Rowdy Hawk fans beware

Frisks, surveillance and no halftime remittance may become standard

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily lowan

You snuck in the beer cans, tossed marshmallows, raw chickens and even a hog's head, but now you may have to pay the price.

Rowdy Hawkeye fans may not be able to re-enter Kinnick Stadium after halftime this weekend.

In a UI Athletic Department meeting with campus officials Monday, a list of possible proactive measures, including the denial of re-entry passes, were discussed to ensure a safe environment during home football games.

The potential safety measures may be implemented to deter the rambunctious behavior in the student section during UI home football games. At the Iowa vs. Penn State game on Oct. 21, objects such as a hog's head and full can of beer were tossed on the field.

Fans can expect new rules to be enforced this weekend, said UI

Football Game Precautions

Steps the UI may take starting with the next game to prevent spectators in the student section from throwing objects onto the field:

- Frisk and/or pat searches at some or all gates
- Video surveillance of stadium seating areas
- Peer security within seating areas
- Use of plainclothes spotters
- Elimination of halftime re-entry passes

DI/ME

Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby, but wouldn't comment on which ones.

Others on the list of potential measures include a frisk and/or pat search, video surveillance of stadium seating areas, peer security within seating areas and the use of plain clothes spotters.

"Any of these things could happen," he said. "And perhaps a few that aren't on the list will too."

If re-entry passes are eliminated, Phil Jones, dean of students, said he believes there will be a negative reaction from the fans, but it still has to be explored as a possibility. However, Jones doesn't believe the safety measures will be implemented this weekend.

"It all revolves around the abuse of alcohol and this is not just with the students," he said. "(Fans) leave the stadium during halftime for further tailgating and to drink some more."

The elimination of re-entry passes may effect businesses around Kinnick Stadium which thrive on customers during halftime. Ken Hansen, an employee at Melrose Market, 1006 Melrose Ave., said this measure will decrease the number of people who come in to purchase food and beverages during halftime.

"During halftime we get a lot of students," he said. "It will definitely effect us in a bad way, but it won't devastate us. It's not what we want to see."

Although students said they understand why the new rules might be imposed, many said they will be upset because the tradition

Tortillas result in penalties for Texas Tech

The UI isn't the only school in the country with a student section that loves to chuck food onto the playing field. At the Oct. 14 Texas Tech University football game, tortilla-tossing students cost the team 45 yards in penalties.

The penalties occurred due to a Sept. 12 announcement saying Tech would enforce the NCAA rule preventing the tossing of any item onto the playing surface. The first violation results in a warning and a charged timeout to the home school, with subsequent violations resulting in 15 yard penalties.

Tech was forced to kick off twice from the 20-yard line instead of the 35, and was also penalized on a 52-yard kickoff return due to tortilla tossings.

Although Tech players were upset by having to overcome the penalties, the team defeated Arkansas State 21-17.

TKE PRESIDENT'S DEATH

UI suicide: Poor grades may have contributed

Vicki Butner
The Daily lowan

Bradley Swanson, the UI student and fraternity president who committed suicide Sunday night, was having academic problems, one of his professors said Tuesday.

"He was having trouble in engineering, and he had lost his excitement," said Mechanical Engineering Professor Ralph Stephens.

Swanson, the president of Tau Kappa Epsilon who committed suicide by shooting himself with a 12-gauge shotgun, was taking Mechanical System Design from Stephens.

"He took an exam last Monday (Oct. 23)," Stephens said. "He did not do very well."

Swanson was not happy as an engineering major, Stephens said.

"He was talking about options, switching majors and dropping classes were discussed," Stephens said. He suggested Swanson step down as TKE president, but Swanson did not like the idea, saying he enjoyed his work in the fraternity. Swanson left the meeting intending to remain in his fraternity.

Swanson had not attended the last few lectures, Stephens said.

"And then I found out he had taken his life," the professor said.

A single self-inflicted gun shot wound to the upper torso killed Swanson, police said Tuesday.

"He was instantly dead when he fired the gun," said Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department. Police believe Swanson probably owned the gun.

Stephens said he talked with Swanson about bringing his grades up.

Stephens' class policy is that if a student doesn't turn in 2/3 of the daily homework, the student's homework grade — which is 15 percent of the total grade for the class — goes to a zero. Three or four weeks ago, Stephens called out names of people in class, including Swanson, who he wanted to talk to about their grades.

"I wanted to find out what was going on with his homework," Stephens said.

Swanson, who is from Rockford, Ill., was not in class the day the names were called out, Stephens said. "Someone told him and he came into my office."

None of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity members would comment on the death Tuesday.

One of Swanson's engineering professors, Kwan Rim, said Swanson was a good student.

"I feel very bad about this loss," Rim said. He mentioned Swanson at the end of class Tuesday.

Swanson's advisor, J. S. Chen, said that he met Swanson a couple of times and he was always smiling, happy, and pleasant. Swanson's death was a shock to him.

"I couldn't believe he would do something like this," Chen said. "It didn't appear to me that he had something in his mind to do something so seriously."

University Counseling Service is meeting with the members of the fraternity and is making counseling available to friends. Students may contact the service at 335-7294 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. After hours, students may call the 24-hour phone line at the Iowa City Crisis Center, 351-0140.

Visitation will be at the Fred C. Olson Funeral Chapel in Rockford from 8 p.m. Thursday, with a service at 8 p.m. The funeral will be Friday at 11 a.m. at Our Savior's Lutheran Church, in Rockford. Burial will be in Arlington Memorial Park in Rockford.

Nov. 1st shootings linger on in memory

Cary Jordan
The Daily lowan

When the sun set on one of the darkest days in UI history four years ago today, five people had been killed and one was severely injured at the hands of Gang Lu.

The physics and astronomy doctoral student ended the rampage when he took his own life.

Memories of the tragedy that occurred Nov. 1, 1991, are still evident in Iowa City and on the UI campus. Lu's victims included T. Anne Cleary, UI vice president for academic affairs; UI faculty members Christoph Goertz, Dwight Nicholson and Robert Alan Smith; and research investigator Linhua Shan. UI student Miya Rodolfo-Sioson, the lone survivor, was left paralyzed from the neck down.

Professor Gerald Payne, chairperson of the UI Physics and Astronomy Department, said three very gifted and important elements in the department were lost.

"The event was certainly very

POWELL'S PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

Iowa Republicans say 'no way' to Powell's abortion stand

Jay Dee
The Daily lowan

Colin Powell may be the front-running presidential candidate for the nation, but Iowa Republicans say Powell's pro-choice position on abortion puts him behind other GOP contenders in the state.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's campaign doubted that Powell would do well in Iowa if he entered the race.

"People who are pro-life are very committed to this issue," said Andrea Andrews, Gramm's Iowa press secretary, "and are unlikely to get behind a candidate who wasn't likewise on that issue."

"There really is not a market out there for a (Republican) pro-abortion candidate."

"There really is not a market out there for a (Republican) pro-abortion candidate."

Andrea Andrews, Phil Gramm's Iowa press secretary

Other local GOP activists do not sense a large Powell movement in Iowa. Charles Denniger, Lamar Alexander's Johnson County campaign chairman, said support for Powell has been created by the media, rather than by Republicans.

"Most of the Republicans that I've talked to don't really care about speculation — about whether he runs or doesn't," he said. "Nobody's holding his breath for him."

However, Republican Party of Iowa chairperson Brian Kennedy

Survey says: abstract rounds up U.S. stats

Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Homes without cable TV are a definite minority. One in three Americans is still exercising after 75. Rock music sales are twice those of country and 10 times those of jazz.

Here is America in bare statistics, devoid of interpretation. Stacks of stats. From labor force to labor rooms. The kind of stuff important to public officials, business analysts, educators, librarians, research workers, students and the merely curious.

Thirty-four percent of Americans 26 and over have smoked marijuana at some time in their lives, but only 3 percent are current users. Eight percent of households have herb gardens. A family of four pays more state and local taxes in Newark, N.J., than in other big cities. Lotteries racked up more than $25 billion in sales.

Such minutiae abound in the new Statistical Abstract of the United States published on Tuesday. It is a book of more than 1,000 pages, some with enough facts for a game of "Jeopardy!" or "Trivial Pursuit."

You learn that lottery ticket sales totaled $2.3 billion in 1980 but $28.5 billion last year. That of Lottery ticket sales totaled $2.3 billion in 1980 but $28.5 billion last year.

There were 2 billion books sold, 1.2 billion of them paperbacks. The 35- to 44-year-old age group bought more books than any other.

24.6 million golfers played 498 million rounds last year.

Facts from the Statistical Abstract of the United States

187.7 million adults in the 1993-1994 period, 69 million had no cable television.

That in 1992, there were 6.4 million pregnancies, 4 million births and 1.5 million abortions. The rest were miscarriages. Seventeen percent of women of childbearing age used contraceptive pills; 10.5 percent relied on condoms. Thirty percent were surgically sterile.

Also in 1992, there were 400,000 injuries involving beds, mattresses and pillows; 44,000 involving cleaning agents and 24,000 involving cigarettes. But the most injuries of all by far, 1.8 million, had to do with stairs, ramps, landings and floors.

The book is a set of statistics in itself, bringing together the most recent figures from the last year or two or three. The government has put it out since 1878, drawing on both public and private sources. The 115th edition adds 76 new tables for a total of 1,512. They include estimates of undocumented immigrants, use of computers, bond ratings for states and cities, union membership by state and home ownership rates.

It drops some, too. No more does the abstract list household pet ownership, medical device implants by age, sex and race, or summary of operations of intercity bus lines.

One of the new tables gives statistics on mothers who smoked during pregnancy. Nearly 18 percent were white, 14 percent black. The more public school education the mother had, the more likely she was to be a smoker.

A table on diseases reported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta bears this notice, "Figures should be interpreted with caution," because some are incomplete.

Of reportable diseases, which include rabies, tetanus, tuberculosis and typhus, the largest number by far was for cases of AIDS, 103,691 in 1993. The second ranked was aseptic meningitis, 12,848.

On a less somber note:

In 1993, movies took in $48 billion, an increase of nearly $5 billion over the previous year. There were 2 billion books sold, 1.2 billion of them paperbacks. The 35- to 44-year-old age group bought more books than any other.

Amateur softball engaged 42 million Americans on 200,000 adult teams and 62,000 for kids. There were 24.6 million golfers, playing 498 million rounds; 22 million tennis players using 230,000 courts. Americans bought 13 million bicycles, 5 million of them imported.

And there was record attendance, 71 million, at major league baseball in 1993, the last year listed in the abstract. There won't be a record in the next edition for 1994. The season was truncated by a strike.

Soul man Brown continues saga of trouble

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — James Brown is in trouble again over an alleged assault on his wife.

Brown, 62, was charged with criminal domestic violence after his wife, Adrienne, called 911 asking for medical help, sheriff's spokesperson Don Biermann said.

He was freed on $940 bond.

His wife of more than 10 years was treated at a hospital and released.

Brown's lawyer, Buddy Dallas, wouldn't comment, except to say "It's just another story in the continuing saga of James and Adrienne Brown."

The soul singer was accused a year ago of shoving his wife during an argument, but charges were dropped when she refused to testify.

Brown served nearly three years in prison after he was arrested in September 1988 for leading police on a car chase between South Carolina and Georgia.

Hunter S. Thompson isn't fishing for a Senate seat

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Hunter S. Thompson is gonzo about politics, but that doesn't mean he wants to be a senator.

Rumors have been flying in Washington that the journalist will run for the U.S. Senate seat to be vacated next year by Hank Brown of Colorado. The scuttlebutt was even mentioned on CNN's "Inside Politics."

Thompson said the story is false.

Former Motley Cruener squabbling with neighbor

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Former Motley Crue frontman Vince Neil and a neighbor are having a little trouble with socks and slugs and a rock and a Rolls.

Neil and Gregory Cassidy are pointing fingers at each other in a two-day feud that started Sunday, when several of Neil's friends parked in front of Cassidy's house.

Cassidy confronted Neil at his house, they argued, and Cassidy allegedly tried to hit Neil, who then punched him in the face, said sheriff's deputy Benita Nichol.

Cassidy was treated at a hospital and released.

These days, the former Rolling Stone magazine correspondent and book writer is concentrating on local politics as a new member of the governing board of his neighborhood caucus, a quasi-governmental body that advises county commissioners.

"I don't dare turn my back on politics," he said. "It's the art of controlling your environment, and that's what we're trying to do here."

Writers salute author of 'Death of a Salesman'

NEW YORK (AP) — Fellow writers saluted Arthur Miller on his 80th birthday, lamenting that he gets more respect overseas than at home.

"If it were up to the American theater, Arthur Miller would not have a career in it," playwright John Guare said Monday during a discussion of American writing.

The event was sponsored by PEN, the international writers' organization that fights censorship and supports freedom of expression. Miller is a past president.

Miller is famous for "Death of a Salesman" and "The Crucible." His latest work is "Broken Glass."

Miller told an audience of about 1,400 that criticism had a bright side: "If there's no resistance, you can't be telling the truth."

Arafat hopes for more kids

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Yasser Arafat wants more children, even though he's not too sure about the looks of his first daughter.

"She is pretty and looks like me," Arafat said of his daughter, Zahwa, born July 24 in France. "I would prefer it if she looked like her mother."

Arafat told the daily Al-Sharq Al-Awsat that his wife, Soha, complained that he hasn't spent much time with the baby. He said his work doesn't give him much leisure.

Still, the 66-year-old said he doesn't see himself quitting. Arafat has chaired the Palestine Liberation Organization since 1968 and also heads the National Palestinian Authority that runs the autonomy zones in the Gaza Strip and West Bank.

Skaters jump over UI ban to city lots

Sarah Lueck

The Daily Iowan

When UI students returned from summer break they found some wheels had been banned from campus — skateboard and in-line skate wheels.

Skaters were prohibited in UI parking ramps and other UI buildings, as well as in areas where prohibitive posters were tacked up this summer.

The UI's decision to ban skateboarders and in-line skaters from skating on much of campus property happened without their knowledge or input, said UI sophomore and skateboarder Eric Neubauer.

"The UI made laws while we weren't here," he said. "I came back from summer break and it was illegal. There was no way to represent ourselves like we could with city council."

Now skateboarders and in-line skaters have moved to public property, such as city parking ramps, which has made the situation an issue for the council.

"The UI couldn't deal with it, so the students decided to use city property," said Iowa City Mayor Susan Horowitz.

The council will vote on an ordinance banning skateboarding and in-line skating in public parking ramps and parking lots at its Nov. 21 meeting.

The vote was deferred at the last council meeting due to the concerns of skateboarders who spoke at the meeting. Councilor Karen Kubby said she encouraged them to come after they voiced their concerns to her.

"It shows they have a commitment to following through," Kubby said.

Neubauer said he and other skateboarders came to the meeting because they thought the council's decision should not be made without the input of those affected by the ban — skateboarders and in-line skaters.

Neubauer left his name and number for city attorney Linda Woito.

M. Dickbernd/The Daily Iowan

Erin Meyer, a Kirkwood sophomore, ramps over a trash can near Burge Residence Hall. The Iowa City City Council is considering banning skateboarders and in-line skaters from public property.

He expects to be contacted to give input before the Nov. 21 meeting.

Neubauer said he's glad for the chance to voice his concerns to city officials.

"I think it's cool," he said. "They (the councilors) are open-minded and willing to listen. That's how government is supposed to be."

Neubauer said skateboarders have a good relationship with the Iowa City Police Department.

"(The police) don't seem to mind," he said. "They just drive by and wave. They know we need a place to skate, and (the parking ramp) is away from the general public and a wide open space."

Horowitz said the city will work with the UI to come to a resolution.

"This has to be looked at by both the UI and the city," she said. "This is a legitimate issue for a city with a university in it."

The reasons for the city's concern are issues of safety and lawsuits, Horowitz said.

"It's legitimate to be concerned about safety and, frankly, lawsuits the city would incur by not addressing those issues," she said.

It's important to offer the skaters an alternative, Kubby said.

"We can't take it away without replacing it with something," she said. "They're using it in a positive way, and I want to reinforce that."

Kubby said the in-line skaters who play hockey at the top of the public parking ramp on the corner of Washington and Van Buren streets at night are making good use of a public facility.

"Why not use public space in a double-duty way?" she said. "It's an efficient use of money."

UNI student hears racy line in Disney's 'Aladdin'

Associated Press

CEDAR FALLS — Matthew Ford heard it. He couldn't believe his ears.

So he played back the video tape to make sure. There it was, in the Disney movie "Aladdin," the title character whispered something that sounded a lot like "take off your clothes."

"I just laughed," Ford said. "My roommate and I are always looking for mistakes and things hidden in movies."

That was 10 months ago.

Last week, Ford was reading the Wall Street Journal. He couldn't believe his eyes.

So he folded back the page and read it again. There it was, for millions to see, Ford was being credited (or blamed, depending on how you look at it) in print for triggering a national controversy over alleged subliminal messages in three of Disney's hugely popular animated flicks.

"I really didn't entertain the notion that I started this wildfire that swept across the United States," said the University of Northern Iowa senior. "I really wasn't happy with the way it was worded."

Here's how it was worded, by WSJ reporter Lisa Bannon:

"Mr. Ford would prove to be one of the central figures in the 'Aladdin' saga ... He had no moral or religious purpose in spreading the word about it ..."

Ford, a self-described movie buff who hails from Newton and studies electronic media at UNI, said all he did was tell his younger sister about the "take off your clothes" line. Word of mouth did the rest until the story landed with a Newton woman who works for First Christian Church there.

She wrote a letter to a religious entertainment guide, which blasted Disney for the alleged subversion. Disney wrote back, contending the character in question is actually saying: "Take off and go."

Company officials quickly denied any knowledge of sublimation in their movies.

Introducing a new way to help bridge the gap between what you've saved and what you'll need during retirement.

Teachers Personal Annuity now offers more flexibility with the new Stock Index Account... a variable account specifically developed for the long-term investor who is looking for more growth opportunities and is willing to accept more risk.

When you're planning for the future, every dollar counts. Now you have more choices to help you make the most of your after-tax retirement dollars. With Teachers Personal Annuity, you can select either our Fixed Account or our new Stock Index Account. Or, you may choose to allocate your money to both accounts. That way you can take advantage of the highly-competitive effective annual interest rate of the Fixed Account and the growth potential offered by the Stock Index Account. With both accounts, taxes on any earnings will be deferred until you withdraw them — which gives you a big edge over taxable accounts. However, if you withdraw money before age 59½, you may have to pay a federal tax penalty in addition to regular income tax. And remember — as a variable annuity, the Stock Index Account doesn't guarantee returns, which will fluctuate over time.

With a low initial investment, no front-end sales charges or transfer fees, and no surrender charge at this time, Teachers Personal Annuity can help bridge the gap between what you've saved and what you'll need during retirement.

TA writes her way into men's magazine

Daisy Hutzell
The Daily Iowan

The story of two American women in Tokyo, written by a UI graduate student, has become the first piece composed by a woman to win the Frederick Exley Fiction Competition in Gentleman's Quarterly magazine.

"The Hazards of Golf," by Marian Pierce, who is also a teaching assistant for Women and Literature and

"I'm surprised that my story won because I consider it a feminist story, and it's a men's magazine."

Marian Pierce, a UI teaching assistant and member of the UI Writers' Workshop a member of the UI Writers' Workshop, was featured in the November issue of GQ. It was the first story Pierce tried to publish.

The piece is set in Japan, where Pierce lived from 1985 to 1990, and is based on an incident Pierce read about in the newspaper while she was there.

Pierce said golf is a very popular sport in Japan, and she read that a golfer was practicing his swing when a woman on a bike rode by. The golfer hit her in the head while swinging and the woman died.

The story's main theme is about two American women in Tokyo, and Pierce said a lot of her short stories have a feminist side to them.

M. Dickbernd/The Daily Iowan

Marian Pierce won this year's Gentlemen's Quarterly's Frederick Exley Fiction Competition with her story, "The Hazards of Golf." Pierce is a member of the UI Writer's Workshop and is the first woman to win GQ's award.

"I'm surprised that my story won because I consider it a feminist story, and it's a men's magazine," she said. "I think I learned something because I didn't think I could publish a feminist story like this in a men's magazine."

Pierce said she decided to submit the piece because one of her classmates in Writers' Workshop told her about the contest. The qualifications for the fiction contest were submitting a work of fiction that was under 5,000 words.

Pierce sent her story to New York City, where Adrienne Miller, the assistant editor of GQ, screened the entries. She said about one-third of the entries were submitted by women.

"I thought Marian's story was beautifully written and stylish," Miller said. "The final judges thought the story was highly believable."

Miller said she handled the contest and screened the more than 600 entries down to about 15 to 20 entries. A panel of three judges narrowed these entries down to five semi-finalists, and the judges then had one month to name the winner.

Miller said the final three judges voted unanimously for Pierce's story and were happy to see a woman win.

"(GQ is happy) because it's a men's magazine, and maybe some people think that we don't publish women writers," Miller said.

Pierce's prize for winning the contest included $5,000, and she said the majority of the money went toward her tuition, and the rest is in a savings account.

Pierce also won a trip to New York City, where GQ held a party for her so she could meet people who work in writing and publication.

Since winning the award, Pierce has continued to submit stories to magazines. She submitted a very short story to Story magazine, and one to The New Yorker. Currently, she's trying to decide on an agent, and when she does, she said the agents will send her stories to other magazines.

ANTI-SEMITIC WRITINGS REPUDIATED

Lutherans, Jewish work to cease historic friction

Greyson Purcell
The Daily Iowan

Jewish and Lutheran residents of Iowa City came together Sunday with the hope of ending years of Jewish hatred and intolerance among some Christians.

"This is a significant historical moment," said Rabbi Victor Mirelman of West Suburban Temple Har Zion in River Forest, Ill. "What we celebrated today is a milestone in human understanding."

The Service of Reconciliation began at Zion Lutheran Church, 310 N. Johnson St., and continued after a short walk to Agudas Achim Synagogue, 602 E. Washington St. There, Rabbi Jeff Portman was presented with a copy of the Declaration of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America to the Jewish Community — a document repudiating the anti-Semitic writings of Martin Luther.

"In the long history of Christianity, there exists no more tragic development than the treatment accorded the Jewish people on the part of Christian believers," the document said.

A Monday night round table discussion at Old Brick Church, 26 E. Market St., continued the discussion about Jewish and Lutheran harmony.

UI religion professor Diana Cates said some Christians today tend to overlook some fundamental elements of Christianity.

"The central moral requirement of Christianity is to love one's neighbor as one's self," she said.

Christian intolerance of the Jewish people is a perplexing, ironic paradox, UI religion professor

"Jesus of Nazareth told his followers to love their neighbors as themselves. Yet, in the name of Jesus Christ, Christians have preached and practiced persecution of the Jewish people."

George Nickelsburg, UI religion professor

George Nickelsburg said.

"Jesus of Nazareth told his followers to love their neighbors as themselves," he said. "Yet, in the name of Jesus Christ, Christians have preached and practiced persecution of the Jewish people."

Lutherans feel deeply responsible for the ways Luther's teachings have been used by anti-Semitic organizations, such as the Nazis and Aryan Nation, said Franklin Sherman, chairperson of the Christian Scholars Group on Judaism and the Jewish People.

The document reads, "In the spirit of truth-telling, we who bear his name and heritage must with pain acknowledge also Luther's anti-Judaic diatribes and violent recommendations of his later writings against the Jews."

Mirelman said the way history has depicted the Jewish people will be difficult to erase.

"The church was depicted as a young maiden with total vision," he said. "The synagogue was depicted as an old woman and blind."

Both Jewish and Lutheran participants stressed the belief that both people could live in harmony without turning their backs on their religion.

"I think there are many Christians today who are not interested in loving Jews," Cates said. "Christians, while remaining Christians, can choose to love Jews, as Jews."

Calvin Klein's newest ad controversy involves Iowa hunk

NEW YORK (AP) — Calvin Klein's latest ad campaign features a well-muscled young man clad only in briefs, his legs spread wide to show off his crotch — and he's straight out of Iowa.

The gel-haired, chest-rippled model in the latest ad, Joel West, is 20.

"This is nothing more than pornography," said Donald Wildmon, head of the American Family Association. He said Tuesday his organization will ask consumers to boycott Klein products.

The ad is on the back covers of the November issue of Esquire and the December issue of Playboy, both already on newsstands. The designer, long known for risqué ads, did not return calls for comment.

In August, a firestorm of criticism from Wildmon and other groups forced Klein to cancel a jeans campaign that featured unknown models, some as young as 15, in provocative poses and settings.

The Justice Department is investigating whether the ads broke child pornography laws. The department will decide within a few weeks whether to continue the investigation, spokesman John Russell said.

Klein has said his ads are meant to convey a strong image.

"I create the underwear to make people look sexy. ... So my point is that when I advertise it, for sure I'm going to show it to its greatest advantage," he said in New York Magazine's September issue.

"And I'm going to do it on someone who has an excellent body, someone who's sexy, male or female, doesn't matter," he said.

Klein ads have generated complaints as far back as 1985, when Women Against Pornography criticized the designer for displaying "gratuitous female nudity" and "pseudo-androgyny" in a magazine ad showing a model reclining with arched back in briefs and a T-shirt pushed up to reveal one of her nipples.

Clinton to meet GOP on budget battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton and congressional leaders agreed Tuesday to a face-to-face meeting on averting a federal default, as both sides expressed a willingness to head off a fiscal crisis temporarily.

Wednesday's White House session would be the first time in seven weeks that Clinton and his GOP adversaries have met to discuss their ongoing budget battle. But in a signal of how far they are from compromise, the two sides maneuvered for tactical advantage by offering divergent descriptions of how widening their meeting would be.

White House spokesperson Mike McCurry said the participants would be "talking about default, not budget." Many administration officials say public opinion has shifted against the GOP's proposed savings in future Medicare spending and believe each day the budget fight continues hurts Republicans.

But GOP leaders, seeking to raise the stakes and accelerate the process said they would seek a broader discussion.

"I don't think you can talk about the debt limit in isolation," said House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga. "You have to include reconciliation, spending bills, the whole thing."

Complicating things is the government's soon-to-expire debt limit.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin has said the government's ability to borrow money needs to be extended by Nov. 6 because it will soon breach its $4.9 trillion debt limit. If an unprecedented federal default is triggered, that would likely force interest rates upward and rattle financial markets.

Balkan peace efforts land in U.S.; leaders optimistic

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio — Arriving to a red-carpet welcome Tuesday night, Serbia's president predicted that U.S.-run peace talks on Bosnia would succeed in ending the four years of warfare in the former Yugoslavia.

"I am an optimist," Slobodan Milosevic, said on the eve of the talks at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. "I believe the talks will succeed."

American mediator Richard C. Holbrooke was on the tarmac when the JAT Yugoslav Airlines Jet landed with the Balkan leader, considered pivotal in the U.S. peacemaking effort in three-way negotiations.

"We attach great importance to the peace initiative of the United States," Milosevic said. "And we are here to join the effort to bring peace to the Balkans."

A somber President Clinton, hoping to set the stage for a settlement, warned the leaders of Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia that they were undertaking what could be "the last best chance we have for a very long time" to end Europe's deadliest conflict since World War II.

The Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic and Foreign Minister Mohammed Sacirbey arrived just before Milosevic.

Silajdzic also appeared upbeat about the talks. "We came with great hope. We came here to get what we don't have in Bosnia — justice and democracy."

Presidents Franjo Tudjman of Croatia and Alija Izetbegovic of Bosnia were scheduled to arrive separately after midnight for the talks.

Accused of starting the war in Bosnia 42 months ago, Milosevic was the focus of U.S.-peacemaking efforts. And as he left Belgrade, the ardent Serbian nationalist called for "a spirit of impartiality and objectivity," saying an accord should treat all sides fairly.

The State Department's spokesman, Nicholas Burns, gave Milosevic credit for releasing 324 Muslim prisoners who were exchanged Tuesday for 125 rebel Serbs but was reserved in his praise.

"I don't think it's possible to say that someone who championed a war three and four years ago has gone through a process of complete redemption and is an entirely different person," Burns said in Washington.

Holbrooke, author of a basic agreement on the division of Bosnian territory and postwar power-sharing, spoke cautiously about the chances for peace after four years of war.

Some of the toughest issues awaiting negotiators are map boundaries, the status of Sarajevo, practical steps that must be taken to separate hostile forces and procedures for free elections.

They also will have to address "a bundle of human rights issues," including the plight of refugees and justice for war atrocities, said Anthony Lake, Clinton's national security adviser.

House members expressed their concerns late Monday, voting 315-103 on a nonbinding resolution indicating hesitance about using American soldiers.

Clinton addressed those fears in a 10-minute broadcast address from the Roosevelt Room, emphasizing that the United States has a singular leadership role to play. Clinton also will discuss Bosnia in a meeting Wednesday with the bipartisan leadership of Congress.

"The United States, the source of NATO's military strength, must participate," Clinton said. Otherwise, he said, other NATO allies would reconsider their commitments.

Clinton said American troops would be deployed only if there were a peace agreement. They would operate under NATO command, with clear rules of engagement and a clearly defined mission, the president said.

Quebec premier to resign after secession failure

David Crary
Associated Press

MONTREAL — Stung by defeat in the secession referendum, Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau said Tuesday he will resign as head of the bitterly divided province at year's end.

He also voiced regret at the way he had blamed the loss on non-French immigrants, but he stopped short of an outright apology for a diatribe that drew a firestorm of criticism.

Parizeau underscored his continuing support for the separatist cause that has been at the heart of his long political career. He said his separatist Parti Quebecois would choose new leadership capable of achieving independence for the mostly French-speaking province.

Parizeau, 65, was elected premier last year after promising to hold a referendum on secession. His side lost Monday, but only narrowly — 50.6 percent to 49.4 percent.

But at a time when the separatists could have been taking heart at their strong showing, Parizeau shocked even his allies with an incendiary speech at campaign headquarters, blaming the defeat on immigrants.

"It's true we have been defeated, but basically by what?" Parizeau said. "By money and the ethnic vote."

Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau, announces his resignation, to be effective at the end of the fall parliamentary session, as his wife, Lisette Lapointe, looks on.

Parizeau's co-leader in the separatist camp, Lucien Bouchard, distanced himself from the ethnic remarks Tuesday, signaling that the premier's position had become untenable.

Parizeau said he used terms "that could have been much better chosen." But he reiterated his view that Quebec's French-speaking majority had, in effect, been thwarted by non-francophones.

"I was shocked," Prime Minister Jean Chretien said. "I hope that everybody will reject that. Every citizen under the law in Quebec is an equal citizen and you cannot divide a society on 'ours' and 'theirs.'"

About 90 percent of English-speaking and immigrant Quebecers opposed secession, while French Quebeckers — who make up 82 percent of the population — voted for independence by a 60-40 margin.

Parizeau took responsibility for defeat.

"With my qualities and my faults, I contributed to bringing this great project to the result of Oct. 30," he said. "Others will now take it across the final line."

Earlier Tuesday, Bouchard — a possible replacement for Parizeau — scoffed at an offer from Chretien to negotiate a new status for Quebec.

"Never again will sovereigntists be begging for anything from the rest of Canada," Bouchard declared. He said Quebec would agree to negotiate with Canada only after winning an independence referendum.

Bouchard planned to meet with his party Wednesday to discuss his future.

Chretien, chastened by the razor-thin federalist victory Monday, said he would try to get other provincial premiers to support changes that would decentralize the government and recognize Quebec as a distinct society.

Bouchard described his reaction to Chretien's offer as "boredom" and "big yawns."

replacements are still very bothersome.

"We've found that the new professors have taken an active role in helping along other people in the department."

Professor Amitav Bhattacharjee, who filled one of the vacancies in the UI Physics and Astronomy Department after the shootings, said he would much rather have had the opportunity to work with his slain colleagues than to get a position.

"The people who lost their lives were very well-known physicists," Bhattacharjee said. "I knew two of them very well. I was very sad when I learned that they had died. I had no idea at the time that I would end up here, at the same institution that they did such admirable work at."

"The sense of loss felt by so many people won't heal quickly. I think we will all live in the shadow of such a terrible tragedy for quite some time, but eventually time will heal for most of us."

Pastor Ted Fritschel of the Association of Campus Ministers, said that while memories of such a terrible event are painful, they must not be forgotten.

"When something like this happens, it affects so much of the campus and community," Fritschel said. "Even four years after it happened there are students here who remember that day. But students who weren't here at the time need to know about it as well."

R.J. Pales, a UI junior who was in high school when the shootings occurred, said he doesn't have a clear recollection of what actually happened, but remembered hearing about it.

"When I first heard about it, I just thought the guy was nuts," Pales said. "I heard that he lost out on some award and started killing people. But you'd have to be crazy to kill people just because of an award, it's not like it's the end of the world."

UI senior Megan Daniel, who was also in high school when the shootings occurred, said she remembers seeing it on the news.

"I just remember I was really shocked by it," Daniel said. "It made me think about the kinds of pressures college students go through. I don't think he was crazy, or anything like that — well maybe to some extent. But it's a shame there wasn't anyone who could have seen something brewing inside of him. There should have been more people who could have helped him through his problems, or detected that something was wrong."

A silent vigil and commemoration for the victims of the Nov. 1 shootings will be held at 12:30 p.m. today, at the T. Anne Cleary Walkway, which was named after one of the victims. Fritschel said the vigil has become an annual event, and will consist of brief remarks from himself and Dr. Les Sims, dean of the UI Graduate College.

Sims was the first person Lu talked to about his grievance on not receiving an academic award for his doctoral dissertation. Being passed over for the award was what led Lu to his rampage.

"It's such a sensitive issue," Fritschel said. "It's so hard for anyone who remembers that day as vividly as some of us do to not get choked up about it."

"The vigil will be very brief, maybe 15 minutes or so," he said. "We hope it serves two purposes. To respectfully commemorate the memory of those lost, and to help the campus and community remember the event as it should be."

The timing of the vigil was set up to be convenient for students and faculty, but the number of people present isn't the most important thing, Fritschel said.

"We scheduled it for 12:30 so it would be during a break between classes," he said. "Many students passing by the walkway stop to pay tribute, and some don't. Last year, I guess, someone counted the number of people taking part at around 100."

Fritschel said for those who were directly affected by the shootings, talking about it isn't an easy thing.

"There are some people who were directly involved that, to this day, haven't spoken publicly about their experience," he said. "That's one of the reasons we keep the vigil so short. It's too difficult for anyone to talk at any length about it without breaking down."

ending the war before Iraq's Saddam Hussein was neutralized and the Republican Guard destroyed.

And in following a political route to the top, boosted by heavyweight mentors such as Caspar Weinberger and Frank Carlucci, Powell left detractors in the ranks.

• His military philosophy. "The Powell Doctrine" opposes the use of troops unless clear conditions are met: a precise objective, public support, a will to throw everything at the enemy, an exit plan, the likelihood of low casualties. Apply those rules rigidly, retired Lt. Gen. Bernard Trainor said last week, and "you will never use military force for anything."

Worse, Trainor said, Powell's concept turns 200 years of civilian control of the military on its head: "The Powell Doctrine, rigidly applied as it has been, more or less tells the president when and when not to use military force. I would submit that that is not in the interest of the republic."

• Powell's business dealings. His silent-partner investment of $100,000 in a Buffalo, N.Y., television station, said to have brought a profit of $150,000 within 10 years, is already under scrutiny.

• Family matters. A Powell spokeswoman confirmed that Powell's wife, Alma — who does not hide her opposition to a Powell candidacy and fears for his life if he runs — has suffered from depression and takes medication to control a chemical imbalance. The Powells might not relish seeing that hashed out in a campaign.

• Racial politics. They cut both ways. If he became the first black to run as a major party's nominee, Powell could get 30 to 50 percent of the black vote in November, eroding President Clinton's baseline support, Nofziger estimated.

On the other hand, "there will be people who will not vote for Colin Powell because he's black and who will lie to pollsters about it," said Alan Hertzke, a University of Oklahoma political scientist. Powell offers "racial absolutism to white America" and would attract votes from whites, he said. On balance, political observers say, race could be a plus, especially in states where Democrats and independents can vote in a Republican primary.

• Powell's political innocence. He hasn't been subject to the rough and tumble and doesn't have a canned answer to questions that demand detailed knowledge. "Wait until he comes out and he's surrounded (by reporters) asking about ethanol and target prices and corn yields and that sort of thing," says GOP front-runner Bob Dole.

Powell, too, could turn out to be thin-skinned. His adulatory march through the book stores of America was hardly the best of preparation.

IOWA REPUBLICANS

said Powell would immediately enter the first tier of candidates — Bob Dole, Pat Buchanan, Gramm and Alexander — if he entered the race.

Other Republicans also said Powell would be a strong candidate.

"He's a general," said Brett Hall, the Morry Taylor campaign's press secretary. "People hold generals in great esteem, especially successful ones."

A recent CBS News-New York Times poll showed Powell leading Dole 34 percent to 29 percent among GOP voters. The same poll showed Powell ahead of President Clinton by a 50-38 margin in a two-way race. Dole trailed Clinton 49 percent to 43 percent if Powell wasn't involved.

If Powell entered the race, Deninger said he would not divide the party on abortion.

"He's a general. People hold generals in great esteem, especially successful ones."

Brett Hall, the Morry Taylor campaign's press secretary

"There are a number of other candidates that are pro-abortion, and you don't see them polarize the party," he said.

Pennsylvania Sen. Arlen Specter and Illinois businessman Taylor are also pro-choice candidates.

Conservative presidential candidates Buchanan and Alan Keyes have criticized Powell's pro-choice views. Buchanan said conservative Christians, a large voting block in the Republican Party, may leave the party if Powell does decide to declare his candidacy and becomes the GOP nominee.

Silence Bowers, a Christian Coalition member from Iowa City, said she would not vote for Powell because he is pro-choice. If Clinton and Powell are the candidates in 1996, many Christian Coalition members could stay away from the polls, she said.

"It will turn a lot away," Bowers said.

Speculation that Powell would enter the presidential campaign as a Republican grew last week when Powell spoke with Jack Kemp and William Bennett, leading Republican opinion-makers.

Iowa Republicans have long suspected that Powell would become a Republican. In a Sept. 28 interview with The Daily Iowan, Kennedy said Powell was more likely to run under the GOP banner rather than as an independent.

"It's a hunch based upon more than intuition," he said.

of returning to their cars to tailgate or venturing to the Magic Bus will come to an end.

"Halftime won't be like it used to be," UI junior Brian Shannon said. "We'll have to get used to it though, rules are rules."

Despite the new rules, Shannon said he believes marshmallows and raw chickens don't do much harm and should be allowed on the field.

"It's all fun and games," he said. "It's unfair that a few people had to ruin it for the rest of the students. A tradition will be stopped because of some jerks."

Those individuals who are involved in behavior that could injure someone will be dealt with, Jones said.

"They are going to pay the price," he said. "We had a student at the last game that was so drunk, he didn't know what he threw. We are treating him as if he was sober. He's responsible for his actions."

Even though he doesn't see many objects being thrown while he's playing, Hawkeye Quarterback Matt Sherman said he hopes student fans will find new ways to channel their excitement.

"I love it when the students get into the game," he said. "It makes it more exciting when they give it 110 percent. But they need to be smart at how they do it."

At a press conference Tuesday, Head Football Coach Hayden Fry said he expects students to behave better during this weekend's football game.

"I have great confidence in fans that they'll clean up their act," he said. "I don't think any big measures need to be taken, except maybe to screen them when they come in."

Jones said he is also expecting improved behavior in the student section this weekend.

"I have faith in you all," he said. "Students need to have cooperation and consideration for other students in the stands."

depression — all become grist the moment he runs.

Three quarters of those who have pledged to back him "walk away" if he declares, predicted Marilyn Quayle, wife of the former vice president. "He is not used to taking criticisms," she added, "and he is used to people doing what they are told."

"Powell says in his autobiography that he knows that if he jumps in, 'I would quickly alienate one interest group or another and burn off much popular support.'"

So far, the attacks come from conservatives who don't want to hand the GOP to a moderate of the Nelson Rockefeller mold — one who supports gun control, legalized abortion and affirmative action and who opposes school prayer and aspects of the Republican welfare reform plan.

Republicans rejected Rockefeller, why would they want a clone?" asks Lyn Nofziger, a former adviser to Ronald Reagan who supports Bob Dole.

Political observers tick off these fault lines that opponents might exploit in a campaign:

• Powell's military record. He is no Dwight Eisenhower, who forged history's greatest battlefield victory. In the Persian Gulf War, Powell was reluctant to get in — he favored an extended economic embargo — and he acquiesced in

Disney director marked for abusing young boy

A new Disney film called "Powder" made its controversial debut over the weekend in 1,200 U.S. theaters. The movie is questionable, not because of its script, but for the child molester who wrote it.

The writer and director of the movie, Victor Salva, was convicted of child molestation. He completed his three-year-prison sentence in 1992. Salva admitted to having sex with Nathan Winters, now 20, in 1987. This certainly does not sound like a company man.

At a recent private screening of the film, which is about a young man with telekinetic powers and white skin, Winters showed up with signs and leaflets that said, "Please don't spend your money on this movie. It would just go inside the pockets of a child molester" (The Chicago Tribune, Oct. 29).

This case stirs up an interesting issue. When can a man unburden himself of a crime committed in the past? When does the tag of "rapist" or "child molester," disappear? Does it ever disappear?

There are many who argue the justice system makes a person pay for the crime. Once the person has served the allotted amount of time, he/she has paid back society.

This kind of thinking is right on target for material crimes, such as robbery or auto theft. In those situations the "victim" will be reimbursed for the loss by the insurance company or through a civil suit.

The argument falls short, however, when it deals with crimes that really affect a person, not just a person's possessions. There is no restitution for murder. The victim's family has to live with the pain every day. Rape and sexual abuse survivors are haunted for the rest of their lives. Victimizers can never make amends for their actions.

Dean Williams/Hollywood Pictures
Victor Salva, a convicted child molester, wrote and directed Disney's latest kid movie, "Powder."

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

The 'M' in Mickey Mouse stands for molester and burns both victim and victimizer like the scarlet letter.

In Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter," the lead character is forced to wear a scarlet letter 'A' for committing adultery. People regard her with horror and disdain wherever she goes.

Should people who have served a sentence for a crime such as rape or child molestation be forced to wear a scarlet letter for the rest of their lives? Should Salva have an 'M' tattooed on his forehead?

To do this physically would seem barbaric. But the letter must remain figuratively, at least. A person does not stop being a child molester as soon as he/she finishes a criminal sentence. A child molester remains a child molester as long as the victim has to struggle, which is forever.

The pain will always be branded on the victim's heart, in this case Winters. The guilt and memory must also be branded on the victimizers heart. If a person such as Salva decides to become a public figure, his scarlet letter must be shown to the public.

Of course, there can be no laws against a person getting on with his/her life after the sentence is completed. Salva should have the same rights as anybody — legally at least — to pursue a career. But it does not take away Winters' right to inform people of Salva's past and it does not take away the right of Disney to refuse to buy his script.

Too often in our society, the victimizer is allowed to become a victim. Many have viewed Salva as suffering too much because of Winters' antics. The promoters of Mike Tyson presented him as a victim after he was convicted of rape. There certainly are countless victims in this harsh society, but child molesters and rapists aren't among them.

Salva will never be able to live down what he did, nor should he. Winters will always be around to remind people of who Salva is. Winters has, in effect, become Salva's scarlet letter.

Construction dangerous for man, Mick and bird alike

The UI campus has again been besieged by numerous construction projects, causing problems and headaches for both students and ducks.

First, they are a physical danger to students. Walking to class is never a stroll on this campus. While many colleges and universities boast of quiet, bucolic and enclosed campuses, the UI has never been any of these. Students traverse through four lanes of impudent motorists. Bikers swerve from every direction. Buses spew carbon monoxide at every corner.

The UI student has to deal with all of this every day. Construction significantly adds to these perils. Students weave between interstate-style cement dividers and orange lane rods to get to the library.

P.E. students risk life and limb to get to the Fieldhouse, but no credit hours are given for dump truck dodging.

Gravel, drop-offs, slabs, fences, flashing lights, workers, trucks, machines, beams, walls, cracks, dirt, wet cement — are now part of our higher educations.

Aside from the physical dangers of going to class, construction

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Construction is a physical hazard to students, a distraction from class and the orange fences oddly resemble pop can rings that strangle ducks.

zones force students to take new and inconvenient routes to class. Has anyone tried to walk across the Pentacrest lately? Perhaps there are psychology professors perched on top of Schaeffer Hall, studying the students as they meander through the orange and gray labyrinth.

Construction takes its toll on academic performance as well. It's difficult to concentrate with a jackhammer going across the way. It's 1:05 p.m. and you sit down and start to write and then rat-a-tat-tat! (repeat 500 times) or boom! (repeat 500 times, a little slower). The chaos — this war against earth and concrete — continues until you can't stand it anymore and you want to stand up and yell like Mick Jagger: "I mean, come on people!" Oh, well. If we wanted, quiet we should have gone to Central College or the University of Northern Iowa.

Another problem: these construction sites pose concerns the wildlife of the UI — mainly squirrels and ducks. Squirrels could be caught in the cable tunnels as they career around campus. This is their mating season and they've got more important things to worry about. As for ducks, they seem to have one heck of a time seeing straight in the first place. Ducks never know what they're getting into. If you thought six-pack rings were a danger to these birds, imagine what the orange fences could do.

The threat is clear — both humans and beasts alike are living in a hostile environment. And since the UI is almost always building, fixing or tearing up something, we'd better get used to it. After all, we're just students.

In the midst of it all, I laid there, exhausted.

Instinctively, I held my lover the way lovers do. Gently I caressed her dark brown skin as she fell asleep in my arms.

Suddenly, my eyes opened wide and an eerie feeling overtook me. "What am I doing?" I thought.

Then reality hit me. I was having unprotected sex with a woman I barely knew. Wonderful. Just wonderful.

Six months later I walked into a Los Angeles clinic that smelled like alcohol and sick people.

I smiled at the receptionist. "Hi. I have an 8 o'clock appointment. My name is ... uh ... Morrissey," I said.

"What are you here for?" the receptionist asked.

Instinctively, I held my lover the way lovers do. Gently I caressed her dark brown skin as she fell asleep in my arms. Suddenly, my eyes opened wide and an eerie feeling overtook me. "What am I doing?" I thought. Then reality hit me. I was having unprotected sex with a woman I barely knew. Wonderful. Just wonderful.

"Uh, HIV," I whispered.

"Have a seat," she said.

Trying to relax, I picked up Vogue magazine.

Reading, I learned that I was not the only one with split ends and that big collars are in. But that didn't comfort me. I was still nervous.

"Mr. Morrissey?" a male nurse asked.

"Yeah, that's me," I said.

"OK, we're ready for you," he said.

I followed him into a small room no bigger than a walk-in closet. Then I sat down next to a large basket of condoms.

The nurse asked me a bunch of questions about my past sexual partners and my sexual habits. I was kind of embarrassed, but I knew it was all part of the process.

Then he counseled me on HIV. Most of what he said was old news. But I did learn that HIV antibodies may not be detected during the first six months after exposure. This means there is a small chance (about 3 to 5 percent) of a misdiagnosis during this time. But after six months, if you're HIV positive, they can detect it.

In about 15 minutes it was over. I thanked the nurse and made a b-line for the door — but not before I stuffed my pockets full of condoms.

I had to wait two weeks for my results. Two long weeks. I tried not to think about it. It was hard not to.

"What would I do if it came back positive?" I thought. Well, first, I guess I'd contact my past partners, which is the prudent thing to do. Then ... I don't know. I guess I'd join a support group or something. I just didn't know.

Two weeks passed and I found myself sitting in the same chair, staring at the same basket of condoms.

"Well, Mr. Morrissey, it looks like your results came back non-reactive," the nurse said.

"Non-reactive? What the hell does that mean?"

"It means you're fine, Mr. Morrissey," the nurse said.

I felt relieved, and at the same time, I felt disgusted for putting myself through this ordeal. I also felt sad for those who aren't as fortunate or lucky as me.

AIDS doesn't discriminate — it's colorblind. But today in America, AIDS affects African-Americans and Latino/Latinas at disproportionately high rates.

In 1993, African-Americans and Latino/Latinas made up 21 percent of the population, but together accounted for 46 percent of AIDS cases. Between July 1994 and July 1995, these figures increased to 22 percent and 54 percent, respectively.

AIDS was also the second leading cause of death for African-American men between the ages of 25 and 44 in 1990 and 1991, according to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention.

Your decision to get tested is your business. Personally, I'd rather know than not know.

Bike theft ruining Iowa City oasis

To the editor:

Once again, the student community has been reminded it is a vital portion of the Iowa City community. Habitually, the influx of these reminders is around election time. "Post-it-note" blurbs are slathered across local newspapers to woo the student populous in a sort of pop-culture cliché. "Hey, don't forget. ... You are somebody. Elections are next week!" Students are notified in a mildly patronizing, finger-shaking manner that they have the right and obligation to stand up and take an interest in the city.

If politicians and community leaders truly desire to show the populous they care, then they could begin by helping to curb a problem most students consider to be a veritable nemesis: BIKE THEFT. Perhaps city council members and other members of this community are unaware of the extent of bike thievery in Iowa City, most likely because it is a problem limited to the student sector.

Since moving back to Iowa City a year ago, I've had two bikes, one rear wheel plus components and a seat stolen. In that same period of time, two of my roommates each had a bike, along with the bike rack attaching them to the car, stolen. My third roommate has been stripped thrice! That is approximately $2,839 stolen from a four person household in a 12 month period.

These are not isolated occurrences. Tales of people losing their bikes right off of their front porch or getting out of class to find a skeleton of their new bike are numerous.

Has anyone noticed lately how many $500-$600 bikes in this town have new paint jobs? This is a definite testimony to the existence of organized bike theft rings and not to an epidemic of capriciousness concerning favorite colors.

Make no mistake, bike theft is rampant in this town and it's only getting worse. After the completion of my third stolen property report, I asked the officer what was being done to combat this problem. His response was a sympathetic "We just don't have the manpower to ..."

Obviously, there exists more than enough "manpower" to flood the Pedestrian Mall with police officers waiting to arrest underage drinkers, and certainly enough "manpower" to employ a mob of parking meter attendants — both of which result in an overwhelming number of dollars in tickets every year. Maybe there's a connection here.

Perhaps some reprioritizing is needed. Perhaps this town should consider the benefits of a bike intensive society. Imagine the increased stress on parking in downtown if all the bikers decided — or were forced — to drive instead. Does a town this size really need another damn parking ramp?

I guess what we are asking — challenging — the leaders of this community is to help protect a huge portion of this society that is constantly in fear of having its livelihood stripped away. (Yes, most students do consider bikes to be their livelihood). This problem should no longer be ignored. Would it be ignored if households were getting $2800 of their property stolen on an annual basis? Probably not. Are cyclists — most of them students — important enough to Iowa City to be protected? If not, then Iowa City is falling short of the ideals it considers itself to attain.

Reece obtainable ideal

To the Editor:

While I agree the media has traditionally presented us with unrealistic, unattainable images of the ideal woman, I have to question your criticism of model/athlete Gabrielle Reece. You call her the "Amazon freak" of models. For a columnist who claims to be defending all women in their natural forms, I find your labeling hypocritical.

The term Amazon comes from ancient Greek men who were so intimidated by the fact women could be strong, independent and powerful, they had to categorize them as something other than women. Apparently you agree. Whether 6 feet 3 inches or 4 feet 11 inches tall, 173 pounds or 94 pounds, strikingly gorgeous or rather plain, if you truly believe in the beauty of individuality, then no woman is a freak.

As a graduate student in health promotion — fitness and wellness programs for all shapes and sizes — I would much rather see the media portray a healthy, muscular, athletic woman as "ideal" than some scrawny, emaciated girl or silicone bimbo. Granted, Reece's genetic make-up hasn't hurt her, but if the average woman spent as much time doing something about her body as she does complaining about it and the media, maybe she too would be startled to find herself leaner, healthier and stronger.

You're smart enough to know the media will always try to dictate what is ideal. Be smart enough to realize that Reece is a strong, positive woman. If I have to have an "ideal" from the media, I'll look up to Reece any day.

Vanderhoef most reasonable candidate

To the Editor:

In Iowa City's political climate, the atmosphere often looks impossible — people approach situations from their own self-interest. How often have we heard these words, "They won't let us do that," "I don't want my taxes raised" or "We've never done it that way before."

Dee Vanderhoef's entrance into the city council race gives Iowa City a marvelous opportunity to prepare comprehensively for the future. Vanderhoef knows how to reason with people, put plans on paper, persuade people to see the possibilities and enroll them to participate in projects to their conclusion.

People need to be shown that sometimes they need to give up something before they can gain something. In the process, they come to see what they gained is more important than what they gave up. Vanderhoef has worked hard on her communication skills, which include listening and weaving together a consensus.

Vanderhoef brings considerable experience in local government from Parks and Recreation. Her concern for people's welfare has brought her to a thorough study of housing throughout the community. At the same time, she understands business, taxes, local economy and what Iowa City means to the state. As a lifelong Democrat and brother of the Socialist Party's candidate for President of the United States in 1992, I consider Vanderhoef an offer and an opportunity that all Iowa City voters should consider.

Campus Crusade shepherd of self hate

To the Editor:

Groups such as the Campus Crusade prey on people who are unhappy. What they can't see or won't admit is that they are the source of this very unhappiness they claim to be treating.

The idea of "curing" homosexuality has a long and unpleasant history. In this century, doctors and moralists have tried castration, lobotomy, hormone injections, aversion therapy and even shock treatments. Virtually everyone now agrees that any effort to reserve sexual orientation is not only futile, it is psychologically harmful. In 1990, the American Psychological Association condemned efforts to change sexual orientation.

The Christian fundamentalist-run "ex-gay" organizations are doing a real disservice to people. They encourage gays to suppress their normal feelings and needs. With enough pressure, working on persons programmed by society to have low self-esteem, you can change any behavior superficially.

Countless people have been misled by "ex-gay" ministries to believe that sexual orientation can be changed, only to find years later, they found only temporary happiness in the delusion that they had changed. These "ex-gays" no longer call themselves gay but continue to have same-sex erotic feelings and dreams.

Anyone can suppress one's feelings and live a lie for a time. But it doesn't work in the long run. Besides, living a lie doesn't seem like much of a Christian ethic.

The experts in the fields of psychiatry and human sexuality say when you try to find an "ex-gay," what you find are rather sad, desperate people playing mind games and semantics — no "cures" or lasting changes. The whole motivation behind the movement to change gays is political — fundamentalist and conservative politics dressed up in a lab coat.

Gallery claims Big Ten Player of the Week honors

Nick Gallery became the second Iowa player this season to earn Big Ten Player of the Week honors.

Gallery, a junior punter from Masonville, Iowa, was named special teams player of the week after averaging 51.8 yards on six punts last weekend.

He boomed punts of 70 and 71 yards in the Ohio State game, moving his average to 47.1 yards per punt. Gallery is currently the No. 1 punter in the nation.

Linebacker Bobby Diaco was named defensive player of the week two weeks ago.

Iowa wrestling ranked No. 1

Defending national champion Iowa is No. 1 and Iowa State is fifth in the national preseason wrestling rankings.

The rankings by the National Wrestling Coaches Association and Amateur Wrestling News are based on returning All-Americans and tournament strength for the 1995-96 season. Northern Iowa is not ranked.

Iowa has six wrestlers ranked among the top eight in the weight classes, including top-ranked Mike Mena at 118 pounds and Jeff McGinness at 126. Two other Iowa wrestlers are ranked second — Bill Zadick at 142 and Joe Williams at 158.

Other Hawkeye wrestlers ranked in the top eight are Mark Ironside, third at 134, and Daryl Weber, sixth at 167.

Lincoln McClravy, a three-time national champion at Iowa, plans to redshirt this year.

Iowa State has four wrestlers in the top eight. Chris Bono is second at 150, Dwight Hinson is third at 126, Clody Tate is sixth at 134 and Derek Mountsier is sixth at 142.

Nebraska is second in the team rankings, with Oklahoma State third and Arizona State fourth. Clarion is sixth, followed by Oregon State, Penn State, Michigan State and Minnesota.

Oakley suspended, fined for fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Forward Charles Oakley of the New York Knicks was suspended for one game without pay and fined $6,000 by the NBA on Tuesday for throwing a punch at Philadelphia's Scott Williams during an exhibition game.

The league at the same time announced that Vernon Maxwell of the 76ers was fined $3,000 for abusing the referees during the same game last Tuesday night in Uniondale, N.Y.

Oakley was ejected from the game, which the Knicks won 118-74, after throwing a punch at Williams with 6:45 remaining in the second quarter.

Injuries cripple Hawks' bowl chances

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

In early August, Iowa football coach Hayden Fry promised the media at the Big Ten football convention that Iowa would reach a bowl game. Nearly three months later, he's not so sure.

"Winning two out of the last four games knowing the health situation of our team, someone has to reach down and touch us," Fry said at his weekly press conference on Tuesday. "I'm not saying we can't do it. I'm just saying that playing two of them on the road, has it in for us anyway."

The Hawkeyes, currently 5-2, must finish the season with seven wins in order to reach a post season bowl game.

Iowa battles Illinois this Saturday at Kinnick Stadium. Kickoff is scheduled for 11:35 a.m. The game is sold out, but will be televised to a national audience on ESPN. The Hawkeyes are currently tied for fifth place in the Big Ten with Michigan State and Wisconsin. The fifth place finisher in the conference gets an automatic bid to the Sun Bowl in El Paso, Texas, on December 29, where they will play the third place finisher in the Pac Ten.

"Ohio State, Northwestern and Michigan. There's three for sure," Fry said, regarding Big Ten teams going to bowl games. "Then you've got Penn State who is really coming on and has a heck of a ball club. There's four that are gone right there. So here you've got all the rest of us, and we might not even qualify."

Fry said that there is a lot more parody in the conference than in seasons past, when Iowa consistently qualified for a bowl game.

"There's so many more quality teams now than there used to be," Fry said. "To win, you have to have great personnel and a favorable schedule. Who else has Penn State and Ohio State back-to-back?"

The main reason Fry is worried his team won't reach post season is injuries.

"Some people don't realize that when you don't have everybody at

Broken thumb knocks out Tyson

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Mike Tyson fractured his right thumb and postponed Saturday night's fight with Buster Mathis Jr., an injury that will sideline the former heavyweight champion four to six weeks.

"This is a really serious setback," Tyson said Tuesday night at a news conference at the MGM Grand, where the fight was to have been held. "I was really anticipating this fight."

Tyson initially injured his thumb about three weeks ago and aggravated the injury the last few days.

Tyson's doctors, Gerald Higgins and Gary Marrone, notified the hotel at 4:10 p.m. Tyson would not be able to fight.

"The break is in the thumb between the main joint and the tip of the thumb," said Marrone, who confirmed the injury would take up to six weeks to heal.

Alex Yemendjian, chief operating officer of the MGM Grand, said the entire Saturday night card was off. It was to have included three world championship bouts.

Marrone said Tyson injured the thumb about three weeks ago and saw Marrone and Higgins about two weeks ago. Marrone said he and Higgins thought the injury possibly could heal in time for the fight, but X-rays Tuesday "showed that the fracture that had begun to heal had refractured."

Tyson reinjured the thumb Monday or Tuesday — he sparred both days. Asked why he did not call off the fight when he first injured the thumb, he said: "I thought I could sneak through. I get paid to fight."

Tyson's purse was to have been $10 million. Mathis was to get $800,000.

"He said he wanted to fight no matter what," Higgins said. "In all morality, we can't let him participate in this fight."

At a news conference earlier in the day, Tyson was upbeat and confident of an easy victory.

"I feel good, I feel happy," he said. "Everybody knows I'm going to do my thing. I'm looking forward to this. I'm going to burn."

Mathis, a 20-1 underdog, was suspicious of the former champion's sore hand.

"I call it a fake," he said. "I don't think Mike is hurt."

Jay Bright, Tyson's trainer, hinted at the time there may be more to the injury than first thought.

"What we have to do is follow the doctor's orders,"

"This is a really serious setback. I was really anticipating this fight."

he said without elaborating.

John Horne, Tyson's co-manager, said Mathis is under contract to fight Tyson and the bout will be held on the Fox network, which was to have telecast Saturday night's bout. Fox had no immediate comment on the latest developments.

It was to have been Tyson's first appearance on commercial television since he knocked out Marvin Frazier in 30 seconds on July 11, 1986.

Tyson was asked if he might not decide to go straight into a March 16 challenge to WBC champion Frank Bruno of Britain, Horne interrupted and said, "That's not a question we're going to answer right now."

"I'm sorry for Tyson; that's a tough way to go out," said Rock Newman, manager of Riddick Bowe, who will fight Evander Holyfield on pay-per-view television Saturday night at Caesars Palace, a short cab ride from the MGM Grand.

"In a strange kind of way, I was looking forward to both fights," Newman said. "I just didn't think we'd be hurt (financially by Tyson's appearance on free TV)."

If indeed it is a postponement, it will be the fourth

DECLINES TO ANSWER ON CAMERA

Osborne tunes out TV reporter's question

Dave Zelio
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska coach Tom Osborne, who has answered questions for seven weeks about the suspension of tailback Lawrence Phillips for attacking a former girlfriend, apparently had had enough Tuesday.

The low-key Osborne cut short a news conference after a question from a CBS television reporter.

"If one of your players had roughed up a member of your family and had dragged her down a flight of steps, would you have reinstated that player on the team?" the reporter asked.

Osborne said he resented the question and declined to answer on camera. He told the reporter in the hall outside the interview room that the answer would have been yes. The story is expected to air Friday, a day before Phillips is expected to play for the first time in two months.

Osborne said there was no definite plan for Phillips' return against Iowa State (3-5, 1-3 Big Eight), though he is not expected to start.

Freshman tailback Ahman Green has started the last three games for No. 1 Nebraska (8-0, 4-0) and leads the team with 821 yards and 10 touchdowns. Nebraska also has senior Clinton Childs, junior Damon Benning and sophomore James Sims available at the position.

But the focus Saturday will be on Phillips, who hasn't played since the Sept. 9 game at Michigan State. In two games, he had rushed for 359 yards and seven touchdowns and was being tabbed a Heisman Trophy contender.

That ended Sept. 10 when Phillips climbed into the third-floor apartment of transfer quarterback Scott Frost and attacked Katherine McEwen, a 20-year-old Nebraska basketball player.

Police said Miss McEwen, who has received 24-hour protection paid for by the university since the attack, cut her head when she was knocked down by Phillips and was

WALKS AWAY FROM RETIREMENT

Cubs' Sandberg signs 1-year deal

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Hall of Fame will have to wait. Ryne Sandberg is ready to lace up his spikes, pull on his golden glove, range behind second base and make another great play for the Chicago Cubs.

"I was a baseball player. I'm still a baseball player. And I'll always be that," Sandberg, 36, said Tuesday after ending his 16 1/2-month retirement by signing a one-year contract.

"I did the retirement thing. I did the summer activities and all that. It just got to the point where now it was time to go back and play baseball."

"This is something that I wanted to do and I needed to do. It was very important to me. I don't think it really left me."

But Sandberg — statistically the best fielding second baseman in major league history, a 10-time NL All-Star and the 1984 league MVP — left it.

In so doing, he walked away from the approximately $17 million he had left on his contract.

When he stunned Chicago with his announcement on June 13, 1994, his Cubs were in last place. In his opinion, general manager Larry Himes had ruined the team. And his personal life was in turmoil; his wife would file for divorce later that month.

A lifetime .289 hitter with 245 career home runs, 905 RBIs and 325 stolen bases, Sandberg was batting .238 with five homers, 24 RBIs and two steals in 57 games and was in a 1-for-28 slump.

Baseball was no longer fun. So

Associated Press

Ryne Sandberg holds up his jersey Tuesday in Chicago after announcing that he has signed a one-year contract to play baseball again with the Chicago Cubs in 1996. Sandberg will return to the team where he was an all-star second baseman for ten straight seasons before abruptly retiring in June 1994.

he retired.

"That was something I had to do," he said. "I couldn't worry about what the public thought."

Some labeled him a quitter.

"He didn't like the front office, he didn't like the manager, he didn't like the things in his personal life," said Cubs first baseman Mark Grace, one of Sandberg's closest friends in baseball.

"It all just came to a head and he had to get out. I understand it. Whether I agree with it or not, who is Mark Grace to pass judgment on him? Yeah, we could have used him that year, but nobody could have saved that club. Ken Griffey Jr. or Barry Bonds couldn't have saved that club."

The Cubs were 49-64 when the strike ended the season.

Then, Andy MacPhail was hired away from the Minnesota Twins to run the team. MacPhail replaced Himes with Ed Lynch, who fired Tom Trebelhorn as manager and hired Jim Riggleman.

Once play resumed this season, the Cubs got off to a fast start. After an extended slump, they won eight consecutive late-September games to move into contention for a playoff spot and weren't eliminated

Bowe, Holyfield fight for respect

Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — When they first met three years ago, Riddick Bowe and Evander Holyfield fought for the undisputed heavyweight title. In their rematch a year later, two pieces of the title were at stake. When Bowe and Holyfield get together for a third time Saturday night, not even Bowe's lightly regarded WBO title will be on the line.

Tyson pulls out of Saturday's fight against Mathis.....1B

"This fight will validate who the heavyweight champion of the world is," claims Bowe's manager, Rock Newman. "There may not be a title here but this is for the real heavyweight championship." Just how quick the championship fortunes of both fighters have plummeted is remarkable, considering that both have held all three major titles and between them have only three losses. But in a division increasingly controlled by promoter Don King, independent contractors like Holyfield and Bowe have found themselves frozen out by the various boxing organizations. While journeymen such as Bruce Seldon and Frank Bruno hold pieces of the fractured title and Tyson waits in the wings, Bowe and Holyfield find themselves fighting each other for little more than money and some recognition. "Myself and Bowe don't plan to stay in boxing a long time and I see it as just a waiting game to wait two tough guys out," Holyfield said. "Nobody wants to face us for any amount of money."

Holyfield and Bowe will both make a lot of money Saturday night in the scheduled 12-round fight at Caesars Palace. Holyfield is guaranteed $9 million, while Bowe figures to make about as much depending on how the fight does at the gate and on pay-per-view. But they are fighting a third time because there are few other name fighters available as opponents to make the same kind of money. With the titles locked up by King, the winner of Saturday night's fight can only hope to eventually lure Tyson into a fight.

Miami admits wrongdoing

Steven Wine
Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — The University of Miami publicly admitted guilt Tuesday on six of 10 NCAA charges but denied the most damning allegation — lack of institutional control. School officials will attend a hearing Nov. 10 before the NCAA Committee on Infractions to discuss institutional control and three other allegations. Sanctions likely will be announced by the end of December.

"I take responsibility for it. I'm the president here. The coach is gone. He served this university for a number of years and did a lot of good. I'm not about to look back and blame others."

Miami university president Edward Foote

"There is a relief," athletic director Paul Dee said, "in that we're finally going to get to the end of this, we hope." Probation could include a ban on bowl games and TV appearances for one or more years, as well as scholarship reductions. At a news conference, the university released a summary of the 10 NCAA charges. Three involve a Pell Grant scandal that prompted a federal investigation and led to the conviction of former university academic adviser Tony Russell, who admitted falsifying the Pell Grant applications of 91 students, including 85 athletes. The NCAA, which began its investigation four years ago, alleges a lack of institutional control made the financial fraud possible. "That is the allegation that carries with it the most likely heavy penalty," university president Edward Foote said. "Our position is that there was extensive wrongdoing with the Pell Grants, but it was orchestrated by one employee who has admitted that he did it and who is long since gone. We know of no other representative of this institution who was involved in any respect. "Our position is that is not a lack of institutional control." Russell has said repeatedly he acted without the knowledge of anyone at the university. The school also denies rap star Luther Campbell's special treatment of football players constituted an NCAA violation, saying Campbell wasn't affiliated with the school as a booster or season-ticket holder. Miami admits violating NCAA rules by failing to follow its own drug-testing policies. The school also acknowledges a play-for-pay scheme involving at least one former football player, inaccurate room and board calculations and excessive distribution of books to athletes. "I'd be less than honest if I said this was a whole lot of fun sitting here," Foote said. "I'd rather be talking about the library or the physics department. I am disappointed in a sense that we didn't do a better job in some respects." Foote and Dee declined to speculate on the severity of sanctions. A list of the allegations was delivered to the university last week, and all of them were expected, Foote said. Most of the violations occurred during Dennis Erickson's six years at Miami, but Foote declined to blame the Hurricanes' former football coach for the trouble with the NCAA. "I take responsibility for it. I'm the president here," Foote said. "The coach is gone. He served this university for a number of years and did a lot of good. I'm not about to look back and blame others." Current Miami players shrugged off the latest disclosures. The Hurricanes are 4-3 and still in contention for a bowl bid — perhaps their last one for several years, depending on how the NCAA rules. "There's nothing we can do about it," sophomore center Mike Wehner said. "We weren't here when the players did whatever. We've got to take whatever the NCAA gives us, and hope it's not much."

CONTRACT EXPIRES AFTER THIS SEASON

Hornets consider trading Mourning

Joe Macenka
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Three days before they begin what they hope will be a season that elevates them to the NBA's elite, the Charlotte Hornets are considering trading Alonzo Mourning because of a contract dispute. "We're trying to work out something where Alonzo will still be with the Hornets," said Bob Bass, the team's vice president of basketball operations. Several broadcast and newspaper reports said Mourning, whose contract expires after this season, has been offered a seven-year, $70 million deal by the Hornets. He reportedly wants $13 million for seven seasons with an escape clause after four seasons. The Hornets do not deny they are mulling a trade of one of the game's best players. They have called his demands unreasonable and are said to be talking with up to eight teams about a trade. Mourning is to earn $4.35 million this season, his fourth in the NBA. Bass said the team was continuing to negotiate with Mourning's agent, David Falk. Messages left by The Associated Press at Falk's office were not returned. On Tuesday, the 6-foot-10 center avoided reporters who staged a 3 1/2-hour vigil outside the Hornets' practice complex, where team employees used elaborate car-switches with Mourning's sport utility vehicle to aid his getaway. Mourning's teammates are not happy about the prospects of trying to improve on last year's club-record 50 victories without their top scorer, rebounder and shot blocker. He has averaged at least 21 points a game each season since joining the Hornets as the second pick in the 1992 draft. Bass spoke Tuesday at the team's practice facility in neighboring Fort Mill, S.C. Reporters were allowed into the main gym to meet with Bass only after the players and coach Allan Bristow had already left for the locker room, which was closed to the media. Outside the practice complex, several players said they'd prefer the Hornets, who are already saddled with Larry Johnson's $84 million contract, not trade Mourning. "You don't get a quality center like Alonzo very often," said 42-year-old Robert Parish, one of Mourning's backups. "You just don't replace Alonzo Mourning." "We'd really hate to see him go," forward Scott Burrell said, shaking his head. "If they're going to trade him, I hope they get some great players for him." Three hours after practice ended, Mourning was still inside the complex and his blue Land Rover was parked outside the main entrance, where about 18 members of the

COACH RECALLS DAYS AT IOWA

Iowa State's McCarney knows how hostile the Red Sea can be

Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — Iowa State has played at TCU this year and the Cyclones have played at Kansas, both hostile settings. But that's nothing like what they'll encounter Saturday, when they play in front of 76,000 fans at Nebraska's Memorial Stadium. "It's not even close," coach Dan McCarney said Tuesday. "It's no contest from an environment standpoint, atmosphere and noise." Nebraska's 208th straight sell-out crowd — almost all of them wearing red — will assemble to watch what's expected to be another lopsided victory for the No. 1-ranked Cornhuskers, who are favored by 40 points. Although this is his first year in the Big Eight, McCarney knows what it's like to play in Lincoln because he was there twice while an assistant at Iowa. Neither was a pleasant experience. Iowa lost 57-0 in 1980 and 42-7 in 1982. "I remember vividly the 57-0 drubbing that we took and running off the field at halftime and there's 90,000 of them laughing at you," McCarney said. "I've experienced it. Unfortunately, many, many teams in college football have experienced the same thing." Many of Iowa State's key players weren't on the team or had only limited roles when the Cyclones played at Nebraska two years ago. Because of that, McCarney is taking pains to make sure they know what to expect. "Coach McCarney said not to get lost in the Red Sea and all the

Davis' Heisman talk doesn't bother coach

Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — If Troy Davis wants to plug himself for the Heisman Trophy, so be it, Iowa State coach Dan McCarney said. Better that, McCarney said, than to see his star player promoting someone else. When Davis was asked by a reporter on Monday who he'd pick for the Heisman, Davis said himself. McCarney said there was nothing wrong with that answer. "I've got all the confidence and faith in the world in Troy and the things that he says, and I think he handles himself outstandingly," McCarney said

Tuesday. "The question was, if you had a vote, who would you vote for? If we were all in his shoes, I don't think you'd say Tommie Frazier or Eddie George." McCarney said Davis, the nation's leading rusher, did well in Monday's interview, which followed the weekly teleconference with Big Eight coaches and involved reporters from around the nation. "I love picking up newspapers and reading the things Troy says and I love being around him every day and listening to him," McCarney said. "He's got an outstanding head on his shoulders and handles himself really well."

screaming fans," sophomore nose guard Greg Schoon said. "I think it would be something neat to see, but as he said, we have to stay focused because we're there to do a job. We're not there to sightsee." Freshman quarterback Todd Bandhauer, who's from Florida, figures playing at Nebraska will be a lot like being at University of Florida games. He went to those games often while he was in high school. "I remember when Charlie Ward was a junior at Florida State and they played at Florida and you couldn't even hear yourself think, it was so loud in there," Bandhauer said. "I know that the crowd factor is going to be a huge difference in this game."

McCarney said he'll walk the team through the stadium two hours before the game so they can get a feeling for the setting. But he won't try any gimmicks in practice to simulate crowd noise. "We've used crowd noise before in other programs and all I do is get a headache out of it," he said. McCarney said he doesn't see the game as a Heisman Trophy battle between Nebraska quarterback Tommie Frazier and Iowa State running back Troy Davis. Frazier has emerged as a leading candidate for the award after big games against Kansas State and Colorado. Davis leads the nation in rushing but will be facing a Nebraska defense that's second nationally against the run.

Arts &amp; Entertainment

Murphy's luster lacking, 'Vampire' terribly predictable

Nathan Groper
The Daily Iowan

Eddie Murphy needs a hit. However, "Vampire" in Brooklyn might suck the life out of his career.

Many years have passed since Murphy starred in box-office smashes such as "48 HRS," "Coming To America" and "Beverly Hills Cop." Murphy works better in this capacity, rather than the elusive vampire lover.

The film is an odd mixture of horror, comedy and romance. It appeals to the lowest forms of entertainment, often using things such as graphic violence and clichéd stereotypes to encourage a cheap chuckle. Even though "Vampire" is often predictable and insulting, it is still, at times fully entertaining.

Murphy stars as the flamboyant Maximillion, a vampire from the Caribbean who voyages to New York City in search of an unwary blood relative. He soon learns his unsuspecting victim is a beautiful and hard-nosed police detective, Rita Veder (Angela Bassett), who recently has been plagued by a flurry of horrifying nightmares.

To assist him in his effort to transform Rita into a vampiress, Maximillion decides he must create a ghoul (Kadeem Hardison) whose only drawback is he loses random body parts throughout the film. Rita's love interest and devoted partner Warren Justice (Allen Payne) soon enter the picture.

The film's individual parts are often horrifying and humorous. Scene after scene, viewers take a great amount of pleasure from things we shouldn't, such as an exploding dog or a fart joke. However, the script by Murphy's brother Charles, uses hokey and clichéd romance to string each of these entertaining bits together. Waiting impatiently through emotionless dialogue to get to the next thrilling special effect or snappy one-liner builds endless frustration.

Instantly outshining Eddie Murphy is the hilarious Kadeem Hardison ("A Different World"). His amusing portrayal of Maximillion's bumbling henchman makes it easier to stomach the cheesy love scenes. Whether quipping with Murphy, or loosing his eyeball, Hardison is solely responsible for most of the comedy in "Vampire."

If Murphy was "Coming to America" as a vampire, he should have stayed home.

Director Wes Craven ("Nightmare on Elm Street") incorporates this humor with trademark thrills and chills. Craven packs the film with visually stunning sequences, but chooses to rely on the Murphy's wooden performance to fulfill the script.

All in all, "Vampire" is a nightmare. Funny and terrifying scenes are overshadowed by a sluggish narrative and a predictable conclusion. If Murphy was "Coming to America" as a vampire, he should have stayed home.

England's own The King's Singers will bring their eclectic repertoire to Hancher Auditorium tonight at 8. The sextet specializes in new music from prominent contemporary composers including Richard Rodney Bennett, Luciano Berio and Gyorgy Ligeti, but The King's Singers are equally skilled at pop songs by Phil Collins, Billy Joel and Paul Simon. Their Old World sensibility can be found in their performances of Renaissance madrigals on National Public Radio and television specials. Their skill in vocal blending has been called "the ultimate musical instrument at an advanced stage development in the art of ensemble singing" by The Washington Post.

Pumpkins reorchestrate tunes

The Daily Iowan

Having been criticized for their music becoming too predictable, Smashing Pumpkins answer allegations with their new double album, Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness.

After making a splash in 1991 with their independent debut, Gish, and then becoming superstars with 1993's platinum smash, Siamese Dream, the Pumpkins, led by frontman Billy Corgan, are attempting to change perceptions of the group with Mellon Collie.

There is something for everybody on the album. The band experiments with strings and orchestration ("Tonight, Tonight"), borderline-thrash ("Tales of a Scorching Earth"), pop ("Cupid de Locke"), as well as their usual hard alterna-rock ("Bullet With Butterfly Wings"). With this diversity, Smashing Pumpkins reach to be everyone's band, rather than being classified as just another artsy goth-rock band.

For Pumpkins' fans who cherish their six to seven minute ballads like "Rhinoceros," "Drown" and "Soma," there is only one among the album's 28 new tracks. However, the song, "Porcelina of the Vast Oceans," is easily the best of the collection.

What makes Smashing Pumpkins so great is the way they can keep things mellow, no matter the song.

What makes the band so great is the way they can keep things mellow, no matter the song. Even during the crunchy guitar fuzz of "Jellybelly," Corgan's boyish vocal style manages to keep us relaxed.

I've heard this album criticized for being pretentious and people have criticized the band for not being focused on a particular sound. That is what makes the album so cool. As the Beastie Boys do not strictly stick to rap, the Smashing Pumpkins should be expected to blaze new trails.

hits package Vault.

Vault is a premium selection of the best of Def Leppard. There aren't boring B-sides or ineffective rare tracks here. Songs like "Photograph," "Pour Some Sugar On Me" and "Bringin' On The Heartbreak" chronicle the growth and popularity of Def Leppard's 15-year existence. The growing pains of the silly "Let's Get Rocked" and sickly-sweet "Two Steps Behind" are also included. But those songs sold, and somebody must like them. Vault's most enjoyable quality is recognizing Def Leppard as a signature sound, much like Boston of the '70s. Take any three notes from Vault and you'll say to yourself, "Ah, that's Leppard, man!" Some of Def Leppard's songs are ridiculous, while a few of the tracks on Vault could be found in the rotation of any radio station format.

Vault sparks memories of heading to gym class with your fists pumping and chanting "Rise up, gather 'round/Rock this place to the ground" — if that's a fond memory for you.

Is there a battle going on in your body?

Lets face it. Sometimes you need to take more than one medicine at a time.

As we fill your prescription, our computer checks to make sure that the drugs your doctor has prescribed will work together — not against each other — even if you see more than one doctor.

And during this holiday season ask your Econofoods Pharmacist to check your medications if you are going to be drinking alcohol. Call or come in...but ask your pharmacist.

Have a healthy holiday season from your Econofoods Quality Care Pharmacist.

SEASON'S GREETERS

The History of the Wal-Mart People Greeter

In 1980, our founder Sam Walton visited a Wal-Mart store in Louisiana. He was greeted at the front door by an associate.

Mr. Sam talked with the associate who explained he was there to make people feel good as they entered the store.

Mr. Sam loved the idea and soon every Wal-Mart had a people greeter to call its very own.

We salute your hometown Wal-Mart people greeters — associates who look forward to your visit and welcome you each time you shop!

SEASON'S
GREETERS

Welcome To Wal-Mart

When you feel a little down, you might try a trip to Wal-Mart. It can sometimes be very therapeutic.

Take for example Marie, a Wal-Mart customer from California: "I had been somewhat depressed and for some reason, decided to go shopping at Wal-Mart. When I arrived, to my amazement, Don, the store's greeter, shook my hand, gave me a big hug and said, 'Welcome to Wal-Mart!' I was so elated I practically bought the store out. I bought gifts for my children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and even some items for myself."

People Greeter Don says with a laugh, "I retired from commercial banking 35 years ago and have been working ever since!" A Wal-Mart greeter for 1½ years, Don gets serious when he talks about his job, "I love people and I try to make them feel good. I could tell Marie was kind of down the first time she came in the store but she really is a cheerful person."

According to Marie, "Don is a wonderful gentleman! He sure knows how to make a depressed person very happy. I know I will go back to Wal-Mart more often. They have some great buys there, besides, I loved the hugs from Don!"

Radio Control Raceway

Easy-grip radio controllers are sized just right for little hands, with no wires to get in the way! Set includes 2 cars and controllers, press box, flags and guardrails. Features storage for accessories and easy-carry handle. Ages 3 and up.

The Holidays Are Under Construction!

PART OF THE TEAM

When you enter your local Wal-Mart, the people greeter is the first person you meet.

According to Charlie, one of the people greeters at his store, "Enthusiasm is the vibrant thrill in your voice that inoculates all who come into contact with it. I enjoy my job, and try to do my very best, every single day. I like being a part of our Wal-Mart team and spreading enthusiasm seems to come easy. It doesn't take long for customers and associates alike to join in."

"At Wal-Mart, we work, grow and share in our achievements together. We stand together and strive to make your shopping experience a positive one."

We salute Charlie and his fellow people greeters for the very important role they play and for being such an important part of your Wal-Mart team.
