Charges filed in Garofalo case

Fraternity members face misdemeanor charges for drinking death

Sarah Lueck
The Daily Iowan

Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity members Brian Rinehart, Chad Diehl and Brian Garcea were charged with making alcohol available to persons under the legal age in connection with the Sept. 8 death of associate member Matthew Garofalo.

If convicted of the misdemeanor charges, the fraternity members face a fine of up to $100 or confinement for a period of up to 30 days, according to a report released by the Iowa City Police Department.

Police investigators found no evidence of fraternity hazing or forced consumption of alcohol, the report said.

Events Since Garofalo's Death

Matthew Garofalo, a Lambda Chi Alpha associate member, is found dead in the fraternity house after a Thursday night party where Garofalo was drinking heavily.

The fraternity is suspended indefinitely while police conduct an investigation.

Garofalo's funeral is held in Elgin, Ill.

An autopsy reveals that Garofalo died from fluid in the lungs, caused by acute alcohol intoxication the night before his death.

The Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council ban alcohol from all fraternity social events within chapter houses.

White said he thinks Garofalo's death should cause people to rethink what he called "half-hearted" underage drinking laws.

"Society has set too light a penalty," he said. "The law says it's illegal, but not that bad. A lot of questions will come out in civil litigation, if there is any."

Attorney Leon Spies, who represents Rinehart, said he is satisfied with the charge.

Train hits school bus, 5 die

Aerial view of the wreckage of a school bus that was hit by a suburban commuter train Wednesday in Fox River Grove, Ill. The collision killed five students and injured around 30 others, officials say. Witnesses said the bus, carrying students to nearby Cary-Grove High School in Cary, Ill., was stopped at a red light with a portion of the rear of the bus still on the tracks when it was struck by a train travelling about 50 mph. A portion of the bus was sheared off by the impact and the bus was spun 180 degrees.

FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. — A commuter train ripped apart a school bus stopped on the tracks Wednesday as students in the back rushed forward in terror at the sight of 620 tons of steel bearing down on them. Five students were killed and about 30 injured.

Some witnesses said the bus was trying to cross the tracks about 7:20 a.m. when it got caught at a red light behind a car and couldn't make it all the way across. But others said there was no car ahead and the driver could have moved forward.

The bus was taking the youngsters to 1,400-student Cary-Grove High School in Cary, Ill. The Chicago-bound express train was traveling between 50 mph and 60 mph and sheared the body of the bus beneath its axles that holds the body and the motor together — spinning it around 180 degrees.

For some dieters, giving in to a fast-food feast will not ruin their quest to lose weight.

But for others, the slip could send their diets spinning out of control.

Diner condemned for whip-toting servers

Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Whipped potatoes, OK. Whipped diners, no way.

The burghers of Belfast have torpedoed plans for a new restaurant featuring waitresses dressed as English schoolgirls — albeit wearing short skirts and black-lace stockings and toting whips.

Judge John Higgins ruled Wednesday that restaurateur Tommy Alexander's plans to open School Dinners eatery in downtown Belfast would violate the lease by providing entertainment.

The entertainment: waitresses whipping patrons' rears in mock punishment if they don't clean their plates.

"I'm sure the decent people of Belfast will be glad. We don't want immoral things in our city," said the Rev. Eric Smyth, a Free Presbyterian minister who is lord mayor of Belfast.

"This is not fun, this is filth," Smyth, a member of the Rev. Ian Paisley's hard-line Democratic Unionist Party, demanded two Belfast councilmen resign after posing for spankings.

Publicity shots of Sandy Blair and Jim "Junior" Walker being spoon-fed strawberries by waitresses sitting in their laps appeared on front pages of several regional newspapers. Both men gave the thumbs-up sign as they bent over a chair to take their punishment.

"Our lord mayor's a fuddy-duddy," Blair said. "He may well have a dirty mind, too, but he ought to get a sense of humor to go with it."

Walker, who was expelled from the Democratic Unionist Party over the affair, said School Dinners would cheer up a downtown scarred by IRA bombings.

"We have had 25 years where it has been oppressed and closed to its citizens. Now is the time for the fun to come flooding back," said Wilson. He said voters had come up to shake his hand after seeing the photos.

Telephone calls supporting the councilmen jammed the switchboards of local talk shows, far outnumbering the critics. The crush of callers joining a phone-in poll on the Gerry Kelly show Friday night was so great the telephone company complained it was affecting the 999 emergency service.

School Dinners organizers said they were determined to open up the eatery somewhere else in Belfast, and expect all the publicity will only help them.

A School Dinners restaurant has operated for 14 years in London with no controversy whatsoever. It also provides Chippendales-style waiters for women.

Belfast restaurateur Michael Love, who's not involved in the new venture but has sampled the fare at the London School Dinners, said critics didn't know what they talking about.

"Mock canings take place, particularly anybody who has a birthday. But it's all done with the consent of the person involved. No one's humiliated in any way," he said. "You're brought to the front of the class," and asked to stand at a stool, and given a mock six of the best."

Most criticism in Belfast focused on the waitresses' uniforms: white shirts and striped ties like British private school uniforms on top, short black skirts and black-lace tights below.

Associated Press
Jim "Junior" Walker, right, and Sandy Blair undergo a mock caning from an unidentified waitress at the School Dinners restaurant, in Belfast, Northern Ireland, Saturday. The councilmen have been ostracized by some of their colleagues for patronizing the restaurant, where the waitresses dress in short skirts, stockings, shirts and ties, and where the mock caning of customers is a regular feature.

Former president
Ford envies Gingrich

MADISON, N.J. (AP) — Gerald Ford said all he really wanted to be was speaker of the House, not president.

"I envy Newt Gingrich," the former president said during a speech Tuesday night at Drew University.

Ford, 81, was the minority leader of the House when President Nixon picked him to replace Vice President Spiro Agnew, who resigned in 1973. Ford became president when Nixon resigned the following year.

He said he supports most of the Contract with America championed by Gingrich, with the exception of a balanced budget amendment and term limits.

"After all, I got elected 13 times," he said.

Tom Arnold
disillusioned with television

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two failed TV comedy series have soured Tom Arnold on the small screen.

"Until I got kicked off television, I had no idea how big the movies are and how important the movies are compared to the little television," the ex-husband of caustic comedy queen Roseanne told TV's "Extra" during an interview for broadcast today.

Arnold starred in the series "The Jackie Thomas Show" and "Tom," both of which quickly faded.

Since then, his movie credits have included "True Lies" and "Nine Months," and he also stars in the upcoming films "The Stupids," "Big Bully," "Carpool" and "The Honeymooners," in which he plays Ralph Kramden.

Now he wants to try raising a family with new wife, Julie Champnella.

News guru Levine
calls it quits at NBC

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Irving Levine, the professorial TV journalist with the dry, measured delivery and trademark bow ties, is retiring from NBC after nearly half a century.

Levine is stepping down Nov. 1 and becoming dean of international studies at Lynn University, a school with an enrollment of 2,000 students, the university said Wednesday.

Levine has been a presence at NBC since 1950, when he began covering the Korean War. He became the network's full-time economics correspondent in 1971 and has done weekly commentaries on CNBC for the last 5 1/2 years.

Queen Mum knights
her favorite rock star

LONDON (AP) — Cliff Richard, Britain's most durable rocker, received a knighthood from Queen Elizabeth II on Wednesday — and said he was glad it wasn't just for singing.

"It's no great shakes being a rock star, although I love it myself," said the 55-year-old new Sir Cliff.

His award cites his charity work and that, he said, "lifts it above what I do for a living."

He is reputed to be the favorite singer of the 95-year-old Queen Mother.

First lady promotes guidance for new mothers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cutesy baby outfits are nice, but what expectant mothers really need at their baby showers are health and safety tips, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton said Wednesday.

Rodham Clinton, who is writing a parenting book, told an audience of mothers and expectant mothers that some people question the need for her book, claiming parents already know what to do.

"And I said, 'Well, I didn't.' I didn't get an instruction manual when my daughter was born. Much of it was trial by error and, luckily, I had family and friends and other people who were there for me telling me what I needed to do to keep my baby safe and healthy," she said.

Trump's return named 'comeback of the decade'

NEW YORK (AP) — Even when he's losing money, developer Donald Trump is no piker.

He said he measures red ink in the billions.

He has previously said he was in no danger of going under financially during the real estate market crash of 1991. But he amended that during a luncheon speech Tuesday, the New York Post reported.

He recalled once walking down Fifth Avenue with Marla Maples, now his wife, and seeing a panhandler.

"That man's worth $900 million more than I am," he said he told her.

He later said the crash really dropped him from a net worth of $8 billion or so to a negative worth of perhaps $3 billion.

Trump spoke while being honored by the Forum Club for "the comeback of the decade."

Quayle 'tells all' about vice presidency NewsBriefs

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

Calling his last job "a rather awkward office," former Vice President Dan Quayle discussed the role of the vice presidency and his role in the Bush administration Wednesday at the Herbert Hoover Presidential Library and Museum in West Branch, Iowa.

Quayle's speech was part of a two-day conference on the vice presidency sponsored by the Hoover museum. Public officials, journalists and professors from across the nation gathered to discuss the role of vice presidents in American politics.

Quayle said each day as vice president started with a personal national security briefing at 7 a.m., followed by a meeting with President Bush and his foreign policy advisors at 8:15 a.m.

"(Foreign policy) was serious business to (Bush)," he said. "It was the first order of business every single day."

The rest of the day was occupied by Cabinet meetings, National Security Council meetings or visiting with world leaders, he said.

Quayle said loyalty and preparation are the most essential characteristics of a vice president.

Quayle said he was able to remain loyal and prepared because of ample communication with Bush.

"George Bush had a completely open-door policy as far as I was concerned," Quayle said. "I still very much feel a part of the Bush family."

Being vice president, however, wasn't all about high-level meetings. Quayle also had to do some of the things Bush did not want to do, like attend GOP fund-raisers.

"He was president first, and he really didn't want to deal with politics as much as his staff, from time to time, wanted him to," Quayle said. "Well, guess who got to go to all those fund-raisers?"

Although the vice presidency has remained in obscurity for most of American history, Quayle said the office has become more important in recent years.

"The real significance of the office of vice president, I believe, began with Harry Truman," he said.

Because Truman succeeded to the presidency during World War II and had to make the decision whether to use the atomic bomb against Japan, Quayle said, future presidents began to see a need to keep vice presidents better informed.

Bush selected Quayle for political balance as well as for his Midwestern roots, Quayle said.

"The Midwest was going to be a (political) battleground," Quayle said.

Quayle's younger age and more conservative beliefs helped balance the Bush-Quayle ticket in 1988, he said.

Quayle said in 1992, the Bush campaign allowed the Clinton campaign to dominate the political agenda.

"We did not have a good communications strategy," he said. "We didn't focus on the character issue."

Quayle, however, said he had no regrets about his "Murphy Brown" speech, in which he said the show's main character reflected poor family values because she was a single mom.

He said public debate about values has since affirmed his position that two-parent families do a better job of raising children than single-parent families.

UI grant allows for new nutrition classes

The UI College of Medicine will soon be one of the few medical schools in the United States offering classes in preventive nutrition with the help of a $500,000 grant.

The Midland Dairy Association donated $250,000, and the Iowa Pork Producers Association and the Iowa Beef Industry Council each donated $125,000 in a joint offering.

"I feel that it's something long overdue," said LeRoy Stoltenberg, president designate for the Iowa Pork Producers Association.

The grant will help establish a nutrition professorship within the UI College of Medicine's Department of Preventative Medicine and Environmental Health.

"The University of Iowa College of Medicine is vitally interested in structuring its curriculum so that it presents all aspects of disease prevention and treatment," said Robert Kelch, dean of the medical college.

Nancy Pellet, former chairperson of the Iowa Beef Industry Council, said she is pleased these separate groups finally came together, because Iowa's livestock organizations have been trying to provide nutrition information to the medical community for years.

UI students realize power of persuasion at City Council meeting

A decision by the Iowa City City Council at Tuesday's meeting shows the power students have in local government, said Councilor Bruno Pigott.

The vote to pass the ban of skateboards and in-line skates in parking ramps was deferred in its second reading. In the first reading, the council voted to pass the ban.

In the discussion section of the meeting, two young men who are skateboarders and UI students voiced their concerns about the proposed ban and got applause when they finished.

"We have jobs, pay rent and buy things. We are not ruthless criminals," UI sophomore Eric Neubauer said. "We are not demanding anything; we are trying to work with you."

Skateboarders and in-line skaters will be meeting with city staff before the Nov. 21 meeting, when the issue will be voted on by the council.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, the human rights ordinance was voted on for the second time. The council voted unanimously in favor of the language change to include transgendered people in the ordinance. The final vote will be at the Nov. 2 meeting.

Dorm program explores tattooing

Ann Haggerty
The Daily Iowan

Alcohol and stress programs deal with what UI students do to the inside of their bodies.

Wednesday night's Hillcrest Residence Hall tattoo program turned students' attention to the outside.

"Beauty is Skin Deep" featured two tattoo artists who described different aspects of tattooing — safety precautions, price, pain factors and what really happens in a tattoo parlor.

About 25 UI students attended the program Wednesday night.

The most painful part of the tattoo process is the initial poke of the needle and the black outlining of the design, said Chris Andrews, a tattoo artist at Beauty is Skin Art, 620 S. Dubuque St.

"You will live through it," he said.

"It's not that bad — just remember to breathe."

Andrews said his clients watch a television screen in the tattoo parlor or bring friends with them for conversation to divert the pain. Eating a candy bar and coming to the parlor with a full stomach will help feelings of light-headedness, he said.

The most popular designs are the Tasmanian Devil, hearts, roses and Yin-Yangs, said Jerry Short, owner of Beauty is Skin Art. The minimum price for a tattoo is $20, and the price goes up as the detail increases, he said.

"Some people want to make a personal statement such as a tribute to a band or a movie star," he said. "I even had people come in to tell me they got a tattoo because they lost a poker bet."

Andrews said to avoid tattooing the names of girlfriends or boyfriends, but if people really want them, they should have them done in color ink. Black ink is harder to cover up with a new tattoo when the couple breaks up, he said.

Andrews said when people are considering tattoos, they should keep in mind that the designs on their skin are there for a lifetime.

"Think about what the tattoo means to you," he said. "It should be something you hold strong now and will continue (to hold strong) for 30 years more."

UI sophomore Shanna Truelove, who attended the program, said a tattoo's permanence would keep her from going through with the process.

"I change my hair color every other day — how can I decide if I want a tattoo for the rest of my life?" she said.

Andrews said people interested in getting a tattoo should look for five things: tattoo licenses on the wall, visible sterilization equipment, fresh ink containers for each client's tattoo, a clean environment and a displayed portfolio of the artist's work.

UI senior Mike Nixon said he was less fearful of the tattooing process after learning to watch for these things at a tattoo parlor.

"(Tattooing) is an obscure art form," he said. "Unless you get one done, you don't know about the procedure."

Resident Assistant and UI sophomore Tara Hollimon, who helped organize the program, said she wanted students to participate in a program that was unusual and educational at the same time.

"Basic alcohol and dieting programs are basic programs all (residence halls) do," she said. "People get sick and tired of doing the same things."

Community Reading Month 1995

Children don't learn to love books by themselves. We can make a difference, and that's what the eighth annual Community Reading Month is all about.

From October 23 to November 18, people in the Iowa City and Coralville area will have the opportunity to take part in activities which focus on the importance of reading. And not just for children, but for everyone.

There will be book talks, a Community Read-in, visiting authors, and a Festival of Books for Young People.

The goals of Community Reading Month are to:

- provide an opportunity for the community, the schools, the public libraries, the University of Iowa and local businesses to celebrate the value of reading.
- emphasize the value of life-long learning.
- provide children & parents enriching experiences related to reading.
- encourage everyone in the Iowa City, Coralville and Johnson County area to read.

In the days to come, look for information in the Press-Citizen for ways that you can participate.

'Live Better, Feel Better, Look Better': Words of wisdom at Health Fair '95

Ann Haggerty
The Daily Iowan

Some participants in Health Fair '95 received more than just a health assessment — they realized it was time to get their butts off of the couch and into their workout clothes.

Sponsors of "Live Better, Feel Better, Look Better," held in the Field House Wednesday, measured various health-related elements, such as body fat, flexibility, grip strength and cardiovascular fitness.

Information on sexual health, nutrition and drinking and driving was also available.

UI senior Troy Powell said the health tests showed him he needed to lower his body fat and increase his endurance.

"I think I'm going to change my diet and start exercising more," he said. "When I was little I had to do 10 push-ups before I opened the refrigerator. I'm going to go back to that."

UI freshman Julie Nelson said she exercised more in high school when she had less of a choice about when to wake up, eat and practice after-school sports. Finding the motivation to exercise in college is difficult because she has more freedom with her time.

"I wanted to come because I used to exercise a lot in high school," she said. "It's funny how your body can change after only a year or two. (The test results) kind of kick you in the butt."

The body fat test was the most popular station at the fair, and boasted the longest waiting line. Participants' body fat percentages were measured with a device placed on the biceps which reacted to fat tissues with different degrees of light.

UI junior Becky Castle, who attended the fair, said she believed the body fat test was popular because people in today's society are more conscious about what they look like.

"Weight is a big concern when you get to college," she said. "More people are worried about their appearances."

UI junior Greg Hanson said he was surprised with his lack of flexibility and has an increased desire to improve his overall fitness because of the test results.

"I think anytime you're reminded of what you need to do to keep in shape, you're more likely to do it," he said. "I'm going to make an effort to get out more and play basketball."

However, UI senior Ann McGrevey said she works out three times a week and was happy with the results of her health assessment.

"(The test results) will make me continue working out," she said. "It gives me more of an incentive to do what I've been doing."

The holistic health addition to the fair — massage therapy — was enjoyed by UI freshman Sharise Berger, who said she paid $1 for a minute of massage which helped relieve a tight muscle in her shoulder.

"It felt great," she said. "I can use my shoulder now."

Sponsors of the free fair included Health Iowa and the UI Department of Sport, Health, Leisure and Physical Studies.

Campus work: 'It's a pain'

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily Iowan

Orange fences, cement trucks and workers in hard hats are familiar sights at the UI these days, and many students are frustrated with the continual construction on campus.

"It's a pain in the ass," said UI freshman Matt Beneke. "I wish they would've done it in the summer. We're giving the university a butt-load of money, and now we have to walk through the mud when it rains to get to class."

Ed Hawks, head of UI Architectural/Engineering Services, which is in charge of all the UI construction projects, said the large amount of construction work around campus is typical for this time of year. The projects are drawing more attention this year because they are located in areas heavily populated by students, he said.

One of the most visible projects began in mid-September with the reconstruction of a 4-by-8-foot utility tunnel, located immediately underneath the pavement on Madison Street. This $550,000 project, which will not be completed until mid-December, has narrowed the road to two lanes and affected the traffic flow, Hawks said.

"Fifty percent of the traffic in this area has been impacted by this project," he said.

However, without reconstruction, the road above the utility tunnel would eventually collapse, Hawks said.

"The roof of the tunnel is caving in," he said. "Eventually, everything else will, too."

Even though Hawks said UI Architectural/Engineering Services has received few complaints, UI students said they are upset by the overwhelming amount of construction, which forces them to find other Construction near the Main Library and the Communications Center has been a source of frustration and interest for many students. The work resulted from a need to repair underground steam pipes and to prepare the area for a new Cambus stop. The Cambus improvements will include cement steps, where students can wait for the bus.

er ways to get to class.

"It makes it so hard to get to class," said UI sophomore Deb Ogle. "I can't wait until the construction is over with. Those orange fences are so ugly."

Other students said the construction on Madison Street only bothers them if they are driving.

"The traffic really backs up," said UI junior Christa Manes. "I try and stay away from campus in the afternoons."

However, when she is walking around campus, Manes said she isn't annoyed unless she's forced onto the street.

"(I was annoyed) when they were redoing the sidewalks and I almost got hit by a Cambus," she said. "It made it inconvenient for people.

Any time I tried to get to Lindquist, I had to divert my path."

UI freshman Emma Metz, a frequent Cambus rider, said the construction has caused plenty of chaos on Madison Street.

"With all the traffic, it takes a lot of time for the Cambus drivers to get down the street," she said. "This temporary stop thing is also real confusing because the buses are off-schedule."

The construction on Madison Street is only one of many projects underway on campus. The sidewalks by Phillips Hall and throughout the Pentacrest are being repaved, and a telecommunications cable is also being installed on the Pentacrest.

Introducing a new way to help bridge the gap between what you've saved and what you'll need during retirement.

Teachers Personal Annuity™ now offers more flexibility with the new Stock Index Account... a variable account specifically developed for the long-term investor who is looking for more growth opportunities and is willing to accept more risk.

When you're planning for the future, every dollar counts. Now you have more choices to help you make the most of your after-tax retirement dollars. With Teachers Personal Annuity, you can select either our Fixed Account or our new Stock Index Account. Or, you may choose to allocate your money to both accounts. That way you can take advantage of the highly-competitive effective annual interest rate of the Fixed Account and the growth potential offered by the Stock Index Account. With both accounts, taxes on any earnings will be deferred until you withdraw them — which gives you a big edge over taxable accounts. However, if you withdraw money before age 59½, you may have to pay a federal tax penalty in addition to regular income tax. And remember — as a variable annuity, the Stock Index Account doesn't guarantee returns, which will fluctuate over time.

With a low initial investment, no front-end sales charges or transfer fees, and no surrender charge at this time, Teachers Personal Annuity can help bridge the gap between what you've saved and what you'll need during retirement.

CHARGES

"I was heartened to learn Mr. Rinehart was not implicated in the death," he said.

The charge — a simple misdemeanor — is relatively minor, said Iowa City Police Department Sgt. Vicki Lalla.

"In the scheme of crimes in Iowa ... a simple misdemeanor is the least serious," she said.

Lambda Chi Alpha will mail an appeal to its chapter's suspension today, said local chapter adviser Jeff Emrich. A decision on the appeal will be made by Nov. 1.

Until the local Lambda Chi chapter sends the appeal, however, the job of the international chapter is done, said Matthew Getz, director of finance and insurance for the fraternity's international chapter.

"We've always planned our investigation to follow the police investigation."

Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations

"We've made our decision to leave campus," he said. "When they submit an appeal, the board will look at it and make a final decision."

The decision to revoke the local Lambda Chi charter was not made to protect the international chapter from a lawsuit, Getz said.

"The damage, if any, has been done," he said. "We are trying to send a message to the other 225 chapters and 12,000 undergraduates that this is not behavior the chapter condones. This is not Lambda Chi Alpha."

The UI is now ready to begin its investigation into the matter, said Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations.

"We've always planned our investigation to follow the police investigation," she said.

UI officials have not decided how they will go about investigating, Rhodes said.

"I don't know what we'll do yet," she said. "We will decide after we review the findings of the police investigation."

RHETORIC

and rebuilt east of the railroad tracks near EPB.

The unique building's walls were made from pressed corn husks covered in tin and dubbed "Big Pink" by UI faculty and staff because of its unusual color.

"The UI paid $1 each for the two barracks," Antczak said. "And from what I hear, the university got what it paid for them."

During a Vietnam War protest in 1969, Big Pink burned to the ground and the program once again was forced to move. Ochs, who is retiring in December after 30 years at the UI, said he and his colleagues lost thousands of dollars in books and files in the fire.

After the fire, the English department made room in EPB to give the Rhetoric Department a permanent home.

Though rhetoric has been through hell and high water, UI students said they feel the program can overcome a little more.

UI junior Jillian Hemphill said while the rhetoric course has good intentions, her experience with it was disappointing.

"My teacher was getting her degree in film studies," she said. "All we did was watch cheesy films at the Bijou and write film reviews. (Rhetoric) is a good idea if used as it's supposed to be, not if it's to help film majors on their thesis."

UI freshman Kristin Shaw agreed changes need to be made.

"I think it's easier than my freshman high-school English class. It's just pointless," she said.

She said the class would be more beneficial if students were assigned to read something other than essays.

UI sophomore Bob Vahl said while rhetoric was easy, it did have value.

"It helped me to get a good start off to college," he said.

After 50 years, Antczak said the department is still growing and changing to meet the times. Rhetoric may offer an undergraduate major in the future.

"Anywhere you go in Iowa, they know about the hospital and the rhetoric program," he said. "We're doing new things and not resting on old laurels."

PRESIDENTIAL PAD

was in front of me, with a large dining room to the right and a living room with a grand piano to the left.

Straight ahead there's a study surrounded by wooden bookcases. The first floor also contains the north sun room, complete with white wicker chairs and a view of the Iowa River, and another back room which contains a dining area.

There's also a large gourmet kitchen, the kind with pots and pans you're always scared will fall on you hanging above an island.

Karen McEwen, a real estate agent at Adams, Duncan, Miller, Shannen Inc., 449 Highway 1 West, estimated the house's current value.

"I checked around the office. We compared it to prices in Iowa City and agreed that it would be worth around $1 million," she said.

The 1908 construction price was $21,257 for 11,800 square feet, five bedrooms, four fireplaces, a ballroom and a view of the river.

I haven't seen a deal that good since the return of the McDonald's McRib value meal.

Mary New, assistant director of University Relations and the guide for my voyage into the "presidential palace," said that Elizabeth Rawlings, wife of former President Hunter Rawlings, went to the sun room one morning and was shocked to see the hill in the back yard washed away by the floods of '93.

New said the first floor is public and used for various receptions throughout the year.

"Interim President (Peter) Nathan uses it a lot (for receptions) — eight to 10 times a month," she said. "This is a real solid house that has been well cared for — it's public property."

We followed the off-white colored carpeting upstairs into the private living quarters. The master bedroom contained a white fireplace and a pea green bath complete with a jet spraying bath tub.

Funny thing — I told my friends I would be taking this tour, and the first thing out of their mouths was: "And you even get to see the private presidential bathrooms?"

"Yes," I had proudly replied. "There are perks to working at The Daily Iowan."

There are three other upstairs bedrooms, which have wooden floors, and a private living room with a kitchen.

I noticed the life of a president isn't all luxury and privilege, as one might think. The house only had two televisions — and they were both 1983 Zeniths.

The last time I watched a 1983 Zenith was when "Diff'rent Strokes" was prime time. I started to look for a VCR that only took Beta tapes.

The most interesting part of the tour was the third floor, which contained a bathroom, a small bedroom and a ballroom.

"This used to be a ballroom a long time ago," New said. "The Rawlings' son, Hill, used it as a bedroom."

I want to know just how much furniture Hill had — that room could fit six of my residence hall rooms.

New said the Colemans, who are scheduled to move in between Christmas and New Year's, won't do any major interior renovations.

"The kitchen and family room were renovated and enlarged in the early '80s, and there's a constant upkeep, such as tuck pointing of the brick," she said. "Ten presidents have lived in the house, starting with President Maclean."

Wait a minute. What exactly is tuck pointing and is it offered as a major at the UI? I think they might have added it as a field event for the '96 Olympics.

New said she read Coleman likes to do her own gardening. I hope the Colemans bring newer televisions; otherwise, with two 1983 Zeniths, I'd spend a lot of time outdoors, too.

of bingeing, usually two or more days each week over a six-month period, Ferguson said.

"What we found was unsuccessful dieters tended to relapse more than successful dieters," she said. "Unsuccessful dieters have the mentality that since they ate two cookies, they might as well have the whole bag."

Bingeing, or eating excessive amounts of food, might make it difficult to lose weight, but Ferguson said the emotions and attitudes surrounding overeating add to the problem.

SCHOOL BUS

"From then on out, all you heard was screaming," said Andrea Arens, 19, who was waiting for another train in this community nearly 40 miles northwest of Chicago, in a fast-growing commuter corridor at the edge of the city's suburban sprawl.

Four students were pronounced dead at the scene and one died at a hospital. Eleven were hospitalized Wednesday night, six in critical condition.

Taben Johanson, a 15-year-old who was sitting in his usual third-row seat on the bus, said the gate came down on the back of the bus and there was a car in front. Then he looked up and saw the train bearing down on them.

"I basically figured it out when all the kids were running forward, screaming," he said.

Jim Homola, a carpenter driving his children to school, said he had been stopped behind the bus and saw the approaching train. "We started screaming, 'Go! Go!'" he said. "It was over in a matter of seconds."

Homola said the bus driver "was in hysterics" afterward.

The driver, Patricia Catencamp, was taken to a hospital for evaluation.

She was filling in for the regular driver on the route, students said. The secretary of state's office said the 54-year-old woman had been licensed to drive a school bus since 1987 and had a flawless driving record.

Hours after the accident, the body of the bus lay about 10 feet from the wheels and chassis, the steering wheel jutting in the air. Red plastic sheets were draped over some of the wreckage.

A nurse who helped out at the scene, Helen Getchell, said she suctioned out the throat of one injured boy with a turkey baster obtained from a convenience store nearby.

"He died in my arms," she said, adding she hoped the boy's mother would know "he didn't die by himself."

"There were kids laying on the ground on the driver's side of the bus," said another witness, James Orlando. "It looked like they had been thrown out."

School officials could not say exactly how many people were aboard the bus.

The crossing was guarded by a gate, bells, flashing lights and signs, but there was little space between the stoplight and the tracks, said Chris Knapton, a spokesperson for Metra, the agency that operates Chicago's suburban commuter trains.

Jason Kedrok, 16, was wearing a hospital bracelet and had bruises on his face and arm when he showed up at the accident scene in the afternoon to look at the wreck he had survived.

"Just looking at it now, I can't believe I got out of it," he said.

Israel: 'Construction of the Palestinian state has started'

Hilary Appelmann
Associated Press

JENIN, West Bank — Hundreds of ecstatic Palestinians waving flags and chanting "Our revolution is victorious!" mobbed the first representatives of PLO chief Yasser Arafat's police, who arrived Wednesday as Israel began pulling troops out of the city.

Jenin is the first of seven cities to be handed to the Palestinians under the Israel-PLO autonomy agreement signed last month at the White House. The arrival of Arafat's police is the first step toward Palestinian self-rule in most West Bank towns and villages by the end of the year.

While Israeli soldiers stood back and watched, celebrating Palestinians took a flag from the crowd and hoisted it to the top of a pole in front of the just-opened Israeli-PLO liaison center, then danced cheering around the once-outlawed banner.

"We have been under occupation for 28 years and now we are witnessing history," said Kadoura Mousa, an Arafat aide. "The revolution of the construction of the Palestinian state has started."

The relatively smooth start to the Israeli pullout from Jenin, open to the world's press, contrasted sharply with last year's withdrawal from the Gaza Strip.

Israeli soldiers there packed up in the middle of the night, accompanied by gunfire and hails of stones.

Later Wednesday evening, dozens of Palestinians threw stones at Israeli troops in Jenin, slightly injuring at least one border police officer, Israel army radio said.

Israel radio said three firebombs were thrown, but caused no damage or injuries.

Wednesday was notable as much for what didn't happen as for what did.

No Israeli soldiers left the territory they have occupied for 28 years, and only 10 of the 12,000 Palestinian police to be deployed in the West Bank actually arrived — and only after agreeing to come with their guns unloaded.

But the 10 police, including five senior officers in olive drab, were given a hero's welcome at the Israel-PLO liaison office — six white trailers on the outskirts of Jenin.

"This is a moment of joy for our entire people," said Jamal Hasanat, one of hundreds of young men and boys singing and dancing in the bare dirt courtyard in the center of the trailers.

Earlier Wednesday, Israeli troops moved out of the Jenin police station, loading chairs, tables and refrigerators onto trucks as hundreds of elated Palestinians ringed the station, cheering and chanting "This is our land."

Jenin was festooned with flags, pictures of Arafat and banners welcoming the Palestinian police. A sign at the entrance to the city read, "Today Jenin, Tomorrow Jerusalem."

The full transfer of authority in Jenin won't happen until Nov. 13, when Israel will turn over the army headquarters, police station and all other government property in the city to the Palestinians, and the full contingent of 1,000 Palestinian police will start arriving.

Palestinians hoist the Palestinian flag, that will fly near the Israeli flag seen in the background, at the District Coordination Office in the West Bank town of Jenin Wednesday.

Associated Press

Withdrawal from the rest of the West Bank will also take place in stages.

Israeli troops are scheduled to be out of six towns by the end of the year and to shift positions in the seventh, Hebron, by the end of March. The pullout sets the stage for Palestinian elections, tentatively set for Jan. 20.

The gradual pullout is a far cry from Israel's hasty departure last year from Gaza and Jericho, which was completed in a matter of days.

President refuses to budge on budget cuts

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton announced Wednesday the federal budget deficit declined to $164 billion in the fiscal year that ended in September, the third straight annual decrease.

He declared at a news conference he would not cave in to a Republican threat to force the nation to the brink of an unprecedented default on its debt obligations unless he accepted what he termed extreme GOP budget cuts.

"If the Republicans plunge ahead and pass this budget, I will veto it and demand a budget that reflects our values," Clinton told reporters.

Clinton took obvious pride in the deficit figures, noting it was the first time since President Truman was in office in the 1950s that the federal deficit had declined for three straight years.

This achievement, he said, reflected the tough budget decisions he pushed through Congress during his first year in office. He said his plan had worked "better than we thought it would."

Clinton termed what Republicans were doing "economic blackmail, pure and simple."

He said they essentially were telling him he had to accept their sharp reductions in the growth of Medicare and other government social programs or "we will just stop America from honoring its obligations for the first time in its history."

A default would occur if Con-raised, the government cannot pay its debts to holders of U.S. Treasury securities.

The president's veto threat underscored his previous statements that the Republican budget plan must be changed. Clinton has argued that it would devastate the government's education and training programs, ruin health benefits for the poor and elderly and hurt the nation's prospects for future economic growth.

Separately, Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, in an interview with the AP, went beyond Clinton's remarks. He said a long-term extension of the national debt ceiling had to be enacted before the administration would begin budget talks with the Republicans.

"Those people are basically trying to undermine the democratic process by threatening to default on the federal debt," Rubin said.

Gramm lends name to NRA campaign

Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, a Republican presidential candidate, is allowing the National Rifle Association to use his name and title to solicit contributions and new members on a "U.S. senator" letterhead.

The gun lobby drafted, paid for and mailed a Gramm letter seeking donations as a "special birthday gift" for the NRA's chief lobbyist.

Public interest and gun-control groups denounced the strategy as ethically questionable. But aides to the Texas lawmaker defended it as a common fund-raising technique.

Gramm's undated letter praises the NRA's executive vice president, Wayne LaPierre, as "my friend ever since I came to Congress."

Noting LaPierre's 45th birthday is next month, Gramm asked recipients to give a friend or relative a gift membership in the NRA "as a special birthday gift to Wayne."

He called on supporters to help the NRA, whose membership has declined, to recruit 100,000 new members by year's end.

Gramm's letter was sent to NRA members on stationery marked "Phil Gramm, U.S. Senator" with an eagle seal on top. The envelope also bears a "Phil Gramm, U.S. Senator" legend.

However, despite its official appearance, the letterhead is not actually Senate stationery and the seal is not an official one. Both the gun lobby and Gramm's office said the letter was produced and mailed by the NRA.

Federal law forbids soliciting or receiving political contributions in a federal building. However, the House and Senate ethics committees have advised lawmakers not to use their office telephones, stationery or other resources in fund-raising.

Gary Koops, a Gramm campaign spokesperson, said sending the letter on stationery that looks official but isn't is a fund-raising technique used by both political parties.

"It happens all the time," Koops said. He said Gramm stood by the content of the letter and didn't think there was any ethical problem with helping the gun lobby raise money.

But Josh Goldstein of the private Center for Responsive Politics said the mailing "raises concerns. Here you have a senator who is running for the presidency who is raising money for a single-issue lobby and using his name and status to do so."

Peter Burling, a lawyer and NRA member from Cornish, N.H., said he was distressed to get the solicitation in Wednesday's mail.

"It shows how totally out of control this special interest ... money has gotten," said Burling.

White House suicide under scrutiny again

John Solomon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Shortly after learning of Vincent Foster's suicide in 1993, Hillary Rodham Clinton telephoned Hollywood producer Harry Thomason, a friend involved in the White House travel office affair that deeply troubled Foster during his final days.

Thomason's lawyer said there was nothing sinister about the call, but the Republican chairperson of the Senate Whitewater Committee is questioning why it took the White House more than two years to disclose it.

The four-minute phone call began at 11:03 p.m. EDT on July 20, 1993, and was the second call Rodham Clinton made from her mother's Little Rock, Ark., home after learning of the death that day of Foster, the deputy White House counsel and a close friend of President Clinton and his wife.

The call was on Rodham Clinton's personal telephone records, which the White House released to the AP Tuesday. Thomason's name was not on the records, and the call was only identified as to a "friend." Officials, however, confirmed the call was to Thomason.

A lawyer for Thomason, Robert Bennett, said Wednesday the first lady simply paid a "courtesy call" to inform Thomason of the death of a friend they both knew, and that nothing substantive was discussed.

"Anyone who suggests some sort of wrongdoing or impropriety or raises a question about that is a conspiratorial nut and is sick and needs psychiatric help," Bennett said.

Nonetheless, the call's timing is of interest to two separate Republican-led congressional investigations.

Both committees are trying to determine why a handwritten notebook found in Foster's briefcase after his death, which detailed Foster's extensive concerns about the travel office matter, was concealed from investigators for more than a year.

The Senate Whitewater Committee, which sought the phone records, is also trying to determine whether Rodham Clinton or two of her top advisers played any role in the decision by presidential aides to keep police away from Foster's documents.

Bennett said there was no discussion about the travel office or Foster's documents between Rodham Clinton and Thomason that night. He said Rodham Clinton probably called Thomason early on because she had just visited with him in California before flying to Arkansas.

The committee did not learn of the Thomason call until after this summer's hearings into the subject, according to the office of committee chairperson Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y.

D'Amato said the belated discovery was "another example of a disturbing pattern of late document submission" by the White House.

But White House spokesperson Mark Fabiani said presidential aides had no way of knowing about the call because we "don't have access to personal phone records."

He noted the committee did not ask for Rodham Clinton's phone records until the end of the hearings.

MAXIMUM SENTENCE: LIFE IN PRISON

Jury to decide Selena murder punishment

Michelle Koidin
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jurors Wednesday began deliberating the sentence to be given to the woman who shot Selena, after hearing a prosecutor urge them to impose a life term for silencing a "beautiful voice" that brought joy to millions.

The defense urged probation for Yolanda Saldivar, the former aide to the singer who was convicted of murder Monday.

The jury must decide on one of seven punishment options, ranging from a maximum of life in prison and a fine of up to $10,000 to a minimum of probation.

Judges in Texas almost always accept the sentence decided on by the jury.

Earlier, prosecutors called just one witness before resting their case Wednesday in the sentencing phase of the trial. Defense attorneys also rested after calling witnesses who told of Saldivar's good character.

"You have seen she is horribly remorseful," defense lawyer Douglas Tinker told jurors. "There are greater benefits if you permit her to return to society."

Assistant district attorney Mark

Skurka countered that Selena "had the right to live. She had the right to continue her career. That woman took them away from her with this .38," he said, holding the five-shot revolver which was the murder weapon.

"I'm asking you on behalf of that beautiful voice ... that voice that was silenced," another prosecutor, District Attorney Carlos Valdez, said before the jury began its deliberations about 1:10 p.m.

Selena, the queen of the style of music known as Tejano, was just 23 when she was gunned down at a Corpus Christi motel on March 31. Saldivar, who had been president of her fan club and managed her boutiques, contended the shooting was accidental, while prosecutors said it was the result of a falling-out over the business.

Life in prison would mean at least 30 years behind bars. The case did not qualify for the death penalty under Texas law.

Jurors, who convicted Saldivar of murder Monday after about two hours of deliberations, were not present for a five-hour hearing Tuesday when Nueces County prosecutors called witnesses who alleged Saldivar embezzled money from the singer.

Defense attorneys challenged the prosecution witnesses, and state District Judge Mike Westergren heard all of the state's case before agreeing the jury could consider it.

Wednesday, however, prosecutors called only Faustino Gomez, a San Antonio physician who employed Saldivar in the early 1980s.

Gomez said he did not find Saldivar a law-abiding person but did not elaborate.

Under cross-examination, he acknowledged he had not seen her for the past 10 years.

UNITED NATIONS — The snowmobiles were never used. The uniforms weren't needed. Several of 1,400 generators never made it out of their crates.

And that was just Bosnia.

A U.N. report about internal waste, released Wednesday, comes after dozens of world leaders, including President Clinton, marked the 50th anniversary of the organization with demands for financial reform and streamlining.

"The bureaucracy has grown without pruning for many years. Procedures and structures have become too rigid, frustrating creativity and individual initiative," Karl Paschke, head of the U.N. internal oversight agency, said in the group's first report.

The audit reviews the past 7 1/2 months since the agency was established under pressure from the United States and other nations. It found, for example, U.N. peacekeepers in Somalia spent 2 1/2 times as much as they needed for water and overpaid a fuel contractor by almost $1 million.

Paschke said as a result of his oversight department, some $4 million in overpayments have been recovered or prevented and an additional $13 million in savings has been identified.

"Congress is always ready to criticize, but clearly I must say that while it does not happen overnight, internal oversight is beginning to have an impact on the organization," Paschke said.

But he added that the U.N. financial crisis, caused in part by Washington's $1.3 billion debt to the organization, is undermining reform.

Paschke said a program to help retrain U.N. managers has closed and workshops postponed until next year due to lack of funding.

"This is, I believe, a terrible and very significant blow to our efforts," he said.

In a separate report released Wednesday, Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali described the organization's financial situation as "bleak" and said the organization expects, by year's end, to owe $1 billion to nations that contributed peacekeeping troops.

Unless members pay their bills, Boutros-Ghali said, the organization's ability to act "will be crippled and its continued viability will be threatened."

Snoop Dogg on tail end of racism debate

In the past month, O.J. Simpson has been acquitted of murder, close to a million African-Americans marched in our nation's capital, President Clinton gave a major speech on the subject of race relations, and Snoop Doggy Dogg's murder trial began.

Of these four events, the presumably least important trial of Snoop Doggy Dogg may tell us the most about what lies below the surface of our nation's sea of racial troubles.

On Aug. 25, 1993, a black Jeep driven by Snoop Doggy Dogg stopped at a park in Los Angeles and Dogg's bodyguard, McKinley Lee, shot and killed gang member Philip Woldermarian. Dogg and Lee say the killing was in self defense, claiming they were the intended victims of Woldermarian. The defense argues Dogg has been wrongly targeted by prosecutors.

Prosecutors say the killing is a classic example of gang warfare, that Snoop Doggy Dogg was a member of the Long Beach Insane Crips, and he and Lee hunted Woldermarian and killed him in a drive-by shooting — not unlike thousands of other such shootings which occur.

Since the murder, Snoop Doggy Dogg has gone on to become a gangsta-rap megastar. His first album, Doggystyle, has sold five million copies, and he won an American Music Award. His trial comes at a time when gangsta-rap itself is under indictment.

Doggystyle was released by Death Row records, which at the time was owned by Time Warner. Giving in to pressure from self-serving cultural critics, such as Senator Bob Dole, Time Warner has since sold its share in Death Row records.

Dole and others claim gangsta-rappers lyrics and lifestyles promote misogyny, violence, drugs and guns. Rappers, such as Snoop Doggy Dogg, are seen as nothing more than opportunists who are making millions by poisoning the minds of young Americans. This is not a difficult argument to make.

The rappers see the issue differently. Chris Wallace, a.k.a. Notorious B.I.G., said rappers rap about what they know; they don't cause reality, they simply reflect it. "You got 12-year-old kids here scared to go to school because there are other 12-year-old kids with guns, and it's a reality," rapper Heavy D said. "If there were no guns, we couldn't talk about it," Dr. Dre said. "We only talk about things that's happening." It's an age-old argument about art and society.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Gangsta-rap may not exist if young African-American men felt they had equal civil rights.

If the promises of the civil rights movement had been realized, perhaps there would be no audience for gangsta-rap. Perhaps there would be no gangstas because teens in gangs would have other opportunities. But the reality is American society has not yet fulfilled Martin Luther King's Dream.

President Clinton articulated this fact in his speech on race relations last week at the University of Texas.

"There is still unacceptable economic disparity between blacks and whites," Clinton said. "It is so fashionable to talk today about African-Americans as if they have been some sort of protected class. Many whites think blacks are getting more than their fair share in terms of jobs and promotions. That is not true."

"The truth is that African-Americans still make, on average, about 60 percent of what white people do; that more than half of African-American children live in poverty."

As Clinton spoke in Texas, hundreds of thousands of African-American men marched in Washington and were urged to pull together and eliminate violence, drugs and other social problems. Jesse Jackson, Washington Mayor Marion Barry, Rosa Parks, Maya Angelou, Betty Shabazz (the widow of Malcolm X) and Million Man March organizer Louis Farrakhan pledged a renewed effort to fight the ills in the African-American community.

Farrakhan also articulated the feelings of many African-Americans when he claimed, "The thinking of the founding fathers was that this was to be a nation by white people for white people." There are many who agree and feel whites have kept society stacked against non-white citizens.

This is why Simpson's acquittal was seen as a victory to so many. Simpson was seen to have escaped the clutches of a racist system, symbolized by the recordings of a racist Detective Mark Fuhrman.

The Simpson acquittal was no victory. Statistics suggest our justice system is shamefully unbalanced. As Clinton stated in his speech: "African-American men are many times more likely to be victims of homicide than any other group in this country; when there are more African-American men in our corrections system than in our colleges; when almost one in three African-American men in their 20s are either in jail, on parole or otherwise under the supervision of the criminal justice system — nearly one in three. And that is a disproportionate percentage in comparison to the percentage of blacks who use drugs in our society. Now, I would like every white person here and in America to take a moment to think how he or she would feel if one in three white men were in similar circumstances."

As the President's statistics show, opportunity for African-Americans is still sadly lagging behind opportunity for white Americans, and as long as that reality exists, the reality of gangstas, such as Snoop Doggy Dogg, will exist right along with it.

Cartoonist's View

Quick-change politicians — there's no place in Washington

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

If politicians compromise their beliefs, they should be replaced.

Two weeks ago, Georgia's Democratic Sen. Sam Nunn announced he would not be seeking a fifth term in office. This is especially disheartening for two reasons: his seat will probably be snatched up by a Republican, thus weakening the already pitiful Democratic minority, and the Senate will lose one of its best moderate voices.

In explaining his choice he cited the degeneration most of us have noticed taking place since the Republican landslide last November — that the voices of reason on the Hill are being "drowned out by the extremes in both parties who are usually wrong but never in doubt."

His announcement brings the number of Senate Democrats choosing not to run again after their present terms up to eight, with another probably coming next month from Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas.

For whatever reason, the retreats of these senators cannot be judged too harshly when contrasting them with the defections of two of their former comrades. Sen. Richard Shelby of Alabama jumped ship the day after the Republicans won Congress last November, and Colorado's Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell announced his defection at a March 3 press conference, surrounded by his new political colleagues.

The change-overs of these two senators are not only betrayals of their constituents' confidence, they are a dangerous form of reactionary politics that shouldn't be tolerated in the federal government. Just as it is ill-advised to change horses in midstream, it is bad policy to change riders. The honorable alternative for these two men would have been to run as Republicans when their times for re-election came up. Campbell and Shelby ran as Democrats and were elected to represent the majority of their constituents as Democrats. While voting in the Senate along strict party lines would have been a disservice to negotiation and compromise, breaking ranks shatters the original trust placed on them by the voters. Sen. Campbell should at least return $255,000 in Democratic campaign funds, although he and his staff don't believe there is a precedent for it, according to Congressional Quarterly Weekly.

Washington does not need quick-change artists. Shelby and Campbell are guilty of the worst kind of political pandering: reacting to a climate of amorphous political thinking, created in the minds of voters by the election-year fear-mongers of both parties. The reactionist rage felt by voters last year lasted long enough to give the Republicans the majority in Congress.

That brief focused attention span is all politicians require to get themselves into office. It is a natural assumption that congresspersons will serve in the best interests of the citizens they represent. Senators Campbell and Shelby have taken upon themselves the role of redeeding — outside of an electoral context — under which banner they will serve. They have elected two more Republicans to Congress because it's the popular group this season and it will probably increase their chances for re-election. They have usurped the democratic process. They are not the first and certainly will not be the last to do so. But we as voters should not let them play and win at this game. If Shelby and Campbell were willing to be self-serving turncoats once, it's a safe bet either would be willing to do it again. And if either gets re-elected, it will send a message to politicians across the country that this kind of behavior is irrelevant to the voters.

That's probably the sad truth anyway, but it hardly needs reinforcement.

Whether it is Democrats or Republicans who jump like rats from a sinking ship does not essentially matter. If our elected officials are unwilling or afraid to fight for what they believe in, then we don't need them in there. If they don't have the guts to work against adversity to attain their goals then — good riddance — let's find people who do.

American abandonment of a blue silhouette

This story is about an old homeless man.

I am thinking back to journalism class at the University of California, Irvine. I am listening to Sherlean Duke lecture about story topics. Her little plucked eyebrows bounce along to the syllables and she is wearing one of the four outfits she has rotated since the quarter started. She will later be terminated due to budget cuts and the journalism department (all two classes of it) will go with her. But she doesn't know this yet, and today, she has uncharacteristically broken from her lesson plan to tell us what makes good reporting.

Her example is an article which ran in a San Diego newspaper a few years ago. It is about an old homeless man who used to crouch outside a minimart in a residential San Diego neighborhood. He was an eccentric character who would

A few months ago I saw a program on PBS which followed a couple of homeless women for a few weeks. At one point, the two women were trying to find an appropriate box to protect themselves from the rain. What followed was a philosophical discussion on the difference between Korean boxes and American ones. (Korean boxes are "stiff and strong," whereas American boxes tend to be "thinner" and "lose their shape in wet weather.") Their conversation wasn't political; it was completely practical — which box will keep them alive through the winter?

holler hello at anyone who would listen. He was a part of the local landscape.

One cold morning a gas station attendant found the old man dead. He had slipped away during the night, sitting in his place between the ice machine and the soda dispenser. It was only when the city came to take away the body that someone noticed the faded place on the wall behind where he sat all those years, where the paint had actually worn away.

A few months ago I saw a program on PBS which followed a couple of homeless women for a few weeks. At one point, the two women were trying to find an appropriate box to protect themselves from the rain. What followed was a philosophical discussion on the difference between Korean boxes and American ones. (Korean boxes are "stiff and strong," whereas American boxes tend to be "thinner" and "lose their shape in wet weather.") Their conversation wasn't political; it was completely practical — which box will keep them alive through the winter?

Was the old man's mind that lucid? Did he pick his spot because it was protected from the wind? Or did he like the color of the blue paint behind him?

Did he have a kid he remembered holding — maybe someone he thought he saw driving by in a car or stopping in at the minimart for coffee. Was he an alcoholic, schizophrenic, a drug addict? Did he want help — or did he want to be left alone?

We live in a culture that neglects its poor. (No news there.) Currently, we are in the process of cutting what little funding there is to support them, including medical care. "Poor people," a political science professor once said, "don't have political action committees." The Republican Congress has walked past the old man on the way to the minimart a thousand times and never stopped to give him a dollar. Just like we all have. It's not that we're barbarians — in polls the American people disagree with many aspects of the congressional agenda. We've just all been too busy watching the O.J. Simpson trial to notice that they've already started implementing it.

Meanwhile, that old man is dead, those two old women are still looking for a box and the middle class just got another tax cut.

Maybe when enough paint rubs off that wall, we'll start to wonder where everybody went.

White men with license to kill

It has been pointed out to me that I recently overlooked an outstanding example of a wealthy white guy being convicted of murdering his wife.

Mike Royko is a syndicated columnist for the Chicago Tribune

These cases are worth looking at because so many of O.J. Simpson's admirers went on TV and said that it was about time an African-American man beat the legal system because white men have been doing it for years.

But it appears that these Simpson faithfuls don't know what they're talking about. Rich, poor or in the middle, husbands who kill wives seldom get away with it.

Of all murderers, they're just about the easiest to catch and convict because (a) they're the most obvious suspects, (b) they usually have a motive, (c) they are inexperienced criminals and slop clues all over the place and (d) may quickly confess.

You may have voted that Simpson neatly fits the A, B and C parts of his killer profile, which means he's a lucky fellow to be out there swatting golf balls, smiling at the TV cameras and considering exploitation deals that will restore his millionaire status.

Far less lucky was Edward Lyng, who is sitting in prison and surely wondering what a guy has to do to get away with murder.

Lyng was the wealthy owner of a vending machine company back in 1977. Then barely 40 years old, he had a big suburban house, an attractive wife and a couple of nice kids.

But, alas, the romance was gone. He also had a good-looking mistress. Such things happen, and his irate wife headed for divorce court.

Then one day, she vanished. Her abandoned car, the inside stained with blood, was found at O'Hare. But she was gone.

The cops figured Lyng killed her to avoid shelling out big bucks for a settlement, alimony and child support. And maybe he didn't care much for her anymore.

You may have noted that Simpson neatly fits the A, B and C parts of this killer profile, which means he's a lucky fellow to be out there swatting golf balls, smiling at the TV cameras and considering exploitation deals that will restore his millionaire status.

But the cops had several serious handicaps. They didn't know where her body was. It's always good to have a body in a murder case. They didn't have a murder weapon either, which can be a problem.

And Lyng had an alibi. The woman who was his girlfriend said he was with her when the wife vanished.

So the years went by and Lyng — to use Simpson's phrase — got on with his life.

The cops were sure he did it. His kids suspected that he did it. His wife's relatives were sure he did it. So did just about everyone who knew him and her.

But without a body, a weapon or even one tiny piece of evidence, all they could do was give him dirty looks.

Eventually, though, the romance went out of his affair with his mistress. And for some reason — a guilty conscience or being spurned — she finally told the cops what she knew.

She didn't know where the body was. Or the murder weapons. But she said that Lyng had told her he did the murder and she admitted the alibi she had provided was a lie.

So 17 years after the wife disappeared, Lyng was finally charged with the crime and put on trial.

A betting man would have said he would beat the rap.

He had one of Chicago's best criminal defense lawyers. The body and weapons were still gone. And his ex-mistress had lied once before so why should a jury believe her now?

But surprise, surprise, surprise! The jury spent two days deliberating. Quite a long time when you consider that there was no DNA, no bloody gloves, no Kato telling of bumps in the night, no limo driver, no abused wife's hysterical voice on a 911 tape.

Not much of anything, really, except a motive, a window of opportunity and the dubious testimony of an ex-mistress.

But the white cops and prosecutors offered skimpy evidence, all those white jurors spent many hours deliberating toward a guilty verdict and a white judge sent Lyng to prison.

All based on the most circumstantial evidence imaginable.

It must be the times we live in. A rich white guy just don't get no respect.

Why, he wasn't even offered a book deal.

Flight story had its ups and downs

To the Editor:

A short note to congratulate you on your coverage of the recent small-plane crash in Iowa City. You did a good job, and did NOT resort to "Slammed into the ground," "Fell from the skies," "narrowly missed a hospital/orphanage/old folk's home/nursery/whatever" — we see altogether too much of that in both the East and West coast reporting.

Your accurate and straightforward article was very gratifying to read.

But I have flown into Iowa City by my own small plane a number of times, and it's a fine airport. I see no need for any changes. It does not "jeopardize neighborhoods." Engine failures are incredibly rare — probably because the engines cost $10,000 to $20,000 a piece.

Your quote said "the two bottom (propellers) looked normal" — there's only one propeller on a single-engine plane. Two, or three (in this case) blades, non props. If air crafts do indeed "fly low around here all the time," someone might talk the Certified Flight Instructors at the airport. In the old days, we were taught to fly high enough so we could glide to the airport from most anywhere, if the engine quits. I suspect they don't recommend this any more. We weren't there of course, but if the engine "died twice in the air," presumably it was producing power in between times. That's the time to climb as much as possible! And there's nothing wrong with the Cessna 210, a fine aircraft. Incidentally, it is one of the most popular models stolen by the druggies because it is so good. And 210's never "flooded the market" — the market itself was killed by liability-insurance costs, for all models of small planes.

But you've done a good job, way better than average.

Bicyclists should be rewarded, not thwarted

To the Editor:

The UI Department of Parking and Transportation gets an environmental grade of "F" for its recent barrage of anti-bicyclist propaganda. Some of their descriptions of bicyclists have reached absurd levels.

Their first advertisements warn against the evils of locking a bicycle to a tree, an activity which allegedly goes against "common sense" and is "unsafe" (for the tree?). I work at Phillips Hall, where the UI has supplied bike racks to accommodate 20 bicycles. However, it doesn't take a genius to figure out at any given hour there may be more than 20 people in the building.

Their latest ad (Oct. 23), printed just days after the UI pumped more chemicals onto the Pentacrest lawns, depicts bicyclists as ruthless plunderers of the environment — recklessly destroying both flora and fauna. (Are the squirrels really that stupid, slow and helpless?)

Of course, we may all have seen an occasional cyclist weave in and out of traffic. These cyclists should be more careful. But it is ludicrous to label those of us who choose not to crowd our streets with more unnecessary cars, which use up nonrenewable energy resources, as being nonsensical, dangerous and malicious.

Council should focus on individuals

To the Editor:

Iowa City has been my home for many years and I care about the issues which shape its present and future. I don't want my tax dollars wasted, but neither do I want to live in a city that only cares about the bottom line. I want a city council that represents me, but I know other perspectives need to be represented too. I don't want a city council which protects only the interests of the business community, developers, the more affluent or of any other one group.

I'll be voting for Karen Kubby, Bruno Pigott, Julianna Johnston and Dee Norton, because I believe this group of candidates will, along with Ernie Lehman, Naomi Novick and Larry Baker, best represent the diverse interests of Iowa City

Only one true God

To the Editor:

The intensity of Kim Painter's rebuke of Campus Crusade for Christ is reminiscent of the Old Testament prophets, but her message is vastly different.

The prophets of old called people to repent before a holy God. Painter, on the other hand, sternly warns against those who dare suggest there may be homosexuals who recognize they need help from a holy and loving God.

In her crusade, Painter has crafted a god unlike that of the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures. She wisely evades the question of authority (On what basis can she claim to know what she knows?) because she would have to admit, if pressed, that we should trust her understanding of God simply because she says so.

Given this framework, what is her god like? He (she, it) created women to masturbate with other women and men to have anal and oral sex with other men. We're not told why this god created some to have sex in homosexual fashion and some in heterosexual ways, but we do know it cares most about staying the course, living within a predetermined pattern of homosexuality.

This god certainly hates the suggestion that people could have chosen homosexuality or that they might want to choose differently. And the idea that this god might offer any help if someone chose to live differently is laughable.

Campus Crusade and others who accept the authority of the Bible, rather than Painter, know a holy God who in his love and wisdom made men and women for each other. He created sex for the mystical unity a husband and wife can have, with such intimacy, and so he could give them children.

This God will not let anyone be content outside of a relationship with him and he sets the terms. He is knowable, holy and the only hope anyone has for wholeness of any sort and in sexual matters — as in all of life. Campus Crusade did well to offer hope to anyone looking for help from the one, true God.

Council race sounds like trouble

To the Editor:

I am troubled by the tone and implications of statements made by some candidates in the current city council race. Candidates Howie Vernon, Dee Vanderhoef and Dean Thornberry have all offered variations on what has become the mantra of the national Republican Party: Government is bad. In local politics, this argument is usually phrased as a broad resentment of political meddling in the local economy of "micromanagement" or of the contentious pattern of local decision making. What are we to make of these sentiments?

First, I think they contain a basic contradiction. National Republicans have long pressed the message that federal responsibilities should be relinquished to smaller units of government, that local control should replace the impersonality and inefficiency of "big government." Indeed, the federal contribution to the city budget has tumbled since the early 1980s and the GOP Congress threatens to send new burdens our way.

The logical conclusion of Republican rhetoric, then, is that local government is more important. (Although, as the "Contract With America" fully recognizes, states and municipalities lack the resources to pick up the federal pieces). We should take our new responsibilities seriously. Rather than blindly helping Gingrich and others chip away at the dam of "big government," local conservatives should realize they are standing down river. Do we really want sympathizers with the Gingrich vision on city council when the dam breaks?

Second, I think these sentiments mark a basic confusion over the promise of local democracy. Careful consideration of the issues and taking the time to listen to many voices is what self-government is all about. This is neither "meddling" nor "micromanagement." It is popular democratic participation at a level of government in which citizens and elected officials can and do actually talk to each other.

Notre Dame fan sues over botched tattoo

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Dan O'Connor is fighting mad. Not "fighting." "Fighting."

The Notre Dame fan went to a tattoo parlor in August for a permanent symbol of his allegiance to the school's Fighting Irish — a $125 drawing of the university's leprechaun mascot.

But when O'Connor took the bandages off his upper arm, his girlfriend began laughing.

The inscription read: "Fighting Irish."

"I was irate, and for a minute or two after I cooled down I kind of giggled," he said. "But I can't just live with this. You're not talking about a dented car where you can get another one ... you're talking about flesh."

On Monday, the 22-year-old from Lodi, N.J., sued the Tattoo Shoppe in Carlstadt, seeking unspecified damages.

O'Connor said he was humiliated by the typo. His friends call him "Fighting." And even his girlfriend mocks the dropped "t."

O'Connor's lawyer, Marc Chase, said it would cost about $700 for a laser procedure to remove the tattoo. O'Connor also wants compensation for pain and suffering.

Astronaut throws out World Series first pitch in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An astronaut uncorked what he called the fastest slowball in the world Wednesday.

Commander Kenneth Bowersox threw an oh-so-slow pitch aboard the orbiting space shuttle Columbia for a videotaped World Series promo.

The shuttle was speeding around Earth at 17,500 mph; a major-league fastball is a mere 95 mph or so.

It took seven takes to make the video of Bowersox throwing out the first ball of the fifth game of the series. The best take will be broadcast at the start of today's game between the Cleveland Indians and Atlanta Braves.

"We've been on orbit since last Friday conducting science experiments as part of the United States microgravity laboratory," Bowersox said.

"But tonight, our thoughts are with the national pastime. To the Braves and to the Indians, good luck in Game 5 of the World Series. Now let's play ball!"

Replied Mission Control: "We'll send the best one to major league baseball. I think the rest will go to 'America's Funniest Home Videos.'"

The stunt was filmed inside Columbia's bus-size laboratory, which is far roomier than the cockpit. Bowersox had to be careful not to throw the baseball too hard and damage something.

Imelda Marcos given spot in Philippine legislature

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Supreme Court cleared the way Wednesday for Imelda Marcos to be declared a winner in last May's elections and to take her seat in the legislature.

The court voted 9-6 to dismiss a motion questioning the qualifications of the widow of former dictator Ferdinand Marcos to represent her district in the central Philippine province of Leyte.

"I have never been as excited and as enthusiastic," she told reporters at her suburban luxury condominium.

She said she will announce her "visions and programs" after she takes office. Marcos stressed that although she was "a minority of one," she will cooperate with other members of congress "for the good of our country."

The election commission disqualified Marcos as a candidate for the House of Representatives, saying she failed to meet residency requirements. But she continued her campaign.

Election officials acknowledged she won the three-way race, beating Cirilo Montejo, her closest rival, by more than 33,000 votes.

GOP balanced budget proposal reaches Congress

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defying a strongly-worded veto threat, Republicans pushed legislation to the floor of Congress on Wednesday that would balance the budget, cut taxes and reshape government. "We have been waiting 40 years for this moment," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

With showdown votes set for later in the week, President Clinton said the measure would threaten Medicare, education and the environment. He also accused the GOP leadership of "economic blackmail, pure and simple" for saying they would refuse to extend the government's borrowing authority if the White House didn't agree to sign the budget bill.

Enunciating his opposition to that legislation itself, Clinton said: "If the Republicans plunge ahead and pass this budget, I will veto it and demand a budget that reflects our values."

For their part, Dole and House Speaker

Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., worked through the day to ease concerns of wavering Republicans, from farm-state lawmakers unhappy with the House measure to Senate moderates seeking more funds for education and other social programs.

The GOP high command exuded confidence that the measure, designed to balance the budget in seven years, would pass when the roll was called later in the week in both houses. The bill was the centerpiece of the Republican revolution launched last January, and the party's leaders said it heralded a once-in-a-generation shift in American government.

"It is not quite comparable to the New Deal, but it is certainly on the same scale as the Great Society" said Gingrich, the first Republican speaker in four decades.

Despite Clinton's veto threat, there was a widespread expectation there was still time later this fall for negotiations between the White House and Congress on a balanced-budget plan.

Anheuser-Busch puts Cards on the block

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The traditional St. Louis combination of beer and baseball is breaking up — Anheuser-Busch is selling the Cardinals.

Anheuser-Busch, owner of the team for 42 years, made the surprise announcement Wednesday.

The company said the sale, expected to be completed in June, is part of a plan to concentrate on its core businesses of beer, theme parks and aluminum cans.

"We concluded it was in the best interest of everyone, including the Cardinals and the fans, to seek a new owner," brewery chairman and president August Busch III said.

Brewery spokesman John Jacob said they will try to sell the team to a local buyer, or at least to owners who would keep the Cardinals in St. Louis.

But, he added, there is no guarantee the team will not be moved.

"Anything could happen," Jacob said.

Financial World magazine estimated the value of the team at $110 million.

Tony La Russa, who signed a two-year contract to manage the team earlier this week, said he was surprised when told of the Cardinals' situation.

"I started recoiling," La Russa said. "Part of the attraction of the St. Louis Cardinals, for me a lot was attached to the Busch family and Anheuser-Busch."

Anheuser-Busch is offering the team as part of a package that also includes Busch Stadium and two downtown parking garages near the stadium.

If the buyer also owns Busch Stadium, they will be more likely to keep the team in St. Louis since there is no other significant use for the stadium.

Morrison charged with misdemeanor assault

JAY, Okla. (AP) — A lawyer for Tommy Morrison posted $1,000 bond for the heavyweight boxer Wednesday and entered an innocent plea on his behalf on two misdemeanor counts of assault and battery.

The plea came one day after prosecutors filed charges alleging Morrison punched one woman and bit another.

Arraignment originally was scheduled for Thursday but the district attorney's office said Morrison's lawyer asked to enter a plea Wednesday.

Prosecutors had asked for $1,000 bond on each count, but a Delaware County District Court judge reduced the amount to $500 on each count. No warrant was ever issued in the case.

The allegations stem from two incidents on Oct. 15 near Morrison's hometown of Jay in northeastern Oklahoma.

Prosecutors allege Morrison struck Tammy Witt, the mother of his 5-year-old son, in the face with his closed fist. He also is accused of biting the finger of Kim Dunham of Jay.

The case has been placed on the court's Jan. 11 misdemeanor docket.

Morrison has a 45-3-1 record with 39 knockouts. He was stopped in the sixth round by Lennox Lewis on Oct. 7.

Braves take 3-1 series lead

CLEVELAND — Even the Atlanta Braves will be hard-pressed to blow this.

The Braves, behind Steve Avery, moved within one victory of the World Series championship that has always eluded them, beating the Cleveland Indians 5-2 Wednesday night for a 3-1 lead.

Atlanta, whose postseason history is filled with failure, could not ask for a better position.

Three-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux, who pitched a two-hitter in the opener, will try to clinch it Thursday night in Game 5 against Orel Hershiser.

Even if they lose, the Braves will head home with two more chances to win. The stats are on their side, too: Of the 39 teams taking a 3-1 edge in the Series, 33 have won it.

After sixth-inning homers by Ryan Klesko and Albert Belle left it tied at 1, the Braves broke it open with three runs in the seventh. Luis Polonia's go-ahead double chased Ken Hill, and David Justice hit a two-out, two-run single off Paul Assenmacher.

Tennis team mourns loss of friend

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

In a tragic turn of events, the Iowa men's tennis team was forced to say goodbye to a dear friend on Monday.

David Wayne Talbott, 34, a first-year volunteer assistant coach for the Iowa Hawkeyes, died Monday from injuries he received in a car accident in Missouri.

Iowa coach Steve Houghton said he was deeply saddened to lose a coach of Talbott's caliber.

"It's a real big loss for our tennis program," Houghton said. "He jumped right in and in just two months he did a lot of good. He's probably as knowledgeable about tennis as anyone I know."

Houghton said Talbott's love for the sport was one of his greatest assets.

"He had a real good sense of sort of getting to the core of what a particular player's mechanical problem might be," Houghton said. "It's kind of a thankless job being a volunteer assistant because you don't get paid, but he was doing it out of his own interests.

"He loved what he was doing and was really enthused. The players responded well to him."

"I'm still kind of in shock about it. I just keep waiting for him to appear."

Cary Vorheis, Iowa head tennis pro, on his friend David Talbott

Sophomore Ryan Johnstone said he attributed most of his fall success to the work of Talbott and Iowa's other assistant coach, Charles Darley.

"It's going to be real hard for everyone to get over it," Johnstone said. "I was working a lot with he and Charlie. Those guys made all the difference. They changed some things in my game and helped me with some stuff I was struggling with."

Prior to joining Houghton at the University of Iowa in August, Talbott served as an assistant coach at the University of New Mexico, Tulane and as head coach at Kenyon College in Ohio. He was formerly a world-ranked tennis player and was a frequent participant in the Midlands Open. In 1980, Talbott compiled an 11-10 singles record and an 8-9 doubles record as a member of the Iowa State men's tennis team. Talbott played on the Iowa City City High tennis team where he and teammate Cary Vorheis advanced to the state doubles finals in 1979 before falling to a team from Bettendorf.

Vorheis, the University of Iowa's head tennis pro, said he still

Big Eight powers collide Saturday

Dave Zelio

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Colorado and Nebraska have settled the Big Eight Conference title and an Orange Bowl berth in a big game with national title implications and lofty rankings on the line for the last seven years.

This year is a little different. The rankings are still there. And No. 2 Nebraska (7-0, 3-0 Big Eight) and No. 7 Colorado (6-1, 2-1) still will receive regional television exposure, but there just isn't the drama of past Buffalo-Husker clashes.

Nebraska tailback Lawrence Phillips stole the show without trying Tuesday by coming back to practice.

It was the first appearance on the field for Phillips since his Sept. 10 suspension for hitting a former girlfriend.

Iowa forward Russ Millard, seen here talking with Coach Tom Davis, is primed to make the most out of his senior season.

Hawks need big finale from Millard

David Schwartz

The Daily Iowan

How appropriate that the day before the Hawkeye forward made his freshman debut, The Daily Iowan led with, "For Russ Millard, the wait is over."

Now a senior, Millard has played less than four full semesters, plagued by injuries and academic problems.

But that's all in the past.

"It's my senior year, there are a lot of things that I want to do," Millard said. "It was unfortunate that I couldn't do it last year, but I'm just gonna work hard this year and whatever happens, happens."

Last season was frustrating for Millard, who missed the entire first semester with academic problems after a promising sophomore season, then returned for Iowa's spring semester only to wage war with a new opponent: pneumonia.

Millard also missed the first half of the '92-'93 campaign due to academics, this after redshirting the previous year. It wasn't until January 28, 1993 — nine days after the passing of Chris Street — that the highly touted Millard made his debut against Michigan State.

Now, with his career at Iowa reaching its final act, Millard will be making one last curtain call, one he hopes will lead to the Meadowslands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J., April 1 at the NCAA title game.

And if the Hawkeye players insurance run against Alan Embree, and sent a few of the 43,578 fans to the exits at quiet Jacobs Field.

A day after the Indians rapped 12 hits in a 7-6, 11-inning win, Avery Avelly limited them to three hits over six innings. Greg McMichael followed with two scoreless innings.

Mark Wohlers, whose 2 2-3-inning stint Tuesday night was his longest of the season, took over in the ninth with a 5-1 lead was tagged for Manny Ramirez's leadoff homer and a double by pinch-hitter Paul Sorrento. Manager Bobby Cox wasted no time in bringing in Pedro Borbon, who struck out Jim Thome and Sandy Alomar and retired Kenny Lofton on a liner to right in his second appearance of the postseason and first in 19 days.

Lofton went 0-for-5 one game after reaching base in all six plate appearances.

MILLARD

and coaches have any intentions of making the Final Four, they'll realize Millard's significance.

"What he has is what we need," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "We need rebounding and we need rebounding strength at both ends of the court."

Fellow senior Kenyon Murray said Millard's stable presence will help exponentially.

"It's going to be great because Russ showed signs sophomore year that he can be a great interior player," Murray said. "I think having him for a full season is going to add a lot more depth."

"We're not going to have to rely on the young guys to play a lot of minutes. Russ is going to come in

Not since the 1991 Series, when the Braves held a 3-2 lead over Minnesota, have they been in such a good spot. That year, they lost the last two games at the Metrodome to the Twins, and then Atlanta lost the 1992 Series in six games to Toronto.

Marquis Grissom had three for the Braves. He scored the go-ahead run in the seventh on Polonia's double after drawing a one-out walk.

Avery, who earned this start with six shutout innings in the pennant-clinching win over Cincinnati on Oct. 14, managed to avoid trouble despite several well-hit balls early in the game.

After working his way through the lineup the first time and giving up two hits, Avery, who is 5-2 career in the postseason, did not allow a hit until Belle homered with two outs in the sixth. Belle had not swung all evening, taking seven balls and seven strikes, until lining an opposite-field drive into the Braves bullpen in right.

Right before the pitch, Avery started and then stopped his windup. When he resumed, Belle hit his first Series homer, a shot that seemed to send Avery into a bit of a spin.

Eddie Murray, after thinking he'd hit a double until being told by second-base umpire Joe Brinkman that his grounder down the left-field line was foul, walked on a full count.

Avery then caught his cleats while going into his stretch, stumbled backward off the mound and was called for a balk. He went ahead and intentionally walked Ramirez and, perhaps sensing this was his last batter, struck out Herbert Perry swinging on a nasty, down-and-in slider.

Avery, having thrown 109 pitches, was pulled after preserving the 1-1 tie in a start that many questioned because it moved Maddux back one day and meant the ace could only work one more time in the Series.

The Braves came back to break it open, and McMichael relieved to start the bottom of the seventh with a 4-1 lead.

Hill, who got to start because of seven shutout innings against Seattle in Game 4 of the AL playoffs, worked out of jams all evening.

The Braves put a runner in scoring position in four of the first five innings without getting a run. Twice, Hill pitched around McGriff and walked him with a runner on third before retiring Justice.

When they faced each other in the NL, Justice was just 1-for-25 (.040) lifetime against Hill. McGriff, meanwhile, was 9-for-33 (.273) with three home runs off Hill.

Klesko showed NL designated hitters could be effective, too, when he homered for the second straight night. Klesko, the DH while Polonia played left field, hit a drive into the right-center field stands with one out in the sixth for a 1-0 lead.

and do what he knows how to do and hopefully secure himself a starting job and secure us a potent center threat."

Millard's sophomore outing — the only full season he's played — teased Iowa fans with flashes of brilliance. He averaged 11.2 points and 5.3 rebounds per game.

The most memorable of Millard's sophomore performances was a game against Duke in which he scored 25 points while snagging eight rebounds against the Blue Devils, led by Grant Hill and Cherokee Parks.

Millard is confident he can return to sophomore form and then some, but recognizes that after nearly a full year off, it won't be easy.

"I think I can reach that level again, but you know, it was just a game," Millard said. "I just want to get out there and play the game. I love the game and if I play well, then I play well."

Davis said it will take some time before he's able to accurately judge Millard's performance, but the Hawkeye coach got a pretty good indication this summer during the Prime Time League, where Millard was the league's top scorer.

"We just have to wait and see," Davis said. "He looked really good in the Prime Time League this summer. He's a great guy to work with, a beautiful team player — very unselfish."

One of Millard's summer teammates was former Hawkeye Gerry Wright — Sir Jamalot — who played at Iowa in the mid-80s.

Talbott was the owner of the Sports and Entertainment Gallery in Iowa City and the son of School of Journalism and Mass Communication professor Albert Talbott and his wife, Rose.

Talbott is survived by his wife, Maricel and sons Marty and Daniel of Columbus, Ohio, as well as his father- and mother-in-law, Dr. Antonio and Dr. Gloria Mortera of Dublin, Ohio.

"He can start for any team in the Big Ten," said Wright.

Having sacrificed so much playing time to non-basketball related factors, it would be easy to think Millard would feel a sense of urgency. However, his teammates think otherwise.

"I don't really think so, I think he's just happy playing a full year," sophomore Greg Helmers said. "I do know we'll finally get a chance to see what he can really do."

But no matter how Millard and the Hawkeyes perform this season, Davis said his senior will participate in at least one postseason ceremony, one which far exceeds any of his accomplishments on the basketball court: graduation.

Visitation will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. today at Schoedinger Northwest Chapel in Columbus. The funeral will be held at St. Peter Catholic Church in Columbus, with burial in the Dublin Cemetery. Memorials may be made to the Marty and Daniel Talbott Educational Fund c/o Bank One, 3250 Tremont Road, Columbus, Ohio 43221.

PREPARING FOR ATLANTA

Sanders does it all on the practice field

Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Deion Sanders is the busiest Cowboy on the practice field. One minute he's wearing a blue jersey and playing defense, the next minute he's wearing a white jersey and is on offense, and the next he's over with the special teams returning kicks.

"I just can't wait to see him in action on Sunday, I hope we get to see his touchdown dance," said Emmitt Smith of Sanders' Dallas debut at Atlanta on Sunday.

Sanders will be coming at his former team from two directions, and maybe three.

He'll start on defense in place of Clayton Holmes and is expected to play on offense where the coaches have a trick play they might spring on the Falcons. He also might be on the special teams should coach Barry Switzer feel he is needed.

Atlanta coach June Jones knows the Falcons will get hit with the complete package.

"Nobody is more aware than I am what he can do on offense," Jones said. "If he was a fulltime receiver he'd be in the Pro Bowl. As a receiver he will be the fastest guy on the field. When he catches the ball, he even gets faster."

On defense, Sanders' talents are self evident as the 1994 winner of the NFL's defensive player of the year.

"He's the best cover corner to ever play the game," Jones said. As a kick returner, Jones rates

Sanders the best in the NFL.

"There's nothing he can't do," Jones said. "We even had him at quarterback on goal line situations to run the option."

With all this talent, it's a wonder the Falcons ever let Deion go. Sanders said earlier this week they never made a bid to keep him.

"They never offered me a dime," he said. "They were not at the same level I wanted to be on. I wanted to win the Super Bowl. So, I had to move on."

Sanders has been all business as he prepares to return to what he calls "my house," the Georgia Dome. He buzzed through the locker room at Valley Ranch on Wednesday with his mind on the Falcons not feeding quotes to the assembled media masses.

His best "neon Deion" grin was absent as he plodded through the dressing room wearing his Nike sandals. "No, no, no, no," Sanders said to interview requests.

Smith, wearing a wide grin at a nearby locker, spoke for Sanders.

"Deion is going to get a bunch of boos," Smith said. "But he can quiet all that down with one big play."

Smith said he understood "Prime Time's" unusual reluctance to avoid reporters.

"He wants to totally concentrate on what needs to be done," Smith said. "He'll lighten up later. If I was in his shoes, I know how he'd feel. He's going to be against the team he used to play for. It could be his biggest game of the season."

Dallas Cowboys' newest addition, Deion Sanders, carries his equipment following the team's workout Wednesday in Irving, Texas.

BACK FROM INJURY

Marino returns to lead Miami

Steven Wine
Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — A bruised hip and three consecutive losses have left Dan Marino sore.

Surrounded by 20 reporters and cameramen, Marino grimaced, glared and gritted his teeth while answering questions about his likely return to the lineup Sunday against Buffalo.

The Miami Dolphins' quarterback appeared angry, and he is.

"I'm upset with the fact we're 4-3," he said. "I really believe we're a team that should be 7-0."

Miami was 4-0 when Marino hurt his hip and tore cartilage in his right knee Oct. 8 against Indianapolis. The Dolphins lost that game, which Marino finished, and the next two, which he missed.

Marino practiced Wednesday for the first time since being hurt. He looked rusty and is listed as questionable for the game against AFC East rival Buffalo (5-2), but he expects to play.

"I don't feel as good as I did at the beginning of the season, that's for sure," said Marino, 34. "I'm not as healthy as I want to be. I've just got to go, and that's the way it is."

Marino knows that the Dolphins need him on the field. They've lost the past seven games he didn't start.

"To see your team leader come back is going to be an inspiration to both the offense and defense," receiver O.J. McDuffie said. "I think it's going to be the lift this team needs."

Bernie Kosar started in place of Marino, throwing five interceptions and losing two fumbles in losses to New Orleans and the New York Jets, both last-place teams.

Marino bristled Wednesday at questions about the offensive line and team unity. But when asked if he's angry, Marino tried to smile.

"I feel like we should have a better record. I'm upset because of that," he said.

"The last two weeks have been hard for me because I feel I could have made a difference in the games, and maybe we wouldn't be in the position that we're in."

The injuries were Marino's most serious since he missed the final 11 games in 1993 with a ruptured

Achilles' tendon.

"I never wore hip pads before," he said, "but I will from now on."

Back in the lineup, Marino will resume pursuit of NFL career passing records held by Fran Tarkenton for touchdowns, yardage and attempts. Marino broke Tarkenton's record for completions earlier this season.

But Marino's primary objective remains his first Super Bowl ring. Miami was the preseason favorite to win the AFC, but the losing streak has aroused doubts. The toughest part of their schedule looms, with little margin for error.

"To be in the position where we want to be," Marino said, "I feel we need to win the rest of our games."

THE FACTS ABOUT DRINKING AT THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA

60% of college students did not binge drink in the past month. "If I do drink it is in moderation. I don't ever want to get to a point where I would embarrass myself or be unable to control my actions."
-Colin Mattiace, Baseball

61% of college students do not drink just to get drunk. Most drink to socialize. "Most of them drink to be cool and to try to fit in."
-Martha Vandervoort, Women's Cross Country

90% of UI students managed to use alcohol without getting injured. What bothers her about friends who drink too much? "They become different people when they are drunk and it is always for the worse."
-Karen Clayton, Women's Basketball

Nebraska tries to avoid CU stampede

Rick Warner
Associated Press

Lawrence Phillips is practicing with second-ranked Nebraska again, but he won't play against No. 7 Colorado on Saturday. The Huskers won't miss him.

Nebraska has already shown it can win without its star running back, who was suspended after attacking his former girlfriend on Sept. 10. Playing without Phillips, who returned to the team Tuesday, the Huskers have won their last five games by an average score of 53-16.

Granted, their only ranked opponent during that stretch was No. 14 Kansas State. But Nebraska's powerful rushing attack, which leads the nation with 427 yards per game, has continued to thrive in Phillips' absence.

Freshman Ahman Green is averaging 103 yards per game and 8.2 yards per carry. The Huskers also have three other talented tailbacks — Damon Benning, Clinton Childs and James Sims, who is averaging almost 10 yards per carry.

That's bad news for Colorado, which allowed Iowa State's Troy Davis to gain 203 yards last week.

"But you know what? Kids find a way to rise up and I'm excited about our chances," Buffaloes coach Rick Neuheisel said.

Colorado quarterback John Hessler has done a good job filling in for Koy Detmer, out for the season with a knee injury. But the quarterback to watch in Saturday's game at Boulder is Nebraska's Tommie Frazier.

Frazier is the most dangerous running QB in the country and an improved passer who threw for a career-high four TDs last week against Kansas State. He's also 27-1 in regular-season starts.

After watching its national title hopes go down the drain against Kansas, Colorado would love to spoil Nebraska's bid for a second straight championship. However, the Huskers (minus 7 1/2) won't let that happen. ... NEBRASKA 27-17. No. 3 Florida (minus 24) at Georgia

Three Wildcats hit with assault charges

Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. — No additional disciplinary action is planned against three Kansas State football players arrested this week and charged in an August assault, coach Bill Snyder said today.

Backup quarterback Brian Kavanagh, 22, linebacker Percell Gaskins, 23, and defensive end Nyle Wiren, 22, were arrested Tuesday.

Each was charged with two counts of battery and one count each of criminal damage to property, conspiracy to commit battery and cruelty to animals. The charges stem from an Aug. 20 confrontation in Manhattan in which the players are accused of injuring two men and a dog.

Snyder, in a statement through the school's sports information department, said the issue was dealt with before the season started.

"The misdemeanor charges as they pertain to these three young men are not entirely accurate," he said. "The disciplinary measures were handled at the time of the incident and are still being administered where they are appropriate."

Snyder had no comment beyond the prepared statement, including what discipline the players faced earlier, sports information director Ben Boyle said.

Both Gaskins and Wiren are starters for the 14th-ranked Wildcats. Asked whether they would play in Saturday's home game against No. 6 Kansas, Boyle said he could not add to Snyder's statement.

The players turned themselves in at the local police station Tuesday, Riley County Police Sgt. Kurt Moldrup said.

They appeared before a judge and were released on their own recognizance.

According to police, trouble began the morning of Aug. 20 when two Kansas State football players complained about music coming from a house. That turned into a fight in which the players were hurt.

A larger group of players returned around 10 a.m. A victim, Steve Kirkland, told police several players broke into the house and assaulted him and his roommate, Matthew Aupperle, and threw a piece of concrete that hit Aupperle's dog.

The men suffered superficial injuries. Kirkland claimed he and Aupperle were not involved in the initial confrontation.

"There were seven or eight players who actually went to the building," said Alvan Johnson, director of Riley County police. "When it got down to the bottom line, there were only three players we could identify and prove they were involved."

All three face potential fines and jail time. Their court date was scheduled for 1 p.m., Nov. 1.

Shaquille O'Neal gives the peace sign with his bandaged hand after leaving the Orlando Arena after Tuesday night's preseason game.

THUMBS DOWN

Shaq attack sidelined until the holidays

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal will have surgery on his broken right thumb and may be sidelined until just before New Year's.

"I want to be playing by Christmas, but I'm not going to rush anything," O'Neal said Wednesday. "My team is good enough to where they can hold their own without me."

The 7-foot center who led the Orlando Magic to the NBA Finals last season is to have an operation Thursday, a minor procedure to repair a piece of the bone in his thumb.

"He will be out of competitive basketball for approximately six to eight weeks after surgery," Dr. Richard Shure of the Jewett Orthopaedic Clinic said Wednesday after examining O'Neal.

O'Neal said his thumb was bent back flat Tuesday night when he was raked across the hand by Miami center Matt Geiger on a move to the basket in the second quarter of the Magic's 106-91 exhibition victory.

Geiger was not called for a foul. In fact, O'Neal was called for traveling as he spun along the baseline and went for what looked like a dunk.

Immediately after the injury, O'Neal was furious and threatened to "show ... some of my Shaq-Fu stuff" to any other player who put a similar move on him.

By Wednesday, O'Neal had cooled off.

"It's not a matter of getting revenge anymore, it happened and now it's over," O'Neal said. "But somebody needs to do something. I think some coaches tell their players to come in and chop me and hope I get mad and throw a punch or something and get thrown out. I guess that's a good tactic, but it's not right. I've got to be able to protect myself."

Geiger said the Heat's strategy was to foul O'Neal if he got the ball in too close.

"It was a just a normal foul," he said. "There was nothing personal about it."

Added the Heat's Billy Owens: "You're going to get fouled because he's not a good free throw shooter. You got to expect that."

But some of O'Neal's teammates were bitter.

"A hard foul is a hard foul, but not when you're out there trying to hurt somebody," Horace Grant said. "That foul was ridiculous."

There was no word how the Magic will fill the center spot although they signed veteran Jon Koncak as O'Neal's backup in the offseason.

"Obviously I'm not going to provide the offense that Shaquille did, but that's not why they brought me here," Koncak said. "I came here to help with the defense and rebounding and step in if there was an emergency."

In Tuesday's game, O'Neal finished with 11 points in 13 minutes. He was 4-for-6 from the field and 3-for-4 from the foul line. He was averaging 22.8 points a game during preseason.

"Everyone on this team would rather be playing with Shaquille than without him, but it's no use talking about what you don't have," Magic coach Brian Hill said. "We've got to have our guys elevate their game some and go with what we have."

Unbeaten Huskers face toughest test yet

Colorado receiving corps offers challenge to Nebraska

Dave Zelio

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — When Nebraska secondary coach George Darlington watches Colorado's receivers, he sees ugly visions of Florida State and Miami, teams that used to run past the Cornhuskers for bowl-game wins.

"They are so fast," Darlington said of the No. 7 Buffaloes. "They're comparable with any team we've played since I've been here. The receivers, tight ends and backs all have big-play capability like the Florida teams."

Making the biggest plays have been wide receivers Rae Carruth and Phil Savoy.

The two have nearly half of the team's receptions (62 of 137) and half of the receiving yards (1,089 of 2,182). Carruth is 15th in the country with 95.4 yards per game and his seven touchdowns lead the team.

Nebraska rover Mike Minter is looking forward to lining up against the receivers when the second-ranked Huskers (7-0, 3-0 Big Eight) play at Colorado (6-1, 2-1) on Saturday.

"I think we've turned the corner as far as not giving up the big play," Minter said. "We're in the right places at the right times."

Which wasn't the case for a while.

Eleven of the 15 touchdowns against Nebraska this season have come on pass plays. The average scoring throw against the Huskers covers 23.1 yards and four have been longer than 30 yards.

Nebraska gave up three TD passes to Kansas State last week, but all in the fourth quarter against reserves.

The Wildcats' longest play was a 30-yard pass play; a week earlier, Missouri's longest play in a 57-0 loss to Nebraska was a 15-yard pass.

"They have a great defense, one that matches up well with our speed," Savoy said. "It will be a dogfight. Hopefully, Hessler will be on."

Hessler is John Hessler, Colorado's sophomore quarterback who is 2-1 as a starter. The Buffs' fifth-ranked offense, which averages 503.8 yards per game, lost starter Koy Detmer to season-ending knee surgery.

Hessler has thrown for 1,049 yards, nine touchdowns and three interceptions, including two last week against Iowa State. His completion rate is 55.6 percent and he twice has been named the league's offensive player of the week.

Coach Rick Neuheisel, who tutored quarterback Kordell Stewart last season, has been giving Hessler intense instruction since pulling him off the bench for his first college snap against Texas A&M on Sept. 23.

"Everybody knows he's human," Neuheisel said. "He doesn't have to live up to an expectation level that's beyond where he can actually perform. He just needs to go out and play and have fun."

Nebraska defensive tackle Christian Peter said he didn't think Colorado lost much with Hessler in for Detmer.

"They have a great defense, one that matches up well with our speed. It will be a dogfight."

Phil Savoy, Colorado wide receiver on Nebraska.

"Hessler is a great quarterback and we look forward to getting some licks on him," he said. "Colorado has a great offensive line. I think their three guys inside are the three best in college football. We have to have a great pass rush and get in there."

Hessler said he would be nervous but ready.

"If they jump on us 14-0 early, we won't get rattled," he said. "It wouldn't surprise me — they're a great ball team — but we could jump up 14-0 also."

Colorado's rushing game has been quiet this year, averaging 192.1 yards per game. Half of the team's 34 touchdowns have come on the ground.

Nebraska hasn't allowed a rushing touchdown in 11 quarters and only four all year. Nebraska is No. 2 nationally against the run (73.1 yards allowed) and 10th overall (286.1 allowed).

Colorado is 3-1 against ranked teams this season despite losing Heisman Trophy-winning running back Rashaan Salaam, tight end Christian Fauria, Stewart and wide receiver Michael Westbrook from last year.

"We're used to waiting in the wings around here," said Savoy, a 6-3, 200-pound sophomore. "We waited behind Westbrook and he waited behind Charles Johnson, who waited behind Mike Pritchard. You have to be patient because there are great receivers here."

SHOWDOWN

Then there was the Kansas Jayhawks, the Big Eight's other undefeated team. The Jayhawks beat Colorado on Oct. 7, spoiling the Buffs' perfect record and national title hopes and setting up a potential showdown Nov. 11 against Nebraska.

"Things happen for a reason," Nebraska quarterback Tommie Frazier said. "It would have been nice for them (the Buffaloes) to come in undefeated where it could be the game everyone wants it to be."

There's not even a rivalry any more. First-year Colorado head coach Rick Neuheisel put an end to that.

"All of a sudden, when Colorado reached the pinnacle of college football by winning its own national championship in 1990, I don't think it was necessary anymore," said Neuheisel.

"This game has special significance regardless of rivalry and it seems folly to me to have one team call it a rivalry and the other team not. By mere definition, that means it's not."

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne never singled out Colorado — or any team — as a rival. He was puzzled by the antics of former Colorado coach Bill McCartney, who used to print Nebraska in big red letters on team schedules and ban red clothing around the football offices.

This year, Nebraska has been preparing like it always does for a big game. Earplugs were available for the offensive linemen, and crowd noise was piped into Memorial Stadium this week to emulate the fans at Colorado's Folsom Field.

Colorado players and coaches played down the game against Nebraska.

Neuheisel said Nebraska "is not the premier college football program in the country by default, but they put their pants on one leg at a time just like we do."

Buff's linebacker Matt Russell said: "It's no longer the red-letter game. We're not going to make them out to be superhuman, something they're not. They put their pants on the same way we do in the morning. They're just ranked higher."

Frazier

"Every past Colorado game we've sat up here and heard how they're putting their whole season on the line for this game," said Graham, a senior.

"That philosophy has never been taught here ... I think it's more respectable this way. I think it's best just to settle these things on the field."

Colorado Buffaloes center Bryan Stoltenberg said he didn't mind dropping the rivalry tab, but wasn't sure it was sincere on both sides.

"Any player or coach who tells you this isn't the big game of the season is probably lying," he said. "It's huge."

Angels descend upon Hancher

'Angels' introduces Iowa City to Kushner's vision

Joshua Ferris
 The Daily Iowan

Angels are descending on Iowa City this weekend.

Tony Kushner's Pulitzer-winning play, "Angels in America," arrives at Hancher Auditorium Saturday to begin a long weekend of performances.

The play, consisting of two parts — "Millennium Approaches" and "Perestroika" — and lasting seven hours, is perhaps one of the most ambitious plays in decades.

The first part, "Millennium Approaches," will be performed at 2 and 8 p.m. on Saturday. "Perestroika" will be performed at 2 and 8 p.m. on Sunday.

"You can see them separately, but you'd be missing so much," George Macpherson, manager of the "Angels" touring company said in a telephone conversation from New York.

Since its Broadway production, "Angels in America" has been hailed as the most significant and complex play of the decade. It has brought Tony Kushner international acclaim, including Pulitzer Prizes in 1993 and 1994. In fact, it is the only play to win the Tony award for Best Play for the successive production of its two parts.

"It's just one of the most well-written plays in recent history," said Macpherson, who fought hard for a touring production of "Angels" in the face of financial adversity. "It doesn't preach at you. It pretty much tells things as they are."

Many feel "Angels in America" to be a play

A critic's interpretation of 'Angels'

Joshua Ferris
 The Daily Iowan

It is not easy to criticize a Pulitzer Prize-winning play. It is even harder to criticize a Pulitzer-winning play with four Tony awards to its name, including two back-to-back Best Play awards. "Angels in America," playing at Hancher Auditorium this weekend, is the only play ever to receive such a distinction.

But after the Broadway dust has settled, the opening-night dazzle has faded from memory and the touring company has turned in the van, what do we have left? A play immemorial, poignant and lasting, or a fleeting flicker tickling the fancy?

The answer: we have both. At a time when AIDS has become an obsessive, tremulous concern, "Angels in America," whose subtitle reads: "A Gay Fantasia on National Themes," is the provocative story written by a gay man trying to pivot AIDS around America as we approach a new millennium. Is it fair to ask: Would any play about such a topic touch our hearts? Why does "Angels" in particular do it so effectively?

It is doubtless Tony Kushner has delivered a story very much concerned with the harrowing issue of AIDS. And he does it well, revolving around a number of voices and heartaches around this one theme. He concerns himself with issues of homosexuality — both social and political — and of religion, honesty and death.

But while it is often poignant, sad and exalting, "Angels in America" is also a little too quick to cash in on some of our heavier, sensitive topics. The urgency of Kushner's message and his pressing need to be heard, make the drama seem forced at times, an ambition bordering on pretension. The events unfold in too contrived a doesn't speak for gays. It doesn't speak for straights. It doesn't speak for blacks or whites. It speaks for everyone."

The touring production is directed by Michael Mayer, a fairly young director who was one of the first to direct "Perestroika" while at the New York University School of the Arts. It was his excellent direction that got him the job for the tour.

"Angels" is an ensemble piece. There are eight actors for 28 roles, and each of the actors is responsible for moving and readjusting the sets. Kate Goehring plays Harper Pitt, Roberta Sella is Prior Walter, Jonathan Hadary, a recent Tony nominee for his work in "Gypsy," plays Roy Cohn.

The characters are rich and diverse: Harper — an agoraphobic Mormon woman from Montana who's addicted to Valium; Joe — her closeted Mormon husband; an African-American nurse/drag queen known only as Belize. And there's the New York figurehead Roy Cohn, an affluent and influential lawyer who was also a self-loathing homosexual. Cohn died of complications resulting from the HIV virus in 1986, without public knowledge of his condition, and Kushner has reappropriated him in "Angels" with a dramatic voice sharpened to bitter perfection.

Kushner is able to weave these disparate and multicolored threads together into a dialogue about the how the AIDS has changed the way we see death and disease and the way we love. It is at once gory and sexy, disquieting and exalting.

which does preach — about politics, social dogma and the weighty subject of AIDS. But this is dismissive. In tracking the lives of a handful of characters who intersect with one another in myriad ways, the audience gets more than just death and disease.

"People come to see the show and they walk out absolutely stunned," Macpherson said. "It really

Each and every day should be Halloween

Erica Gingerich
 The Daily Iowan

Halloween is the holiday with the best fashion sense of all — there are no cute, fluffy Easter bunnies, no dogmatic July shades of red, white and blue and no Christmas balls and pedophiles dressed as elves.

Originally (and still) an agrarian, pagan harvest festival, Halloween in mainstream America has been revamped into the best excuse to dress up outside of a New Orleans funeral. It's the one time during the whole year the fashion-repressed allow themselves to slip-side personas and find a new look.

Considering how excited everyone gets about one night of fantasy, it's amazing most people don't do it more often. If every day was Halloween, as Ministry sang in the '80s, interracial and intergender misunderstandings would dissipate, we'd probably have world peace by the millennium and more men dressed in Dr. Frankenstein costumes more often.

Some of us are in costume a good part of the time. However, those of you who don't keep a bag of tricks handy — never fear. There's still time to prepare for one night of clothing release.

I've established a few basic costume structures that will serve a variety of purposes in a variety of situations — you're the missing ingredient a basic look needs to really work.

Blonde wig, some type of women's lingerie, lotsa red lipstick

This combination has infinite possibilities. You're Marilyn Monroe, Harpo Marx, Nancy Spungen, Courtney Love, Little Boy Fauntleroy, Queen Elizabeth I, King George III, the homecoming queen with a gun, a blow-up doll, the kid on the Dutch Boy paint can ... it's the easiest way to go in drag and the most recognizable way to be an ideal American woman.

A man's suit

With green makeup you're Frankenstein. Tape your breasts down and you're a guy. With a submachine gun and a horse's head, you're the Godfather. With a bow tie you're the Nation of Islam. With a Jeep Cherokee and a girlfriend from the right Chicago suburb, you're a Young Republic.

'KRUI 2000' shoots campus radio into future

Todd Norden
 The Daily Iowan

Your sound alternative is going digital. KRUI, the UI's radio station, is the first college station to process a major portion of its audio chain digitally. This is one advance that is included in the station's restructuring plan titled "KRUI 2000."

Time line

In September 1994, the UI administration announced KRUI was moving. At the end of '94, Hillcrest was considered as a new location for the station. Due to budget constraints, a new location at 129 Grand Avenue Court was examined. After revising the station's budget, KRUI planned to move to the three-story house on Grand Avenue Court starting Nov. 1.

Working over the summer, KRUI tore up the air studio and production studio and combined the studios, making the move easier. KRUI purchased a state of the art console improving the air studio and allowed the station to rebuild a new air studio which established that at KRUI's new location, the station will be modern and efficient.

Going Digital

KRNA was the first station to go digital in 1991. KRUI is repeating the feat as a college station and this may be the best thing to happen in its 11½-year history. The digital system cost around $15,000 and was purchased through student fees saved for the past 12 years. The digital system updates 10-year-old equipment. An analog signal leaves the air studio console and flows through an audio processor which converts the analog signal to a digital signal. The digital signal then travels to a digit exciter

Alumnus' film captures 'take this job and shove it'

Mark Pittillo
The Daily Iowan

We've all been there before: the job interview—the minimum-wage job interview. The insipid questions, the canned, half-hearted answers, the nagging humiliation of it all. All in order to obtain some tedious, dehumanizing work.

It's a place I've been many times, I'm sorry to say. So I'm doubly happy to report UI alumnus Chris Smith has captured the day-to-day life of the minimum-wage worker with uncanny accuracy in his feature-length film "American Job."

The film, which is showing at the Bijou this weekend and at the Museum of Modern Art in New York in November, was partially shot in Iowa City, and stars a slew of current and former Iowa City residents.

The star of the show, though, is Randy Russell, a veteran "zine creator and former Iowa City resident. The film follows Randy as he moves from bad job to bad job. That's it. Simple and effective.

First, he tries out a factory job in which he operates some kind of plastic machine but soon gets fired. He then gets a fast-food gig, where he meets a few colorful characters, but can't stand the work and quits. By the end, Randy's adventures have included a surreal graveyard shift, a struggle with the intricacies of telemarketing and a visit to a certain topless bar in Coralville with a pushy motel co-worker.

UI alumnus Chris Smith's "American Job" will show the underside of work this weekend at the Bijou Theatre.

But this plot summary gives absolutely no indication of what a wonderful achievement "American Job" really is. On the one hand, it is fairly realistic. It's shot in a documentary-like style with mostly non-actors.

Secondly, the film is funny—very funny—without being overbearing or show-offy—something most films with similar subject matter, such as "Clerks," cannot claim.

So come to the Bijou this weekend. Smith will be at the screenings through Friday; all the money earned will be divided between Smith and the Jim McLaughlin Scholarship Fund. You'll be supporting local filmmaking, and most importantly, I guarantee you'll love the movie.

'Diary' film pertains to everyone

Mark Pittillo
The Daily Iowan

Nanni Moretti has been called the Italian Woody Allen. Judging from his most recent film, "Caro Diario" ("Dear Diary"), which is showing at the Bijou tonight, I'd say he's an interesting combination of Allen and a more introspective, enigmatic filmmaker like Bergman or Kieslowski, with maybe a little Pauly Shore thrown in.

"Caro Diario" is divided into three parts, each following entries in Moretti's diary. The tone is wildly erratic; some sections are funny, some melancholy, some philosophical; some are beautifully realistic, some have dream logic.

In the first section, titled "On My Vespa," we follow Moretti on a tour through Rome on his motorbike as he ruminates about movies, dancing, architecture and life in general.

In one funny moment, he fantasizes about meeting Jennifer Beals ("Flashdance," he claims, is the film that changed his life) and magically, he does.

The section ends with a magnificent tracking shot that follows Moretti's motorbike for about 10 minutes, finally stopping at the location where the great Italian filmmaker Pasolini was killed. This section should be boring, but Moretti's camera and script has the power to make the Italian countryside riveting. The passage magically invites us to think about what we have just seen.

In the last section, "Medicine," the mood changes abruptly. It is an account of Moretti's medical journey; from seeking treatment for a chronic itch to finding out he has cancer. It's a riveting half-hour, and though it has little connections with the rest of the film, somehow it seems a fitting ending to this fascinating hodge-podge.

The three sections, tied together by the charismatic character Moretti, resonate. Though we don't have the satisfaction of narrative closure, the closing image of Moretti drinking a glass of water (he's heard it's good for him) is unforgettable.

'Copycat' slinks past 'Silence' and 'Seven'

Holly Hunter (above) stars with Sigourney Weaver in "Copycats," a serial killer thriller that sets a new standard for the genre.

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Just when it seemed Hollywood had forgotten the success of "Silence of the Lambs," along comes "Copycat," a thriller that lives up to its name.

"Copycat" apes "Silence" in a number of particulars, especially its psycho-vs.-cop characters. But this is far more than another cheap knockoff of a successful film. It's an elaborate, terrifying, satisfying thriller that moves at a relentless pace.

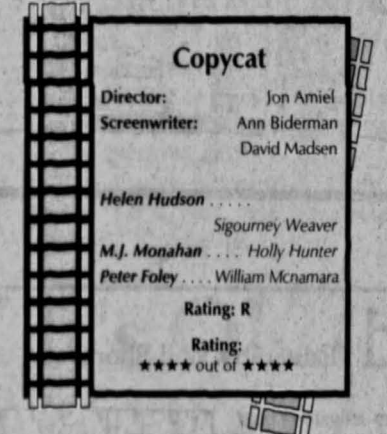

Holly Hunter revises Jodie Foster's "Silence" role as Mary Jane Monahan, a doe-eyed, hard-nosed police inspector who operates on an unflinching wave of restrained perkiness and forceful confidence. Judging from the string of throttled female corpses, Monahan and her partner Ruben (Dermot Mulroney) suspect they have a serial killer on the loose. Unfortunately, no one in the San Francisco police department has any experience with serial killers (?!? Okay, the film's not perfect), so they turn to a national expert who happens to be sequestered nearby.

The expert, Helen Hudson (Sigourney Weaver) isn't exactly eager to help—she used to be a criminal psychologist specializing in serial cases, but a particularly brutal encounter with a particularly brutal "fan" has left her incapable of walking beyond her front door without suffering a severe panic attack. To compensate, she drinks, pops pills, surfs the Internet irregularly and calls the police on an hourly basis to tell them what they're doing wrong.

Which turns out to be quite a lot. Most serial killers stick to one mode of operation, but this one is apparently less creative and far more flexible. He's imitating famous murderers—starting with the Boston Strangler—as part of an elaborate scheme that deepens remorselessly in every scene.

Like "Silence," "Copycat" deals with two different psychopaths: one in prison, available for consultation when the going gets rough and one on the loose, leaving a deliberate web of corpses and clues behind him. Darryl Lee Cullum (Harry Connick Jr.), is no Hannibal Lecter, but he's plenty creepy as the major bogeyman in Hudson's life. From the first scene, he sets the grotesque and unflinching pace for this film.

The rest of the cast rarely falters in carrying the gripping story along. Hunter in particular plays an annoying role, but plays it with panache and talent; Weaver is utterly perfect for her part. The two actresses work together brilliantly both as partners and rivals. Mulroney holds up his end just as well, and William McNamara complements them all as the multifaceted roaming killer.

Director Jon Amiel, for his part, injects a sense of style without being overbearing; his cinematography for Hudson's panic attacks is particularly effective and affecting. Amiel plays out the tightly packed script like a talented fisherman with a tough marlin, letting it wander without ever losing control. He works equally deftly with complex character interactions and full-blown gore. Even "Seven" comes up short in comparison—it may have had more style, but can't compete for substance.

Prairie Lights readings kick off new Hungry Mind publishing

Joshua Ferris
The Daily Iowan

Literary excellence lives in the margins of society; its only troubadours are reclusive novelists, small-bodied poets and outspoken booksellers.

So when a dedicated bookstore such as Hungry Mind — located in St. Paul, Minn., and the mother of Hungry Mind Review, a Midwestern review dedicated to interviews, reviews and issues of serious literary merit — decides to turn its head to publishing, you can expect a lot of heart.

"Hungry Mind leads the struggle of the small independent bookstore," said Jim Harris, owner of Iowa City's Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. "And their press further exemplifies their dedication to literary interests."

"They do a better job than most other people," Frank Conroy, author of "Body and Soul" and director of the UI Writers' Workshop said. "The 'Review' is very good, and the whole idea of them publishing books is a step up."

Conroy will take part in a reading tonight celebrating the publication of two of five new Hungry Mind Press titles this season. Conroy was commissioned some months ago to be a part of "Leaving New York: Writers Look Back."

Frank Conroy (above) will read from his meditations on New York City included in "Leaving New York" tonight at 8 in Shambaugh Auditorium in celebration of Hungry Mind Review. Also reading will be Bharati Mukherjee.

"Leaving New York" is an anthology comprised of the ambivalence and relief some literary New York emigres have undergone in their departure from the Big Apple.

Conroy is expected to read "Change," a personal chronicle of his leaving New York for the suburban lawns and quiet offices of Iowa City.

But Hungry Mind Press isn't just about the new. Another important commitment is the revival of out-of-print books. Hungry Mind is dedicated to keeping good books in print and recirculating selected works that have fallen from the graces of the power publishing houses.

"The major publishers won't look at a book unless they can print 20,000 or 30,000 copies," said R. David Unowsky, owner of Hungry Mind and publisher of Hungry Mind Review. "There's an awful good reason for a lot of other books to be available, and they seem to be disappearing."

Bharati Mukherjee will join Conroy tonight as she reads from "Days and Nights in Calcutta," one example of Hungry Mind's republications. Co-authored with her husband Clark Blaise after the two spent a year in India with Mukherjee's family, "Days and Nights in Calcutta" is a look at Indian life by both a Westerner and a Bengali, detailing their richly diverse experiences.

Mukherjee and Conroy will read tonight at 8:00 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium.

ANGELS

manner, the targets are often too easy and the dialogue is overly hasty to decry Reaganite politics and social ills.

These may be good things to decry. But the play often misses the effectiveness of subtlety. There are exchanges between characters that completely ignore delicacy, at times turning the characters into two-dimensional place holders. They are a little too prepared to polemicize about heavy-handed affairs, a little too ready to speak from their corner.

And yet, "Angels in America" is a play about the timely concerns haunting us all, and it inevitably manages to illicit stirring emotion. So it is not hard to let "Angels in America" sweep you away in the end.

The play itself may speak to us, our sensibilities and our political discomfort quicker than it will in the future. But for now, we have a play that delivers hope and relief — if not a little tediously at times — and we can appreciate it for these gifts.

can. Enough said.

A sheet

Sheets aren't just for Casper anymore. Like the ubiquitous towel in the Douglas Adam "Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy" trilogy, have sheet, will travel.

You can be So-crates in Iowa City with the right drape. A touch of blue lipstick transforms you into Laura Palmer from "Twin Peaks." Drape it over your head without adding eyeholes and — depending on your height — you're Mount St. Helens either pre- or post-1981. Wear the sheet like wings for the angel look. Bring the whole mattress along and you've got a whole new breed of pick-up line.

Most folks have one of these basic ensembles in their possession and with little or no creativity, they'll have a costume — pronto. Last minute preparation for Halloween shouldn't have to happen, though, if people will realize costumes make every single day of the year more enjoyable. Imagine how much fun you'll have this Christmas if you start making your Freddy Krueger costume now!

where the digital signal becomes an FM signal. The FM signal then changes to an analog signal, amplifies through a transmitter, surges through antennae and becomes your favorite alternative music. After all technicalities, the results are better coverage of the Iowa City-Coralville area and improved sound.

Moving

Beginning Nov. 1, KRUI will be taking apart the studio and moving into its new house. The blueprint of the house reveals much more space for KRUI's station components. The basement will house the music department, record and CD libraries and a digital equipment room. KRUI's main offices and a kitchen will be located on the ground level. Air/production studios and the news and sports room will be found on the third floor.

New Programming

An exciting, untitled program debuts Nov. 8 featuring local area bands. The two-hour program will start at 9 p.m. and present one local band in a live interview or a live performance from a local venue. KRUI feels the program plays a part in keeping with the station's alternative music format and is not a specialty program such as programs presented on the weekend.

Jamie Shapiro, program director, said, "We're trying to emphasize diversity. We have our co-hosts and each person has contact and knowledge of the local bands. The premise of the show is to provide listeners with information on bands in the area or ones that are coming through. We want an entertaining and informational show so listeners can tune in and find out what's going on around here. We're trying to give everybody a taste of what's going on around town."
