Lambda Chi's back in the house

Fraternity regains charter, awaits UI's approval for return

Sarah Lueck
The Daily Iowan

The Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity's charter suspension has been overturned by the international chapter.

Upon approval by the UI, the fraternity can make an alcohol-free return after at least a year passes.

"At the heart of the fraternity is the Christian ritual that believes in second chances," said Tom Helmbock, the executive vice president for Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. "This is an opportunity, if the UI agrees, to make good on some serious mistakes."

The UI's decision, which has not been made, will be separate from the fraternity's decision, UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones said.

"Once we have completed our investigation, we'll make a decision about the UI sanctions," he said.

Although Jones said he didn't know when the UI investigation will be completed, he said it shouldn't take long after a report is received from Patrick White, Johnson County Attorney.

"We're still waiting for some specific information from the Johnson County Attorney," he said. "Once we receive a narrative report, we'll have something to go on."

If the UI does decide to allow the fraternity back on campus, Helmbock said the fraternity will change its game plan — no alcohol will be allowed in the fraternity, even for those members who are 21.

"Anytime an event with alcohol is scheduled, they'll have to hire a third party to bring in alcohol and distribute it," he said. "And they have to be 21 to drink."

The members are happy, said Pete Laughlin, fraternity spokesperson and member.

"Everyone's very positive," he said. "Finally, after so much negativity, this is a positive thing to lean on."

The members are not disappointed that the house, should it return, will be totally alcohol-free, Laughlin said.

"We're in complete agreement," he said. "Everyone takes that very well in light of what has happened."

The fraternity was suspended by their international chapter and the UI after the alcohol-related death of associate pledge Matthew Garofalo on Sept. 8. The cause of Garofalo's death was determined to be

Lambda Chi Alpha Returns

The ruling of the national chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha:

■ The chapter will remain closed for a minimum of one year. After that year, Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity and the University of Iowa will consider the reactivation of the chapter on a probationary status.

■ When the chapter is reactivated, the chapter would operate as a completely substance-free chapter house. No alcohol would be permitted in the chapter house or on the chapter property regardless of a person's age. Any social events including alcohol would be held at a location outside of the chapter house and would require a licensed third party vendor.

■ The current status of all initiated members will remain "Alumni." All members of the inactive chapter would have the opportunity to reapply for active membership in the reactivated substance-free fraternity.

■ When the chapter is reactivated, a live-in house director would be required and hired by the chapter's house corporation.

■ When the chapter is reactivated, the newly formed chapter would design an alcohol awareness/alcohol poisoning program to be presented to area high schools, the UI Greek community, and Lambda Chi Alpha regional and international meetings.

■ When the chapter is reactivated, the chapter would be required to exceed the all-university men's grade point average.

■ When the chapter is reactivated, the chapter will establish and fund a scholarship, with permission from the Garofalo family, in Matthew Garofalo's name. The scholarship would be presented to an individual entering the UI Greek system as an associate member or pledge.

Professor's sex change met with support

Chad Graham
The Daily Iowan

News of Professor Don McCloskey's sex reassignment surgery received positive reactions from the UI community Thursday.

Professor Michael O'Hara, chair of the Psychology Department, said though the news was uncommon for UI, McCloskey's decision was commendable.

"I don't know him personally, but it's certainly not something you see every day — I was kind of surprised," he said. "Under-taking this in your mid-50s, being very open about it and clearing it with the central administration is a very courageous act."

O'Hara said McCloskey's future students shouldn't be worried about his operation when he returns to teaching.

"I would ask the students what they are apprehensive about and tell them to relax because there's nothing to be afraid of — this won't have an impact on his teaching ability," he said. "New students, who aren't familiar with the operation, will probably see him as a largish female."

Rachel Kronick, a UI religion teaching assistant and a male to female transsexual who has not yet had surgery, said she sympathizes with the feelings McCloskey may experience when he returns to teaching at the UI.

"I'm going to have to go through this ordeal and I'm concerned about what my students think of me, and will think of me," she said. "It's a huge

Roommate charged in phony suicide

The Daily Iowan

UI junior Robert Kooima has been charged with making false reports to a law enforcement agency in conjunction with the disappearance of UI junior Kevin Michael Joyce Jr.

"I was being loyal to my friend," Kooima said. "I was preserving the trust he put in me."

Joyce disappeared Oct. 26, and was reported missing by Kooima Oct. 26 at 9:30 a.m. Joyce's wallet and bag were found by the river shortly after that.

Lieutenant Richard Gordan of the UI Department of Public Safety would not comment on whether Joyce will face charges in regards to his faked suicide.

The Johnson County Sheriff's Department and the UI Department of Public Safety searched the Iowa River for Joyce's body Thursday night and Friday.

Kooima, 21, admitted to police Wednesday he had known Joyce was alive when he told Public Safety about the suicide note Oct. 26. Joyce's note indicated he had jumped into the Iowa River, said UI Public Safety Lt. Richard Gordan.

Kooima said Joyce told Public Safety about the plan for the faked suicide and the role Kooima played.

"I was not very happy (Joyce told Public Safety)," Kooima said. "I feel I was loyal to him. I stayed by him through this entire thing."

Joyce mentioned his plan to fake his own suicide to Kooima Thursday morning, but Kooima said he didn't believe his roommate would actually carry out his plan. He did not know where Joyce was going or what he planned to do.

"We didn't sit down and plan this," he said. "He didn't specify what he was doing. I supported him."

Kooima watched officials drag the river along with Joyce's par-

Proposal could mean fewer GERs for UI

Chad Graham
The Daily Iowan

Like many undergraduates, UI freshman Jenny Nusinow feels the UI's general education requirements hinder a student's progress in college.

"If we don't get all of them done then you can't graduate in four years," she said. "I think there are way too many."

Nusinow, a typical freshman with an open major, is required to take 4 to 8 hours of rhetoric, 4 hours of formal reasoning, 3 hours of interpretation of literature, the equivalent of 4 semesters of a foreign language and another 35 hours of various classes.

Her dream of a flexible GER program may become a reality if a newly proposed general education program is approved Nov. 15 by the Faculty Assembly. The changes would also reduce the total hours of GERs for liberal arts majors.

The changes cut one of the natural science requirements and group the majority of requirements into three categories. Students would then choose six hours of classes from each category. This decreases the number of GER hours from between seven to 20 hours depending on the major.

If the changes are implemented, they could take effect as soon as next fall. Only incoming freshmen would be affected — upperclassmen would still have to fulfill the current requirements.

UI mathematics Professor Keith Stroyan said the UI's GER requirements were not on par with similar universities in the Big Ten and around the nation.

"This proposal is more in line

Proposed G.E.R. Plan

A policy proposed by the Educational Policy Committee would lower the amount of General Education Requirements that liberal arts students would have to take. The requirements under the new plan:

Students must satisfy the following requirements:

Rhetoric	4-8 hours
Quantitative or Formal Reasoning	3-4 hours
Interpretation of Literature	3 hours
Natural Science (with lab)	4 hours
Foreign Language	4th semester competency for BA degree 2nd semester competency for other degrees

Students must take 6 hours in each of these groups:

GROUP II	GROUP III	GROUP IV
Humanities	Historical Perspectives	Natural Sciences
Fine Arts	Cultural Diversity	Social Sciences
Physical Education	Foreign Civilization and Culture
	Foreign Language*

* Three hours of credit will be given to B.S., B.F.A. or B.M. students who complete a fourth-semester foreign language course.

FAN SUES THE UI FOR READMITTANCE TO ATHLETIC EVENTS

Gorilla man tries another suit

Greyson Purcell
The Daily Iowan

UI senior Joseph Sample has sued the UI, claiming he was unjustly punished after running onto the floor at Carver-Hawkeye arena during the Iowa vs. Northwestern basketball game in a gorilla suit.

Sample said he is suing to get rid of the UI's charges against him.

"I hope they can see how stupid the charges are," he said. "They're unreasonable."

Sample was charged by UI administration with intentional disruption of university activities and misuse of university property, among other charges.

"It may seem funny at the moment but it's a very serious thing," said Mark Schantz, UI general counsel.

The UI's penalties against Sample include a suspension from sports activities for one year and the threat of permanent suspension from school if he interrupts a game again.

"What I'm mostly concerned with is going to the sporting events," he said. Sample said he hopes to have his ban on attendance lifted by the time basketball begins.

Sample's first appearance as a gorilla was at the Iowa vs. Minnesota football game last fall, where he ran across the field in his gorilla costume. He was not punished by the UI after the incident.

Sample said the UI penalties for when he appeared

UI senior Joseph Sample, who is suing the UI after being banned from all athletic events at the Iowa vs. Northwestern basketball game are unfair because of the delay of any charges until after the second incident.

"After the first time I did anything, they never said one thing," he said. "I could understand giving me a warning or something to that effect."

Richard Pundt, Sample's attorney, said in a letter to the UI that holding off on the charges until after the second game violated Sample's basic rights.

"This lack of notice violates Mr. Sample's due process rights due to retroactive punishment," Pundt said.

In a letter dated June 1 from Maria Hoopes, assistant to the vice president for University Relations, Sample was told that the UI would not tolerate conduct such as his and would impose appropriate measures.

Bungled registration books cause confusion

Because of a publishing error in the registration books at Kansas University, students think they are taking an entirely new set of courses in entirely new buildings.

Some of the 32,000 University of Kansas Spring 1996 registration booklets had the correct cover on the outside, but the wrong information on the inside.

The number of women who rushed increased from 665 last year to 729 this fall.

"There are a few people in the Greek system that give us all a bad image, and that's unfortunate," said Sherri Sanders, assistant dean of students.

The hazing allegations stem from the arrest of five sorority members on charges of public intoxication and possession of alcohol under the legal age.

Those contributing equipment and time for the video have offered discounts for their services and brought the price down to $5,000, which was provided by the SMU student senate.

Bealmear said he is interested in forming a relationship with the National AIDS foundation by making a commercial that will have the same effect as the "Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk" public service announcement.

The number of students who rushed fraternities and sororities this year at the University of Texas is up, despite allegations of hazing.

Letterman may quit before the millennium

NEW YORK (AP) — The era of Top 10 lists, Stupid Pet Tricks and flying canned hams may be winding down.

David Letterman says he'll probably call it quits when his contract expires just before the decade ends.

"I think more than likely we will stay here through the contract, and then that'll be it for us," he told the Daily News. "Unless something dramatic happens, this is probably our last hurrah."

"It doesn't seem like that big a deal to me if I want to retire when I'm in my 50s," said Letterman, 48.

Letterman blamed CBS's declining prime-time numbers for his own ratings, which have fallen behind Jay Leno's "Tonight Show" for the past two months.

"Jay, with his success, has had the benefit of a very strong thriving network underneath him. And we, for over a year now, have not had that benefit," Letterman said.

The first phase of Letterman's CBS contract runs through next summer, and the network has an option for four more years.

Garth Brooks puts 'heart and soul' into new album

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country star Garth Brooks is not sure how many friends in low places he has left.

Known for hits like "Friends in Low Places" and "The Dance," Brooks is releasing "Fresh Horses," his first album of new material in two years, on Nov. 21.

"To be honest with you, because we haven't had an album out or a ticket on sale, I don't know what two years off has done to us," he said in Thursday's Tennesseean.

Brooks, who has sold more than 54 million albums, said he tried to make sure that "the heart and soul are on that album."

Playboy wants another crack at the tables

LONDON (AP) — Playboy Enterprises, which crapped out in the casino industry after regulatory troubles, might try its luck again.

"It's the fastest-growing area in the whole entertainment world," Playboy chief executive Christie Hefner, Hugh Hefner's daughter, told the Financial Times. "Playboy is the owner of the only entertainment brand that has that kind of history and cachet in casinos."

In the early 1980s, Hugh Hefner was found unfit to run casinos in Atlantic City, N.J., shortly after being forced to sell Playboy's British casino interests because of legal problems.

The Oprah Winfrey Show will air the interview Monday. The interview will air as a portion of a two-part show, airing Nov. 6 and Nov. 7, where 10 viewers — including Ramey and Tighe — were taken to Los Angeles for a fantasy weekend of makeovers, celebrities and the grand opening party for the Beverly Hills Planet Hollywood.

"When I go into a public place, like a restaurant or a ball game, I know some people are looking at me and thinking that I'm a terrible person," he said in an interview in Thursday's New York Times.

"I seriously considered whether I still wanted to entertain, to work hard at whatever gift I had to offer these people. Then I told myself that not everyone was that way, that some still believed in me. So I went on."

Allen, 59, became romantically involved a few years ago with Soon-Yi Previn — an adopted daughter of his ex-girlfriend, Mia Farrow — and was locked in a bitter custody battle over Allen and Farrow's three children.

Allen, who was denied custody, is still involved with Previn, who is around 24 (she was orphaned and her exact age is uncertain).

"She's had to withstand finding reporters in her dormitory room," Allen said. "She's a marvel. And she laughs at all my jokes. She thinks I'm hilarious, and that doesn't hurt the relationship one bit, I can tell you."

Affirmative Action debate hits IC

Cary Jordan
The Daily Iowan

Two well-known speakers visited Iowa City Thursday night to discuss an issue that has raged for years — affirmative action.

Nadine Strossen, president of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), argued for Affirmative Action, and said it is an essential element in America's society.

"As long as discrimination in any form exists in this society we need remedies that will counter it," Strossen said. "A society that is color-blind and treats everyone living within it equally is what everybody wants, especially the ACLU."

"Affirmative Action has destroyed any sense of a unified America. It makes all achievements made by those who live under it seem unearned."

Armstrong Williams, host of radio show "The Right Side"

Strossen said there are many misconceptions about Affirmative Action and what it entails, held mostly by those opposed to it.

"Affirmative Action has never been about hiring people based solely on their race or gender," she said.

"Nor has it been about meeting quotas or serving as a color-conscious head count. What we must realize is that people aren't judged solely by merit, it isn't enough to just work hard and expect it to pay off. For many people — namely women and minorities — it doesn't work that way."

Armstrong Williams, host of radio show "The Right Side," countered Strossen and argued against Affirmative Action.

Williams said while discrimination is a major part of our country's past and still exists today, no amount of retribution or assistance will eradicate those injustices.

"Making judgments based on race is racism," Williams said. "Race is a false basis for legal distinction — you cannot judge a man by his color. We can't hold whites today responsible for the injustices of the past."

"Affirmative Action has destroyed any sense of a unified America. It makes all achievements made by those who live under it seem unearned," he said.

One of the major areas Strossen and Williams disagreed on was whether or not Affirmative Action has done enough to help people from lower economic groups.

Williams said those who benefit most from the program are middle-class white women and middle to upper class African-Americans.

"Affirmative Action has done little or nothing for the poor, the people who need it most," Williams said.

"And those it has helped usually become dependent on it, to the point that they fail to prepare to stand on their own two feet when they have to."

Strossen said while middle class Americans have benefited from Affirmative Action, the program has also done a lot to improve the lives of many lower income families.

"Studies that have been done on how Affirmative Action has actually worked have shown that beneficiaries include people from lower economic and socioeconomic groups," Strossen said. "Many of the big pushes have been in the blue-collar jobs including the construction industry, telephone workers, fire departments and police departments. Some of the people who have been admitted to professional schools such as medical schools through Affirmative Action are people who came from lower-middle class and working-class backgrounds."

People shouldn't look at Affirmative Action as an ultimate solution to discrimination and racism, Williams said.

"You're really kidding yourself if you think having Affirmative Action in place is going to stop discrimination and people being biased," he said. "That's just human nature. It's a harsh reality that racism still exists, as ignorant as it may be."

RED CROSS PRESIDENT CAMPAIGNS FOR HUSBAND

Elizabeth Dole talks politics in Coralville

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

President Dole campaigned in Coralville Thursday — American Red Cross president Elizabeth Dole, that is.

Dole was campaigning for her husband, Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, who is a front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination.

Although the Red Cross granted Dole a one-year unpaid leave of absence to campaign for her husband, she said if her husband were elected president she would continue to serve as Red Cross president. Dole would be the first First Lady to work outside the home.

"I can't think of a better opportunity to serve the country," she said.

While her husband has served in Congress, Dole has developed her own record of government service. In the Reagan administration, Elizabeth Dole was secretary of labor. She returned to the Cabinet for President Bush as secretary of transportation.

"In her own right she's gained a lot of notoriety, aside from being married to a famous man," said Margaret McDonald, Dole's Johnson County campaign chair.

McDonald has known the Doles since Bob Dole's 1976 presidential campaign.

"She's charming, she's very smart. It will be nice to see her again," she said.

Dole talked about her recent visits to Somalia, Bosnia and Rwanda to observe Red Cross humanitarian efforts.

"Parents were waiting in our shelters to see if their children were alive," she said. "Children had nothing — no food, no home, no parents, no clothes, no future. Nothing but the Red Cross."

Dole also sprinkled campaign rhetoric into her message to nearly 100 Republican activists gathered in Coralville.

Dole criticized President Clinton's character and his handling of Medicare.

"The most important characteristic for being President of the United States, leader of the free world, is to have inner-strength and character," she said. "If you have forsaken your moral compass, you cannot lead this country."

Dole said Clinton is using political scare tactics to worry senior citizens about Republican plans to reform Medicare.

"Don't let anyone scare you," she said. "It's like Halloween every day out there with President Clinton."

Senator Dole's campaign has been focusing on improving his credentials among conservative Republicans, and Elizabeth also hit on issues which appeal to conservative caucus-voters.

"Bob Dole knows the difference between Michelangelo and Mapletorpe," she said, discussing Dole's opposition to the National Endowment for the Arts. Robert Mapletorpe's NEA-supported works raised conservative opposition to federal arts funding.

Dole also said her husband would reduce federal bureaucracy by eliminating the departments of education, housing, energy and commerce.

Advertising takes to the skies NewsBriefs

Kristen Smith
The Daily Iowan

It's game day and the crowd is roaring, watching the players strut their stuff on the playing field and then glancing up to see ... an advertisement for a low interest rate?

Everywhere you turn you are bombarded by ads, and the one place you thought was safe is no longer. The air has become an advertiser's dream.

Dominic Passeri, marketing director for the Iowa City chain of restaurants that includes Micky's, 11 S. Dubuque St., and the Mondo's Sports Cafe, 212 S. Clinton St., uses this form of advertising to get the name of his restaurants into the public.

"It is a unique medium," Passeri said. "It is definitely the type of thing that has impact."

Passeri said it is an untraditional way of advertising and has the potential to reach 60,000 people at one time.

Passeri uses a company based out of Waterloo called Plane Talk. Plane Talk is run by Reid Wilson who has been flying banner towing airplanes for the last nine years.

The charge at Plane Talk is between $150 and $250 for 15 minutes of airtime.

Wilson's plane, a Bellanca Citabria two seater acrobatic with a tail dragger, can tow banners with up to 45 letters. Wilson said this above-average number of letters is the reason he receives much of the banner towing business.

Wilson tows banners in Waterloo, Cedar Falls and Iowa City that advertise restaurants, car dealers, birthdays and even marriage proposals. He tows banners over festivals, football games and other outdoor activities.

After flying a banner, Wilson heads back to the field where the banners are laid out. He then drops the hook and banner and uses another hook to pick up the next banner. The plane is equipped with four separate hooks and hitches. This Saturday, Wilson said he will tow a special birthday wish.

While Wilson may be able to carry longer banners than most planes, he is not the only pilot cruising the air. P & N Flight and Charter also has a tail into the business. Jan Walton, part owner of P & N said each year they have many different customers that want to advertise over Kinnick Stadium.

The cost at P & N of a 30-45 minute flight, including take off and pick up, is $300.

P & N flies a Cessna 172 aircraft that can tow banners up to 17 letters including spaces. The plane takes off at the Marion Airport and picks up the banners in a location closer to Iowa City.

Without a banner, the Cessna can fly up to 100 mph. While towing, the drag from the banner slows the airplane down to 60 mph. The maximum towing speed is 80 mph — if the plane flies faster there could be damage to the letters.

P & N flies banners announcing marriages, birthdays and the typical bar and restaurants advertisements.

Wilson takes off from the Waterloo airport, then flies to a field near Iowa City where the plane swoops down at 90 mph to pick the banner up.

"I am actually flying toward the tail end of the banner," said Reid Wilson of Plane Talk. "I pull the plane up full speed and that pulls the banner up."

Once the banner is connected and in the air, Wilson slows the plane down to 65 mph, due in part to the drag and as a safety precaution.

Wilson said in order to fly banner-towing planes, a waiver must be obtained from the FAA. In order to receive the waiver, commercial pilots must take their equipment and their plane to Des Moines and give a demonstration. Once receiving a waiver, it must be renewed every 12 months.

Jury finds Pence not guilty of theft, misconduct

After 30 minutes of deliberation, a 12 person jury found Charles Pence, a Johnson County Secondary Roads Department employee, not guilty of the crime of nonfelonious misconduct in office Tuesday.

On Aug. 4, 1994 Pence was accused of selling scrap metal that was generated by his employment for $208.13 and then keeping the proceeds for himself.

Pence was the driver of a snowplow that was involved in the Jan. 19, 1993 crash with a car driven by former Hawkeye basketball player, Chris Street, who was killed in the crash. On March 31, 1995 an Iowa County District Court jury ruled that Pence was not negligent in the accident leading to Street's death.

Pence, 31, faced charges of fourth-degree theft and nonfelonious misconduct in office when the trial began Monday. However, Associate District Judge Stephen Gerard II dismissed the first charge after the evidence was ruled insufficient to sustain a conviction and the defendant was acquitted of the second charge.

Man leads IC police on attention-getting car chase

A local man led Iowa City Police on a 10 minute high-speed car chase early Thursday morning.

A call was made to the Iowa City Police Department around 10 p.m. Wednesday from someone who said he heard a man stating he was going to "drive his car off a high place and lead police on a high speed chase."

Sgt. Craig Lihs said patrol officers had been warned of the call when they heard a man revving up his car engine.

Police officers chased the man from the corner of Dubuque and Washington streets out of the city limits on Sand Road. Lihs said no other cars were involved and there were no injuries.

The man was later taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics for psychological treatment.

The person's name won't be released until after he is arraigned at the Johnson County jail for the 12 traffic charges he accumulated during the chase, Lihs said.

CIVIC rings in 10th year of foreign guests

Josh Hunt
The Daily Iowan

Visitors from Bosnia, Italy, Rwanda have come to Iowa City for the past 10 years due to the efforts of a local organization.

The Council for International Visitors to Iowa City (CIVIC) will celebrate its 10th anniversary tonight in the Triangle Ballroom of the Union. John Crystal, whose family hosted the late Nikita Khrushchev, former head of the Soviet Union, will speak about the experiences he had when the leader came to Iowa in the '70s.

Ian Smith, CIVIC board director, said about 100 people will attend the celebration, which will include performances of national music and dances from Brazil, India, Palestine and Ireland.

"There will be the various musics and the meal will consist of a Chinese appetizer, an Italian main dish and a Mexican dessert," he said.

CIVIC is a national organization with 103 branches, Smith said. There are only 15 to 20 cities as small as Iowa City that support a chapter.

The main goal of CIVIC is to bring international people, mostly professionals, to Iowa City and outlying communities, said Rowena Torevillas, vice president of CIVIC. Smith said the visitors come to learn about American life.

"It is nice to meet foreign people and interrelate with them," he said. "We learn from them and they learn from us."

A large range of foreign peoples come to Iowa City through CIVIC, Torevillas said. They range from members of the Italian parliament to the chief editor of a Brazilian paper to a Bosnian resident.

Smith said while today people may not be big names in the world now, they may be someday.

"In the past CIVIC has brought people like Margaret Thatcher and Indira Gandhi to the United States," he said. "Most people are 30 to 35 and are not yet established. They are people in training. We are making an investment in the future. The people we have coming to see Iowa City may be the future Gandhis and Thatchers of the world."

Building health.

We really believe in prevention. We have developed a staff and a clinic program to help parents raise healthy children from newborns through adolescents.

To start, we have a free home visit for newborns. We are concerned about going home too soon and want to make sure you and your baby are off to a great start. We are a call away for any questions you have during those first months.

At each stage of your child's life there are changing needs to meet for good health. We offer free monthly health education seminars on topics from managing fevers to behavior problems. You get a $5 credit every time you attend one of these evening seminars.

Adolescents' worlds are incredibly complex and they affect their health. We help keep things right side up with attention to adolescent health care. We believe preventive health care involves both the teenager and parents, but to be honest there are times when adolescents need some medical advice and may not want to talk to their parents. Any time after their annual check-up, our adolescent patients can call for a free consultation visit on any topic they want.

'Love candidate' dies of overdose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Louis Abolafia, an artist who ran for president against Richard Nixon in 1968 as the naked Hippie "love candidate," died of a drug overdose, authorities said Thursday. He was 54.

Abolafia died Monday at UCLA Medical Center. Toxicology tests will determine the drug involved, said Scott Carrier, a spokesperson for the Los Angeles County coroner's office.

The son of a New York City florist, Abolafia was part of the Greenwich Village art scene in the '60s and organized "love-ins" and "happenings" that combined music, poetry and audience participation.

Abolafia became a sort of hippie poster-boy for the New York press and ran for president on the Hippie "love ticket."

In a famous photo, he posed naked with a strategically placed hat. His campaign slogan: "What have I got to hide?"

He received about 2 million votes.

Journalist gets jail time for attempting to knife lover's husband

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A former newspaper reporter was sentenced to four years in prison Thursday for trying to kill the husband of his lover — a woman he had profiled in an award-winning story.

Michael Frazier, 34, received the maximum sentence for the 1994 knife attack on a sleeping John "Rob" Whedbee.

The former lifestyles editor at The Oak Ridger was tried on attempted murder charges and convicted Sept. 16 of the lesser offense of attempted manslaughter.

For a year before the attack, Frazier and Whedbee's estranged wife, Lisa, had had an affair.

Frazier knew Lisa Whedbee from church, where he was the organist and she was in the choir.

They became close when he profiled her and her husband in a 1993 Mother's Day story about their struggle to raise a daughter with Down's syndrome.

Multiple vehicles run over pedestrian in hit-and-run

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A pedestrian knocked to the ground by a hit-and-run driver as she crossed a highway was run over by a second car that didn't stop and possibly a third.

"Me and my boyfriend were freaking out," said Stephanie Bozorgmehr, who heard a screech and a thump Monday and ran out of her parents' delicatessen.

Nanette Martin, 33, of Mission Viejo, was hospitalized in serious condition with head injuries.

Bozorgmehr said she saw a second car run over Martin and several other vehicles graze her body on Pacific Coast Highway about 30 miles south of Los Angeles.

Police were looking for a cream-colored Mercedes-Benz sedan and a white pickup truck that lost a side mirror in the accident.

Both vehicles are believed to have hit Martin, stopped briefly and fled.

Denny's customer throws Grand Slam fit, gets community service

LA GRANDE, Ore. (AP) — A man who got steamed when a Denny's restaurant charged extra to substitute hash browns for eggs on his Grand Slam Breakfast was ordered to perform 20 hours of community service for creating a scene.

Michael Lawrence Fesser, 24, was accused of screaming obscenities at the manager, throwing a quarter at her and refusing to leave.

But the judge sentenced the college student to community service and placed him on 18 months' probation for disorderly conduct and trespassing.

Peace talks spark family exchange — first settlement proposals

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio — Bosnia peace talks produced some dividends Thursday as Croatia and the Muslim-led government agreed to a good-faith exchange of 600 families. The United States offered proposals for a settlement and for separating rival armies and paramilitary units.

As American, European and Russian mediators shuttled among three Balkan delegations sequestered at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, testing for shifts on issues that ignited 42 months of bloodshed in the former Yugoslav republic, the Clinton administration said two Bosnian Serb leaders indicted by a U.N. war crime tribunal should be stripped of authority in any accord.

Otherwise, State Department spokesperson Nicholas Burns said in Washington, U.S. troops would not be sent to help enforce peace. Referring to Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic, the Bosnian Serbs' political and military leaders, Burns said: "When we deploy, we don't believe these two individuals should be in positions of power."

With all three Balkan delegations and American, British, French, German and European Union mediators pledged to channel all announcements through the State Department, the U.S. spokesperson provided some details of what he called "limited progress" toward a settlement.

The most striking was an agreement between Croatia and Bosnia "as a first step and a gesture of goodwill" to permit 200 Muslims to return to Croat-controlled Jajce in central Bosnia and 200 Croatian families to Muslim-controlled Bugojno near Sarajevo.

A week from now, 100 Muslim families will be settled in Stolac and 100 Croatian families in Travnik, both in Bosnia.

The 600 displaced families are a tiny fraction of the hundreds of thousands of people forced from their homes in "ethnic cleansing" and warfare.

Burns estimated a quarter-million people have perished in the war.

There was virtually no elaboration of the draft peace treaty chief U.S. negotiator Richard Holbrooke circulated or of three accompanying documents, dealing with elections, a new constitution for Bosnia and for separating military and paramilitary forces.

One of the tasks American ground troops would take on after a settlement would be keeping the forces apart. Burns said this would apply to separating paramilitary units as well.

South African elections mark triumph over racial hatred

Patrick McDowell
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — White thugs clubbed Phillip Basson's father to death 36 years ago for sitting in the whites-only section of a streetcar. Political justice was his best revenge, and Basson got it Thursday when he became one of South Africa's first elected non-white town councilors.

"My father died as a result of apartheid," Basson, 60, said Thursday. "I try to forget, but it always comes back. After he died, my determination to change the system became much more hard."

African National Congress candidates like Basson won an apparent landslide in Wednesday's first all-race local elections.

Results were still trickling in and a final tally wasn't expected until Friday, but Basson knew at dawn he'd won Ward 16 in greater Johannesburg.

The elections swept away the last vestiges of white-minority rule, eliminated on the national level in April 1994 when Nelson Mandela and the ANC won the nation's first democratic vote.

In the races for almost 700 local councils throughout most of the country, early results showed the ANC winning majority control of 54 compared to 11 for the National Party. Independent groups such as local taxpayer associations also won several councils.

With the ANC doing well even in regions where the National Party had dominated in last year's elections, the trend favoring Mandela's party was expected to continue.

That means many territories that were controlled by whites would now be governed by black-led councils with power to decide Ballots are sorted and counted at a polling station in Lenasia, south of Johannesburg, South Africa, Thursday after Wednesday's local elections. The African National Congress, which came to power last year by winning national elections, received 58 percent of votes cast for parties in early returns reported by election officials.

what roads to pave and schools to build.

For Basson, a soft-spoken trade union leader with a gold-capped smile, the victory marked a triumph over the racial hatred that killed his father.

Martin Basson was a 47-year-old head waiter in 1959 when he boarded a streetcar heading from downtown to home in the mixed-race neighborhood of Coronationville.

In those days, only whites could sit in the preferred aisle seats, leaving non-whites to cram onto two benches or stand. Often, only one white would sit in a seat designed for two but refuse to share.

"Once in a while, they'd wave you over and you could sit down," Basson recalled.

"That's what happened to my father. Then they attacked him. They cracked his skull with a blunt instrument."

Martin Basson went into a coma and died. No one was ever arrested.

Phillip was already a union activist in the leather industry and dabbled in anti-apartheid politics. After his father's death, he began seriously attending ANC meetings chaired by Mandela.

Thirty years of underground activity and police harassment followed.

Basson rose to become regional secretary of the National Union of Leather Workers. When Mandela was freed from 27 years of imprisonment and the ANC legalized in 1990, Basson formed a local party branch in his neighborhood, Riverlea.

Now at the heart of Ward 16, "colored" Riverlea belonged to no electoral district under apartheid. Neither did the black areas — the factory belt of Industria and a Soweto neighborhood called Power Park — that now form the ward's southern edge.

Of Ward 16's current 13,000 registered voters, only the working-class whites in jacaranda-lined Crosby and Langlaagte had ever voted in local elections. They always went for the white-led National Party.

ents, Kevin and Elizabeth Joyce. Joyce contacted his parents Friday evening and flew home to Omaha.

Kooima said it was difficult to remain silent while Joyce's parents watched the river-dragging.

Since the incident, Joyce has moved out of the room and has withdrawn his registration from the UI, Kooima said. Kooima spoke with Joyce at a farewell dinner held in the Foreign Language House, where the two resided.

"I was given no explanation for anything I wanted to know," Kooima said.

Gordon said the charge, which is a simple misdemeanor, could result in a $100 fine or 30 days in jail.

with other universities," Stroyan said. "We looked at the total number of hours (at the UI) and found it to be way out of line when compared to other universities."

Meghan Henry, the Liberal Arts Student Association representative, said the proposal is also the result of a survey given to UI students.

"The surveys we received indicated people needed changes in the program," she said. "We looked them over to see what could be done and to find the courses that are useful."

Henry said she hopes the proposal passes because it allows students to choose what kind of courses they want to take.

"The program allows students more flexibility," she said. "For example, a chemistry major has very little time for electives; it frees up a lot of time for students."

UI sophomore and University of Northern Iowa transfer student Nicci Yang said the UI's system wasted time for students in comparison with UNI's program.

"At UNI they only had two required humanities courses and only one semester of P.E.," she said. "We already took the science and biology in high school ... the P.E. requirement is a waste of time. I understand they want us to learn about other things, but we also have to learn our majors."

However, UI sophomore Brian Spahn said the UI's requirements are useful and helped him determine his major — political science.

"I don't think there are too many requirements," he said. "It helped me when I was trying to find out what I wanted to major in. I took a couple of philosophy classes that I liked and I took a math class that I didn't like."

Fred Antczak, chair of the Rhetoric Department, said the new program won't hinder students who are still deciding on a major.

"With the new plan, students aren't required to take certain courses, but they still can if they need a broad sample," he said.

Antczak said many of the UI departments in the Liberal Arts College would be positively affected by the new proposal due to the elimination of certain courses.

"With fewer GER's there is more room for the departments to offer more electives," he said. "We like the programs ability to reduce the total number of GER hours and the freedom of choice it gives the students."

Stroyan said the educational policy committee hopes to submit the final proposal Nov. 6 to the faculty assembly. At that time, the proposal will only be discussed, not voted on.

"The proposal is on their (faculty assembly) agenda, but I don't know if it will be discussed," he said. "The educational policy committee needs to finalize the proposal based on concerns raised by the faculty of the College of Liberal Arts."

Helmbock said he was surprised the appeal was successful.

"I thought we were going to close the group up," he said. "Over the years, any time we have had a serious drinking incident, the chapter has been closed down. But this is the first time in 5 years a student has died."

Helmbock said the decision was made because this is a chance to make a positive change.

"This is a window of opportunity to make a change in culture," he said. "Alcohol is not what the fraternity is about."

Helmbock said the return of Lambda Chi, should it be approved by the UI, is a chance to address a drinking problem that belongs to the entire campus — not just Greeks.

He said the UI is a particularly Internal Revenue Service, jumped aboard, claiming he had a bomb.

Sang told Chapman in Spanish, "I'm taking control," and threatened to blow up the bus. Chapman, who moved from Cuba when she was in her teens, asked him not to hurt the schoolchildren.

Chapman has been with the Dade County School District for 14 years in a variety of jobs, including cafeteria worker. She began driving for the district last year. For eight years before that, she had moonlighted as a self-employed school bus driver.

"Why me? Why this? Why is this happening to me?" Chapman recalled thinking as she drove the bus slowly north on the Palmetto Expressway.

But Chapman seemed unflappable as she drove the bus over 15 miles of Miami-area highways, while Sang chattered steadily with police on a cell phone several rows behind her. "I pray a lot," she said later.

The confused children — some of whom have autism or speech impediments — sat in seats scattered about the bus as Chapman encouraged them to be calm.

"I just told them to calm down, to go to sleep," she said. "Most of them do not speak. But I have a good relationship with them."

A convoy of pursuing police cars, lights flashing, quickly formed around the bus as it traveled — door wide open — at a cautious 35 mph to 40 mph, below the 55 mph limit.

Chapman "said she felt threatened, because the subject, when he argued with her, would reach inside his jacket. She thought he might shoot her," said Pat Brickman, a Metro-Dade police spokesperson.

"She kept the subject calm, she kept reasoning with him. She said 'I'll take you where you want to go.' I would give her a lot of credit not just for keeping the kids calm but for keeping this hijacker in a lucid state so that he didn't shoot anybody."

Later, police determined that Sang was not armed and did not have a bomb. The ordeal ended outside Joe's Stone Crab, a popular restaurant at the southern tip of Miami Beach where Sang had worked until Wednesday night.

Police fired at the hijacker, killing him, and rescued the children. Chapman scrambled out and injured her toe.

Schools spokesperson Henry Fraind praised Chapman for staying calm under pressure.

"She remembered one thing we are all taught as educators — you protect the welfare of the children," said Fraind. He called her "a modern-day hero."

Superintendent Octavio Visiedo echoed the praise: "She did an excellent job and never panicked."

ordeal."

Kronick said surgeons transform the penis into a vagina in the process of turning the scrotum into a labia and removing the testicles.

"Some surgeons are really good at it," she said. "We discuss on the internet which surgeons are the best."

Judy Van Maasdam, coordinator for the Gender Dysphoria Program of Palos Altos, Cal., said the procedure is an easier operation than a heart transplant.

"Sex reassignment operations have been going on since the 1960s and they're fairly common," she said. "There is one doctor doing the surgery and it's considered an inpatient procedure with the person out of the hospital from four to eight days."

Van Maasdam said the surgery, which is not covered by most insurance companies, costs anywhere from $10,000 to $24,000 in the U.S. The patient also has to show they are committed to the decision.

"Prior to undertaking the operation the patient must go through an evaluation and counseling," she said. "They also have to take estrogen or testosterone and live as a man or woman for a minimum of a year."

Before the surgery takes place, the patient also needs two recommendations from a source other than a surgeon, preferably from a psychologist or psychiatrist, Van Maasdam said.

"All of these procedures are law

O'Hara said he didn't know if the UI community would be supportive of McCloskey's decision.

"He's going to have a lot of adjustments and so will the people in the history and economics department, his family and the people who deal with him," he said.

Gary Fethke, dean of the UI College of Business Administration, said this was a personal matter for McCloskey.

"All I'll say is that he is a fine scholar and a good colleague," he said.

UI sophomore Angelina Gonzalez said the news of McCloskey's operation wasn't a big deal.

"I didn't feel that it was any of my business and it made me ask myself why this was the big news story of today," she said. "I wouldn't think he was any less fit to do his job — it has nothing to do with his brain."

McCloskey was out of town Thursday and could not be reached for comment.

Begin named Big Ten Coach of the Year

Iowa field hockey coach Beth Begin heads a team of Big Ten champions as well as a slew of Iowa award winners. Begin was named Big Ten Conference Field Hockey Coach of the Year Thursday.

The Hawkeyes (10-0 in the Big Ten) also placed six players on the all-conference first team, led by junior Diane DeMiro, who was named Offensive Player of the Year.

The other all-conference Hawkeyes include: Ann Paré, Jessica Enoch, Mary Casabian, Melissa Miller and Lisa Celluci. Iowa filled more than half of the 11-player squad.

The other five first-teamers are: Most valuable Player Jen Coletta of Penn State, Defensive Player of the Year Betsy Vance of Northwestern, Northwestern's Linda Formosi and Amy Borneman and Michigan's Carolyn Schwartz.

Hawkeyes Mandy Abblitt and Nancy McLinden earned second-team all-Big Ten honors.

Penn State's Sonja Volla was named Freshman of the Year.

BOXING

King takes the stand

NEW YORK — Calling claims that he ordered employees to cheat Lloyd's of London "lunacy," boxing promoter Don King took the witness stand Thursday to begin his defense in his insurance fraud trial.

The spike-haired promoter of many of boxing's biggest names loudly, firmly and at times angrily denounced the testimony of a former accountant.

"It's idiocy," King said of accusations that he told the accountant, Joseph Maffia, to make up $350,000 in training expenses that were never paid to a boxer for a planned 1991 bout.

"Did you do anything like that?" Peter Fleming Jr. asked.

"No," King responded, his voice reflecting his anger.

"On your oath?" Fleming asked.

"On my oath," King said.

Hawks return home without Fawbush

Schoenstedt suspends junior for 'not living up to expectations'

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

Just when it seemed things couldn't get any tougher, things got tougher. The Hawkeyes, who have battled injuries and inconsistent play all season, will now be without one of their top players for the season.

Katy Fawbush, a preseason all-Big Ten selection, was suspended from the Iowa volleyball team for the final month of the season for not meeting team standards.

"We have expectations of our student athletes to live up to certain standards, and she didn't do that," coach Linda Schoenstedt said.

Schoenstedt did not specify the particular standards that Fawbush failed to meet.

While the junior outside hitter still has a year of eligibility remaining, she has decided to forsake it and end her career as a Hawkeye.

"Katy has elected to graduate and move ahead in her career interests," Schoenstedt said.

The rest of the coaching staff and the players declined to comment. Fawbush could not be reached.

A year ago, Fawbush was an all-Big Ten honorable mention. She led the team with 542 kills and 131 games played. Fawbush transferred to Iowa after beginning her career at the University of Arizona.

This season, Fawbush's production has been down a bit but she was still second on the team with 311 kills and led the team in digs with 275.

The Hawkeyes first test without Fawbush will be this weekend when they host a pair of Big Ten matches against Penn State (22-4, 10-3) and Ohio State (15-5, 10-2).

Iowa (2-10 in conference) was dominated by both teams when

Highly touted Iowa offers first glimpse

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

After months of hype and speculation, the unveiling of the Iowa men's basketball team is just one day away.

Thirty minutes after the conclusion of the Iowa-Illinois football game, Iowa coach Tom Davis' squad will take the Carver-Hawkeye Arena floor for the Black and Gold Blowout, an intrasquad scrimmage.

The Hawkeyes will play a full game in front of a projected sold out crowd of 15,500 fans.

"I try to treat it like a real game," Davis said. "This is a big weekend in terms of decisions."

So what is Davis expecting from Saturday's event?

"Hopefully some of the nervousness (for the regular season) will rub off," Davis said. "I'm going to play the top seven as a unit in the first half."

The top seven that Davis eluded to are seniors Mon'ter Glasper, Russ Millard and Kenyon Murray, juniors Chris Kingsbury, Jess Settles and Andre Woolridge and sophomore Ryan Bowen. Davis also said he may add a different player to that team at halftime to see how certain combinations react.

Davis said Bowen's insertion into the top unit was no fluke, citing the sophomore's exceptional preseason practices as evidence.

"(Bowen's) legit," Davis said. "He deserves to be in that group and often very high."

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry isn't worried about the fact that Illinois has outscored his Hawkeyes 96-10 in the last two years.

He isn't concerned that the Illini nearly upset Northwestern last week, while his Hawkeyes took a beating against the other Big Ten co-leader — Ohio State.

And whether Illinois plays junior Scott Weaver or senior Johnny Johnson at quarterback... doesn't matter.

"If we can just correct the mistakes we're making," Fry said, "I could care less who the quarterback is. We've just got to be ourselves."

In the 1994 Big Ten Conference tournament the Iowa field hockey team was the underdog, the team many thought was down and out, the team that had everything to gain and nothing to lose. Three victories later, the Hawkeyes were Big Ten champions and on their way to the NCAA tournament.

This year the shoe is on the other foot.

"I like the fact that we have a bye, but that doesn't make it any easier. We are going to have to play like the Big Ten champions in order to win this tournament," Begin said.

The Hawkeyes will have to wait an extra day to get the ball rolling.

But it's Bowen's traits, Davis said, that makes him so appealing. "He's been playing all over," Davis said. "He's our best blocker. Right now he's our best rebounder. He's very flexible and versatile, and he's in great shape so he doesn't need to come out."

"He's also got a terrific work ethic. He's not up to Jess yet, but he's not far away."

The coaching staff will be giving out an "extra effort award," and if it were doled out today, Bowen would be the recipient, Davis said. Settle would have been the first pick for the award but Davis has held the junior forward out of the two-a-day practices as a precaution for his testy back.

One of Bowen's biggest contributions has been rebounding, a category the Hawkeyes had trouble in last season. So does that mean Iowa is, once again, a rebounding power?

"No we're not, but we'll be a little better (than last year)," Davis said. "If Russ or Ryan can rebound in double figures, that will help, but our best chance is balanced rebounding."

Unlike some intrasquad scrimmages, Saturday's game won't just be a stage for hot dogging. "There won't be much showing off unless it's within the framework," Davis said.

With seven players vying for playing time, Davis said the practices have become soapboxes for each player's case.

"If you would say to those guys 'who wants 30 minutes a game?', you'd have a little fight on your hands," Davis said.

Despite intense practices and a swarm of media, Davis said his team is ready for the regular season.

"I think they've been ready since the first day of practice, at least mentally," Davis said.

All four freshmen are expected to play, but it may be the emergence of a sophomore who surprises Saturday's crowd.

"The guy with the edge right now is Greg Helmers," Davis said. "Right now he can play the four or five spots better than the freshmen."

Also trying to test the water is

Iowa's only non-frontcourt freshman, Trey Bullett, who has finally joined practice after sitting out with a stress fracture in his foot. Bullett will see some playing time, but is far from 100 percent, Davis said.

Davis said the timing of the Blowout is essential to the team's overall success.

"We could see (crowd support) coming on at the end of last year," Davis said. "What you see at this blowout is what feeds off the other sports."

Davis said unlike other universities, Iowa's sports programs feed off one another.

"Everyone tries to be supportive of each other," Davis said.

terrorist attack or a barroom brawl, I think.

Let's suppose you do manage to sneak a pack of marshmallows past the front gate, be careful who you pull it out in front of. The athletic department may implement peer security within the stands as well as plain-clothes spotters; and if one of those marks — I mean security people — is too busy watching Iowa stomp Illinois, there will be video cameras.

Is this what George Orwell had in mind when he wrote "1984"?

"Please help us restore a stadium environment which will be a source of pride and enjoyment to all involved," the statement read. Tell you what: You give us back the "hey" song and we'll restore your environment.

But since the athletic department won't let the marching band play the "hey" song and forbids us from throwing junk onto the field or cheering too loudly, I suppose that means I'll have to stop peeing over the brick walls into the entrance tunnels, too. Completely unfair if you ask me.

Let's work out a compromise. We won't throw anything that can send someone to the hospital, and in return you stop crying about marshmallows.

Maybe the athletic department will let us throw anything we want, as long as it's not malicious, a demand I find more than reasonable. Just in case, here are a few things I would find acceptable to throw from the Kinnick stands.

- That annoying drunk guy who keeps pushing you off your bench because he's so excited Rodney Filer just scampered for four yards.
- The doughnut you just ripped off from the added security.
- Your pants, as long as they're something lightweight; perhaps something of cotton origin or parachute pants.
- The prayer books that I'm positive the athletic department will be passing out sometime in the near future to help persuade the "mean spirited and unruly" — an immensely small faction of students that the athletic department says is causing all the problems.

Well, whatever. I understand that Mr. Bowlsby's intentions lie with the best interests of those who we have put at risk. Namely those in the line of fire of flying bottles.

So let me make one last request: Throw what you will, but keep it safe. Chuck all the marshmallows and raw chicken you can find, just make sure it's boneless.

For the most part we can abide by their requests, no matter how asinine some of them may be, but do I see the need for the secret police? No way.

I just hope those guys at the gate have washed their hands.

they last played in October. Penn State defeated the Hawkeyes 16-18, 15-12, 15-4, 15-6, while Ohio State won by the score of 24-5, 25-21, 17-9.

"I've told the team that this could be a nightmare from hell," Schoenstedt said. "Still, I believe we're good enough to beat anyone. Right now we're still surviving. If we play together, anything can happen."

Iowa will benefit from the return of junior kill-leader Jennifer Webb from a shoulder injury which sidelined her in last weekend's losses to Michigan State and Michigan.

Webb will play alongside senior

Tiffany McDaniel who returned last weekend from a strained anterior cruciate ligament. With Fawbush's suspension, however, the Hawkeyes will continue their dubious distinction of not being at full strength for any Big Ten match this season.

Schoenstedt said the team will have to concentrate on areas that it has struggled on this season.

"We're working a lot harder on blocking and defense," Schoenstedt said. "Those are two big keys to slow down Ohio State and Penn State. We've got to minimize errors against these teams."

Both matches are scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. and will be played at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

FIELD HOCKEY

At 11 a.m. Saturday, Iowa plays the winner of the Michigan and Ohio State game. The other half of the bracket has Penn State facing the winner of the Northwestern/Michigan State tussle at 1:30 p.m. The championship is at noon on Sunday. All games are being played at State College, Pennsylvania. The winner receives an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

Although Iowa has a virtual lock on a bid, standing at 17-2 on the year and carrying the No. 2 ranking in the country, junior Diane DeMiro said it will be tough to face teams who know this is their only shot at the NCAA's.

"It's all or nothing for them," DeMiro said. "We have to come out and jump on teams early and not let them think they have a chance. The longer the game stays close, the more confident these teams get."

The Hawkeyes will look to DeMiro and Ann Paré to lead the attack like they have all year. DeMiro knocked in 16 goals and rang up 42 points during the regular season. Paré blasted a team high 122 shots on goal, hitting the promised 15 times. Potential freshman of the year Quan Nim finished third on the team with six goals, including two last-second goals to preserve Iowa wins.

Hawkeye senior Jessica Enoch lead the defense that helped post seven shutouts on the year. The all-conference defensive back had 15 defensive saves in the regular season. Freshman goalkeeper Lisa Cellucci turned away 109 shots and finished with a sparkling 14-2 record in games started.

Iowa has endured the dog days of August and the bone chill of late October. Paré said it's been a long year, but fatigue is not a factor.

"We've worked this hard to get this far, there is no way we're going to let up. It's put up or shut up time, plain and simple," Paré said.

backs. I think in terms of that, we're in a better situation than last year."

Illinois is also coming into the game with the idea they have to win.

"Now is the time and our backs are against the wall," Illinois line-backer Simeon Rice said.

Illinois must win three of their final four games to qualify for a bowl game.

The Illini lead the all-time series with the Hawkeyes, 34-21-2. Iowa last won in 1992, by a score of 24-14 in Champaign.

fundamental football we have to improve on."

Iowa hosts Illinois Saturday at 11:35 a.m. at Kinnick Stadium. The game is sold out, but will be telecast to a national audience on ESPN.

The Hawkeyes come into the game 5-2 overall, 2-2 in the Big Ten. Illinois enters the game 3-4, 1-3 in the conference.

Both teams are coming off two-game losing streaks and understand the importance of this game. For the Hawkeyes, a win puts them in the driver's seat to qualify for a bowl game. With Northwestern and Wisconsin coming up down the road, a loss would significantly dampen Iowa's bowl chances.

"We've got four games. It would be nice to win 'em all. It would be nice to win three and it'd sure be nice to win two," Fry said. "Anything other than that, we're not gonna go to a bowl game."

But Fry is not thinking ahead, at least not publicly.

"We just have to focus on one game at a time and this week, it's Illinois," he said.

While Fry downplayed the last two losses to Illinois, the players have not forgotten them.

"They gave us two real good beatings," said linebacker Bobby Diaco. "We've got a long way to go this week."

But Diaco is confident this team is better than the team that lost 47-7 last year.

"This year, we have a lot more guys healthy, it seems like," he said. "I remember last year, we went through so many quarter-

Hawks head to Rolex tourney

Some kind of magical force always seems to empower the Iowa men's tennis team when it competes in the Rolex ITA Regional Tournament.

Two years ago, Klaus Bergstrom advanced to the tournament finals in singles, last season Bryan Crowley won the singles championship after being seeded only 14th and now Iowa coach Steve Houghton hopes yet another Hawkeye can find Rolex success.

Tom Derouin, Mattias Jonsson, Marcus Ekstrand, Ryan Johnstone and Damir Seferovic will all seek their fortunes in singles action when they compete at the Rolex Regional scheduled to begin today in Madison, Wis.

Houghton said he's looking forward to continuing the recent trend.

"We've actually had a pretty good track record at this tournament," he said. "Things really fell into place for Crowley last season and anything is possible in this type of thing."

In addition to singles action, all of Iowa's participants with the exception of Seferovic, will compete in the doubles draw.

Even with the past results, Houghton insisted that the Hawkeyes won't be able to waltz through a tournament that will feature stiff competition from nearly 30 teams.

"There will be no weak players in this tournament," Houghton said. "Even some of the lesser teams in the conference will be playing their top guys."

Jonsson agreed the competition would be fierce, saying he was just happy to see some action after battling a bad knee.

"This will be the first real meet for me since I've been injured most of the time," he said. "You can get a tough draw in the first round and get knocked out early, but hopefully that won't happen."

— Shannon Stevens

Women's tennis

Members of the Iowa women's tennis team hope to put an exclamation point on their fall season when they compete in two different divisions of the Rolex Regional this weekend.

Kristen McCracken, Erin Wolverton and Robin Niemeier will begin play today in Champaign, Ill., in one part of the tournament, while teammates Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette conclude play at the main Rolex draw in East Lansing, Mich.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Iowa assistant coach Jen Hyde said the Hawkeyes hope to continue their stellar play in their final fall tournament.

"We want to be in there until the end of the tournament," Hyde said. "It's been a good semester and they've made some great improvements pretty quickly considering the amount of changes they've had to go through with a new coaching staff and a new style of tennis."

McCracken, who usually plays doubles with her twin sister Kelly, said she was looking forward to playing with new partner Wolverton.

"Our goal is to go out there and have fun," McCracken said. "We've never played together so it should be interesting."

Hyde said McCracken and Wolverton would be hard to beat.

"Both players are pretty feisty and I think they'll be a pretty intimidating doubles team," she said.

Women's golf

No one on the Iowa women's golf team has decided to call it quits just yet.

Although Iowa has taken its share of hard knocks during the season, it is confident that it can pull together for a strong performance in its fall finale at the Pat Bradley Invitational.

"I feel like we have one good tournament left in us," Iowa coach Diane Thomason said. "You'd like to put your clubs away with a good feeling."

Junior Karen Schroeder said the Hawkeyes aren't any less determined than they were at the beginning of the season, despite suffering a few setbacks.

"We've all been playing good, but we haven't been able to put it all together in one tournament," Schroeder said. "It'll be easier to go into the spring season with a strong tournament."

Nearly 15 teams are scheduled to participate in the 54-hole tournament that starts today. Iowa and Illinois will be the only two Big Ten Conference representatives. Jenny Nodland, Tanya Shepley, Candy Schneekloth, Becky Sjolholm and Karen Schroeder will make the trip for the Hawkeyes.

— Shannon Stevens

Crew

The Iowa women's rowing team will be competing in an intrasquad meet on the Iowa River before the football game Saturday.

The event, part of parent's weekend, is scheduled to begin at 8:45 a.m.

This will be the final appearance by the Hawkeyes for the fall season, who begin again in early April. Last weekend Iowa's varsity-8 team beat out Kansas as the Head of the Iowa, the Hawkeyes' first home regatta since being moved up to varsity status.

Cavs pull off upset of the year

Rick Warner

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — In a stunning upset Thursday night, Virginia snapped Florida State's 29-game Atlantic Coast Conference winning streak and probably ended the Seminoles' bid for a national championship.

Tiki Barber had 311 all-purpose yards and scored two touchdowns and the No. 24 Cavaliers stopped second-ranked Florida State a foot from the goal line on the final play for a 33-28 victory.

"The national championship thing sorts itself out. Tonight, it sorted us out," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said.

It was Florida State's first ACC loss since joining the league in 1992. The Seminoles (7-1, 5-1) had won their first 29 ACC games by an average margin of 33 points, and had beaten their first five league foes this season by an average of 43 points.

"We don't lose often," Bowden said, making the point to his players to "try to be good losers. It's part of life. Nothing lasts forever."

Virginia (7-3, 6-1) played an inspired game against explosive Florida State, which was leading the nation with 56 points and 600 yards per game.

After building a 27-21 halftime lead, the Cavaliers shut out the Seminoles for most of the second half and got two field goals from Rafael Garcia, who had four in the game.

Florida State pulled to 33-28 on Warrick Dunn's 7-yard touchdown run with 6:13 left in the game, and drove to the Virginia 6 in the final seconds. But Dunn was stopped inches from the end zone by Anthony Poindexter and Adrian Burnin on the final play, setting off a wild celebration at Scott Stadium.

The Florida State loss scrambled the major bowl picture. Had the Seminoles beaten Virginia and gone undefeated, they probably would have played No. 1 Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl for the national title.

Now, the only way the Fiesta will get two undefeated teams is if Nebraska and third-ranked Florida win out. Florida plays Florida State at Gainesville on Nov. 25.

Florida State started the final drive on its own 20 with 1:37 remaining, and quickly marched down the field. After reaching the Virginia 6, the Seminoles snapped the ball directly to Dunn, who was hit short of the goal by Poindexter and finished off by Burnin.

MEN'S SWIMMING

Iowa kicks off season at home

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Following an undefeated season that led to a No. 13 national ranking, the Iowa men's swimming team will look to continue its winning tradition Saturday when it opens the 1995-96 season hosting Northwestern.

The Hawkeyes return 22 letter-winners including all-Americans Jory Blauer, Jose Hidalgo, Marco Minonne and Tim Schnulle, who was also a member of the Big Ten Conference championship 200 freestyle relay team.

"We're very excited about getting the season started," head coach Glenn Patton said. "We've had a long fall of tough two-a-day practices, and the team is looking forward to it's first competition."

As a program, Iowa has finished in the Top 25 nationally for sixteen straight years, and placed in the top three in the Big Ten, 13 of the last 16 seasons. Patton, the man behind the success at Iowa, has compiled a 150-55 record in his 21 year reign.

"Coach Patton is a very demanding coach and he makes practice extremely difficult and sometimes nearly impossible," Schnulle said. "Despite the tough practices though, he brings us a long way and gets us in great shape for the season."

Northwestern also has a strong program, but opened their season on a down note, losing in dual meet action to Wisconsin-Milwaukee 117-124. Behind the strong swimming of junior Scott Smale and sophomore Steven Vongluekiat, however, Northwestern bounced back to place first at their own Northwestern Relays.

"It's unfortunate that we have to open the season against a Big Ten opponent, but we hope to make the most of it, and expect a very exciting meet," Patton said.

The meet will mark the 50th meeting between Iowa and Northwestern, with the Hawkeyes having a 29-19-1 advantage. Under Patton, Iowa is 11-1 versus the Wildcats, losing only during Patton's inaugural season of 1976.

Hawkeyes hope to rebound vs. Indiana

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

There's nothing like a little home cooking, and that's exactly what the Iowa women's swim team will get this Saturday when it hosts Indiana in dual meet action.

Under first year head coach Patricia Meyer, Iowa scored 90 points on its way to a fifth place finish in last weekends Northwestern relays. Iowa's top finishes were a third place finish in the 200 medley, and a fourth place finish in the 300 backstroke, 200 freestyle, and 400 individual medley.

"I think the team did really well," Meyer said. "They outdid my expectations and it was a really big thrill to beat Michigan State and be competitive with Michigan and Northwestern."

Freshman Jessica Knippenburg was part of the relay in all four of the top Iowa times.

"Jessica performed exceptionally well," Meyer said. "If she can stay healthy, she will continue to improve and drop her times."

The Hoosiers also opened action last weekend, defeating Cincinnati 150-94. Indiana didn't allow the Bearcats to place first and second in any event. Indiana was led by sophomore captain Lauri Kerns, who finished first in both the 50 and 100 yard freestyle contests with times of :24.56 and :53.28.

"They have some outstanding freshmen and a world-ranked butterflyer so it's going to be a big challenge for us. We're real eager and determined to go in, give good effort and see what happens."

Patricia Meyer, Iowa women's swim coach on Saturday's dual meet against Indiana

In the last meeting between the two teams, Indiana defeated Iowa 185-107 in November of 1984, en route to a 3-1 overall series lead.

"I think it's going to be a competitive meet this weekend," Meyer said. "They have some outstanding freshmen and a world-ranked butterflyer so it's going to be a big challenge for us. We're real eager and determined to go in, give good effort and see what happens."

SHAQ, MOURNING ...

Several NBA stars still MIA

Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

When the season opens Friday night, the NBA's list of missing persons will be long indeed.

There's the injured starters, like Shaquille O'Neal, Chris Webber and Rik Smits. There's the suspended, like Luc Longley and Charles Oakley. And don't forget the locked-out referees.

Charlotte's Alonzo Mourning, on the trading block, didn't make the Hornets' flight to Chicago on Thursday for their opener. He may be among the missing as well.

Making up for all the absences, however, is the presence of His Airness, starting his first full season with the Chicago Bulls since 1992-93.

A record 14 games Friday night will include the NBA debuts of two Canadian expansion teams. The Toronto Raptors tip off in the Sky-Dome against the New Jersey Nets, and the Vancouver Grizzlies visit the Portland Trail Blazers.

But the long list of injured stars around the league takes some of the glitz off the big opening night.

O'Neal, the league's leading scorer last season, is out six to eight weeks with a fractured right thumb injured when he was hacked by Miami's Matt Geiger. Geiger, in turn, was suspended for the incident and will miss the Heat's opener Saturday.

"With Shaq out, it only makes teams hungrier to beat us," Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway said. "Almost 90 percent of our offense was centered around Shaq. If I didn't say I dread not having Shaq, I'd be lying."

Smits, the Indiana Pacers' center, is out for three weeks after having a bone spur removed from his leg. New Jersey forward Derrick Coleman is receiving medical treatment for an irregular heart-beat, and no one knows when he'll be back.

Associated Press

Orlando Magic center Shaquille O'Neal leaves an Orlando, Fla., hospital following surgery on his right thumb, Thursday.

The Washington Bullets are so depleted by injuries they had to sign assistant coach Derek Smith to a 10-day contract and put him on the floor.

"No way in my mind did I envision this," said Smith, who hasn't played in the NBA since 1989.

Webber is out nursing a dislocated shoulder, and veteran point guard Mark Price, traded from Cleveland in the offseason, is out indefinitely with a sore left foot.

If Webber hadn't gotten injured, he'd be serving a suspension Friday for fighting with Longley in an exhibition game.

Chicago's starting center, Longley, was slapped with a suspension as well.

"With Luc out, obviously we're starting right away with a deficit," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "I'm concerned about who's going to show up in a uniform."

Oakley, New York's starting power forward, will miss the Knicks' opener at Detroit because of an exhibition altercation with Philadelphia's Vernon Maxwell. Raptors center Oliver Miller has to sit for his team's debut because he left the bench to join an altercation with the 76ers' Shawn Bradley.

Players and team executives have blamed the unusually high number of preseason scuffles on the absence of the regular referees.

Replacement referees — in groups of two, not three — will be working until the NBA and its regular officials reach a new contract agreement.

The sides remain far apart on salary issues, and deputy commissioner Russ Granik said it would take "a few days to a week" to get the regulars back even after a deal is made.

"In light of the fact our referees appear intransigent on this issue, this is going to be a long confrontation," commissioner David Stern said. "It's not an ideal situation. I've always been in favor of three-man crews."

Outside arenas in Chicago, Los Angeles and Philadelphia on Friday night, the regular officials will walk a picket line.

Players aren't happy about the replacements, especially the two-man crews.

"Experienced referees know the quality of players they're dealing with, and they've seen a lot of different things that are part of the game," Michael Jordan said. "A lot of young guys may not have seen some of these traits or some of these qualities these professional athletes have and they're quick to make judgment. A lot of times, that's not in the best interest of the game."

"But we've got them, we've got to make the best of them. Hopefully, they won't decide the outcome of the game."

HEAVYWEIGHT FIGHT

Holyfield, Bowe square off Saturday

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Riddick Bowe and Evander Holyfield were within inches of each other when Fan Man dropped in on them a few years ago. Now, they're light years apart about how the incident affected the fight.

"I had Holyfield right where I wanted him," Bowe said. "His back was bothering him, his legs were tired. I think he was ready to quit. If Fan Man hadn't come in, I'd have knocked him out in that round or in the next round."

Holyfield's version goes like this: "Before Fan Man came into the ring, Riddick Bowe was dying," he said. "He was cut and his confidence was down. I hit him where I wanted to hit him and when I wanted to hit him. He was on his last breath."

The seventh round of the second Bowe-Holyfield fight on Nov. 6, 1993, was delayed 21 minutes when James Miller, the Fan Man, crashed against the ring ropes at 1:10 of the round. The judges didn't agree on who won the round. One scored it for Bowe, one for Holyfield and one called it even.

Holyfield definitely is right about one thing.

"I knew chances were that if the fight was stopped, it would be a technical draw and Bowe would not have to fight me again," Holyfield said Thursday. "I was praying the fight would continue."

At the end of six rounds, two judges had the fight even and a third had Holyfield ahead by two points. It would have been a technical draw, allowing Bowe to retain the WBA and IBF heavyweight titles.

Holyfield went on to win a majority decision, and Saturday night he and Bowe will meet for the third time, outdoors at Caesars Palace, site of the second fight.

Bowe won the WBC, WBA and IBF titles from Holyfield on a unanimous decision on Nov. 13, 1992, at the Thomas & Mack Center in Las Vegas, but was stripped of the WBC crown by the time of the second fight.

At Thursday's weigh-in, Bowe was 240 pounds, the lowest he's been since the first Holyfield fight. He weighed 246 when he lost to Holyfield.

Carolina gets first shot at the 49ers

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

The Carolina Panthers are starting to imagine what was unthinkable when the schedule came out — that they can beat San Francisco when they travel to 3Com Park on Sunday.

After all, the Panthers beat the Saints, who beat the 49ers, who are so banged up that some pundits are suggesting they might not make the playoffs.

Whoa. "It's interesting," says Bill Polian, Carolina's general manager. "But it would be a major, major upset."

How major? The oddsmakers, presumably on the assumption that Steve Young will be back, have made the 49ers a 15-point favorite. That's not much.

Back to the game. This one is probably in the hands of the San Francisco defense, which took care of St. Louis two weeks ago. If it forced four interceptions from Chris Miller, what will it do to Kerry Collins, who is promising but still learning?

Still, even with Young playing, the 49ers' offense is not what we're used to and the Carolina defense is respectable or better. Interesting game. 49ERS, 27-3

BILLS COACH

Buffalo players miss their coach

Bucky Gleason
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Marv Levy enjoys coming into a locker room and telling war stories. Not football anecdotes. Real war stories about heroic leaders such as Winston Churchill and George Patton.

The Buffalo Bills haven't rolled their eyes or shaken their heads over a Marv war story in more than two weeks. Never did the Bills realize how much they missed their Churchill until he left the team and underwent surgery Oct. 17 for prostate cancer.

"You never miss something until it's gone," defensive end Bruce Smith said Thursday. "Right now, this team would give just about anything for Marv to come in and torture us with another war story."

The Bills have failed to rally around the absence of their coach. Buffalo (5-3) still shares the AFC East lead with Miami and Indianapolis but it has lost two straight and has an important road game Sunday against the Colts.

Levy, even though he's a history buff and football coach rolled into one, never attempted to equate the two. In his opinion, a two-game losing streak and matchup against a division opponent does not constitute a must-win situation.

"A must win? World War II was a must-win," Levy has said over the years.

"A must win? World War II was a must win."

Marv Levy, Bills coach

The Bills have been hurt by injuries to offensive stars Thurman Thomas and Andre Reed. Offensive tackle Glenn Parker has missed the last three games.

Four starters were sidelined in four weeks. Eleven players fill the weekly injury report. Buffalo probably wouldn't have won the last two even if its coach was on the sidelines, but he might be the person the Bills miss most.

"I missed Marv from the first day," quarterback Jim Kelly said. "It shows. Guys like myself and (center) Kent Hull, we've been with Marv for 10 years, and we do miss him. Losing Marv is like losing Thurman, like missing Andre. Those guys can't be replaced."

Levy took over the team in 1986 and led it to four straight Super Bowls — something no other coach in history has done. His strict regimen of short, snappy practices and preparation has been taken over by acting head coach Elijah Pitts.

Pitts has handled the team no different than Levy has. He has the support of the players and coaching staff, but he isn't Marv.

"Marv had a way of putting things into perspective in a way that's awfully hard to duplicate," Hull said. "He has his own special way of getting his point across without lashing someone. He has a very tactful way of doing things, and that's what we miss around here."

Levy made it a point that he didn't want any gifts or get-well cards while he was in the hospital. Before he left, he told the Bills they could lose their general but still win the battles.

WITHOUT A TEAM

Baltimore courting several teams

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — The Maryland Stadium Authority is negotiating with several teams to bring an NFL team to Baltimore, state Sen. John Pica said Thursday.

"I think the negotiations are serious," said Pica, whose district includes the stadium site.

The chairman of the Maryland Stadium Authority on Thursday refused to comment on reports that the Browns are one of the teams negotiating with Baltimore.

WBAL-TV in Baltimore said meetings have been held in Washington and in other locations. However, the negotiations are being kept very low profile because of the city's experience with the Cincinnati Bengals this summer. There was some concern at the time that the intense media attention jeopardized negotiations.

Maryland officials want to delay an NFL vote on a resolution that would guarantee Baltimore a relocated or expansion team, but team owners may cast votes anyway.

John Moag, chairman of the stadium authority, and Gov. Parris Glendening had asked in September for a vote on the resolution. But Moag said this week he wanted to keep trying to attract a team to Baltimore and save the resolution as a "last resort."

The NFL has not decided whether to delay the vote and may not do so until team owners meet Tuesday, league spokesman Greg Aiello told The Baltimore Sun.

"We plan to have a full and open discussion at the league meetings regarding Baltimore, L.A. and other cities that have expressed an interest in acquiring or reacquiring an NFL team," he said.

FRIENDS AND DRINKING "IS THERE A PROBLEM?"

Even though alcohol is accessible it is not a problem among my friends.

No. I don't see alcohol as a problem among any of my friends.

Some drink very responsibly while others are a problem when drinking.

EVER BABYSIT A FRIEND?

Yes, I was embarrassed by their actions and persuaded them to leave the establishment.

Yes, I felt that it was my responsibility to take care of them because they were unable to take care of themselves.

Yes, and it's aggravating. People should learn to control their own actions and take care of themselves.

EMBARRASSMENT CAUSED BY A FRIEND

I was grateful that I could help them, because there have been people that have done the same for me.

I've never been in a situation where I was embarrassed by a friend who was drunk.

I felt I had to make excuses for the person because I do not want people to think poorly of my friend.

DID YOU KNOW?

96% of UI students were not arrested in the past six months because of drinking. Based on survey data collected in the 1993 UI Health Interest and Practices Survey, Health Iowa.

Creative prose craved for magazine

Todd Norden
The Daily Iowan

Earthwords, the UI undergraduate version of The Iowa Review, is looking for a hand.

Earthwords magazine enters its 16th year struggling against small distribution and low awareness of the magazine among students. However, the magazine plans to improve with the assistance of a new editor and by establishing a copy layout and marketing team.

Clint Lewis, editor of the magazine, brings experience and an array of skills to this year's publication. Lewis, a UI junior transfer student from Central Arizona College, resurrected The Oracle at CAC after a 25-year lull, and his experience led him to Earthwords.

"I am very interested in writing. There wasn't a literary magazine at Central Arizona College. I helped start one with the Dean of Education, the English division chair and the Honors director," Lewis said. "Central Arizona College had just created a print media lab and no one knew how to use it. I instructed them with the lab and basically built (a literary magazine) from scratch."

Regarding Earthwords, Lewis said "It's established, I don't have to build it from scratch. I'm learning how to coordinate, work with leadership. You can do stuff by yourself all day long and not learn anything about leadership.

"We're out to improve the quantity and the quality of the magazine. This represents the students of Iowa rather than my view. It's aimed at undergraduates with an opportunity to share creativity even though they may not be considering this as a career. We have an attitude in this country that if you're not doing it for a living, you shouldn't do it. I don't agree with it. We accept people that play sports, why not poetry or painting?"

Earthwords magazine is funded by the UI Association of Residence Halls and through UI Student Government. The publication is advised by the UI Education Program Office.

Celine Hartwig, coordinator of the Education Program Office, said the process for submitting works to Earthwords is straightforward.

"Any student who is an undergraduate that would like to submit in the categories of fiction, non-fiction, playwriting, poetry, artwork or photography are invited to. The works are read name-blind and are judged by the staff and the section editors. Then, the editorial board takes final selections and prepares them for publication.

"It's unique in that it is a rare opportunity to be published and have a good chance at being published."

Lewis said anyone who has an interest in creativity should be interested.

"Anyone who enjoys being creative and would like to try their hand at being published should submit. It's people expressing themselves," Lewis said. "I think it's great we have a nice budget line and a commitment from the education program, but putting out only 200 copies for 28,000 students doesn't go very far. If we are given a chance to show (students') work, why not share it?"

Emily Shelton, a UI freshman on the copy/marketing staff, said, "I'm excited about it. I looked through the old (Earthwords) and they were OK. I think there are a lot of exciting things we could do with it and make it more practical."

Students who wish to submit to this year's edition of Earthwords are asked to bring a manuscript to the UI Education Program Office in 112 Rienow Hall between 8 a.m. and noon and 1-5 p.m. Students will be asked to complete a submission form to assure impartial analysis of their work. A limit of five works per student are allowed. Deadline for submissions is Nov. 6th at 5 p.m. Earthwords is slated for publication in April 1996.

Tha Dogg Pound is on the prowl again.

The Los Angeles duo — Delmar "Daz" Armund and Ricardo "Kurupt" Brown — released their highly anticipated debut Dogg Food this week. The album's release was held up for months after a legal battle with distributor Interscope, which is owned by Time Warner.

The key ingredients in Dogg Food are the combination of Daz's and Kurupt's unique talents. Daz serves up a pure and funky production which compliments Kurupt's lyrical twists and turns. Together the duo, which broke into the music business Denmark's Safri Duo will play the classical music of Bach, Mendelssohn and their own original music on over 100 percussion instruments. This dynamic performance will be held at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall of the Voxman Music Building.

Also this weekend, "Two Roads/One Heart" by playwright Thea Cooper will be performed in Theatre B of the Theatre Building through Saturday at 8 p.m. working with their mentors Dr. Dre and Snoop Doggy Dogg, creates a raw power that permeates from every morsel of Dogg Food.

The album chronicles the observations and experiences of Tha Dogg Pound, and it's not always pretty. On tracks like "Ridin', Slippin'", and "Slidin'", Daz and Kurupt describe their grim ghetto lifestyles.

Dogg Food also includes the same characteristics which made their Death Row Record albums so popular. On the debut single "Let's Play House," Tha Dogg Pound exhibits skills which are bound to make them famous. Daz creates rhythmic beats, which reflect his love for '70s funk, to propel Kurupt's fierce, smooth and fast flowing lyrics.

To say the album is a complete success, however, is a reach. Dogg Food tries too hard to be what its forerunners have been. At times, Daz's beat seems forced and the lyrics become repetitious. With the rap stakes currently being raised by revolutionary groups like the Wu-Tang Clan, Tha Dogg Pound and Dogg Food fall a bit short.

UI cracks down on rowdy fans

The Iowa student section has earned the distinction as the "unruliest in the Big Ten conference" by a referee for its actions during the Penn State game

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

When football fans try to get into Iowa's game against Illinois on Saturday, they can expect more than just handing over their tickets.

Fans may be frisked or patted down by stadium security officials before they are admitted into the game as a result of a new policy implemented by UI administration. Athletic director Bob Bowlsby announced the policy this week after a hog's head and raw chicken were thrown on the field during Iowa's game against Penn State Oct. 21.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry has asked the fans in the student section, located in the end zone of the northwest part of the stadium, to not "be idiots" when cheering on the Hawkeyes.

A beer can hit defensive end coach Milan Vooletich during the Penn State game.

"I imagine if I ever got hit by a beer can, I'd probably want to go up in the stands and offer the beer back right in their mouth," Fry said two weeks ago after the incident. "We've got 'no drinking' rules and 'no smoking' in certain places. Why can't we stop people from being idiots?"

This week Fry said he was confident the student section will clean up its act.

"I don't think any big measures need to be taken, except maybe screen them when they come in," Fry said.

At a Board in Control of Athletics meeting Oct. 26, board members discussed the idea of putting plexiglass around the student section. But Bowlsby said it was not a feasible solution to the problem.

In addition to the searches at all gates Saturday, stadium security will use video surveillance, peer security and non-uniformed spotters to seek out rowdy fans. Fans also will be prohibited from leaving the game at half-time and re-entering to cut down alcohol consumption outside the stadium.

Alcohol is prohibited in Kinnick Stadium, but fans have still found ways to smuggle in bottles and cans. Botas, backpacks, large duffel bags, coolers, seat backs, noisemakers and "any other disruptive device" also will be banned. Those found with those items will be denied admission, the UI policy said. Anyone found with banned items inside the stadium will be prosecuted.

The word is out about Iowa's rowdy fans. After the Penn State game, which had a late 2:30 start and was televised on ABC, a Big Ten official told UI Sports Information Director Phil Haddy the student section is the "unruliest in the conference." The field was pelted by marshmallows, alcohol containers and raw meat.

David Parry, supervisor of Big Ten officials, said he heard concerns from the officials after the Penn State game. But he stressed that Iowa is not alone in its problems with fan behavior.

"I would think it's probably increasing over the years," Parry said. "It's a sign of the times. There's been a little bit of erosion of sportsmanship and fair play. I think the NCAA has of behavior from the fans. It's a little bit of a national concern that we had better police."

Earlier this season, Texas Tech was penalized 45 yards after its fans threw tortillas on the field. Although Big Ten officials have given penalties for crowd noise, they have not penalized teams for objects thrown on the field, Parry said.

"I just hope it never happens," Parry said of penalizing Iowa fans for throwing objects on the field. "It would be extremely rare. It's within the rule book though."

"Our experience is if we penalize the crowd for noise, it just makes it worse. With crowd noise, we just try to play through it."

At Wisconsin, fans have traditionally been some of the rowdiest in the Big Ten. Cooked spaghetti, marshmallows and baloney were just some of the objects Lieut. Glen Miller has seen thrown on the field at Camp Randall Stadium.

"You name it and it's got thrown," Miller said. "Unfortunately, we had some people injured. We had problems with marshmallows that people would push coins inside the middle. We had players on opposing teams get cut in the face."

Wisconsin adopted a pro-enforcement policy after the Badgers' 13-10 victory over the student section as fans pushed toward the field.

Wisconsin brings in officers from about 16 different agencies, Miller said. Officers patrol the stadium and issue tickets if they find alcohol. Names of students are turned over to the Dean of Students.

"If you throw something on the field, you will be ejected," Miller said. "Our main thing is keeping it from coming in in the first place. We're visually inspecting people coming in. We're asking them to look in their large bags. If they refuse, we don't allow them in and they can go get a refund."

After a year-long quarterback controversy, Matt Sherman has settled into his spot as Iowa's quarterback of the future

Chris Snider

The Daily Iowan

You might say Matt Sherman was the black sheep of the family, or at least, the black and gold sheep.

While his older brother and sister took paths southwest from St. Ansgar High School to Iowa State, Matt broke a bit to the east, and became a Hawkeye.

"I watched the (Iowa) games, but I never came to any," Sherman said. "All through my junior high days and early high school years, I went to all Iowa State events.

"I knew of Chuck Long and was a Chuck Long fan. I was kind of an Iowa fan, but I wasn't an avid. I had great respect for them and I always thought it would be a fun place to come play football."

And play for them Sherman has.

He started his freshman season behind Ryan Driscoll as the No. 2 quarterback, but never accepted that role, and finally made his way to the top spot.

"I accepted where I was, but I didn't accept it in a way," Sherman said. "I wanted to help the team out any way I could, but at the same time, I didn't want to disrupt what was going on.

"My dream was to be the starter and be the No. 1 guy and that's what I wanted to do, so that's what I worked for."

His big break came when Driscoll went down with a season-ending injury, bumping Sherman into the No. 1 spot, a position Sherman has yet to relinquish.

"We had at it this spring," Sherman said, regarding the battle between Driscoll and himself, "and it's going to be the same way next spring. We'll have at it and whoever does better, can help this team get back to the Rose Bowl, that's who's going to play."

The idea of following in the footsteps of Long, Chuck Hartlieb, Matt Rodgers and the other great Iowa quarterbacks isn't something Sherman tries to think about.

"You kind of need to stay level headed about that and just help this team to win," he said.

Sherman knows he still has a long way to go to reach their level.

"I'm where I want to be simply because I'm learning," Sherman said. "Each game is becoming a little more ordinary for me and I'm taking things in stride a little better, but I still have a lot to learn.

"I'm young. I still make a lot of mistakes that cost this ball club some key touchdowns, so I need to learn and become a better quarterback."

Sherman started the Hawkeyes' final two games of last season as a freshman, but starting in his first year is nothing new to him. He did the same thing in high school, where his football coach was also his father.

Sherman earned honorable mention all-conference as a freshman and went on to lead the state in passing the next three seasons.

He also started forming ties with the University of Iowa.

"I came to camp my freshman and sophomore years of high school and that's when (Iowa quarterback) Coach (Don) Patterson said I have a chance to play quarterback at the Division I level," Sherman said.

"I came back the next summer and he thought I could be a quarterback here."

So Sherman, ranked as the No. 3 quarterback prospect in the Big 10 region by Bluechip Illustrated, packed his bags and became a Hawkeye.

"It was just a dream of mine and something that I wanted," he said. "I didn't even take any other visits, because I knew this is where I wanted to be."

"I had visits set up, but after I came down here, I met the guys and realized I felt good here. It's a family atmosphere. I knew I could fit in."

Now in his third year with the program, Sherman is fitting in nicely and earning the respect of his teammates.

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Matt Sherman calls out a play against Ohio State last Saturday.

"He's a great quarterback," Iowa tailback Sedrick Shaw said. "He goes out there with determination and heart every week and he goes out there to prove a point and to be a leader."

But Sherman knows his dream might not have come true without the help of his father and coach — Rich Sherman.

"When I was in high school, over dinner, it was football. That's all we talked about," Matt said. "Every time we sat down about something, football got brought up, and it still does.

"He always pushed me every day to get better in everything I do. Don't overlook the little things. Don't take things for granted. Use your God given ability."

And the elder Sherman still pushes his son.

"I talk to him about two or three times a week at length and he tells me what I need to work on," Matt said.

"In my heart, he's still my coach and I listen to him and respect what he has to say."

That doesn't mean they always agree.

"I think I know as much as he knows, but he's been coaching for 30 years," Matt said. "His style of coaching is a little different than my philosophy now. I like to take advantage of things and he kind of sits back and likes to just run the ball and occasionally throw it."

Obviously, Rich didn't throw more than occasionally in Matt's high school playing days. Matt finished his prep career passing for 6,809 yards and 77 touchdowns.

With his background as a coach's son and a quarterback, Matt has become a natural leader for the Hawkeyes.

"For a quarterback, you naturally have to be a leader," Sherman said "It's tough because I'm not an old guy. I'm a young guy. Some of the seniors naturally have that ability to take the team over leadership wise because they've been here so long.

"I'm trying to improve on my leadership ability. As a quarterback, it's very important."

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Matt Sherman has thrown for 1613 yards this season, connecting on 92 of his 160 attempts, nine for touchdowns.

"The Macintosh[®] does everything I need it to do and it does it easily. Mac has so many different capabilities, I can't imagine going through college without one. I've used my Mac for different art projects for school. It's a fun and exciting new medium to work with. It's been a valuable tool in creating and completing my various art projects.

Mac is the best thing going. It's easier to use than any other computer I've used. I learned the basics of the Mac in about an hour. It's fantastic. Any program is just a 'click' away. I couldn't imagine using any other computer."

Rutgers brawl brings duo to Iowa

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Too bad the Hawkeyes haven't seen Rutgers on their schedule in the last four seasons. A pair of Hawkeye seniors have had some success with the Red Raiders in the past.

It wasn't on the field, however.

Tight end Scott Slutzker and linebacker Bobby Diaco have been mainstays in the Iowa lineup over the past three seasons. They are, statistically, the two most successful seniors in the Hawkeye lineup. And they are best of friends.

Slutzker, from Hasbrouck Heights, NJ, and Diaco, from Cedar Grove, N.J., played high school football in the same state, but never met until a recruiting trip to Rutgers, where the players recall things got a little out of hand.

O.K., it escalated into a mini-brawl.

"We weren't having a good time," Diaco explained. "The guys that were hosting us weren't acting the right way. His host, I think, was a tight end and mine was a linebacker, and they weren't gonna play. And I don't think they wanted us to go to school there because, I don't know, maybe they were worried they'd lose their jobs or something.

"To make a long story short, they wanted to sit in their room and pocket our money. And we exchanged words and we just started fighting."

Slutzker also recalled the fight, saying, "Their visions of what it was like to host was a lot different than what we had."

When Diaco was asked who won the fight, he gave a smug grin.

"Who do you think?" he said.

Slutzker had already visited

Iowa at the time of the Rutgers trip. Diaco visited later. But both players came to the same tallying more than 1,000 points and 1,000 rebounds, Diaco still tries to get the best of him on the court.

The only problem is, Diaco often uses his linebacking and wrestling skills to gain an advantage.

"Yeah, he's a hacker," Slutzker said.

Diaco admitted that he was the lesser of the two on the court.

"We scrap around a lot, but I could never beat him. He's a tremendous athlete," Diaco said. "But I outwrestle him."

One place where Diaco does have a slight advantage is the golf course. They both admit that, but Slutzker warned Diaco to look out.

"I think he's a little better on the golf course, but I'm working on it. I may surprise him," he said.

conclusion and here they are.

"All through our career here, we've been best friends, here at school and also at home," Slutzker said.

"We drive home together all the time. His wife and my girlfriend are good friends — usually the four of us get together once or twice a week. So we're real close."

Just like any good friends, Slutzker and Diaco are also quite competitive. Despite the fact that Slutzker was a star high school basketball player, Golf and basketball are taking a backseat these days while Slutzker and Diaco prepare for their final month of regular season football here at Iowa.

Slutzker said that he and Diaco often discuss their future, their dreams and goals, but lately the conversation usually surrounds putting together a strong finish to the season.

"That's one of the big things that we really need to do — to concentrate on our last four," Slutzker said.

Both players have made solid contributions as Iowa has compiled its 5-2 record this season.

Diaco, 6-foot-2, 235 pounds, leads the team in tackles for the second consecutive season with 81. His average of 11.3 tackles per game leads the Big Ten and he tallied 26 against Indiana earlier this year.

Slutzker, 6-5, 249, is second on the Hawkeyes with 20 receptions and 343 yards this year. He broke loose against Penn State with eight catches for 167 yards.

Simeon Rice passed up the NFL draft to get his degree and help his team return to a bowl game

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

This January, Illinois linebacker Simeon Rice made a lot of Illini fans extremely happy.

"Well, I'm going to be here next year," he said. "I'm declaring that I'm staying."

With those words, Rice said goodbye to the NFL draft (for a year, anyway), and hello to his senior season with the Fighting Illini, despite being projected as a high first-round pick.

Simeon Rice

"I wanted to keep my distance for the year because a lot of guys leave college and I feel they are not ready," Rice said before this season began. "I wanted one more year behind my back so I would really know I was ready."

"I'm used to doing things traditionally — four years is the traditional time you spend in college. I believe in doing things at the appropriate time. Although the money was nice and everything was right, the situation wasn't right."

Already a sure NFL prospect, Rice took nothing for granted his senior season, coming to fall practice faster and stronger, with 4.7 percent body fat.

But things haven't exactly gone as planned for Rice. His team is struggling. His stats are down. His attitude seems different, less positive.

Rice wanted one more shot at a Rose Bowl, something he thought this team had a legitimate chance for. In early August, he boldly predicted Illinois would finish either first or second in the Big Ten. Things haven't gone that well.

Illinois is 3-4 heading into the Iowa game, eighth in the conference race, needing to win three of its final four games to even qualify for any bowl games.

"My aspiration is to go to a bowl game. I'd be very disappointed if I didn't," Rice said, admitting there was a sense of urgency amongst his team to win the Iowa game.

"Now is the time and our backs are against the wall."

Personally, Rice has also been frustrated. His nine sacks ties him for fifth in the nation and moves him to No. 8 on the all-time NCAA list, but Rice has been faced with double and triple teams all season.

In 205 plays prior to the Northwestern game, he has been double-teamed 102 times and triple-teamed four more.

After beginning the season as a rare Heisman Trophy hopeful on the defensive side of the ball, the Heisman hype has blown over.

"It's been extra frustrating because you want to do a lot of things," Rice said. "By being blocked by so many people, I feel I'm eliminated from the game."

"I'm not allowed to do a lot of things because I'm blocked. I'm just trying to make the best of it."

By taking Rice out of the game (he hasn't had a sack in the last two games), opponents have opened things up for the rest of the Fighting Illini defense.

"It forces people to step up, whether they do or not," Rice said. "It's just a challenge."

Despite balking on a professional career, Rice has still faced one of the pressures of a pro athlete — from agents.

"I really don't deal with them, I just concentrate on the season," said Rice.

"Some of them follow you around. They hang around practice."

Rice said it's not too hard to get them to leave him alone. He simply tells them they won't ever represent him if they continue to bother him.

"College athletes have got to remember that they're in charge," he said.

Rice also said the Illinois athletic staff has helped him in that regard.

"They help a lot. They're there for you," he said. "They recommend some people for you."

Despite things not going his way, Rice continues to look at the positive aspects of his decision to stay.

"I'll be able to achieve a degree," said Rice, only 16 hours from graduating with a degree in speech communication. "That's the big thing to me. I've become a lot stronger against the run and helped the team out, basically."

Illinois linebacker Simeon Rice roughs up Iowa quarterback Mike Duprey last season in Champaign. Illinois won the game 47-7. Just 16 hours away from receiving his degree, Rice passed up millions of dollars in the NFL to play his senior season for the Fighting Illini. He has recorded nine sacks this season despite facing double and triple teams over half of the time.

Shaw rushes into record book

Eighty-three yards. That's Iowa running back Sedrick Shaw's magic number, the amount of yards he needs to break Tony Stewart's all-time Iowa rushing record, a record that has stood for all of five years.

But Shaw, as is his style, isn't creating any hype.

"The main thing is just going out there and focusing on the game and trying to help the team win," Shaw said. "I'm sure everyone is going to want to know about the record and everything and that's fine. But who's to say, I don't know what will happen. The biggest thing is that we walk off that field with a victory."

Shaw also doesn't seem to mind being the No. 2 talked-about running back in the state, behind Iowa State's Heisman Trophy candidate, Troy Davis.

Although Shaw appears to accept the situation, one of his teammates does feel a need to speak out.

"Sedrick doesn't take a second seat to him," Iowa line-backer Bobby Diaco said. "There's no way."

There has been some speculation that Shaw, currently the No. 10 rusher in the nation, will pass on his senior season and enter the NFL draft, but those close to him know the odds of that are highly unlikely.

"He probably doesn't even know there is a draft," said Iowa coach Hayden Fry, who has never had one of his players turn pro before their senior season. "He's like my son. He's the greatest young man in the world."

But if Shaw did break the trend and enter the draft, Fry would have one request.

"I'd say I want to be the first guy that you float a loan to," Fry said.

Shaw isn't counting down to his record breaking run or feeling any pressure to reach the plateau, but he does have one plan for the event.

"If I keep the ball, I'm pretty sure I'll give it to my mom and my grandmother," Shaw said.

Shaw's mother and grandmother raised him together in Austin, Texas.

Fry said Shaw reminds him of two great running backs he has coached in the last decade at Iowa — the power running Stewart and finesse runner Nick Bell.

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Sedrick Shaw rushes for some of his 93 yards against Penn State Oct. 21 in Iowa City. Shaw, a junior, needs 82 yards on Saturday to tie Tony Stewart as Iowa's all time leading rusher.

"Sedrick is a combination of the two. It's all what's in Sedrick's mind," Fry said. "I personally think Sedrick is a more exciting runner than the two."

But all that means little to Sedrick, who is simply having the time of his life.

"Right now, I'm so young, I really don't think about it," Shaw said. "I guess when I get older, I probably will. Right now, I'm just so focused on trying to do what I'm trying to do."

Illini look to rebound against Hawkeyes

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

A strong defense, weak offense and a lot of close losses describes only one Big Ten Conference team the past few seasons: the Hawkeye foe this weekend, the Illinois Fighting Illini.

Illinois began the season ranked No. 25 in the Associated Press poll, but lost that ranking quickly after a 38-14 beating by Michigan in the season opener.

Since that disaster, Illinois has gone on to lose to Oregon, Michigan State and Northwestern by a combined total of 12 points, while defeating Arizona, East Carolina and Indiana.

The close losses are nothing new for Illinois. Last season, none of Illinois' five losses were by more than a touchdown. A mere five more endzone arrivals would have brought the Fighting Illini an undefeated season.

"This year, like in recent years, Illinois has lost some real close games," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "Their 17-14 loss to Northwestern last week shows, however, that they are a very fine football team."

The team is anchored by a stifling defense, an Illini trademark since the days of linebacker Dick Butkus.

"They're defense is awfully talented," quarterback Matt Sherman said. "They're big, strong and quick, and they can even run down plays they miss from behind."

Anchoring this defensive unit is All-American linebacker Simeon Rice. The 6-5, 250-pound senior from Mt. Carmel High School in Chicago was named Big Ten defensive lineman of the year in 1994 after leading the conference in sacks, tackles for losses and caused fumbles.

"Simeon is exceptional," Fry said. "If I'd have had a ballot for the Heisman Trophy voting last year, I would have voted for Simeon. He's the best defensive end in college football."

The Illinois defensive talent doesn't stop with Rice though. His tag team partner, fellow linebacker Kevin Hardy, is fourth in the Big Ten in tackles. And according to coach Lou Tepper, Hardy's the more athletic of the two linebackers.

Fry agrees he is special.

"Hardy has really come on like gangbusters," Fry said. "Last year he was great, but this year he's unbelievable. Him and Simeon will probably be two of the top five draft picks (in the next NFL draft)."

Unfortunately for the Illini, in the day of high-scoring super power offenses, defense doesn't win football games.

"Things have changed in football because very few outstanding defensive teams are winning," Fry said. "All of the big teams have just a good defense, but an explosive, high-scoring offense."

Although it has improved of late, explosive and high-scoring are two things Illinois' offense is not.

The Illini are last in the Big Ten in rushing and total offense and second to last in passing and scoring offense.

The main problem with the offense is a lack of leadership. Quarterback Johnny Johnson appeared to be in control of things until his benching for the Oct. 7 game against Indiana.

Since then, Scott Weaver has stepped in to do an adequate job at quarterback, completing 55 of 97 passes for three touchdowns, but nine interceptions.

"I'm not sure why they made the changes," Fry said. "Johnson is a big playmaker and a great scrambler. Weaver isn't a bad runner, but Johnson brings an added dimension."

Behind the shuffling quarterbacks are running backs Ty Douthard and Robert Holcombe, who have both spent this season doing the improbable.

Douthard was a projected "all-star candidate" by Tepper, but has struggled in his junior campaign. Holcombe, on the other hand, has jumped on the scene, topping the century mark in rushing three times, including a career-high 146 yards against Michigan State.

"Robert has shown great improvement in his last two outings against Michigan State and Northwestern. He has really secured the ball well. We only expect him to keep getting better as the season goes on," Tepper said.

With their backs against the wall in hopes of a bowl appearance, the Illini have put up respectable offensive performances in their last two games, including a 305-yard output against the number four defensive team in the conference — Northwestern.

"They've really improved the last two weeks offensively," Fry said. "They're running the ball better and are more physical. They're going to have a lot of confidence this weekend and they need to win to stay in the bowl picture."

Iowa avoids losing streak

OK, so throwing stuff didn't work. Painting obscenities across your chests despite the cold weather didn't seem to spark the team enough to beat the Nittany Lions. Almost, but not quite.

The ABC cameras didn't even appear to know where the student section was. I guess the trail of marshmallows wasn't a good enough clue.

Obviously, something had to be done. The hog head may have been a little drastic, but hey, it's national television. Drastic times call for drastic measures.

We learned our lessons. We took a few hits. We may be down, but we're not out.

It's time for something new, something revolutionary, on the cutting edge. I call it 'cheering.'

Get this, you actually yell and scream at the top of your lungs, and magically, your team plays better.

Better yet, no one gets hurt, unless you call a broken ear drum an injury. And referees actually learn to appreciate the Iowa fans, although I'm still not sure that's a good thing.

Besides, this weekend's game promises to be exciting enough without throwing object onto the field.

The last two seasons, Illinois has had its way with the Hawkeyes, embarrassing them both at Kinnick Stadium and in Champaign. This year, the Hawkeyes want a little revenge.

But forget about past years, this Hawkeye team wants to win for itself. They want to show that they are nothing like the teams that hit mid-season losing skids the past two seasons. They want to show that they are winners.

For all intents and purposes, the Hawkeyes need to win two of their final four games in order to reach a bowl game.

Hayden Fry said at his press conference this week that for the Hawkeyes to reach a bowl game, "someone is going to have to reach down and touch us."

While I'm not sure exactly how much of that was Hayden using his degree in psychology and how much of it was how he really feels, I do know that this team does not intend to spend its winter vacation in Iowa. The players are looking forward to a bowl game, a New Year's Day one.

Fry said, in the past weeks, many of his starters had to sit out the whole week of practice, limiting what the team could work on.

Tuesday, linebacker Bobby Diaco said it seems like there are more people practicing this week than in the past couple — even after playing Penn State and Ohio State back to back.

If the Hawkeyes can stay healthy the next four weeks, they are going to be a tough team to beat.

Simeon Rice and Kevin Hardy may be the premiere linebacker duo in the country, but expect Iowa to take Rice out of the ball game.

Rice said the one person who stopped him last year was Penn State tight end Kyle Brady.

If Iowa's Scott Slutzker can get out and frustrate Rice, and the rest of the line can give Sherman time to hit his speedy receivers, Iowa may be able to exploit Illinois' sophomore cornerbacks.

But don't expect too much scoring against an Illini defense that features five three-time letter winners.

It's going to take a consistent performance by the Iowa defense to bring home a Hawkeye victory.

The defense was the cornerstone in the first four games of the season, but was simply out-manned by Penn State and Ohio State.

The line is still hurting, but fortunately, Illinois still believes that the best offense is a good defense. Illinois is dead last in the league in total offense.

If the Hawkeyes' wounded defense holds the Illini to under 250 yards total offense, pack your bags, because we're going bowling, for bowl games that is.

Iowa 24, Illinois 10

This week in the Big Ten...

Wildcats dethroned, Buckeyes keep rolling

Around the bend they come, their in the home stretch and it's...the Northwestern Wildcats in the lead?

While everyone in the conference and the country has waited for the Wildcats to stumble, Gary Barnett's crew has played itself into one of the country's top teams.

It's a shame that Ohio State and Northwestern won't meet on the gridiron, but after this week it could be the Buckeyes all by their lonesome.

Northwestern faces its toughest test since Michigan, as the Wildcats host Penn State. The Wolverines are waiting in third place, hoping the season-ending showdown with Ohio State will be for the Roses.

Chris James

It's another action packed weekend as the conference race heads for home.

Penn State at Northwestern

Meow, meow, meow, meow, meow, meow...

Morris the cat would be proud of the conference's marquee matchup of the week as the Nittany Lions and Wildcats square off in Evanston.

Northwestern will have to be on top of its game against a Penn State team that has won three straight. The Nittany Lions have proved that the 0-2 start in the conference was just a fluke.

Penn State has scored 112 points in its winning streak and looks to improve a staggering 83-15-2 overall record in November.

The key to this game is how well Northwestern's defense plays. The Wildcats have given up only 12 touchdowns in 1995, which is the best in the Big Ten. Penn State's Wally Richardson is having a solid year, throwing for 200 yards per game and 13 touchdowns.

The Nittany Lions have a 20-game winning streak on AstroTurf. This is going out on a limb, but...

Penn State, 23-21

Michigan at Michigan State

The highly coveted Governor of Michigan trophy is on the line as these two intrastate rivals go head to head.

This is an important game for Michigan if the Wolverines want to stay in the hunt for the Big Ten title.

The Spartans have defeated their state siblings just once since 1987 and will look to avenge a 20-point loss to the Wolverines last year.

Michigan State will have to get out of the gate early as Michigan has outscored its opponents 69-3 in the first quarter this year.

The Wolverines' Tim Biakabutuka has rushed for more than 100 yards in five games this year and has 512 in the last three.

Michigan State may need a spark from kick returner Derrick Mason, who has 1,732 career kickoff return yards. Mason has three games this year with more than 100 yards. The Spartans are improving each timeout, even though they were blown out last week. But the Wolverines have too many weapons.

Michigan, 27-17

Ohio State at Minnesota

The Buckeyes showed the nation last week what they could do against a top 25 team.

Now just imagine what they are going to do to Minnesota. Chris Darkins will learn what it's like to eat turf as Ohio State keys on the only legitimate weapon the Golden Gophers have.

Bobby Hoying could bring a lawn chair to sit in in the pocket as Minnesota's defense has only seven sacks on the year.

The Buckeyes' Terry Glenn is a true Heisman candidate with more than 1,000 yards receiving and an average of 23.1 yards per catch. He also has 14 touchdowns, good for second in scoring in the Big Ten.

The Golden Gophers' only hope may be Glenn's counterpart Ryan Theiwell. The sophomore wideout has 46 catches to lead the conference. Too bad the truth is the Golden Gophers don't have a chance.

Ohio State, 31-7

Wisconsin at Purdue

Oh yeah, I almost forgot this game. I can't imagine why.

Wisconsin punished Michigan State last week, and Purdue took the week off to mend. Now they battle to in the Hall of Fame Induction game.

Two milestones might fall in this clash of the titans. The Badgers' Darrell Bevell and his older brother, Darrell, could surpass 7,000 career yards passing. This would make Bevell only the fifth quarterback in Big Ten history to pass for that many yards and complete 60 percent of his passes.

Purdue's Mike Alstott could become the Boilermakers' all-time leading rusher if he gains 238 yards Saturday.

Wisconsin, 19-14
