PERFECT PLACE FOR PORK: Park Avenue BBQ and Grille spare and babyback ribs are not only worthy of mention in the same thought as my hometown, St. Louis, they're worthy of comparison — although they still fall short on sheer principle. The meat on Park Avenue's is not only tender, but plentiful and gushing with smoky flavor and high in quality.

Local VA employees could be sent home

Cary Jordan
The Daily Iowan

The Veterans Affairs Medical Center will be one of the major local casualties in the wake of a government shutdown, with many VA staffers temporarily out of work, and many more required to work — without pay. About 130 members of the VA Medical Center staff will report to work today at 8 a.m., and might just be told to turn around and go home, said John Winters, medical administrative officer of the VA. At the same time, between 800 and 900 additional staff members will be required to work without receiving pay. Winters said the only ones who will stay to work at the medical center are those who are necessary for the basic functions of the hospital, which is located on Highway 6 West. "Obviously the VA can't just shut down," Winters said. "We have to remain open, even during the government shutdown. We can't just deny

Who's essential

Up to 800,000 federal workers would stay home in a government shutdown. Those deemed "essential" would work, but would be paid only after a spending bill passes. What Americans can expect.

Essential

In the air

Air-traffic controllers will be on the job as usual.

Non-essential

Good luck getting off the ground: Passport offices will only accept emergency cases.

In the kitchen

Meat and poultry inspectors will be working.

You might not be able to stock the kitchen if you're relying on government aid. New food stamp recipients won't be accepted.

For veterans

Hospitals will remain staffed.

No veterans will be added to the compensation rolls.

Justice for all?

Criminal investigations will continue.

Most civil cases will be postponed.

Passing time

Federal prison guards remain on the job.

Recreation grounds to a halt: national parks, monuments won't be staffed. And no White House tours.

To your health

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention will run health inspections of cruise ships that dock in U.S. ports.

But the group's system for tracking flu cases will shut down.

U.S. government likely to shut down

Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton and Republican congressional leaders failed to reach an agreement in late-night talks Monday to avert a government shutdown just hours away.

Clinton met with lawmakers for an hour and 40 minutes in the Cabinet Room at the request of GOP leaders. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said they "went around and around but we don't have an agreement."

Dole said the talks would continue this morning, with White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta meeting with House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich and his Senate counterpart, Pete Domenici.

It was not immediately clear how the talks would affect plans to shut down much of the government because of the expiration of most of its spending authority at midnight Monday.

Federal employees were told to report to work as scheduled this morning and might not be sent home if budget talks are promising.

UI alcohol policy: It's up to coaches

Kingsbury punishment still up in air

Melanie Mesaros
The Daily Iowan

UI basketball player Chris Kingsbury was allowed to practice Monday after being withheld from Sunday's exhibition game against the Republic of Georgia, due to his arrest early Friday morning for public intoxication.

Police responded to a report that someone was urinating in the lobby of the downtown Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St., around 2:37 a.m. Friday. Kingsbury was with a group of people who were reportedly causing the disturbance. Kingsbury pleaded guilty to the public intoxication charge later on Friday.

However, Head Coach Tom Davis said he and Kingsbury would meet after practice to discuss Kingsbury's status for Wednesday's game against Marathon Oil, and a final decision on punishment won't be made until Wednesday draws closer.

"He'll either dress or he won't," Davis said. "There's some stuff as a staff we need to look into. Until that time, there will be no big announcement."

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for University Relations, said that although there's no UI policy on alcohol use by athletes, there is a policy if an athlete is arrested due to substance abuse. The athlete who is arrested must visit with a counselor, who decides if a treatment plan or other further action needs to be taken, Rhodes said.

Rhodes said there isn't an overall alcohol-use policy because circumstances tend to be different with different sports.

"I'm not sure it makes sense to have an all-across-the-board rule," Rhodes said. "There is a uniform

Regents to analyze minority enrollment

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

It will be a case of good news and bad news when the Iowa state Board of Regents reviews UI minority enrollment at Wednesday's meeting in Ames.

The good news: For the first time ever, Hispanic and African-American dropout rates are as low as the rate for whites. Only 15.7 percent of Hispanic and African-American students of the entering class of 1994 left college during their first year. White students dropped out at a rate of 16.3 percent.

The bad news: Four-year graduation rates still differ dramatically. Thirty to 35 percent of white students are graduating in four years. Less than 10 percent of African-Americans receive diplomas in the traditional four-year period.

While regents were pleased with UI efforts to retain minority students, they said differing graduation rates are a matter of concern.

Regent John Tyrrell said while the UI is doing a good job in helping minority students adjust to the university environment,

I.C. physicians unnerved by poll on AIDS babies

Stacy Forrest
The Daily Iowan

The results of a nationwide survey taken of 951 neonatologists on the care of babies with HIV-infected mothers have shocked and confused some UIHC doctors and Iowa City AIDS educators.

The study said the doctors would recommend withholding expensive medical care from babies born to HIV-infected mothers, even when they didn't know if the baby had AIDS. Most babies born to HIV-infected mothers do not develop the virus.

Candy bar lowers cholesterol — in 2 flavors

Daniel Haney
Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Here's some health news you may find a little hard to swallow: a cholesterol-lowering candy bar.

The Cardiobar, as it's called, is not on the market yet, but its inventors at the University of Massachusetts say it — or something like it — could have a powerful effect on people's cholesterol.

The recipe doesn't sound like anything Grandma might have considered. Each bar contains gum from the guar plant, soy protein and a variety of rice bran oil — ingredients thought to have a good effect on cholesterol levels.

Dr. Robert Nicolosi and colleagues worked out the ingredients and had the bars made by Ross-Abbott Labs in Columbus, Ohio, which helped pay to test them.

The bars were fed to 35 men and women whose cholesterol levels averaged a moderately elevated 263. Volunteers who ate two a day lowered their cholesterol an impressive 33 points on average.

It is still unclear when the bars will hit the market and how much they will cost.

Nicolosi was a little vague about how they taste. He said the bars come in chocolate and raspberry, but they still need work.

"If it doesn't taste good, people won't take it, no matter how healthy it is," he said.

Nicolosi outlined the results Monday at the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart Association.

Until recently, all the emphasis in heart-healthy eating has been on cutting out the bad stuff, largely saturated fat and cholesterol-laden food. These diets clearly can lower cholesterol in the blood.

But they often do so at the expense of high-

"What we are looking for is a health bar that you would substitute for a meal. We would not want people to think they can eat whatever they want and then have a couple of these candy bars."

density lipoprotein cholesterol — HDL — the so-called good cholesterol.

Now scientists are looking for foods which can be added to a low-fat diet so they work better without sacrificing HDL.

Volunteers who tested the Cardiobars were first put on a strict low-fat diet, then given two batches of candy bars and told to eat two a day.

Some were genuine Cardiobars. The rest were look-alikes made from less beneficial varieties of fiber, protein and oil. No one knew at the time who got what.

But all eventually ate both types so doctors could compare the effects of both snacks in each volunteer.

The result: Their cholesterol levels fell 33 points when they ate Cardiobars, but there was no significant change when they ate the impostor bars.

Moreover, the only kind of cholesterol that went down was their bad low-density lipoprotein cholesterol, the LDL. Their HDL levels did not change.

Each bar has 200 calories, although the researchers are working on 100-calorie varieties.

"What we are looking for is a health bar that you would substitute for a meal," Nicolosi said. "We would not want people to think they can eat whatever they want and then have a couple of these candy bars."

Indeed, they don't have to be candy bars at all. Nicolosi said he hopes the food industry will come up with frozen dinners and other products containing the cholesterol-lowering ingredients.

Dr. Russell Luepker, program chairperson at the conference, said doctors have come to rely so heavily on cholesterol-lowering drugs, such as lovastatin, that they may underestimate the power of healthy eating.

"I'm pleased to see this going on," he said. "We are not going to put lovastatin in the water supply."

Crawford, JFK Jr. top list of dream dates

NEW YORK (AP) — Who says Americans can't make difficult choices? Asked to select a dream date in a poll, men picked Cindy Crawford 2-1 over nearest competitors Janet Jackson and Pamela Anderson.

John F. Kennedy Jr. was the top choice for women, with Denzel Washington and Brad Pitt runners-up.

The choices were posed by Newsweek in a poll for the "100 Newsmakers of 1995" issue that hit newsstands Monday.

Of a dozen famous people they could have lunch with, Colin Powell and Tom Hanks appealed to the most respondents, 17 percent each, followed by Pope John Paul II, 16 percent, and President Clinton, 13 percent.

The poll of 750 adults was taken by phone Oct. 7-10 and results have a 4-point margin of error.

Kidney foundation pays tribute to 'ER' star and family

CINCINNATI (AP) — A long night in the hospital almost made George Clooney miss a gala in honor of his family.

Clooney worked on his hit show "ER" until 3 a.m. Saturday, then had to hop a jet to Cincinnati for the "Tribute to the Clooneys" that night.

The event, organized by the Kidney Foundation of Greater Cincinnati, honored Clooney; his aunt, singer Rosemary; and his father, Nick, a former anchorman and entertainer at various local TV and radio stations.

The youngest Clooney seemed chagrined that he drew the most attention at a VIP reception.

"I consider this a lot more of a tribute to Rosemary and my father, who have done so much for this town," said Clooney, who headed to Hollywood 12 years ago after dropping out of Northern Kentucky University.

Psychics enlisted to find
Mason City anchorwoman

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — Psychics have joined in the search for missing Mason City, Iowa, television anchorwoman Jodi Huisen-truit.

Huisen-truit, a morning anchorwoman at KIMT-TV in Mason City, has been missing since June 27 despite intense searches by Mason City police and the FBI, who believe Huisen-truit was abducted from the parking lot at her apartment just before she went to work.

Members of Huisen-truit's family were flown to California recently to tape a session with three psychics. That will air in December as part of a new television show, "Psychic Detectives," said Joann Nathe of Sauk Centre, Minn. She is Huisen-truit's older sister.

The psychics concluded the kidnapper was someone familiar with Huisen-truit's television celebrity and who had become obsessed with her.

Three private investigators hired by the family with money raised by friends have found nothing to identify a suspect.

"We have three different PIs on the case and nothing," Jane Huisen-truit, Jodi's mother, said.

A Civil War re-enactment festival in Mason City the weekend before the abduction of Huisen-truit led investigators to find instances in which two other women disappeared from towns where such festivals had taken place, Nathe said.

Investigators, she said, also extensively questioned a Mason City-area man and have looked into men who have talked about the abduction on the Internet.

"We've been told that some men fantasize they've been involved, and they really aren't," Nathe said.

JOYCE NOT CHARGED

Fake suicide puts roommate on trial

Sarah Lueck

The Daily Iowan

UI junior Robert Kooima has pleaded not guilty to a charge of providing false reports to law enforcement officials in connection with the Oct. 26 disappearance of his former roommate, Kevin

"I was being loyal to my friend. I was preserving the trust he put in me."

UI junior Robert Kooima

Michael Joyce Jr.

Kooima will go to trial Jan. 19 for the simple misdemeanor charge, which can result in a fine of up to $100 or jail time for up to 30 days.

UI Public Safety and the Johnson County Sheriff's Office searched the Iowa River for Joyce's body after Kooima found a note from Joyce saying he planned to jump into the river. Joyce's wallet, bag and other belongings were found near the river.

On Oct. 27, Joyce called his room at the UI from a distant location, and a friend told him his parents were in Iowa City.

Joyce called his parents at about 6:45 p.m., and they made arrangements to fly him to their home in Omaha, Neb.

Since the incident, Joyce, who was a junior, has withdrawn his registration from the UI.

In a Nov. 2 interview, Kooima said he was aware of Joyce's plan to fake his own death but did not take it seriously. When he realized Joyce had gone through with it, Kooima said he decided to support his roommate.

"I was being loyal to my friend," Kooima said. "I was preserving the trust he put in me."

Kooima said it was Joyce who told Public Safety that Kooima knew about the plan all along.

"I was not very happy (Joyce told Public Safety)," Kooima said. "I feel I was loyal to him. I stayed by him through this entire thing."

Capt. Duane Papke of UI Public Safety said Joyce has not been charged in the case.

"(Joyce) did not report anything," Papke said. "There was no criminal action on his part."

Kooima has been charged because he reported the information to police.

He reported the suicide note to Public Safety, despite his knowledge that Joyce was alive, Papke said.

"(Joyce) did not provide that information to us, Kooima did," he said.

Kooima is being represented by UI Student Legal Services. A representative from legal services would not comment on the case.

Time line of the faked drowning

Thursday morning, Oct. 26 Kevin Michael Joyce Jr. tells roommate Bob Kooima about plans to fake his suicide, according to Kooima.

9:30 a.m., Thursday Kooima reports Joyce missing to Public Safety. He says he found a note that said Joyce is planning to jump in the river.

Thursday evening and Friday morning The Johnson County Sheriff's Department and UI Public Safety search the Iowa River near the Burlington Street Bridge and dam. Kooima knows that Joyce is alive — however, he doesn't tell the police and watches the river being dragged.

12:45 p.m., Friday The UI asks for help in finding Joyce in a press release including his physical description.

Friday afternoon Joyce calls his dorm room and speaks to a friend there. He told his parents are in Iowa City.

6:45 p.m., Friday Joyce calls his parents from an unknown, distant location. They make arrangements for him to be flown to the family's home in Omaha, Neb.

Ombudsperson helps solve UI problems

Kristen Smith
The Daily Iowan

A professor has asked a student to babysit his daughter and is threatening to lower her grade if she refuses.

She knows she should report the incident, but doesn't know her options.

The student has two choices, UI Ombudsperson Nancy Hauserman said. She could follow the suggestions listed in Policies and Regulations Affecting Students, which includes approaching the professor or the dean of the department and talking about the situation.

Or, if she is too scared to do this alone, she could contact Hauserman's office, where either Hauserman or Associate Ombudsperson Maile Sagen will listen to her problem and then offer advice to help her move to the next step outlined in the policies.

"The first thing I would do is ask the student what she would like to have happen, or the solution she would like to see," Hauserman said. "Then I would ask her what she would like my help in and then I would encourage her. I would ask how comfortable the student feels to confront the person," Hauserman said.

The UI Office of the Ombudsperson helps faculty, students and staff with university-related problems. While the office has no power to change UI policies or make new rules, the office can offer suggestions on how to resolve the problem.

"The earlier we can get in and try to help, it's to everyone's advantage. The authority of the office helps open doors. It is more than just a hand-holding office — we help facilitate meetings and open doors quickly."

Associate Ombudsperson Maile Sagen

The ombudsperson explains and clarifies the established policies and procedures of the UI, while actively representing the university's commitment to fundamental fairness in its community, according to the ninth annual report of the Office of the Ombudsperson, released earlier this year.

"Everyone on campus should know the avenues for getting help," Hauserman said.

The office of the ombudsperson can be contacted at any time during a conflict.

"Some students come in at the beginning," Sagen said. "Sometimes the students wait too long, and there is very little we can do for the student."

"The earlier we can get in and try to help, it's to everyone's advantage," Sagen said. "The authority of the office helps open doors. It is more than just a hand-holding office — we help facilitate meetings and open doors quickly."

The office, 108 Seashore Hall, offers confidential, impartial help in solving problems a student might have on campus. The office does not report to the UI administration.

Established Oct. 1, 1985, the UI Office of the Ombudsperson was created to guarantee that all members of the university — faculty, staff and students — are treated fairly.

The busiest time of year is at midterm and finals time, Sagen said.

"Students usually have academic problems with grades and credit and those types of things," she said. "During breaks, faculty and staff come in to discuss the tenure and promotion process."

UI, Penn State partner up external degree program

Greyson Purcell
The Daily Iowan

Tracey Gibson has a degree from the UI, but she's never set foot in the state.

Gibson is a 1994 graduate of the UI Bachelor of Liberal Studies external degree program, which is identical to the UI's standard Bachelor of Liberal Studies degree but allows participants to earn a bachelor's degree off-campus, said Scot Wilcox, educational adviser for the Bachelor of Liberal Studies Program.

The UI program has existed for years but was designed primarily for community college students who had already earned their associate's degree. It currently offers only the last two years required for a Bachelor of Liberal Studies degree.

External program participants must complete the first two years of their degree before applying to finish in the UI program. Participants occasionally take classes from a number of different universities.

However now, with a combined effort between the UI and Penn State University — the first such partnership between two Big Ten universities — students who have already earned a two-year degree in Letters, Arts and Sciences from Penn State will be guaranteed admittance into the two-year UI external degree program.

The new program, nicknamed LionHawk — after the mascots of the two schools — will give students a chance for a more structured approach to an off-campus degree.

"This is clearly a win-win-win proposition for the students we serve worldwide," said James Ryan, vice president and dean for Continuing and Distance Education at Penn State. "It's a win for Penn State, a win for the University of Iowa and, most importantly, it's a win for students who are not able to attend classes at a campus."

Classes for both programs are designed for students unable to attend standard classes on campus and would involve a variety of course work, such as correspondence and telecourses.

"This collaborative program enables both the University of Iowa and Penn State to broaden our commitment to non-resident students in our states and elsewhere," said Emmett Vaughan, dean of the UI Division of Continuing Education.

Gibson said not participating in a standard campus education has helped give her an advantage over other students.

"I think in many ways it better prepared me for graduate school," she said. "The reading and writing requirements prepared me better than in-class experience would have."

With more than 650 students enrolled in external degree programs at both schools, response to the LionHawk program has been positive, even though no one has signed up yet.

"When the press release went out, we've had an absolute deluge of calls," said Elizabeth Hill, student services coordinator for the UI Center for Credit Programs. "It is a quality education because both schools have very high standards for their degrees."

Gibson said she has taken several extended classes in programs from other universities, including the University of Wisconsin, the University of Texas and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"The Iowa program is, by far, the best," she said.

Iowa's use of gaming profits may be limited

Associated Press

DES MOINES — House Speaker Ron Corbett on Monday said he wants a ceiling on how much gambling money is available for the state to spend.

The state is flush with money collected from booming gambling operations, and the growth shows no signs of slowing. But Corbett said the money Iowa collects from gambling shouldn't artificially inflate the state budget.

Sooner or later, those mushrooming gambling profits are likely to come back down, Corbett said.

"Gambling has gone up this past year and we may be able to maintain that level for a couple of years," Corbett said. "I think history will prove, just as it has in the lottery, that it will settle at some lower figure in the future."

Corbett's position is likely to be at the center of a heated debate when the Legislature convenes in January.

'Travelmates' give kids the world

Josh Hunt
The Daily iowan

Sassy the cat is taking an excursion around the world, thanks to a sixth-grade student at Coralville Central Elementary School.

Sassy, a stuffed cat, is one of many stuffed animals being sent by fifth- and sixth-graders as a part of a program to learn about the world.

"It is named after the cat from the movie 'Home-ward Bound,'" said Kevin Coffron, Sassy's owner. "It's just like that cat. It's a cat on a journey."

Each travelmate has a backpack containing whatever the student wishes to enclose and a journal for recipients of the travelmate to report its activities.

Coffron plans to send toys in the cat's backpack to accompany it on its travels. Sassy will begin its trip with Coffron's friends, who are going on a trip over Thanksgiving.

About 80 stuffed animals, or travelmates will travel to collect information about the world for the students, said Steve Merkel-Hess, a sixth-grade teacher at the school and key coordinator of the project.

The travelmates' travels will begin by students or the students' parents passing the animal on to someone who is traveling. The animal will then be passed on to others, said Merkel-Hess.

He said the project is designed to raise students' awareness and knowledge of the world.

"The point of the project is to expose kids to geography around the world," he said. "The travelmate is supposed to come back in April or May bearing information from each person in the world who handled it."

Last year's project gave the animals — and the students — a chance to travel through many unique places, Merkel-Hess said.

"One went to someone at the equator marker and another travelmate got to see Paul Newman," he said.

"One travelmate even sat in the seat of (Senator) Charles Grassley in Washington, D.C."

The idea for the project came from a conference Merkel-Hess attended supported by the National Geographic Society, which is working to increase student geography knowledge. Merkel-Hess said the idea had been tried in other places and had been quite successful.

Chandra Johnson, a Coralville Central sixth-grader, said she is sending a stuffed dog named Digger D Dog.

"I am putting in some Kleenex and a little passport I made," Johnson said.

She said she will take the animal with her on her family's trip to Florida and give it to someone there.

Coffron and Johnson also participated in the project last year. Coffron's animal came back, but Johnson's didn't.

"Mine went to Georgia and Florida last year," Coffron said. "It also went to a second-grade class in Pennsylvania, and all the students wrote me."

Johnson said it was a fun thing to do for class.

"I like getting the thing together and wondering where it might go," she said. "I hope it will come back and I'll get a pen pal."

Coffron said he enjoyed the project.

"It is fun to get things from around the world," he said. "I'm going to make a journal and show it to my kids later on."

Both youths said they learned from the project.

"If you get it back, you learn a lot about other people which you really don't learn about in class," Johnson said.

Coffron said he learned about what people do in different places and about their cultures.

"My favorite thing (that came back last year) was a picture of the Grand Canyon, which I have never seen," Coffron said.

CHAPTER WILL NEED 15 TO 20 MEMBERS

Jewish fraternity hopes for UI return

Ann Haggerty
The Daily iowan

The only national fraternity labeling itself a Jewish fraternity and focusing its charity work on the Jewish community is hoping to reopen its UI chapter.

Sidney Dunn, executive vice president of the international chapter of Alpha Epsilon Pi, said the fraternity is looking for interested UI students to restart its UI chapter, which closed five years ago.

The mission of the fraternity, which has about 100 chapters in the United States and Canada, is to train Jewish leaders for the future and further Jewish causes, Dunn said.

"We are the only fraternity that says we're a Jewish fraternity and back it up with a program of Jewish content," he said.

Dunn said Alpha Epsilon Pi takes in non-Jewish students, too.

"We don't discriminate as long as (the member) has the ideals and values of our fraternity," he said.

Alpha Epsilon Pi would need 15 to 20 members to restart the fraternity, Dunn said, but it wouldn't lease a house until enough members could carry one.

"At this point, we're just trying to form a group," he said. "We are searching to find out if there is an interest on campus and if there is, we'll take it to the next step."

Alpha Epsilon Pi had a chapter at the UI from 1951 to 1991, Dunn said, and closed due to low membership. The fraternity's former house is now leased to Phi Kappa Theta fraternity, 339 N. Riverside Drive.

"At that point we had so few members, so we decided to take a breather and come back when we developed a stronger group," he said.

Currently, Sigma Alpha Mu is known on campus as a Jewish fraternity because many of its members are Jewish, said President Dan Orenstein.

He said the fraternity doesn't label itself as such and has a philanthropy not limited to the Jewish community. Sigma Alpha Mu was founded as a Jewish fraternity but opened its doors to everyone in 1953, Orenstein said.

"We are the only fraternity that says we're a Jewish fraternity and back it up with a program of Jewish content."

Sidney Dunn, executive vice president of the international chapter of Alpha Epsilon Pi

However, the chapter is currently suspended for violating the alcohol moratorium. The moratorium, which was put in place Sept. 27, bans alcohol from all Greek houses on campus.

The UI chapter of Alpha Epsilon Pi wrote letters in 1983 to Jewish college students in the Soviet Union, who were not allowed to practice their religion, to let them know the fraternity supported them, Dunn said.

From 1991-1993, the fraternity raised $130,000 for the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C., Dunn said.

"For a fraternity our size, that was a tremendous undertaking," he said.

Alpha Epsilon Pi's current philanthropic enterprise concerns the National Tay-Sachs Allied Diseases, Dunn said, which promotes awareness of this genetic blood disease carried mostly in people whose Jewish relatives emigrated from Eastern Europe.

The fraternity provides testing for Jewish students to see if they are carriers, he said.

"The normal procedure is to adopt children if you (and your partner) are a carrier because there is a 100 percent chance the child will die before the age of 10," Dunn said.

UI freshman Mark Goroff, who is interested in restarting the UI chapter, said he is looking for other students interested in getting Alpha Epsilon Pi off the ground.

"(The fraternity) would be a good way to meet other Jewish students," he said. "A lot of them go to Hillel, but other than that, they are pretty hard to find."

Dunn said the Aliber-Hillel Jewish Student Center, 122 E. Market St., would complement Alpha Epsilon Pi.

The center offers cultural, educational, political, religious and social events, said Director Elliot Zashin.

"Hillel has offered a religious outlet for Jewish students, as well as a cultural outlet," he said. "(Alpha Epsilon Pi) would offer more of a social outlet."

Frito-Lay sues over less-fat claim in Pringles ads

Katie Fairbank
Associated Press

DALLAS — Snack makers know the fat in their chips can land on our hips, so the competition for the healthier end of the market is heating up.

Recent ads airing in Jacksonville, Fla., and Des Moines comparing newer, lower-fat chips have resulted in a lawsuit filed by Frito-Lay, Inc., against Procter & Gamble.

Frito-Lay claims the commercials, which were pulled off the air this month, falsely portray Pringles Right-Crisps as nutritionally superior to Frito-Lay's Baked Lay's Potato Chips and Lay's and Ruffles Potato Chips. The lawsuit was filed Nov. 1 in U.S. District Court in Sherman.

In its lawsuit, Frito-Lay is asking for the "false side-by-side product comparisons" to be stopped, money to produce "corrective" advertising and damages.

Frito-Lay says the Procter & Gamble commercial gives misleading fat-count figures. Frito-Lay says Pringles Right-Crisps have 7 grams of fat per 1 ounce serving to Baked Lay's 1.5 grams per serving. Frito-Lay also says the Baked Lay's package is altered in the commercial to obscure a "low fat" logo and the commercial says Baked Lay's contain more sodium than they actually do.

"We're simply asking Procter & Gamble to act responsibly with regards to their advertising and to stop pretending their Pringles' products contain healthier or more nutritional benefits which they clearly do not possess," said Brock Leach, Frito-Lay's senior vice president of marketing.

Judy Ellis, a spokesperson for Cincinnati-based Procter & Gamble, said the lawsuit is without merit.

The commercial discussed the "less-greasy feel" of Pringles and didn't make comparison of fat levels, she said.

Alleged robbery victim charged with giving false reports

The man who alleged he was robbed in the Capitol Street parking ramp around noon on Nov. 6 has been charged with providing false reports to law enforcement officials.

Russell Stratton, 22, Maren-go, Iowa, revealed in an interview Monday with Investigator Brian Krei of the Iowa City Police Department that he lied about the robbery. Krei would not disclose the reason why Stratton allegedly lied.

False reports cause headaches for police officers and take them away from other important cases, Krei said.

"It makes it more difficult," Krei said. "The time we spent was wasted. I drove to Maren-go with a photo lineup, it was time consuming. When people make inaccurate reports it takes time from people who need us."

Stratton's charge is a serious misdemeanor because of the seriousness of the crime he reported.

Hemp advocate warned about tampering with the dollar

WOODSTOCK, N.Y. (AP) — George Washington grew hemp, and Joy Beckerman wants to make sure you know. Her way of making the point, though, could get her in trouble.

At her Heaven on Earth hemp store, dollars given as change are stamped in red ink with little word balloons saying, "I GREW HEMP" next to Washington's picture.

That caught the attention of police in this counterculture capital, and they told the Secret Service, which told Beckerman to stop. Not because of the message itself, but because it's illegal to mutilate currency.

Beckerman, sitting in her store amid hemp twine, hemp paper, hemp shoes, hemp shirts and hemp shorts, said Monday she's not backing down.

"It's the message we want to promote, that George Washington was a hemp farmer. He's quoted in his diaries saying, 'Make the most of the hemp seed,' " the 25-year-old merchant said. "Our forefathers were very hip."

Washington really did grow hemp, but for rope fiber, not marijuana, said John Riley, historian at the first president's home in Mount Vernon, Va.

After Beckerman's store opened in May, Police Chief Paul Ragonese sent an officer to make sure she wasn't selling marijuana. Then the department sent one of her bills to the Secret Service.

Defacing U.S. currency with intent to render it unfit for use is punishable by a fine and up to six months in jail, said Timothy Koerner, chief Secret Service agent in Albany.

Man accidentally shoots himself in the groin

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A man showing his girlfriend the sawed-off shotgun in his pants accidentally shot himself in the genitals, police said.

Police called to the scene found Kevin Hall lying on a street corner clutching his groin. His pants, which had a large hole, were still smoking.

Hall, 18, told police he had been hit in a drive-by shooting, but his girlfriend said he had been showing her the gun when it went off.

Hall was treated at a hospital Friday for a cut to his penis and powder burns on the inside of his thigh. Police then arrested him on several charges, including possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

The gun was found in some nearby bushes, police said.

Hall also was arrested on suspicion of reckless endangerment and illegal discharge of a firearm. He was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond pending arraignment Monday.

Self-proclaimed prophet charged with bomb conspiracies

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — An anti-government "prophet" and three others were charged Monday with plotting a series of bombings against targets such as abortion clinics, homosexual gathering places, the Anti-Defamation League and the Southern Poverty Law Center.

Ray Willie Lampley, 65, his wife, Cecilia Lampley, 47, and John Dare Baird, 53, appeared in federal court, their hands and feet shackled, and were ordered held without bail until a hearing Thursday.

The three, arrested by FBI agents Saturday at the Lampleys' home in Vernon, 90 miles east of Oklahoma City, are charged with conspiracy to manufacture and possess a bomb.

Larry Wayne Crow of New Mexico also was charged in the complaint but was not immediately arrested. His hometown was not disclosed.

The case is not connected to the April 19 bombing of the federal building in Oklahoma City, authorities said.

Poll finds Americans blame Congress, not Clinton, for U.S. woes

Mike Mokrzycki
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The voter anger that spurred the Republican revolution is turning to anxiety, splitting the new GOP coalition and energizing Democrats, according to a broad new study of American opinion.

Discontented Americans pin much of the blame for their worries on Congress and little on President Clinton, the Times Mirror Center for The People & The Press found in a survey released Monday.

"Congress has become the focal point of people's complaints, even among Republicans," said Andrew Kohut, poll director. "As for Bill Clinton, the buck isn't stopping there."

Fears about major expenses including health care, college tuition, housing and retirement have risen significantly across the political spectrum in the past 18 months, according to the telephone survey of 2,000 adults nationwide conducted Oct. 25-30.

And those concerns appear to be costing Republicans support among independents, a swing voting bloc that helped vault the GOP to control of Congress in 1994.

Clinton, meanwhile, gets stronger support in the new poll from all kinds of Democrats than GOP congressional leaders do from all but the most fiscally conservative Republicans.

Other recent national polls also have found public sentiment shifting away from the Republican Congress and rising approval ratings for Clinton amid sharp debate over Medicare and other elements of the GOP's balanced-budget proposals.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich says GOP leaders haven't paid much attention to the polls because the results are skewed by the Democrats' "totally false" charges about Republicans' budget ideas.

"When people learn the facts, they are overwhelmingly for our budget, and we're convinced that over the next six or eight months, they'll learn the facts," Gingrich said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Republican congressional leaders' ratings have plunged especially sharply since August, now standing at 36 percent approval and 51 percent disapproval.

Shutting down due to ideology

Jill Lawrence
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The federal government has more than once shut down amid partisan conflict. But this time the argument is not about the fate of a jobs program or aid to Nicaraguan rebels; it's about nothing less than the direction of the country.

Bills approved in the past few days by the Republican Congress — supposedly to keep the government going — were laden with such huge slabs of the GOP agenda that presidential vetoes were pre-ordained and a government shutdown seemed inevitable.

"The stakes have been made so much higher," said Robert Reich, former director of the Congressional Budget Office. "It's not typical because the policy differences between the president and the Congress are so extreme."

The past 15 years saw Republican presidents struggling with congressional chambers run mostly by Democrats.

With roles reversed this year, President Clinton is the one drawing lines and issuing veto statements.

On Monday he vetoed a debt-limit extension that also would have:

- Limited his ability to avert default.
- Committed him to a seven-year balanced budget.

Associated Press

Ron Vail, facility management specialist, National Park Service, holds an "area closed" sign in Arlington, Va., Monday that will be used at federal facilities if the government shutdown takes place today.

On Monday, President Clinton vetoed a temporary borrowing bill and prepared to close most government operations in a jolting political fight with Congress.

- Enacted House- and Senate-passed limits on death-row appeals.

- Eased health, safety and environmental regulations Senate Democrats have blocked all year.

Later Monday, lawmakers passed the separate stopgap spending bill — called a continuing resolution — that contains a Medicare premium increase unacceptable to Clinton. It also makes dramatic cuts, particularly in the many programs Republicans are trying to kill off.

"The continuing resolution is more contentious now because the reductions are much greater than we've ever enacted," said Reich. "If you were making minor cuts, the differences between the president and Congress wouldn't be as serious."

Even the Reagan administration, with its overriding goal of shrinking government, did not use a 1981 stopgap spending bill to try to force program cuts. Budget Director David Stockman called the bill "a ministerial matter" and said the administration was pursuing its spending-cut goals in the annual appropriations bills for each department.

Heightened by the election of the first Republican House in 40 years, the atmosphere this year is especially urgent, sometimes almost militant, with partisan lines sharp and unforgiving.

It is hard to imagine the 1982 scenario playing out in 1995: President Reagan objected to a $5.4 billion jobs program in a continuing resolution, his party allies in the GOP-controlled Senate dropped it, then GOP leaders in both chambers told Democrats they'd try to restore the program and get Reagan on board the following year.

President Bush vetoed a 1990 continuing resolution because Congress had suspended a deficit-reduction mechanism.

On Monday, a Tel Aviv judge ordered 23-year-old Ohad Skornick, a friend of Amir, held for three more days.

PEACE PROCESS CONTINUES IN RABIN'S NAME

Dan Perry
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel handed over the West Bank town of Jenin to PLO rule a week early Monday, in a sign of Prime Minister Shimon Peres' determination to pursue and even accelerate his slain predecessor's peace policies.

Peres met with his main right-wing rival Monday and the two promised to restore "restraint and civility" to the bitter political debate that cost Yitzhak Rabin his life.

Thousands of Palestinians lined the streets of Jenin to welcome arriving busloads of PLO troops as Israel's army pulled out under the autonomy accord Rabin signed with PLO chief Yasser Arafat in September at the White House.

The move indicated Peres may press even more vigorously than Rabin toward a final Palestinian settlement and peace with Syria. That could require Israel to give up the strategic Golan Heights, captured in a 1967 war.

"We must continue with the peace process. This is what Yitzhak wanted," Peres told the Knesset, Israel's parliament, at a special session to honor Rabin. "We will make a deep, truthful decision."

Addressing a plenum that was full except for Rabin's empty seat, Peres said, "Only a difficult choice for our generation will (enable) a democratic and Jewish Israel for the next."

"There is no peace for free." A unanimous vote by more than 1,000 members of the ruling Labor Party's central committee gave Peres the go-ahead Monday evening to form a new government.

Finance Minister Avraham Shohat said Peres, widely seen as the true architect of peace with the Palestinians, is "the best qualified person the Labor Party has."

Peres was likely to promote Interior Minister Ehud Barak to foreign minister, the No. 2 position in the Cabinet, party sources said. Barak, a popular and articulate former army chief who is Israel's most-decorated soldier, would give the Peres Cabinet the kind of security credentials that enabled Rabin — who led Israel's army to victory in 1967 — to take risks for peace.

Peres has strong political support for his return to the position he held from 1984-1986. Even the Likud opposition has pledged tacit consent when he presents his government to the Knesset.

Rabin's slaying sparked an outpouring of national grief and, according to polls, at least temporarily galvanized public support for the peace process and the government.

On Sunday night, about 250,000 Israelis gathered in the newly renamed Yitzhak Rabin Square in Tel Aviv, where he was gunned down at a rally Nov. 4, to sing peace songs and honor the warrior-turned-peacekeeper.

Right-wing leaders had branded Rabin a traitor and oppressor for trading land for peace, leading to charges they inspired his assassin. After the killing, they took pains to tone down the rhetoric.

"This debate must continue for the sake of Israeli democracy, but ... within the bounds of restraint and civility," Likud head Benjamin Netanyahu said Monday after meeting with Peres in Jerusalem.

Netanyahu said extremists like confessed assassin Yigal Amir have "nothing to do with the mainstream political parties in Israel."

Amir will be charged with first-degree murder within 10 days, Israel television reported Monday.

Amir insists he acted alone when he killed Rabin. But police suspect he was part of a group that plotted the assassination for more than a year. At least six suspects in addition to Amir, all religious men in their 20s, are in

AIDES RESIGNED OVER ALLEGED INVESTIGATION

House member's spouse missing after campaign-funds scrutiny

Kimberley Murphy

SALT LAKE CITY — The husband of Rep. Enid Waldholtz was reported missing Monday following a week of reports that the first-term congresswoman is under investigation for campaign spending irregularities.

"We have asked for law enforcement help in this matter," said Jim Parkinson, the congresswoman's brother-in-law.

Joe Waldholtz, the Utah congresswoman's 32-year-old husband, campaign treasurer and unpaid aide, has been missing since Saturday. The couple's lawyers notified Washington, D.C., law enforcement and the U.S. attorney after he disappeared.

"He is obviously feeling considerable pressure as we continue to investigate his handling of the accounts for he and Enid," Parkinson said in a news release issued by Waldholtz's Washington office.

The news release acknowledged "internal and external" investigations are under way over financial transactions from the campaign, Waldholtz's office and the couple's personal accounts.

Last Thursday, three top aides to Waldholtz resigned after reports that the FBI was investigating her campaign and personal spending. Waldholtz reported spending $1.8 million of her own money in the 1994 election, the most of any House candidate.

The Deseret News reported last week that the FBI interviewed at least two people close to Waldholtz campaigns, asking detailed questions about possible campaign law violations and checking kiting and misleading disclosure forms.

The FBI will not confirm it has opened an investigation.

"In the midst of all this, Enid is continuing her work as best she can to support Speaker Gingrich and the Republican contract, as well as the citizens of Utah who sent her here to serve their needs," Parkinson said.

Waldholtz, 37, has refused to answer reporters' questions about her campaign finances since reports of her problems surfaced, saying she needed to complete her own investigation first.

The questions — some of them months old — concern the apparent contradiction between official filings claiming large cash deposits at the same time checks were bouncing and campaign creditors were complaining they were not getting paid.

6 die in bombing of U.S.-Saudi site

Adnan Malik

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — A bomb ripped through a building filled with American and Saudi Arabian military personnel on Monday, tearing off the facade and engulfing the wreckage in flames. Six people were killed, including five Americans.

At least 60 people were wounded, including more than 30 Americans. It was not clear whether the attack was aimed at the Saudis, the Americans or both.

Two groups claimed responsibility for the attack, but neither could be verified, said Raymond Mabius, U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia.

One group was the little-known Islamic Change Movement, which demanded last spring that Western forces leave Saudi Arabia or it would "exert all available means to evict these forces." The second group was the previously unknown Tigers of the Gulf.

Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, has been a close ally of the United States for decades and the two countries have extensive military ties. Some Muslim fundamentalists oppose the presence of the U.S. military and other Western forces in Saudi Arabia, home to Islam's holiest shrines.

While open opposition to the ruling al-Saud family is not permitted, some underground groups have threatened to strike against the deeply conservative Saudi leadership and the Western forces.

The U.S. Embassy spokesperson, Jeff Thomas, said late Monday the death toll among Americans had risen to five after one of the critically injured victims died in the hospital. He said a number of Americans were listed in critical condition, but gave no specific figures.

SHUTDOWN

But Democratic leaders emerging from the White House meeting were pessimistic that a short-term extension of spending and borrowing authority could be worked out in less than 24 hours. "There was no progress at all," said Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle.

Even so, Dole said, "The fact we're going to meet tomorrow is progress."

The White House meeting came after Clinton vetoed twin spending and borrowing bills, insisting Republicans drop provisions that would raise Medicare premiums and cut education and environmental spending. Republicans urgently requested to see Clinton and went to the White House at 10 p.m.

"I think we've got some tough problems to solve," House Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt said after the White House meeting.

"This could last for a while," Gephardt said, adding that Republicans had rejected the idea of extending for 48 hours the spending authority that expired at midnight.

The key stumbling block remained GOP insistence on Medicare premium increase.

the veterans care they deserve.

"Basically, those who will be told to go home are people involved in research and various forms of medical care that aren't absolutely necessary. We've got about 75 people in research and between 55 and 60 others who will be going home tomorrow morning.

"All of our nurses and doctors — a good 800 or 900 people — will be working without pay."

While the temporary government shutdown will affect virtually everybody on staff at the VA, Winters said the quality of care given to the patients will not be affected or diluted in any way.

"One thing this medical center prides itself on is quality care," Winters said. "My feelings are that the quality of care will not decrease in any way.

"I realize that people aren't going to be happy about this, but I don't think they'll let that run into how they treat their patients."

This isn't the first time the VA has had to deal with a shutdown, Winters said, but this situation has the potential to be worse than those preceding it.

"This type of situation has happened in the past," Winters said. "But it happened over only a half a day, or over a holiday, so the cuts in staff weren't as harmful.

"I'll probably be one of the ones who gets sent home. It's very frustrating."

Winters said while he's certain the quality of care provided at the center won't decrease at all, he's unsure of what kind of long-term effects the government shutdown may have, if it continues over any lengthy duration of time.

"People might start wondering what to do next if this goes on any longer than a couple of days," Winters said. "Some may get fed up. Any loss of staff permanently as a result will ultimately trickle down to the patients.

"Some of these people live paycheck to paycheck," he said. "It's my understanding that those who will be working without pay will be reimbursed in the future, but you never know.

"It's very frustrating. We're trying to provide quality care and to do what's best. But it's difficult to do that when the parties in power who couldn't find a way around this shutdown don't do their part."

Other local federal agencies will also face staff cuts as a result of the government shutdown.

The Corps of Engineers at the Coralville reservoir is one local federal office that will be undermanned as a result of the shutdown. Normally carrying a staff of 13 people daily, there will be only one, project manager John Castle, who will undertake the duties.

"Should it happen, we'll be down to one person out here, at the most two," Castle said. "Operating the dam is all we'll be concentrating on."

substance-abuse policy for how it is dealt with, but each team has their own rules about it."

Rhodes said teams establish their own specific rules and some prohibit alcohol and some do not.

One team that does have an absolute no-alcohol policy is the women's gymnastics team. Head Coach Diane DeMarco recently suspended several members of the team for alcohol use, with the suspensions still being evaluated.

However, Glenn Patton, head coach of the men's swimming team, said no-alcohol policies are not sensible for college students.

"In my mind, it's not a practical thing to think that a student at the University of Iowa is going to go through four years of college and not have a drink," he said. "One of the things you learn in college is how to drink. That might not be well-received by some people, but the fact of the matter is, that's where you turn to be the legal drinking age. You need to learn to be a social drinker, so when you go out on your first job and you're at a cocktail party, you know how to drink."

Angie Lee, head coach of the women's basketball team, said the women's basketball team does not have a no-alcohol policy.

"It is an unspoken rule for us," Lee said. "It is a given that alcohol is not to be part of our daily activities. It is something that is definitely covered at probably the first team meeting we have."

Lee said the team has been very fortunate in that they have never had to deal with any problems due to alcohol use. However, she said if there was a problem it would be dealt with on an individual basis.

"I think they have left (the alcohol policy) to the individual coaches in regard to how they want to handle their own team," she said. "Coaches should know their teams and understand their teams. It is a case-by-case situation."

Patton said alcohol-related problems may sometimes be blown out of proportion.

"I think we have to be careful to not overreact to alcohol-related problems," Patton said. "We've had alcohol-related problems at university campuses since universities were founded and there will continue to be alcohol-related problems in the years ahead.

advanced treatment."

Klein said neonatologists are usually criticized for giving advanced treatment to patients.

"Neonatologists are publicly criticized for being too aggressive in their treatments, and now I'm finding just the opposite," Klein said.

The UIHC was ranked 51st in the nation by U.S. News and World Report for hospitals that excel in treating people infected with HIV or suffering from active AIDS.

Laura Hill, executive director of Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education (ICARE), 320 E. College St., said she finds it appalling to deny treatment to any living being.

"The decision to deny treatment indicates that people are making prejudgments based solely on the mother's status," Hill said. "I am a firm believer that health care is a right and not a privilege based on financial means."

Iowa City-area care-givers are concerned with survey results showing doctors are reluctant to

"Denying treatment to babies born to HIV-infected mothers to try to cut health-care cost is inappropriate."

Jonathan Klein, assistant professor of Pediatrics at the UIHC offer treatment to infected babies because of growing pressure to cut health costs. Ninety percent of HIV-infected children get their health care from Medicaid.

Klein said he believes someone is reading too much into the need to cut costs.

"Denying treatment to babies born to HIV-infected mothers to try to cut health-care cost is inappropriate," Klein said. "There are plenty of other lethal diseases that limit the life span of the patient, and we don't deny them therapy."

The concern for cutting health-care costs is a valid one, and Klein said doctors don't want to run up the cost by doing unnecessary tests. However, doctors shouldn't have to ration treatment by disease status.

Klein said HIV-infected mothers should step forward and be advocates for their unborn babies.

"We want to start treatment with AZT, which causes a reduction in the transmission of HIV, right away," Klein said. "Twenty-five percent of babies born to HIV-infected mothers not receiving AZT treatment will develop HIV, compared to the 8 percent who will not develop HIV if their mothers receive AZT."

Klein speculated that the reason behind denying treatment to unborn babies is due to the growing concern of the potential to come in contact with the virus.

"The basic practice is to take universal precautions. We assume that everyone is infected with HIV," Klein said. "We don't separate out; everybody is treated on what is medically best for them."

other factors might be lowering the graduation rate.

"There may be some financial concerns," he said.

Minority students also may be leaving the UI for other colleges, Tyrrell said.

"Talented non-white students are in demand," he said.

Despite the wide gap between minority and white graduation rates, regents see hope in the low dropout rate. Regent Nancy Pellett said as more minority students remain enrolled, the graduation rates for minorities and whites will become comparable.

"(The UI) is really doing a great job," she said.

Among the three state universities, only the UI had nearly equal dropout rates for minorities and whites. At Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa, minorities were leaving college at a much greater rate than whites.

The UI's new four-year graduation plan will improve graduation rates in general, Pellett said.

The plan, which was offered for the first time this year to incoming freshman, guarantees class availability for students who pledge to graduate in four years and have satisfactory grades.

"(The state universities) are putting their money where their mouth is," she said. "You give us three more years, I think there will be a vast improvement (in four-year graduation rates)."

The regents' report on enrollment also showed a 10-year high for female enrollment at state universities. Nearly 49.5 percent of all students at regent universities are female.

Tyrrell said the increase may be due to women entering fields traditionally dominated by men, such as engineering and medicine.

"There's a different attitude now," he said. "They have broader concepts of what they can do."

While Iowa's state universities have been enrolling more women, the regents' report said they may not be doing enough to recruit transfer students from community colleges.

"This will be a point of discussion at the board meeting," Pellett said.

The Departments of History and Political Science are pleased to announce a joint venture for all upper-level and graduate students interested in Say something.

You have better things to do than babysit! Don't let someone else's rude behavior ruin your sleep, studying or fun. Here are a few tips—try 'em out:

- ✓ Say something...the next day. They will understand and remember what you are saying when they are sober and more reasonable. Plus, it's amazing the way a hangover can bring your message home!
- ✓ Say something...objective. Tell the person exactly what happened that bothered you, without being judgmental—for example, "Last night when you came home, you were so drunk you couldn't take care of yourself. You were loud, dropping things, and got sick in the sink. I was trying to sleep and instead ended up babysitting you. I was worried, I didn't like it, and I don't want to do it again!"
- ✓ Say something...and clear the air. Saying something can feel awkward, but it feels better than keeping it inside.
- ✓ Finally, if you or a friend feel worried about your drinking, get some help. For answers to your questions, or for a free confidential evaluation, call Health Iowa at 335-8394.

That's disgusting.

"My roommate came home very drunk. I didn't want to deal with it because I had three tests the next day, and had planned to study... She really stunk and was disgusting... I especially didn't want her to puke in my room. I didn't speak to her at all the next day."*

* This quote was taken from a student who participated in the Harvard School of Public Health Alcohol Study, 1995.

Take a stand.

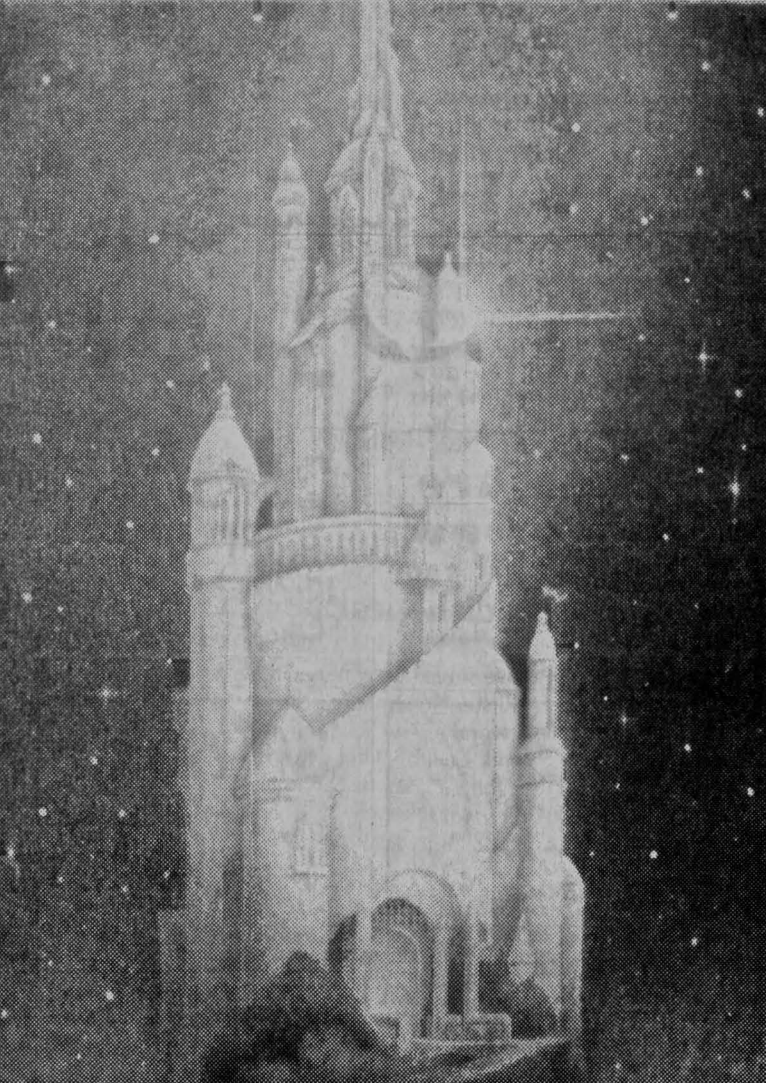

54% of UI students have had to 'babysit' a drunken student... and you can bet they didn't like it! Nobody wants to deal with a wasted friend...they've got bad breath and look gross.

Speak up.

If you've been 'babysitting' a friend who drinks too much, maybe it's time you said something. Think about it — if you and the rest of the 54% who babysat this weekend speak up, maybe you'll only have to say something once. After all, you're adults, right?

Maddux four-peats

NEW YORK (AP) — For Greg Maddux, winning the Cy Young Award — even unanimously — is just another part of his routine.

"We might have a little party tomorrow night or something," he said Monday after capturing his fourth consecutive NL Cy Young, his second straight by a shutout vote. "After winning the World Series, we're pretty much partied out."

Maddux, at 29 perhaps not even halfway through his career, continued to put up numbers that can be compared only with baseball's greats.

Steve Carlton is the only other pitcher to win four Cy Youngs. He did it for Philadelphia in 1972, 1977, 1980 and 1982.

Sandy Koufax is the only other pitcher to win the award unanimously in consecutive years — in 1965-66 for the Dodgers.

"It's really hard for me to talk about the history of the game because my history goes back 10 years," Maddux said during a telephone news conference from his home in Las Vegas.

"When I heard comparisons about people who pitched in the '50s or '60s or '70s, I can't really relate to it. I didn't really watch baseball a whole lot back then. I really wasn't the fan then I am now. I just take it as a nice compliment and move on."

Maddux received 140 points in balloting announced by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Maddux led the NL in wins with a 19-2 record, and was tops in the league in ERA (1.63) and complete games (10). He became the first major leaguer since Walter Johnson in 1918-19 to have an ERA under 1.80 in consecutive seasons.

Cincinnati's Pete Schourek was second in the voting with 55 points, followed by Braves teammate Tom Glavine with 30. Los Angeles rookie Hideo Nomo was fourth with 19 and Dodgers pitcher Ramon Martinez had eight.

Many say Maddux already is a lock to make the Hall of Fame. His career record is 150-93 with a 2.88 ERA.

"That's something you don't think about," he said. "If it happens, great. I'm going to do what I've always done. I'm going to go out there and make as many good pitches as I can. That's good enough for me. Whether I'm 20-0 or 0-20, it doesn't much matter."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Carr takes over for good

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Lloyd Carr, the interim coach who has guided Michigan to an 8-2 record and a No. 12 ranking, was hired Monday as the Wolverines' permanent football coach.

Athletic director Joe Roberson, who made the announcement at a news conference this morning, said the length and terms of the contract would be decided after the end of the season.

The future looks bright

No. 8-ranked Hawkeyes announce '96 recruits

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's basketball regular season has yet to begin, but Iowa coach Tom Davis is already thinking far into the future.

Two players have signed letters of intent to play for the Hawkeyes next season — both of them guards — allowing Davis to breathe a little easier.

"We've got four guards gone by the end of next year, so we knew we had to get some perimeter help," Davis said.

Ryan Luehrmann, a point guard from Cedar Rapids, and Jeff Walker, an athletic shooting guard from Lamphier High School in Springfield, Ill., the same high school of former Hawkeyes Kevin Gamble and Ed Horton, comprise the future of Iowa's backcourt.

Davis had nothing but accolades for the freshmen-to-be.

"We've (Davis and his staff) asked if there's ever been a more gifted athlete to play Iowa basketball," Davis said of Walker.

"We've had some gifted people in my nine years, so he's a unique talent."

"He's a great finisher. He can shoot the three or take it to the hoop. He can go around you or he can go over you."

Walker, who stands 6-foot-4, averaged 23 points per game last season and was the slam dunk champion at the Nike All-American Camp this summer, the premier high school basketball camp in the country.

Luehrmann has been compared to former Duke standout Bobby

Hurley in his demeanor on the court.

"(Luehrmann's) got a tough little way about him," Davis said.

"He's mild-mannered, but he's tough on the court. The key thing is his work ethic. He just outworks people."

Iowa will lose point guard Monter Glasper after this season, as well as Kenyon Murray, who plays a little at the No. 2 position in addition to his natural position at small forward. Next season will be the final year for Woolridge and shooting guard Chris Kingsbury, so Davis believes Iowa landed exactly what it needed in Luehrmann and Walker.

But for the meantime, Davis has other things to worry about. More specifically, how to get his players ready for Thanksgiving's Great Alaska Shootout and how to deal with Kingsbury's charge of public intoxication.

Big Ten coaches respect Hawks

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

INDIANAPOLIS — How can a team that finished ninth in the conference in '94 and returns only two seniors scare so many Big Ten coaches?

One word. "Talent." Trish Roberts, head coach of Michigan, said. "They have kids that can get out and really play ball. The scary thing is that a lot of their sophomores have experience from having to play last year, so that will make them even more dangerous."

Many of the Big Ten coaches agreed that Hawkeye first year coach Angie Lee would be able to mold the young players and keep the fine Iowa tradition alive.

Joseph Strathman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Angie Lee talks with sophomore forward Tiffany Gooden during an exhibition game against Athletes in Action. Lee, Iowa's first-year head coach, and Gooden, an all Big Ten Conference first-team selection hope to guide the Hawkeyes to a successful season.

"Angie is sitting on a practical gold mine over there," Wisconsin coach Jane Albright-Dieterle said. "The core of that team is young but you have to remember that they return four starters. I'd take that any day."

Northwestern coach Don Perrelli said that even though it was Lee's first year at the helm, Iowa will give teams fits.

"Angie is taking over one of the top women's college basketball programs in the country. She won't follow Vivian's teachings to the tee because I think Angie can instill her own system. Iowa is going to be a team to watch out for like they always are," Perrelli said.

POLLS NEED WORK

Wildcats are better than FSU? Yeah, right

I have a big problem with college football pollsters.

When it comes time for these brilliant philosophers to decide who is ranked where, they first turn to last week's poll, as if it were Scripture, then they move the teams up that won and drop the teams that lost.

It doesn't matter who the team lost to, or by how much. It just matters that the team lost.

Prime example: Florida State. Running back Warrick Dunn was less than a foot away from the end zone a week and a half ago against a quality Virginia team. Dunn was a foot away from a touchdown, a foot away from a victory and apparently, a foot away from being allowed to stay in the Top Five.

With the goal-line stand by the Virginia defense, Florida State plummeted to No. 6 in the polls. The Seminoles, because of that one-foot loss, suddenly became a lesser team than Tennessee and Northwestern, two teams with identical records.

The only thing Tennessee and Northwestern had going for them was the fact that they didn't lose that week. And that single week is all the pollsters seemed to remember.

The pollsters appeared to forget that Tennessee lost by a whopping 25 points to Florida. The pollsters also seemed to forget that Northwestern lost to Miami of Ohio.

And certainly the pollsters didn't picture in their minds what they were actually putting down on paper. They were saying: I believe that Northwestern is a better team than Florida State. I honestly feel that the Wildcats would win if these two teams met.

Do they let anybody vote in these polls?

Did any of these pollsters watch Northwestern play Iowa?

I did. I watched Northwestern, supposedly the No. 5 team in the nation, and I was far from impressed. Yeah, I will admit the Wildcats are better than Iowa.

But not by much.

When Iowa played No. 4 Ohio State a couple weeks ago, I was in awe. I could actually hear Bobby Hoving and Terry Glenn laughing as they passed over Iowa's defense for what could have been hundreds of yards.

I was not in awe, however, when I saw Northwestern. I simply saw a team that was fully capable of losing to the Hawkeyes.

But what I think doesn't count.

British WBC Heavyweight champion Frank Bruno poses in London, Monday with a cut-out of American heavyweight boxer Mike Tyson.

Bruno ready for rematch with Tyson

Stephen Wade
Associated Press

LONDON — Frank Bruno lasted only five rounds the last time he fought Mike Tyson, but that was six years ago when nothing seemed to go right for the British WBC champion.

"This time I've got the belt and I'm the champion," Bruno said Monday, confirming his March 16 title fight in Las Vegas with Tyson. "When I fought the last time, I wasn't right mentally, but now it's a whole new kettle of fish."

"I feel confident and the time is right for me," he added. "Tyson's been in prison for three years and out of the ring for four. If people think he's unbeatable, they need their heads examined. If they think that, they'll think I'm unbelievable when I beat him."

"I'm not trying to fight Tom, Dick or Harry, I'm trying to fight the creme de la creme and Mike Tyson is No. 1. He's still up there. He's out of prison. He's the boxer to beat, to wipe him off the map and go down in history."

Bruno, 33, made history when he defeated American Oliver McCall in September to become the first British heavyweight in 98 years to win the title in the ring.

The British bookmakers William Hill remained unconvinced, listing Tyson as a 1-to-7 favorite Monday to take back the title.

The WBC sanctioned the Bruno-Tyson fight last week in Thailand after British courts threw out a suit by Lennox Lewis contending he deserved the first shot at a mega-rich Tyson bout.

Lewis has filed a similar suit in New Jersey trying to bar the Bruno-Tyson fight. Bruno's promoter Frank Warren said the suit was to be ruled on Nov. 28 and predicted it would fail, too. He also threatened a counter-suit against Lewis.

"The WBC has sanctioned this fight," Warren said. "If Lewis continues with this he will find himself on the other side of a lawsuit." Warren said a contract for the bout was signed last summer.

Tyson, who was to fight Buster Mathis Jr. last weekend, has postponed that fight until January because of a broken thumb.

"I don't think anybody is in position to say exactly what Tyson will be like," Warren said. "He still appeared to have great hand speed in the (89-second) fight over Peter McNeeley in August. What I'm hoping is that the stamina isn't there and at the end this guy (Bruno) knocks him over."

"We all know Mike Tyson can be knocked down," Warren added. "One thing for sure is that Frank Bruno is probably the hardest puncher of all of them."

Bruno called the year-long lead-up to the 1989 Tyson fight "the worst training period of my life." The fight was postponed several times. His trainer George Francis said he was over-trained and tired by the time he fought.

"The last time it was called off several times and Frank got down to his lightest weight he's ever been, 20 pounds below what he is now," Francis said. "We'll probably go back to the States again to train — maybe in a high altitude site. Frank's in the best shape of his life, and that's our great advantage."

Added Bruno, "I'm the champion and I can stand toe-to-toe, head-to-head with any heavyweight in the world," Bruno said. "Maybe I didn't feel that confident six years ago."

CYCLONE BACK

ISU's Davis grows in popularity

Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

In threatening the 2,000-yard barrier, running back Troy Davis has become a marked man on the field and a popular figure when he leaves it.

The Iowa State sophomore toiled in obscurity last season, when he carried the ball only 35 times for a team that didn't win a game. Not so this year.

Autograph seekers assemble outside the Iowa State football building after games, awaiting his emergence. Fellow students greet him and offer encouragement or congratulations.

Davis wouldn't call himself the most popular guy on campus, but he definitely is well known.

"When I walk around campus, people know who I am," he said Monday. "They always speak to me and say hi to me and things like that."

Davis notices the autograph seekers, too, and appreciates their interest. After Saturday's 49-7 loss to Kansas State, a couple of dozen fans waited for him despite bitterly cold weather.

"That's something that builds my confidence back up after a loss, to still see that people care about this team," Davis said. "They're going to be behind us 100 percent."

Davis, the nation's leading rusher, was named the Big Eight's offensive player of the week Monday after carrying 41 times for 183 yards against Kansas State, which has the nation's top-ranked defense.

He won in a split vote over Kansas State quarterback Matt Miller, who threw three touchdown passes to break the Big Eight's season record and ran for two more scores.

Davis needs 170 yards in next Saturday's season finale at Missouri to become the fifth back in Division I football and first sophomore to run for 2,000 in a season. His 1,830 yards now are the most by a Big Eight sophomore.

Three of the four 2,000-yard rushers also played in the Big Eight — Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State, Mike Rozier of Nebraska and Rashaan Salaam of Colorado. The other was Southern Cal's Marcus Allen.

"It's going to mean a lot to me, the coaches and the players on our team, especially the coaches," Davis said on the prospect of joining that elite group. "This is the coaches' first year here coaching me, so it would mean the most to them."

49ers' Tyrone Drakeford sacks Cowboys quarterback Wade Wilson during the third quarter Sunday.

Dallas still reeling from Niners' blowout

Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — The Dallas Cowboys needed some good news and they got it Monday when quarterback Troy Aikman's knee injury was diagnosed as a bruised tendon, meaning he could play this weekend at Oakland.

"There is swelling and soreness but there is a good chance Troy could be ready this week," team trainer Kevin O'Neill said. "We're very excited about it. This is a great result."

Aikman was injured in the first quarter of Sunday's 38-20 loss to San Francisco and had an MRI the next day.

"Troy was lucky," O'Neill said. "He bruised a tendon that's part of the hamstring muscle. It's not a very common injury. We're treating it with ice."

Defensive tackle Chad Hennings has a sprained right knee. He is wearing a brace and is listed as questionable for Sunday's game against the Raiders.

Battered physically and psychologically, the Cowboys were still trying to figure out how the 49ers outwitted and outplayed them for the third consecutive game.

"Dumbfounded," was the way Dallas coach Barry Switzer described his mood.

"I have no explanation how it could happen to us again," Switzer said. "We'll never beat San Francisco if we do what we've done the last three games. The turnover rate is 12-to-1."

Dallas lost to San Francisco 21-14 during the regular season last year and fell 38-28 in the NFC championship game.

Young out another month

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Steve Young, puzzled by persistent soreness in his passing shoulder, underwent arthroscopic surgery Monday and could be lost to the San Francisco 49ers for another month.

Club president Carmen Polity said Young's recovery stalled in the last two weeks and Young, along with team physician Dr. Michael Dillingham, decided a more aggressive approach was necessary.

The 49ers baffled the Cowboys with the simple move of putting wide receiver Jerry Rice into the slot position.

"You can blame me 100 percent," said Switzer, 0-3 against the 49ers.

Switzer said the Cowboys might have put Deion Sanders man-to-man on Rice "if Deion hadn't missed practice all week. Rice in the slot was no surprise. Maybe we should have played more zone. But we couldn't get Deion on Jerry all the time because he hadn't practiced it. It meant our linebackers had to be part of the scheme."

Rice caught an 81-yard touchdown pass from Elvis Grbac with linebacker Darrin Smith chasing in vain and the rout was on.

"It was the same coverage we've played all year but Rice took advantage of it," Smith said. "Until we made adjustments we were just sitting ducks back there. It was a chess game and they won. Jerry is usually outside. Our big problem was execution of our scheme."

25 YEARS AGO

West Virginia school remembers tragedy

Matt Harvey
Associated Press

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Much like the day President Kennedy died, many West Virginians will never forget where they were when Marshall University's football team died in the worst disaster in U.S. sports.

Keith Morehouse remembers. His father, Gene, Marshall's sports information director and play-by-play broadcaster, was among the 43 players and coaches and 32 administrators, fans and crew who died in a plane crash 25 years ago.

"I think we were watching 'The Newlywed Game,'" Morehouse said. "A bulletin flashed across the screen and Mom reacted. I remember a shriek and her running out to the phone. After that, it became a blur."

Morehouse was 9 that Nov. 14, 1970. He now covers sports for WOWK-TV in Huntington. He subsequently married Debbie Hagley, whose parents, Marshall fans, also died in the crash.

"Some people ask, 'How do you deal with it? Aren't you bitter?'" Morehouse said. "I don't think you can be bitter. We sort of handle it together. We don't talk about it a lot. But we talk about our parents a lot."

Authorities blamed the pilots of the chartered Southern Airways DC-9 jetliner for crashing into a hillside just short of Tri-State Airport in rain and fog.

Chuck Landon, now a sports columnist for the Charleston Daily Mail, was a student reporter at the university then. Ten of the players who died had lived in his dormitory.

"You remember all the little details, where you were that night, who you talked to," he said. "The strange thing is, you look in the mirror and you're 25 years older but all your friends who were killed in the crash, you still picture them as 18, 19, 20 years old."

Before the crash, Marshall had not had a winning season since 1964, but had high hopes for second-year coach Rick Tolley. The Thundering Herd, 0-9-1 the year before he arrived, went 3-7 his first season and was 3-6 at the time of the crash.

After the crash, Marshall didn't have a winning season until 1984, but hasn't had a losing one since.

It won the NCAA Division I-AA title in 1992, was runner-up in 1987, 1991 and 1993, and a semifinalist in 1994. Marshall, poised to move up to Division I-A in 1997, currently is ranked seventh in its division.

But no success can supplant memories of the crash in this city of about 55,000 on the Ohio River near Kentucky and Ohio.

"It's always going to be there because that was so devastating," Landon said. "It was devastating to us because it was our friends and our football team."

"But it was devastating to the city of Huntington because it was their civic leaders," he said. "So many influential people in town — businessmen, doctors — so many of them got killed in the crash."

Morehouse recalled that most mates were touched in some way.

"For people to say let it go, that's impossible. ... The time to bring up the morbid details, I think that's over," Morehouse said. "But, whether people like it or not, this university will always be connected to the plane crash."

The university's Memorial Student Center was named after the crash, and a Memorial Fountain was built. The fountain is shut off for the winter each Nov. 14. A handful of people usually attend.

NBA RUNNERS UP

Orlando proving life minus Shaq bearable

Fred Goodall

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Sooner or later, Dennis Scott figures, the rest of the NBA will recognize the Orlando Magic is a team with more than one, or even two, dimensions.

The defending Eastern Conference champions not only are coping with the loss of the injured Shaquille O'Neal, but they've quietly gotten off to the quickest start in the team's seven-year history.

The Magic were 4-2 through six games each of the last three seasons with O'Neal, the defending league scoring champion who will be sidelined until late December with a broken right thumb.

While no one predicted the team would fall apart without its All-Star center, the 5-11 record Orlando will carry into Tuesday night's early-season showdown with Chicago is better than even coach Brian Hill expected at this point.

The Magic opened with six games in just nine days, but benefited from playing four of those games at home — three against teams that were either over-matched, despite O'Neal's absence, or also were missing key players because of injuries.

Saturday night's 94-93 come-from-behind victory over Miami was the team's first against an opponent with a winning record. But Scott said that shouldn't detract from what the Magic has accomplished.

"We've got so many weapons on this team — guys who can just flat out play the game — but people just talk about Penny and Shaq so much."

Dennis Scott, Magic shooting guard

Despite the absence of a consistent low-post game with O'Neal sidelined, the Magic has rallied from double-digit deficits in three of its victories. Anfernee Hardaway's layup with 1.2 seconds left gave the Magic its only lead against Miami.

"Of course no one believes what we're doing," Scott said. "But the way we look at it is we don't want any credit. Don't give us any credit.

"Just let us keep playing our game, playing hard, making scrappy plays going down the stretch to win ball games."

Hardaway, a first-team all-NBA selection last season, has adjusted to the role as the first option on offense. He scored a career-high 42 points in a triple-overtime victory over New Jersey and is averaging 27 per game — nine above his career average.

The Magic are 8-3 in games O'Neal has missed because of injury or suspension in four seasons.

Hardaway has played in 10 of those games, helping the team to an 8-2 record and posting the two highest scoring games of his career.

But there's more to the club's success than Hardaway, who's also averaging 6.2 rebounds and 7.3 assists.

Scott is producing 22 points per game, while Nick Anderson is averaging 15 even though the Magic's shooting percentage is down (43 percent) from last season when Orlando was one of only two NBA teams that shot better than 50 percent.

"We've got so many weapons on this team — guys who can just flat-out play the game — but people talk about Penny and Shaq so much," Scott said.

"But we're glad they do that because (opponents) forget about me and I can get out there and do my thing a little bit. They forget about Nick and leave him open, too."

Another key has been free-throw shooting.

The Magic have outscored the opposition 159-122 from the foul line, converting 73 percent of their attempts after finishing last in the NBA a year ago with O'Neal making just 53 percent of his league-leading 854 attempts.

And then there's the homecourt advantage. The Magic are 4-0 at Orlando Arena where they were 39-2 during the regular season last winter.

They'll catch breaks at home this week with Chicago missing Dennis Rodman.

Indiana comes to town Thursday night but won't be able to play starters Reggie Miller, Dale Davis and Mark Jackson because of suspensions.

Rik Smits and Derrick McKey, the other Pacers regulars, are injured.

Indiana figures to be hobbled more than Chicago, the league's only unbeaten team, but Orlando always plays with confidence at home.

Even without Shaq.

RODMAN-LESS

Chicago formidable to start off NBA season

Mike Nadel

Associated Press

CHICAGO — With Dennis Rodman or without him, with Luc Longley imitating a real NBA center or simply taking up space, with bit players contributing or just looking on, there's been no beating the Bulls.

At 5-0, Chicago is the last of the NBA's unbeaten teams and is off to its best start ever.

The Bulls have won with first-half blowouts, third-quarter blitzkriegs and fourth-quarter comebacks. They've won with surprising performances by Dickey Simpkins, Jud Buechler and Bill Wennington. Coach Phil Jackson admits they've won partly because of an early schedule full of teams "either struggling or restructuring or out of whack because of injuries."

Mostly, though, they've won for the reasons nearly everybody

"I felt very confident about this team last year when I joined them. And that was without Rodman. We can play without Rodman, but we're a better team with Rodman, so hopefully (the injury) won't last long."

Michael Jordan, Bulls guard thought they would: Given a full training camp to mesh with his teammates, their star has been vintage Michael Jordan; and Scottie Pippen remains one of basketball's gifted all-around players.

"Michael and Pip," Portland coach P.J. Carlesimo said Saturday after his team became the Bulls' latest victim, "made the plays when it counted."

When the Bulls won NBA titles in 1991, 1992 and 1993, there was no doubt that Pippen was Jordan's underling. Since ending his 17-month retirement last March, however, Jordan repeatedly has said Pippen is now the team leader.

"Michael's inference that it's still Scottie's team helps the team along," Jackson said. "He has given a lot of support to the coaching staff, to Scottie and to the other players on the team. That helps some of the young guys get comfortable in understanding who he is."

On the court, he's still Jordan.

He is scoring a league-high 32 points a game — in line with his career average, the best in NBA history. Jordan said during training camp that his struggles at the end of last season were an aberration, that he was back in basketball shape and that he was ready to pick up where he left off in 1993.

The addition of Rodman, an extraordinary rebounder, has filled a void. But even without Rodman, who may miss a month with a strained calf muscle, the Bulls are tough to beat.

"The difference is that I know a lot of these players better. My game is better," Jordan said. "I felt very confident about this team last year when I joined them. And that was without Rodman. We can play without Rodman, but we're a better team with Rodman, so hopefully that won't last long."

Longley, a marginal center during his four previous seasons, remains inconsistent. But when he performs as he did Saturday — 17 points, six rebounds and two big blocked shots down the stretch — he makes Chicago one of the most complete teams.

Saturday, Portland's Rod Strickland exposed one of Chicago's weaknesses — defending small, quick guards. The Bulls lack a true point guard, so that responsibility falls to the 6-foot-6, 32-year-old Jordan.

"This is new for me in my career," Jordan said. "Strickland is one of the best. As much as I tried to keep pressure on him, he was able to break me down. You just have to tip your hat and say, 'Good job.'"

"But we won the game."

In their three title seasons, the Bulls never were unbeaten after even two games. So what does it mean to be 5-0?

"We've still got a chance at 82-0," Jordan said, rolling his eyes. "We're playing well enough to be 5-0. I've got to give us that credit, but I don't think we're where we want to be."

"I mean, to really say that this is the best Bulls team ever, we have to win a championship."

Ribs compete with the best

It's a good thing the best place to get a great rib selection is so far off campus. Otherwise, I'd never be able to get a seat.

It's disheartening to realize it took three years to find this place, especially since I regularly complained there was no decent place to get ribs in Iowa City. Actually, there isn't. Park Avenue BBQ and Grille, 708 First Avenue, is in Coralville, hence its elusiveness.

Park Avenue's spare and baby-back ribs are not only worthy of mention in the same thought as my hometown, St. Louis, they're worthy of comparison — although they still fall short on sheer principle. The meat on Park Avenue's is not only tender, but plentiful, gushing with smoky flavor and high in quality.

There's even one aspect of Park Avenue which St. Louis rib distributors don't bring into account: Not everyone's taste buds react the same way to various levels of spices. Park Avenue's ribs come basted in a light sauce, but three or four dispensers of barbecue sauce

Park Avenue BBQ and Grille

708 First Avenue

Rating: ★★ out of ★★★★★

— ranging from bic lighter to four-alarm fire — rest on the table.

In St. Louis, it's either scald the surface of your tongue, or don't try the ribs. Park Avenue offers even the heartburn-susceptible a chance to experience what real rib meat should taste like, and they even have enough common sense to put a napkin dispenser right at the table.

However, Park Avenue's benefits don't stop there. The rib specialists also offer an assortment of appetizers. Most notable are spinach bites — fried balls of spinach and mozzarella cheese that could make a meal by themselves.

For those not into ribs, Park Avenue also offers chicken, beef brisket (again — very tender and void of excess fat) and an assortment of non-finger foods.

The only area in which Park Avenue falls short is its side dishes. The patron is offered two sides per entree, including cole slaw, french fries, mashed potatoes, scalloped potatoes and several others.

While main dishes are more than enough to recommend Park Avenue, the side dishes look as if they take second priority — in terms of quality and preparation — to the primary course. The scalloped potatoes, although I'm sure prepared with care, consistently taste a day old and microwaved, while carrying the texture of baby food. Also, be careful of the cole slaw. Instead of a traditionally sweet flavor, it is extremely tart and is more productive at sending you to your water to wash the taste away than digging in for another bite.

Still, Park Avenue is recommended for anyone fed up with the lack of good, stick-to-your-stomach, still-taste-it-three-days-later types of Iowa City eating establishments. It may be a hike for most students, especially those without cars, but if you can make it out there, you'll be so full of high-quality food you won't need to return for a while.

All You Can Eat — k.d. lang

Few singers pitch woo with the sense of purpose of k.d. lang, who vividly evokes the playfulness, fear and total self-absorption of romance on her new album. "How bad could it be," she sings, "if you amuse yourself with me?" Not bad at all — lang shakes some of the overly mannered stylings of her previous, Ingenue, and, although without a song as striking as "Constant Craving," this disc runs deeper. "Sexuality," of course, is pure pleasure, as is "If I Were You" and the self-doubting "Maybe." The only weakness: Her musical accompaniment, particularly the cheesy drum sound, doesn't quite do justice to her marvelous voice and songs.

South Paw Grammar — Morrissey

No one can accuse Morrissey of making concessions for commercial success. He opens South Paw Grammar with an 11-minute song that sounds like a bad horror movie. Throw in another 10-minute song and one more that begins with a two-minute drum solo and you get the idea — this can be an ordeal to listen to. Yet, on songs like "The Boy Racer" and "Dagenham Dave," Morrissey matches some of his most petulant lyrics with some crackling rock 'n' roll. "I turn the music down and I don't know why, this is my house," he whines on "Best Friend on the Payroll." Vintage Morrissey. Ultimately, though, this album is too thin to warrant a recommendation.

Maya Angelou on teaching kids

Nancy Mayer
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — If Maya Angelou could give children a single insight to help them grow, she would deliver it gift-wrapped in poetry and wait for the young people to fold back the words to reveal tolerance.

A sampling from Japanese haiku to American inner-city rap could show that "everybody loves flowers or everybody has some fear of the dark," Angelou said in an interview.

"I would encourage the child to look at her (or) his world, at the people in their world and to try to examine the cultures in their world without fear. I would try to lead the children into seeing that human beings are more alike than we are unlike."

The author of 12 best-selling books has a reputation for wisdom and insight, especially when it comes to a child's emerging sense of identity and belonging in a fractious society.

Angelou, 66, wrote "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" about her childhood self-revelation as a girl growing up in 1930s Arkansas. In 1993, she wrote President Clinton's inaugural poem, "On the Pulse of Morning." A book of poems published this year, "PHENOMENAL WOMAN," praises womanliness.

Angelou's life speaks well to the history of racial strife in America. She protested alongside Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X, prospered on her own merits during the shift from Jim Crow laws to affirmative action and journeyed to Africa and back only to discover that a person's search for roots may have little to do with race after all.

"It's the striving in itself that is delicious," Angelou said, explaining her buoyant hopefulness in the midst of adversity and pain.

It is hard to decide if she thinks people survive and forge ahead because they are courageous, inspired or just downright bull-headed.

"We have to kill to eat, and eat to live — and yet we want it," she said. "If we dare to love, we might be devastated — and yet we want it."

"The contradiction is so intriguing that very few of us willingly want to give it up."

Her own life offers hope that even down-and-out youths can pick themselves up and realize dreams of their own making.

She was 16, pregnant and unmarried when she watched ambassadors and diplomats file into a San Francisco hotel 50 years ago to sign the United Nations charter. She remembers feeling too black, too female, too tall and too alone to think about following them.

But she was invited inside this summer for the anniversary celebration of the charter's signing. Angelou read her poem, "A Brave and Startling Truth," on the same stage with U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali.

A few days before the event, Angelou reflected on how far the "United Nations" have come and how far they still have to go. She said popular children's star Barney and Sesame Street's Big Bird give her hope.

"I mean, look at today's children loving a purple dinosaur who doesn't look like anything raised in their homes. And a bird that is 10 feet tall and speaks with a very strange voice," Angelou said.

"It's rather natural to fear those things we don't understand and those people who might look different from us. On the other hand, it's very easy for people to overcome."

She suggested promoting world peace by giving every newborn a membership card to the United Nations.

"Just let them know they're born a member, and that they have all the privileges and responsibilities thereto appertaining," Angelou said.

Her solution includes showing children pictures of the human family's varying forms of ornamentation: intricately scarred torsos in Central Africa, bamboo-pierced noses in the Amazon, tattooed biceps in San Francisco and diamond-studded earlobes in Paris.

"Let the child see that all human beings try to be beautiful," Angelou said.
