Hayden Fry tackles critics

'I don't feel like we have to defend a cotton pickin' thing'

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

As critics across the state call for this to be his last season, Hayden Fry defended himself at his weekly press conference on Tuesday, saying he has done all he can to help the Hawks win football games.

"I just don't understand all this criticism," Fry said, referring to radio call-in shows and newspaper editorials saying he should call his 17-year UI coaching career quits after Northwestern defeated Iowa, 31-20, on Nov. 11.

"We've lost one game the whole year to a team that we were favored to beat and that

No. 19 in the nation. The other, Illinois, has the No. 17 defense in the nation.

"The last couple of years, we've probably was Illinois," he said. "That's all. We still got two games to go. We still can be 7-4. We still got a shot at a bowl game. All of this noise and everything, it's just unbelievable."

Iowa has lost a total of four football games this season. Three were to teams currently ranked No. 2, No. 5 and done the best job of coaching we've ever done, taking into consideration playing with fourth-team or fifth-team quarterbacks and the injury situation against quality people," Fry said. "We have worked our tail off around the clock."

Under Fry, the Hawkeyes have reached a bowl game 11 times in 16 years.

"I don't feel like we have to defend a cotton pickin' thing," Fry said. "We've got so many positive things going for us that other universities don't have and then suddenly here comes the hammer. It doesn't make sense to me."

Fry is concerned that the bad press will negatively impact his players, who are instructed not to pay attention to the media. "I think some of them probably wish they hadn't come to Iowa reading all the garbage in the papers," Fry said. "My players are very proud young men. It just kills them to lose, regardless of who's favored."

Senior captain Matt Purdy said he has followed Fry's advice and has not read any papers or watched the news since losing to

UI may 'get some' condom ad flybys

UI spokesperson: 'We'll get letters for that one'

Chad Graham
The Daily Iowan

Condoms may be the newest objects to be brought into UI football games, but they will stay overhead thanks to Sheik Condom Company.

The company has picked numerous football games at Big Ten schools like Illinois, Michigan and Northwestern to advertise its condoms. The banner, attached to an airplane, reads "Sheik condoms — get some."

Though Sheik hasn't fully determined if its banner will make an appearance at the UI-Minnesota game, said Leanne Hand, a Sheik spokesperson, the company may look into advertising in the skies above Kinnick Stadium.

"We were trying to come up with a new way to get the message across," she said. "Network TV and some of the hip and trendy channels on cable have strict rules about condom advertising. Even Sports Illustrated wouldn't accept our ads — they're the guys that put

TEAM KEPT IN DARK

Kingsbury unlikely to play tonight

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily Iowan

UI basketball player Chris Kingsbury will not suit up for tonight's game against Marathon Oil, sources close to the basketball team said Tuesday night.

The reason for this decision is unknown and even members of the team are being kept in the dark about it, sources said.

Kingsbury

Coach Tom Davis could not be reached for comment.

After an arrest early Friday morning for public intoxication, Kingsbury was withheld from Sunday's exhibition game against the Republic of Georgia, but was able to practice Monday.

Police responded to a report that someone was urinating in the lobby of the downtown Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St., at 2:37 a.m. Friday. Kingsbury was with a group of people who

VA EMPLOYEES WORK WITHOUT PAY

Hospital staff feels pain of shutdown

Cary Jordan
The Daily Iowan

Levels of frustration soared among Veteran Affairs Medical Center staffers on Tuesday morning, when they were confronted with cuts in staff as a result of the government shutdown.

Between 130 and 140 VA "non-essential" staffers were given letters of furlough, which are letters granting personnel a temporary leave of absence, when they reported to work Tuesday morning.

"The overall feeling seems to be why isn't this (budget) mess being corrected? Those who will be working without pay and those who received furlough letters just don't know how it's come to this."

John Winters, medical administrative officer of the VA

Those who were sent home were staffers in research, supervising, personnel, contracting and accounting. All VA doctors, nurses and pharmacists — totaling between 800 and 900 people — were kept on to work without pay during the shutdown.

Medical administrative officer of the VA, John Winters, said levels of frustration among everyone involved seemed to peak when the shutdown was official, and the staff cuts were for real.

"I think the staff was very upset when they found out they were being sent home," Winters said. "Frustration levels seemed to rise higher and higher."

PROFESSORS EXPRESS CONFLICTING VIEWS

Faculty to vote on decreasing GERs

Greyson Purcell
The Daily Iowan

The Liberal Arts Faculty Assembly will vote today on two different plans proposing a decrease in the number of General Education Requirements each student is required to take before graduation.

"I can understand why some professors think there are too many GERs, but I can also think of some professors in the liberal arts who think this is the last chance students have to get this type of education," UI religion professor J. Kenneth Kuntz said.

The two proposals involve a regrouping of GERs and an elimination of one natural science requirement.

One of the main questions is whether a GER cut would apply only to incoming freshmen and transfer students or to currently enrolled students as well.

UI mathematics professor Keith Stroyan, a member of the Educational Policy Committee who proposed the new GER plans, said the Faculty Assembly will decide to whom the cut will apply.

"My belief is we would support that everyone be allowed the less

Oddities &amp; Idiosyncrasies

Princess Di to give first solo interview

Associated Press

LONDON — On Prince Charles' 47th birthday, his estranged wife gave him quite a surprise.

The BBC announced Tuesday that Princess Diana will talk about her life, her broken marriage and her hopes for the future in a television broadcast next Monday.

Diana's first solo, on-the-record interview appears to be her response to Charles' own candid television interview more than a year ago, in which he admitted to being unfaithful.

Buckingham Palace said Queen Elizabeth II and Charles were unaware of Diana's plans until Tuesday morning.

"I'm detecting a sense of shock and a certain dejection, a sort of feeling that 'here we go again,'" Jenny Bond, BBC's palace correspondent, said in a radio report.

The BBC did not immediately announce plans for overseas broadcast of the interview, which was done by its long-running current events program "Panorama."

Diana, who often shows a deft touch in news manipulation, apparently dictated the timing of the announcement.

"The princess asked that we didn't inform anybody at all until she had spoken to the palace, which she was only able to do this morning," a "Panorama" spokesperson said.

Charles was in Germany on Tuesday, where children from the International School in Berlin sang "Happy Birthday." He simply stared at a German reporter who asked his reaction to the announcement of the interview.

Last year, it was Charles who put the world's most famous failed marriage in the spotlight when he agreed to a lengthy television interview with Jonathan Dimbleby, who also published a lengthy biography of the prince.

Charles admitted straying from

"I'm detecting a sense of shock and a certain dejection, a sort of feeling that 'here we go again.'"

Jenny Bond, BBC's palace correspondent

his marriage vows, but insisted the infidelity happened only after the marriage was "irretrievably broken down, us both having tried." The couple formally separated in December of 1992.

Dimbleby said Charles confirmed his affair was with Camilla Parker Bowles, who was married at the time. In March, Parker Bowles and her husband Andrew divorced.

Speculation continues about whether Charles hopes to marry again. Neither he nor Diana has initiated divorce proceedings.

Bond said Diana was upset by Charles' disclosures.

"She tells me that she didn't read the Dimbleby book and I don't think she watched the program, but she saw all the press coverage," Bond said. "And she was hurt. And she was hurt on behalf of her children particularly.

"I think she has been itching ... to put her side of the story for some time," Bond said.

Buckingham Palace said Diana has never before given an official interview alone. She and Charles gave joint interviews with their engagement in 1981 and in 1985, when they joked about rumors their marriage was troubled.

But Diana has been known to speak to certain reporters off-the-record, and Bond recalled having a confidential chat with Diana at the princess' Kensington Palace home.

"I was astonished by how freely she spoke about her life and her feelings, and how articulately," Bond said.

The one-hour "Panorama" program was distilled from an interview Martin Bashir conducted at Britain's Prince Charles wears slippers while admiring the ceiling inside Sanssouci castle near Berlin Tuesday, where he celebrated his 47th birthday during his four-day visit to Germany. Princess Diana, left, announced she will give an interview on BBC. She will be on the December cover of Bazaar.

the princess' home earlier this month, the BBC said.

As for the queen's plans for tuning in Nov. 20, a Buckingham Palace spokesperson said: "The queen does not watch 'Panorama.' In any case, the queen and Prince Philip will be at the Royal Variety Performance that night."

Former Reagan aide admits Cold War meeting was nerve-racking

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — The meeting that helped end the Cold War left some of former President Reagan's aides in a sweat.

That's according to former Secretary of State George Shultz, who recalled the Nov. 19, 1985, private meeting between Reagan and former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The meeting inside a small boathouse in Geneva was supposed to last only 15 minutes. But it dragged on for 75 minutes, leaving Reagan's aides squirming.

After 30 minutes, one nervous U.S. aide asked if he should interrupt, Shultz said at the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library during a celebration of the 10th anniversary of the meeting.

"If you're stupid enough to go in and break up that meeting, then you don't deserve the job you have," Shultz told the aide.

"It was a momentous day and a momentous meeting," Shultz said Monday.

"When they came out, they were both smiling. They clicked."

Ed McMahon hospitalized for surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former "Tonight Show" sidekick and "Star Search" host Ed McMahon has been hospitalized for minor surgery.

McMahon, 72, entered a hospital Monday for removal of a benign polyp from his colon, publicist Susan Dubow said. She would not identify the hospital.

"His prognosis is excellent and he is expected to be released in a few days," she said.

Look who's talking about 'kiddie' movies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Kirstie Alley is looking for a break from all the 'cutesy' movies she's been making with children.

"I would like to do something really, really dark. I would like to do something that's very, very sexy," Alley said during a recent interview to promote "It Takes Two," which opens Friday.

In her latest movie, which follows her "Look Who's Talking" baby trilogy, Alley plays a devoted case worker who dreams of falling in love and adopting an orphan. Twin 9-year-old girls, played by Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen, cook up a scheme to make it come true.

Her next project is co-producing "Three Blind Mice," a coming-of-age movie about three 11-year-old boys. She'll play one of their moms.

Race car ace Petty speeds toward political office

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — He's been running flat-out on stock car tracks for years. Now racing legend Richard Petty is revving up to run for state office.

Petty, a Republican, has sent out a fundraising letter asking supporters to help finance a run for the secretary of state's office.

Jim Trotter, Petty's campaign manager, said Monday.

"Something needs to be done to bring the average person back into our state's and nation's political affairs," the seven-time NASCAR racing champion wrote in the letter.

Petty will challenge Secretary of State Rufus Edmisten, who has been criticized for allegedly using employees to do private work on state time. A spokesperson for Edmisten wouldn't comment.

Clancy launches his submarine into cyberspace

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Clancy found fame by taking readers through the intricacies of high-tech submarines and espionage in "The Hunt For Red October." Now he's heading for cyberspace.

Clancy is branching out from the printed page with a new collection of interactive computer games, some of which will feature Jack Ryan, hero of "Red October" and "Patriot Games."

Initial offerings on computer CD-ROMs will include a "virtual exploration" of a nuclear submarine, a game featuring Ryan and a space adventure game called "Tom Clancy's First Contact: Derelict."

"Tom Clancy is becoming an entertainment destination in a variety of media," the author's agent, Robert Gottlieb, said in Monday's edition of The Wall Street Journal.

Delta Gamma, BACCHUS team up for alcohol awareness

Sarah Lueck
The Daily Iowan

A nearly all-Greek audience gathered Tuesday night to learn about responsible alcohol use and alcohol poisoning at a panel discussion organized by the Delta Gamma sorority and BACCHUS.

A question and answer session was held after four panelists addressed the crowd.

Mary Peterson, adviser for Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students (BACCHUS), said drinking is not just about the law or health issues, but personal decisions.

"When I was a college student coming to the UI, the legal drinking age was 18. I thought I was a real woman and I was so excited to ... make my own decisions. The toughest thing about college is self-discipline. I soon found out shows how serious over-consumption of alcohol can be.

Julie Rohovit of Health Iowa

you can make mistakes — the key is to not make them twice. ... Your greatest power in life is to make your own decisions."

Peterson said UI sophomore and Lambda Chi Alpha associate member Matthew Garofalo's alcohol-related death on Sept. 8

"When you're young, you're invincible," she said. "At the UI — not unique to this year — we've proved that wrong."

Julie Rohovit of Health Iowa said it's always better to be safe than sorry when it comes to a friend who has consumed too much alcohol.

"It's so much better to have somebody wake up in a hospital bed the next day and be a little embarrassed or ticked off, than to have them not wake up at all," she said. "Throwing up is one sign of over-consumption. But not everybody throws up. ... Somebody needs to stay with that person. Use the buddy system."

Peterson said the idea that all college students drink is false and pressures newcomers into drinking.

"There are myths out there that all college students drink," she said. "That's a group-think; that's not a truth."

Peterson said upperclassmen should show responsibility when drinking with younger friends.

"It's the freshmen and sophomores that I'm worried about," she said. "The juniors and seniors should be role models. ... Don't teach them to party 'til they puke."

Rohovit gave the audience a quiz which addressed some alcohol consumption myths.

One of the myths Rohovit dispelled was that alcohol consumption benefits sexual performance.

"Guys, there's that Shakespeare saying: 'The spirit may be willing, but the flesh is weak,'" Rohovit said, causing laughter among the audience. "That's how it is with alcohol consumption."

Panelist Catherine Johnson spoke as a representative of UI Student Legal Services, about the legal issues involved in underage alcohol consumption.

She said her clients have faced charges in situations involving drunk driving, fake ID's, possession, public intoxication and providing alcohol to a minor.

Johnson said alcohol poisoning isn't a crime, but there are often charges involved.

"Charges can range from a simple misdemeanor, such as providing alcohol to a minor, to manslaughter, which is a felony."

UI sophomore Eric Watts, president of BACCHUS, was another panelist.

"We're about awareness; we don't require abstaining from alcohol," he said. "I don't think we'd get an audience (if we did), and we wouldn't be true to ourselves as students."

The construction north of the Main Library has recently made parts of the campus look similar to a large pothole. The changing landscape has resulted in a few detours for UI students.

BENNETT NOT YET HIRED

UIHC plans new forensic program, seeks state's top medical examiner

Daisy Hutzell
The Daily Iowan

UI Hospitals and Clinics is trying to recruit the state's top medical examiner, Dr. Thomas Bennett, to teach forensic pathology to its medical students in a new program it plans to create.

Though the AP said Tuesday that Bennett has already been hired by the UI and will begin his new position Jan. 1, Bennett told the DI that the program is only in the working stages, and he has not yet been hired.

"(The UI) is working on creating a program," Bennett said. "There has been interest in starting this program. The new dean has been supportive and helpful."

If UIHC establishes the new forensic pathology program, Bennett would move back to Des Moines from his home in Sioux City, Iowa, and keep his position as Iowa state medical examiner.

At UIHC, Bennett would teach forensic pathology, which includes teaching residents how to look for abuse in adults and children and how to examine gunshot wounds, the AP said.

Bennett said the idea for the new program is probably due to the recent loss of a forensic pathologist in eastern Iowa. He said he has tried before to bring a forensic pathology program to the UI.

"I've made inquiries about it before, but it never really came about until just now," Bennett said.

The new program would instruct students in the best ways to gather evidence in forensic cases, and would teach forensic pathology in the training program.

"I don't know how many classes I would be teaching yet," Bennett said. "Hopefully a bunch. That to me is the fun part."

Bennett also expressed an interest in teaching courses in forensic pathology through the College of Law, because forensic pathology interacts with the law, he said.

In his position as state medical examiner, Bennett is not paid but the state helps him with expenses. Teaching at the UI will hopefully give him a chance to receive a solid salary and benefits, he said.

Iowa has a need for more forensic pathologists because the amount of cases exceeds the number of available pathologists, Bennett said. Roughly 1,000 Iowa cases per year require forensic pathologists, and each pathologist can only handle about 300 cases.

"There is a definite need for four (forensic pathologists) in Iowa, if not more," Bennett said.

Pathologists fall into two categories: those who enjoy their work, and those who only work because they must, he said jokingly.

"I find it fascinating," Bennett said. "Some of the cases (in forensic pathology) are beyond the training we got (in college)."

T.J. Sallis, a third grader at Roosevelt Elementary in Waterloo, is the biggest Hawkeye fan on his block.

This semester, he's had the chance to talk to two Hawkeyes, UI junior Amy Sprick and UI senior Tammy Stage, through a pen-pal program started by UI Teaching Assistant Margaret-Mary Sulentic.

"(Amy) is nice and she always writes me and gave me pencils, stickers, bumper stickers and M&Ms," Sallis said.

When he gets older, Sallis wants to come to the UI to play football and basketball.

"Yep, I'm a Hawkeye fan," he said.

T.J. and 19 other students from Roosevelt visited the UI Tuesday to meet their pen pals. The program, which began this semester, was initiated to better the elementary students' skills and teach the UI students about the writing styles of this age group, Sulentic said.

The students participated in several activities, including meeting UI football defensive end George Bennett, Herky the Hawk and the UI women's basketball team.

Sulentic, who took a leave this year as a Waterloo school teacher, is a Teaching Assistant in elementary language arts methods and started the program along with Roosevelt Elementary third grade teacher Bonnie Bartlett.

"It's been wonderful," Sulentic said. "They have learned a lot about applying theory. When we talk about elementary spelling, the university students are amazed when they see how the students write."

Bartlett said a big part of the pen pal program is the kids learn by writing letters to the UI students and reading the letters they receive.

Students write and read letters every Friday, Bartlett said. On Thursday, they begin asking about whether they had received a letter from their pen pal.

"There was not one time a student did not want to write. It's been very motivational for writing."

"There was not one time a student did not want to write. It's been very motivational for writing," Bartlett said.

Bartlett said the UI students also encourage the kids to read books as well.

"Back and forth they'd talk about children's literature," Bartlett said.

"My kids would look in the library every week for what they'd suggest."

Tuesday was the first time the pen pals met face to face and talked about their letters.

Third grader Tynesha Gordon said she enjoyed seeing her pen pal.

"I like being with her," Gordon said.

One of Gordon's pen pals, UI junior Andrea Tomei, brought her a bag of gifts.

"I just brought them a little something. When they write, they like to use stickers," Tomei said.

Sulentic said the class can talk about the development of children and their learning processes in class, but it doesn't take the place of learning about the children firsthand.

"The more experiences the university students have, the better prepared they are going to be when they hit the classroom," Sulentic said.

She and Bartlett would like to continue the program and do it again next year.

Stage agreed and said T.J. is an expressive writer and an excellent artist — most of his artwork centers around UI sports — and she has learned a lot from him.

"We learned a lot on how to make language arts a real life experience — something that really matters to him," Stage said.

Dole and Gramm's political sparring digs deep

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — Republican presidential rivals Bob Dole and Phil Gramm continued to trade words Tuesday, with Dole's campaign attacking Gramm's absence from the Senate.

Gramm's campaign aides repeated Monday's call for an explanation of a published report that Dole had sought to give Iowa GOP officials $100,000 if they would cancel an August straw poll.

"We still haven't heard from them on the substance of that," Gramm aide Bob Haus said.

Dole's response came in the form of a statement declaring Gramm "missing in action" in the big budget fight congressional Republicans are waging with President Clinton.

"It's Phil Gramm himself that has disappeared into a black hole," Dole's statement said.

"As Bob Dole and Newt Gingrich are locked in a historic budget battle with Bill Clinton, Phil Gramm has been absent."

Dole charged that Gramm has missed voting on more than 25 items in the Republican "Contract with America."

"The clear difference is while Bob Dole is fighting to make the Republican revolution a reality, Phil Gramm is satisfied with using it as a campaign ploy," the statement said.

Evidence shows eggs aren't devilish

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Medical opinion on eggs is starting to turn sunny side up.

The latest evidence is a study showing that even people with moderately high cholesterol may be able to eat two eggs a day without harm — as long as they lay off the bacon.

Cholesterol in the bloodstream is bad for the heart. And since eggs have lots of cholesterol, experts have long assumed they must be bad, too. However, the reality is turning out to be more complicated.

It now appears that the cholesterol people eat has little impact on the cholesterol in their bloodstreams. Eating an egg raises cholesterol only slightly, if at all, for most people.

Not all agree, but many experts are coming to believe that eggs have been unfairly demonized and that cholesterol in the diet is much less damaging than saturated fat.

"Two eggs a day don't make much difference if you follow a low-fat diet," said Barbara Retzlaff, a dietitian who presented the latest study Tuesday at a meeting of the American Heart Association.

Most of the evidence on eggs has come from experiments on healthy people with normal cholesterol levels. The study presented Tuesday by researchers from the University of Washington, was different: It was conducted on people whose blood cholesterol levels averaged 227, which is somewhat above the recommended cutoff of 200.

Congresswoman files for divorce after husband splits

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Rep. Enid Waldholtz filed for divorce Tuesday from her husband, who has been missing for three days and is under federal investigation for possible campaign financing improprieties.

"I can't begin to describe the anger and hurt over the incredible level of deception that we have uncovered in our own investigation of Joe's activities," the freshman Republican congresswoman said in a statement.

"I want this man tracked down, arrested and punished for what he has done to me, my family and the people of Utah," she said of her husband of two years.

Enid Waldholtz said she had asked a court to grant her sole custody of the couple's 2 1/2-month-old daughter. She also asked for permission to restore her maiden name, Greene.

Joe Waldholtz is the focus of a federal investigation into the couple's finances that apparently began when the congressional credit union complained about large overdrafts.

As word of the investigation became public, a profile emerged of a man who convinced his wife he was worth millions and spent borrowed money as though he were.

800,000 feds left at home with shutdown

David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With the Smithsonian's museums shuttered and federal workers sent home in droves, the Clinton administration and Republican leaders failed to reach accord on the budget Tuesday and sharply attacked each other over a partial government shutdown.

"At this time, I have to tell you we are at an impasse," White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said after several hours of talks with GOP leaders ended without agreement.

With the shutdown less than one day old, however, Republicans moved to shelter certain politically popular programs from disruption.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich said legislation would likely begin moving "in the next day or two" to reopen facilities such as Social Security offices so new applications could be taken, veterans' offices, passport facilities and possibly national parks.

Both sides seemed to be digging in, though, on the overall issue of getting the entire government back into operation.

"Let's say 'Yes' to balancing the budget, but let us together say 'No' to these deep and unwise cuts in education, technology, the environment, Medicare and Medicaid," Clinton said in an assault on the GOP budget priorities.

Gingrich quickly retaliated, saying Clinton was accusing the GOP of "phony cuts that do not exist." He said the president's own balanced-budget proposal would perpetuate deficits forever, and he challenged Clinton to help negotiate a seven-year plan to erase deficits "without baloney."

The first effects of the shutdown were felt as the political positioning unfolded, although essential services such as the nation's defense, air traffic control system and prison operations were maintained without interruption.

"Due to the federal government shutdown, the Smithsonian Institution must be closed," read signs posted up and down Washington's Mall, home to museums where millions flock annually to gaze at exhibits of art, space exploration, natural history and more.

Mary Jo Kampe, visiting from Williamston, Mich., missed a long-awaited White House tour and was turned away at the nearby Holocaust Museum as well. "I have waited a very long time for this so I'm very upset, disappointed," she said.

Some 800,000 of the 2.1 million federal civilian workers in Washington and around the world had a place to go — home from their offices after reporting to work and being told their services were nonessential.

The American Federation of Government Employees filed a lawsuit challenging the administration's handling of the situation, including its definition of essential workers and its authority to require them to work without knowing when they would be paid. A federal judge scheduled a hearing for Thursday.

The inconvenience penetrated even the Senate's private preserve. Republican senators' lunch dining on Domino's pizza — cheese, vegetable and sausage toppings, they said — because the Senate's restaurants were closed.

Tourists board the ferry after being asked to leave Liberty Island on New York Harbor Tuesday following its closing due to the budget shutdown.

Senior White House aides met at midday with key lawmakers, the two sides arranging themselves around a green, felt-covered table in one of the Senate's committee meeting rooms. They reconvened a few hours later, but that session, like the first, yielded no agreement.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., said no further meetings had been set, although staff contacts would continue.

And with the government's routine borrowing authority expiring as well, Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said he would take unspecified steps "to avert the default that will otherwise take place."

The shutdown was triggered Monday night when Clinton vetoed legislation necessary to maintain regular government spending, saying he did so because it would have raised Medicare premiums. A White House meeting that lasted until the midnight hour failed to resolve the impasse.

Earlier, Clinton vetoed a measure necessary to extend government borrowing authority, citing provisions he said would restrict Rubin's ability to manage the government's finances.

Despite the uncertainty, financial markets reacted calmly to the events in Washington.

Budget stalemate scars politics

John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As the government closed its doors Tuesday, the instant political fallout was predictable: Americans cursed the return of gridlock and were reminded of why they have soured on politicians of all stripes.

The long-term political calculations are far more complicated, with the election-year impact impossible to predict until the broader budget battle is over.

Even the public battle lines were a bit deceptive as Washington plunged into a day of finger-pointing over who was to blame for locked museums, closed national parks and government offices operating with skeleton crews.

"The Republican Congress has brought us to this juncture," President Clinton said, by pushing a budget that "put ideology ahead of common sense and shared values."

"Lay it at the feet of the president," said House Majority Leader Dick Army, R-Texas, assigning the blame to the White House.

As such exchanges suggest, the showdown at its root is a partisan feud pitting Clinton against the GOP-controlled Congress, led by House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

But it's hardly that simple.

Divisions in the Republican ranks complicate any road to agreement, a dynamic made clear Monday in the silent treatment House GOP leaders gave a Medicare compromise floated by Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici of New Mexico.

The Democrats also face enormous internal pressure, the by-product of an expectation by many Democrats that Clinton will ultimately cut a deal with Republicans that undermines the congressional wing of his own party, at the very moment they sense an opening to score major points against the Republicans.

Indeed, an overnight ABC News poll found that 46 percent of Americans blamed Republicans in Congress for the budget impasse, while just 27 percent blamed Clinton. That survey comes on the heels of several recent polls showing growing anxiety about the Republican agenda, including a Times Mirror Center report showing 51 percent disapprove of Republican congressional leaders, while just 37 percent approve.

Northwestern.

"Coach Fry has done a great job with us," Purdy said. "It isn't his fault that we come out and we don't execute properly. Mistakes are human. They're just going to happen. Unfortunately, it happened to us four weeks in a row."

Fry also answered the question of whether the marketing slogan, "Think Big," gave people a false sense of how good this team would be.

"What are we supposed to do?"

he asked, "Put up 'Think Little?' 'Think Small?'"

Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby also defended Fry, saying Iowa does not evaluate their personnel based on public criticisms, but by a set of criteria which is not available to the general public.

"I'm very happy with Coach Fry's leadership," Bowlsby said. "Obviously, he's not happy with having consecutive losses, but I think he and his staff have done a good job to bring some progress to the program."

"Coach Fry has done a great job with us. It isn't his fault that we come out and we don't execute properly. Mistakes are human. They're just going to happen. Unfortunately, it happened to us four weeks in a row."

Iowa football senior captain Matt Purdy

"It hasn't resulted in wins, but we're a whole lot better football team than we were a year ago at this time. Sometimes progress comes in ways that aren't immediately measurable in wins and losses."

I think clearly we've made some progress in a lot of ways."

With two games remaining, the Hawkeyes are 5-4, needing to win both remaining games, against Wisconsin and Minnesota, to reach a bowl game.

Fry doesn't listen to call-in shows, but has friends that do and is not happy with some of the things that were said after the Northwestern game.

"I resent like hell the co-sponsors of that call-in show, WHO, if what my coaches and my wife and other people tell me that they're saying (is true); that they aren't more knowledgeable about our program here so that when some of those quacks call in and start getting on us they can tell them, 'This is why this is going on' or 'This is why they did this' or 'This is why they didn't do that' because the people that follow college football are knowledgeable."

Fry said he has received hundreds of letters, all positive, since the Northwestern game, and is confident Iowa will return to glory.

"If you got a good program," he said, "if you're a good coach, you recruit well, you're honest, it'll turn back, but you can't do it overnight."

CONDOM ADS

out the swimsuit issue."

Hand said the company decided to fly banners with the outline of a condom in response to the strict rules of print and TV advertising.

"Most people think it's funny. People under 30 think it's hilarious and the older people are against it," she said. "There haven't been any people in the college-age group who haven't liked it. The chancellor at the University of Colorado did think it was in bad taste."

Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations, said the banner would be tacky but that the UI doesn't have any control over what flies above Kinnick Stadium during a football game.

"I think it's really tasteless," she said. "The ads I've seen have been for restaurants and car dealerships. I don't think that kind of advertising should be used for condoms — we'll get letters for this one. The companies that advertise aren't subject to any regulations except how close they fly above the stadium and not being able to fly directly over it."

UI senior Mary Judge said UI students would find the ad funny and made a suggestion on what would work better.

"I think they'd just laugh at it — it would be a big joke," she said. "I would make it less of a joke because 'get some' is a pun. It needs to be more serious."

Jean Mauss, director of development for the Emma Goldman Clinic, said she also has a problem with the slogan's double meaning, but said condoms were a popular seller with UI students who visit the clinic.

"Obviously, we support safer sex, but we would question if it's implying something else," she said. "That is a double entendre and we agree with the part that promotes safe sex. Condoms are one of the highest selling items here, we sell about 10 dozen a week."

Hand said the company is using the new tactic at large college markets to promote the safe sex message in a new way.

"In the late 1980s condom sales went through the roof, but in the 1990s things have fallen flat," she said. "Eighteen to 21-year-olds are tired of hearing about ads that say use a condom or die."

UI sophomore Mike Bails said the banner wouldn't encourage students to practice safe sex.

"They fly those stupid banners and it's no more effective than any other form of advertising," he said. "I think people already use them to be safe."

were reportedly causing the disturbance. Kingsbury pleaded guilty to the public intoxication charge later that day.

Some basketball fans said they believe Kingsbury should receive a stiffer penalty than just missing a couple of games.

"He should have gotten more of a punishment," UI junior Brandon Mills said. "They need to set an example. They did it to the gymnasts, so they should punish him too."

Several members of the women's gymnastics team were suspended recently by head Coach Diane DeMarco for alcohol use, with the suspensions still being evaluated. The team has a no-alcohol policy, which prohibits members from drinking during the season.

Mills said he wasn't surprised by Kingsbury's actions.

"I expected this of him," he said. "I see him out all of the time. He's an athlete and shouldn't be drinking during the season."

Other die-hard fans said they don't feel the disciplinary action is necessary.

"It's not a big deal," UI junior Demetri Lallas said. "Unless he kills someone or peed on the cops saying 'I'm Chris Kingsbury. I can do what I want,' who cares? I mean public intox, we've all gotten busted before."

As long as Kingsbury plays basketball well, Lallas said he wants to see Kingsbury in the line-up.

"The only thing I know is that he's a good basketball player," he said. "I'd like to see the team win."

GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN

be working without pay and those who received furlough letters just don't know how it's come to this."

While the staffers who were sent home had been deemed "non-essential" by federal government standards, Winters said they were told, and they understand their importance to the center.

"We feel that every function we perform at the VA is necessary," Winters said. "Everybody here understands their work is very necessary to the overall role of the center."

"When we issued the furlough letters, supervisors went around individually to each person, explained the situation to them, and told them how important they really are to us."

Barry Clark, administrative assistant in the management support office at the VA, was one of the staffers sent home. He said although it's aggravating, it seemed to be inevitable.

"I'm as frustrated as anyone else," Clark said. "Congress and the president couldn't get their act together, so we're the ones stuck in the middle."

Even though Clark was sent home, he and many other staffers have worked out a rotation schedule. The rotation was implemented to avoid certain staff members from being overburdened with hours throughout the duration of the shutdown, while others would be working no hours at all, Winters said.

The major impact that will be felt, Clark said, "is the economic hit some at the center will take."

"The assumption is that those who work will be compensated at a later date," Clark said. "But there's no telling how long that pay might be delayed. There are people out there just trying to make ends meet."

Clark said if the shutdown continues too long, he's afraid the Iowa City community may feel the impact as well.

"The VA is one of the largest employers in Iowa City," he said. "If this thing keeps dragging on for too long, I'm afraid you might see some economic effect on the city."

Brandon Ray, the VA administrative officer who was kept on to work without pay the day of the shutdown, agreed while that many people realized it was inevitable, they are nonetheless aggravated by it.

"I'm completely appalled," Ray said. "Anyone who's been a federal worker knows this type of situation can happen, but that doesn't make it acceptable."

Patients at the VA will not be impacted by the cuts in staff, Ray said, as the quality of care they receive will not reflect the aggravation felt by those treating them.

"There will be absolutely no drop-off in the quality of care we give," Ray said. "That would be senseless. It's not the patients' fault. Taking it out on them would be ridiculous, everybody here knows that."

As the president and Congress continue their face-off in Washington D.C., the impact of the government shutdown will continue to be felt throughout the country.

"We at the VA are the government," Winters said. "And at the same time we're at the mercy of the government. It makes no sense."

DECREASING GERS

strict requirements," he said.

Opinions are split among the UI faculty on the necessity of GERs, and today's vote will be an attempt at narrowing that gap.

"It's a compromise between the extreme factions," said UI computer science professor Margaret Fleck. "There are several professors, like myself, who wouldn't mind scrapping the requirement system altogether."

Kuntz said he and his colleagues are looking forward to having more faculty input on the GER revisions.

"I think there should be more conferral with faculty, which I think will happen at this meeting," he said.

Stroyan said the EPC's proposals were an attempt at compromise between the different departments in the College of Liberal Arts.

"Our committee feels very uncomfortable about the faculty assembly," he said. "We just don't know what to expect from them."

The difference in opinions occurs because many professors want more required emphasis in their department.

"Every faculty member has devoted his or her life to a discipline, so naturally they think it's important," Stroyan said.

Fleck said while professors in the science departments support a GER cut and many humanities professors oppose it, there are exceptions on both sides.

"I doubt it will fall on science, non-science lines," she said.

The decision may be a difficult one considering the wide variety of opinions held by the faculty.

"If I had to put my money on it, I would say this is going to be a very interesting meeting," Fleck said.

The Faculty Assembly will be held tomorrow in Room 100 of Phillips Hall from 3:30-5 p.m.

Ravaged Sierra Leone suffers forgotten wars

Beth Duff-Brown
Associated Press

BO TOWN, Sierra Leone — Momoh Foma's mother whispers to him in his dreams, promising to come for him soon.

Momoh never dreams of his father; try as he might, he cannot remember his face.

"When the rebels entered our town, they took my father to the bush and cut his throat with a knife," said the 10-year-old boy, drawing his finger across his throat without emotion.

That was two years ago and Momoh has been running ever since.

"Do I dream of my father? No, I only dream of my mama, who says one day she will come to get me," he says at a squatter camp for people displaced by this West African nation's largely forgotten civil war.

He has heard his mother may be among the 55,000 Leonians at the Gondama refugee camp, the region's largest, outside Bo Town in southern Sierra Leone. They are victims of a 5-year-old war that has caused 10,000 deaths and chased more than one-third of the nation's 4.5 million people from their homes.

Momoh cannot go look for his mother. Bandits who call themselves rebels terrorize the countryside, lopping off heads, raping girls and abducting boys to train as killers for their looting runs for money and goods.

The mysterious Revolutionary United Front has never issued a statement listing its goals, never said if it wants to run the country. Aided by a faction in neighboring Liberia's war, it revolted in 1991 against a corrupt dictatorship, but kept fighting even after a new government took over in 1992.

Despite the rebels' brutality, the war in the world's second poorest country — after nearby Niger — seems all but ignored. Most foreign assistance has been diverted to repairing the ghastly deeds of Rwanda and Bosnia.

"It's a very forgotten war and it's a great tragedy," said Dr. Doug Lyon, a Seattle physician who coordinates medical care at an emergency feeding center in Kenema, about 50 miles southeast of Bo Town. It is financed by the humanitarian group Doctors Without Borders.

Lyon, who also worked in Rwandan refugee camps in eastern Zaire, bitterly criticized the lack of Western aid. He showed the newly opened warehouse, where hundreds of malnourished mothers clutched whimpering infants unable to lift their hollow little faces to empty breasts.

Peter Hansen, U.N. undersectary-general for humanitarian affairs, agreed wealthy nations have not done enough for Sierra Leone and Liberia.

"In the scope of human suffering, they are very, very major," Hansen said. "It's an emergency that is quite terrifying."

He said the United Nations appealed early this year for $14 million to aid the victims of the two wars.

As year's end nears, donors have met only 41 percent of the request. Rwanda already has received 100 percent of its aid appeal, the former Yugoslav states more than 104 percent.

While about 30,000 U.N. peacekeepers are in Bosnia and 2,200 in Rwanda, only several dozen U.N. military advisers have been sent to Liberia.

There are no peacekeepers in Sierra Leone.

"When you're talking about U.S. foreign assistance, you have to talk about strategic interests," said Charles Ray, charge d'affaires at the U.S. Embassy in Freetown, the crumbling capital in mountains overlooking the Atlantic.

"Unfortunately, that tends to put West Africa toward the bottom of the list. The West African countries are not really in a position to do any harm to anyone but themselves."

Most of the foreign interest in Sierra Leone is from investors hungry to tap back into what was once a leading producer of diamonds. Bauxite and titanium mining, which contributed 90 percent of the country's total exports in 1994, also are at a standstill because of the war.

"The war, it is not based on tribe, it is not based on religion, it is not based on territory," said John Benjamin, general-secretary of the Provisional Ruling Council. "It is actually based on the failure of past governments."

Associated Press

Joseph, right, (no last name given), salutes the Sierra Leonean flag at the Grafton Scout Center in Freetown Nov. 10. The 12-year-old Joseph spent two years fighting in the military government and was demobilized a few months ago. The Grafton Scout Center hosts some 18 child combatants in need of psychological help. More than 1,000 boys and girls have fought for the military government and have been ordered to put down their guns by the junta.

Alcohol experimentation not a way of life

The recent arrest of UI basketball player Chris Kingsbury, coupled with the dismissal of several UI women's gymnastics members for drinking, has added to the growing concern about alcohol's role at this university. Kingsbury, a junior three-point specialist, spent a night in jail after he reportedly caused disturbances at the downtown Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St., Nov. 10. His blood-alcohol level tested .14, above Iowa's legal blood-alcohol content of .10.

Meanwhile, several UI gymnasts were kicked off the squad for violating the team's no-alcohol policy. Women who admitted to drinking at a team meeting at Carver-Hawkeye Arena were told to turn in their gear.

These two incidents are the latest in a series of troubling episodes involving alcohol at the UI. Earlier this semester, Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity associate member Matthew Garofalo died after passing out during a party. Last week, the Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity was suspended for at least one year for violating UI alcohol policies.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

UI students should spend more time doing things that are constructive, and less time fooling around with beer.

After the Garofalo incident, the Greek system was torn apart by the press, faculty and fellow students. Much of this blame was well deserved. Irresponsible drinking is prevalent in the Greek system and Garofalo's death was tragic and preventable. But it is becoming obvious that alcohol, and the problems associated with it, extend past the Greek system into the entire student body.

Kingsbury's arrest is a case in point. He is one of the most well known faces on campus and has been featured on several college basketball magazine covers — and he was arrested for public intoxication.

At some point, there has to be a line drawn where it is no longer socially acceptable to be drunk. If a homeless person is on the street passed out with a bottle of Jim Beam next to him, it is despicable. If Uncle Ed is at a family party shouting drunken obscenities, it is pathetic. However, for some reason, drunkenness at the college level is accepted, if not revered.

Indeed, drinking alcohol has become a rite of passage for college students. The social scene is centered exclusively around alcohol. When a person "goes out," alcohol is almost always at the center of the adventure.

But what are the effects of all this? Is it just a harmless college-age phase that everybody goes through? Or is it a serious epidemic? Of course, there are obvious problems. There is a fine line — just a few drinks — between harmless fun and Garofalo. But more subtle effects arise from this constant student obsession with alcohol.

In many cases, apathetic attitudes are created by the weekly trips to the bars. Values become shallow and self-centered. Other people drink in order to hide from the realities of a harsh world. A person will sacrifice the occasional joy of life as long as he or she doesn't have to deal with the pain.

Of course, college is a time of experimentation and some self-absorption. But this experimentation has become a way of life for most students. The Garofalo incident made people stop and think for a couple days, until the next weekend rolled around.

It might just be an idealistic fantasy, but it would be something to see if students would donate some of their time and money spent on alcohol to helping people in need. It would be wrong to ask everybody to jump on the wagon and turn into Mother Theresa. But it would be refreshing to see attitudes change at least some of the time.

Fat acceptance unhealthy

To the Editor:

Lea Haravon's humorous rationales for obesity is a valuable lesson in misguided good will. I can just picture Haravon listening to the organizers of the National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance rationalize obesity while digging into a nice juicy hamburger.

I don't want to sound cruel, but portraying fat as a normal healthy lifestyle is wrong. Haravon's assertions that being fat isn't necessarily unhealthy is a blatant attempt to discredit most doctors research and findings. Haravon is correct that thin people can be just as unhealthy as the overweight, but should the anorexic start contemplating their own acceptance organization?

Society should treat overweight people with decency and respect, but we don't have to accept it as healthy and normal. By confirming that dieting is unhealthy, Haravon is doing the overweight population an injustice. Dieting can be harmful if it is done in the wrong way. Haravon should know that exercise and eating the right foods should not be grouped in with unhealthy diets. I have known people to lose weight through exercise and they would never trade their daily workouts for a Fat Acceptance Organization. Many people who exercise and eat right are still fat, but why should they lower themselves by giving up hope. Haravon's article basically tells overweight people to give up and accept the cellulite.

I do not condone discrimination of overweight people, nor do I think it is necessary to view them as healthy. We should strive to encourage healthy lifestyles, rather than pursuing ways to avoid determination and hard work. That's what will really make people feel better about themselves.

Singapore sticks to gum ban, keeping subways wadless

Step on a freshly-spit piece of chewing gum and you know you are in for a bad day. Try removing it and your downfall has begun. Chewing gum leftovers are all over the place: the sidewalks of the Pedestrian Mall, under the seats of public buses and even in elegant Hancher Auditorium.

But Singapore, a prosperous modern crossroad of Eastern and Western culture (and a shoppers' paradise), has everything except gum!

Many people think treating gum as contraband is a bit peculiar or even ridiculous, but to many Singaporeans, it is a lifesaver.

As a Singapore native, I lived 22 of my 24 years in the recently gum-free island of Southeast Asia. In 1992 when the ban was first announced, I heard about it over the airwaves. I thought it was one of those silly DJ jokes, but the truth sunk in the following day when I read the morning papers.

The Singapore government said the ban was going to keep the city spotless, preserving the "clean city" image on which it depends to attract foreign investors.

According to newspaper reports, the government's main concern was actually to preserve the cleanliness and operation of the newly Mass Rapid Transit system, Singapore's version of the subway.

Apparently, leftover gum had given the MRT custodial staff a tough time.

However, because Singaporeans have the knack for giving their government the benefit of the doubt, the government has been able to improve the standard of living and has rarely done anything

GUEST OPINION POINT OF VIEW

The ban on chewing gum has turned Chiclets into contraband and smugglers into heroes.

that might shake the confidence of its citizens. There was not much hullabaloo about the ban — the MRT was then the pride and joy of the Singapore public transit system.

While other big cities fell victim to persistent traffic congestion, Singapore was spared from that same fate. The multi-billion-dollar system reshaped the whole way in which people commute in the tiny city-nation.

It was not until I came to the United States and had the privilege of visiting New York City that I fully came to appreciate the Singapore government's action. The New York City subway was nothing like that of its Singapore counterpart.

Standing in the middle of a graffiti-decorated, litter strewn and ammonia-stenched New York subway station, I could finally appreciate what the Singapore government was trying to do — clean!

As I waited for my train to arrive, I noticed the floor was covered with an uncountable amount of irregularly-sized black polka dots.

To my horror and near nausea, the polka dots were the remnants of chewing gum permanently stained to the floor of the subway station.

The episode reminded me of what the shiny polished, marble-like floor of Singapore's posh MRT stations would have looked like if they experienced the likes of the New York City subway stations. I figured they may have not gone very well together and I was convinced of the merits of the chewing gum ban.

Immediately following the ban, a whole new gum culture evolved.

The Singapore government, knowing the impossibility of an all-out ban, understandably and compassionately restricted the ban to only manufacturing and retailing sectors. Today, while chewing gum is not sold, consumption is not in any way outlawed.

However, the effect of the ban made chewing gum a novelty item overnight. I, who had chewed gum more fewer 20 times in my life before the ban, started to indulge in the frenzy of stockpiling gum.

For Singaporeans traveling abroad, chewing gum catapulted to the No. 1 spot on the must-buy list as a souvenir gift for friends and relatives. And, because in the minds of many people — Singaporeans and foreigners alike — gum is contraband, smuggling gum past immigration is both stimulating and gratifying.

For foreign students like me, souvenir shopping has become less of a chore. Every penny counts in our tightly-constrained budget, and it is heaven to be able to spend so little and yield so much. There is nothing like chewing gum to keep people happy, and to be considered heroic with a home-sweet-home welcome.

Latin dancing at Hancher a cultural contradiction

On Friday nights, you can find Juan Campos at his fix-it-flat shop. He stays late because his wife died last year.

Ricardo Martinez
appears alternate Wednesdays on the Viewpoints page

Like ritual, his friends gather and light ceremonial cigarettes and crack open beers in little paper bags. Sounds of steel guitar strings and smooth harmony fill the air. Still in their work clothes, they jump into a set of classic rancheros.

One by one, more friends gather. Four-inch heels for the women and shiny black shoes for the men are the unspoken rule.

Then the dance begins. Polka. Salsa. Tango. They do it all. Young teenagers show off new, quick steps. Husbands and wives hold each other close and spin around.

When they dance, they say what they feel with their feet. They free their passions and souls. With every hand gesture, with every hip movement, they become more consumed by dance.

But something was missing. I had a hard time recognizing the "Latin" in some of the performances. It was so modified. But I guess that's why it was called "variations." Still, it was nothing like the Latin dance I know. Back home, we dance with fire, life and feeling. As I watched, I thought, "What have these people done to my culture?"

Inevitably, there's always one couple that stands out. Cars slow down to take a look. Passersby gawk at their beauty. And, believe it or not, they've never taken a single dance lesson. Their culture has taught them well.

Juan Campos doesn't charge admission. This is his life. This is his culture. This is art.

Far removed from Juan's Fix-it-Flat, is Hancher Auditorium — a place in which Juan and his friends can never be. And this past weekend, Hancher played host to a performance called "Viva! Dance Gala: Variations in Latin Themes."

It was an opportunity for some of us to explore "otherness" without leaving the sterile environment of mainstream white America.

I attended Friday night's performance. And I must say, I saw incredible talent. The dancers and choreog-raphers deserve a big fiesta for their hard work and dedication. It was art.

But something was missing. I had a hard time recognizing the "Latin" in some of the performances. It was so modified. But I guess that's why it was called "variations."

Still, it was nothing like the Latin dance I know. Back home, we dance with fire, life and feeling. As I watched, I thought, "What have these people done to my culture?"

After each performance, the audience roared with cheers and applauded. Meanwhile, I couldn't help but think about Juan Campos. I wondered if the audience would have clapped for Juan. I still wonder.

People view mainstream white America as one universe. Everyone else lives outside this universe. And for entertainment, curiosity, or for whatever reason, mainstream America explores "otherness." But this exploration is filled with contradiction. Take rap music, for example. Thousands of whites bring rap into their homes, but never an African-American. And they eat salsa like it's going out of style, but would never invite a Mexican for dinner.

And then there is Latin dance. Last weekend's performances may suggest mainstream America has taken a liking to Latin dance. Yet, I remain a "spick" in the eyes of mainstream America.

Look at our society. With few exceptions, we're largely separated by race and ethnicity. Yet, bits and pieces of my culture are being taken, modified and consumed by the very society which has disenfranchised it.

I smell a rat. Rap music, ethnic food, dance — all this cultural transfer is a bit confusing, as well as a bit hypocritical. What is mainstream America trying to say?

To me it's saying, "I accept part of you, but not all of you."

I asked my father what he thought about all this. He said, "Mi hijo, no más tirales el dedo." Loosely translated, "My son, just give 'em the finger." Thanks, Dad.

Israelis dispute rabbis' permission to kill

Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Yitzhak Rabin's assassination by a Jewish extremist has trained the spotlight on rabbis who preach that it is Israel's sacred duty to control the West Bank and label a traitor anyone willing to give it up.

Speaking to a blindly devoted following, extremist rabbis play a dangerous game when they mix religion with politics, say their mainstream colleagues.

"It is easy to slide down that slippery slope that you know the divine agenda, that you are the 'God Squad,'" David Rosen, former chief rabbi of Ireland, said Tuesday.

In the eyes of Rabin's assassin, Yigal Amir, religion justified the most extreme political act.

"According to Jewish law, you can kill the enemy. My whole life I learned Jewish law," the 25-year-old Amir told magistrates two days after shooting the prime minister.

Asked if he acted alone, Amir said: "It was God."

Police have said they were investigating whether Amir, a graduate of two Jewish seminaries and a law student at religious Bar Ilan University, had sought a rabbi's blessing before pulling the trigger.

Amir's beliefs can be traced back to June 1967, when Israeli troops captured the West Bank from Jordan in the Middle East war.

For secular Israelis, it was a stunning military victory that saved their young nation from destruction. But for some Orthodox Jews, it was a sign that redemption was near.

Those believers didn't view the West Bank as a military asset that could be traded at some later point for peace with the Arabs. They saw it as "Judea and Samaria" — the heartland of biblical Israel where Abraham made his covenant with God.

This ideology served as the foundation for the settlement movement that inspired tens of thousands of Israelis to move to the barren hills of Samaria and the desert of Judea to cement the Jewish claim to the land.

For 25 years, from 1967 until 1992, the settlers and their rabbinical teachers had the support of successive governments and many mainstream Israelis.

The turning point came when Rabin won elections in 1992 and later negotiated agreements that handed the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank to the Palestinians.

Alleged murderer's fate may be decided by X-ray

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A man charged with murder claims he's too young to face the death penalty. Federal prosecutors want to X-ray his bones to see for themselves.

Fu Xin Chen — a reputed gang member charged with conspiring to kidnap, torture and murder a Chinese garment worker — says he's only 15. Authorities believe Chen is 23.

Chen's age could mean his life — adults can be sentenced to death in federal court for a kidnapping that ends in a killing. Juveniles cannot.

Prosecutors argued during a closed hearing last week that X-rays would show whether Chen's bones are those of an adult, according to defense attorneys and a law enforcement source.

Chen's lawyer, Richard Levitt, said that X-raying his client would constitute an "invasive search" and that a court order was needed.

A ruling from Judge Edward Korman on whether Chen can be X-rayed isn't expected until later this month, said the law enforcement source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Preseason NIT kicks off tonight

(AP) — Stephon Marbury and Robert Traylor may be the names to know, rather than Corliss Williamson and Scotty Thurman, when the college basketball season starts Wednesday night with the Preseason NIT.

The 16-team tournament begins with six games, featuring Jerry Tarkanian's first outing as coach at Fresno State. Also playing are No. 16 Arkansas, which lost Williamson and Thurman, and two heralded freshman — Traylor of No. 17 Michigan and Marbury of Georgia Tech.

On the Wednesday program, it's Manhattan at Georgia Tech, Jackson State at Oklahoma, Northeast Louisiana at Arkansas, Long Beach State at Arizona, DePaul at Michigan and Weber State at Fresno State.

On Thursday night, No. 5 Georgetown will play Colgate and Temple will take on Rider.

Arkansas, which won the national championship two years ago and lost the title game last season to UCLA, saw stars Williamson and Thurman pass up their senior years to turn pro.

Even so, Razorbacks are back in the rankings going into their opener against Northeast Louisiana in Fayetteville, Ark.

"If you lose your whole team and you're still picked in the top 20, I think that's a lot of respect," Richardson said. "When you talk about teams ranked in the preseason, the traditional teams always seem to be there, teams like Duke, North Carolina, and UCLA."

"I'm hoping that one day when people talk about the top five teams, Arkansas is included."

In exhibition games this month, the Razorbacks beat a team from Australia and the Converse All-Stars. Practices in the week since the Converse game have been uneven.

"We're like a group of young geese that wake up in a new world every morning," Richardson said. "One day I'm walking around as happy as a jaybird, and the next day I'm sadder than sad. One day it seems like they've grasped the things that we need to have, and the next day it looks like we're starting all over again."

Gable expresses discontent

Legend won't be coaching Olympics

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

When the United States wrestling team travels to Atlanta in the summer of 1996 it will be missing at least one familiar face.

Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable said Tuesday he was disappointed with the USA Wrestling Committee's choice of Joe Seay as the head wrestling coach of the U.S. Olympic team, noting that personal politics took precedence over merit.

"The people running the show right now are kind of best friends. That's what's kind of disappointing," he said. "I felt like I didn't have a legitimate shot. Basically, the decision was made before I went in."

Seay, the head of the Sunkist Kids Wrestling Club in Phoenix, was chosen over Gable and two other finalists.

Gable, who coached the U.S. Olympic team in 1980 and 1984, said he was concerned that the position wasn't given to a collegiate coach.

"It kind of went away from the college coaches to the club coaches," he said. "We feel like we want to be a feeder system for USA wrestling and I think college coaches should be involved."

Seay has led two U.S. national freestyle teams to championships, but is temporarily banned from collegiate coaching as a result of NCAA rules violations while he was at Oklahoma State.

Royce Alger, a former Hawkeye all-American and an Olympic Silver medalist, said that USA Wrestling made a mistake by not selecting Gable.

"I'm disappointed from the aspect that I believe he's the best coach," he said. "It's really political anymore. They used to go on accolades and past coaching achievements, but now they're arbitrarily

Wrestling team focuses on solo titles

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

During the final moments of the NCAA Championships last March an atmosphere of impending doom filled Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Although the team title was securely locked in place, one Iowa wrestler after another fell in defeat while pursuing an individual championship.

Now the defending national champion Hawkeyes say it's time to patch up the scars.

"We're hurting from last year," Iowa coach Dan Gable said in a press conference Tuesday. "We're kind of on a mission for winning individual titles this year. Obviously, if you win enough individual titles you dominate."

Despite the stinging NCAA losses, Iowa looks fully poised to capture its second consecutive national title and fourth in five years after posting a 14-0 record last season. Six starters, including five all-Americans, return from last year's squad to bolster the always potent Hawkeyes.

Leading the way at the lightweight positions is junior Jeff McGinness, who returns after capturing Iowa's lone national championship at 126 pounds. McGinness is joined by three other all-Americans; junior Mike Mena (118), sophomore Mark Ironside (134) and senior Bill Zadick (142).

Zadick said he wants to make sure he doesn't come up short again in his quest to win his first individual national title.

"The wounds are still fresh from last year," he said. "I don't want to feel like that again."

At 150 pounds, junior Mike Uker will temporarily occupy Lincoln McClravy's starting job. McClravy, a two-time NCAA champion, will redshirt the 1995-96 season to prepare for the 1996 Olympics.

The return of sophomore Joe

Williams at 158 pounds will force senior all-American Daryl Weber to move up to 167. Williams, who was an all-American in 1994, returns after redshirting the 1994-95 season.

Williams said it will be nice to see action after watching the 1995 national championships from the sidelines.

"It was hard because I wanted to be out there," he said. "I couldn't watch some of the matches so I had to get up and leave."

The final starting positions belong to a trio of seniors. Curt

MEN'S SWIMMING

All-day practices help Hawkeyes excel

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Many people go years without seeing the sunrise. The Iowa men's swimming team rarely goes days.

"I get up about a quarter to six," junior freestyle swimmer Tim Schnulle said, "bright and early, before the sun comes up."

Schnulle, and the 29 other members of the team are up four days a week for 6:00 a.m. practice, the first of two, possibly three daily practices for the No. 14 ranked men's swimming team in the nation.

Thus, the day does not end at 8:00 a.m. when morning practice does. On Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, the Hawkeyes return at 3:00 p.m. to lift weights, and no day goes by without night practice, or classes.

"We're working harder now than we ever have before. It's not even close to the past two years," senior Joe Hayes said.

The work is not for naught. The Hawkeyes are off to a 2-0 start in their 1995 campaign, despite the loss of five all-Americans to graduation.

"That's a very big loss, not only their points and production, but also their leadership," said Iowa head coach Glenn Patton.

IOWA BASKETBALL

Marathon Oil to offer Iowa its first real test

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's first exhibition game proved to be a cakewalk. Number two will be more like a war.

Marathon Oil, a team comprised of former college stars on the borderline of NBA or CBA stature, invades Iowa City tonight for a 7:05 start against the No. 8 Hawkeyes.

Plenty of tickets are still available for tonight's game and can be purchased at Carver-Hawkeye Arena for $5.

"They've got former college players who received conference honors and play at a high level," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "Some of them have CBA or NBA stints, so they have a nice variety of talent."

"They know our rules, so they'll be in it from the beginning."

Davis noted that Iowa's first opponent, the Republic of Georgia, spent much of its American tour learning the rules of American basketball, a deficiency that bogged down Georgia's level of play. The

I HAD A VISION

Jesus, the Buddha and Iowa basketball

Earlier this year, I went out to the wilderness and sat beneath a fig tree. I thought about existentialism and the theory of relativity. I thought about Jesus, Yahweh and the Buddha. Soon, my mind began to wander, like it always does, and my thoughts began to drift to the cold hard facts of my life.

Graduation is only a semester away for me, and sometimes I ask the question "who am I?" I've been in school for, what, 16 or 17 years and can't remember much of what I've learned. Have I done the things that I wanted to do? When I look at myself in the mirror, will I like what I see?

Eventually, I began to look for some answers. How could I make my life meaningful and fulfilling? I had tried religion, but I was turned off by the hypocrisy. I had tried relationships, but those didn't work out either. What was left?

Hayden jockeys for edge on his protégé

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry has one thing going for him when the Iowa Hawkeyes travel to Madison this weekend — he has never lost to a protégé.

Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez, a linebacker coach at Iowa from 1979-1986, is in his sixth year as head coach at Wisconsin and is 0-3 against his mentor.

The game is scheduled to start at 11:30 a.m. and will be televised to a national audience on ESPN2.

Iowa is 5-4 overall, 2-4 in the Big Ten. Wisconsin is 4-4-1 overall, 3-3 in the league.

The Hawkeyes have not lost to Wisconsin since 1976, but this year the two teams are very similar.

"They've been very very good at times. They've been average at times," Fry said. "I would imagine that they'll be ready to play a real good game against us."

Wisconsin is led by senior quarterback Derrell Bevell. Bevell ranks ninth in career passing in the Big Ten, having thrown for over 1700 yards this season.

But Fry is confident his quarterback, Matt Sherman, can hold his own against Bevell.

"Right now, I would project him to be one of our better all-time quarterbacks by the time he gradu-

11-1-2 RECORD

Women's soccer club heads to nationals

David Schwartz

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's soccer club will swap the cozy confines of Iowa City today for Austin, Texas to compete for the national club championship.

Club president Michelle Sabick said Monday that Iowa's team is one of two that qualified in its region — one of eight nationally — to take part in the NIRSA Collegiate Soccer Sports Club Championship.

Iowa qualified by compiling an 11-1-2 mark in the conference, brought on by one key aspect of its game.

Iowa plays two games today, the first against the other qualifier from the Iowa's region, Colorado. Iowa's second opponent will be Texas.

Sabick, a center halfback, said time and access restrictions prevent Iowa from being able to scout opponents, so the Hawkeyes have to focus instead on what got them to the tournament in the first place.

"We just have to go in and play our game," Sabick said. "There are two other teams from our area playing in the tournament, but we're not going to play them, at least not in the first round."

Iowa is guaranteed a third game Friday, but against who, is unknown until competition begins.

If Iowa can sift through the other club teams, the championship game will come Saturday, but Sabick doesn't want to get ahead of herself.

"I don't know," Sabick said. "We're just going to go in there battling and shooting for first."

But that's not to say Iowa doesn't have a shot at the title, having already fought through a tough conference schedule and realize what it takes to come out on top.

"We know we can compete with anyone," Sabick said. "We've played some pretty tough competition so far, and I expect this week will be more of the same."

Heideman, who compiled a 14-5 record as a part time starter in 1994, is scheduled to start at 177. Degl is the favorite to replace all-American Joel Sharratt at 190.

Stroner begins his second year at heavyweight following a fourth place finish at the 1995 Big Ten Championships.

Although Iowa is ranked No. 1 in the country, Gable said his team still has to work out a few kinks such as nagging injuries, academic troubles and personal problems.

But Gable acknowledged that this year's squad has the potential to be his best ever. "We'd love to outdo some of the former Hawkeye teams," he said.

Ironside believes the Hawkeyes have another strong team and said another undefeated season is a distinct possibility.

"Nothing is impossible, but it will definitely be tough for opponents," he said.

ates, and we've had some great ones," Fry said of Sherman. "He's that good."

Sherman leads the Big Ten in interceptions, but Fry said his overall performance has been encouraging to the coaching staff.

"In my opinion, he's doing a super job. He's got two more games this season and the good thing is he's got two more years remaining."

"As good as he is, he's still a freshman playing-wise. He's still learning. His last three interceptions all were caused by the receiver busting a route. We can get the receivers straightened out. The quarterback is the most important thing."

Fry is also pleased with Sherman's ability to read defenses and audibize at the line of scrimmage.

"I'm extremely happy," he said.

"It's phenomenal the amount of yardage we've made, how many plays have turned into first down plays, some of them have been touchdowns."

SWIMMING

Patton is in his 21st year at the helm of the Hawkeyes, fresh off leading his team to a perfect 8-0 record and a 13th place finish nationally last year.

Although Patton calls this a rebuilding year, the Hawkeyes have still set their goals high. They hope to finish in the top three of the Big Ten and the top twenty of the nation.

"It's going to take a lot of hard work," Schnulle said. "The goals that we have are pretty high. We've got a really good core, and as long as we keep working really hard, we're going to accomplish our goals."

Part of the reason this is a rebuilding year is the fact that Iowa has only four seniors on their team.

"We're asking the sophomore class to step forward to be front-line performers," Patton said. "So far, they've been responding pretty well to that. With the five people we had graduate last year, somebody has to step forward and take those people's places in the lineup and it has to be our sophomores and our juniors."

The lack of seniors makes Patton believe their preseason ranking may be a bit high.

"We think maybe it's a little generous to us, maybe they're giving us that off our reputation," he said. "We have to earn it in the pool and I don't know that we've done that yet."

One thing that has not been lacking from this team is leadership. Patton said the "Four-H Club," captains Vico Hidalgo, Joe Hayes, Todd Hamer and Todd Harvey have all responded well to their leadership role.

"Joe Hayes seems to be doing a lot at this point to replace Erik Marchitell and his verbal leadership, and I think Todd Harvey is doing a nice job with that," Patton said. "They seem to be the two guys that are more vocal than others in trying to get other guys fired up."

Diving will once again be the cornerstone of the team. Vico Hidalgo, Tete Gil and Jeff Stein have swept all three places in four diving events thus far this season.

"Diving is definitely our strong point," Patton said. "Bob Rydze was last year's Big Ten Diving Coach of the Year. Our first two meets this year have shown why."

Key performers for the Hawkeyes will be Schnulle and Marc River in the freestyle sprint events, Marco Minonne in the breaststroke and Jory Blauer in the backstroke.

Another key addition has been former Iowa swimmer and four-time Big Ten Swimmer of the Year, John Davey, as an assistant coach.

Also new to the coaching ranks is volunteer assistant Jim Mulligan, a nine-time all-American at Iowa.

"There is nothing like youthful enthusiasm and excitement coming from young members of a coaching staff," Patton said.

Unity will once again be a key to the Hawkeyes succeeding.

"We're really close," River said. "Everyone supports each other like family almost."

Schnulle said the closeness does not end after practice.

"On the weekends, we go to the same parties, we go to the same bars," he said. "We're really supportive of each other too, when it comes to the meets. We're really close."

picking people."

Gable said he believed that others were jealous of his past successes.

"I think that there are some people that are involved in the organization-main people that will do anything for wrestling in the country except for the University of Iowa," Gable said. "They just don't like us dominating and so they're going to do anything possible to make sure that we don't have the opportunity. By not being named Olympic coach it probably keeps my name down a little bit."

Gable said he might help out the U.S. team in a lesser capacity, but plans to focus on other things for the moment.

"I've got ten national championships to win," he said. "It's not as if I'm sitting around twiddling my thumbs."

MARATHON

Hawkeyes defeated Georgia last Sunday 82-59.

Nevertheless, he also realizes Georgia was just out-manned by the Iowa team.

"Not only will (Marathon Oil) be more talented, but they'll be more familiar with our rules," Davis said. "Even though (Georgia's) played three games here, they still haven't comprehended free throw lane situations; what is the guy calling? Traveling is so different international rule-wise."

Marathon Oil will have no such problem.

"We expect a real tough game like last year's buzzer beater," Davis said.

This is the third-straight season Iowa and Marathon have locked horns. Last year's meeting at the Mark of the Quad Cities in Moline, Ill., came down to Iowa's trademark full-court pressure defense and free throws by forwards Ken-on Murray and Ryan Bowen.

Iowa also used 32 points from Jess Settles to sneak by with a 94-92 win over a Marathon Oil team fresh off defeats of Kansas State and Iowa State.

Davis said that in order to beat Marathon tonight, his squad will have to work out a few kinks that were prevalent in the game against Georgia. In that game, Davis observed several spots that the team needed to improve on in order to play at the level the Hawkeyes are capable of.

"We've often overdrilled or overpassed when we should shoot," Davis said. "It's a timing thing. We can't expect to be at the same level as we were last March after the NIT."

Tonight's Marathon team is one of three Marathon Oil-sponsored teams. Iowa's opponent has already beaten South Alabama, but lost to Auburn and Alabama.

RANDY JOHNSON

Big Unit brings home the bacon

Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Like his mentor Nolan Ryan, Randy Johnson wanted to be known as more than a guy who merely fired 100 mph fastballs.

After doing what Ryan never did — winning a Cy Young Award — he just might be.

"My teammates now come up and ask when I'm pitching, instead of asking when I'm throwing," Johnson said after his overwhelming victory for the AL honor Tuesday.

"I think there's a big difference between someone who tries to go in there and strike everybody out instead of being a pitcher and thinking about the entire game," he said.

Johnson, whose intimidating fastball and improved control led Seattle to the playoffs for the first time, became the first Mariners player to win a major postseason award in the team's 19-year history.

The 6-foot-10 left-hander came within one victory of becoming the first AL player since Hal Newhouser of Detroit in 1945 to win pitching's Triple Crown. Johnson went 18-2, led the majors in strikeouts for the fourth straight year with 294 and led the league with a 2.48 ERA.

Associated Press

Johnson got all but two of the 28 first-place votes in selections by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

He was the only pitcher listed on every ballot and finished with 136 points.

Cleveland reliever Jose Mesa received the other two first-place votes and was runner-up with 54 points. Boston knuckleballer Tim Lincecum was third with 29, followed by 1994 winner David Cone, who finished the season with New York, with 18. Baltimore's Mike Mussina, who led the league with 19 wins, was fifth with 14.

Perhaps had postseason performance counted, Johnson might've won the award unanimously. Pitching often on three days' rest — he even worked once after a one-day layoff — he helped the Mariners get within two wins of the World Series.

"I don't have to win an award to feel good about this year, but obviously I'm gracious," he said.

Despite his reputation for being a power pitcher, Johnson said he wanted to be regarded for more than blowing away batters. That was the same wish that Ryan, the greatest power pitcher of them all, had during his 27 seasons.

But like Ryan, Johnson was seen as a wild thing, a guy who threw fastballs with no idea of where they might go. His most memorable moment before this year, in fact, was the time he whizzed a fastball over the head of John Kruk in the 1993 All-Star game in Baltimore.

A few years ago, though, Ryan took Johnson aside.

"Early in my career, I struggled," Johnson said. "I think Nolan has said that he saw a little bit of himself in me."

"Nolan Ryan and (Texas pitching coach) Tom House have been very influential in my mechanics. They talked to me and worked with me. I'll be forever grateful for that," he said.

MODEL OF FUTILITY

Gophers again slip toward Big Ten cellar

Ron Lesko
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Someday, Minnesota will have a pass rush. Someday, it will be able to stop a running attack. Someday, it will give up fewer than 30 points per game.

And someday, the Golden Gophers will have another winning season.

Porous defense has been as much a trademark of coach Jim Wacker's four-year tenure as his 30 losses. He — or his successor — won't be able to rebuild the program without first rebuilding the defense, and Wacker admitted Tuesday that good defensive help has been hard to find.

"We coaches understand that criticism," he said. "The offense is one of the best in the Big Ten, and the defense is at the bottom of the Big Ten. But a lot of that, we have not had the personnel on defense that we've been able to come up with on offense. We didn't recruit quite as good."

Wacker has recruited some of the best young offensive players in the Big Ten. Quarterback Cory Sauter and receivers Tutu Atwell and Ryan Thelwell top the group. But Wacker has had much less success defensively.

The Gophers gave up more than 28 points a game his first season and better than 30 points each of the last two. They are allowing more than 30 points per game overall again this year, and with two games remaining have given up an average of 39 points in six Big Ten games.

That's 9 points more than the second-worst defensive team, Indiana.

"You've got to have the players, and they've got to perform," Wacker said. "It's a young defense — there are only two seniors — and I really believe by next year that can really be a good unit."

Injuries have hurt this year. Among the defensive players who have missed games are safety Richon Early, cornerback Terrance Blayne, linebacker Ben Langford and linemen Ogun Akbar, Antoine Richard and Ray Baylor.

All have started, and all will be back in 1996.

While the starters are solid, their backups are not, and that was especially noticeable in Saturday's 34-27 loss to Wisconsin.

Blayne's replacement, redshirt freshman Craig Scruggs, was burned for a 62-yard touchdown in the first quarter. That was the Badgers' longest offensive play of the season until the third quarter, when Scruggs came untouched on a blitz and had a clear shot at Wisconsin quarterback Darrell Bevell.

Bevell sidestepped Scruggs and threw a 70-yard touchdown pass to Tony Simmons, who had beaten Scruggs on the first TD. He got behind Crawford Jordan for his second score; Jordan moved from strong safety to free safety two games ago when Early went out.

"If we have Terrance Blayne in there Saturday, we beat Wisconsin," Wacker said of the junior who is out for the season with a knee injury.

Minnesota will face the Big Ten's worst offense when it travels to Illinois on Saturday. The Illini are scoring fewer than 16 points a game and managed just 160 total yards in last week's 41-3 loss at Ohio State.

Maybe that will help the Gophers' defense. Then again, maybe not.

"They can be explosive, especially when they're at the top of their game," said linebacker Justin Conzemius. "And it's not like we're knocking out opponents left and right, either."

MODELL

Browns owner comes under fire

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Art Modell, it's been said, can sell anybody anything. Until he tried to sell the Baltimore Browns to NFL fans, that is.

"Green Bay isn't as cold as Art Modell's heart," read a sign displayed during a game Sunday. That game wasn't in Cleveland, it was in Green Bay, where commissioner Paul Tagliabue was watching the Packers and Bears.

Tagliabue is the man on the spot. If it were up to him, he would probably like to find a way to keep the Browns in Cleveland. Several top NFL people long close to Modell have suggested that the Browns' owner has done more harm to the league in the last week than the good he did in 35 years. That good includes the major role he's had in negotiating huge television contracts.

There is some reason to think Tagliabue believes the same thing, although he has been very circumspect in his comments. But Tagliabue also believes it is not up to him.

He thinks it would be up to the courts if the owners turn down the move, and that the NFL probably would lose a long and protracted suit — as it has in the past.

The owners probably won't turn down the move. Modell, the salesman, defused some of the opposition by telling the owners of the two New York teams, Wellington Mara and Leon Hess, about it before word leaked out of the move. Mara, one of Modell's closest friends, now as much as says he will put his friendship first, although he always has been a league traditionalist.

Two other members of the old guard, Buffalo's Ralph Wilson and Kansas City's Lamar Hunt, probably are the strongest opponents of the move right now, although it is conceivable public opinion in Ohio and elsewhere could swing others.

But nobody is happy the Browns won't be in Cleveland. The closest similar shock was the move of the Colts from Baltimore, but owner Bob Irsay had been building up to that. And, frankly, Irsay had little or no respect around the NFL.

Modell, on the other hand, had a lot of respect. Not any longer.

For if Jerry Jones remains the No. 1 target on the other owners' hit list, Modell may have surpassed Al Davis as No. 2.

Despite what the other owners say, many are appalled at the way he summarily moved the Browns without even awaiting the vote that was supposed to provide $175 million in improvements to Cleveland Stadium.

That's not monopoly money, particularly in a city that needs schools, housing, health care, law enforcement and items much more basic than football.

But that vote speaks to the loyalty of the Cleveland fans.

Others suggest the same, and even owners like Alex Spanos of the Chargers, who said from the start that nobody could turn down the cash deal Baltimore gave Modell, knows how a move like that alienates fans.

"I love San Diego," Spanos said. "I'd never move from there."

So the bottom line is the Browns will play out the season in Cleveland, where Super Bowl hopes have given way to despair on and off the field. Then they will go to Baltimore ...

And Cleveland will open its treasury for someone else, like Bill Bidwill, who could then move the Cardinals to their third city in less than a decade.

Nabokov revived with collection

Joshua Ferris
The Daily Iowan

If the adage is true that a dead man's ego flounders or flourishes in the form of his posthumous reputation, Vladimir Nabokov is undergoing a victory from the grave.

Nabokov — poet, novelist, critic, translator and the century's greatest prose stylist — died in 1977 after having finished over fifteen novels, including "Lolita" and "Pale Fire." Now Nabokov's sixty-five completed short stories — edited by Nabokov's son, Dmitri — make their way into a collection this month from Alfred A. Knopf, and together they track the remarkable artistic growth of a transcendent artist.

BOOK REVIEW

Thirteen of the early stories in the collection are previously uncollected, but they still take the reader on those typically atypical Nabokovian rides. There is "The Wood-Sprite" and "Russian Spoken Here," both similar to Nabokov's first novel, "Invitation to a Beheading," in that their landscape is wholly Russian, from where Nabokov was exiled during the Bolshevik revolution. "The Wood-Sprite" is a simple fable of a wood sprite being kicked from the forest of "Rus," and what unfolds is the beginning of Nabokov's preoccupation with the cruelty of fate and the recompense of nostalgia.

The more mature works, like "That in Aleppo Once..." and "Signs and Symbols," show exactly what the short story is capable of in the tradition of Chekhov.

But there are also the more experimental stories, such as the incomprehensible "Lance" and the exquisite "The Vane Sisters," whose narrative sleight of hand Nabokov himself admitted "can be tried only once in a thousand years of fiction."

Modern Reader of Fiction, it all begins with Nabokov. You need this collection.

There's a Rachel for everyone

TELEVISION

OK, it's time to go public. I have to declare my undying love for a certain someone. It's been building up for quite sometime and I can't keep it in any longer. Rachel Green, "Friends" babe, I love you.

Last Thursday, I lived vicariously through Ross Geller. It was nice to see a guy get the girl he has loved his entire life. But this is no ordinary girl. For a year, I watched him pine over the beautiful, but naive Rachel. But for the last several weeks, it's been the vulnerable Rachel aching over Ross' new relationship.

But that is what makes it so cool. All this tension has been mounting for many months. And when Ross' lips finally met Rachel's, it was like something from Fantasyland.

Wait a minute, it was made in Fantasyland! How is it possible that Rachel never figured out Ross liked her? How could Ross have never figured out Rachel liked him? And when I kiss a lady, how come it isn't accompanied with a strangely appropriate '80s cheeseball guitar riff?

This is what makes "Friends" such a great show. It gives hopeless romantics, like myself, some hope. Like Rosie O'Donnell said in "Sleepless in Seattle": "you don't want to be in love. You want to be in love in the movies..." In this case, Central Perk.

That scene made me believe there is a Rachel out there for me. No, I'm not going to go to stalk her down. I said I'm in love with Rachel Green — not Jennifer Aniston.

However, there is now the question that everyone (except me) asks: If Ross and Rachel stay together, will "Friends" end up like "Cheers" when Sam and Diane hooked up, or like "Moonlighting" when David and Maddie bumped uglies? "Cheers" stayed on another 10 seasons; "Moonlighting" barely lasted one more.

Entertainment Weekly said "Friends" may experience some backlash this season due to the smashing success it achieved in its rookie season. Because a thousand shows ripped off its formula, in addition to having a soundtrack album, a calendar and countless magazine covers, it was supposed to suffer. Well, it doesn't look that way to me. I believe the show has finished in the Top 5 every week this season.

Also, some people say talent isn't a prerequisite for acting in sitcoms. That's a crock. Aniston is too talented to make me think Rachel's infatuation with Ross is fake. I'm convinced. She tugged away at my heart strings in the first episode when she wanted to tell Ross, but couldn't.

As for the other stars, I've never seen a cast work as well together. Well, "ER" is up there, too. But that's drama. It takes a lot to mesh together in a comedy. And finally, it takes a lot of talent to do what Matt LeBlanc and Lisa Kudrow do. Playing dumb and strange is hard, but Joey and Phoebe may be the best characters of that nature since Woody Boyd and Chrissy Snow.

Can this show survive if Ross and Rachel hook up? I believe it can. They are just two of six characters. Plus, they have brilliant writers with a great track record for success.

Now, back to my love for Rachel. There is a Rachel for me, but I may be too much like Chandler to find her right now. For now, I'll just rely on the voyeurism of "Friends."

"Friends," at times, is more than just a show to me. It reinforces my belief in true romance. But most importantly, it shows me that obnoxious '80s hair bands may be of some use still. Instead of trying to play something cool like Dark Side of the Moon when trying to schmooze a girl, I'll just pull out some old Whitesnake tape and find the cheesiest riff. That will get me Rachel.

In the groove: Audio reviews

Associated Press Reviews

Time — Fleetwood Mac

This will leave you wishing rock 'n' roll had a mandatory retirement age.

Fleetwood Mac's new lineup — its 18th by now? — is distressingly lifeless. Only the youthful Bekka Bramlett is a sparkplug; her song, "Nothing Without You," is the best here. It features a background vocal from ex-Mac, Lindsey Buckingham, whose name is an unfortunate reminder of just how much his innovative studio craftsmanship is missed. When Christine McVie — who's forced to carry too much of this album's songwriting burden — sings that it's time to "move on" and "turn out the light" in what's supposed to be a love song about the band, the message is pretty clear.

Hand Picked — Various artists

Hand Picked is a compilation of some of the highlights of 25 years of bluegrass on the Rounder label. It's a marvelous album, full of little surprises as well as gems from old — and new — favorites. With a list price less than a regular CD, this two-disc set is tough to pass on for anyone with an interest in bluegrass.

Groove Theory — Groove Theory

With the smooth singing of Amel Larrieux, along with the funky beats of musician Bryce Wilson, the new duo Groove Theory seems to have hit on the right formula for success with their self-entitled debut effort.

Groove Theory is one of the few R&B acts around whose lyrics manage to transcend the cliché, one-dimensional themes of the genre today. One of the good jams on the disc include "10 Minute High," about drug abuse, and "Come Home," about a lover imploring her man to come off the streets and back home to her arms.

Perhaps the best cut is the first hit single, "Tell Me," a sultry tune in which a woman asks a potential lover to let her know if he wants to be with her.

The only drawback of this disc is that it might be a little bit too cohesive. Most of the songs have the same background drum beat, the same heavy bass sound and the same low-key singing effort of Larrieux. It all makes you feel like they've been stuck on the same groove for almost half the album.

Thunderstorms and Neon Signs — Wayne Hancock

Here's how I figure it: Hank Williams and Bob Wills were wrasslin' at a rockabilly bar in heaven. Just as Jimmie Rodgers stepped in to break things up, the whole bunch got reincarnated into Wayne Hancock. Thank goodness. This guy comes yippee-ay-yelping out of Austin, Texas, and will jump-start your heart from the very first chord of "Juke Joint Jumping." The songs sound like long-lost classics from 50 years ago but are almost all Wayne Hancock originals.

Celebrating Indigenous Arts Week continues with events from various media.

Tonight Joy Harjo (above), author of "The Woman Who Fell From the Sky," will read tonight at Lecture Room 1 of Van Allen Hall at 8 p.m. Her poems are influenced by her Muskogee background and flavored by her saxophone playing and interest in jazz.

Thursday brings Native American film into the spotlight with a presentation of movies in the Iowa Room of the Union at 7 p.m. A multi-media presentation of "Opera Quechua of Miya Philippines/Comeback: Ch'unu, The Potato Circle" will be shown at 8:15 p.m. by two members of the Quechua nation, Luis Morato and Maliku Siwar Puma.

"Open Mike Night" will begin at 7 p.m. Friday at the UI International Student Lounge and will feature storytelling from many different native backgrounds and traditions.
