UI professor takes leave for sex change

Donald McCloskey, UI economist and history professor, was granted a leave of absences.

McCloskey said he has been seriously thinking about the management since he came to a personal turning point about 10 months ago.

"I realized that this was really true about me," he said of the decision."I suddenly realized that I want to be a woman...I'm going to live life in a different way...I want to have the opportunity to be a woman."

McCloskey added that this was a difficult decision for him to make because he has not been open about his feelings until now.

"It's not an easy thing for me to do, but I think it's important that I do it."

McCloskey said the decision was made with the support of his family and friends.

"I'm very grateful for their support and understanding."

The decision comes after McCloskey's chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha was revoked last year because of his involvement in a hazing incident.

"I'm very disappointed in the decision of Lambda Chi Alpha, but I respect their decision."

McCloskey said he plans to continue his research and teaching while on leave.

"I want to keep doing what I love, and I'm looking forward to the opportunity to do it differently."

Simpson and Barbiere call it quits

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Paula Barbieri.stared at the telephone and pretended to read a book, but the relationship was not the way she defined it.

Barbieri, 29, refused to say how she told Simpson their five-year relationship was over.

"And when people ask me how's O.J., don't ask, because I don't know what I want to say. I want to have children. I want to live."

Simpson confirmed the breakup with Barbieri on the June 13, 1994, edition of "Entertainment Tonight." She said the couple had been living apart for "one whole year." Barbieri said she had not lived with Simpson since March.

"It'll be one year on March 2, 1679."

Simpson was married to Nicole Brown Simpson from 1981 to 1994, when she divorced him. The pair had two children together.

"We had an amazing dream together, but we really believed that he was in P.E. then, playing football. And when we were safe, we were together."

The marriage ended with Simpson's murder trial, which resulted in a verdict of "not guilty." He was acquitted of murder in 1995.

Protesting Colorado's Amendment 2 — lawyer inspires UI student

Mark Strahan
The Daily Iowan

One lawyer's visit to the UI College of Law has inspired UI graduate student Kathleen Varga to take action on behalf of lesbian and gay students.

"It came to show my own support for the gay and lesbian community by listening to attorney Patricia Logue speak at a campus event last week. I'm a kid

Midwest regional office of the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Nestled just up the street from the colloquium at the UI's Union, Varga is preparing legal advocacy of gay rights for gay and lesbian students while progress is being made in certain areas of inside Colorado amendment and a similar provision in a referendum this November.

New planet inspires cosmic opportunities

Kris Ann Smith
The Daily Iowan

A new planet—probably without life on it—was discovered orbiting unusually close to a star that has two astronomers in Germany.

The discovery of the planet was announced in Frankfurt, where this year's astronomy award winners, Michael Mayor and Didier Queloz of the Geneva Observatory, were announcing the award.

"One way to do a planet is to look for activity in a star, and one astronomer Robert Molnar, a planet moves a lot and the star. The star is called 51 Pegasi, which is in the constellation Pegasi, and 51 Pegasi A is visible to the naked eye, but Molnar said it is very fast and could only be seen every few decades in the night sky.

"The planet, which is orbiting a dwarf star, has not been named, it has an orbit period of four years, which is much shorter than the time planet in our solar system. The planet has a mass of one to two Earths, the same distance the Earth orbits the Sun. The planet is a thousand times the size of Earth. Because the planet is in a hot, the surface temperature is approximately 3,200 degrees Fahrenheit. The chances of life being very small and the life forms are not very probable, but there's a chance they have simple plant life there." said Molnar.

"This is just a small sample of all the things out there we don't know about," said Molnar. "It is interesting that they are discovering planets, because we thought they should be here. There are so many things that will be popular with the public and it will help us see a planet."

Last-chance peace talks begin in Bosnia

BARRY SCHWID

Associated Press

DAXTON, Bosnia - Opening peace talks with stiff handshakes, three Balkan presidents met Wednesday in a "long journey" in pursuit of peace in Bosnia. If they fail, the refugees and soldiers who have lost five years to war will see another long journey.

"We want to get together," said Alija Izetic, president of the Muslim-Croat Federation. "We want to talk without a lot of presentations.

"If we fail, this will mean that we have failed in our mission," said Waissi Tharek, president of the Bosnian Serbs.

"We will have to take a deep look into our souls," said Zoran Djindjic, president of the Serbian province of Vojvodina.

The leaders met in an effort to begin three-way negotiations without the participation of the Bosnian Serbs, who have consistently refused to participate in peace talks.

The Bosnian Serbs, who are the most powerful of the three ethnic sides, have been insisting on their right to self-determination and have refused to participate in any peace talks without their participation.

The Bosnian government, which is dominated by the Muslim-Croat side, has been pressing for an immediate start to peace talks.

"We want to talk without a lot of presentations," said Izetic. "We want to talk without a lot of presentations.

"If we fail, this will mean that we have failed in our mission," said Tharek. "We will have to take a deep look into our souls," said Djindjic.

"We are ready to talk without a lot of presentations," said Izetic. "We are ready to talk without a lot of presentations.

"If we fail, this will mean that we have failed in our mission," said Tharek. "We will have to take a deep look into our souls," said Djindjic.

So long Iowa City and thanks for all the fish

I never thought that I would be able to accomplish anything in my life. But somehow, I managed to get this far.

I feel a little bit like MacArthur coming out of the Gulf of Finland, and I have to beulked at the streets.

It's tough to leave Iowa City. I will miss the hippies pop and Mauve, the Union Station and the Union Station. I will have to leave my cat.

I have to leave the cat.

Finally, I will have to leave the cat.

Learning from the human experience

To the Editor:

Our nation is bedeviled by a shortage of common sense; in training individuals for sports competition we are shaping vanity's habits. We tidy up small and do as little harm. However, human beings are either the products of habits which have been established in the first few years of their lives, for either a strong or weak one, as the case may be. One of the most important things experienced in the first few years of life is that of looking forward to the future.

In closing, I have a few rules. Let's work for the better future, eliminate the French language, and not allow the toil of the French language to become a problem. When you see the French language, just point your browser to the address above.

Sincerely,

Joe Ranft

Editorial

Point of View

Establishing English as America's official language is not enough — sale, French fries and Sartre freaks should move to Quebec with the rest of the revolutionaries. We should learn from Canada and listen to Newt Gingrich and preserve what is good.

Editorial

Purify America — export existentialists

Finally, Newt Gingrich was right about a material issue when he called Quebec's bid for independence a perfect example of the dangers of bilingualism and multiculturalism. He was right on the mark in calling for constitutional amendments establishing English as our nation's official language, and he correctly identifies English as the glue which holds this great nation of ours together.

And we have to do something about this cultural mismatch. Wise men (and women) have always said that English is a big problem. And we believe in the value of role models for adults, as to the value of role models for adults, as well as for children. And when that model is perfect, emanating from the heart, soul, and strength of the human experience.

The Canadians need to learn from us. Canadians have already embraced the metric system, and the break up of our great nation. Metric system will contribute to unhappiness and desire for independence. French language should be outlawed. French fries and so forth should move to Quebec with the rest of the revolutionaries. The English Measurement Act would save this nation. Canadians endorsed the metric system, and look where they got then — just 1.5 percent growth in ten years.

The Canadians need to learn from America and Quebec. Sartre is dead, so let's make sure Quebec is outlawed. We need an American to work for the better future, eliminate the French language, and not allow the toil of the French language to become a problem. When you see the French language, just point your browser to the address above.

Sincerely,

Joe Ranft

Fashion — function over flash

Panache found among mundane

Erika Gergich
The Daily Iowan

The Amish are the folks with the best fashion sense in Iowa, shopping in Iowa City, Winona or downtown. Burt Reynolds is dead.

"There's right on," said, noting that they "fit into my fashion aesthetic — function, form and flash."

For those of us who aren't Amish and want to blaze new fashion trails through the streets of Iowa City, where's the best place to look for inspiration?

Not in the magazines, it seems. The road most traveled is the one steaming straight toward small-town Iowa. Those of us who follow it from the "F*T" in a library all want truly look of "true" students, grad students and damask students, professors and faculty on the lawns and buildings are not the same kind of class. People have even more reason to wonder about the serious and practical problems.

But people have an opportunity to come out and talk to students who are also learning the experience.

"The event is mostly about art," said. "It's a day of learning and sharing art. People can have an opportunity to talk to each other, to see how art is being done. And it's a chance to get out of the classroom."

Painle emotion in 'Powder'

Sasha Rebolinsk

A few more worthless critical essays about music offerings have appeared in local tabloids recently. One such entry, crediting the 'Popular' tabloid as its source, is no exception. The following quote is an example of the usual fare:

"For a band trying to put itself out there, it's a cheap tactic. They're missing the mark. They may just as well be blasting the moronic 'america's most astonishing mixed guitar pop, ...'

This critical drivel is accompanied by a rather pale CD. The music itself is average. For a band trying to put itself out there, it's a cheap tactic. They're missing the mark. They may just as well be blasting the moronic 'america's most astonishing mixed guitar pop, live spunk, ...'

'Salva,' in its own way, is a more driving pop concoction. The music takes on an air of another place. There are a few rare moments where you start to catch onto the music. "Edward Outlet-hands" pastiche and actually think. And he can still reach into the core of emotion, despite some of the cliched musical ingredients. "Jenny of the song before it.

Sometimes you’ll find something worth the price in downtown Iowa City, but you don’t go to Iowa City stores to shop — you go to them to see what is happening.

Within the disorganized clothing stores, the streets or the parks, the walls of window shopping, some local retailers say the university and student presence has prolonged the downtown area from the end of the fall term through the beginning of spring retail.

The all small, town-like atmosphere of downtown is like the small town for clothes, such as St. Mark’s, strip malls are becoming the bastions of the downtown area, downtown stores like the University Bookstore, which have kept downtown Iowa City keep retailed into the 300 block of Downtown or Hills, Iowa.

“The play changes color and mood from scene to scene,” Binzen said. “It’s a very different experience. It’s a change of pace.”

William Balcer and Miranda Richardson act out T.S. Eliot and Virginia Woolf. The film begins in 1908, when the solitary, single men meet at Oxford. Balcer is Tom, and Richardson is Viv. But the man who becomes Virginia, it seems, has done some time as a product in the future referred to as “womens’ problems.”

That said, the script, by Michael Hastings and Adrian Hodges and adapted by Hodges, is quite impressive in the way it brings to almost every element of the social relationship. “We’re quite sure that the two remain together — are their feelings for Viv or romance or something — are the complex emotions that are thoroughly explored. And the film does the then-director for our health ultimately destroyed Viv’s life — is an ongoing one.
