.

How long have you been tagging?

"I didn't start tagging really seriously until a couple of years ago, but I've been writing graffiti as long as I can remember. After bathroom graffiti or stuff that little kids would write, I went away to a boarding school, and there it was tradition that there were lots of specific places that everyone would write their tag — either your name or your accepted nickname and your date of graduation. In the backs of the hymnals, the bottoms of desks and the inside of doorframes — all sorts of different weird places."

"It was sort of profound. There were all these lonely, rich children — I'm not from a particularly wealthy background, but there were some very wealthy children, and very lonely because they had been sent to a boarding school away from their homes — trying to leave some kind of mark, to make a cold institutional place theirs. It's marking your territory. It's making a cold place a warm place, I think."

"I haven't put a tag up in quite a ... (laughing) I shouldn't say that; I put one up last night. But I haven't gone out burning the town — where you go and hit everywhere you can hit — in quite awhile. I'm so busy with the other things I do, that when I tag it's because I happen to be in a place, under a bridge or something, where there are a lot of tags. It's usually like you see people you know getting up in a place — like, I'll see Reflex a lot, and I think, 'Reflex got up here, I can get up here,' and I'll put my tag up, too. And it's a way of saying 'Hi' to the other taggers. I'm still out here,

MYELIN

"Myelin," is a UI art major and Iowa City native in his late 20s, is probably best known to students as the criminal mastermind who years ago organized and pulled off the graffiti on the railroad bridge by the Union.

How did the posters on the railroad bridge come about?

"I was well organized. I had planned it for about — let's see, all together from the idea to completion — three weeks. There were about a dozen people involved. I just had this idea. I figured out what we needed to do it and called up friends who paint and draw and said, 'Look, I want this to be a theme on sexuality and AIDS, but basically sexuality.'"

"Then I went down and looked into it — cased it. You have to really look at a location. It's kind of like committing a crime. I mean, it is committing a crime, but it satisfies that criminal tendency without actually hurting anyone. So for about two or three weeks, you get to be obsessed about pulling off this heist."

Is that intrigue what drives you to graffiti?

"No, it's 'cause this is a really ugly town."

"When you put art on the side of a building, any structure, what you're doing is you're really questioning the validity of the aesthetic statement of the architecture. You're also opening people's eyes a little bit because people don't really see the environment they live in. Graffiti has a

I.C. exhibit: Diamonds are Klecka's best friend

Barbara Moss
The Daily Iowan

It's not often that Iowa City residents have the opportunity to mingle with a designer as prestigious as Paul Klecka, but gentlemen and especially ladies, here's your opportunity: The Chicago jewelry designer Paul Klecka will be exhibiting his innovative collection at M.C. Ginsberg Jewelers, 110 E. Washington St., today from 4-8 p.m.

"Paul Klecka is a throw-back to artists working at the turn of the century, such as Tiffany, LaClocche, Lalique and Vevey," Mark Ginsberg, owner of Ginsberg Jewelers, said.

"Jewelry is an art form — introducing people to Paul Klecka enables them to better understand the intrinsic values and the aesthetics of a piece," he said.

Klecka, who has a master's degree from Northern Illinois University, has won multiple DeBeer's Diamonds Today competitions as well as the Spectrum Award for colored gemstone design.

"My jewelry collection focuses on two concepts: the floater and mirage," Klecka said. "The work I'm exhibiting at M.C. Ginsberg is a collection of those two concepts, all having reference to an award-winning design."

"A jewelry design isn't a piece of art until it's on the body. That's what brings it to life, where it's meant to be. I'm very fond of putting a piece of jewelry on a person and walking them into the light."

Courtesy of M.C. Ginsberg

Paul Klecka presents his world-class designs at M.C. Ginsberg today from 4-8 p.m.

to show a work's true beauty," said Klecka. "The days are gone when a person wears a piece of jewelry twice a year to a fancy event."

"I'm looking forward to being in Iowa City to have the opportunity to show my new works and to meet everyone personally."

Today's event is a rare opportunity to meet a designer whose personality and charm sparkles with the same resonance as his jewelry.

Phish show a big catch

Todd Norden
The Daily Iowan

Students around the UI campus compare the band Phish to The Grateful Dead. They do so with good reason: Phish has a huge collegiate cult following (they were one of top 50 grossing acts of 1993), extends their songs into spontaneous jams and survives ignoring the Top 40 charts.

At The Five Seasons Center Friday night, concertgoers can draw their own comparisons.

Phish's funky hooks mixed with an offbeat stage presence has kept the band rolling — culminating in A Live One, their sixth and most essential CD.

The present shape of Phish formed in 1985 with Trey Anastasio on vocals and guitar, Page McConnell on keyboards and vocals, Mike Gordon on bass and vocals and Jon Fishman on drums and vocals. Live, Phish is a grab bag full of surprises. For one show, Phish covered the entire Beatle's White Album in addition to doing two full sets of their own.

Phish sometimes improvises for Zeppelinesque periods of time such as the 35 minute impromptu version of "Tweezer" on A Live One. It only makes sense that Phish's latest release is live. It's what Phish does best.

Phish flounder their way to Cedar Rapids Friday at 8 p.m.

"What we do best is play live," Gordon said.

"We love working in the studio, but we felt it was time to put out an unabridged document of who we are. Plus, there's been a lot of demand from our fans."

"Instead of trying to recreate the live environment in the studio, this time we're presenting it exactly as it is," Anastasio said.

So, I can't tell you what to expect at the concert. Maybe Phish has skeletons in their closet. Maybe this show is the largest catch for Iowa students this fall. The show isn't sold out but probably will be by the weekend, so buy now.

'Fresa' reveals Cuban taboos

Ernesto Acevedo-Muñoz
The Daily Iowan

Arriving in Iowa City this week is Cuban director Tomás Gutiérrez Alea's last international hit, the critically acclaimed comedy "Fresa y chocolate" ("Strawberry and Chocolate," Cuba/Mexico/Spain 1994).

The first Cuban movie to earn the Oscar nomination for best foreign language picture, "Fresa y chocolate" is based on the award-winning story "The Wolf, The Forest and The New Man" by Senel Paz, who wrote the screenplay.

The movie deals, in a surprisingly frank and open style, with some subjects that have been repressed and considered taboos in revolutionary Cuban art and cinema: homosexuality and homophobia, religion, art, repression and even the black market that (unofficially) supports a significant portion of the Cuban economy.

The film is structured around a series of binary oppositions that set the stage for mild and spicy confrontations between the three main protagonists: Diego (Jorge Perugorria), a gay artist (two words that already predetermine the character being at odds with the Revolution); David (Vladimir Cruz), a "hetero" social sciences student; and Nancy, (Gutiérrez-Alea regular Mirta Ibarra), a black-market dealer, and "cederista" (the revolutionary neighborhood watch-guard) with suicidal tendencies.

Scene after scene the characters discuss, in the most direct manner, problems such as censorship of artists and intellectuals, homophobia, Marxist theory, religion, Santería, ideological propaganda, prostitution and the black market economy. These problems surface against the backdrop of a genuine disillusion with the Revolution.

tion, without ceasing to be "Cuban" and without being counterrevolutionary.

Hailed by many critics as one of the best pictures of 1994, "Fresa y chocolate" will stir discussion on the role of artists and intellectuals "within the Revolution," the hypocrisy of the Cuban government's policies against ostracized groups, such as homosexuals.

Interestingly, it is this kind of criticism, constantly present through the film's delicate balance of gripping drama and big laughs, that seems to be the position adopted by Paz, Gutiérrez Alea and Tabío.

A kind of baroque atmosphere permeates Diego's apartment, the movie's principal set. Cluttered art and religious objects, forbidden books, candles sunlight and vigilant photos of writer José Lezama Lima and guerrilla icon Che Guevara seem to mimic both Diego and David's unlikely friendship and the unpredictable nature of Cuban society. In the end, "Fresa y chocolate" comes across as an emotional, critical, funny and sincere celebration of the hardships of tolerance and the beauty of friendship.

Heist-gone-wrong finally goes right

Mark Pittillo
The Daily Iowan

Heist-gone-wrong pictures are becoming so dime-a-dozen that even the great ones — such as Kubrick's "The Killing" and Tarantino's "Reservoir Dogs," — are starting to seem contrived and old hat.

So, it's a relief to see a film like "The Ladykillers" roll into town on the big screen. Made in 1956, this heist-gone-wrong is an all-out comedy, the last one to be made by Britain's legendary Ealing Studios.

With a witty script by William Rose and brisk direction by Alexander Mackendrick, "The Ladykillers" proves a welcome alternative to the arty posturing of current celluloid robberies like "The Usual Suspects" and the last 20 minutes of "Dead Presidents."

The film stars Sir Alec Guinness as Professor Marcus, a diabolical master criminal who rents a room from a nice, oblivious old lady named Mrs. Wilberforce (Katie Johnson). By claiming he is the leader of a string quintet that needs a practice room, he is able to hold meetings with four of his cronies whenever he wants.

Marcus and his co-conspirators, see, are planning to rob an armored truck and Mrs. Wilberforce is recruited as the perfect unknowing accomplice. The five eventually steal a large trunk full of cash, and instead of shipping it at the train station, as the police expect them to do, they get the old lady to pick it up at the station for them, thinking it's Marcus' luggage.

The plan works beautifully until, as the gang says their goodbyes to Mrs. Wilberforce, one of them drops a case of bills, which fly all over beneath her startled eyes.

It is here that the film turns into a light-hearted, but surprisingly effective, black comedy. With Mrs. W. in the know, the gang has a difficult problem: Can they fool her into believing the heist never happened?

The film's plot is perfectly structured and peppered with a liberal amount of mannered silliness. And the extremely satisfying ending combines sentimental humanism with a body count — if I'm not mistaken — larger than that of "Reservoir Dogs" itself.

Most satisfying, though, is the acting. Guinness, with dark rings under his eyes, rotting teeth and crazily exaggerated mannerisms, is spectacularly funny. His would be the best comedic performance I've seen in quite some time were it not for Johnson's turn as the inestimable Mrs. Wilberforce. Johnson won a British Academy Award for this role and is simply magnificent.

Hey, stealing a film from Alec Guinness is no small accomplishment.

'Jade': better wait for video

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

"Jade" isn't a movie. It's an incomplete thought. It's the cinematic equivalent of a brief masturbatory fantasy, spiraling out of the subconscious and immediately returning into nowhere.

Even the filmmakers couldn't maintain enough interest to give their project a reasonable ending. Why, then, do they think anyone else will care?

"Last Seduction" star Linda Fiorentino is only one of the fine talents wasted on this slough of sexual degradation and murderous confusion, but she's easily the most lamentable of the lot. From her brilliant "Seduction" role, she leaps headfirst into the center of a disconnected, rambling plot about a murdered millionaire and his sleazy sex scandals.

"NYPD Blue" veteran David Caruso stars as David Corelli, a San Francisco assistant district attorney with his eyes locked on his boss' job. Corelli used to be in love with snitty rich babe Trina Gavin (Fiorentino), but she dumped him for snitty rich stud Matt Gavin (Chazz Palminteri).

When a prominent art dealer is found brutally murdered with one of his collectors' items and the murder weapon is covered with Trina's fingerprints, Corelli does what any red-blooded American cop would do: starts looking for answers that don't threaten his personal relationships.

Clues abound, at least for someone willing to overlook the obvious and fixate on only one far-fetched thing at a time. In this case, Corelli becomes obsessed with tracking down a mysterious woman who — judging by the name on the silver coffee holding her pubic hair found in the murdered man's house — is called Jade. Granted, the victim also had containers of the hair of at least a dozen other women, but none of their names match the movie's title, so Corelli discards the rest and heads off on his wild Jade chase.

Neither the fixation nor the pubic hair fetish is particularly surprising, considering that the script is straight out of the juvenile mind of Joe Eszterhas ("Basic Instinct," "Showgirls").

There are pictures of the governor having sex with a beautiful prostitute, a sleazy videotape of more sex and a house full of dildos, oils and penetration pillows.

Director William Friedkin ("The Exorcist") does some fascinating things behind the lens, throwing out impressive traveling shots and incongruous full-body images of the Gavins and their friends being all but swallowed by their rich homes.

But his stylistic achievements can only make the script slightly less insufferable. He can't do much to make the most pointless and unbelievable car chase in recorded history any better, any more than he can save the characters from their drooping repetition of an obviously key lecture about psychopathic behavior resulting from "hysterical blindness."

In fact, with these tacked-on scenes edited back out, "Jade" would essentially be an hourlong soft-core porn movie — the kind which keeps college freshmen paying for Cinemax. It wouldn't be any less disjointed. It wouldn't be any more pointless. It wouldn't be any more confusing. It just wouldn't be as pretentious. Wait for the video and re-edit yourself.

'All Souls' not for squeamish

Lisa Taggart

The Daily Iowan

Madison Smartt Bell's tenth book, "All Souls Rising," is a sweeping, magnificent, horrifying novel about the brutal history of a bloody land.

Bell, who will be reading his work tonight at 8 at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., relates the story of the 1791 Haitian slave uprising with a talented, unflinching hand.

Set in the French colony of Saint Domingue, now called Haiti, "All Souls Rising" describes a world where everything is influenced by race. It is a world where there are 64 different terms to describe people with varying combinations of white and black blood; where a slave woman is crucified for killing her rape-begotten son; where conditions are so deadly that 20,000 new slaves are imported annually to maintain the sugarcane workforce; where a jealous plantation mistress slices open her pregnant maid because the slave is carrying her husband's child.

Bell's novel, like history itself, is not for the squeamish.

Told from the points of view of a half-dozen characters — some black, some white — "All Souls Rising" passes through the violent lives of the French colony's residents from 1791 to 1802.

Dr. Antoine Hébert, a French newcomer to the colony searching for his lost sister, steers the reader through the white world of wealthy French landowners, known as "grands blancs," opposed to the revolutionary sentiments boiling over in France and the poorer, revolutionary-thinking and landless "petit blancs" who resent their wealthier, though rightless, mulatto neighbors.

Ex-slave Riaux describes the vodoun (a.k.a. voodoo) practices of the African ex-slaves, called "maroons," who have run away from their plantations to live in the mostly empty and rugged mountains. In August 1791, with help from the maroons and led by three sadistic men, slaves overtake plantations, killing and raping most whites, while keeping a small number to use as servants in an ironic reversal of roles.

And between the black and white worlds is the calm, calculating historical figure of Toussaint Louverture, a literate African who, as a trusted slave on the Libertat Plantation, uses his power to aid the revolution and later becomes leader of French and Spanish territories in the region.

Bell, a former UI Writers' Workshop visiting faculty member, questions the brutality committed in the name of convoluted race definitions. Over and over, his characters are reduced to a raceless status: they are tortured beyond recognition or coat themselves with mud so that their color cannot be seen. After a mulatto son skins his white father, who parented him through rape and refused to acknowledge their relationship, Dr. Hébert observes:

The man "was skinless now, derailed, transmogrified into the internal self he possibly had always been, raw human nature laid bare to greasy viscera and a scream. ... He felt through his nausea and terror that he was witnessing something well beyond torture or murder. Though he could not understand or grasp it, he was seeing what it meant to be human. This was a sincere inquiry into the nature of man, not how a man is made and how his parts cooperate, but what a man is."

Bell, who teaches at Goucher College in Maryland, has produced a complex, masterful book which powerfully exposes the history this troubled country has inherited.

"We let it go for a while because it isn't readily apparent, and in some cases, there's some fairly artistic things done there. Out of place, but fairly artistic," Howard said.

Some graffiti artists like to call their work "bombing," or what they say is a sort of victimless terrorism. But regardless of the label, ICPD Detective Sid Jackson said the police see graffiti artists as nothing but vandals.

"Criminals, that's what they are," Jackson said. "They're vandalizing the community. I just don't see anything socially redeeming about destroying public or private property."

The ICPD has been arresting a higher number of vandals on criminal mischief charges, which can mean jail time and up to $3,000 in fines in some cases, Jackson said. As an increasing number of businesses have been targeted by graffiti artists, and police now photograph and file the "tags" to use as collected evidence against offenders.

Cities such as Davenport and Chicago have tried to curb the art terrorists by making illegal the sale of spray paint to minors. Much of the equipment used by spray-can artists, such as caps spraying in varying widths, is very difficult to find in these areas.

down a lot harder for doing murals because you're covering a larger surface area, and that's how they set up the fine."

Do you normally paint murals during daylight?

"Actually, yeah. All the other stuff in that location, as well as all over town, that I'm aware of, the murals are done during the afternoon. I know when I was painting mine, people would walk by and sometimes they'd sit and watch for a little while or say 'Hello' and ask how things are going. Nobody seems to mind. I've seen people walk by and they look at it just like it's a piece of art in a museum. At nighttime, you can't see and you also look a little more suspicious. During the daytime, they kind of figure you have a purpose, there's a reason why you're there."

LOOL

even though I'm not as out as I once was."

Do you know many of the other taggers on a personal level?

"I don't know them by face. If I met another tagger, I wouldn't recognize him, but I recognize all their tags."

What are your thoughts on the connection of graffiti to hip-hop music?

"I'm a fan of rap and hip-hop music, but I'm from the Midwest, central Iowa, so I didn't grow up listening to hip-hop. I didn't start doing graffiti because I got into hip-hop or rap, but there's some connection certainly with the mainstream of graffiti work. Graffiti has a long tradition, though. It goes back to the dawn of time. It long predates hip-hop. They found graffiti in Pompeii when they unearthed it. They found graffiti in Roman ruins."

Have you ever been caught by the police?

"It's kind of a funny story, actually. A friend and I had been out burning the town. He was doing a piece with spray paint. We'd been there for a while, and a security guard came up and said we were going to have to leave. He didn't seem upset. We walked away and got across the bridge by the (English-Philosophy Building) and there were, I think, five police cars there. They pulled us over and split us apart and asked us our stories. I told them I hadn't been tagging at all. I had some paint with me, so I told them I was an artist and that I paint, which is true. I was charged as an accomplice. We both ended up being taken in and spending the night in jail.

"It turned out we were the only people in the jail who had meant to commit a crime. We were in with 18 other people, all of whom were either drunk or on drugs. They were crazy. One guy tested the night before with a .36 blood alcohol level, which is close to legally dead. They let him out. He plead guilty and walked out on the street legally drunk. And I thought, 'There's something wrong here. We're being arrested for drawing pictures on a concrete bridge?'"

"I ended up paying about $170 in collected fines. They fined us based on how big the piece they had caught him doing was and how much it would cost to sandblast it off. I have gone back there several times, and it's been a year and a half now, and the piece hasn't been sandblasted."

are people out there. That's the real value I find in graffiti, just to let people know they're not alone.

"In New York, tags will pile up on a wall and suddenly you just have this beautiful abstraction of squiggly letters that lose their individual meaning and become this mosaic of urban culture. And that's a real beautiful thing. It has a very social meaning. There is a purpose to it."
