Iowans: 'Face the reality of violence'

'It destroys families, it destroys communities, it destroys the human spirit'

Vicki Butner
The Daily Iowan

DES MOINES — Scientists studying violence trends jumped in the trenches with those who work with the "epidemic" daily at the National Violence Prevention Convention in Des Moines Monday.

UI interim President Peter Nathan, who gave the opening remarks at the conference, said communication between these groups is vital in facing the reality of violence.

"Each of you, in your own way, is committed to facing the realities of violence within your sphere of study or influence," Nathan said, adding violence is more than an urban problem — youth and gang violence are increasing in rural areas.

Nathan was joined by Vice President Al Gore and Sen. Tom Harkin at the conference, which "I believe violence is a communicable disease. After all, it is spread to every part of our country. It is spread in our communities; no one is immune. When it comes to the disease of violence, the United States tests positive."

Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin

continues through Wednesday.

Harkin, who has worked with the Center for Disease Control and Prevention for the past 12 years, said the center began when he met with women to discuss welfare reform. One woman said the domestic violence she experienced was the cause of her dependence on welfare.

"I believe violence is a communicable disease. After all, it is spread to every part of our country," Harkin said. "It is spread in our communities; no one is immune. When it comes to the disease of violence, the United States tests positive."

The U.S. justice department estimates nearly 30 percent of all female homicide victims are killed by their husbands, former husbands or boyfriends, Harkin said. Every five years, domestic violence kills as many women as the total number of Americans who died in the Vietnam War.

Harkin said in the end, violence was not a

Bomb explodes on Church Street

Christie Midthun
The Daily Iowan

A homemade bomb the size of a two-liter bottle exploded in the 300 block of East Church Street around 2 a.m. Monday.

Nine similar bombs that hadn't detonated were found by the Iowa City Police Department between 309 and 317 East Church Street.

Iowa City Police bomb expert Officer Marty Leik and the Iowa City Fire Department were called to the scene, and the remaining bombs were either detonated or deactivated.

Bombs similar in size and nature to the ones found on Church Street are usually used to blow up mailboxes, Iowa City Police Department Sgt. Craig Lihs said. In an open area, Lihs said he was unsure as to the damage several bombs of that size could cause.

"We get sporadic incidents through the year when somebody will use those to blow up mailboxes," Lihs said. "But this is the first time I've seen where 10 were all set to go off at once around a specific area."

In the 10 years Larry Woodsmall has lived on East Church Street, he said he's dealt with a lot of noise from fun-loving college students, but Monday morning's bomb was something new.

"It really didn't sound any louder than a large firecracker," Woodsmall said. "I've heard a lot louder noises from that side of the street

JURY DELIBERATES JUST 2 HOURS

Selena slayer guilty of 1st-degree murder

Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A jury convicted the former president of the Selena fan club Monday of murdering the beloved Tejano singing star.

After just two hours of deliberations, the jury rejected Yolanda Saldivar's claim that the gun which shot and killed the singer went off accidentally.

With word of the verdict, a cheer went up from a crowd of several hundred Selena fans outside the courthouse, and drivers honked their horns.

Saldivar, 35, could get as little as probation or as much as life in prison when the jury returns today to decide on a punishment.

After the verdict was read, Saldivar's shoulders shook and she began to cry. Her brother and sister, seated directly behind her, also wept. There was no visible reaction from members of Selena's family in the courtroom.

Selena, whose full name was Selena Quintanilla Perez, was 23 when she was gunned down March 31 at a Corpus Christi motel.

Regarded as the Latina Madonna, she was a superstar in the world of Tejano music, a bouncy variety of Mexican-American pop, and was working on her first English-language recording in hopes of becoming a crossover sensation.

Prosecutors contended Saldivar deliberately shot Selena when the singer went to retrieve records to support her family's suspicion that Saldivar had embezzled $30,000 as manager of Selena's boutiques.

Saldivar "took the gun out, cocked the hammer, pulled the trig-HYDE PARK, N.Y. — In the sunny splendor of the Hudson Valley, President Clinton and Russian President Boris Yeltsin set out Monday to revive the "spirit of cooperation" that carried their nations to victory in World War II. But differences over Bosnia and NATO expansion limited expectations of success.

Meeting at the home of wartime President Franklin Roosevelt, the two leaders gazed toward the Catskill Mountains while Yeltsin, marveling at the scenery, assured: "We are planning here peace, not war."

"Can we do it?" Yeltsin said in Russian. But there was no reply from Clinton, who entertained his guest with a brief history of how the young FDR went sledding down into the valley.

"It is a beautiful place," Yeltsin said. "I am sure in a place like this there will be nothing we can't

Oddities & Idiosyncrasies

Paris cafes lose out to fast food, couch potatoes

William Krole
Associated Press

PARIS — The French cafe, the soul of the sidewalk for more than three centuries, is fighting for survival in a society no longer willing to sit and watch the world go by.

Several hundred cafe owners demonstrated beneath the Eiffel Tower on Monday to protest high taxes they say are driving them out of business.

But that's just part of the problem. Industry insiders say 4,000 bistros a year are going bust because more French are eating fast food, shunning cigarettes and booze and simply staying home, American couch potato-style.

Desperate cafe owners trying to put a friendly face on sometimes gruff service have even taken the extraordinary step of sending waiters to smile school.

Yet, cafes keep disappearing from the French landscape almost as quickly as the steaming espresso they serve in thimble-size cups.

"When the last cafe closes, it's the soul of the village that dies," said Christian Coudere, owner of a suburban Paris cafe.

Intellectuals and workers alike have long gathered around small bistro tables to socialize with neighbors or exchange news and ideas, making cafes the quintessential symbol of French society and culture. Before World War I, cafes numbered more than half a million.

But by 1980, there were just 80,000; and today there are fewer than 50,000 left, including 10,000 in Paris. In 1994, more than 1,500 cafes closed in Paris alone.

The wave of terrorist bombings that have killed seven people and wounded 160 since midsummer hasn't helped. Nearly 70 percent of cafes say business is down since the bombings began.

President Jacques Chirac made things worse, critics contend, when he raised sales taxes across the board last summer to 20.6 percent from an already stiff 18.6 percent. Food and drink prices were driven up even higher.

In some Paris cafes, a beer can cost up to $8.

"You think we want to charge these prices?" said Bruno Mangel, a Paris cafe owner among those demonstrating Monday. "The tourists come here and can't believe it."

French cafes trace their beginnings to 1672, when the Procope — still doing a lively business — opened on a small side street on the Left Bank of Paris.

In the first half of this century, Ernest Hemingway, Jean-Paul Sartre and other luminaries romanticized the cafe as a social center, a debating club and a haven from the pressures of modern life.

The cafes that remain are far from empty.

Ten million French say they visit one at least once a week, and plenty of foreign tourists seek them out for coffee and a croissant or a simple meal of steak or roast chicken with potatoes.

Yet, nearly one in two French never sets foot in a cafe, according to a 1994 survey commissioned by the Perrier mineral water company.

"I can't stand them. Who wants to sit around and breathe all that smoke?" said Veronique Levert, a Parisian who said she'd rather work out than hang out.

Cafe owners are agonizing over where they went wrong — but it's not entirely their fault.

Independent street vendors sell cheap sandwiches from carts, undercutting cafes by appealing to businessmen who want to lunch, not linger. And McDonald's, Burger King and their French counterpart, Quick, seem omnipresent both in the French capital and smaller towns.

"I've owned this place since 1966. But I'm 61 and retiring, and a McDonald's is going to move right in behind me," grumbled Joseph Gineston, who owns a cafe in the Belleville neighborhood of Paris.

Industry experts also blame the cafe decline on the rise in France of the American-style "cocooning" trend toward staying at home and watching television.

'Hope & Gloria' star gets watered down

LAS VEGAS (AP) — He might have been all wet, but Alan Thicke managed to stay high and dry.

"Come on in! The water's fine!" Thicke shouted to startled tourists who gawked at the actor, sitting on a perch in the middle of a Caesars Palace fountain with streams of water squirting 20 feet high.

Hundreds of people Saturday night watched the tuxedo-clad Thicke don hip boots and wade through one of the fountain's pools, gingerly climbing a ladder to a precarious seat.

The scene was one of several illusions shot for an NBC special, "World's Greatest Magic II," scheduled to air Nov. 22. Thicke stars in "Hope & Gloria" when he's not fountain-frolicking.

"I've had duller Saturday nights," he said.

Frankenstein's daughter clarifies spooky image

BRISTOL, Conn. (AP) — The daughter of Frankenstein said people have the wrong idea about her famous father.

"He was very British. He was soft-spoken, articulate, kind and well-educated," said Sara Karloff, the only child of movie monster Boris Karloff. "He loved playing cricket and gardening and had a pet pig named Violet."

Sara Karloff, who was born in the 1940s while her father was making "Son of Frankenstein," paid a visit Sunday to the Witches Dungeon, a macabre museum celebrating its 29th year.

She was in town to greet fans and to gather support for a proposed series of U.S. stamps honoring horror movie greats.

'Home Improvement' head remains favorite for 3rd year

NEW YORK (AP) — There was no improvement for Tim Allen in the latest Harris Poll of America's favorite TV personalities: He's No. 1 for the third year in a row.

The "Home Improvement" star was the most frequently named entertainer in a survey of 1,005 adults. Jerry Seinfeld placed second, followed by Oprah Winfrey, David Letterman and Bill Cosby.

The others in the Top 10 were Roseanne, Martin Lawrence, Kelsey Grammer, Brett Butler and Jay Leno.

Lawrence, a newcomer to the list, was actually No. 1 among viewers ages 18 to 24, Hispanics and African-Americans. Oprah was No. 1 with women.

Stallone accused of 'wimping out' of golf tournament

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone afraid? Don't count on it, his spokesperson said.

Stallone played a practice round of golf last Monday at the famous Old Course at St. Andrews, Scotland, but USA Today reported Stallone failed to show for Wednesday's pro-am tournament.

"Did Rocky chicken out?" USA Today asked Friday after reporting Stallone withdrew from the tournament without explanation. The newspaper said Stallone was "frightened by the thought of playing a pro-am."

"That is totally without fact or truth. This makes him look very unsportsmanlike," Stallone spokesperson Peter Silberman said Monday by telephone from Italy, where the actor is shooting the movie "Daylight."

"There was never any commitment to play in the pro-am. There was never any commitment to play in a tournament," Silberman said. "Sly is a wonderful golfer, but he does not pretend to be a pro."

One goal of the Internet site is to introduce younger people to the King of the Cowboys and Queen of the West, as the couple are known.

Former DI editor, journalist remembered by endeavors

The Daily Iowan

Dorothy Moeller, a former editor of The Daily Iowan, member of the School of Journalism and Mass Communications Hall of Fame and 1925 UI graduate, died Oct. 20 at Oaknoll Retirement Village. She was 92.

There will be no memorial service or visitation. Memorials may be made to the Dorothy Wilson Moeller Writing Award fund at the UI.

A long-time resident of Iowa City, Dorothy Moeller was born Nov. 14, 1902, in Dawson, N.D., but spent her childhood in Iowa. She attended junior college in Mason City, Iowa, before coming to the UI.

She married Leslie Moeller, former director of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communications, in 1926 and moved to Waverly, Iowa, where her family lived until 1946. In Waverly, Dorothy Moeller was a reporter for the Bremner County Independent and the Waverly Democrat, and was named manager and editor while her husband served in World War II.

It was during this period her first book, "Good Morning, Doctor" — the memoirs of Dr. W.A. Rohlf — was published.

When the family moved to Iowa City in 1946, Leslie Moeller joined the faculty at the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communications while Dorothy Moeller devoted her time to volunteer activities.

In 1956, she resumed her professional career by carrying out the first nationwide study on the use of daily newspapers in the classroom. The project, which was sponsored by the Des Moines Register, led to the American Newspaper Publishers Association's establishment of the program now titled Newspapers in Education.

In 1958, Dorothy Moeller was named assistant editor of the Journal of Speech and Hearing Research, the research journal of the American Speech and Hearing Association. After five years, she started working with noted speech authority Wendell Johnson, which led to a number of research, writing and editing projects.

With Johnson, she edited the third edition of the college text "Speech Handicapped School Children."

Following Johnson's death in 1965, she organized his papers for the UI archives and completed work on several of his unfinished papers.

Continuing as a staff member of the UI Department of Speech Pathology and Audiology, she completed the book "Living with Change: The Semantics of Coping," planned with Johnson and based on his materials. She also wrote "Speech Pathology and Audiology: Iowa Origins of a Discipline."

Dorothy Moeller was active in the community from her early days in Iowa City, as chairperson of the Red Cross blood drive, director of the Community Chest and a member of the Girl Scout Council. She served in various offices of the League of Women Voters, for which she served on the state board and as editor of Voter, the state bulletin.

In 1958, she was named to the Governor's Commission for the Study of Social and Economic Trends in Iowa and was one of the authors of its report.

She was a member of the Nineteenth Century Club and Women in Communications. She is survived by a son, Dr. Kent Moeller, of Orlando, Fla.; a daughter, Margaret Nelson, of Iowa City; six grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

4 THEMES OUTLINED

Clinton lays out campaign message

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

The Clinton campaign has begun — unofficially, at least.

Although he has yet to declare his candidacy, Clinton gave Iowans a sneak preview of his 1996 campaign message at the Iowa Democratic Party's Jefferson-Jackson Day events last Friday.

"I thought his speech was defensive. People don't trust him anymore."

Brian Kennedy, chairperson of the Republican Party of Iowa

The president outlined four themes, which may become part of his re-election strategy:

- Economic growth: "I have tried to give you an economy that grows with more jobs," Clinton said. He said he will rely on upbeat economic indicators, which show low levels of inflation and unemployment.

- Reinventing government: "I have tried to give you a government that is smaller and less bureaucratic, but still works," he said. While Republicans have simply criticized government, Democrats have reformed and reduced bureaucracy, he said.

- Foreign policy success: "I have tried to keep America the strongest force for peace and freedom in the world," he said. Clinton pointed to diplomatic successes in the Middle East, Haiti, Northern Ireland and Bosnia.

- Domestic obligations: Clinton said the federal government still has obligations to children, the poor, the elderly and the environment. "I have tried to manage this process of change consistent with our basic values," he said, "to promote responsibility and opportunity for all people."

Iowa Republican leaders acknowledged that Clinton's message fired up his Democratic supporters, but they would not concede it helped his re-election chances.

"I thought his speech was defensive," said Brian Kennedy, chairperson of the Republican Party of Iowa. "People don't trust him anymore."

Kennedy disputed each of the points in Clinton's message. He said Clinton is not making enough progress on the economy.

"The president feels content with 2 percent growth," he said. "We're going to say Republicans can do better."

Republican flat tax plans will further strengthen the economy, Kennedy said.

Clinton's claim that he has reduced federal bureaucracy is not straightforward, Kennedy said.

"His real inclinations are for big government," he said. "You need look no further than his health care plan."

Kennedy also criticized Clinton's handling of foreign policy in Somalia and Bosnia. He said Clinton should not have expanded the mission in Somalia beyond humanitarian relief. He also accused Clinton of bungling diplomacy in Bosnia.

"I don't see that he can point to any (foreign policy) successes," he said.

Clinton's focus on government obligations to Americans is a misguided approach to help families, Kennedy said. Republicans support a $500-per-child tax credit to help families.

"The two parties have diametrically opposed views on how to help the family," Kennedy said. "Our view is you empower them."

The Clinton campaign, however, said the president's early re-election message is strong.

"It's not just a test (of his message), but a record of accomplishment," said Camille Johnston, Clinton's Iowa press secretary.

Clinton also has one advantage the Republican candidates do not have — he will probably not have to battle other Democrats for his party's nomination. While Republicans spend campaign funds to win the GOP nomination, Clinton can focus on raising more money.

"We expect to complete our fund-raising, except for direct mail, by Thanksgiving," Johnston said.

IMPROVED SAFETY CONDITIONS CITED

Melrose road-widening project proposed by 2 city councils

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Traffic congesting Melrose Avenue and the Melrose Avenue bridge may soon be spread over three lanes.

The Iowa City City Council will hold a public hearing on the street and bridge widening tonight. In two weeks, the council will vote on a resolution to approve the $2 million project.

Members of the University Heights City Council met with the Iowa City City Council at Monday night's work session to discuss how the project would affect their area.

The two groups agreed the street and bridge widening would only run through Iowa City, and Melrose would remain a two-lane street in University Heights, which begins near Golfview Avenue.

The widening would improve pedestrian and bicycle safety and provide increased capacity for the road and bridge, the council said. The roadway would also provide a shoulder, an area for public transit vehicles to pull over, which would improve traffic flow and provide a place for bicyclists to ride out of the flow of traffic.

The council tentatively decided to keep the proposed road striped with three lanes, however many councilors said the road should be built wide enough to accommodate four lanes in the future.

"I think it would be irresponsible if we didn't take into account the possibility of needing a fourth lane, and we need to keep that an option if circumstances arise," Councilor Larry Baker said. "Then we don't have to go through all the turmoil again. We should take as much road as we can for three lanes, and leave ourselves some options for the future."

Councilor Ernie Lehman also endorsed wide lanes, but wanted to include the three-lane striping in the resolution so a future council would have to go through the public before changing it.

"A three lane road with a three lane bridge gives us the most options," Lehman said. "What we need to do is not make it possible for a future council to re-stripe it without a public hearing and three votes. That way we can insure no one's going to come in and capriciously change the striping to four lanes."

The total project will cost about $2 million, with $850,000 coming from the federal government for the bridge replacement and an additional $500,000 from the federal government for the street widening.

The additional money will come via Iowa City taxpayers.

UI students who attend Health Fair '95 at The Field House Wednesday will be able to measure their body fat percentage and cardiovascular endurance — and predict future health risks.

The fair, sloganized "Live better, feel better, look better," will be held from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Various health-related elements — including body fat, grip strength, flexibility and cardiovascular fitness — will be measured, said Carol Girdler, instructor in the UI Department of Sport, Health, Leisure and Physical Studies.

The fair, sponsored by Health Iowa and the Department of Sport, Health, Leisure and Physical Studies, is free and open to the public. A trip for two to the Mall of America in Minneapolis and two memberships to local health clubs will be given away to participants.

Becoming aware of how lifestyle affects health is important for changing bad health habits and reducing health risks later in life, said Tracy Bartlett, fitness education coordinator for Health Iowa.

"I don't think many people realize that a simple (health) test can show your risk of future health problems," she said.

Bartlett said participants can learn their body fat percentage with a device that measures fat tissue in the bicep by reacting to the tissues with different degrees of light.

Girdler said many people don't understand the relationship between body fat and body weight.

"There's a lot of buzz words for body fat and weight," she said. "(Participants) can find out what it really means and can get more concrete ideas on how to improve them."

The flexibility and abdominal tests can predict the participants' risk for lower back problems in the future, Bartlett said.

"Lower back problems are associated with the lack of flexibility of the lower back and the hamstrings," she said.

In addition, Bartlett said participants can learn their forearm and wrist strength, which predict their risk of repetitive motion injury, caused by frequent physical movement such as typing on a computer.

A drinking and driving test will challenge participants to guess the amount of alcoholic drinks they can consume based on their weight so they don't surpass the legal .10 blood alcohol level, Bartlett said.

"(The test) is an education tool to help students become aware of their drinking limit based on their weight," she said.

A holistic addition to this year's fair, massage therapy, will allow participants to receive a massage for 50 cents a minute in order to promote relaxation by decreasing muscle tension, Bartlett said.

2 NEW FIELDS CREATED ON OASIS

Computer research expands for more efficiency

Josh Hunt
The Daily Iowan

A month-long project to update the Wilson abstract database, a computer research tool for UI students and faculty, will be available for use today.

The change involved expanding the Wilson database — which is used for looking up research articles — and splitting it in two. The two new databases, WLS1 and WLS2, each contain four fields.

Two new fields, Arts and Essay and General Literature Index, were added to supplement the six fields now in use, including the Humanities Guide and the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature.

Only two of the six previously existing fields contained abstracts, but now all eight fields will contain abstracts, said Sue Munfing, automation consultant for the UI Libraries. Abstracts are brief summaries describing what each article on the database contains.

"The process to look up abstracts was taking too long," Munfing said. "We restructured the indexes so instead of the computer having to access a database containing six fields, one could access two different databases with four fields, which takes less time."

The main advantages of the two new separate databases are swifter running time and additional information, said Larry Woods, director for information systems and technology at the UI Libraries.

"The changes have enhanced the database as a research tool for UI students and faculty," Woods said. "More information is offered because of additional records."

Woods said, for example, if a person did a search of abstracts using a key word, the database would only find articles with the word in the title. Now, the database will find the articles in which the word exists in any place.

Munfing said the process involved one full-time programmer and two part-time programmers. It also involved two testers.

Ito grants first interview since Simpson trial

LOS ANGELES — Superior Court Judge Lance Ito on Monday defended his decision to let TV cameras into his courtroom and show the world the O.J. Simpson trial.

In a taped interview with a journalism student from California State University, Northridge, Ito was asked if he would ever preside at another televised trial.

While he said he has not yet evaluated the impact of the camera, he strongly defended the role of the media in the justice system.

"The American public got to see for themselves every day, all day, how this trial progressed — what the jury saw and what the jury wasn't allowed to see because of some of the rulings I made. ... If you take the cameras out of the courtroom, then you hide, I think, a certain measure of truth from the public," Ito said.

"The problem with not having a camera is that one must trust the evaluation and analysis of a reporter who's telling you what occurred in the courtroom, and any time you allow somebody to report an event, you have to take into consideration the filtering effect of that person's own biases," he said.

Meanwhile, Simpson got his passport and Hall of Fame ring back after he was acquitted of murdering ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman, but prosecutors have refused to return other property — from clothes to credit cards — according to a motion filed Monday.

Lawyer Carl Douglas wrote that he has repeatedly asked for the property since Simpson's acquittal on Oct. 3, but prosecutors will not agree to release any other items without a hearing. Douglas asked Ito to hold a hearing on Oct. 31.

Associations push for healthy Halloween treats

NORTH POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Ghosts and goblins may not frighten trick-or-treaters this Halloween as much as what they could find inside their goody bags: healthful snacks instead of sugary candy.

Non-candy snacks — including Cream of Wheat and instant oatmeal — are being talked up this year as healthier alternatives to candy for the ghostly holiday, but sweet-toothed youngsters won't hear of it.

"They should give out candy, not breakfast," said 11-year-old Michael Bergamini, who shook his head in disgust.

"Everyone likes candy. Not Cream of Wheat or oatmeal or raisins."

But non-candy snack foods are becoming a new Halloween tradition, said the Snack Food Association, which has joined the National Potato Promotion Board to push them as an alternative to sweeter treats.

Girl plays dead, survives bear attack

MONROE, Wash. (AP) — A 300-pound black bear attacked a 14-year-old girl playing outside her home, but the girl survived by playing dead.

Sage Klevjer suffered bites in her left thigh and right calf Sunday afternoon before the bear walked away.

"She was very, very lucky," said Jan Jorgensen, a spokesperson for the Snohomish County sheriff's department.

"She'd been taught if anything like that happened, to go limp — to play dead."

Klevjer's 13-year-old foster brother, who had been outside at the time, ran to the house for help and was unharmed, Jorgensen said.

The girl was treated at Valley General Hospital in Monroe and sent home.

State Department of Fish and Wildlife agents tracked the bear with hounds and killed it. A veterinarian planned to examine the animal.

U.S. troops prepare for Bosnia

Nesha Starcevic
Associated Press

GRAFENWOEHR, Germany — Shouting to be heard amid the din of exploding shells, American soldiers training for a mission into Bosnia-Herzegovina had two succinct questions on their minds: What exactly is their job and how long will it last?

President Clinton has promised 25,000 U.S. troops to an eventual NATO force that would be sent to implement a peace treaty and separate the warring factions in Bosnia.

"I think the biggest concern is how long it's going to be. Peacekeeping missions usually have a limit and we'd like to know what it is," said Sgt. Bett Fisher, 31, of Eugene, Ore.

Based with the 3-4 Cavalry in Schweinfurt, Germany, Fisher was being trained to man checkpoints during the two-day maneuvers at the Grafenwoehr training area in the rolling, forested countryside near the Czech border.

"I think the biggest concern is how long it's going to be. Peacekeeping missions usually have a limit and we'd like to know what it is."

Sgt. Bett Fisher

"If the people down there want us, we should go in, if they don't, we shouldn't," said Spec. Nelson Palmer, 21, of Piedmont, Ala., a member of Fisher's unit.

"Every soldier volunteered for the job, but I've been concerned about how long I'll be there," said Palmer as he prepared a metal detector to search for mines.

Their comments reflected concerns expressed by other soldiers. Some, who insisted on anonymity, said U.S. soldiers had no business in Bosnia.

More than 10,000 U.S. troops from the 1st Armored Division and the 3rd Infantry from the Army's 5th Corps are training here for a Bosnia mission. The Grafenwoehr

Associated Press

Two unidentified U.S. soldiers train in the use of gas masks at the Grafenwoehr training ground in Germany Monday where U.S. forces are preparing for a possible mission in Bosnia. President Clinton has promised 25,000 U.S. troops for an eventual NATO force to implement a peace treaty and separate warring factions in Bosnia.

training area — quiet for the last few years as the U.S. military began its drawdown in Europe — is now so busy that the Burger King on the base has run out of ketchup.

The mission they are preparing for will have peace as its goal, but the exercises looked like war drills: Soldiers practiced both defusing and laying mines, setting up and defending checkpoints.

When they are deployed in Bosnia, U.S. troops will likely be the heaviest-armed force ever sent on a peace campaign.

"There is a lot of armor here. We learned some lessons from Somalia," said Lt. Col. William Blankmeyer, commander of the 2nd Battalion of the 37th Armored Regiment based in Vilseck, Germany.

"We have the right to protect our lives and we don't want to put lives of American soldiers at risk. But we don't want to appear hostile. It's a very difficult task," said Blankmeyer, 43, from Collingdale, Pa., speaking to reporters in a tent as he supervised the maneuvers.

At one section of this 80-square-mile military training area where armies have staged exercises for more than two centuries, U.S. Army M-1 tanks kicked up clouds of dust as they raced around shooting 120mm rounds at distant targets.

Several miles away, U.S. soldiers fired large-caliber artillery pieces. On another range, soldiers were at target practice with their M-16 rifles.

Although U.S. warplanes have participated in NATO bombing runs on Bosnian Serb targets, officers stress that American troops won't be taking sides during the mission. This was reflected in some of the training.

At a mock checkpoint, soldiers act out several scenarios from treating a wounded civilian to directing an armed patrol of "local forces" back to their own territory.

"We don't take sides, we give first aid," said Capt. Dave Seigel, 29, of Warrensburg, Mo.

Although the rules of engagement are still unknown, the U.S. troops are training under the premise that soldiers from all warring parties will be allowed to keep personal weapons, carried in a non-threatening way.

INTERVIEW HELD

Castro's visit met with multitude of protest

Steven Gutkin

Associated Press

NEW YORK — As Cuban leader Fidel Castro moved about the power centers of New York on Monday, he played down his treatment as a pariah and noted that his country could learn a few things about business from the United States.

Smiling broadly within his phalanx of U.S. Secret Service and Cuban security agents, Castro gave an interview to CBS anchorman Dan Rather and met with members of the U.S. business community at the Council on Foreign Relations, a private think tank.

A handful of irate Cuban-Americans protested outside each building Castro visited, shouting "Murderer, murderer," and "No Castro, no problem."

After the CBS interview, Castro signed autographs for network employees. Mike Wallace and Paula Zahn emerged from their offices to get a glimpse of the 68-year-old Cuban leader. When he addressed the U.N. General Assembly on Sunday, Castro wore a dark business suit, not his customary fatigues.

He told Rather he was interested in learning how to improve Cuba's "efficient and good managers."

Comparing the Cuban economy to a huge U.S. corporation, he said "The only difference is that you know how to manage it well and we don't."

Asked if he believed communism had failed, Castro replied, "I can tell you quite the opposite. ... Capitalist governments have been a failure." He cited poverty and illiteracy as examples.

He also said he understood why President Clinton excluded him from diplomatic events this weekend, attributing it to the 1996 presidential campaign.

"We both lost. ... I felt very much compensated that I could go to Harlem and meet my old friends there. I had such a good time that I felt as if I had been in the best of banquets," Castro said, referring to his enthusiastic reception when he spoke at the Abyssinian Baptist Church Sunday night.

Bulk orders of Gingrich book queried

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Rev. Jerry Falwell's Liberty University, a Georgia think tank and a conservative youth foundation are among those buying up multiple copies of House Speaker Newt Gingrich's book "To Renew America," The Daily News reported Monday.

The paper said it found five sales of bulk orders, from 42 to 200 books, including some autographed by the Georgia Republican.

The Georgia group denied the report.

Bulk purchases by groups or individuals with an interest in legislation could violate House rules, especially if there was a prior arrangement to buy the books.

There is no allegation of wrongdoing at this point — only an indication there were bulk orders.

"You're pregnant."

Those words were hard to hear.
The decision was harder to make.

After I struggled with what to do, I realized that I just couldn't face a pregnancy at that point in my life. I decided to have an abortion, but I didn't know where to go or who to turn to. Then a friend recommended that I call Planned Parenthood.

No one at Planned Parenthood was judgmental. They left the decision up to me and they assured me that my visit would be completely confidential. I appreciated that.

From the start, they were kind, sensitive, and professional. They explained everything in detail and answered all my questions. They really seemed to care about me.

I'm thankful that Planned Parenthood was there for me. I hope none of my friends ever have to face such a hard decision. But if they do, I know Planned Parenthood will be there for them, too.

VIOLENCE CONFERENCE

criminal problem but an epidemic. "As I spoke to more people about violence, one common thing occurred — that was the idea that we ought to pay more attention to the issue of prevention," Harkin said. "Violence is the leading cause of death and long-term disabilities in the nation, particularly among teenagers and young adults."

The conference was sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, National Center for Injury Prevention and Control and the UI Injury Prevention Research Center.

Nathan, who represented the UI

Injury Prevention Research Center, quoted Nobel prize winner Alexander Nixon saying, "Violence does not and cannot exist by itself. It is invariably intertwined with the lie."

For the past 30 years, Nathan has researched alcohol abuse and its effects. He said in most family and sexual violence cases, alcohol is implicated.

Vice President Al Gore, chairman of the Crime Convention Council, said overall homicide is down for 15- to 24-year-olds, but is the second leading cause of death in our nation.

"Violence as a whole perpetuates itself from generation to generation. It destroys families, it destroys communities, it destroys the human spirit," Gore said.

People of all ages, especially young people, are yearning to hear about alternatives that work, he said.

"The fact that these kids are so close to relatively sophisticated understanding of how they can take a different approach should tell all of us that if we really concentrate on the causes of violence, and manifest our concerns not only with words but with the structures and resources that support caring individuals who are willing to work with these kids, we can make a huge difference," he said. "This is not an insoluble problem."

300,000 square feet of retail stores. The planned site is on Highway 965, just down the road from a previously announced super mall scheduled to be built on Interstate 80 and Highway 965.

The super mall, proposed by General Growth Co., was announced in June 1994. It will have 850,000 square feet of retail space — compared to Old Capitol Mall's 276,000 square feet — making it one of the largest malls in the state. No stores have been announced for either mall.

The General Growth mall will also include a food court and a 15-screen movie theater, and may be completed by 1997.

Some Iowa City business owners are worried the new malls will over saturate the retail market and create problems for the local economy.

Ernie Lehman, an Iowa City City Councilor and owner of Enzler's Inc., 118 S. Clinton St., said if major chain stores like JC Penney and Younkers choose to move their area franchises out of Old Capitol Mall to the new locations, the effects on downtown Iowa City could be devastating.

"Even though the growth factor in this area is substantial, it's not large enough to support a mall of that size," he said.

Some other area store owners are uncertain as to how the new shopping areas will affect Iowa City business.

"There will definitely be some impact, but we hope it's more complimentary than competitive," said Ted Whitmer, general manager of Sycamore Mall.

One store owner, however, said she is certain the downtown area will be relatively unaffected by the new malls.

"I like to think that the downtown is a unique shopping experience," said Victoria Gilpin, owner of Preferred Stock, 114 S. Clinton St. "We're still going to be unique whether there's another mall or not."

Whitmer said it is hard for area store owners to predict any results yet because no major anchor retailers have been named for either shopping center.

"It's difficult to speculate on speculation," he said.

Coralville city officials are pleased that developers chose the area for construction because of the beneficial effects the malls will have.

"It should bring in additional people to the area that will positively impact existing retail," said Coralville City Administrator Kelly Hayworth.

Hayworth said the area was chosen due to its potential for growth and the accessibility brought about by the two major highways.

Both malls are still in the planning stage and nothing has been finalized. The possibility still exists that either development company may choose to cancel construction plans.

EATING DISORDERS

may be receiving from others."

Anorexia nervosa afflicts at least one in every 100 teen-agers, and as much as 10 percent of college women may suffer. Approximately 3 to 4 percent of college women are bulimic.

Dr. Martha Christiansen, assistant director of the UI Counseling Service, said she believes women receive messages from society that push them to be thin.

"These messages show desired ways women are to look, and they are a very powerful influence," Christiansen said. "These influences come from society, the media and even the diet industry."

As a dietitian, Schnack works closely with both physicians and mental health professionals.

"Treatment doesn't go well without all three involved. The eating disorder is not just a physical disorder — there are some behavioral issues involved also," Schnack said.

When dealing with a person with anorexia, the first thing is to try to get the patient to eat and then to incorporate enough calories until they gain weight. Anorexics have a distorted body image — they perceive themselves as overweight, Schnack said.

"One example of this is a patient who was taking in nothing caloric for a month, they were eating sugar-free candy as a means of food," Schnack said. "Our first step was to start them eating regular candy and then move to regular pop from diet pop."

Treatment for those with anorexia begins with the acknowledgement of the disorder and dealing with the food phobia, Schnack said.

"Treatment begins with weight restoration and lactose and sodium restriction because some of the patients' bodies can't handle the sudden change in diet," Schnack said. "From there, we start increasing the caloric intake by 500 calories each week. With this aspect of treatment, there tends to be some resistance from the patients, which is usually due to the behavioral aspect. This is when the other team members come into play."

The next stage of treatment is to incorporate additional foods and nutrition counseling and education. Schnack said the importance of seeking help for those with an eating disorder is the difference between life and death.

"Eating disorders are definitely life threatening; the mortality rate for persons with anorexia is between 4 to 25 percent and for those with bulimia, who use laxatives and diuretics to control their weight, it has not yet been determined, but there is a high chance of a cardiac arrest," Schnack said.

There is no set time for recovery, but once the patient is maintaining a healthy weight and lifestyle, the patient is released, Schnack said.

Christiansen said it is helpful for those with an eating disorder to talk to a professional and early intervention is beneficial.

"These eating disorders are life threatening. Anorexia is self starvation and bulimia causes harm to various parts of the body," Christiansen said. "There is help out there for people suffering from eating disorders; there are educational programs that can help identify the disorders."

Schnack also offered some guidelines for those who want to help someone suffering from an eating disorder.

"Before you confront them, plan what you're going to say and keep it simple. Communicate your concern and confront the behavior, not the value," Schnack said. "Do not comment on the drastic loss of weight, instead tell them how unhealthy or unhappy they look."

CLINTON-YELTSIN

Clinton greeted Yeltsin as the Russian leader stepped from a helicopter onto a football field-size lawn circled by majestic red maples. They shook hands and hugged. And together, Yeltsin walking stiffly, they chatted their way to the Roosevelt home for their talks.

"I don't know how at this landscape there could be plans of war," the Russian leader said as he sat alongside Clinton on wooden-twig chairs set at an angle to catch the best view of the valley below. "Do you come here often?" Yeltsin asked politely.

"No," Clinton replied. "It is a beautiful place," Yeltsin said. "It was a good idea to have our meeting here."

Asked if they could solve their differences over Bosnia, the Russian leader said he would discuss the divisive issue with Clinton and "very difficult problems" were involved.

Yeltsin, in his speech Sunday to the United Nations, said Russia was ready to provide troops, and White House spokesperson Mike McCurry said the administration still wanted Russian participation.

But Yeltsin complained the U.N. Security Council had been bypassed in the U.S.-led initiative to end the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina. And in a thrust at NATO expansion, he said "strengthening of one bloc today means a new confrontation beginning tomorrow."

That followed his blast last week in Moscow at NATO's expansion plans, saying the result could be two blocs.

on party nights."

Nathan Reid, a resident of the area, said while the bomb was loud enough to wake him up, he wasn't too worried about the incident.

"As long as it's not in my house I don't care," Reid said. "I think they just got a little rowdy. It's all in good fun unless you blow up your hand."

Reid's roommate, Scott Adamson, said he heard yelling from next door 10 minutes prior to the explosion.

"The neighbors were being loud and obnoxious and all of a sudden there was a big bang," Adamson said.

Making bombs at home is nothing new, Woodsmall said.

"I grew up in the '60s," he said. "The only difference between then and the latest wave is flat tops over ponytails. People are still moving out to the country and making bombs."

The incident is a reminder of how easy it is to make a bomb, Lihs said.

"There are all kinds of books available that tell you how to make bombs out of anything," Lihs said. "But when people make them, they wind up hurting themselves and other people."

While the residents of Church Street don't seem to be too ruffled by the incident, the police department said any person who possesses incendiary or explosive device or material with intent to use such material to commit a public offense could be charged with a class C felony.

The incident is currently under investigation by the police department.

SELENA

ger and killed her. What could be a worse way to die than to be shot in the back in a cowardly manner?" prosecutor Mark Skurka asked during closing arguments.

"Selena left her mark on the world," Skurka continued. "The defendant left her mark on Selena with a bullet hole in the back."

But defense attorney Fred Hagans — pulling the trigger of the 38-caliber pistol over and over as he addressed the jury — insisted that Saldivar was bent on killing herself and that the gun went off while she was waving it.

He described Saldivar as inexperienced with weapons and said the gun had a hair trigger.

"Time and time again, consistently unrehearsed ... she said, 'This was an accident. I didn't intend to hurt her,'" Hagans said.

Judge Mike Westergren moved the case to Houston because of publicity in Corpus Christi, the singer's hometown.

Jurors only had to decide if Saldivar, who rose from founder of the Selena fan club to manager of her boutiques, should be convicted of murder. To do that, they had to find Saldivar shot Selena deliberately.

The jury was not given the option of considering lesser charges, such as manslaughter.

Saldivar does not face the death penalty because the crime contained none of the aggravating circumstances necessary under Texas law, such as a multiple slaying or a murder committed during a rape or robbery.

Nueces County District Attorney Carlos Valdez said he was not surprised at the jury's swift decision.

"We were coming to Houston to see if we could find justice here, and I think we found it," he said.

Valdez wouldn't say if he plans to seek the maximum punishment. He said he will pursue an embezzlement case against Saldivar.

Hagans said he would appeal.

Rowing team gives strong showing in Boston

The Iowa rowing team placed 21st out of 33 teams Sunday at the Head of Charles meet in Boston. The meet included several national and olympic teams, and was won by the Canadian National team.

The Hawkeyes took 14th among college teams competing and finished one minute behind the top college team.

"We saw some need for improvement in the speed area," rowing coach Mandi Kowal said, "but we are where we need to be in terms of progress."

Mariners forge plan for new ballpark

SEATTLE (AP) — The effort to keep the Mariners from leaving the city got a big boost Monday with approval of a plan to build a $320 million retractable-roof stadium.

The Metropolitan King County Council approved the plan by a vote of 10-3. Immediately thereafter, a dissenting group filed a lawsuit to block the plan.

Mariners owners had set Oct. 30 as the deadline for agreement on a plan to build a new ballpark for the AL club. Otherwise, they said they would offer the franchise for sale.

"In the last month we have seen a remarkable coming together of this community behind the Mariners," said team chairman John Ellis.

Nebraska's Phillips gets the OK to stay in school

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska running back Lawrence Phillips can stay in school although he is being disciplined for attacking his ex-girlfriend, a University of Nebraska official said Monday.

The decision, announced by Vice Chancellor James Griesen in a three-page statement, may lead to Phillips' return to the defending national champion Cornhuskers.

Bledsoe, Patriots complete seven-year deal

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Drew Bledsoe completed a seven-year, $42 million contract with the New England Patriots, a deal described by the team as the most lucrative in NFL history.

The Patriots said Monday night the contract, first announced on the opening of training camp, was signed during the weekend and was to be submitted for league approval Tuesday.

Steelers' Steed nailed for steroid use

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers nose tackle Joel Steed drew a four-game suspension Monday after becoming the first NFL player this season to test positive for steroids.

Steed is the second Steelers lineman in five years to be suspended for steroids, and the fifth to miss playing time under the NFL's substance abuse policy.

Under league rules, Steed, 6-foot-2 and 295 pounds, cannot practice during his suspension and must pass a mandatory physical exam before returning. The earliest he can be reactivated is the game Nov. 26 at Cleveland.

La Russa takes St. Louis helm

R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — One of the worst teams in the major leagues got one of the best managers.

Tony La Russa, who led the Oakland Athletics to a championship and three AL pennants in 10 years, on Monday signed a two-year contract worth an estimated $1.5 million per season to manage the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cardinals finished fourth in the NL Central at 62-81 under Joe Torre and Mike Jorgensen. La Russa didn't fare much better as the Athletics finished last in the AL West at 67-77, but his track record put him in demand and he took advantage of an opportunity to leave Oakland with two years left on his contract.

Cardinals general manager Walt

Jocketty was director of baseball administration for Oakland for 10 years before becoming the Colorado Rockies' assistant GM in 1993. He joined the Cardinals last season.

"The hiring of Tony La Russa to manage the Cardinals is a huge step in the rebuilding process of this organization," Jocketty said. "He's one of the best managers of this era."

La Russa has managed for 17 years — all in the AL. He wasn't too worried about changing and said he wanted to produce a contending team "as early as possible."

"I believe in high goals," La Russa said. "I believe in big dreams."

Cardinals outfielder Bernard Gilkey attended the news conference and endorsed the move.

"He's been to the World Series, he's won the big games," Gilkey said. "He's just a competitive person and that's what we need."

La Russa, 51, brings his longtime pitching coach, Dave Duncan, with him. Duncan replaces Mark Riggins, who was with the Cardinals one season.

"That was a slam dunk," La Russa said. "No contest. We are a team."

La Russa said he left Oakland, which is under new ownership, without animosity.

"It would have been very easy to get turned on by the challenge they face," La Russa said. "But at some point, you wear out your welcome and it's time to move on."

"We're just grateful Tony chose the National League," Athletics owner Steve Schott said. "That means we'll only have to face him if we both get to the World Series."

Tony La Russa is presented a team jersey by Walt Jocketty Monday.

MIDSEASON REPORT

Surprises cloud '95 football seasons

The Dallas Cowboys are 6-1. Nebraska and Florida State are undefeated. And Iowa was unable to beat Penn State. I guess the first half of the 1995 football season has come and gone without any surprises.

Unless you want to count Northwestern, Kansas, the Miami Hurricanes, Atlanta Falcons, St. Louis Rams, Buffalo Bills, Kansas City Chiefs, Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Pittsburgh Steelers, Cleveland Browns and New England Patriots.

Like I said, no surprises. Most people would say that Northwestern's No. 8 national ranking is '95's biggest shocker. I, however, know that the success won't last, so the Wildcats don't get my vote.

Yeah, they beat both Michigan and Notre Dame on the road and utterly destroyed Wisconsin. But until they beat Penn State or Iowa, they aren't for real in my mind.

Why would I be surprised to see Northwestern beat Iowa? Because 1973 ended 22 years ago and Northwestern hasn't beaten the Hawks since.

So, what is the biggest surprise of 1995?

The AFC. Hands down. Kansas City and Buffalo have as many wins combined than the top four preseason AFC contenders. New England 2-6? Pittsburgh and Cleveland 3-4? Are you kidding?

Anyway, enough looking back. I want to focus on what's going to happen next.

Even though I'm an NFL fan first and foremost, I'm looking forward to the college postseason most of all. I'm looking forward to it because, if Florida and Florida State cooperate, this season's climax could force a postseason tournament in the very near future.

Check out this scenario: Florida and Florida State tie 35-35 when they meet at Florida Nov. 25. I don't know if Bowden went for the tie or if Spurrier did, but let's not blame anyone. This is key to my scenario.

Nebraska, which is elevated to No. 1 after the state of Florida shows its unity, remains undefeated and heads to the Fiesta Bowl to face ... eenie meenie miney moe ... Florida State (Why? They just get more respect than Florida).

So Florida State wins the Fiesta and finishes 11-0-1. Florida wins the SEC championship game and the Sugar Bowl and winds up 12-0-1. And, oh yeah, Ohio State ends up 12-0 after its Rose Bowl victory. Who is No. 1?

Ohio State has the best record, but maybe both Florida teams are better. Florida State beat Nebraska in the supposed title game, but began the weekend with the NFL's top-rated defense.

With Levy recovering from surgery for prostate cancer, assistant head coach Elijah Pitts handled the Bills. But six minutes into the game, Buffalo lost Thomas, who pulled a left hamstring after a strong start and did not return.

Bledsoe, who didn't throw a touchdown pass until his fifth game of the season, completed 23 of 40 passes for 262 yards and a 5-yard touchdown to Vincent Brisby.

Martin rushed 36 times for a career-high 127 yards and a 20-yard touchdown, the first of the game. He had rushed for 102 yards in his pro debut but only ray, who hit Cleveland's only home run, is batting .167.

The Patriots, in their first Monday night game in eight seasons and the first at home in 14, recovered three fumbles and had four sacks against a team that had lost just three fumbles and been sacked seven times all season.

Paul Sorrento can only help. He returns to first base and becomes the Indians' extra bat with Murray in his accustomed DH spot.

"I'm excited to get in," said Sorrento, who hit .235 with 25 homers this season. "It was hard sitting on the bench in Atlanta. I knew going in that would happen so it was no surprise."

Atlanta will use Ryan Klesko, the regular left fielder, as the DH and plug Luis Polonia in left field as its extra bat. Polonia, who batted .264 in 28 games after coming over from the New York Yankees, powered them in four straight. The New York Mets were given little chance against Baltimore in 1969 and won in five games.

Surely, Atlanta is formidable, featuring the best staff in the majors. Still, it's been startling just how well Greg Maddux, Tom Glavine and the Braves bullpen have shut down Cleveland.

Albert Belle, who hit 50 homers and drove in 126 runs, has been held to one single in six at-bats. Carlos Baerga, who batted .314, is 0-for-8. Overall, the Indians have had more broken bats (six) than runs (five), and have a grand total of seven singles and one home run.

replacement, rookie Darick Holmes, lost a fumble on the first play of the second half and Matt Bahr followed with a 39-yard field goal for a 24-14 lead.

Thomas was injured on a 20-yard run to a first down at the New England 11-yard line. He was taken to the locker room on a cart and finished with 42 yards on four carries. He also caught two passes, setting a team record with recepgot the call over Mike Devereaux, the MVP of the league championship, because he swings from the left side and all of the Indians starters are right-handed.

Atlanta manager Bobby Cox, who managed with the DH in Toronto, is familiar with the ramifications of the rule.

"I always thought it was a little bit of a National League advantage when you get the American League club playing without its favorite DH," Cox said. "They played all year with it. We don't and in the National League, you've always got somebody on the bench who can DH. So I think it's a slight advantage for the National League."

The Braves did not get a lot of mileage from the DH in the 1991

tions in 43 consecutive games.

The Patriots scored first for the first time in four games as Martin's 20-yard run 4:26 into the game, the earliest they've scored this season.

Steve Christie's two 23-yard field goals cut the lead to 7-6 after the first quarter. The Patriots responded with a 12-play, 70-yard march capped by Bledsoe's 5-yard pass to Brisby that made the score 14-6.

and 1992 World Series. Cox used Lonnie Smith in the role both years and he batted just .154 and .167 and is best remembered for a seventh-game baserunning blunder that might have cost the Braves the '91 championship.

The first NL World Series DH was Dan Driessen with Cincinnati in 1976. He batted .357 in the Reds four-game sweep of the Yankees. The best production for either league's DH came in 1982, when Dane Iorg batted .529 for St. Louis.

Since the current format of using the rule in games played in the AL park and not in the NL park began in 1986, the extra bat has been something of a non-factor, with AL DHs batting .220 and NL DHs hitting .195.

Dan Marino returns, I'll give my virtually meaningless nod to either Oakland or KC. I definitely think Oakland is heading in the right direction with Vince Evans (a former Bear) in the pocket instead of Jeff Hostetler, even if it only lasts a week or two.

And I like Kansas City a little better than Oakland because the

to do too much. Whatever, whether it's chasing bad pitches or simply missing good ones, it's not working.

"We just haven't performed," Lofton said during Monday's workout at Jacobs Field. "And because it's the World Series, it's a big deal."

Just like it was 41 years ago. Power hitters Larry Doby, who led the league with 126 RBIs, and Al Rosen, did not drive in a single run. AL batting champion Bobby Avila hit just .133, and the team that topped the league in homers batted only .190.

Lemon, who went 23-7 that season, lost the opener — the game when Mays made his famous catch against Vic Wertz — in the 10th inning on Dusty Rhodes' pinch-hit home run.

Still, the only hitter in the Indians lineup batting more than that right now is Manny Ramirez at .286.

"We're not swinging the way we're capable of," manager Mike Hargrove said. "Except for a couple of games (in the postseason), we just haven't swung the bats well."

Hargrove offered a little baseball philosophy.

"What's a slump?" he asked. "Not getting hits or not hitting the ball hard? I define a slump as not swinging well or hitting the ball hard."

Whatever the definition, the Indians seem to be in their worst one all season, and it's come at the worst possible time.

Chiefs have found success despite a tremendous lack of respect. Last weekend Kansas City was the underdog against Denver despite a 6-1 record.

By the way, don't worry if you have a problem with my latest AFC championship prediction. I'm sure I'll come out with another one somewhere around Week 12.

Lemon also lost Game 4 at Cleveland Stadium, the final disappointment for a staff that included Hall of Famers Early Wynn, Bob Feller and Hal Newhouser, plus star Mike Garcia.

At Jacobs Field, Charles Nagy will start Game 3 against John Smoltz, 5-1 lifetime in the postseason for Atlanta.

Braves manager Bobby Cox said Maddux, the three-time Cy Young winner who pitched a two-hitter in the opener, would be moved back to Game 5. Instead, Steve Avery will start Game 4 Wednesday night.

"Ave is throwing too good not to pitch," Cox said. "I think it's best, if you can, to have healthy, rested pitchers."

Evans defies age to lead Oakland

Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — At 40, Vince Evans is still a football marvel.

And after watching him throw for more than 300 yards and two long-distance touchdowns against the same defense that knocked out Steve Young the week before, Raiders coach Mike White couldn't help feeling the NFL's oldest active player has never received his just due.

Playing for injured Jeff Hostetler, Evans threw for 335 yards, including touchdowns of 46 and 73 yards to Raghbi Ismail in the Raiders' 30-17 win Sunday over the Indianapolis Colts.

It was the fourth 300-yard game for Evans but the first since 1983 when he was with Chicago and passed for a career-best 336 yards in a loss to Detroit.

"He's an amazing guy," White said of Evans, called "Pops" by some of his teammates.

What's even more amazing to White is that Evans didn't get more NFL playing opportunities when he was younger.

"Vince hasn't been in the best situations," White said.

"I really believe, if given the chance, that he'd be one of the great quarterbacks to play this game."

Evans, who entered the league 18 years ago when black quarterbacks were still a rarity in the NFL, said White could be right. At the same time, Evans said he would rather not dwell on missed opportunities but concentrate on trying to "make my latter years greater than my former years."

BLACKHAWKS COACH

Hartsburg big on motivation

*Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — In the last week, Craig Hartsburg demonstrated why the Chicago Blackhawks overlooked his youth and inexperience, and why they so desperately wanted him to be their coach.

He benched both last season's top goal-scorer, Joe Murphy, and this season's top rookie, Eric Daze. They both responded with excellent performances.

And the Blackhawks ended a grueling two-week stretch with Saturday's emotional victory at St. Louis and Sunday's come-from-behind defeat of previously unbeaten Philadelphia.

At 5-3-1, Chicago leads the NHL Central Division.

"Craig's the boss," Bernie Nicholls said of the 36-year-old Hartsburg, who is in his first NHL head-coaching job. "I've been on teams that didn't respect the coach and everybody was on a different page. But we have a lot of respect for Craig."

"You can question any of the guys he's benched and they'll tell you the same thing."

Murphy didn't say the same thing — at first.

He was upset about being scratched from the lineup Tuesday at Florida.

He had been benched for the second half of the previous game, against Calgary, after getting a retaliatory cross-checking penalty. It was just one in a series of foolish penalties taken by Murphy, who also hadn't scored after getting 23 goals last season.

Upon his return Thursday, Murphy said: "I don't appreciate what happened. I'm a big-time player."

Wildcats start thinking Rose Bowl

Rick Gano
Associated Press

EVANSTON, Ill. — A Chicago newspaper asked fans to pick up their phones Monday and call in their opinions on this unlikely topic: Will Northwestern make it to the Rose Bowl?

In decades past, the query might have triggered some sarcastic responses: "Yeah, if they buy enough tickets. Maybe, if they march in the parade."

Not now, not in this season that is already the Wildcats' best in 24 years. Northwestern, as incredible as it might sound, does have a chance to play in Pasadena for the first time since 1949.

The Wildcats are ranked eighth, they are 6-1 with four games to play, they lead the Big Ten with a 4-0 record and they have victories at Notre Dame and Michigan and over Wisconsin.

In fact, they're pretty much assured of a bowl trip somewhere, even if it's not in the Rose Bowl as the conference champion.

The first five teams in the Big Ten are locked into a bowl by contract and others finishing out of those spots often receive at-large berths to other postseason games.

Coach Gary Barnett said Monday he's still not comfortable that the Wildcats are in a bowl. He said much the same Saturday after a 35-0 rout of Wisconsin.

"I don't think that six victories, just winning six and being 4-4 will get us in a bowl," said Barnett, who's taken a mere four seasons to turn the perennial Big Ten doormat into a winner.

"A couple of years ago we'd been happy just with the tackle, now we're going down tackling and ripping the ball out."

Gary Barnett, Northwestern coach

"I think if we want to go to a bowl, we've got to win seven games. That's what I said to them and that's the way we're approaching it. That means seven wins and that's the next thing we'll push for."

The first opponent in the closing month is a familiar one. Northwestern plays at state rival Illinois on Saturday.

"It will be a challenge," Northwestern guard Ryan Padgett said Monday, looking back to last year's 28-7 victory by the Illini in Evanston.

This Northwestern team is stronger, quicker and more confident. And the Wildcats are cashing in on turnovers. Wisconsin lost five fumbles and threw two interceptions Saturday, leading to five Northwestern scores.

Northwestern's entire defense won Big Ten player-of-the-week honors for the game.

"A couple of years ago we'd been happy just with the tackle, now we're going down tackling and ripping the ball out," Barnett said. "Defensive backs, instead of just covering, are looking for ways to make interceptions. Those are the things that happen with teams that are having success."

The Wildcats had been pretty lucky with injuries until Saturday when place-kicker Sam Valenzisi, who is 15-of-16 on both field goals and extra points this season, tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee.

Barnett says Valenzisi didn't hurt his leg kicking but by jumping up and down to celebrate after a long kickoff in the fourth quarter.

"That's pretty unlucky," Barnett said. "You try to control so many things, you buy them knee braces and tape their ankles and here a guy jumps up and down on his knee wrong."

Ballerina returns to Iowa City

Amy Mackin
The Daily Iowan

Although San Francisco Ballet is America's oldest ballet company, their performances this week will be on the cutting edge of contemporary dance. The San Francisco Ballet will present two different mixed repertory programs at Hancher Auditorium tonight and Wednesday night at 8 featuring works by some of America's leading choreographers.

The performances in Iowa City will be a homecoming for principal dancer Tina LeBlanc. LeBlanc came to Iowa City to study with Joffrey II, the Joffrey Ballet's second company, as a 16-year-old aspiring ballerina.

Twelve years later, LeBlanc will return to Iowa City with her aspirations actualized as one of America's most dynamic dancers.

"I've spent a lot of time in Iowa City," LeBlanc said. "Being in Iowa was a break from New York as far as I was concerned."

LeBlanc's work in Joffrey II's summer sessions in Iowa City paid off when she received an offer to join The Joffrey Ballet in January of 1984.

During her eight year tenure with The Joffrey, LeBlanc performed many leading roles to overwhelming critical praise. In July of 1992, LeBlanc left the Joffrey in search of a change.

"I felt that I had been at Joffrey for a very long time and it was time for some new artistic input and a new atmosphere," she said. "I was starting to become a little bit stagnant and I needed some new stimulation."

LeBlanc said she looked at the companies different cities had to offer and ultimately decided to join the San Francisco Ballet.

"San Francisco was really the only feasible (company)," LeBlanc said. "The company is stable. The dancers are really, really good and I thought it would be a good atmosphere for me to grow."

"I still run the gamut from very classical to very modern, which is what I had at the Joffrey," LeBlanc said. "The atmosphere is quite different. Here in San Francisco, we have the star system and I am a principal and treated like one. Here I feel like I have more responsibility for what I'm doing."

At Hancher, LeBlanc will be performing in David Bintley's "The Dance House" and Mark Morris's "Pacific." Iowa City will be the first audience for both "The Dance House" and "Pacific" outside of San Francisco.

"Pacific" premiered in May at the United We Stand festival celebrating the 50th anniversary of the United Nations.

Bintley's "The Dance House" was met with much critical success and deals loosely with the devastation of AIDS in the dance world. LeBlanc said the work does not have a solid story line but the antagonistic character is evident and can be loosely called the virus.

"(The virus) effects many people in many different ways and in the end, it's just how much of our society this really touches," she said.

LeBlanc plays the antagonist's first victim.

"I am picked out of a group of eight girls and we all look the same, in the same costumes and everything," she said. "(The antagonist) picks its victims very randomly. (But) 'The Dance House' is not about death."

The work reflects how AIDS is touching society, the ballerina said.

Koo-gul-shma-ken: Call it Crap serve water.

But then high school ended and we went our separate ways. I attend a Big Ten school. However, her grades weren't quite like mine, so she had to settle for Georgetown, where she now majors in German and French, with a minor in international business.

For anyone who's ever been away from a close sibling for a long period of time, this is for you.

My sister, Kim (stepsister, actually), is three months younger than I am, and we've been friends since I was 5 years old. We grew up together, laughed together and used to run naked around the bathroom after taking dual baths to con-

What a waste of money, I say. Like anybody really speaks anything but English.

Last Thanksgiving I met Christian, Kim's long-time boyfriend from Germany. He's a very proper guy who loves playing the flute and hates American football, but we love him anyway.

Naturally, he wanted to make a good impression, so he and Kim — who now requests to be called nothing but Kimberly — offered to make an Austrian dessert.

It's been awhile, but I think it was called Koo-gul-shma-ken, which translated into English means, "Starving nations would rather die than eat this."

Not only did its name require a spittoon just to pronounce, but it sounded utterly disgusting. Thus, for the remainder of this story, it will be referred to as Crap.

Pardon my incompetence, but I don't remember all of the ingredients, so I'll have to improvise.

First, find the biggest wad of dough you can and dump it into a bowl. Then add some brown sugar and raisins and olives or something and mix them together. Preheat the oven to somewhere between 300 and 450 degrees and cook the Crap on both sides for something like 20 minutes to two hours.

Since Kim(berly) and Christian waited too long to begin preparing the Crap, it wasn't ready until well after the meal began.

By the time the Crap was finished, the 15 of us had already devoured the salad, three or four main courses, three pumpkin pies, two tubs of Cool Whip and a 1/2 slice of Aunt Mary's mincemeat pie.

Finally, the big moment had arrived and the two brought the dessert to the table. Kim(berly)'s eyes were wide open as she got people's reactions. My brother took a bite and proclaimed, "Wow, that's rich," which in Jeff's terms means, "Wow, if I eat anymore I'm gonna throw up."

Of course, we all told them it was wonderful, which probably confused them since 3/4 of it was still in the serving dish, while the remaining 1/4 was still lining the walls of our stomachs.
