CARREY'S NEW MOVIE JUST DUMB, COULDN'T BE DUMBER: Though Jim Carrey now commands up to $20 million per film, he still can't bring "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" out of the toilet. Carrey attempts to work his magic in the movie, a sequel to the film which elevated his name to household status. This time, however, his touch is far from golden. It's the one of the worst films made in a long time.

UI to tackle student drinking

Ann Haggerty
The Daily Iowan

The alcohol-related death of Lambda Chi Alpha associate member Matthew Garofalo and the breaking of the alcohol moratorium by certain Greek chapters has prompted UI administrators to plan an open town meeting to address college drinking.

In addition, two Harvard researchers who did a college binge drinking study — which included the UI — will come to campus Dec. 4-5 to discuss the UI's results with administrators.

Tentatively titled "The Use of Alcohol in a Learning Community," the town meeting will be open to the public Jan. 21 from 1-5:30 p.m. in the Main Lounge of the Union.

The meeting will allow the UI and Iowa City communities to discuss the alcohol issue that has been spotlighted this semester, said Belinda Marner, coordinator of Student Services and Administration.

Media coverage of drinking on the UI campus may have drawn more attention to the issue, said UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones.

"There may be more news value in the stories this fall simply because of the sensational case of

Kingsbury's arrest: Punishment pending

Sarah Lueck
The Daily Iowan

UI athletic officials will meet today to discuss what punishment UI basketball player Chris Kingsbury will receive after being charged with public intoxication by the Iowa City Police Department. Police responded to a report that someone was urinating in the lobby and tampering with the sprinkler system at the downtown Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St., early Friday around 2:37 a.m. Kingsbury was with a group of people who were reportedly causing the disturbance.

Kingsbury, whose blood-alcohol content tested .14, said he doesn't know what his punishment will be. The legal blood-alcohol content in Iowa is .10. He did say this incident won't affect his career.

At a press conference Sunday, UI basketball coach Tom Davis said he didn't know what the outcome of today's meeting will be. "I think anything is possible right now," he said. "I'll try not to get too specific right now; I'm just going to wait and see what is best for (Kingsbury)."

Davis said he is disappointed about the incident. "Any time you have anything that's out of the ordinary like that, you're always a little disappointed," he said.

Two other people with Kingsbury in the hotel lobby were charged with public intoxication: UI senior Thomas Plotner and UI junior Abby Carey. Plotner was also charged with indecent conduct.

After a night in jail, Kingsbury, Plotner and Carey were released Friday morning on their own recognizance.

Plotner would not comment on the situation.

On other athletic fronts, several members of the UI women's gym-

The UI's Record on Drinking

The UI will be visited this December by researchers to discuss binge drinking among college students after a controversial fall semester.

■ Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity associate member Matthew Garofalo died after passing out and choking on his own vomit at a fraternity party. After his death, the UI imposed a moratorium on alcohol at fraternity houses.

■ Last week, the Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity was suspended for at least a year for violating the ban. One other fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and a sorority, Kappa Kappa Gamma, were also disciplined in the case.

■ Iowa men's basketball guard Chris Kingsbury was charged with public intoxication at the Holiday Inn on Nov. 10 at 2 a.m.

■ Members of the women's gymnastics team were suspended the same day for violating the school's strict no-alcohol policy.

■ Drinking was one of the reasons debris, including a hog's head and cans of beer, were tossed onto Kinnick Stadium's field at the Penn State-Iowa football game Oct. 21.

SURVEY RESULTS 'SHOCKING'

Doctors: No care for HIV babies

Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of doctors say they would recommend withholding expensive medical care from babies born to HIV-infected mothers even when they didn't know if the baby actually had the AIDS virus.

Most babies born to HIV-infected mothers do not develop the virus.

The findings, reported in Sunday's American Journal of Public Health, are "shocking," said Arthur Ammann of the Pediatric AIDS Foundation.

New York researchers studied 951 neonatologists nationwide to determine how they would treat newborns who had such expensive-to-treat conditions as kidney or heart disease in addition to being born to HIV-infected mothers.

Some 700 neonatologists said they would recommend withholding certain aggressive treatments, such as cardiac surgery or kidney dialysis, from babies who definitely have HIV. And 400 of the doctors said knowing the mother was infected would alter their treatment decisions even if the baby's own HIV tests weren't complete.

The doctors were surveyed in 1991, and there is no way to know whether their opinions have changed, acknowledged the study's author, Betty Wolder Levin of the City University of New York.

Dad, daughter well after liver transplant

Al Austria
The Daily Iowan

The 6-year-old Dubuque girl who underwent successful living-donor liver transplant surgery Thursday is resting comfortably at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"Everything's wonderful," said Wendy Hancock, mother of transplant recipient Leslie Hancock. Leslie was awake at 3 a.m. Friday and "just keeps asking for me," she said.

Leslie is doing great and wants all of her tubes out, said Dr. Maureen Martin, one of the lead surgeons who performed the transplant.

For more information, call the Iowa Statewide Organ Procurement Organization at 1-800-831-4131.

"Her liver is functioning perfectly well," Martin said. "It couldn't have gone better."

Leslie has cystic fibrosis, a hereditary disease that produced cirrhosis — or hardening — of her liver, which required her to have the transplant.

On Thursday, the 6-year-old underwent a seven-hour surgical procedure to become the first patient in Iowa to receive a liver transplant using a portion of a liver from a live donor — her

What do you get when you cross 51 drunken UI students with a 26,000 pound 1980 Blue Bird Midwest model school bus with 129,000 miles on it?

The infamous drunk bus.

The bus, operated by Old Capitol Cab, 1016 Gilbert Court, is used to pick up regular taxicab passengers, but is meant to cater to large groups traveling around Iowa City from the bars and parties, said Don Gentry, an Old Capitol Cab employee.

Since the bus's institution three weeks ago, the UI community's response has been tremen-

Oddities &amp; Idiosyncrasies

Biosphere 2 falls into university hands

Arthur Rotstein
Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Columbia University is taking over management of Biosphere 2, the glassed-in environment criticized by scientists when eight people tried to live there in self-supporting isolation for two years.

The agreement, to be announced today, gives Columbia five years to run the huge greenhouse in an attempt to bring scientific legitimacy to a project that began as a sort of New Age ecological ark.

Edward Bass, the Texas billionaire who bankrolled the project and then wrested control from the cult-like group that built it, will continue to provide the bulk of the funding.

Exact terms weren't disclosed, but officials said Biosphere's budget will be $15 million to $17 million a year.

Columbia's Lamont-Doherty Earth Observatory will run scientific and educational operations as well as the growing tourist business, said university President George Rupp. However, the university doesn't plan any long live-in missions.

The 3-acre complex in the desert 30 miles north of Tucson contains replicas of an ocean, savanna, rain forest and marsh, and a working farm, allowing scientists to study Earth's processes under controlled conditions.

"The intellectual lure of the Biosphere is tremendous," said Columbia geochemistry professor Wallace Broecker, a member of the National Academy of Science who has been involved with the project for several years.

On Sept. 26, 1991, four men and four women donned "Star Trek"-style uniforms and trooped through the giant terrarium's airlock doors, accompanied by music, visionary rhetoric and media hype.

Their professed goal: to spend two years of total self-sufficiency, growing their own food and recycling air, water and waste, as if they were on a long space mission.

Soon, however, a series of news leaks revealed that management was fudging on the self-sufficiency promise.

An air scrubbing system had to be installed because the natural systems couldn't keep carbon dioxide in balance. Fresh outside air had to be pumped in. A crew member who left for treatment of a finger injury secretly took back two duffel bags of non-food supplies.

Crops failed and the crew members lost an average of 25 pounds by the time they emerged on Sept. 26, 1993.

Questions arose about the scientific and business abilities of top managers Margaret Augustine and John Allen, leaders of a core group that had been together since their days on a theater-oriented New Mexico commune in the 1970s.

Bass fired Augustine and Allen in March 1994 over alleged financial mismanagement. That prompted a sabotage attempt by two former crew members who sneaked up one night and threw open the outside doors of the sealed project.

Bass' new managers formed a partnership with Columbia in August 1994 to gather a consortium of scientists from such schools as Harvard, Stanford and Yale to write a long-term scientific plan for the $150 million-plus project.

Columbia will make Biosphere available to scientists to study such environmental issues as global climate change, biodiversity and sustainable agriculture, said Michael Crow, Columbia vice provost.

"It means Biosphere 2 is going to evolve into the major scientific and educational center it was always intended to be," said Stephen Bannon, acting chief executive officer.

QUOTABLE

"People pretty much tell me what they were and were not wearing in my car: 'Oh yeah, I can't find my underwear.' That's always pretty amusing. You gotta give 'em a hard time just 'cause they're taking the ride of shame — 'Oh, so you didn't want anyone to see you walking home, huh?'"

NEWSMAKERS

Funniest mayor goes to Seattle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seattle Mayor Norman Rice won a televised "Funniest Mayor" contest by joking about his rain-soaked city, comparing it to a moisturizing pad.

In a videotaped routine on HBO's "Comic Relief VII" Saturday night, Rice also manipulated his voice to gurgle as though he were speaking underwater.

Rice poked fun at his city's environmentalist image, too. After New York Yankees fans threw garbage onto the field during a playoff game against the Seattle Mariners, Rice said, Seattle fans sorted through the waste for recycling.

"The victory, determined by an applause meter that measured audience approval, earned $7,500 for Seattle's Health Care for the Homeless program.

"Second place brought $1,500 for homeless assistance to Newark Mayor Sharpe James. Baltimore's Mayor Kurt Schmoke came in third and took home $1,000.

Prince Charles paints for charity

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Just what does the heir to the British throne do all day? Prince Charles spends some of those regal hours painting.

The Ronald Reagan Presidential Library will display 40 watercolors by Charles at a Nov. 18-Jan. 7 exhibit requested by former first lady Nancy Reagan.

Library spokesperson Lynda Schuler said the prince has been sketching and painting landscapes for more than 20 years.

"They're traditional watercolors, very light brush work," she said.

Proceeds from sales of a book and prints of the prince's paintings go to the Prince's Charities Trust, which aids inner-city youth and environmental causes in Britain.

Paul Newman recognized for spaghetti sauce — not acting

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Paul Newman said a letter from a fan of his spaghetti sauce helped keep his celebrity in perspective.

Writing to rave about Newman's Own sauce, the fan noted his girlfriend claimed Newman had done some acting.

"If your acting is as good as your spaghetti sauce, you must be great," the letter said. "Do you have any movies on VCR?"

Newman, who described the letter at a luncheon for the Michigan Council of Foundations, said he framed and hung it.

O'Grady reunited with Marine rescuers

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Scott O'Grady expected a Veterans Day salute to the military. He also got a surprise personal salute from a few of his favorite Marines.

The downed fighter pilot who became a hero by displaying his survival skills in the Bosnian woods took the field at half time of the Florida-South Carolina football game Saturday.

Suddenly, eight of his Marine rescuers walked out for a public reunion orchestrated by school and Marine Corps officials.

"This was great," shouted Sgt. Glenn Kirst after he and his buddies were reunited with the Air Force captain. "He's such a nice guy."

Muscle stimulator suit may help 'Superman' walk

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Christopher Reeve, who became famous working in tights, is getting a pair of black Spandex exercise pants with built-in electrodes.

The "Superman" star, paralyzed since falling off a horse in May, will try to wear a special muscle stimulator suit to help his rehabilitation.

"He's 6-foot-4 and I've never dealt with anybody that tall. He's not fitting into any of our regular sizes," said Philip Muccio, who is making the garment.

Muccio, chief of prosthetics at the Central Ohio Orthotic & Prosthetic Center, said the suit and related equipment will help preserve muscle tone in Reeve's legs so his limbs can function if his spinal injury is repaired.

Connectors built into the suit attach to a muscle stimulator that sends pulses through the electrodes to make the muscles contract and relax. When the suit is used with a special bicycle, Reeve can exercise under his own power, his legs moving in response to commands from the bicycle's computer.

Tulsa — a fashion capital?

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Paris. Milan. New York. Tulsa?

For one night, this city in the Plains was transformed into a fashion mecca as 11 supermodels — Linda Evangelista and Naomi Campbell among them — strutted and twirled in Versace to raise money for a local charity.

"We're starved for this," said Joanne Sullivan, one of the 2,000 spectators Saturday. "We can go and see and pretend we're in New York, at least for a night."

The crowd cheered and whistled from the start as Amber Valletta, a Tulsa native responsible for bringing in the show, burst onto the runway in a lavender suit. Her model's pout turned into a wide smile.

"What we've done here is so good, I know I want to continue," she said later.

When her mother, a volunteer at the Tulsa Community Food Bank, suggested the show as a way to raise money to feed the hungry, Valletta began recruiting her friends for "Supermodels Stepping Out Against Hunger."

Cabbies lead lives of adventure

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily Iowan

A station wagon with a right door so frozen that it won't lock shut makes its way down Dodge Street, which is sheeted with ice.

As the car makes a left-hand turn, the door begins to flap in the chilly winter wind, and its passengers wonder if they'll make it

M. Dickbernd/The Daily Iowan

The arrival of cold weather increases business for cab companies like Old Capitol Cab.

The bar rush is also an adventure for Steve "The Terminator" Gustoff of Old Capitol Cab.

"We're blinded by the numbers of calls we get," he said. "The bar rush is the busiest time. At 1:15 it starts building and by 1:45 the phones' ringing could blow the top roof of this town!"

Gustoff said he once had 22 people piled into a station wagon and was pulled over by the police in front of Kinko's because someone was sitting on top of the roof and another person was hanging off the bumper.

"I didn't even know that they were there," he said. "The cops like to see them packed in. They would rather see the kids get home safe. That's our gig — to see that they don't go to jail and don't get hurt."

Taking home intoxicated people can be overwhelming at times, Schwartz said.

The smell of stale liquor lingers in his cab and he usually hangs an air freshener to tone down the scent.

However, Friday his "vanillaro-ma" was missing and the stench remained in the air.

"That guy we picked up in Coralville tonight, he smelled like a damn brewery," he said. "He was lit up. When anyone smells that strong of anything it's a little bit annoying."

But mostly all he has to do is humor his customers, he said.

"Ninety percent of the time, people who are drunk in a cab have a really good attitude," he said. "If you drive a little bit crazy they freak out, man, they eat it up. Like if you blow through a real stale yellow light, they think you're insane. It doesn't take much to live up the manic stereotype that all cab drivers have; they'll do it all in their heads."

This stereotype is sometimes formed by students who want to build up the cab driver mystique by giving them nicknames, Schwartz said.

"If you don't have a nickname, they immediately want to give you a tough-guy name," he said. "You're crazy! So did you, like, run anyone over at the football game? You're insane! It's their favorite thing."

Schwartz doesn't have a nickname, but said many drivers do. Gustoff got his nickname, "The Terminator," from a group of Delta Chi and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity members who witnessed him run over some ducks on the Iowa Avenue bridge.

UI freshmen Brandie Martin and Jenny Stewart took Schwartz's cab to Rienow Residence Hall from the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., Friday night.

They both said they were pleased with his driving abilities through the snow, compared to a ride they had earlier that night.

"I thought I was going to die," Martin said about the other driver. "He drove like a maniac, going 45 down 25 roads and slipping on the ice. He wanted to start a fight with some guy who hit his cab."

Dillard slated for forthcoming Coralville mall

Christie Midthun
The Daily Iowan

Area shopaholics could soon be filling their shopping bags and emptying their wallets at a Dillard department store.

Dillard is planned as the largest of the four anchor stores coming to the new mall in Coralville, developer General Growth Co. announced Friday morning.

The three other anchor stores have yet to be announced by the developer.

General Growth, a Des Moines-based company, has been negotiating with Dillard on and off since the mall project began, said General Growth Vice President John Bergstrom. Dillard showed strong interest in opening a store in the new mall from the beginning, he said.

The Little Rock, Ark.-based chain plans to build a 126,000-square-foot store at the mall, scheduled to open in 1997 at Interstate 80 and Highway 965. The second largest store will take up approximately 114,924 square feet. Dillard, a store comparable to Younkers, will have a lot to offer Coralville and Iowa City residents, Bergstrom said.

"Dillard is a traditional department store, which offers a middle to upper-middle price point," Bergstrom said. "It's very dominant in apparel. It offers a selection that will cross over with some existing department stores in the area, but is along a different line."

Dillard has 238 stores in 23 states in the central, southwestern and southeastern United States.

1993 ISU survey: nearly 1 out of 5 female students sexually harassed

Associated Press

AMES — Nearly one out of five Iowa State University female students says she has been sexually harassed on campus in the past five years, according to a school survey.

The school polled 1,000 students in November 1993. It is the last of three surveys examining diversity on the ISU campus. Surveys of faculty and staff were released earlier.

In the study, released Friday, 18 percent of female students questioned said they had been sexually harassed.

The survey did not define sexual harassment, but the university defines it as "unwelcome sexual advances and sexually-oriented joking, verbal abuse or pictures that create a hostile environment."

Kevorkian's machine suicide

DETROIT (AP) —

Kevorkian supplied a "machine" for the first time in 1993 for the death of a woman who had suffered from breast cancer, his attorney Sunday.

Kevorkian has admitted attending 26 deaths and is awaiting trial for the deaths.

In two of the first cases, Kevorkian supplied a machine which allowed the patient to inject a sedative and a paralyzing chemical into the bloodstream.

Until Wednesday, Patricia Cashman, his first patient, had been in his presence had breathed carbon monoxide.

Kevorkian stopped the so-called suicide machine after Michigan authorities revoked his medical license, blocking his access to sedatives.

Kevorkian was arrested after the machine again was used because Cashman had a large quantity of the painkillers, attorney Geoffrey Fieger said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.

Five astronauts boarded the shuttle Sunday for a trip to the space station Mir, despite a warning over the weather on the Atlantic coast.

It was the second attempt for the shuttle.

NASA feared bad weather would delay the shuttle emergency mission to Spain and Morocco. Atlantis' flight for the first time in a row. But managers said that at least one seas touchdown site was acceptable for Sunday launch.

High wind was the problem at the Kennedy Space Center.

The weather outlook was grim considering only seven minutes of clear sky were forecast for the day to send Atlantis on its fuel-efficient route.

Atlantis' primary mission is to attach to the Russian-built docking station will attach to the station to make future dockings safer and easier to accomplish.

The crew will use the shuttle to arm to erect the 150-foot tunnel in the shuttle. The tunnel will remain open when the shuttle leaves.

Kevorkian's machine aids suicide

DETROIT (AP) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian supplied his "suicide machine" for the first time in four years for the death of a California woman who had suffered from breast cancer, his attorney said Sunday.

Kevorkian has acknowledged attending 26 deaths since 1990, and is awaiting trial in two of those deaths.

In two of the first three deaths, Kevorkian supplied an apparatus which allowed the patients to inject a sedative and a heart-stopping chemical into their own veins.

Until Wednesday's death of Patricia Cashman, however, most people who died in Kevorkian's presence had breathed carbon monoxide.

Kevorkian stopped supplying the so-called suicide machine after Michigan authorities lifted his medical license, blocking his access to sedatives.

Kevorkian was able to supply the machine again this time because Cashman had saved up a quantity of the painkiller Seconal, attorney Geoffrey Fieger said.

Kid genius accepts graduate assistantship

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — Why waste time? Now that 11-year-old Michael Kearney has graduated from college, he's working on a graduate degree.

All in preparation for becoming a game show host.

"He could be Mozart, Einstein. We have no idea," said Kevin Kearney, father of the boy with the 300-plus IQ. "Right now he wants to be a game show host. That's a passion we have to accept."

Michael was the youngest child on record to enter college — age 6 1/2 — and the youngest to graduate — age 10 — when he got his degree in anthropology last year at the University of South Alabama.

On Friday, Michael announced plans to attend Middle Tennessee State University, which has offered him something similar to a full-time graduate assistantship. The real thing might violate child labor laws.

Michael plans to start school in January. He hasn't decided what he'll get his degree in.

"Clug, clug, clug," he said in response to a question about whether he would join a fraternity. "I'll bring the Kool-Aid."

Atlantis makes second launch attempt for Mir rendezvous

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Five astronauts boarded Atlantis on Sunday for a trip to the Russian space station Mir, despite uncertainty over the weather on both sides of the Atlantic.

It was the second launch attempt for the docking mission.

NASA feared bad weather at the shuttle emergency landing strips in Spain and Morocco might delay Atlantis' flight for the second day in a row. But managers were optimistic that at least one of the overseas touchdown sites would be acceptable for Sunday morning's launch.

High wind was the prime concern at the Kennedy Space Center.

The weather outlook was particularly grim considering NASA has only seven minutes on any given day to send Atlantis on the most fuel-efficient route to Mir.

Atlantis' primary payload is a Russian-built docking port the astronauts will attach to the Mir station to make future shuttle dockings safer and easier to accomplish.

The crew will use Atlantis' robot arm to erect the 15-foot docking tunnel in the shuttle cargo bay, then latch onto Mir via this port. The tunnel will remain behind when the shuttle leaves.

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration refused Sunday to commit to a seven-year balanced budget as the Republican price for averting the twin crises this week of a partial federal shutdown and a halt to government borrowing.

In what amounted to a day of broadcast budget bargaining, leaders swapped conditions for completing a pair of bills allowing the government to continue borrowing and spending money, which President Clinton has threatened to veto.

Federal spending authority expires at midnight tonight and failure to extend it will force nearly half the federal work force to go home Tuesday morning and curtail government services. Borrowing authority also lapses this week, which could rattle financial markets.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., went on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" and said, "If the president would agree to a balanced budget in seven years, then we could make very good progress" in completing the bills.

That sentiment was echoed by House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga. Appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," he called for "a letter from the president that said, 'I accept in principle getting to a balanced budget in seven years, not the details, but in principle.'"

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta wasted little time in turning them down.

"That cannot be part and parcel of an agreement" on the short-term bills, he declared on CBS' "Face the Nation," though he didn't rule out discussing it as part of a long-range budget-balancing deal.

The tough talk left it highly likely that 800,000 federal employees would be sent home Tuesday, when most agencies' authority to spend money expires. Also looming is the expiration Wednesday of the government's ability to borrow money, although Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin has said he would avoid an unprecedented default by using money in some of the government's cash-heavy trust funds.

The latest day of bipartisan intransigence came as GOP House and Senate bargainers tried to hammer out the final pieces of their plan for cutting taxes, trimming spending and overhauling Medicare and other social programs on the way to a balanced budget by 2002. That measure, which Republicans hope to finish this week, also faces a veto by Clinton, who says its spending and tax reductions are too steep.

House negotiators tentatively agreed to abandon their demand that the $500 per child income-tax credit apply to families earning up to $200,000 annually, said one participant in the closed-door talks, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Instead, the source said bargainers "basically want the Senate figures," which would limit the break to couples making up to $110,000, and single people making as much as $75,000. That could also help weaken Democrats' argument that the GOP tax cuts would go heavily toward the rich.

Sunday's focus, however, was the veto battle between Clinton and Republicans over short-term borrowing and spending authority.

Gingrich and Dole, who had a short, testy telephone conversation with Clinton on Saturday, spoke of possibly calling the president again on Sunday. Dole even made his television appearance with a portable phone, saying he would be happy to receive a call from Clinton. But as the day wore on, the chances of a conversation between the leaders faded.

SERGEANT LINKED TO KILLING

Israel ignored assassination warning

Dan Perry
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — In the latest evidence of a stunning intelligence failure, the Shin Bet security agency acknowledged Sunday it had advance information about the assassin of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

In a court appearance, the confessed assassin's brother said he received weapons from a sergeant in an elite army unit, who is the seventh detained suspect. The assassin's brother was ordered held for 12 more days.

As the official mourning period ended, more than 200,000 Israelis streamed into newly named Yitzhak Rabin Square in a defiant replay of the peace rally where a Jewish extremist shot down the prime minister eight days before. It was believed to be the biggest gathering ever in Israel.

Even as the square was filled with flags, candles, cardboard doves and signs reading "Enough Death," Israeli troops began pulling out of the West Bank town of Jenin, as provided by the autonomy agreement signed by Rabin and PLO Chief Yasser Arafat in September. The pullout is to be done by today.

In a highly unusual move, the secretive Shin Bet sent a fax to Israel's army radio saying authorities were told of an assassination plot in June by a friend of Yigal Amir, who confessed to gunning down Rabin after the Nov. 4 peace rally. The AP obtained a copy of the fax.

The agency acknowledged that a friend of Amir's, Shlomo Halevy, provided authorities with an accurate description of the assassin after being told of plans to kill Rabin by a mutual friend.

Halevy told his army commander of the plot but did not reveal Amir's name or say he knew him, pretending instead he had overheard two men discussing the plot in a bus station bathroom, the Shin Bet said.

Halevy said one of the plotters was 25, short, black-haired, a member of the militant Jewish group Eyal and a student at Bar Ilan University. Amir fits that description.

Security sources said on condition of anonymity that Halevy's information was turned over to the Shin Bet, but after a superficial check, the agency decided to ignore it.

Theories that Rabin was the victim of a wider conspiracy were also bolstered Sunday when police told a magistrate's court in Tel Aviv they had evidence linking a sergeant in an elite army unit to the assassination.

The detained soldier, an observant Jew, is the seventh suspect in custody. Hagai Amir, Yigal Amir's 27-year-old brother, told the court he received weapons from the soldier, Eric Schwartz, but returned them.

Police said they have arrested Schwartz, but he did not appear in court on Sunday. Police would not say if he would appear today.

Hagai, wearing jeans and a black skullcap, told the court he did not believe his brother really planned to kill Rabin.

He said a cache of weapons found at the Amir house was intended for possible use against Arabs.

Judge Dan Arbel, in agreeing to a police request for extending Hagai Amir's detention for 12 more days, said he believed "there was a conspiracy and an organization" to kill Rabin.

"This was not done by one man," Arbel said.

The sobering revelations were likely to further shake Israel's security services, already widely blamed for failing to protect Rabin.

Four senior Shin Bet officials have lost their jobs. Its director, identified only as C, has offered to resign but was asked by acting Prime Minister Shimon Peres to stay on until a government probe is completed.

Five other people were arrested near Tel Aviv on Sunday when they telephoned police and threatened to kill Peres.

Earlier, generals, Cabinet members and relatives filed past the flower-strewn grave of "Lieutenant General Yitzhak Rabin" at Jerusalem's Mount Herzl cemetery to mark the end of the official seven days of mourning.

Taking the chauvinist pigskin out of coverage

It's no accident that "Murphy Brown" airs on Monday nights at 8. There's a gold mine of female viewers for CBS and NBC on Monday nights because women are a guaranteed non-audience for ABC's "Monday Night Football."

Why don't most women watch "Monday Night Football," or football in general? It could be that women are preconditioned to regard football as a "male" ritual — what Dad and Grandpa watch with cans of Old Style in one hand and the other in their waistbands, while daughters help Mom clean up Thanksgiving dinner. Or perhaps in an age where viewers are so easily led by advertising and promotions, football is marketed and formatted as male domain — beer commercials and near-naked cheerleaders knowingly exclude female viewers.

Whatever the reason, most women are not watching football on Monday nights and ABC would be smart to try to attract some female viewers. But how can they make "Monday Night Football" more attractive to women? It wouldn't take a whole lot to turn football from a chauvinistic ballet of male machismo to an exciting and entertaining program men and women could share together. Here are three easy steps to begin with:

Do What the NBA is Doing

Right now they're running a commercial so brilliant even the condom people who made up "Get Some or Get None" are drooling. They've got Whoop-

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

The feminization of "Monday Night Football" could revolutionize both sexes' concept of the game.

ie Goldberg plugging basketball. Why can't "Monday Night Football" get a positive female role model to plug their sport, or better yet, be a commentator? Granted, ABC would probably lose viewers overall if Kathie Lee team-announced with her husband Frank, but what about a logical choice like Candice Bergen as Murphy Brown? She loves football. Add one of Nicole Brown Simpson's sisters as an announcer and you've got more drama than "Falcon Crest." Or how about Dr. Ruth? She could chatter away about the sexual nuances of the game — penetration, going deep, tight ends. Women would certainly watch that, and Dan Dierdorf might enjoy it, too.

Make the Players More Recognizable

Every time someone makes an important play they always flash a laundry list of statistics next to his picture. Women usually aren't interested in a player's football history, so why not flash their criminal history, too? Women would walk around on Tuesdays saying, "Wow! Did you see that play the wife-beater made!" and "What great blocking by Mr. Caught-with-Steroids!"

Improve the Halftime Show and Then Show It

Right now halftime consists of Frank Gifford, Dan Dierdorf and Al Michaels fighting in schoolboy battle to see who knows more about the entire professional history of each player, coach and team. To keep female viewers they need to air a beefed-up halftime show instead. You can't lose the cheerleaders. Their presence and out-fits are blatantly sexist, but half of "Monday Night Football" male viewers would switch to "Murphy Brown" to watch Corky if the cheerleaders were gone. But ABC could add more male cheerleaders — in Speedos. Though also blatantly sexist, this would keep women glued to the TV with a hot poker, ready to stick anyone who attempted to change the channel.

And once a year they could have a Mr. Football contest where one player from each team parades around the stadium in a sash and relays his personal plans to achieve world peace, while women call in "yes" votes for a swimsuit competition.

"Monday Night Football" is exciting and fast-paced, but the cheerleaders, some of the players and women's preconceptions are discouraging a female audience. With a few minor changes, though, ABC would go right to the top on Monday nights. It would be no "Cagney and Lacey," but there would be sex, violence, crime and drama, and isn't that what we all want from our television?

COGS disappointed by DI coverage

To the Editor:

In the Nov. 9 edition of The Daily Iowan, president-elect Mary Sue Coleman clarified a distorted report that her partner Kenneth was happy to come to Iowa because the Hispanic population is lower here than in New Mexico. President Coleman pointed out the harmful effects of the DI's inaccurate reporting — which insinuated that he was glad to leave the large Hispanic population in New Mexico — on her husband's reputation.

As a Campaign to Organize Graduate Students member who sought to communicate with the graduate student community through the DI, I too can identify with having my words and ideas distorted to the point of utterly contradicting my stated meaning. For example, in the Sept. 6 edition I was paraphrased as saying that despite my optimistic outlook about COGS and a graduate student union, I was worried that certain issues like student loan costs, health care, child care and a student grievance procedure would hinder the formation of a student labor organization. Anyone with common sense would know those are the reasons for having a student labor organization.

But the point is that I and many other COGS members are very disheartened by the poor coverage the DI gives to the issue of a forming graduate student union. Whether graduate students are leaning for or against such a union, the least we can ask for from our campus newspaper is accurate and fair reporting. Only through accurate and fair reporting can a fair and thorough debate on the pros and cons of organizing occur. We at COGS challenge the DI to be part of the process of such a democratic debate.

Now, this is a noble idea. There isn't anything wrong with wanting to help local parents raise well-adjusted, nonviolent children. However, the brain trusts behind this little operation are overlooking one extremely important issue: violent toys are the best kind. They do the most. They are the most fun. They are what kids want. Which do you think an eight-year-old kid would rather receive: a robot that can shoot missiles out of every opening in its body and say "I'm going to rip out your spinal cord and feed it to you for lunch" in 17 different languages, or Candyland?

Who wanted a nonviolent toy when they were growing up? Did Ralphie Parker of "A Christmas Story" want a Chia Pet for Christmas? No way, he wanted a Red Rider Carbon Action Two Hundred Shot Lightning Loader Range Model Air Rifle. If he shot his eye out? Well, an eye patch is a small sacrifice for good, clean, all-American fun. Do you see kids lining up outside of Toys-R-Us waiting to get their hands on the latest erector set? No. They want buzzers and bells and crashes and noise and mayhem.

This isn't anything new. My generation all thought the violent stuff was cool, too; the only difference was our technology wasn't as good. Heaven forbid if there was one of those He-Man inflatable punching bags under the tree. Those things were the best. Dad hated them because he had to sit there and blow the thing up. It would usually take him 20 or 30 minutes and by the time he was done he would be so tired that he'd have to go lie down for the rest of the day. Mom hated them because as soon as Dad finally got the thing blown up, I would throw it around. I'd tackle it and kick it and punch it and spit on it and pull its hair and look for its underwear to give it a wedge.

It was great. No matter what you did to it, it would pop up smiling at you. The only drawback — depending on if you gave it or received it — was they didn't last all that long. I think they were equipped with some sort of self-destruct mechanism; I never had one last for more than a week.

There were other toys, too. Crossbows and Catapults — now that was a pretty cool game. I used to load one of those catapults with 70 or 80 rubber bands and then chase my dog around the house. My room has numerous holes in the dry wall from those little red pellets and my sister still has a scar above her right eye from when she got caught in the cross-fire of a neighborhood turf war.

How about Mr. Microphone? Can you think of anything more horrific than being able to scream over every radio in your house. Awesome.

Then there was Dungeons and Dragons action figures. They came fully armored with their swords and shields, and they would kick the hell out of G.I. Joe because a kung fu grip gets you so far when you're dealing with a guy swinging a battle-ax.

There were dart guns and Nerf arrows and cars with claws on their wheels and blue Thunder Cats with numchucks. It was carnage.

And it wasn't just the boy toys, either. I can't think of anything more violent than the spew that came out of the Easy Bake Oven. I don't know why I thought a German chocolate cake that came out of the package in dust form would be any better once you cooked it under a light bulb, but I did. I was in intensive care for two weeks while doctors removed the better half of my lower intestine just to get that damn cake out of there.

I will admit there are some toys out there, especially the video games, that are truly sick today. However, most toys, even though they may be considered on the rough and tumble side, are harmless. Remember, a violent toy is a fun toy.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

Changing values opened the door for Powell's election, but his decision not to run allows extremists an easy entrance.

cans make up about 10 percent of the population — it wasn't just race that played a factor into Powell's national support. He's a strong person; he is forthright and outspoken, and doesn't play games. The former controversy surrounding politicians simply hasn't come into the picture with Powell. There are no rumors of affairs, scandals or drugs. After touring the country selling his book, his reports are positive and tinged with sadness.

"What I saw and heard renewed my faith in our country, its people and its promise. I also came away with a deeper understanding of the challenges we face, of the problems we must solve to reach the dream of our founders," Powell said during the speech where he announced he would not be running for president.

The speech thrilled many Republicans and relieved numerous Democrats who worried that Powell would take most African-American votes away. Powell's presence in the Republican party made it extremely attractive, especially after Republican representatives such as Pat Buchanan became widely known.

Clearly, Powell's withdrawal has left room for the unpopular extremists, who are given a chance simply because the competition is mediocre. Most of all, he has given Clinton back the wide edge of support among middle-ground Americans. Although his decision disappoints many, he should be applauded. The mere thought of his running has proved what America is capable of, and most of all, where America can go.

Powell has a life to live. His immediate family comes first, as he has said time and again. He recognizes the importance of personal strength, and that in itself gave him political strength. In the brief time he filled many Americans' minds with hope, has taught the nation something.

America is not innocent. It's a nation founded on rebellion and built up through slavery. The past matters. But the future matters more. Powell set a precedent. Perhaps someday it will be continued.

Do you think the UI football team can recover after Saturday's loss?

Gary Blunt, Iowa City resident

"No, because Hayden Fry has lost it — he used to take chances. I went to his old school at the University of North Texas and he used to take chances. We need a new coaching staff."

Jeff Judge, UI sophomore majoring in business management

"I don't know if they can pull it off. The four losses have been real tough for them and they've had a couple they shouldn't have lost. It's got to be rough for them psychologically."

Leanne Cantin, UI junior majoring in psychology

"No. They seem to be giving up on the season. After the second quarter they feel like they're beaten."

Katie Engelhardt, UI freshman majoring in music education

"I hope they can. They need to get their heads back in the game and continue to have a good season."

Fighting averted; Serbs give up land

Julijana Mojsilovic

ERDUT, Croatia — Rebel Serbs agreed Sunday to submit the last of their holdings in Croatia to government authority, resolving a dispute that threatened to derail U.S.-led talks in Ohio on peace for the Balkans.

"This is a historic signing," U.S. Ambassador Peter Galbraith said. "For the first time in this conflict an issue has been solved by a signature and not by a bullet."

The agreement, signed in this Serb-held town in eastern Croatia and witnessed by Galbraith and chief U.N. envoy Thorvald Stoltenberg, also averted the imminent threat of more fighting.

Croatian troops in May and August recaptured most Serb-held territory taken in a 1991 war, sending about 180,000 Croatian Serbs fleeing to Bosnia and Serbia.

Croatia threatened to attack the remaining bit of Serb-held territory, known as eastern Slavonia, if rebels refused to accept the plan for its reintegration.

Such an attack on the territory, which borders Serbia, could have drawn in the Serb-led Yugoslav army, leading to renewed war and a collapse of Bosnian peace talks at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

In a show of force, the Croatian army had moved crack troops and heavy artillery toward the front line over the past few days. Witnesses also reported seeing a large column of Yugoslav army troops and guns headed toward the Croatian border late Saturday night.

"The agreement provides for a peaceful solution," Stoltenberg said. "I generally hope that this will have a contagious effect for the whole area."

The two negotiators later took the agreement to Zagreb, the Croatian capital, where the government's lead negotiator signed for Croatia.

The Croatian government and rebel Serb leaders had agreed Oct. 3 on basic principles for the return of the territory, but remained at odds over how that would be done.

Serbs wanted a three-year transition period and U.N. monitoring. Croatia insisted on no more than one year and wanted a NATO presence, similar to that which would enforce peace in Bosnia.

The agreement calls for a one-year transitional period that can be extended to two if requested by either side. It asks the U.N. Security Council to create an interim administration for the area and deploy troops to maintain peace, but does not specify the composition of those forces.

The 14-point agreement was finalized in Dayton during talks between Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, negotiating on behalf of rebel Serbs in Croatia and Bosnia, sources said.

Hrvoje Sarinic, who signed for the Croats, said the agreement paved the way for "full normalization of relations between Croatia and Serbia." The two have never restored ties broken in the 1991 war.

"Today's agreement was the best we have been offered so far," said chief Serb negotiator Milan Milanovic. "Our conditions were to prevent war and to prevent people from fleeing the area. We asked for U.N. administration and we got it."

The accord also promises human rights will be respected and provides for the return of tens of thousands of Croats who fled eastern Slavonia during the 1991 war.

White House attorney to testify for obtaining Whitewater documents

Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Early in the Whitewater affair, a White House lawyer obtained confidential documents from a key facet of the investigation, hastily returning them after the Justice Department launched a probe to determine how presidential aides used the material.

For five or six days in mid-November 1993, then-Associate White House Counsel Neil Eggleston had a report that detailed a series of defaulted federally backed loans by David Hale, a Little Rock judge who was emerging as a central figure in Whitewater.

The report by the Small Business Administration triggered a criminal investigation of Hale, who was indicted just two months before the White House obtained the information from the SBA, according to documents reviewed by the AP.

At the time, Hale was alleging publicly he had been pressured in 1986 by Clinton, then the Arkansas governor, to make an improper SBA-guaranteed loan of $300,000 to the Clintons' Whitewater partners.

The loan, which was never repaid, is at the heart of Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr's criminal investigation. Hale has since pleaded guilty to federal charges, and is Starr's most important cooperating witness.

A White House source said Sunday that Eggleston's boss, counsel Bernard Nussbaum, started Eggleston down the road to getting the documents, telling his aide to "look into" the fact that the SBA was preparing a report on Hale's company for the chairman of a House committee. Nussbaum's instructions to his aide were "not specific," said the source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

STORM PRODUCES 81 MPH GUSTS

Front spreads power outages, high winds across the nation

Roger Petterson
Associated Press

More than 350,000 customers were without electricity Sunday from North Carolina to Maine after a night of violent weather which included wind gusting to 81 mph, thunderstorms and snow.

"We had lightning while it was snowing," said George Stein, a spokesperson for Potomac Edison Co. in West Virginia.

The stormy weather broke out along a cold front that pushed eastward through the region, followed by some of the arctic air that has dropped temperatures into the single digits and lower across the Upper Midwest.

Record lows Sunday included 15 at South Bend, Ind.; 19 at Jackson, Ky.; 16 at Cincinnati, and a record-tying 41 at Melbourne, Fla. In the core of the cold-air mass, Ely, Minn., had a Sunday morning low of 18 below zero.

The northern end of the cold front continued producing stormy weather Sunday in northern Maine. The southern end of the front had touched off violent storms Saturday in Florida.

The electrical outages were caused by fallen trees and utility poles.

"Trees down over cars, trees down over houses and trees down over power lines," Gregory Hostetter, a sheriff's dispatcher in Rockbridge County, Va., said late Saturday.

But the wind wasn't the only problem. In West Virginia, some trees toppled because Halloween vandals had sawed halfway through their trunks, said Jack Shaver, a spokesperson for Appalachian Power Co.

Wind gusted to 81 mph at Cambridge, Vt., and Boston; 76 mph at Bath, Maine; 70 mph at Massachusetts' Cape Cod and 65 mph at Ocean City, Md. Winds up to 60 mph in southern West Virginia ripped the roof off a mobile home; one woman inside suffered a broken leg.

Up to 4 inches of snow fell in the mountains of West Virginia and about an inch of snow fell across Maryland. Up to 7 inches fell in upstate New York.

JUVENILE ARRESTS MORE THAN DOUBLE

Teens carrying weapons becoming more common

Michael Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nearly one in four people arrested for weapons crimes are juveniles, and weapons offenses are the fastest growing youth crime, the Justice Department reported Sunday.

A study by the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics found that juveniles accounted for 23 percent of all weapons crime arrests in 1993, compared to 16 percent in 1974. Such juvenile arrests more than doubled, from less than 30,000 to more than 61,000 between 1985 and 1993, while adult arrests for these crimes grew by one-third.

Juvenile delinquency cases involving weapons violations grew by 86 percent between 1988 and 1992, more than any other type of juvenile offense.

The weapons crime data track closely the surge in violent youth crimes, which has been widely reported during the last three years.

Weapons offenses include the illegal use, possession, trafficking, carrying, manufacturing, importing or exporting of guns, ammunition, silencers, explosives and some types of knives.

President Clinton said in a statement Sunday the statistics are "a chilling reminder" that juvenile violence is the country's top crime problem. "Now is not the time to weaken our laws," the president said.

Teen-age violence, particularly with guns, has been rising steadily since 1985, even as the number of teen-agers declined. During the next 20 years, the age 14-17 group is expected to grow.

"If the last decade's trends continue unchecked, juvenile arrests for violent crime will double by the year 2010," Attorney General Janet Reno said last week.

The government already has begun to respond to the soaring teen-age gun violence. Last year's crime act made it a federal offense for people under age 18 to own a handgun and provided up to 10 years in prison for anyone providing a handgun to someone under age 18.

Last week, Reno allocated $8 million for six communities to test a variety of ideas for reducing youth violence. Under the crime act, 10 police departments have been allocated $1 million to devise community policing programs designed to curb youth gun crimes.

The administration is asking Congress to override a Supreme Court decision that struck down a law prohibiting people from bringing guns onto school property.

Rep. Charles Schumer of New

"If the last decade's trends continue unchecked, juvenile arrests for violent crime will double by the year 2010."

Attorney General Janet Reno

York, ranking Democrat on the House crime subcommittee, said the figures are "frightening and show government at all levels isn't doing enough."

"Thirty years ago, Americans wouldn't imagine 14-year-olds would have easy access to guns," Schumer said. He supports licensing and registration of gun dealers and owners "so owning a gun is no harder than owning a car." But he said gun-control opponents in the Republican-controlled Congress would defeat such measures.

Instead, he is drafting legislation to require states make public the names of juveniles convicted of felonies involving guns "so the people and the system would know." Those convictions then could be cited as a prior offense if there were later crimes; most juvenile criminal records now are kept secret and can't be used in later adult trials.

Schumer added the new figures should "warn the Congress against repealing prevention measures" in last year's crime act, like increased drug treatment and programs to give kids after-school activities.

The Justice Department study showed weapons violations are overwhelmingly committed by males and proportionately more prevalent among African-Americans than whites.

ALCOHOL STUDY

Part of the reason for the meeting is because of all the incidents that have happened recently — the Garofalo death and the fraternities breaking the alcohol moratorium," Rhodes said.

Garofalo, 19, a UI sophomore, was found dead Sept. 8 in the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house of pulmonary edema, or fluid in the lungs, triggered by excess consumption of alcohol.

The meeting was originally planned for this November, Marner said, but has been changed to January due to scheduling problems with panelists. Participants who will be leading the panel are not finalized yet, she said.

Rhodes said the meeting will spark a brainstorming session in the Iowa City community about what the UI can do about drinking problems.

"We want to bring into focus some of the concerns around alcohol use and create a forum for dealing with them," she said. "Good ideas come from everywhere and we want as many ideas as possible."

Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Service, said alcohol use is a major concern on all college campuses.

"(College) is a time when people are making decisions about what to drink, how much to drink and when to drink," she said. "It's a time when they are drinking alcohol and don't realize how much it puts lives at risk and impairs some decision-making in their lives."

Though drinking habits at the UI were part of a Harvard study on binge drinking — defined as excessive consumption of alcohol once in the past two weeks — researchers plan to discuss results with all the schools participating in the study, said Pat Ketcham, director of Health Iowa.

The Harvard study was published in the December 1994 Journal of the American Medical Association.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

HARKIN

The Daily Iowan Sunday. "Their ideology outran their common sense."

The federal government faces a shutdown at midnight tonight if President Clinton and Congressional Republicans cannot agree on interim spending measures to keep the government running while they work on a budget compromise.

Harkin said Congress, not Clinton, is to blame.

"It is not the president's responsibility to pass legislation to fund the operation of government," he said. "It is clearly the Constitutional responsibility of Congress."

Republicans are guilty of sloppy legislating, Harkin said.

"Only one appropriations bill passed before Sept. 30 (the end of the fiscal year)," he said. "That is not the way to run government."

Harkin addressed a number of other issues in the DI interview:

• College loans — Harkin criticized Republican plans to reduce the number of Pell Grants, while increasing the amount of the Pell Grant award.

"The Pell Grant, over the last dozen years or so, in proportion to the costs of education, has gone down dramatically," he said. "You don't reduce the debt of the United States by increasing the debt of students."

Direct lending, another target of GOP budget cutters, should also be preserved, Harkin said. Direct lending allows students to borrow money for college directly from the federal government, rather than through a lending agency.

"We have not heard from one school that wants to drop out of it," he said. "Not one school in Iowa, not one school nationwide."

Republicans say the program will cost taxpayers $1.5 billion over the next seven years. Harkin, however, disputed their claim.

Republicans had the Congressional Budget Office include administrative costs in its estimates for direct lending, but not for the Guaranteed Student Loan Program, the government's other college loan program, Harkin said.

"They're cooking the books," he said.

• Abortion — The House has approved and a Senate committee will discuss a possible ban on so-called partial-birth abortions. Harkin said he has had a difficult time with this issue.

"When I first heard about this, I thought, 'Oh gosh, somebody's got to draw the line,'" he said.

But then Harkin met a pregnant woman in the Senate lobby.

"She said, 'I found my fetus had terrible genetic defects,'" Harkin said. Her doctor told her the partial-birth abortion was the safest option if she wanted to have children again.

"Now she's pregnant with their third child and is doing well," he said. "What I'm finding out is that people who have this procedure, more often than not, perhaps maybe even bordering 100 percent of the time, are people who want to have children. Thus, we need hearings."

• Israel — Harkin said the assassination of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin may work to unite Israeli moderates against extremist groups.

"I hope that because of what happened that the rhetoric will start to tone down," he said.

Israelis and Palestinians may also grow closer as a result. Harkin said PLO leader Yasser Arafat's visit with Rabin's widow was encouraging.

LIVER TRANSPLANT

father.

Leslie's father, Jim, is also doing fine, Martin said.

"I just took some of his tubes out," she said. "He'll be down to visit to Leslie later today."

Wendy Hancock said her husband slept all Thursday night and was "pretty groggy" Friday morning. The first person Jim asked about when he awoke was "Muffy" (Leslie's nickname), Wendy Hancock said.

Dr. You Min Wu, also a lead surgeon on the transplant team, said Leslie's new liver will grow to normal size.

"Liver regeneration is very quick. In a couple of months, it will be the same size as her native liver," he said.

Martin said cirrhosis probably won't affect Leslie's liver, but the organ may be rejected.

However, in Leslie's case, the chance for rejection is decreased because there is a close match between donor and recipient because of genetics, Martin said.

"She's got half of her father's chromosomes," she said.

The next few months will be crucial for Leslie if liver rejection would occur, Martin said.

"We'll watch her carefully for the next three months," she said. "Most of the time, rejection is controllable with medication."

The transplant was vital due to the many functions the liver, which is the largest organ in the digestive system, Wu said.

"The liver is magical," he said.

The liver makes proteins and clotting factors and digests fat, and is also detoxifies waste, Martin said.

"Obviously, people can't live without their liver," she said.

Martin said living donor transplants are conducted because of the critical shortage in organ donation from people who are brain dead.

"One-third of the children awaiting liver transplants will die for lack of organ donors," Martin said.

A cadaver donor transplant could have been performed in Leslie's case.

"We've done a number of splits where the cadaver donor's liver is divided among an adult and a child," she said.

Martin said for a living organ transplant, however, the donor needs to be someone with emotional involvement with the recipient, as in the case of Jim and Leslie.

"We put two people at risk here," Martin said. "We put a healthy person with nothing to gain at risk."

HIV AND BABIES

But some AIDS activists said doctors may be more reluctant to offer expensive therapy to infected babies today because of growing pressure to cut health costs. Ninety percent of HIV-infected children get their health care from Medicaid.

"A lot of these children live well into their teens" with proper care, said Troy Petinbrink of the National Association of People With AIDS. "That study could turn out to be even more (worrisome) now."

Added Ammann: "It really tells us we've got to get the message out that there is treatment for HIV."

About 25 percent of mothers with the HIV virus infect their babies, and women can cut the risk by two-thirds by taking the drug AZT during pregnancy. Doctors often don't know for several weeks which infants are infected, because babies are born with their mothers' immune cells.

AZT's protective effect was discovered last year, and since 1991 doctors have found new drugs to keep HIV-infected babies healthier.

"One would hope the circumstances really have changed since 1991 and that denying care to any child on this basis would be unacceptable," said Dr. Ken Schonberg of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, a member of the Academy of Pediatrics' AIDS committee.

Regardless, the study "says to pediatricians this is inappropriate, and I would expect mothers who are HIV-positive would have reason for concern and reason to be advocates for their newborns," Schonberg said.

DRUNK BUS

even though the buses only get five miles to the gallon, they have been immensely popular," he said. "Sometimes when we pull up with one cab to the Holiday Inn, people will literally get into fistfights over who would get into the cab."

The cost of the bus's most popular route — from downtown to the residence halls — is $1.50 per person and $1 per minute for a side trip stop. The company also rents out the bus to take customers wherever they want, Knight said.

"We took 55 people to the Phish concert in Des Moines," he said. "You can get stopped by the authorities if you are past capacity and lose your license for overloading."

Driving the bus is entertaining because of the immediate camaraderie between passengers, Knight said.

"It gets really loud — you'll have a full bus of 30 people singing at the top of their lungs; the 'Hey Song' is hummed a lot," he said. "It's better than having kids drive home drunk."

UI senior Jami Engstler said she has a musical favorite she likes to share while riding on the drunk bus.

"The bear went over the mountain, the bear went over the mountain, to see the drunk bus," she sang. "I also like 'Hot Cross Buns,' 'The Itsy Bitsy Spider,' 'B.I.N.G.O.' and 'If You're Happy and You Know It.'"

UI junior Nate Kramer said he preferred the drunk bus to the Cambus, even though he didn't think the 15-year-old-school bus was very cost-effective.

"I haven't been on a school bus in seven years — there's no food being thrown like in high school and no screaming by the bus driver," he said. "I like this better than the Cambus because there aren't any Campus Crusade signs or abortion counseling posters around."

UI freshman Kelly Good said she remembered a wacky bus experience she had in eighth grade.

"I had a bus driver named Steve and one day the students got in a food fight on the bus," she said. "He made me go back to the station and clean up the bus."

Knight said UI students are well-behaved, and so far he hasn't had any problems with tipsy customers.

"Most of the people that take this bus have been drinking, but the UI students have all been a class act," he said. "Once in a while, someone will have to be carried off. We've only had one person puke, when we took the Phi Delt house to a party in Hills — we charged them the $25 clean-up fee."

UI freshman Adam Lewis said the bus has a definite personality, but could use a simple improvement.

"I think the bus needs cup holders on the seats," he said.

Lewis' friend, UI freshman B.M. Scrubbs, said the bus was a wonderful experience and a reason many people come to the UI.

"This is the biggest draw to the University of Iowa," he said. "We need seat belts — I just don't feel the same."

City vs. West postponed

No. 1-ranked Iowa City West High School will face No. 2 Iowa City City High tonight at the UNI-Dome in Cedar Falls, Iowa, in the Iowa state Class 4A football semifinals.

The game was originally slated to take place Saturday at Kinnick Stadium, but was moved and postponed due to weather conditions.

NFL

Oilers appear on the way to Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Local officials and the Houston Oilers are working out some final details, and should be ready early next week to say for certain that the NFL plans to play in the Music City in 1998.

"We hope that we'll be able to sign on Monday and certainly before the Metro Council filing deadline on Tuesday," Nashville negotiator Byron Trauger said Friday.

The $292 million agreement — which includes milestones that extend to March 22, 1996 — must be wrapped up before stadium construction can begin. Trauger said lawyers were still reviewing the agreement.

The NFL, which would be asked to approve the move, declined comment.

Northwestern holds off Iowa

21-year streak comes to an end

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

EVANSTON, Ill. — In a matter of seconds last Saturday, the tide of the Iowa-Northwestern game switched sides ... literally.

With three minutes remaining, unranked Iowa trailed the No. 5 Wildcats by four points, but the Hawkeyes were mounting a final drive downfield that could have put them over the top.

That drive ended in Iowa's end zone, however, when Northwestern defensive back Hudhaifa Ismaeli returned a Derek Price fumble 31 yards for the game-winning touchdown.

Sedrick Shaw breaks Iowa's all-time rushing mark ..... See page 4B

The Wildcats moved to 8-0 in the Big Ten Conference with their 31-20 victory over the Hawkeyes, who dropped to 5-4 with their fourth-consecutive loss.

"(Defensive back Rodney Ray) made a great play. He just put his hat right on the ball and it just came out," Price, a senior tight end, said.

"I wish I had it back. I wish I could do it over."

The loss can't fall on Price's shoulders, though. The drive he fumbled on was Iowa's fifth of the second half; And Iowa failed to score on any of them.

came in the first half, a half in which Iowa held a 14-3 lead at one point and a 20-17 advantage at the break.

Iowa did several things in the first half that it wasn't able to in the second:

• Sedrick Shaw pounded the Northwestern defense for 87 rushing yards and a touchdown.

• Iowa's defense kept the momentum with the Hawkeyes. With the exception of one 56-yard scoring drive, the Wildcats gained only 23 more yards of offense during the first half.

• Most importantly, the Hawkeyes made big plays. Junior defensive back Tom Knight returned an interception 28 yards for a touchdown and senior tight end Scott Slutzker dragged a defender with him for the majority of his 38-yard touchdown reception.

In the end, it was Northwestern that made the big plays it needed

Field hockey season comes to abrupt end

Chris James

The cardiac kids couldn't be revived this time.

The Iowa field hockey team, known all year for making dramatic comebacks, fell behind one time too many as the Hawkeyes dropped a heart-breaking 1-0 decision to Northeastern in the second round of the NCAA tournament.

Hawkeye coach Beth Beglin said Iowa's inability to put two consistent halves together finally caught up with her team.

"This has been a problem for us all year long so it comes as no surprise," Beglin said. "What's so bitterly disappointing is that you come this far and get done in by something that you've worked so hard to overcome."

At a snow surrounded Grant Field, Northeastern put the only goal of the game on the board when the Huskies' Keri Bettenhauser scored off a direct corner with 6:49 left in the first half. Hawkeye goalkeeper Lisa Cellucci said it was tougher shot to defend than nor-

From 'Think Big' to must wins

EVANSTON, Ill. — Before the 1995 Iowa football spring game, Iowa announced its slogan for the upcoming season — Think Big! In college football, that can mean only one thing, reaching a postseason bowl game.

Seven months after they began thinking big, the Hawkeyes are now simply trying to salvage their season.

The Hawkeyes started the season 5-0, putting themselves in position to go to a quality bowl game, but a four-game losing streak has left them scrambling to reach the seven wins necessary to qualify and the idea of not reaching a bowl game is coming closer to reality.

On Saturday, the Hawkeyes fell to Northwestern in a game that did a lot of things to Iowa, one of which was putting them in an unfavorable position to reach a bowl.

The Hawkeyes may have lost to the No. 5 team in the nation, but Iowa did not come into the game with the belief that they would lose. Not only did the Hawkeyes want to win at this point in the season, they did not want to lose to Northwestern.

When Iowa played Ohio State, then the No. 5 team in the nation, the Hawkeyes knew they were outmanned, but Iowa thought they

HAWKEYE BASKETBALL

Redshirt freshman offers Iowa a lift

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

For the first 32 minutes Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, Iowa found itself tangled in a battle with the Republic of Georgia.

Then Kent McCausland took over.

With the talent-laden offense the men's basketball team possesses, McCausland, a redshirt freshman playing his first game, seemed an odd source to lead the Hawkeyes in their 82-59 victory.

Not only was the Waterloo native the catalyst for a second-half run, scoring 15 of his game-high 26 points down the stretch, but he dwarfed his teammates by scoring 12 more than the next-closest Hawkeye, forward Russ Millard.

"I can't explain what I'm feeling right now," McCausland said. "It's Hawkeye heaven, I guess."

Georgia, a team that lost to Wisconsin and Minnesota last week by a combined 89 points, trailed Iowa by just four points with 8:49 remaining in the second half. Iowa coach Tom Davis called a timeout after Georgia point guard David Tortladze cut the lead to 53-49.

"With all the hype that's been going on, I think we're excited to play the bigger opponent," McCausland said. "Maybe we weren't as ready to play today as we might have been."

Joseph Strathman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa forward Jess Settles (left) and guard Kent McCausland trap Republic of Georgia point guard David Tortladze Sunday

After the timeout, Settles put in layup, then cashed in on some free throws after a technical foul was called on an arguing Tortladze.

The next time down, Iowa guard Andre Woolridge dished off to forward Kenyon Murray, who went in for the dunk. After a basket by Woolridge and a three-pointer by McCausland, Georgia called a timeout out of its own, devastated by a 13-point Iowa run.

However, Georgia's timeout proved futile as McCausland hit two more three-pointers and sophomore Ryan Bowen scored on a breakaway to give Iowa the 78-51 advantage.

had a good shot at beating Northwestern. The thought of losing never came up.

Four plays defined the reason the Hawkeyes lost on Saturday.

The first play was when Northwestern faced a fourth-and-two from the Iowa 21-yard line with under seven minutes remaining in the first half.

Trailing 14-3, Northwestern needed a big play. Their crowd was beginning to lose interest in the game. The student section had gone from throwing snow balls at the Iowa players to throwing them at their own band.

After a timeout, Northwestern decided not to kick the field goal, but to go for the first down. If Iowa would have stopped the Wildcats, the Hawkeyes would have the ball back and a with a convincing 14-3 lead, a chance to score and take Northwestern's crowd completely out of the game.

But Steve Schnur connected with tight end Darren Drexler across the middle for not only the first down, but a touchdown.

The second play was Brian Musso's 60-yard punt return a minute

NFL ROUNDUP

Wounded Niners dispose of Dallas

Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

No Young. No Deion. No problem for the San Francisco 49ers.

With Steve Young on the 49ers sideline with an injured shoulder and Deion Sanders playing for Dallas these days, the Super Bowl champions awoke from a month-long snooze Sunday and walloped the Cowboys 38-20.

After losing two straight — to Carolina and New Orleans — the 49ers (6-4) put the Cowboys away in the first five minutes before a stunned Texas Stadium crowd of 65,180.

To add injury to insult, Troy Aikman was knocked out of the game in the first quarter with a bruised left knee, and the crowd booed the Cowboys (8-2) for trailing 31-7 at the half. Even Sanders was no factor.

"This kind of game symbolizes the kind of team we are," 49ers linebacker Ken Norton said. "We're still the world champions. Dallas got caught up reading its press clippings and listening to the experts."

The 49ers wasted no time in taking control, with Jerry Rice and Elvis Grbac hooking up for an 81-yard touchdown on the second play of the game.

Thirteen seconds later, Merton Hanks picked up a fumble by Michael Irvin and returned it 38 yards for a score.

On the next series, Rickey Jordan intercepted to set up Jeff Wilkins' 26-yard field goal 4:58 into the game.

Dana Stubblefield then sacked Aikman and the NFL's top-rated quarterback was replaced by Wade Wilson.

And just like that, the 49ers are back in the Super Bowl hunt, tied with Atlanta and St. Louis atop the NFC West.

In other games, it was: Kansas City 22, San Diego 7; Minnesota 30, Arizona 24 in overtime; New Orleans 17, Indianapolis 14; Oakland 17, New York Giants 13; Buffalo 23, Atlanta 17; New England

Associated Press

Chicago's Ryan Wetnight sits on the field while the Packers celebrate a late interception Sunday.

34, Miami 17; Cincinnati 32, Houston 25; Seattle 47, Jacksonville 30; St. Louis 28, Carolina 17; and Detroit 27, Tampa Bay 24.

49ers 38, Cowboys 20

At Irving, Texas, Elvis Grbac hit on 20 of 30 for 305 yards and two TDs and also ran for a score, while Rice had five catches for 161 yards.

For Dallas, Emmitt Smith ran for 100 yards on 18 carries, but Irvin failed in his quest to set an NFL record with an eighth consecutive 100-yard receiving game, catching four passes for 37 yards.

Chiefs 22, Chargers 7

At San Diego, the Chiefs (9-1), behind Steve Bono and Marcus Allen, now have the NFL's best record to themselves. Allen scored from a yard out with 6:16 to play, while Bono was 17 of 27 for 137 yards and ran for a TD.

The Chargers (4-6) lost for the second time in five weeks to Kansas City.

Vikings 30, Cardinals 24, OT

At Tempe, Ariz., Warren Moon threw a 50-yard TD, his fourth of the game, to Qadry Ismail 2:16 into OT to lift Minnesota (5-5), now 2-2 in overtime games this season. Moon completed 24 of 43 passes for 342 yards.

Packers 35, Bears 28

At Green Bay, Wis., Brett Favre threw a career-best five TD passes and the Packers held Erik Kramer out of the end zone in a drive that stalled at the 14 as time expired. The Bears and Packers are tied for first in the NFC Central with 6-4 records.

Favre, extending his NFL-leading streak to 55 consecutive starts, completed 25 of 33 passes for 336 yards and had TD tosses of 17, 29, 1, 44 and 16 yards. His 16-yarder to Edgar Bennett — the running back's second TD reception — came with 9:17 left and proved to be the winning score. Erik Kramer was 23 of 38 for 318 yards and two TD passes for the Bears.

Saints 17, Colts 14

At New Orleans, Jim Everett threw for 228 yards and two TDs as the Saints (4-6) won for the fourth time in their last five games after an 0-5 start.

The Saints barely held on, as Jim Harbaugh, replacing the injured Paul Justin, got called for an illegal pass on an 18-yard pass that would have put the ball on the Saints 1 with 1:11 left. Cary Blanchard's subsequent 41-yard field goal attempt was wide left with 13 seconds left.

Raiders 17, Giants 13

At East Rutherford, N.Y., Jeff Hostetler withstood 35 mph winds in leading Oakland (8-2) past his former teammates. Harvey Williams capped a long against-the-wind drive with a 6-yard TD run with 6:52 left.

The Giants (3-7) took a 13-10 lead on Dave Brown's 11-yard draw in the third quarter. Hostetler was 13 of 19 for 152 yards.

Bills 23, Falcons 17

At Orchard Park, N.Y., Buffalo (7-3) took over first place in the AFC East in coach Marv Levy's first game back since undergoing cancer treatment.

Jim Kelly completed 22 of 36 passes for 272 yards and two TDs to Bill Brooks. Rookie Darick Holmes, backing up Thurman Thomas, gained 100 yards on 23 carries. Thomas gained 66 yards on 17 carries in his first game since returning from a hamstring injury.

Patriots 34, Dolphins 17

At Miami, Marino threw for 333 yards and broke Fran Tarkenton's record, but Ben Coates caught a pass deflected by a teammate for the tie-breaking score to help New England (4-6) to its first win at Joe Robbie Stadium since 1988. Patriots rookie Curtis Martin rushed for 142 yards and two touchdowns and Drew Bledsoe had two TD passes.

Marino completed 27 of 37 passes and threw for two scores, but was intercepted twice and lost a fumble. He broke Tarkenton's record by completing a 9-yard pass to Irving Fryar four minutes into the game. Marino has thrown for 47,299 yards in 13 seasons. Tarkenton threw for 47,003 yards in 18 years.

Bengals 32, Oilers 25

At Houston, Jeff Blake threw two TD passes to Carl Pickens and Cincinnati (4-6) — with the NFL's worst defense — forced four turnovers and had four sacks. Pickens now has a club single-season record of 12 TD catches, while Blake extended his team mark of TD passes to 17 consecutive games. The Oilers (4-6) lost quarterback Chris Chandler in the third quarter with a leg injury.

Seahawks 47, Jaguars 30

At Jacksonville, Fla., Joey Gallowsay ran a team-record 86 yards for a score and caught TD passes of 38 and 23 yards from Rick Mirer as Seattle (4-6) had its highest point total in 10 years. Galloway finished with 5 catches for 114 yards. Chris Warren added 121 yards on 27 carries.

Rams 28, Panthers 17

At St. Louis, the Rams forced six turnovers and Isaac Bruce had his sixth straight 100-yard receiving game as the team successfully christened the Trans World Dome at the expense of Carolina (4-6).

The Rams, who had lost three in a row, ended the Panthers' four-game win streak. Carolina's Kerry Collins was picked off four times and lost two fumbles — one that was returned 26 yards for a score by Torin Dorn. Chris Miller was 19 of 32 for 216 yards and two TDs.

Lions 27, Buccaneers 24

At Pontiac, Mich., Willie Clay had two interceptions as Detroit (4-6) gave coach Wayne Fontes another week of job security. Brett Perriman (10 catches for 125 yards) made a diving catch for a 37-yard gain to the Tampa Bay 1 to set up Scott Mitchell's TD with 5:21 left.

Mitchell was 21 of 34 for 260 yards and one TD. Trent Diller (8 of 13 for 142 yards) was hit in throat in the fourth quarter and replaced by Casey Weldon (9 of 16 for 108 yards). Barry Sanders had 19 carries for 92 yards, including a 55-yard TD.

Eagles 31, Broncos 13

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Eagles delivered a knockout punch to John Elway and the Denver Broncos couldn't get off the ground.

Rodney Peete ran for a touchdown and threw another, and Ricky Watters had two short touchdown runs as the Eagles beat the Broncos 31-13 Sunday night after Elway missed most of the game's final three quarters with a concussion.

Men's swim team devours Wisconsin to remain undefeated

The Iowa men's swimming team still refuses to lose.

Saturday, the Hawkeyes defeated Wisconsin, 124.5 to 118.5, in Madison, to move their record to 2-0 on the young season.

"We were very pleased," Iowa coach Glenn Patton said. "We swam an aggressive meet."

Once again it was the divers that paced the Hawkeyes. Vico Hidalgo, Jesus Gil and Jeff Stein swept both the one-meter and three-meter events for the second time this season, this time on the road.

"Divers using someone else's diving board is like a pole vaulter using someone else's pole vault," said Patton on his divers' impressive performance on the road.

Hidalgo won the one-meter event, with Gil finishing second. The two swapped finishes on the three-meter board.

Iowa sealed the victory when Marco Minnone and Todd Harvey finished first and second respectively in the final individual event of the evening, the 200 breaststroke.

"We expected the meet to come down to the last relay, but we got an unpredicted one-two finish in the 200 breaststroke," said Patton.

Iowa recorded a total of seven first-place finishes. Jory Blauer, Minnone, Brian Brinkley and Tim Schnulle won the 400 medley relay in a time of 3:29.01.

Minnone won the 200 individual medley to go along with his breaststroke victory. Schnulle placed first in the 100 freestyle. Marc River won the 50 freestyle.

Women's swimming team falls to Badgers

The Iowa women's swimming team put up a strong fight, but was unable to come up victorious in Saturday's meet at No. 25 Wisconsin, falling 144-92.

Iowa was led by senior Rachel Bayster, who finished second in the 200 individual medley in 2:12.91. Last weekend against Indiana, Bayster finished second in the 400 individual medley.

Additional strong performances were turned in by freshman Jessica Knippenberg, who finished second in the 100 freestyle at :54.19, her personal best, and classmate Kara Schmitz, who finished third in the 100 freestyle at :54.76.

Wisconsin allowed Iowa two first-place finishes on the evening. Junior Sonja Statham took first in the 200 meter breaststroke and the team took first in the 400 meter freestyle relay.

"I'm pretty happy, considering the competition," head coach Patricia Meyer said. "We had some solid performances for this time of season. What we need to do is get in the water and get some more good workouts in."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Iowa will head to Michigan this week, taking on the No. 2 Wolverines at Ann Arbor on Thursday, and then traveling to East Lansing to battle with Michigan State on Friday.

Snowstorm hampers men's cross country

Last weekends' Midwestern snowstorm not only slowed motorists, but also slowed the Iowa men's cross country team.

Following Saturday's postponement of the NCAA district meet, Iowa finished a disappointing 14th place with 387 points on Sunday.

The meet was postponed just 30 minutes before its beginning on Saturday, leaving runners warmed up with nowhere to go.

"We were a little disappointed about the postponement because we were pumped up and ready to race," sophomore Mike Bakker said. "The weather didn't give any team an advantage though, because it affected everybody the same."

Iowa came out strong on Sunday, placing Bakker and sophomore Jared Pittman in the top 10. Things fell apart shortly after that though, with Bakker being the top Iowa finisher in 55th place in 32:46.

"I'm very disappointed with our performance," Bakker said. "We didn't fight as hard as we could."

We were counting on a great performance from our team and didn't even come close."

Stetson Steele, who had led Iowa in every meet this season, came in 69th place in 33:01 to end his freshman campaign, while Pittman struggled, finishing 129th in 34:01.

"Stetson really did a great job for us this year, but Jared is the big factor to this team," Bakker said. "We need him to be up there next year if we're going to do well."

Volleyball drops two more conference games

The Iowa volleyball team fell twice over the weekend to rival Big Ten teams. Friday, Indiana stopped Iowa in four games, 15-4, 15-9, 2-15, 15-9. Saturday, Illinois whipped the Hawkeyes 15-10, 15-10, 15-1.

The Illini (18-7, 9-7) used a powerful three-player attack to pull away from Iowa. Three Illinois hitters combined for 53 kills. The Hawkeyes had 46 kills as a team.

"We were hitting very poorly," senior Tiffany McDaniel said. "We just had so many errors."

Offensively, the Hawkeyes were led by junior Jennifer Webb. Webb nailed 16 kills on 33 attempts while finishing with a hitting percentage of .273. Jennifer Bell finished right behind Webb with 15 kills.

Bell led the Hawkeyes with eight digs on the defensive end, while Webb added five.

Senior Lisa Dockray raised her career assists total to 4,582 with 37 against Illinois.

On Friday, the Hoosiers (18-11, 10-6) won their third straight with the win over Iowa.

Bell came through with a fantastic match, finishing with a match-high 18 kills.

Her hitting percentage was a solid .231. Webb came through with 15 more kills.

"(Bell) is a great hitter," McDaniel said. "Sometimes she hasn't been found enough. I think she needs to be set to more often."

Heather Calomese was a defensive stopper, finishing with a match-high 13 digs. Webb added 11, while Dockray had 10 and 42 assists.

McDaniel said the Hawkeyes were lacking some fire for their match other than the third game.

"Sometimes we play with a lack of confidence and a lack of heart," McDaniel said.

The Hawkeyes return home for two matches against Northwestern and Purdue Nov. 17 and 18. Iowa has lost seven-straight matches with its last win coming against the Boilermakers Oct. 20.

GAME NOTES

Shaw reaches milestone

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Late in the first quarter on Saturday, Sedrick Shaw broke for his longest run of the day, a 14-yard scamper across mid-field at Dyche Stadium.

After the run, Shaw did nothing out of the ordinary. No accolades were given. Play was not stopped.

But with that run, a year of attention and a year of questions finally came to an end. Shaw was now the all-time leading rusher in Iowa football history.

"I'm not really concerned with that record," Shaw said after the game, continuing with the attitude he has taken all year.

The run came in the middle of a 17-play drive in which Shaw ran the ball 14 times for 55 yards, including a one-yard touchdown run.

He said maybe sometime down the road, it will mean a little more to him than it does now.

"Right now, I'm worried about the season. I'm not worried about anything else," Shaw said.

Hawks suffer more injuries

The Hawkeyes suffered injuries to three key players in the game on Saturday.

Rodney Filer injured his knee on the first play of the game.

"We don't know results of how bad it is, but it is bad," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said.

Eric Hilgenberg broke a bone in his leg and will be out for the rest of the season and Ross Verba reinjured his bad ankle.

Also, defensive back Plez Atkins sat out Saturday for an unspecified reason.

Tavian Banks, who sprained his wrist in the Penn State game, said he will be back next week against Wisconsin.

Wildcats end dominance

Despite already beating Notre Dame, Penn State and Michigan, a victory over Iowa has special meaning to Northwestern coach Gary Barnett.

"When we started here, I said that if we beat Iowa, I'd feel like we turned this corner, and I feel that way," Barnett said. "I wish it hadn't been so hard to win ... I thought I could appreciate it more. Maybe tomorrow, I'll look back at it and understand it a little better."

Earlier in the week, Barnett said he modeled his program after that of Hayden Fry four years ago when he took over the head coaching job at Northwestern.

Barnett was also surprised that his team was not more enthused by the win.

"There wasn't that much jubilation," Barnett said. "I think our team has gotten to that point where we just don't want to experience losing. It isn't a kick out of winning so much as it is we just don't ever want to lose."

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Sedrick Shaw dives over the pile of Northwestern defenders Sunday.

Bromert misses

Iowa kicker Zach Bromert missed his first kick as a Hawkeye on Saturday.

Due to a high snap, Bromert missed the extra point on the Hawkeyes' final touchdown of the game. He is now 22-of-23 on conversions and four-of-four on field goals.

especially at the end of the game like that."

While the offense sputtered in the second half, the defense continued to keep Iowa in the game. The Hawkeye 'D' only gave up 17 points all day and held Heisman Trophy candidate Darnell Autry to just 110 yards.

Redshirt freshman linebacker Vernon Rollins had the best game of his short career with the Hawkeyes, tallying 16 tackles in the loss.

With the victory, Northwestern ended 21 years of Iowa dominance. The Wildcats defeated the Hawkeyes for the first time since 1973.

But victory didn't invoke too much enthusiasm in Northwestern's fourth-year head coach, Gary Barnett.

"When we started here, I said that if we beat Iowa, I'd feel like we'd turned this corner," Barnett said. "And I feel that way, but I wish it hadn't been so hard to win because I've got a headache."

Fry was glad Iowa made it difficult for the Wildcats. He believes Iowa played well enough to upset Northwestern and he also believes Iowa can pull out of its slump before it's too late.

"We lost three straight before today and, hell, they played lights out," Fry said of his team. "We've got a lot of pride and a lot of character on this team. They'll be ready for Wisconsin and Minnesota."

GAME STORY

to win. The fumble, of course, was one of them. The other came in the first half.

Sophomore Adrian Autry returned a punt 60 yards for a touchdown late in the half, putting the Wildcats up 17-14. Iowa was able to score right after that, but the Wildcats kept the momentum, also scoring on their next drive, which opened the second half.

"We threw the ball better, we ran the ball better and we had two plays that they scored on and that's the difference in the ball game," Fry said. "We've improved a lot. I'm sure that Northwestern would tell you that we've improved because we played as hard as we could play today."

'Ace Ventura' hits potty shots

Nathan Groepper
The Daily Iowan

Though Jim Carrey now commands up to $20 million per film, he still can't bring "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" out of the toilet.

When the first "Ace Ventura" opened, Jim Carrey was a relatively unknown comedian. After a string of box office smashes such as "The Mask" and "Dumb and Dumber," Carrey brings unique and Chaplin-esque humor to most of his projects.

He attempted to work his magic in "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls," a sequel to the film which elevated his name to household status. This time, however, his touch is far from golden. Simply, this is one of the worst films I have seen in a long time.

The quirky charm of Carrey's character has been left out, opting instead for an increase in toilet humor. The result is likened to being trapped at a party next to the guy with a lamp shade on his head.

"Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" finds the world's greatest pet detective attempting to rescue a raccoon from the cliffs of a treacherous mountainside. When his efforts fail, Ventura decides to retire and live with spiritualists in a temple in Tibet.

Destiny comes a-calling from a sweaty Englishman who hires Ace to help find the missing sacred animal of the Wachati nation in Africa. Ventura proceeds to comb the Wachati village and its surroundings, eventually leading him into many ridiculous sequences, full of bargain-basement villains.

The main problem with "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" is that the film includes no likable-ness to carry Ventura's juvenile antics. In the original film, we cheered for the underdog Ventura as he poked fun at society. We wanted to see Ace solve the case. In

The film's supposed comedy comes from endless scenes involving things such as genitals, butts and spitting. An example takes place in an early sequence, in which Ventura spots a baby bird on his way up the side of a mountain. After determining the bird is hungry, Ventura regurgitates food, just as a mother bird would for her offspring. Unfortunately, the movie is filled with weak sequences such as this one.

Carrey tries his hardest to make the poor script work. He energetically contorts his face and body all over the screen. This time, his hard work doesn't pay off. His physical comedy hits the viewer over the head, forcing them to laugh, instead of using some of the subtle replies and facial expressions present in the first film.

Put all of these pieces together, and the product is disappointing. "When Nature Calls" fits the appropriate reference.

this film, Ace Ventura pukes and spits his way through one uninteresting scene after another.

The film often relies on this toilet humor, which includes jokes about body parts and their functions.

STYLE TRANSLATES TO MODERN ERA

Pulitzer-winning poet to share chosen prose

The Daily Iowan

Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and renowned teacher Donald Justice will read tonight at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., at 8.

Justice will read mostly from his recently published "New & Selected Poems," which includes selections from "The Summer Anniversaries," "Night Light," "Departures," "Selected Poems," "The Sunset Maker," "A Donald Justice Reader" and fifteen new poems. Justice received the Pulitzer Prize for "Selected Poems" in 1979.

The new poems, like the previous poems, continue to use remembered scenes — many from the pre-1950s Florida of Justice's youth — as their points of departure. The poems are also grounded in forms which pressure revelation from the specific scene giving rise to the poem. This simultaneously caps the scene and opens it into portable thinking, useful outside the specific scene occasioning the poem.

Even poems arguably in the present gain their motion from the past. The poem, "Invitation to a Ghost," does this doubly by asking "you to come back now as you were in youth" to "Whisper to me some beautiful secret that you remember from life."

The new poems also echo a preoccupation (illuminated in "The Sunset Maker" and "A Donald Justice Reader") with Justice's early lessons in arts other than poetry; he was a pianist and a composition pupil of American serial-melodist composer Carl Ruggles, who taught at the University of Miami in the 1940s.

Recently retired from teaching at the University of Florida, Justice lives in Iowa City.

SINGER GRASPS GOSPEL ROOTS

'Soul Man' digs deep

Heavy-handed Blues melodies tug heart strings

Todd Norden

The Daily Iowan

Otis Clay's Soul Man: Live in Japan is of fashioned gutsy, gritty, get-down soul.

The CD's material is taken from a 1983 Tokyo concert. Clay's raw vocal power holds to '60s luminaries Al Green and Otis Redding.

"Classy, genuine R&B are found in the tracks "Here I Am (Come And Take Me)" and "Holding On To A Dying Love." Clay's pleas to his woman in "Holding On To A Dying Love" are heart-breaking and real. In a music industry which hypes Snoop Doggy Dogg and Nine Inch Nails, it's refreshing to find that diamonds in the rough still exist.

"Precious, Precious" is a sweet, slow-dancing number that demands a partner. Note also the scintillating organ solo by Charles Hodges.

"Love Don't Love Nobody" is a ballad textured with an old Wurlitzer gospel flavor. "His Precious Love" is another gospel standout in early Motown fashion. Convincing and moving, this song could rouse an atheist to shout hallelujah to the heavens.

"Hard Working Woman" is milky smooth with a tight sassy brass layered on top. The closing medley "Love And Happiness/Soul Man" demonstrates that Clay's band is tight enough to dance to and loose enough to allow improvisation as the CD comes to a rollicking close. As Clay persistently inquires "Have you got soul this ev'nin'?"

The audience could only have one reply. Damn right.

Native Americans display culture and art

This week the Bureau of Indigenous Artists and Perpetual Savings Bank are celebrating the arts of Native Americans.

Thomas Berryhill, a Muskogee traditionalist, will speak on "Muskogee Art, Spirituality and Culture," tonight in the Iowa Room of the Union at 7.

Other events throughout the week present different works and issues pertaining to indigenous peoples, both native to the Iowa area and other regions throughout the United States, Canada and South America.

An art exhibit featuring Janice Tiger Berryhill, of the Muskogee nation, Steve Thunder McGuire, a member of the Cherokee-Seminole nation, Justin Data, from the Mohawk nation, and a display of Lakota Star Quilts will be on display at Perpetual Bank, 301 N. Clinton St., daily from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Other events include: Muskogee Joy Harjo reading at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., on Wednesday at 8 p.m. and an "Open Mike" readings and storytelling by various members of the UI Native American community at the International Student Lounge at 7 p.m. on Friday.
