I.C. man charged with attempted murder

An Iowa City man is in critical condition after allegedly being stabbed in the chest by his brother Saturday night.

Raymond Stanley Jackson Jr., 40, 912 Benton Drive, Apt. 32, was found lying in the hall of a second floor apartment at 620 S. Dodge St. around 9:20 p.m. by Iowa City police officers and emergency personnel.

He was transported to the UI Hospitals and Clinics, where he underwent surgery to treat the stab wound.

Keith Jerome Jackson, 38, 620 S. Dodge St., Apt. 6, Raymond's brother, was charged with attempted murder. He is being held in the Johnson County Jail.

The incident is currently under investigation by the Iowa City Police Department.

Not a pig's head in sight...

Despite one stray marshmallow, the field of Kinnick Stadium remained clear of marshmallows, raw chickens and hog's heads. Although some may attribute it to additional security measures, some UI students cite other reasons for the change.

"The crowd wasn't in it from the start."

"It was 10 degrees out, (and) we were getting the crap kicked out of us."

"Students are realizing that we're not a bowl team. Frisking wouldn't have stopped us from getting beer in."

"Yeah, the security did their job. That's why the stadium is still full of empty beer cans."

"Come on, this is a football game and we're in college. We're still going to pull a beer out if we want."

"Nothing's going to stop the rowdiness. It may calm it a little bit, but in the end we'll be right back where we started."

Six people were turned away from Saturday's game for possession of beer; ironically, none of these six were students.

All's quiet on the Iowa front

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily Iowan

Although the field at Kinnick Stadium remained clear of marshmallows, raw chickens and hog's heads, some UI students said it wasn't because of additional security measures.

"The crowd wasn't in it from the start," UI senior Jeff Phillips said. "It was 10 degrees out, we were getting the crap kicked out of us and the fact that it was an early game and people were still getting over hangovers from the night before had a bigger effect on the crowd's behavior."

"Students are realizing that we're not a bowl team. If we were 6-1 going into Saturday's game, instead of 5-2, frisking wouldn't have stopped us from getting beer in."

As the crowd began to dwindle at Saturday's Iowa vs. Illinois football game, empty cans of Budweiser still lingered on the cement floors of Kinnick, a scene which disputed the effectiveness of added security measures imposed to deter the rambunctious behavior in the student section during home football games.

Extra safety measures, such as voluntary pat downs, were implemented Saturday at the

Responding to the rowdiness of the last few Iowa football games, UI officials stepped up security Saturday and frisked fans for alcohol — or other items that could be thrown on Kinnick Stadium's field.

Vigil tonight to honor slain Rabin

Vicki Butner
The Daily Iowan

The assassination of the prime minister of Israel, Yitzhak Rabin, on Saturday night after a peace rally in Tel Aviv was a shot heard 'round the world.

Aliber/Hillel Jewish Student Center, 122 E. Market St., will hold a vigil tonight at 6:30 to reflect on Rabin's life and the grief his death has caused many American Jews.

"We figured this was an appropriate thing to do as a response and outlet for students and the community as a whole to express their feelings about this tragic event," said Ian Dubin, campus liaison for the American Israel Public Affairs Committee and a UI junior.

This was the first time a political assassination of an Israeli by an Israeli has happened, said UI professor of religion Jay Holstein.

"Israel came to be in 1948, three years after the death of Hitler," Holstein said. "Hitler murdered six million Jews. Israel has always been a refuge or haven to escape persecution for Jews. Therefore, there is a terrible irony when, in Israel, a Jew is murdered by another Jew."

Rabin's assassination was a ter-

After making his desire to have sex reassignment surgery public in local newspapers, UI Professor Donald McCloskey was taken involuntarily from his home Thursday and committed for psychiatric evaluation at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

McCloskey refused to comment on the situation and it is still unknown who requested the evaluation.

McCloskey, a UI economics and history professor, said Wednesday he is taking a leave of absence from the UI to have sex reassignment surgery. On Thursday, during an interview with the Cedar Rapids Gazette, McCloskey was taken from his

Deceased immortalized in flashy obits ... for a price

Kristen Moulton
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — There are hundreds of ways to die. And apparently, there are even more ways to tell the world about it.

"Late Saturday evening a new star began burning brightly in the skies over Kansas and Missouri," began one recent obituary in The Kansas City Star.

"AIDS, that's what did him in," related another in The Salt Lake Tribune and in The Deseret News last month.

Such obituaries, florid or poetic, moving or witty, are appearing in a growing number of U.S. newspapers — but not for free. More and more, survivors are paying to have their loved ones immortalized on the obit page.

In these papers, only the famous or infamous are accorded free, extensive obituaries.

While economics are fueling the trend — more people are dying at a time of soaring newsprint costs — many newspapers which now charge survivors to place obituaries have realized a bonus: The writing is more interesting than the facts-only obits penned by morticians and journalists.

Some examples from Utah newspapers:

"He had his own ideas and some worked."

"He paid his bills on time, never cheated a soul."

"He devoted his retirement years to amassing a fortune of four dollars and thirteen cents."

A woman who wrote her own obituary in the Cache Citizen in Logan, Utah, said, "My greatest accomplishment was in making a decent and honorable man out of my husband."

These days, as Michael Gordon, an editor at The Charlotte Observer of Charlotte, N.C., said, "If you want to pay the money, you can say just about anything. Your loved ones can be back flying with the angels."

Since mid-July, the Observer has been charging for all but seven lines of each obituary. The average obit runs $140.

Publisher Rolfe Neill said newsprint has become "white gold," rising 40 percent in price this year and an expected 20 percent next year.

The cost of running a page of obits each day is more than $350,000 a year, not including news clerks' salaries.

Readers, Gordon said, are not happy.

"They're saying, 'My mom and dad have been subscribers all their lives and now you're going to make me pay money to get their obit in the paper?'" he said. "It was treading on sacred ground."

That reaction prompted the paper to return to the previous unpaid obit policy in two small-circulation zoned editions, including The York Observer, which Gordon edits.

It was just that tug-of-war between grieving families and the newspaper's desire to treat all equitably that prompted The Salt Lake Tribune and Deseret News to

"The one time you get mentioned is when you die, and how did you get that? You had to pay for it. There's something too bad about that."

John Ferre, University of Louisville communications professor turn the writing over to survivors 19 years ago, said Tribune Publisher Dominic Welch. He is president of the company that handles advertising for both newspapers.

"It was a fun decision. Economics were a minimal part of it," Welch said. "People read the obits now more than ever."

Mark Shenefelt, assistant managing editor at the Standard-Examiner in nearby Ogden, said the obituaries are more interesting but less factual than they were before the paper turned them into ads five or six years ago. For instance, families often do not mention the cause of death.

Some editors say they will resist the change to paid notices.

"It seems to me one of the duties of a newspaper is to write about the rites and rituals of its communities," said Joe Distelheim, editor of the Huntsville Times in Huntsville, Ala.

John Ferre, a University of Louisville communications professor, bemoans the formula obits that became standard in daily papers by the end of World War II and are still common in many papers.

"All they say was that you or I existed. They don't say anything about what made us good, what made us bad," Ferre said.

While the paid obituaries have more personality, Ferre said, it's a shame newspapers can't run them for free.

"The one time you get mentioned is when you die, and how did you get that? You had to pay for it. There's something too bad about that."

But there is something good about homemade obituaries like the one in which a woman said goodbye to her husband: "I love you dearly, you old poop." Or a family's farewell to their father: "We hope you find Heaven easier than you could find the airport."

Or one man's sign off: "Sayonara, aloha, hasta la vista."

Copperfield, Schiffer keep magic in relationship by frequent visits

NEW YORK (AP) — David Copperfield said being a magician and illusionist isn't enough to maintain his relationship with fiancée Claudia Schiffer — he has to be a juggler, too.

"We juggle careers by having three schedules: I have my schedule, she's got her schedule, we've got our schedule," he said in an interview published in Sunday's Daily News. "We have a 'two-week' rule. We're never away from each other for more than two weeks. Actually, my most fascinating trick is paying the phone bill."

So far, there's still no wedding date.

"We're just taking our time with it and enjoying our engagement," he said. "People have such an unbelievable interest in that aspect, but things are going great. We're enjoying ourselves. She's a great girl."

Barbieri sells L.A. condo, may relocate to Florida abode

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's former girlfriend Paula Barbieri reportedly has sold her Los Angeles condominium.

The model's 1,400-square-foot condo on Wilshire Boulevard sold for close to the $220,000 asking price, the Los Angeles Times said Sunday, citing unidentified sources.

Associated Press

Michael Jackson's Germany stint greeted with massive praise

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Several hundred young Germans shouted "Michael! Michael!" after Michael Jackson performed live on a popular television show.

Dressed in black, Jackson swiveled and danced his way across the stage Saturday as he sang the songs "Dangerous" and "Earth Gone."

He appeared on the show "Wetten, dass ...?" ("Want to Bet ...?").

The host of the show, Thomas Gottschalk, did a short interview with Jackson which avoided any hint of controversy. Among the zingers Jackson faced was a question about how he liked Germany.

"I love it," Jackson said.

The unit, which Barbieri owned for four years, was put on the market in April. At the time, her attorney said Barbieri, 26, intended to make her Florida home her primary residence.

Another figure from the Simpson case also has taken up a new residence.

Defense attorney Robert Shapiro and wife, Linell, have leased a Beverly Hills house owned by actress Doris Day while their home has earthquake damage repaired, unidentified sources told the newspaper. The Shapiros are paying just under the $10,000-a-month asking price.

Journalist Kuralt favors lifestyle over healthy habits

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Good reporting is worth bad health, and smoking is too enjoyable to give up, retired CBS journalist Charles Kuralt said after having heart bypass surgery.

"They said stop smoking, but I don't know if I'm going to stop," Kuralt, 61, said in the Nov. 11 issue of TV Guide.

"Smoking brings great pleasure to me. I am going to be more attentive to my health, but I don't want to overdo it," he said.

Kuralt, who's focusing on writing books about his love of American history and travel, was correspondent for the television program "On The Road" and host of "Sunday Morning."

Actress Thompson was reluctant to make TV switch

NEW YORK (AP) — After working more than a decade in films, Lea Thompson was hesitant about jumping into a sitcom.

"I don't have a stand-up routine or a vast experience in joke-telling," she said in the latest Entertainment Weekly.

"I was like, 'I don't know if I can tell a joke, so I'd better wear a short skirt.'"

Thompson's decision to join NBC's "Caroline in the City" turned out to be one of her better career moves — unlike the flops she appeared in after playing Michael J. Fox's mother in the 1985 hit "Back to the Future."

"I guess I didn't make great choices after 'Back to the Future,'" she said. "But who's to know? Everybody wanted to do 'Howard the Duck.'"

Dole's C.R. speech reflects more conservative stance

Mark Strahan
The Daily Iowan

Senate Majority Leader and Republican presidential hopeful Bob Dole dropped by Cedar Rapids this weekend to talk a little about education and immigration, and a lot about the conservative leadership he would provide as president.

Dole spoke at the Isaac Newton Christian Academy in Cedar Rapids Saturday morning to a crowd of around 200.

Taking a noticeably more conservative posture than he had earlier in his campaign, Dole sounded very much like Republican rival Pat Buchanan when discussing immigration issues.

While stopping short of Buchanan's plan of installing a security fence along the Mexican border, Dole said he sees room for improvement upon the status quo.

"We've got to start controlling our borders," he said. "I think there are areas, even in legal immigration, where we'll have to slow down. Somewhere we've got to draw the line. We can't take care of everybody in the world."

Dole also proposed a voucher system for parents who want to send their children to private schools. Under the system, parents would get a voucher which they could exchange for tuition at the school of their choice.

"If the rich, the Kennedys and others can pick private schools, the school of their choice, why is it denied to middle-class and low-income Americans?" Dole asked.

Dole said the federal government would play some role in his voucher system, but has yet to work out all the details, including the role of federal and state governments in its administration.

"Our schools are not lacking in wealth, they're lacking in wisdom," he said.

Dole also said he supports a current congressional bill ending the availability of late-term abortions, to which the audience responded with an ovation. Dole said this is a bill that both pro-life and pro-choice activists can support.

In a press conference after his speech, Dole had some advice for possible presidential candidate Colin Powell: It would be a mistake to skip the Iowa caucuses.

"I don't think (Powell) can bypass Iowa," he said.

Pundits have suggested that Powell, were he to declare his candidacy in an already crowded Republican field, forego the Iowa caucuses for the New Hampshire primaries. At the present time, Dole is expected to win the Iowa caucus as he did in 1988.

Dole, the early front-runner for the Republican nomination, said he is wary of polls, especially the surprising Iowa straw poll, where Dole tied with Phil Gramm of Texas.

"We've made a few changes (since the straw poll)," he said. "Polls always make you feel good or bad," depending on how you place.

Dole said he is not taking Iowa for granted, though his job gives him little time to campaign outside of the Beltway.

"I have a full-time job," he said. "We're trying to balance the budget."

"Somewhere we've got to draw the line. We can't take care of everybody in the world."

Senate Majority Leader and Republican presidential hopeful Bob Dole

Dole's entourage gave away videocassettes — "Bob Dole: An American Hero" — which the crowd saw before Dole took the stage. The tape highlighted Dole as a star athlete in his hometown of Russell, Kan., and his now-famous World War II injury — all testimonials to Dole's character.

"It really all comes down to values," Dole said in the video.

Dole used the event to market his conservative credentials. The video showcased former President Reagan praising Dole for his leadership in the Senate during the 1980s.

Jobs created with public assistance must be good paying jobs, environmentally friendly, and good neighbors. Otherwise these employees may need other forms of public assistance such as long term housing, daycare, food stamps and health care.

Water Plant

I share your concern about rising water and sewer bills. That is why I fought to see the following provisions enacted:

- 20% downpayment instead of borrowing every dollar, saving ratepayers $24 million.
- Ensuring that new growth will pay its fair share of the new plant.
- Reducing the minimum charge.
- Implementing a city sponsored water conservation program.

Affordable Housing

No single strategy will resolve all our affordable housing responsibilities. We need to create public/private partnerships, review current regulations, create incentives for developers and support new neighborhoods with mixed styles of housing.

'96 hopeful criticizes media

Mike Glover
Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander used a weekend campaign swing to flail at a rival's "ostrich politics" and declare an era of media-created candidates is ending.

"The media has had a good year," Alexander said. "They've invented all sorts of potential candidates. It's time to start thinking about the people who might actually be running for president."

For weeks the Republican presidential race has been dominated by speculation on whether Colin Powell will run, and it has been tough for others in the field to get attention.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., also has grabbed attention by refusing to rule out a run, while conceding it's unlikely.

Both Powell and Gingrich are set to announce their intentions this month.

With Iowa's leadoff caucuses just three months away, Alexander said the time for speculation is nearly over as voters begin to drive the election campaign.

"For most of the year, Washington has been telling America who the next president ought to be," Alexander said during a stop in Cedar Rapids. "Now it's Iowa's turn to say who it ought to be."

Alexander has stumped for months in the state, and recruited an impressive group of Republican activists to his campaign, but he has generally languished in the polls.

The Fifth Annual University of Iowa ADA Public Forum

Sponsored by The UI Council on Disability Awareness & The UI Office of Affirmative Action

Thursday, November 9, 1995

4:00 -- 5:30 pm: forum

5:30 -- 6:00 pm: reception

Triangle Ballroom, Iowa Memorial Union

UI students, staff, faculty, and community members are invited to a forum & reception to celebrate the 5th anniversary of the passage of ADA (the Americans with Disabilities Act). This annual forum is part of an ongoing effort to create an accessible, hospitable campus for people with disabilities.

The forum is a significant opportunity to share in assessing how well the University of Iowa is meeting the goals of the ADA, and to identify areas where improvement is still needed.

Individuals with disabilities are encouraged to attend. If you need an accommodation to participate, or if you wish a specific disability-related issue or problem addressed at the forum, leave a voice-mail message at 335-7000 by noon November 8.

Typhoon Angelo away over 500 Philippines

CALAUAC, Philippines — Inside the village, an aged woman wept as she squatted before a whitewashed coffin.

"These are my children," Marina Reyes said, her voice choked with grief. She had lost her 10-year-old daughter, 4-year-old son, and a month-old baby. A body was missing.

The bodies were fished out of Calauac Bay on Saturday and Sunday. Winds of Typhoon Angelo lashed the northern Philippines, killing at least 500 people.

Two hundred bodies were reported missing in the region's strongest storm with 12-foot-high waves. About 286 people remained in evacuation centers. Bicol, the region on the eastern leg of Luzon, the main island, where the typhoon struck, said Fortuna, executive director of the Disaster Coordination Center.

The winds tore down many concrete and steel structures and thatched huts. A cluster of houses was destroyed. Schools were their galvanizing walls peeled open.

About 100 of the bodies were fished out of the fishing town of Calauac, a province town of 100 miles southeast.

Clinton: 'Peace matters to Am'

WASHINGTON — President Clinton used his weekly radio address to make his case for U.S. troops to enforce a peace agreement between the United States and the Bosnian Serbs.

"If peace is achieved, it must help secure NATO's leader, and part," Clinton wrote in his essay in this week's issue.

The leaders of Bosnia and Serbia arrived in Ohio, last week to discuss peace. Clinton is the first president to send ground troops to enforce a solid peace agreement.

"Peace in Bosnia is a matter of life and death," Clinton wrote. "It is a stake in the future of the world, spreading and building peace."

Clinton has said he will commit up to 25,000 troops. But congressional leaders have expressed concern that the mission might become tangled in a larger war if it doesn't hold.

Space shuttle returns home

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The space shuttle Columbia and its external tank and solid rocket boosters returned to Earth on Sunday, full of experiments and the second-longest shuttle history.

Commander Kevin B. Smith guided Columbia to a landing at the Kennedy Space Center, just after sunrise.

Columbia was launched 20 days after a record because of mechanical problems. The shuttle's length on the mission last March was 16 days.

Columbia crossed the United States on its way to the Rockwell building just north of the Texas coast and over the Texas coast into the Gulf of Mexico. Total distance: 6.6 million miles.

Columbia brought 1,500 pounds of protein and five million dollars worth of potatoes, one of which was to be frozen or doused in preservatives for later use.

Typhoon Angela washes away over 500 lives in Philippines

CALAUAG, Philippines (AP) — Inside the village hall, a middle-aged woman wept openly as she squatted before a row of four whitewashed coffins.

"These are my children. They're gone," Marina Regencia said Sunday between sobs, pointing to the coffins of her 10- and 8-year-old daughters, 4-year-old son and month-old boy. A fifth child still was missing.

The bodies were among 37 fished out of Calauag Bay on Friday and Saturday, after the 140 mph winds of Typhoon Angela lashed the northern Philippines, killing at least 500 people.

Two hundred others were reported missing after the country's strongest storm in 11 years hit with 12-foot-high waves and flash floods. About 286,000 people remained in evacuation camps in Bicol, the region on the southeastern leg of Luzon, the Philippines' main island, where Angela stormed ashore, said Fortunato de Joras, executive director of the National Disaster Coordinating Council.

The winds tore off the roofs of many concrete and wooden houses and thatched huts. In one village, a cluster of houses was flattened. Schools were destroyed, their galvanized iron roofs and walls peeled open and crumpled.

About 100 of the dead were from the fishing and coconut farming town of Calauag, a Quezon province town of 60,000 about 100 miles southeast of Manila.

Clinton: 'Peace in Bosnia matters to America'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton used a magazine essay to make his case for sending U.S. troops to enforce a possible peace agreement in Bosnia, saying the United States has an "urgent stake" in ending the war.

"If peace is achieved, NATO must help secure it — and as NATO's leader, America must take part," Clinton wrote in a guest essay in this week's Newsweek.

The leaders of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia arrived in Dayton, Ohio, last week to begin negotiations. Clinton is trying to build congressional support for his plans to send ground troops to Bosnia if "a solid peace agreement" is reached.

"Peace in Bosnia matters to America — to our values and interests," Clinton wrote. "We have an urgent stake in stopping the slaughter, preventing the war from spreading and building a Europe at peace."

Clinton has said he might commit up to 25,000 U.S. troops.

But congressional Republicans have expressed worries the troops might become targets or be drawn into a larger war if the peace doesn't hold.

Space shuttle Columbia returns home

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia and seven astronauts returned to Earth with a laboratory full of experiments on Sunday after the second-longest flight in space shuttle history.

Commander Kenneth Bowersox guided Columbia to a 6:45 a.m. landing at the Kennedy Space Center, just after sunrise.

Columbia was launched on Oct. 20 after a record-tying six scrubs because of mechanical and weather problems. The 16-day voyage ranks in length only behind Endeavour's 16½-day astronomy mission last March.

Columbia crossed the entire United States on its way home: passing just north of San Francisco and over the Rocky Mountains, down into the Texas panhandle, Louisiana and the southern tips of Mississippi and Alabama, and on into Florida. Total trip mileage — 6.6 million miles.

Columbia brought back about 1,500 protein and semiconductor crystal and five marble-sized potatoes, all grown in weightlessness. The potatoes, once unloaded, will be frozen or doused with chemical preservatives for later analysis.

Congress' secret dug-out revealed

Rochelle Olson
Associated Press

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — A once top-secret bunker built to house Congress in the event of a nuclear war sits 64 feet beneath a posh Allegheny Mountains resort. But the spartan refuge has little in common with its upstairs neighbor.

The two-story bunker is mostly a maze of narrow halls connecting small, stark rooms and offices, with each floor about the size of a football field. It rests under a west wing of The Greenbrier, although guests looking west out the lobby windows see only a grassy hillside.

"They hid the facility in plain sight of everyone," Greenbrier President Ted Kleisner said Sunday.

In fact, hotel auditoriums and a convention room under the west wing were built as part of the bunker and would have provided office space for congressional officials in a time of war.

Congress and the Defense Department decided to close the bunker after its existence was reported by The Washington Post in 1992. It was decommissioned July 31 when the contract with Greenbrier's parent company, CSX Corp. of Jacksonville, Fla., expired. CSX was given ownership of the bunker.

Outsiders got their first peek at the bunker Friday through NBC's "Dateline" news show, which took its cameras on an exclusive tour.

On Sunday, the AP was the first print news service given access to the site.

State and federal lawmakers are scheduled to tour the bunker along with other reporters today. Hotel employees will be given tours this week, and eventually the bunker will be opened for limited public tours.

The Greenbrier, about 190 miles southwest of Washington, D.C., has long attracted wealthy and renowned guests, including presidents and diplomats. Congressional Democrats formerly held their winter caucuses here, and during World War II the military used The Greenbrier to intern Japanese diplomats.

The concrete-and-steel bunker was built at the behest of President Eisenhower in 1958 for $14 million to give Congress a place to meet in case of war. The executive and legislative branches have other secret meeting places.

Bunker inhabitants would not eat and sleep in the manner of The Greenbrier, where rooms cost between $340 and $2,600 a night and world-class chefs prepare mouth-watering meals.

Those being sheltered would have entered the bunker through an inconspicuous door in a hallway leading into Exhibit Hall.

The bunker would not have survived a direct nuclear strike but would have protected inhabitants from radioactive fallout, Kleisner said.

INTERESTED IN THE ENVIRONMENT?

Iowa has a 2-year Master's program offering specialization in the analysis of environmental problems and the evaluation of policies relating to issues such as groundwater protection, toxic waste disposal, energy conservation planning and air quality. Students from all fields are encouraged to apply. B.S. or B.A. in any major is acceptable. Find out more at Visitors' Day.

Open House begins at 12 Noon.

What's wrong with students' judgment?

Incredibly poor student judgment has been a common theme in several recent local stories. An inability to recognize the difference between right and wrong, as well as a shameless irresponsibility, are pervasive.

After an alarmingly short mourning period, the national Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity has lifted the charter suspension on the local chapter, where associate member Matthew Garofalo died of an alcohol-related complication on Sept. 8.

The national organization has handed down a laundry list of conditions associated with the fraternity's reactivation, which could come as early as next year if the UI approves.

University officials would do well to insist that the fraternity's no alcohol policy remain in effect forever, and consider applying the requirement to all other recognized fraternities. UI fraternities are becoming more and more dangerous, and the possible positive effects of removing alcohol from the mix would far outweigh the proven negative consequences of allowing it to remain.

The UI has yet to make a final judgment on Lambda Chi Alpha, but an amazing example of incredibly poor judgment is the unfolding case of UI juniors Robert Kooima and Kevin Michael Joyce Jr.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

A wanton disregard for the rules, laws and feelings of others is spreading across the UI campus, the community and the country.

Kooima has been charged with providing false reports to law enforcement officials when Joyce faked his suicide. Kooima apparently thought he was being true to his friend and roommate when he knowingly lied to the UI Department of Public Safety and then stood with Joyce's parents as officials dragged the river for the body when he knew it wasn't there.

Kooima faces a possible fine or 30 days in jail. He should be required to reimburse area law enforcement officials for the cost of the recovery effort he could have stopped at any time.

UI senior Joseph Sample also was in the news Friday, and he too demonstrated a corrupted sense of right and wrong. Last year, Sample ran across the field in a gorilla suit during a football game. Then, in the same costume, he ran onto the field during a basketball game. The university evidently ignored the first incident, but inflicted sanctions after the second run.

Sample faces several charges from the UI, as well as a year-long suspension from attending sports activities.

Although tens of thousands of people witnessed his breaking of the rules, Sample has taken the UI to court to overturn the suspension. Sample's attorney, Richard Pundt, was quoted in a letter last week as saying the lack of notice after the first incident violates Sample's "due process rights due to retroactive punishment."

Evidently both Sample and Pundt never learned that not getting caught while doing something wrong doesn't make the behavior acceptable.

Driving down the highway in reverse may not be specifically illegal, but it's still wrong no matter how many times you do it before you're caught.

The subjects of many of Friday's front page stories in the DI demonstrate through actions or words that few have ever learned the simple difference between right and wrong.

A wanton disregard for the rules, laws and feelings of others is spreading across the UI campus, the community and the country.

The situations will only get better when more people start acting responsibly and take more responsibility for their actions.

They should start asking themselves "what is the right thing to do," rather than "what should I do." Only when they recognize the correct answer, will things begin to change for the better.

We all share blame for women's images

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Stephanie Wilbur's editorial "Ideal woman continues to be unrealistic," because I, too, believe "people who produce images of the mass media need to learn." However, placing all the blame on the media is reminiscent of the undefined "they" we are all so fond of using.

Wilbur asserted "a woman's hipness shouldn't come from the circumference of her hips (and that) it shouldn't come from her body at all." However, Wilbur fails to help us recognize how these images have come to dominate our lives.

We should begin with a culture that perpetuates the idea that men are more visual and should be allowed to judge women by their bodies. We could explore the tragedy of women who feel they need to starve and stuff themselves.

Placing the blame on "the people who produce images" indicates a state of control by an Orwellian-like power. We are all to be condemned, because we are the purchasers of said images.

At some point responsibility has to be taken for "the (glorification of) an ideal that is unreachable for most women." Therefore, I would like to take this opportunity to recant every statement I ever made that placed my intelligence as second rate next to the body that contains it.

TWO EXPERTS RESPOND TO CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST'S "HATRED," "BIGOTRY" AND "EXCLUSION"...

Love in the '90s: Internet and singles ads

By the year 2000, half of our nation's population will be single — but this phenomenon may not be all good.

Enter the computer — the single person's new best friend. It knows how to find that significant other. Couples all over are hooking up. No longer the reject path to dating, on-line dating is the new way to reach out and find someone.

People have always been searching for a connection, but the avenues they are now driving down have definitely been rerouted. Connection once meant communicating face to face, watching expressions and anticipating reactions. It meant talking, listening to verbal inflections and understanding moods. It was about the ideals, thoughts and opinions two people had in common, not whether or not both people smoke or if they like the same television shows.

Today, relationships don't have the same priority in people's lives. For many college students, marriage is just not cool anymore. And sadly enough, that mind frame is revolutionizing the way we relate to one another. The phrase "sex in the '90s" has been thrown around repeatedly. There is an underlying meaning to these words — connection in the '90s.

Computer dating cannot replace personal contact.

It's amazing how many people are afraid they simply won't find "that special someone." For most people, being alone is a genuine fear. So with America's lust for technology, humanity and real relationships are getting lost in the computer chips. Jobs certainly do not fill the emotional void in people's lives, but the road to the modern dream of a successful career is easier to travel than the winding road of love. So people continue to search for a significant other in the very thing that has fundamentally separated them — technology.

There's an invisible wall sequestering Americans. People would rather relocate for a job than for a partner. Work, instead of people, takes priority. Money means more than marriage. People find that they are just unwilling to take chances on something that might not work. If you put enough into a job, you'll get somewhere. Numerous people are scared that the same can't be said about relationships.

But the void is there. And what is the compromise? Enter matchmaking, the new booming business in America. Dating services and ads are being utilized. Romance-inducing services can make $10 for a personal ad or thousands of dollars for personalized matchmaking.

While it's certainly understandable why people utilize ads and on-line services, it's sad that now even personal lives, not just financial means, are dependent upon technology. Whereas our mechanized revolution was meant to bring people around the globe closer together, it has done the complete opposite with human beings in the immediate vicinity of one another. Relationships, like everything else, have become wrapped up in a technological revolution.

Choose moderation — just ask KISS

I wonder if anyone else caught KISS unplugged on Halloween? If you didn't, you really didn't miss much. They still only know how to play three chords, which — in case you're scoring at home — is two more than AC/DC and four more than Twisted Sister. Gene Simmons stuck out his tongue a few times, Paul Stanley wore leather pants which were roughly 23 sizes too small, and the band labored through a pretty standard set with the acoustic twist.

The thing I noticed most, though, was how awful these guys looked. They should be poster children for too much sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll.

The two original members, Ace Freely and Peter Criss, looked absolutely horrible. Criss looked like a skeleton smeared in cover-up, wearing a pair of shades and a blond wig. And Freely? Well, let's just say good old Ace made Keith Richards look like Brad Pitt. I think Freely's brain

Somebody should have clued those guys in on a little secret — moderation is the key to life. Too much or too little of anything is bad for you.

shriveled up and rolled out of his ear somewhere around 1982 and he's been operating on autopilot ever since. When they came out and did their rock 'n' roll national anthem, "Rock and Roll All Night," I swear they changed the lyrics of the chorus to "I take Geritol at night, and I nap in the day."

Somebody should have clued those guys in on a little secret — moderation is the key to life. Too much or too little of anything is bad for you.

Take marijuana, for example. Now, all things considered, partaking in a little herb every now and then is not the worst thing in the world. We've been conditioned since grade school to "just say no," but when you look at it, pot might be the least harmful drug. People don't get violent when they're stoned. There is no such thing as smoking one too many bowls and developing grass muscles. You never hear the report of the guy who had a six-joint lunch and then wrapped his car around a telephone pole. You might hear that he had a six-joint lunch, sat on the couch and ate four bags of Tostitos, but who does he really bother?

On the other hand, though, there are some people out there who have taken pot smoking to another level. I believe they are lobbying for bong hits to become a trial event in the '96 Olympic Games. If you can clear a three footer, you get the Bronze. If you clear a four footer, you land yourself the Silver. And, if you can clear anything over five feet, you automatically get the Gold medal and an aneurysm.

The whole moderation theory can work for just about anything. I mean, apparently Sting can have sex for over eight hours at a time. That sounds cool and all, but don't you think that eight hours is a little excessive? Don't you think anything over four or five hours kind of takes the romance out of it?

If you eat more than one rice cake each month, you're risking a taste buds strike. Listening to Lisa Lobe more than twice a week can cause you to become clinically insane, making you a very real danger to yourself and society at large. Too much exercise and you turn out like that freak-show with the ponytail who's always yelling at everybody. Too little exercise and you could end up looking like J.J. from

Too much exercise and you turn out like that freak-show with the ponytail who's always yelling at everybody. Too little exercise and you could end up looking like J.J. from "Good Times."

"Good Times." If you study too much you could end up being some burnt-out pointdexter. If you don't study enough you could end up like Foo, the village idiot from my home town (all the guy does is roam the streets looking for a kind-hearted soul, kind of like the monster in Mary Shelly's "Frankenstein") and that's not a good situation either.

But worst of all, if you watch too much television you could wind up with your own column in your college newspaper. Oh the horror, man, the horror.

JERUSALEM Thousands of Israelis, many bearing candles, gathered in the city of Tel Aviv on Sunday, in a fit of grief, to mark the anniversary of the assassination of a man of peace.

The parade of flowers on stone flag-draped coffin of a slain leader saluted the former staff who became a bearer for peace.

"I feel that half died," high school senior said as he and friends huddled at a Jewish settlement hill overlooking Jerusalem.

A Jewish settler, Yaakov Gonen, said he felt that half died.

An Israeli soldier lights a candle on a makeshift memorial setup in front of an honor guard standing around the coffin containing the remains of slain Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin outside the Israeli parliament, or Knesset, in Jerusalem early Sunday.

Israelis mourn slain leader

Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Hundreds of thousands of Israelis, many weeping, many bearing flowers, silently filed past the simple wooden coffin of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Sunday, in a final salute to the assassinated soldier, statesman and man of peace.

The parade of mourners came from all over the shocked and saddened country to a courtyard in front of the Knesset, the Israeli parliament. The procession was expected to continue all night until the start of a state funeral today attended by dozens of world leaders, including President Clinton.

Even as Israelis mourned, they tried to grasp the enormity of the upheaval thrust upon their country when a Jewish opponent of Rabin's peacemaking gunned him down.

Under a bright, warm Jerusalem sun, many gently placed bouquets of flowers on stone tiles near the flag-draped coffin in which the 73-year-old slain leader lay. Others saluted the former army chief of staff who became Israel's standard-bearer for peace.

"I feel that half the country has died," high school student Pini Cohen said as he and a group of friends huddled and lighted candles in parliament's courtyard on a hill overlooking Jerusalem.

A Jewish settler from New York, Yaakov Geneck, quietly sat in a corner, with a sign announcing he was on a hunger strike to protest growing violence.

Geneck said he opposed Rabin's peace policies, but could not condone the behavior of Rabin's opponents.

"I am here to say that the hatred of so many people led to this. I have encountered this hatred and I did not speak out," said Geneck, who moved to Israel two years ago.

Rabin's assassination at a peace rally in Tel Aviv on Saturday night stunned a nation that, despite increasingly bitter divisions over peacemaking with the Arabs, had somehow denied such violence could happen to them.

The suspect, Yigal Amir, a 27-year-old law student with links to the Jewish extremist fringe, told interrogators he wanted to stop Rabin's peace policies. He reportedly said his actions were based on rabbinical rulings which permit Jews to kill people who gave away parts of the biblical Land of Israel.

Israel radio reported Amir's brother, Hagai, was one of an unspecified number of extremists rounded up for questioning. "There were many writings on the wall, but still we felt this could not happen to us," said Chaim Ramon, chief of the powerful Histadrut Trade Union Federation.

Rabin's death raised immediate questions about the future of Middle East peacemaking, especially the Israel-PLO autonomy agreement on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from most West Bank towns and villages by the end of the year.

Some delays were possible as Rabin's successor, Shimon Peres, puts together a caretaker government.

Tens of thousands stood silently Sunday at the site of the assassination.

A sea of memorial candles, bouquets, handwritten prayers and Rabin photographs covered the spot where the prime minister was shot. A sign in Hebrew read, "Why?"

Rabin's coffin, draped with the blue-and-white flag bearing the Star of David, was placed in an army truck Sunday morning and, accompanied by six army generals and two police chiefs, driven slowly from Tel Aviv up to Jerusalem through the rocky, eternal hills.

Israeli security underestimated right wing

Nicolas Tatro
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — How could it happen?

No country puts more emphasis on security than Israel. The Shin Bet secret service built an enviable reputation for protecting its leaders and preventing terrorist attacks.

Security broke down, however, when bodyguards apparently mistook a young law student for a VIP driver and let him get close enough to shoot Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin with a 9mm Beretta. Questions are also being asked about why Rabin was not wearing a bulletproof vest.

It's not as if there weren't ample warning that an attack might come from Israel's religious right wing. The suspect had links to right-wing extremists.

In recent weeks, angry debate over the future of the West Bank spilled into the streets with right-wingers heckling Rabin at public appearances, calling him a "murderer," "Nazi" and "traitor."

His Cabinet ministers were also under threat, and extra bodyguards and armored cars were deployed. Housing Minister Binyamin Eliezer was trapped in an angry crowd, Education Minister Shulamit Aloni was punched in the stomach and Environment Minister Yossi Sarid's car was forced off a highway.

Yossi Melman, an author and expert on intelligence, said security was "a total failure because the handwriting has been on the wall for the past month."

One reason was that few Israelis really believed that an Israeli would kill an Israeli.

Gideon Ezra, former deputy head of the Shin Bet, said he thought when Rabin was in the Arab West Bank town of Nablus, his bodyguards were "more psychologically alert" than they were in Tel Aviv.

"I also think we all did not believe that such a thing could happen," said Ezra.

The security instead focused on

Palestinian militants, especially Islamic extremists who had threatened to get even for Rabin's reported decision to order the recent execution of the Islamic Jihad leader Fathi Shakaki in Malta.

An official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Rabin refused to wear a bulletproof vest. Melman said the shots might not have been fatal if he had.

Israeli experts said the 27-year-old law student who confessed to the assassination, Yigal Amir, fit almost exactly the Shin Bet's profile for an attacker — a fringe activist with no record of violent behavior.

According to fellow students at Bar-Ilan University, Amir organized weekend trips to the militant Jewish settlement in the West Bank city of Hebron and was seen at several recent right-wing protests.

Among the books found in his room was "Day of the Jackal," a novel about the attempted assassination of French President Charles de Gaulle.

Women's basketball team plays at home tonight

The path to redemption for head coach Angie Lee's nationally ranked Iowa Hawkeyes begins tonight at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Lee's young team will line up against Athletes in Action in the beginning of its quest to make up for last season's disappointment.
Lee replaced Iowa's all-time winningest coach C. Vivian Stringer last spring after a disappointing 11-17 finish.

The uncharacteristic Iowa record was the first sub .500 record in the last 13 seasons, and the only one in the Stringer era.

Many eyes will be on the performance of last seasons highly touted freshman class, led by Big Ten Conference freshman of the year Tiffany Gooden. Gooden finished second for the Hawkeyes in scoring last season with 12.5 points per game.

Iowa is also looking forward to the return of senior center Simone Edwards, who red-shirted last season with a knee injury.

"If you look at them from top to bottom, they have great potential," Lee said. "Where that will take them is up to them and what they learned last year and what they're willing to put on the line
this year."

Sherman, Hawkeyes hit bottom in defeat

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman stood at mid-field, motionless. He looked downfield, and then slowly began his walk to the sideline.

The No. 2 rated passer in the Big Ten had just thrown his fifth interception of the game, the fourth in his last six attempts.

Sherman's fourth interception, with 5:36 to go, erased all hope of an Iowa victory, and this one, with 1:37 to go, was the icing on the cake.

"Matt had a tough day," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "It was the first time since he's been a starter that he really had a tough time."

Sherman finished with 223 yards passing, completing 22-of-42 passes for one touchdown and five interceptions.

Illinois defeated Iowa, 26-7, Saturday at Kinnick Stadium, dropping the Hawkeyes to 5-3 in the season, 2-3 in the Big Ten. Illinois moved its record to 4-4, 2-3 in the conference.

"Everyone was juiced up, ready to go, and mistakes just hurt us," offensive lineman Matt Purdy said.

As the Hawkeyes mourned, the Fighting Illini celebrated on the other side of Kinnick Stadium.

Illinois coach Lou Tepper was concerned coming into the game because of the chaos Hayden Fry

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

has caused him through the years.
"Fry causes me more turmoil than any coach I've faced. He's probably cost me three years of my life," Tepper said.

Tepper was mainly concerned
because of the intangibles involved, but was proud of how his team reacted.

"I was concerned coming into the game more because of the road problems," Tepper said. "When the game was moved up to 11:34 and we were staying in Cedar Rapids, that concerned us."

"You travel here in the morning.
You felt the team might fall asleep on the bus ride over and you've got to come to the wonderful pink locker rooms. There are just so many distractions and so many things, that I thought we might lose some of the momentum."

Sedrick Shaw, who came into the game needing 83 yards to become Iowa's all-time leading rusher, finished with 38 yards on 23 carries.
He also failed to reach the end zone for the first time in 10 games.

"We just didn't give him a chance to get across the line of scrim-

Iowa has little time to salvage season

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Three weeks ago the Hawkeyes were undefeated and riding high.
The fact that they still needed two more wins to qualify for a bowl game was merely in the back of their minds.

But three games and three losses later, those two wins must come in the last three games. They must come now.

"Obviously we've got to win now," offensive lineman Matt Purdy said. "If we don't win now, then we don't go anywhere. We're all sitting at home at Christmas."

Despite a 5-0 record, Iowa went into the Oct. 20 game against Penn State as an underdog. The Hawkeyes were also heavy underdogs a week later against Ohio State in Columbus. In a sense, those two losses were understandable and maybe even expected.

But a two-game losing streak, against anybody, can take some fire out of a team. And on Saturday, the Fighting Illini seemed to be playing with a lot more heart.

"I don't think we were down on ourselves coming into the game.
We were a little flat, though," tight end Scott Slutzker said.

"I think guys are a little down

Iowa puts on a show for sellout crowd

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

While Jess Settles was proving to the world that his back was healthy, it was the absence of a freshman that forced the greatest impact.

The Iowa men's basketball team announced Saturday that freshman Guy Rucker has decided to redshirt his freshman season to focus on academics.

"I have asked coach Davis if he would allow me to sit out this year to concentrate on my books," Rucker said in a written statement. "I want to become a student first and then an athlete, as well as developing my body skills and getting in better shape."

The Hawkeyes, who finished in the lower half of the Big Ten Conference in rebounding last season, will sorely miss the 6-foot-11 freshman from Inkster, Mich., but Iowa coach Tom Davis thinks Rucker's decision is for the best.

"I'm very supportive," Davis said. "I think it's a great decision for him personally. It was the right move."

The Hawkeyes will now play two exhibition games — the first game being on Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena against the Republic of Georgia — before heading to the Great Alaska Shootout over Thanksgiving.

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Iowa sophomore Ryan Bowen (42) prepares to go up against freshman Alvin Robinson during Saturday's Black and Gold Blowout.

Davis said he may prohibit some of the remaining true freshmen (Trey Bullet, J.R. Koch and Alvin Robinson) from playing in the exhibitions while he and his staff determine any additional redshirts. This will be in compliance with NCAA rules which state players can lose

Hawks fall in final of Big Ten tourney

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

After going unscathed through the Big Ten Conference's regular season, Iowa had its 11-game winning streak snapped by Penn State, 4-1, in the Big Ten tournament championship game.

The Lady Lions earned an automatic berth to the NCAA tournament and sent the No. 2 Hawkeyes, the Big Ten regular season champions, home to ponder what went wrong.

"This is just one of the most frustrating things," Beth Beglin, Iowa head coach, said. "I hope we get to play Penn State again. I would love to see them in the NCAA tournament."

The Hawkeyes came into the tournament the No. 1 seed, but struggled to get by Ohio State in the first round. The fifth-seeded Buckeyes gave Iowa all it could handle on Saturday as it took an overtime goal by Hawkeye sophomore Michelle Wilson to eek out the 2-1 victory.

Iowa's Diane DeMiro gave the Hawkeyes the lead in the first half as the junior beat Ohio State's Nikki Thompson to put Iowa up 1-0.
The Buckeyes knotted the game at 1-1 when Jill Deemer scored with five minutes left in the first half.
The two teams battled the entire second half scoreless to send the game into the extra period. Iowa senior Ann Paré found Wilson in the penalty circle and Wilson sealed the victory 9:59 into overtime.

On Sunday, the Hawkeyes ran into a fired-up Penn State squad

who had gone down twice to Iowa in the regular season.

The Nittany Lions jumped out to a 1-0 lead on a goal by Jenni Bisignaro with 11:54 remaining in the first half. Penn State then caught a break when Hawkeye goalkeeper Lisa Cellucci was called for lying on the ball and the Lady Lions were awarded a penalty stroke.
Penn State's Holly Bollinger shot the ball past Cellucci to put the Nittany Lions up 2-0.

A controversial call at the end of the first half cost Iowa another goal as well as some momentum.
Paré took a shot off a deflection of a Lady Lions stick, but the ball went through a hole in the net. The officials ruled no-goal and Penn State retained its two goal lead.

Iowa's Diane DeMiro cut the lead to 2-1 when she received a pass from Paré and scored in the pen-
game.

But Penn State shut the door on Iowa when freshman Dawn Lammy scored with 17:01 remaining.
Bigsignaro then added her second goal with 2:48 left on the clock.
Penn State coach Char Morett said this was a huge victory for her team.

"We never gave up on ourselves," Morett said. "This win will give us a tremendous boost heading into the tournament. I have a funny feeling we might see Iowa again, so it's good to get a win under our belt against them."

Iowa, a lock for the NCAA tournament despite the loss, will find out its first round opponent when the pairings are announced today.

McCracken and Wolvorton nab championship

Shannon Stevens

Inexperience couldn't offset good chemistry as junior Kristen McCracken and freshman Erin Wolvorton captured the doubles championship at the Illinois Midwest Regionals in Champaign, Ill., last weekend.

The Hawkeye duo churned out three conference wins to set up a final showdown with Illinois' Isabel Adsuar and Nicole Jackson. The Hawkeyes were never in danger in the championship match as they cruised to an 8-2 victory.

All of this despite never having played a match together as members of the Iowa women's tennis team. McCracken, who usually plays with her sister Kelly, became a late substitute for the injured Krissy Campbell.

Iowa assistant women's tennis coach Jen Hyde said McCracken and Wolvorton overcame unfamiliarity with solid fundamentals.

"They didn't try to play superhero doubles," Hyde said. "They just played basic doubles and that's why they won."

Wolvorton, McCracken, and sophomore Robin Niemeier were equally impressive in singles play. McCracken and Wolvorton each posted 3-1 tournament records before falling in the semi-finals and quarterfinals respectively. Niemeier lost her second round match in three sets, after winning her opening match 6-2, 6-0.

Two other members of the Hawkeye squad competed at the Rolex Regionals last Thursday and Friday in East Lansing, Mich. Seniors Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette advanced to the third round in doubles play with a 6-3, 6-3 win over Cincinnati's Collette/Harris. There, the duo was defeated by Eklund/Novak of Northwestern 2-6, 5-7.

Boros also saw singles action at the tournament, winning her first match 6-1, 7-5 over Toledo's Christie Brannon. In the second round, she fell to Michigan's Sora Moon in three sets.

Men's team falls in difficult draw

There's nothing worse than grabbing the shortest straw.

The Iowa men's tennis team had high expectations going into the Rolex ITC Championships in Madison, Wis., last weekend, but didn't match its 1994 success at the tournament due to some tough draws.

Junior Tom Derouin was the Hawkeyes' top finisher in singles play. Derouin advanced to the quarterfinals with a 5-7, 6-1, 7-6 win over Wisconsin's Jeff Malik before succumbing to Minnesota's Tom Chicoine.

Ryan Johnstone, Marcus Ekstrand and Damir Seferovic did not fair quite as well, as each fell in his first match of the tournament.

Mattias Jonnson won his opening round match against Wisconsin's Mike Goldstein 6-3, 6-2, but was forced to drop out of his second match when he aggravated a knee injury.

Two Hawkeye doubles teams played in the tournament as well, both losing in the first round.

Iowa coach Steve Houghton said he was pleased with the Hawkeyes' performances saying that the numbers didn't tell the whole story.

"It's a different feeling after having (Bryan) Crowley win the tournament last year," he said. "We didn't advance through the last two days of the tournament but I think it was the matter of the draw, instead of people not playing as well."

As a case in point, Houghton focused on Ekstrand's match with the tournament's top seed. Notre Dame's Mike Sprouse won the match 6-3, 6-7, 6-3.

"He really had a good chance to win the match," he said. "It's too bad that this tournament was one and out. Sometimes good performances get lost in the losses."

BLOWOUT

redshirt eligibility by participating in exhibition games.

"It's possible," Davis said. "We may hold a couple of the younger players out."

Last Saturday's intrasquad scrimmage was appropriately named (the Gold team won 101-54), but Davis and his players believe the Black and Gold Blowout served a useful purpose.

"Today was good just to get a little timing work done and for coach Davis to get in a rhythm as far as substituting," senior Kenyon Murray said.

Davis said the Blowout was a chance for his team to work out kinks from the offseason.

"It was good for the players to be out in front of the lights," Davis said. "This has to be one of the places that we can work things out before the actual season starts."

Perhaps benefiting most from the scrimmage were the freshmen, who had the rare opportunity of playing in front of a sellout exhibition crowd of 15,500.

"I think that just being out there is going to help (the freshmen)," junior Chris Kingsbury said. "It's not like the Big Ten is going to be, but it's still good to get them out there."

Murray said the freshmen's tension was obvious at first, but the nerves faded as the game progressed.

"I thought (the natural freshmen) were a little bit tight at first, but all three of them began to play a little bit better down the stretch," Murray said.

The Blowout also served another purpose. Namely, how fit is the oft-injured back of Settles?

"It felt real good," Settles said after the game. "I've been doing good through practice so it looks like I'll be ready to roll."

However, it was a year ago when Settles' injury flared up with little warning.

"It was the exhibition games, about last year at this time, but hopefully it won't ever happen again," Settles said.

Davis also noticed the stability in his star forward's effort.

"I think if you look at Jess Settles, the numbers support what he can do," Davis said.

Settles hit a game-high 23 points, 12 coming on three-pointers.

Iowa's three-point specialist, junior Chris Kingsbury, didn't fair as well, but wasn't overly concerned. Kingsbury tallied 13 points, but missed all 11 of his three-point attempts.

"I'm not happy with how I played, but I just want to do the best that I can right now," Kingsbury said.

One of the biggest surprises was the play of the freshman Robinson, who scored eight points — two on a thunderous dunk that was followed up with a little shimmy — and was relentless on the boards.

However, it was the hot-dogging that got Robinson the most word-of-mouth.

"(Robinson's) got a little flare and this team needs a little bit of that," Davis said.

NFL ROUNDUP

Bears fall to big play in OT

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Neil O'Donnell atoned for a costly interception the only way he knew how, making big play after big play to put the Pittsburgh Steelers back in front in the AFC Central.

O'Donnell sent the game into overtime with a 10-yard touchdown pass to Ernie Mills with 1:06 left in regulation and the two connected again in overtime to set up Norm Johnson's winning 24-yard field goal as the Steelers defeated the Chicago Bears 37-34 Sunday.

O'Donnell passed for 341 yards and Erric Pegrum scored three touchdowns for Pittsburgh (5-4), which took a one game lead over Cleveland and Houston in the division. The Steelers had been 0-12 at Chicago.

Erik Kramer had three touchdown passes for the Bears (6-3), whose four-game winning streak was snapped.

Vikings 27, Packers 24

A couple of hours after Warren Moon broke the 40,000-yard passing barrier, John Elway joined him in that rarefied zone for NFL quarterbacks.

Moon threw for three touchdowns and 237 yards Sunday, becoming the second fastest to reach the 40,000-yard plateau and Minnesota edged Green Bay 27-24 on Fuad Revez's 39-yard field goal as time expired.

Moon was the sixth passer to reach 40,000 yards and not much later, Elway became No. 7, throwing for three touchdowns and 256 yards as the Denver Broncos routed the Arizona Cardinals 38-6.

Panthers 13, 49ers 7

Call it what you want — shocking, stunning, or inconceivable — but you'd better believe it.

Carolina became the first expansion club in its inaugural season to win four games and defeat a defending Super Bowl champion, downing the San Francisco 49ers, 13-7 Sunday.

In the end, the 49ers were without their top two quarterbacks and committed five turnovers. Three occurred inside the Carolina 10, including Tim McMyer's 96-yard interception return for a touchdown.

Carolina (4-5) surpassed the previous high for an expansion club with its fourth straight victory and is by no means out of playoff contention in the NFC West.

HEAT DEAL FOR MOURNING

Riley gambles on 'franchise player'

Steven Wine

Associated Press

MIAMI — The fanfare that accompanied Alonzo Mourning's arrival in Miami failed to reach the sandwich shop where he had lunch prior to his first game with the Heat.

"A couple of people asked me if I played basketball," Mourning said with a smile. "I said, 'Sometimes.'"

Not everyone in Miami has Heat fever, but it's spreading. A capacity crowd of 15,200 cheered as Mourning and coach Pat Riley made successful debuts Saturday with the Heat, who beat Cleveland 85-71.

The final 2,000 tickets were sold after Riley swung a six-player trade Friday to acquire Mourning from the Charlotte Hornets. The new coach and new center received standing ovations when introduced before the game.

"These nights just make you feel alive," Riley said.

Mourning played 33 minutes even though he knew only a few plays. The two-time All-Star scored 15 points and blocked five shots, but he also had six turnovers, five fouls and shot an air ball.

To get to the two-time All Star center, Riley traded to Charlotte prolific shooter and fan favorite Glen Rice, guard Khalid Reeves and backup center Matt Geiger. The Hornets also get Miami's first-round draft pick in 1996.

The Heat get Mourning — a player who could pack up as soon as next season when he is a free agent — and two reserves: guard Pete Myers and center LeRon Ellis. "This is a leap of faith," Riley said. "I believe this is a long-term relationship."

Associated Press

Chicago's Chris Zorich sacks Pittsburgh quarterback Neil O'Donnell for an 11-yard loss Sunday.

Saints 19, Rams 10

At New Orleans, Doug Brien, signed this week to replace Chip Lohmiller, kicked field goals of 35, 26, 47 and 42 yards to lead the Saints, drawing standing ovations with every kick.

Lohmiller was 8-for-14, missing five field goals and an extra point in two victories.

Raiders 20, Bengals 17

At Cincinnati, Harvey Williams ran for 134 yards and Oakland sacked Jeff Blake four times. Blake's 4-yard pass to Carl Pickens with 35 seconds left and his option run on the 2-point conversion moved Cincinnati within a field goal, but Derrick Fenner recovered the onside kick to end it.

Oilers 37, Browns 10

At Cleveland, Chris Chandler threw for two touchdowns and ran for another and Rodney Thomas ran for a season-high 108 yards for the Oilers. Cleveland owner Art Modell, negotiating to move his team, chose not to face the hostile crowd and missed a home game for the first time in his 35 years as owner.

Patriots 20, Jets 7

At East Rutherford, N.J., Curtis Martin rushed for 170 yards and a pair of touchdowns as New England, averaging 14.8 points, defeated the Jets, averaging 13.7 points, in a matchup of the NFL's worst offenses.

New York never was a threat. By midway in the second quarter, quarterback Bubby Brister was benched for Glenn Foley. But Foley suffered a dislocated right shoulder on the Jets' final offensive play when he was sacked and will miss the remainder of the season.

Falcons 34, Lions 22

At Atlanta, Jeff George threw for 362 yards and Atlanta built a 34-7 lead and then hung on. Alton Montgomery returned an interception 71 yards for the Falcons' first TD and Jessie Tuggle's interception at the goal line with 1:37 to play ended Detroit's last comeback chance.

Chiefs 24, Redskins 3

The Kansas City Chiefs were worried about losing momentum while taking their bye week. Maybe they forgot they were playing the Washington Redskins.

Steve Bono threw for 201 yards and a touchdown and Marcus Allen scored from a yard out as the Chiefs overcame their own mistakes Sunday and beat the Redskins 24-3. Kimble Anders added a 40-yard scoring run with 2:26 left as the Chiefs moved to 8-1.

Gus Frerotte, without his top two receivers, had his worst day — 11 of 34 for 140 yards. He was even pulled for Heath Shuler after misfiring on four straight passes with the Redskins behind 17-3 early in the fourth quarter.

Bills 16, Colts 10

At Indianapolis, Buffalo held Marshall Faulk on three straight runs inside the 3-yard line late in the third quarter, then forced him to fumble early in the final period and beat the Colts. Jim Kelly threw a 51-yard TD pass to Bill Brooks and Steve Christie kicked three field goals for the Bills.

Seahawks 30, Giants 28

At Seattle, Todd Peterson kicked a career-high three field goals and Seattle ended a four-game losing streak when New York's Brad Daluiso missed a 48-yard try as time ran out. Peterson's 32-yard field goal with 1:27 left gave the Seahawks the winning margin and then Daluiso missed. He is 0-for-3 from 40-49 yards this season, his only misses of the season.

Dolphins 24, Chargers 14

Dan Marino, a senior in high school when the Miami Dolphins last won in San Diego, made sure that long losing streak wouldn't continue.

Marino threw for at least 50 yards on the Dolphins' first three scoring drives and 291 yards overall as the Dolphins beat the Chargers 24-14 on Sunday night.

The Dolphins avenged a 22-21 loss to the Chargers in San Diego in the divisional playoffs on Jan. 8, a defeat that kept Marino from playing the AFC championship game in his hometown, Pittsburgh.

LEAVING CLEVELAND?

Browns claim they're moving to Baltimore

Michael Schneider

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Burned before on promises to bring the NFL back to Baltimore, fans and some officials took a prove-it-to-me attitude Saturday to reports that the Cleveland Browns were moving to Baltimore.

"I'll believe it when I see a kick-off," said Craig Carmen, who was tailgating at a Baltimore Stallions' Canadian Football League game.

Browns owner Art Modell confirmed Friday night that he was negotiating seriously with Baltimore but wouldn't confirm that a deal was reached. Modell reportedly told a Cleveland reporter Saturday that it was nearly a done deal.

When asked how it can be averted now, Modell said, "I don't know."

Clint Coleman, a spokesman for Mayor Kurt Schmoke, on Saturday said Cleveland Mayor Michael R. White was expected to arrive in Baltimore on Sunday. No meeting had been scheduled, but Coleman said he expected Schmoke and White to meet, possibly Sunday afternoon.

"I'm not going to speculate. There's no need to take this community on this roller coaster ride," Coleman said.

Officials have good reason to be circumspect. Baltimore often has been used as bait for other NFL teams that either located elsewhere or were looking to get better deals from their cities.

Since 1987, Baltimore football fans have had their hopes raised, and then dashed, by the St. Louis Cardinals, the Los Angeles Rams, the Los Angeles Raiders, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the Cincinnati Bengals.

Questions plague Big Ten leaders

Rick Warner
Associated Press

Ohio State could go 13-0 and not win the national championship. Northwestern could go 8-0 in the Big Ten and not go to the Rose Bowl.

Those strange scenarios are becoming distinct possibilities for the second-ranked Buckeyes and No. 5 Wildcats, who don't play each other this season due to a quirk in the Big Ten schedule.

Both teams won Saturday with help from their star running backs. Eddie George rushed for 178 yards and three touchdowns as Ohio State beat Minnesota 49-21. Darnell Autry ran for 139 yards and three scores in Northwestern's 21-10 victory over No. 19 Penn State.

Ohio State (9-0, 5-0 Big Ten) rose two spots in The Associated Press poll Sunday, but the Buckeyes probably will be shut out of the national title unless No. 1 Nebraska loses.

"We just have to keep on winning," George said. "I'm not going to sit here and talk about moving up. All we can do is do our talking on the field."

Northwestern (8-1, 6-0 Big Ten) climbed one notch in the AP poll after winning eight games for the first time since the 1948 season, when the Wildcats won the Rose Bowl in their only postseason appearance.

But the Wildcats won't go to Pasadena this season unless Ohio State loses to Illinois, Indiana or Michigan. If Northwestern and Ohio State both go undefeated in the Big Ten, the Buckeyes would get the Rose Bowl bid with a better overall record.

"We have self-respect and that's all that counts for us," Northwestern coach Gary Barnett said. "We're a pretty good team."

No. 1 Nebraska 73, Iowa St. 14
At Lincoln, Ahman Green stole the spotlight from Lawrence Phillips, who returned following a suspension for attacking his former girlfriend. Phillips ran for 68 yards and a touchdown, but Green was the star for Nebraska (9-0) with 176 rushing yards and four TDs.

No. 2 Ohio St. 49, Minnesota 21
At Minneapolis, Bobby Hoying

threw for two touchdowns and ran for another as the Buckeyes overcame the loss of star receiver Terry Glenn, who caught three passes for 103 yards and a TD before injuring his right shoulder late in the first quarter.

No. 3 Florida 58, N. Illinois 20

At Gainesville, Eric Kresser put on a record-breaking show for Florida (8-0) when he started in place of Heisman Trophy contender Danny Wuerffel, who was given the day off against outmanned Northern Illinois. Kresser passed for six TDs and a school-record 458 yards, breaking Wuerffel's 2-year-old mark of 449.

No. 4 Tennessee 42, S. Mississippi 0

At Knoxville, Tennessee forced five turnovers and Ray Austin blocked a punt that was returned for a touchdown. Peyton Manning passed for 230 yards and two touchdowns and ran for a score for the Volunteers (8-1).

No. 5 Northwestern 21, No. 19 Penn St. 10

At Evanston, Autry gained 100 yards for the 10th straight game and Northwestern held Penn State to a field goal in the second half.

No. 7 Kansas St. 49, Oklahoma 10

At Manhattan, Matt Miller passed for three TDs and ran for two as Kansas State (8-1) handed Oklahoma its worst loss in 50 years.

No. 8 Notre Dame 35, Navy 17

At South Bend, backup quarterback Tom Krug threw two TD passes and the Irish (8-2) rallied to beat Navy for the 32nd straight time after Ron Powlus broke his left arm. Powlus is out for the rest of the year.

No. 9 Colorado 45, Oklahoma St. 32

At Stillwater, John Hessler tied his school record with five TD passes. His 77-yard scoring toss to Rae Carruth midway through the fourth quarter gave the Buffaloes (7-2) a 38-24 lead.

No. 10 Kansas 42, Missouri 23

At Lawrence, Mark Williams threw a 49-yard TD pass to Isaac Byrd and Chris Jones returned an interception for a touchdown. Kansas (8-1) rallied after trailing 17-14 at halftime.

No. 11 Texas 48, Texas Tech 7

At Austin, Shon Mitchell ran for three touchdowns and James

Brown threw for two as Texas burned Texas Tech's blitzing defense. Texas (6-1-1) built a 28-0 halftime lead and cruised the rest of the way.

No. 12 Southern Cal 31, Stanford 30

At Los Angeles, Keyshawn Johnson caught an 8-yard TD pass from Kyle Wacholtz with 39 seconds remaining, putting Southern Cal (7-1-1) within one victory of a Rose Bowl berth.

Michigan St. 28, No. 13 Michigan 25

At East Lansing, Tony Banks passed for a career-high 318 yards, including the winning 25-yard TD to Nigee Carter with 1:24 remaining. Tim Biakabutuka rushed for 191 yards for Michigan (7-2).

No. 15 Arkansas 26, Mississippi St. 21

At Little Rock, Arkansas (7-2) earned a spot in the Southeastern Conference championship game by holding off Mississippi State.

No. 16 Alabama 10, LSU 3

At Tuscaloosa, Dennis Riddle rushed for 174 yards and the winning touchdown as Alabama (7-2) prevailed in a defensive struggle.

No. 17 Oregon 24, No. 22 Washington 22

At Seattle, Washington's John Wales missed two field goal attempts in the final 3:02 as Oregon (7-2) beat the Huskies for the second straight year.

No. 20 Auburn 38, NE Louisiana 14

At Auburn, Stephen Davis shook off a knee injury and rushed for 111 yards and two touchdowns for Auburn (6-3).

No. 21 Virginia Tech 31, No. 23 Syracuse 7

At Blacksburg, Jim Druckenmiller threw for three TDs and Ken Oxendine ran for 113 yards as Virginia Tech (7-2) won its seventh straight and gained the inside track to the Big East title.

No. 24 Clemson 17, North Carolina 10

At Clemson, the Tigers (6-3) picked off five passes, including one that Brian Dawkins returned 49 yards for a score.

No. 25 San Diego St. 38, New Mexico 29

At San Diego, George Jones rushed for 208 yards and three TDs and Billy Blanton threw for 328 yards and three scores to lead San Diego State (7-2).

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Iowa finds positives in loss

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

First year Iowa swim coach Patricia Meyer didn't get an easy assignment in her first major meet of the season Saturday.

Although the Hawkeyes fell to a tough Indiana squad by nearly 100 points, they didn't just roll over and hand the Hoosiers an easy victory. Junior captain Lynn Dustin Jr. won the 1000 Freestyle race with a time of 10:46.

"We swam the best we could have for this time of year," Meyer said.

"Indiana is better than we are now so I'm very happy with our performances."

Freshman Kara Schmitz also turned in a time of :59.05 in the backstroke for second place, while finishing with a lifetime-best 4:41.96 in the 400 individual medley.

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Freshman Melissa Gregory swam the 1,000-meter freestyle at the Fieldhouse Pool Saturday during the Hawkeyes' opening home meet.

"We swam the best we could," Meyer said.

"You can't ask for much more than some season-best and individual-best times."

Despite the meet result, the swimmers were satisfied with the performance of Meyer in her first big meet.

"I think the coach did real well," Rachel Bayster said. "Katie (Hedman, assistant coach) helped her out and things ran real smoothly. It was really positive throughout the meet."

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team found out what the football team already knew. Don't mess with Penn State or Ohio State.

The Hawkeyes were handled by the Big Ten powerhouses in a pair of matches over the weekend. Iowa has dropped seven-straight home matches and stands 2-12 in the Big Ten.

Saturday night, Iowa performed well but could not overcome the Buckeyes' superior power and depth. No. 10 Ohio State won the match 15-11, 15-11, 15-10.

In the first game, the Hawkeyes came out very strong. They bolted out to a 9-6 lead on a kill by Jennifer Bell. But Iowa went cold and was outscored 9-2 the rest of the way.

The Hawkeyes were hurt badly by another cold stretch in the second game. After tying up the score at four, Ohio State ran off seven straight points to put the game away. Iowa made a late run but came up short.

The third game was more of the same. The Hawkeyes battled to a 6-6 tie, but Ohio State went on an 8-1 run to take a 14-7 lead.

"Anytime you can run double figures on a team like Ohio State, you're in pretty good shape," Coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "Given our injury situation, and our lack of depth, I thought we did a really nice job."

Jennifer Webb led the Hawkeyes in kills. She recorded eight in the third game alone to keep the Hawkeyes kicking.

"I think (Webb) is doing a better job playing within herself," Schoenstedt said. "She's not trying to carry the whole world on her shoulders."

Webb was complimented by solid games from Heather Calomese and Tiffany McDaniel. McDaniel appears to have recovered from a knee injury that kept her out for much of the season.

"She seems a little quicker laterally and she just keys our blocks," Schoenstedt said. "(McDaniel) is a good leader on the court and probably doesn't receive enough credit for being a positive contributor to the team."

On Friday, Penn State showed the Hawkeyes why it's ranked seventh in the country. The Nittany Lions (23-3, 12-2) dominated Iowa en route to a 15-9, 15-4, 15-9 victory.

Penn State used a balanced attack to hold off Iowa. The Nittany Lions finished with a hitting percentage of .340 to the Hawkeyes' .069.

Jill Oelschlager led Iowa with 10 kills while Webb added nine. Webb suffered through a sub par match, however, as she committed a match-high 13 errors.

The Hawkeyes fell behind 8-2 in the first game, 13-3 in the second, and 8-1 in the third and never recovered.

In the third game, Iowa received a spark from Lisa Dockray. She recorded five of the Hawkeyes' eight kills to go along with an ace and a stuffed block in the game.

"I was really surprised that they didn't pick me up at all, so I just kept hitting as much as I could," Dockray said.

Dockray said the rocky season has taken a toll on the Hawkeyes.

"It's tough sometimes coming into practice every day," Dockray said. "The main thing is we really want to work together and make sure we don't lose the team chemistry."

mage," Tepper said. "We got good penetration and stopped him."

Sherman tallied -18 yards on the ground, giving Iowa 20 total yards rushing. Illinois, who came into the game as the worst rushing team in the Big Ten, finished with 278 yards.

"With all their stunting and blitzing, it was useless to try to run the ball," Fry said.

"Normally, when people do that, we can throw the ball very good, but we got some interceptions that seemed to kill us."

Iowa finished the game with 243 total yards, its second lowest output of the season.

"The offense never established any consistency," Fry said. "Illinois surprised us pretty good. As good a defense as they had, they changed up their tendencies, their coverages, blitzes and really played a more aggressive type of defense than they played all year."

Illinois finished with 304 total yards. Running back Robert Holcombe finished with 102 yards on 24 carries.

Johnny Johnson replaced Scott Weaver as quarterback in the second quarter and finished with 60 yards, connecting on 5-of-10 passes. Weaver was 0-for-6 before being replaced.

Iowa travels to Evanston, Ill., to face No. 5 Northwestern next weekend.

and disappointed with losing. But I think we also realize that there's only one thing left to do. If you fall off the horse, you've got to get right back on."

No Big Ten games are easy games, but the Illini were certainly one of the more appealing teams on Iowa's schedule. Now Iowa has only one more home game remaining.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry wouldn't have called Illinois a must-win game, but admitted that things will be extremely difficult in the coming weeks.

"No, (it wasn't a must win game), not when you've got four chances," he said. "You can lose two if you can pull out two. You never know which are going to be the most difficult."

"But between the opponents we have left and the fact that we're on the road the next two weeks ... obviously it's going to be real tough. But then, what's new in football? That's the way it goes."

In order for the Hawkeyes to earn a bowl bid, they must win at least one game on the road, either this Saturday against No. 5-ranked Northwestern or at Wisconsin a week later.

Iowa then hosts Minnesota in its season finale.

"I'm looking to Northwestern already," Purdy said. "The score of the Illinois game is over and there's not a dang thing I can do about that or anybody on this team can do."

Fry believes his players can get up for the next game. He doesn't feel the Illinois loss was either an indication of a drop in confidence or a reason for one.

"They have a lot of character and they believe in themselves," Fry said. "Their confidence will be fine. They're smart young men. They know we didn't play well. We didn't deserve to win. Illinois had the best football team and it's that simple."

14th-ranked Hawks topple Northwestern

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa swim team defeated Northwestern 142-101, in its first dual meet of the season Friday at the Fieldhouse.

Iowa, ranked No. 14 in the nation, was paced by its divers, who swept both the one-meter and three-meter events.

Vico Hidalgo won both events, with Tete Gil taking second in the one-meter and third in the three-meter. Jeff Stein finished second in the three-meter and third in the one-meter.

Marco Minonne won both the 200-meter individual medley and the 200-meter breaststroke.

"I am very pleased with our young and inexperienced team being able to swim to a convincing victory over a worthy Big Ten opponent," Iowa head coach Glenn Patton said. "Vico Hidalgo and Marco Minonne both established themselves as swimmers to be reckoned with in the Big Ten."

Other Hawkeye winners included Joe Loftus in the 1,000 freestyle and Marc River in the 50 freestyle. Iowa also won the 400 medley relay and the 400 freestyle relay.

"The overall performance was great," River said. "I thought everyone swam great and gave 100 percent. It was definitely important. We all wanted to win."

Magazine reports abuse

FRANKFURT, Germany — Steffi Graf's father, who is jailed on allegations of evading taxes on the tennis champion's earnings, allegedly beat and kicked her during training, Der Spiegel magazine said Sunday.

Quoting a former close associate of the Graf family, Horst Schmidt, Spiegel said the 57-year-old Peter Graf "treated her like a dog" when they were once at a training camp in Spain.

In one incident, Spiegel quoted

Schmidt as saying Graf kicked his daughter when she dropped something and was picking it up.

Spiegel said that Schmidt had told his story to tax fraud investigators Aug. 21, almost two weeks after Graf was arrested on the grounds that he was likely to flee prosecution. Spiegel said that before Schmidt saw the kick, he had not taken Peter Graf seriously when the father would come down from the hotel room and say, "I've just now smacked her."

AFTER KNOCKDOWN

Bowe clobbers Holyfield in eighth

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Riddick Bowe found himself in unfamiliar territory — on the canvas of the ring at Caesars Palace — and decided he better do something about it.

So he struggled up and knocked out Evander Holyfield in the eighth round of their rubber match Saturday night.

"I knew I was down and I didn't like where I was," said Bowe, who found himself on the floor in the sixth round for the first time in 39 professional fights. Bowe got up at the count of 5 and appeared in real trouble, with the round only a little more than 30 seconds old.

Holyfield, however, could not take advantage. He landed a couple more punches to the head, but then did very little for the remainder of the round.

"I was bone tired," the 33-year-old Holyfield said of his first knock-out loss. "The whole fight he was strong and I got real arm weary real quick. Then it was just the only chance I had was a knockout punch. I couldn't get it."

"I lost a lot of energy throughout the fight. If not so much age, it's just that I didn't fight with everything I had."

But it might be that age and a lot of hard fights left Holyfield with little against the bigger, stronger Bowe on this 54-degree night.

Dr. Flip Homansky said he examined Holyfield right after the fight and that his pulse was good. Homansky said Holyfield, who had been diagnosed with a heart condition last year, had suffered some shoulder spasms, but complained of no shortness of breath. Holyfield attended a post-fight news conference.

When Bowe's opportunity came, he did not let it slip by.

The two were exchanging punches early in the eighth round when Holyfield suddenly went face down from a crunching right. He struggled up at 9, but looked like a defeated fighter.

"When he stayed down that long a time, I knew I'd get him," Bowe said. "I am 240 pounds, he's 213. He's no match for me once I hit him."

And hit him Bowe did, landing 252 of 524 punches, while Holyfield connected on 154 of 256. Holyfield had the better percentage, but he also took the worse beating.

After seven rounds, the three judges had Holyfield leading by a point. Bowe had been penalized a point for a low blow in the fifth round.

The AP card had Bowe ahead 66-65 after seven rounds.

At the end of their third exciting fight, the 28-year-old Bowe embraced his older opponent and said, "Man, I love you. Man, I love you."

An estimated crowd of 12,000 loved them both.

With Mike Tyson's fight against Buster Mathis Jr., scheduled for hours earlier at the MGM Grand down the strip, called off because of Tyson's fractured right thumb, Bowe-Holyfield was the only fight in town. They made the most of it.

While the judges gave Holyfield a slight edge, Bowe appeared in command through the first five rounds. And after Holyfield was unable to take advantage of the knockdown, he quickly re-established control.

Bowe puffed Holyfield around both eyes and drew blood from his mouth as he scored with good left jabs, clean right uppercuts inside and hard body punches.

Bowe thought the body punches played a big part in his victory, taking the snap out of Holyfield's legs early in the fight.

"I could tell he was tired just watching him across the ring between rounds," said Bowe, who established himself as the premier heavyweight in the world with the victory.

Before the fight, he said he and Holyfield were the two best heavyweights and that Tyson was No. 3. A read on just how good Tyson might be after a four-year layoff still has to be made; his 89-second victory over Peter McNeeley on Aug. 19 told little about the former undisputed champion.

The defeat came in Holyfield's second fight after he came out of retirement, which had been forced on him by the heart condition.

Holyfield's first knockout loss left him with a 31-3 record with 22 knockouts. Bowe's record is 38-1 with 31 knockouts.

NBA's youngest player has solid debut with T'Wolves

Rob Gloster
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — He chews bubble gum on the court and wears a lucky rubber band on his right wrist. In many ways, he's still the lanky high school kid who attended his senior prom last spring.

But Kevin Garnett also has the poise and ability that make him seem like a natural in the NBA.

"For a 19-year-old, he has a lot of maturity on the floor," Minnesota teammate Terry Porter said. "He knows the game, he knows how to run the floor."

Garnett, the first high school player to leap directly to the NBA in 20 years, made an impressive debut for the Timberwolves in a 95-86 loss Friday night to the Sacramento Kings.

The 6-foot-11 forward hit all four of his shots — ranging from a thundering dunk to an 18-foot jumper — and scored eight points in 16 minutes. He did not fare well on defense against Walt Williams, but none of his teammates did either as Williams scored 20 points to lead the Kings.

Garnett, the fifth choice in this year's NBA draft, is the youngest player in the league. Last year at this time, he was attending Farragut Academy in Chicago. A year earlier, he was at Mauldin High School in South Carolina.

He entered Friday's game with 5:55 left in the first quarter and needed less than three minutes to score his first NBA basket on a 5-foot bank shot. He followed that with another short shot, the dunk and the jumper from the top of the key.

And Garnett even showed some ball-handling ability, making a no-look pass to Christian Laettner under the basket.

"As long as I can contribute," Garnett said. "I'm not one of those greedy players."
