'Gentlemanly' fraternity wants to build people up

Kappa Alpha, a new fraternity at the University of Washington, is hoping to break from the Neanderthal "frat boy" image to promote "gentility, chivalry, honor, and reverence for women."

These are some of the principles the Kappa Alpha Order is holding and promoting according to an advertisement.

"Kappa Alpha stands for what it believes," said John Linder, vice president of the newly emerging Kappa Alpha Order. He said they are taking these ideals completely seriously.

KAO also differs from traditional fraternities in that it is a substance free chapter and does not believe in hazing as part of the rushing process.

"I don't think hazing is a cool thing anyway," said Kris Lethin, KAO president. "I think it's pretty lame to try and put somebody down and degrade them in any way. I'd rather build people up," he said.

Linder said what lies ahead for the fraternity is hard to say since it has barely been at UW for a year. Linder said, "If we get 'gentlemen' and keep with the bylaws we have now, I don't think we'll have a problem."

Texas yearbook 'pot page' stirs controversy

The Texas Tech Student Senate at the Texas Tech University showed its disapproval of the depiction of drug and drug-related paraphernalia in the 1995 La Ven- tana, the school's yearbook, by unanimously passing a resolution Oct. 19.

The Senate resolution criticized the page which included a photograph of a Texas Tech University student inhaling marijuana. The picture was also accompanied by an article that quoted students about their use of marijuana.

"I talked to students, faculty and alumni who are appalled by its inclusion in La Ventana," said Geoff Wayne, senator at large.

The resolution has no legal backing but the staff said they would take the complaint into consideration.

"The senate cannot tell us what we can or can't print, but they do buy books so we're considerate of what they think," said Julie Kimball, 1995 and 1996 La Ventana managing editor.

Northwestern invites gay and lesbian alums

The first Gay and Lesbian Alumni Reception at Northwestern University was Oct. 20 at the Ann Sather Restaurant in Chicago. It was designed to welcome homosexual alumni to homecoming.

"We feel this will contribute to the overall success of homecoming weekend," said Charles Katzenmeyer, chairperson of the 10-year reunion committee.

Gays and lesbians often feel disenfranchised by the university said Andrew Brenoff, former president of the Gay and Lesbian University Union and assistant professor.

"Once they graduate, they lose contact," Bernoff said.

"This is a way for Northwestern to reclaim this group of students," he said.

One of the main purposes of the event is to help create a database of gay and lesbian alumni Katzenmeyer said.

Because many people were not open about their homosexuality as students, they did not see a relation between Northwestern and their new life, Katzenmeyer said. This event will allow them to network and meet one another he said.

The reunion committee in June approached the Alumni Relations staff to approve the event. After its approval in July, the 35-member committee of students and alumni began planning the event.

Americans have 'car trouble'

Henry Ford and the American Auto industry are two targets on Heather Lev's hit list. Lev, a M-U graduate student wants to see cars banned and she's even writing songs about it.

Specifically, it's convertibles and other sports cars that irk Lev and she has a self-released recording called "If Cars Were Banned."

Some of the lyrics are "Cars give us jobs, you may say, and they're just the good old American way/But times are a-changin'/We'll regret it when they won't extend our credit."

Lev just thinks there are better means than the automobile for people to get from one place to another.

"I've done a lot of traveling since I graduated (in 1994)," she said. "In Germany they have a car co-op system where cars are provided for people who just sign up for them when they need them."

Lev says that we are a society overdependent on cars in general, which is the main reason many people are commuting to work.

"The way things are set up now, people have to commute to survive," she said.

"For emergencies, things like car co-ops would work. It's not necessarily eliminating cars that I want, it's finding transportation alternatives."

Lev has recently moved to New York City where a whole other transportation fight is taking place — a fight that Lev is just about ready to jump into.

ABC gets Muppets started again

NEW YORK (AP) — Kermit the Frog, Miss Piggy and the rest of the Muppets are headed back to prime time on ABC.

"Muppets Live!" a comedy-variety half-hour show like their syndicated hit "Muppet Show," and the new sitcom "ALIENS in the Family" will be mid-season replacements under a five-year production deal announced Thursday.

Unlike the original "Muppet Show," which was set in a music hall theater, "Muppets Live!" will originate from the chaotic studios of KMUP-TV, with weekly guest stars and a menagerie of Muppet characters new and old.

"Of course, if this doesn't work out, we'll start visiting people," Kermit, flanked by his sidekick Gonzo, told reporters at ABC studios.

"Going door to door!" Gonzo amended.

There were no other specific projects announced, and the terms of the deal were not disclosed.

The deal between Jim Henson Productions and Capital Cities/ABC Inc. gives the two companies equal ownership of Henson programming.

"It's perfect for us," said Brian Henson, president of Jim Henson Productions. "It allows us to continue producing for cable outlets and all the outlets we have in the past."

And, while Henson Productions gets an infusion of ABC capital and distribution for its television programming, Henson also brings its expertise in publishing and character merchandising to the network.

"The primary interest is to have access to talent," said Robert Iger, president of Capital Cities/ABC, citing the television industry's new combinations, such as his own company's merger with Disney.

Iger said ABC wants to repeat its success with early prime-time series like "Full House," but with almost 15 percent of homes having more than four TV sets, was finding it more difficult to attract the family audience.

"The audience is, in effect, fragmenting itself within the household," Iger said.

'Streetcar' dream comes true for 'Roseanne' star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Roseanne" star John Goodman will play good guy Mitch in a CBS version of the Tennessee Williams classic "A Streetcar Named Desire," Sunday.

"I'm just so happy," Goodman said in an interview for Friday's "Extra" TV entertainment news show. "This is my favorite American play."

Karl Malden, who won an Academy Award as best supporting actor in the 1951 film version of "Streetcar," gave Goodman a good luck charm.

"He gave me the first edition of the British published play of 'Streetcar Named Desire.' I opened it and it said, 'Dear John, I hope you have as much fun playing Mitch as I did. Sincerely, Karl Malden,'" Goodman recalled. "They had to peel me off the ceiling."

Castro 'would not vote' for New York mayor

NEW YORK (AP) — Fidel Castro, snubbed and denounced by Mayor Rudolph Giuliani during his five-day visit for the United Nations' 50th anniversary celebration, retaliated a few hours before leaving the city.

"I would not vote for the mayor," the Cuban president, grinning, told The New York Times during an interview Wednesday. "It's not just because he didn't invite me to dinner, but because on my way into town from the airport there were such enormous potholes."

Giuliani did not respond to the needling at a news conference

Thursday but reiterated his characterization of the Cuban leader as a torturer and denier of human rights.

When Castro's motorcade headed off to the airport from the Cuban U.N. Mission on Manhattan's East Side Wednesday night, nearby residents cheered. It meant no more having to carry identification to walk down their street.

CBS facing troubling times

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — CBS has experienced some rocky times lately — "the most challenging period I've been through at CBS News," Dan Rather said.

"To use a Texas term, I've seen good ropins and space shots, but I ain't never seen anything like this," the 63-year CBS newscaster said Wednesday.

The NFL defected to Fox, and then the network lost several affiliates. There also was the conflict with Connie Chung, who was dumped as co-anchor.

Broadcasting the "CBS Evening News" from TV studios in his home state, Rather, who turns 64 on Tuesday, was asked if he might return permanently someday.

Volunteers work full force for Hospice race

Josh Hunt
The Daily Iowan

About 6,000 people will take to the streets to raise about $165,000 for United Way agencies as the 19th annual Hospice Road Races swings into action Sunday.

A huge contribution has been made this year by the UI community, especially by UI students, said race coordinator Lori Riley.

"We had our 900 volunteers for the race by the first of the month," she said. "It has never been filled that early. Students came pouring into the office to volunteer."

The funds raised by the races go to United Way, which in turn contributes to a significant number of Johnson County's human services agencies.

"People solicit pledges for running in the race," Riley said. "Between 2,200 and 2,300 people in the Iowa City area solicit a great amount of these pledges. It is phenomenal how much they raise."

The race will be funded by about 275 businesses, Riley said. Some of the top supporters include Parsons Technology, the key sponsor for the last five years, and Hawkeye Medical Supply Inc., 225 E. Prentiss St.

Many local businesses and Greek organizations are also contributing to the race, including the Delta Delta Delta sorority house.

UI junior Erin Pick, Delta Delta Delta internal philanthropy chairperson, is the key organizer for the event within the sorority.

"The seniors run in the race if they choose and everyone else works," she said.

The sorority delivered fliers last Tuesday to the houses along the race route and will handle traffic on race day starting at 6 a.m. for the five different races.

UI Community Credit Union, 500 Iowa Ave., is a business sponsor, and president Fred Krause said the race is a "team effort" for the union.

"We pay the entrance fee for staff and members who raise $50 in pledges," Krause said. "In this way, we encourage staff and members to participate in the race."

The Hospice Road Races are a significant event for the Iowa City community, Riley said.

"It is a big community event for the Iowa City area ... It is a huge fund-raising event," Riley said. "The last 10 years has raised almost $750,000 for United Way agencies."

Five-year participant and Iowa City resident Joan Knepper said the races are a big event for her family. She walks with her husband and three children in the 5-kilometer walk, one of five different race categories.

The Kneppers make a donation as a family and also raise money with pledges by asking friends and family, she said.

Knepper said it is a great community activity.

"It makes all the agencies involved in the races stronger," she said. "It raises more funds for the United Way. It is also good to see all the participants from the Iowa City community."

alternative," he said. "It would be enormously expensive."

Bowlsby said there is a variety of feasible solutions — including the possibility of erecting a net in the student section — to discourage students' rowdy behavior. However, he said the idea of a net is extreme and wouldn't likely be put up any time soon.

"I hope it never comes to such a thing," he said. "Unfortunately the actions of few have to affect all the fans. I'm asking the fans (who did throw things on the field) not to do it any more."

Head football coach Hayden Fry, on his weekly radio show, said he believes a net will never be placed in the student section.

"It's just an idea that will never get done," he said. "The student body has too much pride to let throwing things prevent them from enjoying the game."

Last Saturday's football game started an hour and a half later than usual due to the game's national television coverage on ABC. This extra time gave students an opportunity to drink more before the game and Bowlsby said he believes this made the crowd more rambunctious.

Bowlsby said members of the UI Athletic Department spoke with game officials after last Saturday's game and the officials were appalled with the student's behavior.

"They told us they feared for their safety and our student section has the worst behavior in the Big Ten," he said. "This doesn't reflect very favorably on our institution."

HAUNTED HOUSES

Richard Daniels, Jaycee's co-chairperson, said though the Jaycees have been working on the barn since early August the reward is well worth the effort. About 10,000 people walk through the haunted dwelling each year.

"It takes about $2,000 to construct it, but we net about $24,000," he said. "It goes right back into the community, for example we gave some of the money to the Little Bambinos (a little league team) for a new pitching machine," he said.

Tiffany Well, a sixth-grader at Kirkwood Elementary School, said she wasn't scared about going into the barn because she had a plan if attacked by ghouls.

"I'm going to scream and bust them up," she said. "I'll do all my karate chops on them and they'll see a side of me they've never seen before."

Who says television isn't violent? My next haunted Jaycee's experience was the Dungeon of Terror in Coralville. It was a fair haunted house and I give it a score of two.

The house is actually a basement with a few scary scenes. The monsters did a good job of faking us out by jumping out of hidden places, everyone wore good costumes and lighting was better than the barn.

Most importantly, it had a monster carrying a power tool, which might have been a saw — we ran away too fast to notice. A power tool is the most important aspect to a haunted dwelling; a deranged lumberjack is a person to be reckoned with.

Part of the reason for my low rating of the Coralville house was that it was too spacious, eliminating that claustrophobic — and frightening — feeling. Unfortunately, it still cost $4.

My phobia's cured, I'm going home to eat some peeled grapes while I watch back-to-back Fruit of the Loom commercials.

BALANCED BUDGET

trolled Senate was expected to approve a similar bill Friday, a major milestone in the Republican revolution launched last winter. "We'll be all right," predicted Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

As the day gave way to evening, Senate Republicans systematically turned aside Democratic efforts to restore two-thirds of $270 billion in savings proposed from Medicare, as well as additional funds for Medicaid and a program of tax breaks for the working poor.

President Clinton has threatened a veto, and congressional Democrats are certain to sustain it.

"Their agenda is to get rid of Medicare," House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said of the Republicans. "Their agenda is to give huge tax breaks to the wealthiest Americans."

A veto would set the stage for a widely anticipated effort at compromise in late fall between the White House and conservative Republican majorities in the House and Senate.

The GOP plan, designed to balance the budget in 2002, relies on hundreds of billions of dollars of savings from Medicare, Medicaid, welfare, student loans and other social programs that have flourished since the New Deal and Great Society eras.

The bills ran to 1,754 pages in the House and 1,949 in the Senate. Aside from the Pentagon, the measures scoured the entire government for savings — sometimes down to the penny. Annual cost-of-living increases for certain veterans' benefits would be rounded down to the nearest dollar, a provision estimated to save $520 million over seven years.

Billions more would be saved from programs affecting farmers; federal workers would pay more for their retirement benefits; the Commerce Department would be abolished under the House measure.

The plan includes $245 billion in tax cuts, including a $500-per-child tax credit and a break on taxes on profits from investments.

The proposal was crafted with assistance from the governors, who agreed to accept slower growth in funding in Medicaid and welfare in exchange for a loosening of federal strings.

Shortly before the final vote, the House rejected, 356-72, an alternative drafted by conservative Democrats to balance the budget without tax cuts. The plan would ease the impact of the GOP's planned savings from Medicare, Medicaid and other government programs.

With debate underway in both houses, about 10 people staged a noisy sit-down protest just outside the House chamber. "Health care is a human right! What we need is Medicaid!," they shouted as police dragged them away.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

"In essence, we're open until 3 a.m.," he said. "The fun meter can bounce for an extra hour."

In Iowa City, it is up to the City Council and the City Liquor Commission to decide if bars can stay open during the extra hour, said Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department.

However, Lihs said the police department gets several telephone calls from local bars, wondering if they can legally prolong the night.

"We always get calls from bars who can't remember," he said. "They ask, 'Can we or can't we stay open?' They can."

Jeremy McDevitt, manager of the Union Bar, 121 S. College St., said his bar will also take advantage of the legal opportunity to give patrons an extra hour to purchase alcohol.

"It's the only time we can legally make the night that long," he said. "The extra hour is a nice bonus for everyone."

Despite the ability to remain open an extra hour, some local bars are choosing to close at 2 a.m., even though it will technically be 1 a.m.

The Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., like other local bars, is having a big Halloween party Saturday night, complete with festive decorations and a costume contest at 11 p.m., said bartender and waitress Jill Elden. The Deadwood will not stay open during the extra hour.

Elden said the bar will be filled with regulars, who will "go all-out" for this weekend's bash.

"It's fun to see everyone looking different," she said. "There's a parade of people throughout the bar. The mood is very freakish."

The bar will award $100 to the patron in the best costume, which will be chosen by crowd response. The second-place get-up wins $50 and $30 goes to the third-place costume.

McDevitt said he believes some bars, like the Deadwood, don't give their customers an extra hour of bar time because of their relaxed atmospheres.

"We're a dance club. We know our crowd will stay the extra hour," he said. "At the more mel-low bars, the crowd might taper off then anyway."

Many UI students said they plan to take full advantage of the extra hour of bar time.

"I'll have an extra hour to drink and make up for the hour I spent in class on Friday," said UI senior Matt Leyva. "It'll be a long hour of spending more money at the bars."

With more students out drinking for a longer time, things may get out of control downtown, Leyva said.

"The cops will just have to deal with more hammered people," he said. "With Halloween and the extra hour, there will be that much more of an excuse to drink heavier."

Although the extra hour of bar time may cause UI students to become more rowdy, Lihs said the police will just perform their routine bar checks Saturday.

"We're just expecting one more hour of drinking," he said. "The extra hour hasn't caused problems in the past. We're just doing the same old, same old."

NUMBER OF USERS A PROBLEM

Trolley possibility chugs along

Cary Jordan
The Daily Iowan

The idea for restoring rail passenger service between Cedar Rapids and Iowa City was derailed, but a vintage trolley service between Iowa City and North Liberty could be right on track.

"Something like that would be great for the area," said Kenneth Sislak, director of public transportation for Wilbur Smith Associates, which did a study on the CRANDIC rail service. "A trolley operation would provide good service to those who used it, and it would also serve as a tourist attraction as well."

"Our study found that the necessary number of people it would take to ride the transit daily simply wasn't there," he said. "Anymore, people don't just drive from work to home, and vice versa. Today, people have to stop at the store, pick up dry-cleaning, pick up the kids from school or practice. These kind of schedules don't really complement a rail service."

Sislak also said the combined population of Linn and Johnson counties is too small for a rail service.

"Rebuilding the entire corridor, which would be from Iowa City to Cedar Rapids, economically isn't a possibility at this time," Sislak said. "First of all, the population of the areas involved just don't offer the numbers usually accustomed to a passenger rail service."

The combined population of Linn and Johnson counties is 264,886 people, according to Wilbur Smith Associates.

The smallest urbanized area in the United States with rail transit service has a population of about 1 million. The study found it would take more than 143 years for the population in the region of the CRANDIC to grow that high.

Sislak said along with the population, the number of people who would actually use the rail service also posed a major problem.

"We were disappointed that the numbers weren't there," he said. "A lot of people were really excited about this, but if the numbers aren't there, there's nothing really you can do about it. It's not like we can make the numbers up."

While resurrection of rail passenger service from Cedar Rapids to Iowa City along the CRANDIC was not justified now or in the foreseeable future, it did find a smaller segment of the corridor is still a possibility.

"Rebuilding the entire corridor, which would be from Iowa City to Cedar Rapids, economically isn't a possibility at this time. First of all, the population of the areas involved just don't offer the numbers usually accustomed to a passenger rail service."

Kenneth Sislak, director of public transportation for Wilbur Smith Associates

"Something like a trolley service is still a possibility," Sislak said.

"However, determining something like that would require more research. But limited rail service in such a short segment could very well be feasible economically."

He also said another vintage trolley service could operate from Cedar Rapids to the Amana Colonies as well.

Funding for the study was provided by the Iowa General Assembly through the Iowa Rail Assistance Fund.

East Central Iowa Council of Governments, Johnson County Council of Governments, the city of Iowa City, the city of Cedar Rapids, the UI, TES Transportation, and the Iowa Department of Transportation were involved with the study.

Ideal woman continues to be unrealistic

From hourglass hips to walking sticks, women are bound by the popular images of beautiful bodies.

Watch any movie or television show from the late '50s and mid-'60s. Crawling all over the film screens are pop-icon women with loose flesh and breasts that bump their chins when they walk. Think of Julie Newmar in "Lil' Abner." Think of Eva Gabor in "Green Acres." Think of Sophia Loren.

Then, during the late '70s and early '80s, "the woman" regressed to the emaciated, cocaine-is-my-food-staple look. Think of Michelle Pfeiffer in "Scarface," or of Chrissy on "Three's Company." Think of "Charlie's Angels" (How would Sabrina, Kelly, and Jill slide under that door to catch the bad guy if they had birthing hips?).

Well, now there's a new trend in the media to make women feel gypped by their DNA. It's "the strong, healthy look" and it's propelled by the brilliant marketing of athletic shoe companies.

Today, instead of being voluptuous or sunken-in, the ideal body consists of a butt and thighs sculpted out of non-corrosive metal with no visible cottage cheese formations and a washboard stomach to bounce celery sticks off.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Women's beauty shouldn't be measured by the roundness of their hips or the length of their legs.

This new fitness mania, despite being hidden under the guise of "health," still carries the outlandish expectation that women can change the look of their bodies with the simple change of a decade, and it still glorifies an ideal that is unreachable for most women.

Just take a look at one of today's top models — Gabrielle Reece. Reece is certainly different than the other models who bare their cleavage on the covers of women's magazines.

She's 6 foot 3 inches and 172 pounds. In modeling, where the heaviest women top out at 130 pounds, she's an Amazon freak. She doesn't have an ounce of fat on her and she's toned and muscle-bound. Her face is flawless and she looks incredible in a bikini — but she is different than the caved-in Kate Moss types who've tottered down the runways for the past 10 years.

But Gabrielle Reece isn't just a model. She's also a professional beach volleyball player. Her occupational choice in athletics comes from a physicality mostly predestined by genes and kept skillful because it's her job. Her financial well-being depends on her body. Her stomach is rippled, her biceps are huge, and her legs have no trace of cellulite because her volleyball performance depends on it.

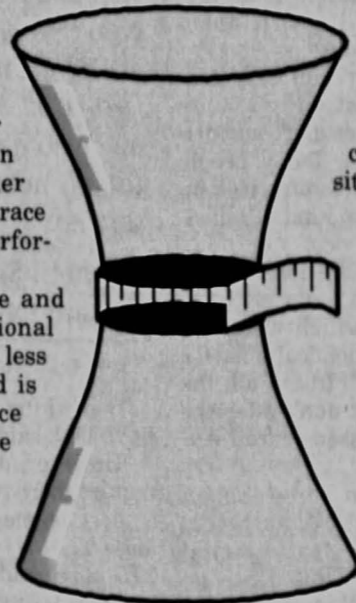

Women and young girls see Reece and aspire to have the body of a professional athlete, but it's a body that represents less than 1 percent of the population and is determined mostly by genetics. Reece changes the face of modeling from one physical extreme to the other. She blows the "perfect" body up into even more unreachable proportions. Though she is bigger in body mass than other models, she still represents an ideal that is virtually unattainable for the average woman.

Women's bodies aren't fashion garments to be tossed over to the Salvation Army like yesterday's tube tops and parachute pants. Women can't change their physique the same way they change their socks, the same way the magazine covers change monthly, the same way new sitcoms are introduced every season.

The people who produce images of the mass media need to learn that a woman's hipness shouldn't come from the circumference of her hips. It shouldn't come from her body at all.

PROPOSED REMEDIES FOR AMERICA'S ILLS:

For millions of Iraqi citizens, humanity more important than pride

Pride kills.

Eighteen million Iraqi people are starving. Iraqi babies are dying by the thousands. Last July the Iraqi Ministry of Health estimated that 4,475 children under 5 die every month of acute respiratory infections and water-borne diseases (diarrhea and malnutrition). The current infant mortality rate is 90 out of 1,000. An estimated 21.5 percent of babies born are low-weight (under 5 1/2 pounds). The numbers have risen six-fold since 1990.

Five years since the United Nations imposed sanctions after Kuwait was invaded, Iraqis still can't afford food, inflation continues to rise at amazing rates and medical supplies are nearly obsolete.

Although in 1991 the U.N. Security Council agreed to let Iraq sell $1.6 billion in oil under U.N. regulations, the Baghdad government will not relent. They don't want to obey U.N. auspices.

The United States has so much surplus food it's unbelievable that people anywhere in the world continue to starve. We are the major food producers of the world. We hold the reins. The Iraqi government thinks they're too tight, so they simply refuse to move. Their sovereignty is being violated.

But people continue to die. A draft report by the World Food Program of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization released in October said the nutritional standard of the Iraqi population has been in constant decline since

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Millions of Iraqi children are starving because of American reluctance to lift U.N. sanctions.

1991 and this decrease has primarily affected children.

Iraqis blame Americans.

It's incredible what fear does. The United States is afraid if they lift the sanctions, Iraq will become more powerful and impose its will on other nations, as it did to Kuwait. Because Iraq has continued to conceal weapons programs, the United States and the United Nations maintain the need for sanctions. The Clinton administration has no current plans to lift the embargo since a weaker Hussein is a better Hussein.

There's resolute stubbornness on both sides. And people continue to starve.

The need for power neglects humanity. Politics is always about power, not people, and the Iraqi situation is only one manifestation of this fact. Saddam Hussein, now elected until the year 2002, can sit in his palace and mumble about hateful Americans and the odious U.N. Security Council. But he eats. It's easy to make decisions about who eats when your belly is full.

Women roll canisters of oil down the street because it's too costly to have it delivered. Hyperinflation has grown so much the average man can work two jobs and still not feed his family. The hospitals simply don't have basic supplies such as needles, antibiotics, aspirators or medicines. Government food rations provide 50 percent or less of what people need to eat everyday.

When will humanity start coming first?

The queen battles the queen and the people are merely expendable pawns. The games played with people's lives — not only by world powers, but also in everyday life — are ridiculous. The Republicans can reform Medicare, but they're not the ones affected. The Serbs can perform ethnic cleansing on the Bosnians, but not themselves. What makes one life better than another? Why can't we make people, not power, the focus of life?

In this ongoing battle for control, there are real people struggling to survive, not to mention live. The tendency to get caught up in death statistics makes one forget about the lives behind the numbers. Let pride continue to be the ever-high wall that separates nations. And let each brick be the soul of each human lost in the battle for power.

Art of watching — crowds can make or break

When I was a kid, I was sure that whatever I did as an adult, I would be adored by millions, cheered on sight, and would be the envy of all my pathetic former classmates.

And at the mere age of 22, a DI columnist, I've experienced all of this and more. ("What is it you do — write for the DI?"

Most mortals have or do aspire to become something more than just another average Joe, but as the words of "Fame" slip away, the majority opt for becoming the next best thing — spectators.

Americans have made an art out of watching en masse. From professional sports to stadium rock concerts it's almost scary to see how seriously people take entertainment. But then, it's not just entertainment. Look around on a football Saturday in Iowa City and you can almost see American dreams resurrected in 60-year-olds donned in black and gold.

For $35 you, too, can forget your troubles and feel the exhilaration your own life lacks — crammed into four hours at the stadium. The great American escape is something we all can share. It provides a link across class lines, and although it seems a bit pathetic, it's a common experience that holds us together in a way politics no longer can.

I hadn't been to a major event for more than a year until this week when I joined the throngs at both the Penn State game and at the R.E.M. concert. I was struck by the similarities between the two, although bras were thrown at the concert, not hogs heads. But something seemed to be missing at both events — that certain something that embraces you and lets you forget how ridiculous the whole thing really is.

I could blame it on the way Iowa played or how Michael Stipe sang, but I think the crowds were really the ones at fault.

Sheer numbers aren't the deciding factor in making or breaking a great crowd. It's the relationship between the people in the seats or up in the stands that make for incredible experiences. It comes with being able to forget about yourself as you and 70,000 others are screaming at any given moment.

You may be sitting next to people with whom you have nothing in common except that you're fans of the same team or the same band. You can flaunt your knowledge in either event, and admiration, astonishment and sheer jealousy will follow readily.

"Old Hayden likes to bring that play out every once in a while. I saw Chuck Long run it 12 years ago," the guy behind you says after a play.

"Hey, I was at that game," you answer and it's OK that you're talking to a complete stranger. "Michigan State, right? He carried the ball over his head into the end zone for the winning touchdown."

Immediate friendship.

Or ...

"I saw them back in '83 in a small club. There were only about 200 people in the entire place."

"Man," you're thinking you were only in fourth grade at the time this guy was in college. "I would give anything to have seen them back then."

Multiply that a few thousand times and the air is practically crackling with the energy of possibilities.

I could attribute the lousy crowds to drinking, immaturity or — in the case of the R.E.M. concert — to the fact that I was in Ames. But it was narcissism. The crowds forgot that the real magic comes when thousands of people are focusing in on the same thing and taking in all of the feedback in the air.

The girls behind me needed to realize that no amount of shouting toward the stage was going to get Stipe to ask them for their numbers from 40,000 feet away. The students at the football game needed to quit panning for the cameras and realize Hayden wouldn't be calling them out onto the field, and movie producers definitely wouldn't be calling.

Ironically, sometimes the stars wish they could experience it all without the star baggage.

"If I could be anyone, I'd be in the last row, alone, 17 years old, with bad skin and weird hair," Stipe declared during the middle of the concert.

Besides the fact he became a rock star to escape just such a predicament — what he was alluding to was that we could share his stardom; the outrageousness, the sexiness, the intensity could be ours — as long as each of us shares it.

Bad signal may be key to bus wreck

James Webb
Associated Press

FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. (AP) — The driver of a school bus struck by a fast-moving commuter train may have had almost no time to react before the collision that killed seven students, a source close to the investigation said Thursday.

Investigators are trying to determine why the bus carrying 35 students was still waiting at a traffic light with its rear end over the tracks when the train came through Wednesday.

The bus driver, Patricia Catenkamp, told investigators she never saw or heard the train until impact, and didn't hear any warnings from students.

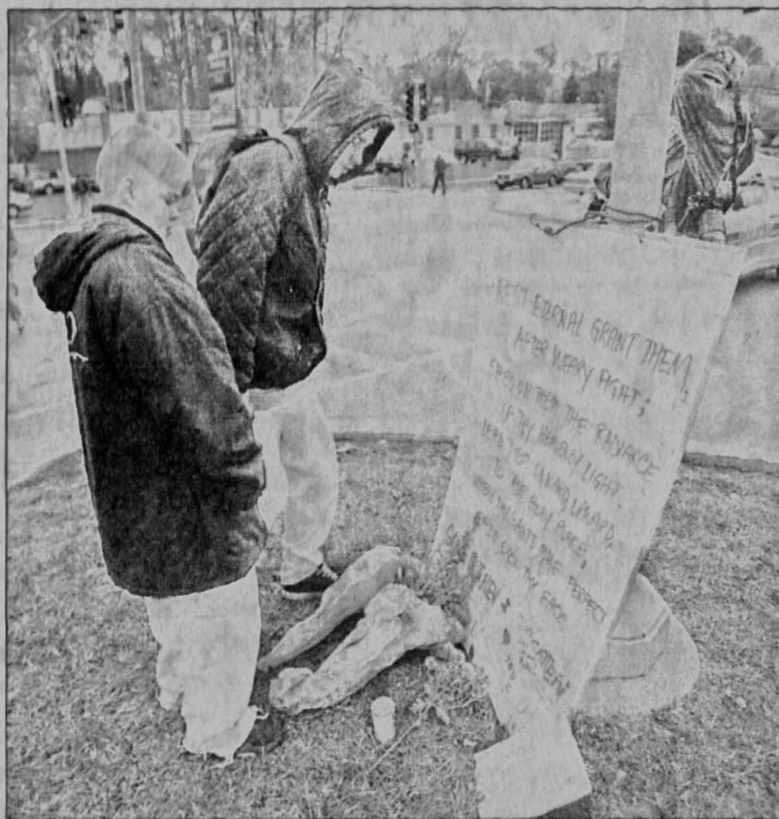

"There was a considerable amount of noise in the bus," National Transportation Safety Board member John Goglia said. "She did not hear a (train) horn."

Five students died Wednesday, and two more died Thursday after they were taken off life support. Eight other students remained hospitalized, one in critical condition.

Investigators tested the traffic light Thursday and were seeking police phone logs to check for complaints about the signal.

"The timing doesn't appear to be proper," Goglia said.

The NTSB said approaching trains trip sensors embedded in the tracks that prompt warning gates to lower, lights to flash and bells to ring. At the same moment, the traffic signal begins to change, eventually turning green to allow vehicles to clear out of the way.

Tests done since the crash showed 23 to 25 seconds elapsed between the time the train trips the sensor and arrives at the crossing, the NTSB said.

But the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the time span may have been much shorter on Wednesday when the accident occurred. "She may have had almost no reaction time," the source said.

The train's engineer saw the bus enter the intersection and stop with the end of the bus protruding onto the tracks, Goglia said. The engineer said he blew his horn and used an emergency brake but couldn't stop the train.

Moments before the collision, the police chief and an engineer arrived at the crossing to inspect the balky traffic signal.

Yeltsin suffers heart attack

Julia Rubin
Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin was rushed to a hospital by helicopter Thursday with his second apparent heart attack in four months, reviving doubts about whether he is healthy enough to govern Russia.

The 64-year-old Yeltsin has dominated post-Soviet Russia, and his health is a matter of constant speculation, particularly with parliamentary elections scheduled for December and presidential elections in June.

The illness came two days after a summit in the United States where Yeltsin succeeded in boosting his and Russia's role in efforts to settle the war in the former Yugoslavia.

Aides said Thursday night Yeltsin did not appear to require surgery.

"I'd say his state is less serious than in July," spokesperson Igor Ignatiev told reporters at the Kremlin. "The president is in charge."

Yeltsin was hospitalized for almost a month, then took a long holiday after an attack in July of acute ischemia, a condition that restricts blood flow to the heart.

Presidential aides initially tried to play down that attack, claiming it was only a minor ailment.

Yeltsin later called it a heart attack.

Top presidential aide Viktor Ilyushin said Thursday Yeltsin was suffering from the same ailment, and he blamed it on overwork.

"The president's condition does not evoke great optimism," he told a news conference. "It's unlikely he'll be back at work in the next few days."

He said Yeltsin has canceled a trip to China early next month, and is making other changes in his immediate schedule. A decision was to be made Friday on whether Yeltsin would host a planned summit Tuesday of the leaders of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia.

Acute ischemia can be caused by stress, high cholesterol, age or chronic high blood pressure. Symptoms include difficulty breathing and chest pains.

Throughout his presidency, Yeltsin has had periods of poor health and has been dogged by rumors of drinking. He has appeared more fit recently, however, and aides have talked about his making a bid for a second presidential term in June.

Yeltsin has said he is waiting until after parliamentary elections to decide. His popularity has been hurt in recent years by the country's declining economy and other problems.

Before leaving for France and the United States last week, he told reporters he was fit enough to challenge President Jacques Chirac of France to a tennis game. And he tried to demonstrate his improving health in September by playing tennis with President Alexander Lukashenko of Belarus.

Aides said Thursday, however, that the president had shown signs of exhaustion at the end of his U.S. trip. Ilyushin said he was working too hard on the flight home.

"In the future," he said, "Yeltsin's foreign trips should foresee a certain time for his normal adaption to different time zones, and several days of rehabilitation after the pressure during the flight."

Yeltsin was brought to the Central Clinical Hospital, traditionally used by Kremlin leaders, on Thursday afternoon from his country residence.

If Yeltsin were unable to serve, Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin would take over. Elections would have to be held within three months if the president died.

Selena killer gets life

Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

The prosecution had asked jurors to sentence Saldivar to the maximum penalty — a life term requiring at least 30 years behind bars, and a $10,000 fine. Defense attorneys sought probation.

Saldivar, wearing a white suit, began to cry after state District Judge Mike Westergren read the jury's sentence.

Her family, seated directly behind her in court, also began sobbing.

Westergren asked Saldivar if she had anything to say.

"No sir," she replied quietly as her lawyers hugged her.

There was no immediate reaction from members of Selena's family, who were seated at the other side of the courtroom.

Outside, a loud cheer went up from Selena's fans, and horns blared from cars driving around the courthouse.

Saldivar, 35, was convicted of murder Monday for the March 31 shooting at the Days Inn in Corpus Christi.

Jurors began weighing Saldivar's punishment Wednesday and recessed after 5 1/2 hours. Deliberations resumed Thursday for an additional four hours.

Early Thursday afternoon, jurors asked Westergren about fines — where they come from and where they go. He responded in a note that he had given them all the information in his charge on Wednesday.

The jury ultimately levied no fine.

Saldivar did not face the death penalty because the crime contained none of the aggravating circumstances required under Texas law, such as a multiple murder or a murder committed during a robbery.

Prosecutors contended that Saldivar, who rose from fan club president to manager of Selena's clothing boutiques, shot Selena, 23, after the singer's family suspected her of embezzling $30,000. The defense claimed the gun went off accidentally.

District Attorney Carlos Valdez argued emotionally for the maximum sentence.

"I'm asking you on behalf of that beautiful voice, that golden voice that brought joy to millions of people, that voice that was silenced," Valdez said.

The single prosecution witness, Dr. Faustino Gomez, testified Wednesday he did not find Saldivar to be law-abiding. Gomez was not allowed to mention that he fired her in 1983 after he suspected her of stealing money.

Associated Press

Agueda Benitez, a fan of slain Tejano music star Selena, celebrates in Houston Thursday after Selena's killer, Yolanda Saldivar, was sentenced to life in prison.

Eight character witnesses for the defense portrayed Saldivar as a loving person who should not be sent to prison.

"Yolanda Saldivar has been punished tremendously for her conduct," lead defense attorney Douglas Tinker said in his final arguments to the jury.

"There are greater benefits if you let her return to society."

PARTY IN 'OPEN REBELLION'

Democrats fed up with Clinton's waffling

John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Pat Leahy is hardly known as a rebel. But after President Clinton cut a back-channel deal with Republicans on a foreign aid bill the other night, the Vermont Democrat could not hide his anger.

"My inclination is to tell the administration to take a flying leap," Leahy said, exasperated that Clinton was working with Republicans instead of through fellow Democrats. His advice for the president: "Hire grown-ups."

Another day, another Democrat in open rebellion against the president — just when one would think a unified Democratic voice could help counter Republican leaders bent on muscling their spending priorities through Congress.

Just this week, Democratic Sen. Paul Wellstone of Minnesota suggested Clinton "demonstrate some strength and conviction" for a change, and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, also a Democrat, said Clinton must curb his urge to please every audience.

Democrats are still seething over Clinton's remark last week that he "raised taxes too much" in 1993. The president's hasty retreat hasn't soothed Democratic lawmakers who reluctantly voted for the budget package after Clinton pleaded his presidency was at stake.

"Some people were clearly incensed," said Texas Rep. Martin Frost, head of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. At one leadership meeting, according to a senior aide, Democratic Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin told colleagues they were wasting energy getting mad at Clinton.

Obey, according to the aide, said House Democrats should just operate on the assumption that Clinton would abandon them.

The White House has worked feverishly in recent days to allay such fears, sending senior officials to Capitol Hill to assure Democrats that Clinton would stand with them in the budget battle.

To show good will, White House aides relayed to Clinton a request from Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey, head of the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee, to make sure Clinton criticizes "the Republican Congress" — not just Congress.

Riggs dies of prostate cancer at age 77

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bobby Riggs, who once proclaimed himself a "chauvinist pig," managed to boost the profile of women's tennis with his penchant for hyperbole and self-promotion.

His opponent in the 1973 "Battle of the Sexes" match-up, Billie Jean King, said all that bravado was just an act. Riggs died Wednesday at his home in suburban Leucadia of prostate cancer. He was 77.

"Bobby Riggs was a true friend for the last 25 years," King said in a statement Thursday. "His generosity, fighting spirit and hustle were felt both on and off the court throughout his life. Our 'Battle of the Sexes' match helped to advance the game of tennis and women everywhere."

"This great champion will be deeply missed."

The diminutive Riggs, who was an excellent athlete, recharged a flagging career in 1973 in a match billed as a "Battle of the Sexes." The question was: Could a 55-year-old veteran beat a 29-year-old champion at the top of her game?

Sure, 30 years earlier he was ranked No. 1 and had won Wimbledon and U.S. titles. But that was three decades ago.

Asked if he would like to play King, Riggs said in April 1973: "Everyday and twice on Sunday. The girls are always complaining they don't get as much prize money as men. Any good club player can beat a top woman player."

The match was one of the most hyped events in American sports. Played in a time of emerging feminism and as "the women's lib movement" was heating up, their duel drew 30,472 to the Astrodome and a television audience estimated at 50 million.

Riggs hit spins, drops and lobs, but King retaliated with long rallies that wore him down. She won 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Agassi re-injures chest, falls to Washington

ESSEN, Germany (AP) — Andre Agassi re-injured a chest muscle at the Eurocard Open on Thursday, forcing a layoff that could cost him his No. 1 ranking.

Agassi said the injury, which first bothered him at the Davis Cup semifinal against Sweden a month ago, flared up again while he was serving in the first set against fellow American MaliVai Washington, who went on to win the match 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

"I'll fly back to Las Vegas and first play again at the world championship in Frankfurt," he said.

Cleveland's Albert Belle watches his two-run home run in the first inning of Game 5 Thursday night.

Cleveland chops down Maddux

Ben Walker
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — This could be the start of the ultimate comeback.

Orel Hershiser and the Cleveland Indians, just one game away from losing the World Series, beat Greg Maddux and the Atlanta Braves 5-4 Thursday night, cutting their deficit to 3-2.

Albert Belle's two-run homer in the first inning — plus a brushback to Eddie Murray that led to a rare, bench-clearing incident in the Series — energized Cleveland early.

The Indians, who made a habit of rousing rallies all year, went on to beat the best pitcher in baseball, sending the Series back to Atlanta. Maddux stopped Cleveland on two hits in the opener, but Hershiser outpitched the three-time Cy Young winner this time, allowing five hits and two runs in eight innings.

"It was an unbelievable game," Hershiser said.

The Braves still have two more chances to win their first title since moving to Atlanta. Game 6 will be Saturday night, with Dennis Martinez starting for the Indians against Game 2 winner Tom Glavine.

"We've got to go back and win one ballgame," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

CLUB VOLLEYBALL

So long, and thanks for the memories

This column is dedicated to the Iowa men's volleyball club, which because of time conflicts, I will no longer be a part of. To PRESIDENT Dan and the rest of the guys, it will always be my honor and privilege to have played on the same court as you.

At the risk of sounding cheesy:

We may not have been the greatest team that ever existed, but it would be a struggle to find a more dedicated or motivated group — and I'll miss it more than you'll ever know.

I'll never forget getting hammered by Iowa State in our first match, then seeing the looks on the Cyclones' faces as we stood toe-to-toe with them at our final match. It didn't even matter that we lost — well, I was pissed beyond belief at the time — but just knowing that in only a few months we went from the status of scrubbage to contender makes me realize last year's team was more than just a bunch of guys bumping a ball around.

To Dan, who transformed from the guy with the funny hair to a vocal team leader.

To Ted, who emerged as the mightiest hitter on the team.

To Rob, who went from being a guy who just hit the ball long to a guy who could hit the ball long really hard (just kidding).

To Justin, nobody on the team worked harder; we spoke highly of you when you weren't around.

To Pam, who nurtured the squad's metamorphosis. Few would have had the patience that you brought with you each day to the practice court.

So at long last, farewell. I wish all of you the best of luck, success and knowledge that there will always be at least one person who wants to see you kick the hell out of Iowa State. Thank you for being a part of one of the greatest things that I've ever been part of.

And with that said, here are a few tidbits that crossed my mind:

- Why can't I shake this feeling that if I saw Chris Webber in Iowa City, it would take all the will power I could muster not to push him in front of a Cambus?

- Do you really think Dennis Rodman stays up nights because Scottie Pippen won't talk to him?

- Does anybody else find it sadistic that the only reason I'd ever watch an auto race is to see a car slam into a wall at 190 miles per hour and explode into a sea of flames?

- I feel Don King's pain.

- I finally reduced what the Utah Jazz need to win an NBA championship down to two words: Manute Bol.

- This year's winner of the Schwartz Shoot Yourself in the Ass award: Rashard Griffith. The former man-child from Chicago's King high school decided to leave Wisconsin after his sophomore year. However, NBA scouts soon realized even though the 7-footer had a 35-inch vertical leap he had the work ethic of a See 'n' Say.

Griffith went unpicked during last June's NBA rookie draft and, since he signed with an agent, couldn't return to the Badgers. Fans of Griffith will now need to charter a flight to Turkey if they want to see their hero in action.

- Last month I read a feature on a UCLA golfer. He said in all seriousness, "I can't wait until I turn pro, that way I won't have to carry my own clubs anymore."

File under: "Those in need of a swift kick in the privates."

- I don't think NBC has enough in-studio analysts for its NFL coverage.

- Hey, when does the NHL start up?

- Do you think John Cooper's job will again be in jeopardy after the Hawkeyes pull off the upset Saturday in Columbus, Ohio? Iowa 45, Buckeyes 38.

19TH ANNUAL

Elites gear for Hospice races

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Nearly 6,000 runners, walkers and wheelers are scheduled to compete in the 19th annual Parson's Technology Hospice Road Races Sunday.

However, the only view most participants will get of an estimated 35 elite and seeded runners will be from behind.

Rod DeHaven, Libbie Johnson and Jerry Lawson head up an all-star cast that is expected to sprint away with several awards and all of the prize money.

Although competitors don't have to make a definite commitment to a particular event until shortly before the race begins, DeHaven, the 1995 Canadian 3,000 meter champion, is expected to try and capture a 5K victory after winning the 10K race in 1993. Pushing him will be John Kihonge, who was a member of the Iowa State national

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Things don't get any easier for the Iowa football team.

After suffering their first defeat of the season last weekend, the Hawkeyes travel to Columbus, Ohio, to battle the Ohio State Buckeyes on Saturday.

Iowa, the No. 25 team in the nation, comes into the game 5-1 overall, 2-1 in the Big Ten. Ohio State, ranked No. 4, is 7-0, 3-0 in the conference.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry is convinced that the Buckeyes should be the No. 1 team in the nation.

"The Buckeyes in my opinion are the best football team in the nation," Fry said. "Based on the teams they've played, compared to some of the other teams that are ranked in the top four in the nation, that they've had the toughest schedule, that they've beat the best ball clubs and they've looked good doing it."

"I don't really relish the idea of having to play Ohio State as good as they are."

The last time the two teams met was in 1992 when the Buckeyes defeated the Hawkeyes 38-15 in Iowa City. Ohio State holds a 35-13-3 overall advantage.

Ohio State has traditionally had a solid running game, but this year the Hawkeyes are expecting a more balanced attack.

"Where as (Ohio State) Coach (John) Cooper always had a real fine running game and he has thrown the ball well in critical passing situations, this year, they're throwing the ball on first down, second down, third down," Fry said. "They've opened up

Webb-less Hawks head north to Michigan

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

Welcome to the Hawkeyes version of musical chairs.

The Iowa volleyball team gets one important player back this weekend, but will lose another for two Big Ten matches at Michigan and Michigan State.

Senior Tiffany McDaniel makes her return to action after missing the previous 10 matches with a strained knee.

The bad news for the Hawkeyes is that they will be playing without their top player, Jennifer Webb. Webb, a junior, strained a muscle in her shoulder blade and is not expected to play this weekend.

"Basically my whole arm is gone right now," Webb said. "It does feel a lot better than it did earlier in the week."

In order to replace Webb, Iowa is expected to move setter Lisa Dockray to a hitting position, and start freshman Barbara Zvonek as setter.

McDaniel is a four time letter winner who adds a great deal of size and experience to the Hawkeyes lineup.

Iowa struggled badly without her, dropping eight of the 10 matches she missed.

"I don't think that I'm so incredibly important from a physical standpoint, but I think it has been more of a loss of chemistry," McDaniel said. "This week practices have been really good, and a lot of the chemistry is coming back."

The Hawkeyes are coming off a split last weekend. Iowa defeated Purdue on Friday to end a seven-match losing streak. The final score was 15-8, 15-10, 15-17, 15-11.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Women look to bounce back from Invite

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

With four meets under its belt, the Iowa women's cross country team will head into the Big Ten Conference meet Saturday a healthy squad looking to prove its ability.

The team's top runner, junior Becky Coleman, is back after sustaining an ankle injury that kept her out of the Iowa State Invitational on October 14.

"The ankle is doing good and I have no problems," Coleman said. "I think I'm fine and the team is doing well."

Minus Coleman and Fleck, the Hawkeyes finished 22nd out of 22 teams in Ames.

"Iowa State was a disappointing result," head coach Jerry Hassard said. "We can use that meet to see that we are capable of better."

The meet will be held at Minnesota, a course that Iowa ran earlier this season in rain-soaked conditions. Iowa finished a positive 12th out of 23 teams in a field that consisted of six ranked teams. Six out of eight Iowa finishers set their personal best times at the Minneapolis meet despite the poor conditions.

"The positive experience we had at Minnesota helps us a lot," Coleman said. "The freshman along with the rest of the team have the course in mind and are ready to go."

Key teams in the meet this weekend include Michigan, Wisconsin, Penn State and Purdue.

"We've analyzed this field and a top-seven finish is a realistic goal," Hassard said.

"This team has a lot of heart and talent," Coleman said. "If we just go out there and do our best, we will do a lot."

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Men need success at Big Ten competition

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Put up or shut up is the way head coach Larry Wiecek sums up the Big Ten Conference meet this Saturday at Minnesota.

Despite the team's accomplishments this season, only a strong performance at the Big Ten meet and District meet in two weeks will denote a successful season.

The field is very strong and is anchored by No. 1 Wisconsin. In addition to Wisconsin, all the Big Ten teams have shown flashes of brilliance this season.

"This is definitely the toughest Big Ten since I've been coaching," Wiecek said. "There is good depth throughout the field and all the teams are good."

Jared Pittman is healthy after a bout with the flu that kept him out of the October 14 Iowa State Invitational and is looking to improve on his 36th place finish last year.

"Jared has been doing well and will be ready to go," head coach Larry Wiecek said.

Additionally, freshman Stetson Steele, who has led the team all season long with his 1st, 2nd, and 3rd-place finishes, will look to improve from his disappointing 37th place finish at Ames.

"Stetson realized that he made some tactical mistakes in Ames," Wiecek said. "I don't see anything bothering him this week.

He's handling this like a senior."

Aside from Pittman and Steele, sophomore Mike Bakker has been the teams 2nd, 3rd and 4th runner this season, but has really come on in practice the last few weeks.

"Mike has stepped up to a new level in training since Iowa State," Wiecek said. "He has been dominating practice."

cross country championship team.

Libbie Johnson and Kathryn Evans are the 5K favorites in the women's race. Both have won the race before, but Elva Dryer may also figure into the mix if Evans moves up to the 10K.

In the men's 10K, former Iowa all-American Kevin Herd should be among the front runners. There he will be joined by Lawson (2nd in 1993) and Richard Rono, who was leading the 10K race a year ago before taking a wrong turn.

Herd said he's looking forward to a strong race after six weeks of intensive training which included five weeks of 100-plus miles.

"I've never done that before and I'm at a whole new level of training," Herd said. "Hopefully that will translate into a good race performance."

Despite being in great shape, Herd said he just hopes to stay close to the competition.

"I don't know the course that well," he said. "If DeHaven has quite a bit of an off day and I have a great day I might be right there."

Two-time champion Dave Nelson returns to defend his title in the half marathon. Nelson has qualified for the U.S. Olympic Marathon trials in January 1996 and was among the top three American finishers at both the Houston Tencoco Marathon and the Desert News 10K in Salt Lake City.

Former Iowa all-American Jenny Spangler is the favorite in the women's half marathon division. Spangler has already qualified for the U.S. Olympic Marathon trials in February and was the Hospice Road Race 10K champion in 1986.

Spangler said she is fully recovered from a stress fracture in her foot, but noted she wasn't attempting to shatter the course record.

"I'm not going to smoke anything," Spangler said. "I'll basically try to stay at six minutes a mile so it won't be a blazing time. It'll be a good training run."

SERIES

Hershiser, who walked one and struck out six, is 8-1 lifetime in postseason, four wins coming this year. He made the play of the game in the eighth with the score 4-2, atoning for two shaky plays by spearing Marquis Grissom's liner and doubling off Mike Mordecai at first base.

"I was yelling at myself, 'Finally, finally, you can make a play,'" Hershiser said.

Jim Thome, who singled in the go-ahead run in the sixth, hit a solo homer in the eighth for a 5-2 lead. Ryan Klesko homered for the third straight day — a two-run shot off Jose Mesa with two outs in the ninth. Mesa earned the save by striking out Mark Lemke, ending the fourth one-run game of the Series.

Maddux set a major-league record this season, extending his streak to 18 straight road wins.

Maddux, signed by the Braves last year to help bring them the championship they've chased without success, clearly was not as sharp from the start.

He walked the second batter of the game, Omar Vizquel, after walking no one in the opener. With two outs, Belle homered into the Atlanta bullpen in right field for the second straight day.

That brought up Murray and on an 0-1 pitch, Maddux, known for having the best control in the majors, knocked him back with a high-and-tight fastball.

Murray took a couple of steps out toward Maddux and pointed at him as plate umpire Frank Pulli got between them. Both benches and bullpens then emptied, though no punches were thrown.

"I think it fired us up," Thome said. "I think it fired up the crowd."

Such confrontations hardly ever happen in the Series. There was a much-publicized incident involving Ducky Medwick of the St. Louis Cardinals and Detroit third baseman Marvin Owen in 1934, and Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees nearly got into a fight with Brooklyn pitcher Whit Wyatt in 1941.

Thome and Manny Ramirez, both struggling in the Series, put Cleveland ahead 4-2 with consecutive RBI singles with two outs in the sixth for a 4-2 lead.

Luis Polonia hit Hershiser's first pitch of the fourth for a rare home run, and the Braves tied it at 2 with a run in the fifth, missing a big chance to score more.

Polonia's homer was his first since the Braves got him on Aug. 11 from the New York Yankees, who needed to make room for Darryl Strawberry. Polonia, playing left field while Klesko was the DH, had hit two home runs this season for New York and 17 in his nine-year career.

Hershiser, usually a picture of calm, became a bit ruffled in the fifth.

Klesko led off with a single and Lemke followed with a slow bouncer to the left of the mound. Hershiser charged in to grab it, but rushed a throw that pulled shortstop Vizquel off second base, leaving both runners safe.

Charlie O'Brien sacrificed and

Cox made the first move from the dugout, pulling No. 9 hitter Rafael Belliard — 0-for-12 in the Series — and sending up pinch-hitter Dwight Smith.

Indians manager Mike Hargrove countered with an intentional walk, loading the bases for Grissom. On the first pitch, Grissom hit a two-hopper to the right of the mound that Hershiser tried to field with his bare hand but dropped.

Grissom was credited with a single, his 24th hit in the postseason, tying the single-season record set by Boston's Marty Barrett in 1986. It also gave Grissom a 12-game hitting streak in the postseason; the record is 17 by Hank Bauer of the Yankees in the 1956-58 World Series.

Bases loaded, one out, score tied 2-2 and Polonia up. Big trouble for the Indians. That is, until Hershiser used one of his favorite sinkers to induce the quick Polonia to ground into his first double play since joining the Braves.

Sanders will lift Cowboys in debut

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

"This is MY house," Deion Sanders said last year after coming back to the Georgia Dome with the San Francisco 49ers, returning an interception for a touchdown and getting into a scuffle with Atlanta's Andre Rison.

Rison is in Cleveland now as Deion returns to make his debut with the Dallas Cowboys in perhaps the most fitting locale he could find.

His house, of course.

That the Cowboys are favored by 10 points is the perfect reflection on the NFL this year. At 6-1, they're only a game better than the 5-2 Falcons, are playing on the road and yet ... They're considered at least 10 points better by the people who are supposed to know.

COWBOYS, 43-3.

Buffalo (plus 5 1/2) at Miami

Every time Wayne Fontes comes under fire, the Lions somehow manage to beat a good team. "You can beat me up but you can't keep me down," Fontes says.

Women's rowing team hosts regatta Sunday

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Those crossing the bridges of the Iowa River on Sunday will see a lot more than muddy water and floating debris.

The Iowa women's rowing team makes its home debut in the Head of Iowa regatta. Competition is scheduled to begin at 8:45 a.m. on the Iowa River and will conclude around 3 p.m.

The race, the fifth-annual to be hosted by Iowa, will take place along a 2 1/2-mile course.

Iowa rowing coach Mandi Kowal said Sunday's regatta is nowhere near the size of last week's competition, The Head of the Charles, which was held in Boston. The crew placed 21st out of 31 teams in a talent-filled event; and of the college teams competing, the Hawkeyes took 14th — one minute behind the top college finisher.

Even with Iowa's stiff competition, Kowal was pleased with her team's effort.

"They were rowing technically better than a lot of the teams," Kowal said. "Other teams weren't quite as efficient as we were, but you have to realize we were going against some very high quality teams."

"Those were national and Olympic level teams that we were competing against."

Kowal also said the number of teams competing could increase by Sunday. Already scheduled to see action are Iowa's varsity squad, novice and the men's club team, and range in level from a light-weight division to master status.

"This is going to be a relatively small regatta," Kowal said. "We'll fair well against Kansas, who just got elevated to varsity status this season."

"Those were national and Olympic level teams that we were competing against."

Mandi Kowal, Iowa women's rowing coach on last week's Head of the Charles competition

After The Head of the Charles, Kowal said the Hawkeyes needed to improve in the area of speed. However, she also feels that Iowa is right where they need to be in terms of progress.

"We've been training harder," Kowal said. "We have a good, solid base, but we still need to be faster."

This will be the final meet of the fall semester for the rowing team, but it will compete in an intrasquad competition November 4 as a part of Parents' Weekend.

Iowa springs back into action with two more home meets on April 6 and 7.

Hawks aim for perfect Big 10 mark

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

Nine down, one to go.

The Northwestern Wildcats have the dubious distinction of being the last team to try and stop the Big Ten champion and undefeated Iowa field hockey team from going a perfect 10-0 and cruising into next week's Big Ten tournament.

The Hawkeyes and Wildcats clash Saturday at 1 p.m. at Grant Field.

Iowa head coach Beth Beglin said despite the team's success there is still areas to work on.

"We find ways to win and that's great but it's been a while since we put two solid halves back to back. I guess it's good to know that we haven't really peaked yet," Beglin said.

Iowa locked down the conference title last week, sweeping Ohio State and Penn State. A No. 1 seed is waiting for the Hawkeyes in Happy Valley, Pa. next week at the Big Ten tournament but Beglin said there is still a task at hand.

"This is still an important game," Beglin said. "It's going to be very emotional for our seniors and we want to finish the conference undefeated."

seniors. Ann Paré, Jessica Enoch, and Nancy McLinden will step onto Grant Field Saturday for possibly the last time this year. McLinden said it will definitely be an emotional occasion.

"It's going to be a little sad," McLinden said. "Having our parents there and the pregame ceremonies is just going to remind us of how great the last four years have been."

Iowa comes into Saturday's game 9-0 in the conference, 14-2 overall. The Hawkeyes have parked themselves at the No. 2 position in the national rankings for a second straight week. The last time Iowa was on the losing end of the stick was back on September 17, in a 3-2 loss to Maryland.

One reason for the Hawkeyes success could be the fact that they simply overpower their opponents.

Iowa has outshot its opponents a staggering 128-69 in the Big Ten and 278-153 overall. McLinden said the emotion of Saturday's game and the Hawkeyes continuous roll of dominance doesn't give the Wildcats much of a chance.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Near flawless play paves way for Iowa

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Through its first two home dual matches of the season, the Iowa women's tennis team has established an interesting pattern: Flawless victory.

Iowa (2-0) has won all 15 of its matches without losing a set, but the Hawkeyes will have to turn it up a couple of notches if they plan to continue the trend. Iowa will be facing a dangerous foe when it clashes with the undefeated DePaul (1-0) today at Klotz Tennis Courts.

DePaul enters the match with a roster that features two players from Croatia, two more from South Africa and one from El Salvador.

Iowa coach Jenny Mainz said the abundance of foreign players on DePaul's squad has forced the Hawkeyes to prepare for a number of different strategies.

"They mix it up a lot, they're not real aggressive," Mainz said. "They play a game where they try to force you to make the error."

Although Mainz is concerned with DePaul's more passive approach, she said the Hawkeyes wouldn't get into a baseline slugfest.

"We've got to stay up there," Mainz said. "That's the only way we're going to be effective. We can't try to meet their game. We've still got to play ours."

Compounding the situation for Iowa is the absence of sophomore Krissy Campbell. Campbell will sit out of No. 4 singles and No. 2 doubles to nurse a shoulder injury.

Campbell downplayed the significance of her injury saying that most of the lineup was interchangeable, but said she was disappointed to miss a strong competition.

"As far as dual matches have gone, we haven't had as much of a challenge as we're ready for," Campbell said. "This will be a good challenge. They've got lots of talent so it will be a good match."

To compensate for the loss Mainz plans to insert freshman Heather Mowery in the No. 6 singles position and junior Robin Niemeier at No. 2 doubles.

Mainz said Mowery was ready to make her home singles debut.

"I feel like she (Heather) can really come through for us," Mainz said. "She's playing well, she's hitting the ball well and she should have a lot of confidence."

Senior Sasha Boros said that injuries might play a factor, but said the Hawkeyes won't overlook the Blue Demons.

"We can't go into it like we're playing Iowa State or Western Illinois," Boros said. "We've concentrated in practice on not letting that happen by focusing on their strengths and realizing that they are a different team than in the past."

Mainz said it would be important for the Hawkeyes to capture doubles wins on the road.

"If we can get that first doubles point, that will give us a big mental advantage," she said.

The match is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m., in case of inclement weather it will be held at the UI Rec Building.

their offense."

A major part of emergence of the passing attack has been Ohio State quarterback Bobby Hoving, the top rated quarterback in the Big Ten and the nation with an efficiency of 177.32.

"Bob Hoving, in my opinion, is probably the best quarterback in America," Fry said. "Based on what he's got to work with, what he does, how he handles it."

"He's extremely accurate, efficient, has got a very strong arm, is a big 6-4 guy and he's got that great running attack to keep people off balance."

That running attack is led by Eddie George.

George is the second leading rusher in the conference at 141.4 yards per game.

The Hawkeyes will also look to show good balance on offense. After relying mainly on the rushing game early in the season, Iowa opened up the passing attack last week.

Quarterback Matt Sherman, the No. 2 rated quarterback in the conference, is pretty confident in Iowa's passing game after his 374-yard passing performance against Penn State.

"I think we showed that we do have a good passing game and that when we want to use it we can," Sherman said. "We all gained confidence in it and we all believe in it. It's just a matter of going out and doing it."

Matt Sherman, Iowa quarterback on the Hawkeyes' passing game

Despite battling a groin injury the last two games, Sedrick Shaw is third in the Big Ten in yards rushing per game.

But injuries continue to plague the Hawkeyes, who have had to limit practices because of players sitting out.

"It's hard because most of the times you can't practice all the offense you want or defense you want just because your starters are hurt," Sherman said. "It requires all the rest of us just to focus a little bit more."

Vampires with a Latin twist

Ernesto Acevedo-Muñoz
The Daily Iowan

Funny, funky and gory, Guillermo del Toro's feature debut, "Cronos" (Mexico, 1993) splashes some fresh blood (so to speak) on the old vampire sub-genre. Veteran Argentinean movie actor Federico slow death of the living, in which a would-be vampire is unhappy with his ambiguous status (he really wants to die and get it over with).

Stylistically complex, "Cronos" exploits its absurd premise drawing upon baroque and surrealist formal conventions. A significant and well handled amount of gore manages to be just slightly over-the-top, placing Cronos successfully on the brighter side of camp, rather than the darker side of kitsch.

The movie sets the age-old vampire tale against the background of modern day Mexico City, and its allusions to NAFTA are less than subtle, portraying a U.S. emigre and businessperson as a greedy industrialist with dark intentions and actual interference with Mexican commerce.

Cronos has enjoyed substantial success both in Mexico and abroad. It swept the 1993 Ariel awards (the Mexican Oscars) winning the categories of Best Picture and Best Director, among others. It was awarded the critic's Grand Prize at the 1993 Cannes Film Festival and was shown with great success at the Sundance Festival.

The fabulous cast includes (human) villains Claudio Brook, better known as Luis Buñuel's "Simon of the Desert," and Ron Perlman of television's cult series "Beauty and the Beast." "Cronos" is showing at the Bijou Oct. 27-31, promising a feast of fun fangs for Halloween.

Massacre of the Innocents

Bin Ramke, former UI faculty member, will read from his poetry tonight at 8 at Prairie Lights Books.

This week in the charts

Despite big first weeks for Green Day and Janet Jackson, Mariah Carey's Daydream holds at No. 1 on the "Billboard" Album chart. Carey spends her second week at No. 1 and should hold there for a while.

Green Day's Insomniac debuts this week at No. 2. The 33-minute Insomniac matches the peak position of their eight-million-selling Dookie. The debut of Jackson's Design of a Decade 1986/1996 is disappointing, coming in at No. 4.

Stuck between the two big debuts is Alanis Morissette's Jagged Little Pill. Rounding out the Top 5 at No. 5 is the soundtrack to "Dangerous Minds."

Other debuts this week include AZ, KRS-One, k.d. lang, Indigo Girls and Joe Satriani.

Carey Heads Singles Charts
Along with ruling the Album chart, Mariah Carey continues to top the Pop and R&B Singles charts with "Fantasy." "Fantasy" spends its fifth consecutive week at No. 1 on both charts.

Coolio and L.V. again hold at No. 2 with "Gangsta's Paradise." Janet Jackson's "Runaway" stays at No. 3, and Seal and Michael Jackson continue to round out the Top 5.

All the movement in the Top 10 is coming from the bottom. Sophie B. Hawkins goes up two more spots to No. 6. This is an amazing feat considering the single is in its 22nd week and actually slipped to No. 100 early on. "As I Lay" is now one spot away from matching Hawkins' biggest hit, "Damn I Wish I Was Your Lover," which peaked at No. 5 in 1992.

Two new singles enter the Top 10 this week: "Back For Good" by Take That and "Carnival" by Natalie Merchant. The British group, Take That, comes in at No. 9 with a single that became a huge No. 1 this year in Europe. Natalie Merchant reaches the Top 10 with her first solo effort. Merchant peaked at No. 11 with 10,000 Maniacs in 1994 with "Because the Night."

Boyz II Men Backs Up
Boyz II Men is finally starting to wind down their eight-million selling II. Where they've been showing up, however, is on other people's records.

Wanya Morris of Boyz II Men is currently at No. 4 on the R&B chart and has just slipped out of the Top 10 on the Pop chart, singing with Brandy on her single, "Brokenhearted." The group sings along with L.L. Cool J on his new single, "Hey Lover." They also show up with Mariah Carey on her upcoming single, "One Sweet Day."

Look for "One Sweet Day" to be the next explosive single. It is entirely possible it will be the next No. 1, replacing "Fantasy," by none other than Mariah Carey.
