There just aren't that many other wildly popular dark, violent caper movies about a small band of talented career criminals drawn together by a single master planner in order to take on a dangerous escapade which is explained in a choppy, nonlinear style.

The Short Life of a Turkey

The life of a turkey at Daufeldt's Turkey Farm:

The turkey egg is hatched in Ohio. The day-old turkey is delivered to Daufeldt's farm in West Liberty. First five weeks: The critical growing and feeding period in a brooder-house. Next 13 weeks: Spend rest of their lives gaining weight in a grow-out shed. At 30-32 pounds, slaughtered and sent to Louis Rich to be processed and sent to the grocery stores.

Meet your dinner: Tom Turkey

From the farm to your table

Christie Midthun

The Daily Iowan

Before modern-day pilgrims pop a gravy-smothered morsel of turkey into their grateful mouths, they should ask where that handsome bird came from.

Contrary to the beliefs of many, turkeys don't automatically come packaged in cellophane Butterball wrappers at the grocery store.

THANKSGIVING TIDINGS: Native American Joe Coulter doesn't believe the stories of the Native Americans and the Pilgrims sitting down for a harvest-time feast. And Iowa City residents take advantage of Thanksgiving meal programs. Pages 3 and 5

There is a lengthy process which gets them from a farm to your Thanksgiving table.

On Don and Pat Daufeldt's turkey farm, southwest of West Liberty, 130,000 to 140,000 turkeys are taken to market each year. The Daufeldts have been raising turkeys for the Louis Rich Food Processing Company for eight years.

Don Daufeldt said while they raise turkeys all year, this Thanksgiving seems to be especially busy.

The turkeys aren't hatched at the Daufeldt farm; they arrive when they're a day old from a hatchery in Ohio.

When the baby turkeys are delivered to the farm, they are taken into a brooder house, where Don Daufeldt said the most intensive care and feeding is done. The turkeys spend the first five weeks

M. Dickbernd/The Daily Iowan

Don and Pat Daufeldt's turkey farm, which is located southwest of West Liberty, raises up to 140,000 turkeys every year. The turkeys are divided and raised in three separate groups which include poults (baby turkeys), intermediates and adult turkeys. The Daufeldts are currently raising approximately 20,000 turkeys in each age group. The couple said Thanksgiving is their most hectic time of year.

After the brooder house, the turkeys are moved to a grow-out shed, where they spend 13 weeks — the rest of their short lives. The grow-out shed is 800 feet long and 76 feet wide. It can house 22,000 birds at a time.

"We keep it very warm and clean," Daufeldt said. "The turkeys seem to thrive in the area of space."

Daufeldt said the sawdust used for bedding in the grow-out shed is kept dry and changed once a year. He also prides himself on how clean the brooder house is kept.

"The brooder house is cleaned and washed out every time a new shipment comes in," Daufeldt said. "It's so clean you could eat off the floor."

When the 18-week-old turkeys leave for slaughter in West Liberty, they are about 30 to 32 pounds. The little gobblers are fed with a commercial pelleted ration of corn and protein which is sent from Louis Rich to the farm.

Daufeldt estimated each bird eats 80 to 90 pounds of feed in its

Oklahoma City bombing survivor

On April 19, Wayne Story fell three floors and landed on his back after the blast that destroyed the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in downtown Oklahoma City.

Seven months later, Story has a lot to be thankful for.

"I'm thankful for my family and to still be alive," he said. "I'm thankful that God saved me and gave me the chance to make a difference."

Story, who survived the blast with only three stitches in the back of his head, said the bombing has changed his perspective on life.

"The bombing changed everybody's outlook," he said. "It makes you evaluate the way you live."

Though most were affected by the bombing, the people of Oklahoma City are getting on with their lives, he said.

"I suppose that some people are still searching for why this happened," Story said, "but I don't think they're dwelling on the past."

Liver and kidney recipient

Eight months after the first-ever liver and kidney transplant was successfully performed at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, the recipient, Richard Riley, 63, is planning to spend Thursday appreciating his gift of life.

AGREEMENT ONLY GOOD UNTIL DECEMBER

U.S. budget trouble not over yet

Alan Fram

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Although a budget truce revved the government back to life Monday, a White House official warned "We'll be right back where we were" unless the two sides strike a budget deal by mid-December.

Monday, the White House and congressional Republicans pledged to use December talks to champion divergent spending priorities that have so far been irreconcilable, and the GOP signaled possible give on its prized tax cut.

Democrats and Republicans alike seemed relieved that the longest-ever federal shutdown was ending, a six-day ordeal that had both parties fearing retribution by disgruntled voters. But there was doggedness, too, and White House spokesperson Mike McCurry warned another shutdown would be imminent if the two sides can't strike a budget deal by mid-December.

A day after bipartisan leaders shook hands

"The president got what we wanted."

Leon Panetta, White House chief of staff during an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America" on a pact reopening government through Dec. 15, the House overwhelmingly approved the measure 421-4 and shipped it to President Clinton for his signature.

The legislation commits both sides to seeking a balanced budget in seven years using congressional economic calculations, which Republicans had demanded for months, and to protect social programs, as the White House insisted. It was approved Sunday by the Senate.

Before recessing for Thanksgiving, the House also gave final congressional blessing to the GOP plan for balancing the budget by 2002 on a mostly party-line 235-192 vote. It would overhaul Medicare, slice scores of programs and trim taxes for millions.

The GOP prepared to send a letter to Clinton asking that he provide them with a detailed, seven-year budget-balancing plan of his own next week.

The president had long said that the GOP's seven-year, budget-balancing timetable would force overly harsh spending cuts. Democrats said Monday that to meet that schedule, the key in upcoming negotiations would be to force Republicans to shrink their planned $245 billion tax break for families and businesses.

"Well, I think that has to be on the table," responded House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., on NBC's "Today" program. Trimming the tax cut would make things easier for politicians and bureaucrats, but "harder for parents," he added.

Both political sides said they were mulling plans for the structure of their negotiations. But for now, each stressed that going in, they had achieved what they wanted.

"If we do what we should do between now and Dec. 15, it won't make any difference who won

Back in business

Agreement
President Clinton and Congress agreed in principle to balance the budget by 2002. Negotiations on taxes, Medicare, education, etc., are still to come.

Back to work
Up to 800,000 furloughed workers returned to work.

Next step
Details of the agreement must be worked out and written into law by Dec. 15, or another government shutdown could follow.

Avoiding default
The government can't borrow, but Treasury may use trust funds earmarked for civil service retirement.

FIRST ALBUM IN 25 YEARS

Help! Beatles 'get back' today

Cary Jordan

The Daily Iowan

Their hairstyles are ancient, their cult following is aging and one of their lead singers is gone.

Nevertheless, with the release of the Beatles' new anthology, music lovers of all ages are being sent into one swift melodic frenzy across the country.

The anthology, which is comprised of three boxed sets, is the first release from the band in 25 years. Capitol Records produced the anthology and will release the first boxed set today.

On Monday, under tight security, 31,000 copies of the set were distributed across the country while anxious Beatlemanics awaited their arrival a full day before the official release date.

ADDISON, Ill. — Jacqueline Williams told friends she was going to have a baby — even though she wasn't pregnant.

It was that desire for a baby, police say, that led Williams, her boyfriend and another man to murder a pregnant woman, slice open her belly with scissors and pluck out a healthy boy who was due to be born Monday.

Two of the woman's three children also were killed. Hours later, Williams' boyfriend told a relative she had given birth to a son.

Princess Di: Strong woman of the '90s

Associated Press

LONDON — Princess Diana does not want to divorce Prince Charles but is willing to discuss the possibility with him if he feels differently, she said in an interview broadcast Monday night.

"I await my husband's decision on which way we're all going to go," she said. "... To date, neither of us has discussed this subject, though the rest of the world seems to have."

In her first public comments about her private life, Diana told the BBC she had desperately wanted her marriage to succeed, in part because of the painful separation of her own parents.

"I desperately wanted it to work. I desperately loved my husband and I wanted to share everything with him, and I thought we were a very good team," she said. "I come from a divorced background, and I didn't want to go into that again."

Diana spoke quietly, almost wistfully, though several times she flashed the shy smile that has been her trademark. She wore a navy suit with a white shell and dark stockings. Her hair looked slightly tousled.

Prince Charles, who formally separated from Diana in December 1992 after 11 years of marriage, was reported to be at his home in Gloucestershire. It was not known whether he was watching.

In her candid conversation with reporter Martin Bashir, Diana said that after her separation, she became the object of an organized campaign by people in the royal household who saw her as a problem. She said visits abroad were blocked and letters didn't reach her.

"Everything changed after we separated, and life became very difficult," she said.

But she said of herself: "She won't go quietly, that's the problem. I will fight to the end because I believe that I have a role to fulfill, and I've got two children to bring up."

Diana never pointed to any specific people in the royal household who feared or opposed her. Asked why she was regarded as a problem, Diana said:

"I think every strong woman in history has had to walk down a similar path. I think it's the strength that causes the confusion and the fear. Why is she strong? Where does she get it from? Where is she taking it? Where is she going to use it? Why does the public still support her?"

Princess Diana, seen in this television image, answers a question during an interview taped earlier and Monday aired on the BBC program "Panorama." An estimated 15 to 20 million viewers were expected to tune into the program.

She denied having an adulterous relationship with her friend James Gilbey, but confirmed that he was the man who called her "Squidgy" in a clandestinely taped telephone conversation.

The interview was scheduled to air in the United States at 9 p.m. EST Friday on ABC-TV, which bought the American broadcast rights.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Musicians, prepare your resumes. Garth Brooks is looking for two band members who aren't obsessed with job security.

Brooks has a new album out next week and is booked for a U.S. tour, but he lost two musicians to solo careers — guitarist Ty England and the country star's own sister, bassist Betsy Brooks.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sean Penn actually has something nice to say about ex-wife Madonna.

"I think she's an untapped actress," Penn said in the Nov. 24 issue of Entertainment Weekly. "Given the right material, I'd work with Madonna. She's a very specific presence in the world and in my life."

The couple divorced in 1989 after a stormy three-year marriage.

Asked if the two keep in touch, Penn smirked and said, "Not exactly."

Penn directed another former flame, girlfriend Robin Wright, in the new movie "The Crossing Guard." Wright is the mother of his two children.

Sinatra birthday celebrated with star-studded production

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Frank Sinatra joined a stage crowded with entertainers for a chorus of "New York, New York" during taping of an 80th birthday tribute for Old Blue Eyes.

Sinatra's birthday isn't until Dec. 12, but a throng of celebrities running the gamut from rap to opera turned out Sunday to appear in the two-hour ABC special, which will air in December. The exact date hasn't been announced.

The taping delighted the Shrine Auditorium crowd of 6,000, some of whom paid $1,000 a ticket. The gala benefited AIDS Project Los Angeles and the Barbara Sinatra Children's Center at Eisenhower Medical Center near Palm Springs, Calif.

Tony Bennett, Bob Dylan, Bruce Springsteen, Little Richard and Hootie and the Blowfish sang tributes to Sinatra as he sat at a table with his wife, Barbara, and daughters Christina and Nancy.

A movie screen displayed a clip of Sinatra singing "Old Man River" in the 1946 MGM musical "Till the Clouds Roll By."

Top TAs praised with little-known award

Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

Besides leading unproductive discussion sessions, one of UI senior Heidi Harle's Teaching Assistants spent most of his time flirting with female students.

The flirting was funny at first, Harle said, but as the semester went on, it became annoying.

Harle is one of many UI students who have complained about their Teaching Assistants. For the UI's good TAs, however, the UI Council on Teaching awards the Outstanding Teaching Assistant Award.

Don Yarbrough, chairperson for the Council on Teaching and associate professor in psychological and quantitative foundations, said the council looks for several characteristics when determining an outstanding TA. The TAs must be nominated and then submit letters of recommendation from students, professors and others associated with their work.

"I like to see someone really enthusiastic and knowledgeable about the subject and who can communicate that and knows what is important," Yarbrough said. "In the past, we have looked for a demonstration of excellence and information from departments, colleagues, students and other TAs when determining an outstanding TA."

Last year, 25 awards were given. Nominations for the 1995-96 awards are due in February.

Shari Prior, a philosophy TA and 1994-95 award winner, said she tries to create an open, casual environment that makes students feel comfortable.

"I try to get the students involved in the material by keeping a philosophy journal so they think about the material beforehand, which creates better discussions," she said. "I also use spot forms and additional evaluation forms because student input is one of the most useful ways to find out how I can improve my teaching."

UI sophomore Kristy Duehr said Prior, who is her Introduction to Philosophy TA, does a good job communicating the difficult topics dealt with in class.

"She's very understanding because she explains everything on our terms, and she relates it to stuff that happens in our lives," Duehr said.

Prior, a TA for five years, said the award made her feel important.

"It makes you feel good to know people appreciate all the hard work you are doing," she said.

Mark Holbrook, a biology TA and 1994-95 award winner, said even though the award was an honor for him, not many students know about it. In addition, he doesn't believe the award helps students have a better attitude about their TAs.

Maureen Burke, staff director for the Teaching Assistant Preparation in English program, which helps foreign TAs with their English skills, said there will always be student complaints about TAs.

"If people do have complaints, then they need to let people know," Burke said about foreign TA language competency complaints. "We will then follow through with the complaint."

Fred Antczak, chairperson of the UI Rhetoric Department, said his department, which has more than 100 TAs, has a guidebook outlining what TAs should teach in class.

"I think that if you treat people professionally and give them the resources to teach, they will do a good job," he said.

Native Americans bring own interpretation to Thanksgiving

Vicki Butler
The Daily Iowan

Although Joe Coulter doesn't believe the stories of the Native Americans and the Pilgrims sitting down for a harvest-time feast — and neither do most Native Americans — there will still be celebrations of sorts on Thursday.

"I don't think there's huge hostility toward it, but there's a different meaning for native people," said Coulter, who is a UI professor of neuroscience, anatomy and American Indian and Native studies. "The stereotypical view of the natives welcoming the Pilgrims is nice, but the subsequent history doesn't bring fond memories."

Coulter said he and some Native American students will have the traditional turkey meal Thursday, but won't be thinking of the holiday the same way most European-Americans do.

"It's a tradition carried down by European-Americans, not by natives," he said. "It's not something that's part of any tribe's lore or traditional beliefs or stories."

Coulter said this is due to the attempt to strip Native American culture from the U.S. landscape during westward expansion.

"The version of Thanksgiving that's perpetuated is of the native people sharing with the Pilgrim forefathers," he said. "But the way the natives treated the Europeans differed greatly from the way the natives were treated in the long run."

UI sophomore Marisa Cummings, who is a quarter Omaha and Ponca Indian, said every Native American gathering is like Thanksgiving, involving family and a feast. However, she agreed the Pilgrims' arrival in America is not what is being celebrated.

"Thanksgiving is no different from any other time of the year. Every day we give thanks," Cummings said.

UI student Shirl Snyder is from a Navajo reservation in Utah and is half Native American.

Snyder said Thanksgiving is a time for all of her family to get together.

"We don't celebrate in a way where we think of the first Thanksgiving," she said. "It is a U.S. holiday, so we take time to be with our family."

Coulter said the holiday, generally is not scorned by Native Americans, but it's also not widely celebrated in the traditional way.

"I wouldn't rank Thanksgiving as offensive to native people as Columbus Day — that's a pretty widely scorned holiday by native people," he said. "But there's not very much positive sentiment toward it. We usually take time at this time of year to give thanks — but it's sort of a year 'round thing from spring to fall. And it's more religious."

Traditional Thanksgiving Day food is common among many Native Americans, Cummings said. However, there is one difference.

"My grandpa died and my grandpa's spirit," she said. "It's for his spirit, in case his spirit is hungry."

Hethshuka, a Native American holiday, which means "harvest time," is an August celebration which is similar to Thanksgiving, Cummings said.

Public to get a glimpse of I.C. development plans

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Ongoing plans to promote economic development in the area south of Burlington Street will face public scrutiny for the first time tonight at the Iowa City Council meeting.

The components of the proposed Near Southside Design Plan — including a landscaped median down the center of Burlington Street to enhance pedestrian access to the area — will be explained and displayed for public discussion.

The plan, which could cost the city up to $20.5 million to complete, is intended to expand the downtown area and promote dense commercial development directly south of Burlington Street. It would also encourage high development in small clusters further away from Burlington, and provide a more attractive and uniform streetscape for the area.

An advisory committee met with consultants to discuss elements of the plan, including possible street closings for pedestrian walkways and which areas would have a residential focus and which would have a commercial focus.

Councilor Jim Throgmorton said he would have liked to have seen even more imagination put into the design of the area.

"If I had been involved with the advising committee rather than on the council, I really would've pushed to put more inspiring and creative elements in it," Throgmorton said. "I think it's a good improvement and I'm all for it, but it doesn't make my heart soar."

The plan calls for the development of separate enclaves such as a governmental center around the Court House and a UI extension area.

These areas would be defined by specific light fixtures, enclave banners and enhanced sidewalk paving.

The plan also includes a civic park on the federal lot site which would tentatively house an oval play area for in-line skating, skateboarding and basketball. In the winter, it could be converted into an ice-skating rink.

Around the park, a multiple-use parking ramp may be built, which would include office or commercial space as well as parking spots.

"I may actually vote for a parking ramp," Councilor Karen Kubby said of the multiple-use ramp. "This is a public-use space that also happens to hold cars."

Throgmorton said he supports the recommendations of the advisory committee and likes the freedom the long-term plan gives.

"It provides a framework over a long period of time without locking us into a rigid framework," he said.

Immigration reform threatens UI diversity

Mary Sue Coleman is going to have a hard time achieving her goal of diversifying the UI campus if the Immigration Reform Act of 1995 is passed. The bill is an outright attack on foreign students, scholars and researchers, with alarming implications for campuses such as the UI which rely heavily on the talents and abilities of such people.

One of the bill's provisions imposes a 3-year mandatory ineligibility for employment in the United States, including post doctoral studies for foreign students who graduated from an American institution of higher education. This could have a devastating impact on foreign student enrollment, which translates into lost tuition revenue since students would likely choose to study in countries in which such restrictions would not apply. Additionally, it would mean students who are intimately familiar with a professor's research would be disqualified from continuing research in the form of post doctoral studies after graduating.

The bill would also cut the number of visas available from 140,000 to 90,000 and would eliminate the "outstanding professor/researcher" category of visas. Another provision would place a penalty on the hiring institution of 10 percent of the employee's salary for short-term workers and 25 percent of the employee's

GUEST OPINION POINT OF VIEW

Tightening immigration laws will have adverse effects on schools which value diversity because foreign students will be unable to afford an American education.

salary for a permanent. These provisions would make hiring the brightest and best scholars and researchers more difficult and increasingly expensive, undoubtedly lowering the quality of education.

One provision calls for increasing the fee on applications for student visas to $100. For a student from any country, this amount is enough to discourage applicants. This sum is nearly equivalent to the average annual income of a worker from some students' home countries. Such an approach is at best elitist and isolationist and at worst racist and self-defeating. Our high quality of education depends on people with diverse knowledge and backgrounds.

If the goal is to encourage hiring Americans for the positions which foreign scholars now hold, this is not the way to go about it. Enacting such legislation will not cause qualified individuals to miraculously appear. Rather, there must be a commitment to fund education in a way that attracts people in math and science to academics rather than to industry and other more lucrative areas. There must also be an end to the cutting of education budgets, which cause us to turn to foreign scholars to fill positions Americans can't.

If the overall goal of the legislation is simply to decrease the number of foreign students and faculty, we must question whether such a policy is wise. In light of the post-Cold War climate, it seems we should be promoting intellectual and intercultural exchange instead of discouraging it.

The bill, also known as the Simpson bill because it was proposed by Senate Immigration Subcommittee Chairman Alan Simpson, is being rushed through Congress. It was proposed Nov. 3 and it will be up for a subcommittee vote Nov. 28. It is strongly opposed by ethnic groups, religious leaders, legal experts and business interests across the country. Also joining to oppose it is the National Association of Foreign Student Affairs: Association of International Educators.

The implications for citizens concerned about maintaining academic freedom and the high quality of education at institutions across the nation are clear. We must rally to protect the people under unfair attack who lack the political clout to do so themselves. It is in our best interest to continue to attract international students, researchers and scholars. We urge you to contact your senator (Sen. Grassley is on this subcommittee) and voice your opposition to the Simpson bill today.

Hancher was exploring

To the Editor:

Ricardo Martinez needs to learn more about "American" culture. He claims "bits and pieces of his culture are being taken, modified and consumed" by American society.

Gee, Ricardo, that sounds a lot like the history of the United States. We are a melting pot. We are a nation of immigrants. As each ethnicity enters our country, we do take the parts we find redeemable and modify them to fit into our great big puzzle.

I really doubt Germans are giving us the finger because we accepted sauerkraut and put it on bratwurst. I doubt they were miffed we didn't accept Nazism. Hancher was simply exploring Latin dance. Of course something was missing. These dances don't have the "fire, life and feeling" of Latin America. They aren't Latin Americans. Lighten up.

When I look at Ricardo, I don't see a "spic." I see an angry, confused young man.

Save my covered bridge

To the Editor:

I am writing about a very disturbing discovery I made about three weeks ago. A great part of Iowa history is being destroyed by Mother Nature with the help of human hands.

To start out, let me tell you about my memories as a young child. I remember picnics and camp outs with my family when I was between 5 and 8 years old. Some of those were located at a place just south of the small town of Delta, located in Keokuk County, Iowa. That place was the Delta's Covered Bridge Park. It is one of the oldest of Iowa's few remaining covered bridges, with most remaining in Madison County, Iowa.

For those of you that don't know about covered bridges, they are a vanishing history. The Delta Covered Bridge was built in 1869 and over the past several decades, it has become a part of our lives. It is a sad fact that the bridge badly needs repairs, if we want to ensure the future of this bridge for our children and grandchildren to love and enjoy.

Right now the bridge is in such bad condition it is unsafe for people to be around. It has rotten boards in the floor, a bad roof and crumbling foundation. It can be saved if we act now. I visited with the people of Madison County, Iowa, about this bridge. They saved their bridges through government-funded grants and different fund-raising events. I welcome any comments or suggestions on my campaign to save the Delta Covered Bridge. If you see a petition out there, sign it and be a part of history. Please don't throw away our past.

Hearts and prayers with missing anchorwoman

To the Editor:

In a story you ran titled "Psychics Enlisted to Find Mason City Anchorwoman," (DI, Nov. 14) it was suggested that we, the family and friends of Jodi, have resorted to psychics in order to continue the search. There have been many psychics contacting us since Jodi's disappearance in June. Some people consider psychic predictions a waste of time. However, we feel it would be foolish to ignore their suggestions, just as it would be foolish to place all hope in them. Our hope is with Jodi. We love her, and need to have her back. Right now, our hearts, thoughts and prayers are with her.

Hayden Fry can take a hike

To the Editor:

Hayden Fry is simply settling for mediocrity and has forgotten the fire and passion for winning he once had in his first 10 years at Iowa.

He said in the DI (Nov. 15), they've "only lost one game the whole year to a team that we were favored to beat and that was Illinois." Is he just giving up and conceding to losing when the superficial odds-makers make the Hawkeyes the underdogs? I think that Hayden has forgotten that the Hawks can pull off "upsets" and still win after being declared "underdogs" in the odds. Odds mean nothing when you have the focus and desire of a national or league championship.

Look at Northwestern this year, or Florida State in the early 1980s. Florida State and many other programs pulled off the huge upsets needed to gain respect. Now, Bobby Bowden has built a program with a reputation of winning and dominating their league and games, no matter what the "odds" or "favorites."

Northwestern is being successful and winning, despite being underdogs in many of their games this year. Gary Barnett has the intensity, desire and spirit to build and lead that successful program into the 21st century.

Iowa needs that exact same optimistic and fresh attitude more than ever. Hayden Fry, you've had your success. Pass it on, and let some other person take the head coach position. The national and local respect of a once-victorious football tradition is at stake.

All for fur free shopping

To the Editor,

Nov. 24 is the busiest shopping day of the year. One of the popular trends that has come about in recent years has been fur-trimmed coats. While this would seem to signify high social status, it is, in fact, a disgusting act.

To make a fur coat, many animals are bludgeoned to death, raised in cages no longer than their bodies, caught in wire snares or lag traps, electrocuted and suffocated. Many animals are alive for many hours or days trying to escape the clamps or chew their limbs off. One badger was in so much pain that he dug a 16 foot trench attempting to escape from the clutches of a leg-hold trap.

In recent years, the fur industry has profited from the skins of other animals and what many animal lovers and activists have done is to create Fur Free Friday on that same large shopping day. My simple and humane request is to please stop this suffering and choose not to buy fur on this day, or any other day of the year.

It is time to locate and count your blessings

Thanksgiving usually finds us going about our business in a happy trance. We buy pumpkin pies and whipped cream with the dedication of churchgoers praying in their pews.

At first we behave like saints and spend our spare time thinking about things for which we are thankful.

But the following morning, we stuff ourselves with leftovers for breakfast — dishing stuffing, gravy, turkey and potatoes into our bowls instead of bran flakes. We pile the family into the largest functioning automobile we own and drive to the nearest mall to max out our credit cards on the first official day of the Christmas shopping season.

In short, the long winter of American hyperconsumption has its kickoff on Thanksgiving day.

I am not here to be misanthropic; I simply have not been able to avoid making these observations. Since my preference is for the less highly charged preholidays, my favorite part of Thanksgiving is the preparation. This is prime time to give genuine thanks — before Macy's has a chance to inflate the Bullwinkle Moose and Rocket J. Squirrel balloons.

I learned to love preholidays from my mother. Mama was our household muse, a family goddess in a house dress who had Salem 100s poised between her fingers as standard equipment. Giving thanks for anything without her will be difficult.

On a bitter night in June, I sat on the porch in shock with the rest of my family after her nurses shut off all the equipment and removed her oxygen mask and IV tubing. We left the hospital without her, knowing we would never leave any place in this world with her again.

Still, Mama loved the holiday season with triple-fold energy. Any attempt to mope our way through it would dishonor her memory. And her memory — with all its humor, energy, faith and determination — is something to be thankful for.

So we plan to give thanks, my family and I. I will spend two nights gathering recipes and drafting shopping lists before taking my younger brother along to the store. He's my protection man — at 6 foot 7 inches tall, he even gets respect from the menopausal women whose shopping carts are registered as lethal weapons. Shared sustenance is something to give thanks for — so is having an imposing brother, while I'm making a list.

We have our first nephew/grandbaby in the family this fall. At 3 months old, he now flashes a devastating baby grin when he recognizes your voice, especially if you make kissing sounds and squeak, "We love our baby boy!" This is the first Thanksgiving we'll be more concerned with our share of baby-holding time than our share of a favorite family recipe. The gift of new life is something to be thankful for.

I will cook into the early morning hours on Thanksgiving day. In the quiet of the kitchen, still so much her kitchen, I will sit in the chair at the table where Mama spent so many hours and years. I will think of my family, which is what she thought of in those silent hours. If the pie crust grows wayward I will swear as she did, with gusto — but only at wayward pie crusts. I may try with all the earnest wackiness of a late 1800s spiritualist to summon her if I forget a vital ingredient while mixing the stuffing.

So we plan to give thanks, my family and I. I will spend two nights gathering recipes and drafting shopping lists before taking my younger brother along to the store. He's my protection man — at 6 foot 7 inches tall, he even gets respect from the menopausal women whose shopping carts are registered as lethal weapons.

But the best thing about celebrating the preholiday is that no matter how tough the prep work, there is plenty of time to give thanks before the Macy's parade gets underway. No matter how rough your past year has been, I wish you at least a few moments of calm in which to locate and count your blessings.

Free meals at I.C. churches brighten Thanksgiving

Mark Strahan
The Daily Iowan

A pair of "home style" Thanksgiving dinners will make Iowa City a little more cheerful Thursday, thanks to the efforts of local churches.

Bethany Baptist Church, 3001 Muscatine Ave., will have its annual free Thanksgiving dinner Thursday. In addition to its in-house dinner, the church will provide rides to the church and deliver meals, as well.

"It will be a traditional Thanksgiving meal with turkey, cranberries and pies," said youth Pastor John Meredith.

Claude Williams, veteran of 13 Thanksgiving dinners at Bethany, said he typically roasts about 20 turkeys each year.

"There are a number of men at Bethany who like to cook," he said. "Over the years people have become aware of what we're doing and have come to help out. One year we had 90 people involved."

Williams also said he and the other cooks enjoy the turkeys along with the diners.

"I have to do that — I have to keep my weight up," he said.

The generosity of others has also helped to make the dinner special, said Pastor Jarol Duerksen.

"A man who came to the dinner 10 years ago brought a turkey for this year's dinner, and a lady from another church brought silverware that her Sunday School class had put together," he said.

Food contributions demonstrate Iowa City's ability to help all kinds of people, whether they're low-income families or unemployed individuals, said Meredith.

"Iowa City is very much a caring community," Meredith said.

The dinner marks the 13th consecutive dinner sponsored by the church. Meredith said the dinner attracts 300 to 400 people every year, serving a diverse clientele.

"We get a lot of people in the community," Meredith said. "International students come to learn about the Thanksgiving tradition, the less-fortunate are welcome and if someone in town doesn't have family around, they can come and have someone to talk to."

Meredith said volunteers are needed for food preparation, donation of food items, for setting up and tearing down and people to just sit and talk with diners.

In keeping with the holiday tradition, St. Mary's Church, 220 E. Jefferson St., will also have its annual free Thanksgiving dinner Thursday, beginning at 1 p.m.

Teen escapes two-month torture ordeal

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Laine Sumner missed a lot of school. For three days last month, his mother said the 15-year-old boy had the flu. When school officials kept calling, his stepfather finally said he had run away.

But the teen-ager had not run away. Instead, authorities contend, the boy was being tortured by his mother, stepfather and others in an effort to recover $32,000 in drug money they thought he stole. There was no indication from authorities the boy actually took the money.

Last week, the boy escaped from his brother-in-law's house in Oklahoma City and told police he was shocked with an electrical device, burned with an iron and doused with bleach, among other things, during an eight-week ordeal.

Authorities said the boy, who is now in the custody of the state Department of Human Services, had two black eyes, burn marks and other wounds on his body consistent with torture.

"I have never heard of an incident like this, where anyone short of maybe a prisoner of war has gone through what this kid apparently has gone through over about a two-month period," District Attorney Tim Kuykendall said Monday.

The prosecutor said when he first read the statement Sumner gave to authorities, "I thought he had to have been making it up." But a search of his stepfather's home turned up many of the alleged torture devices, he said.

Ten people have been arrested since the boy escaped, including Sumner's stepfather, Eddie McCombs; mother, Jamie Wilson; and brother-in-law, Gary Gammell. All three were being held on complaints of kidnapping for the purpose of extortion, maiming, child abuse, solicitation for murder and drug violations.

Astronauts come back down to Earth

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The shuttle astronauts returned to Earth from Russia's Mir space station on Monday with warm memories of their brief visit and three new friends they left behind.

Mission Control greeted commander Kenneth Cameron in Russian after he guided Atlantis through an overcast sky and landed at Kennedy Space Center and complimented the five-member crew on a "great job" on the eight-day docking mission.

"A big thank you," Cameron replied in Russian. He added in English: "Good to be home."

The Russian landing was broadcast live at Russian Mission Control outside Moscow. However, Mir's three cosmonauts, who spent three days with the astronauts while their spacecrafts were docked, had to wait 1 1/2 hours before receiving official word because of sporadic communications.

Dracula — in Puerto Rico?

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Blood-sucking killer leaves trail of dead farm animals throughout the island! Frightened residents wearing fatigues beat bushes in search of mysterious killer!

Whatever it may be, the creature responsible for a string of animal deaths this year has generated both fear and satire in this U.S. commonwealth.

Goats, hens, rabbits and geese all have fallen prey to the nocturnal killer that reputedly sucks their blood, leaving them lifeless. No one can explain why.

Angela Lajes found her dog and her sister's two cats dead in the southern city of Ponce earlier this month.

"It sucked out the animals' blood and took out their guts and ate them," she said.

The daily tabloid El Vocero reported Puerto Rico's Dracula had a field night on Halloween with a toll of five goats and 20 parakeets "sucked dead." It depicted the killer as a pointy-tailed devil.

Territory claims tear at Bosnia peace accord deadline

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio — A U.S.-imposed deadline for settling Europe's bloodiest conflict since World War II passed without agreement Monday. Balkan negotiators suggested a new round of talks might be needed to resolve the contentious issue of how to divide Bosnia.

"We are in extra innings," said a senior U.S. official as Secretary of State Warren Christopher kept up the chase with only two hours of sleep. "Maybe at the end of the day we'll take stock of where we are. We'll take it one step at a time, hour by hour."

Christopher met several times with all three Balkan leaders. "We're still talking, and that's a positive sign," another U.S. official said late Monday afternoon.

Workers began loading baggage onto a Yugoslav airliner after they were checked by bomb-sniffing dogs. The second official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Christopher and all three Balkan presidents were leaving Monday night — agreement or not.

President Clinton called Croatian President Franjo Tudjman to urge him to help resolve territorial problems and he received "an encouraging reply," said a senior Clinton administration official, speaking by telephone from Washington.

The Serbs and Muslims Sunday night virtually settled their territorial differences, but Croatia balked at going along, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Another administration official said a comprehensive pact looked less likely as the day wore on. The parties may put in writing "the progress to date, which has been significant" but which falls short of a full agreement, the official said.

"A lot of progress has been made; just closing it is difficult," the official said.

Last-ditch efforts focused on a territorial dispute and the extent of a U.S. commitment to build up Bosnia's postwar army.

A Balkan delegate said neither the Bosnians nor the Serbs were willing to compromise on control of the Posavina corridor in northern Bosnia. The Serbs, who control the 30-mile-long passage between their eastern and western holdings, are seeking to widen it. But the Bosnians want their territory to cut through the strip of land in order to give them access to the Sava River on the Croatian border.

The Clinton administration has promised to help build up Bosnia's army with equipment and training, but Bosnia is seeking an iron-clad guarantee. Without one, the Balkan official said, the talks would fail.

A comprehensive agreement — resolving territorial and other major differences among rival ethnic factions — remained the goal, said the senior official who briefed reporters earlier, also on condition of anonymity. But, he said, "our thinking could change" on accepting a more limited pact.

Senior Balkan officials said the talks could go on for most of the day. A senior U.S. official said, "It could go either way."

White House press secretary Mike McCurry had said Clinton was "available to the parties if his participation could help them get an agreement."

Christopher spoke several times with Clinton's national security adviser, Anthony Lake, who in turn was in touch with the president.

Ever since Christopher opened the talks at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base on Nov. 1, the United States has insisted on all or nothing — hoping for a wide-ranging agreement that would adjust Bosnia's map to set up two ethnic republics and provide for a new constitution, elections and a determination on the future of Sarajevo, the capital.

A comprehensive accord remained Christopher's strong preference, officials made clear. But with territorial compromises proving elusive, especially on control of corridors to ethnic enclaves, American strategy could change.

"We've pulled together almost everything but the territory," a U.S. official said. "Nobody thinks an agreement would be viable without a decision on territory."

But sources in all three Balkan delegations suggested if an agreement was reached, it might be a partial one, covering only constitutional issues and leaving territorial questions for a new round of talks.

State Department spokesperson Nicholas Burns said Presidents Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, Alija Izetbegovic of Bosnia and Croatia's Tudjman, who returned from Zagreb late Sunday, "truly want a comprehensive agreement."

Returning federal workers feel like political pawns

Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Relieved but peeved, federal employees returned Monday to their jobs and a mountain of paperwork that piled up during six days of uninvited idleness.

Traffic was its usual terrible self. Lines formed, phones rang. The mint made money. And the huge federal establishment assessed the task of catching up.

"It's great to be back serving the public that pays us," said Chris Fisher, executive officer in the Education Department's office of vocational and adult education.

And Jan Hartigan, a Social Security administrative aide in Springfield, Mo., talked of the trauma of being furloughed. "I'm happy to be here today and I'm thankful I've got a job," she said. "My stomach has been in knots and it's been just a frightening experience."

But some saw themselves as victims of a game they did not want to play.

"I had that used feeling, like a pawn in political gamesmanship," said Ron Walczak, 47, a labor relations official at the Department of Health and Human Services.

"We felt like orphaned children," added Clydene Kelson, who works at the Federal Communications Commission.

Tourists tramped through the capital's museums and monuments. Elsewhere, they marveled over the Grand Canyon's grandeur or took the ferry to Ellis Island in New York Harbor.

Big tasks and small awaited. The Treasury said it had fallen behind in collecting between $300 million and $400 million that would have come in had it not been for the shutdown.

That sum includes delinquent taxes gathered by the Internal Revenue Service and fees collected by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The tiny Administration for Children and Families resumed helping states find parents who skipped out on child-support payments. Its parent locator service gets up to 20,000 new names a day.

Social Security said it would take a month, maybe two, to catch up with as many as 120,000 applications for benefits and 240,000 requests for cards that accumulated during six days of uninvited idleness.

The government began the momentous chore of calculating the cost of closing down. White House spokesperson Mike McCurry said once the Office of Management and Budget reaches a figure, "We believe it will make a very powerful case that we should never do this type of shutdown again."

Music for the holidays

Jonathan Hansen
The Daily Iowan

Just in time for Thanksgiving break, Mercury Rev is touring through the Midwest, stopping in Des Moines, in support of their most recent release, See You on the Other Side.

Mercury Rev's distinctive sound comes from a blending of widely varied instruments and musical styles. The band draws from early American folk and jazz, to the most recent of innovations in alternative rock, and juxtaposes flutes and vocal choruses against fuzzy guitars.

"A lot of people don't think about where rock 'n' roll came from, and we like to be very conscious of that. We don't see any problem with using maybe more of a jazz thing, or more blues because we're into all those sorts of music," said guitarist Grasshopper. "All music is really related anyway. People draw these lines between everything, but we try to break down some of those barriers and boundaries."

Ironically, Mercury Rev was first a sensation in England. In 1992, as the band released its first album, Yer Self is Steam, the American record label Rough Trade went out of business, leaving Mercury Rev with no distributor in the states for several months.

"It's weird because a lot of people we meet will say, 'Whoa, I thought you were an English band,'" said Grasshopper. "And part of that is because we were big there and because our first record came out in England and Europe first. But when I listen to the music, I see it as pretty American."

And what could be more American than working in the movies? Mercury Rev got its start doing soundtracks for experimental and nature films in Buffalo, N.Y., before members of the band started writing more traditional songs.

"I think we have always kept the visual element of film about us. In the way we communicate with each other, we don't always say 'go from c to b to g,'" said Grasshopper. "We think more in terms of visual images, like 'Oh yeah, let's make this part sound like a sun blowing up on Mars at 3 a.m.'"

Despite Mercury Rev's music being a delicate web of sounds that only a sophisticated studio can produce, the band enjoys touring and playing live at high volumes.

"Live, we treat the music a lot differently because we've always dug bands who are a little bit different live," he said. "It's like a very immediate and physical thing live."

For anyone in the area over break, Mercury Rev's only Iowa appearance on this tour should be a good complement to a holiday emphasizing history and national identity.

Love is currently working with other members of the group on an album of songs with country singers, including Willie Nelson.

"We sang the introduction to the song, then Willie came into the sound booth and started to sing and we freaked out at how good it sounded. It sounded like it was written for him. His distinctive tone and phrasing was perfect."

Love said the song, which is about losing someone you love, has a haunting mystical quality to it. It was written on Nov. 22, 1963, a few hours before Kennedy was assassinated.

"We woke up a few hours after writing the song and found out that Kennedy had been shot."

This is the first of several songs the group will record with country artists. Although it was a friend who came up with the concept, Love said he thought it was a good idea because country radio is one domain that still likes melody, a story and a harmony. Other songs they hope to record include "Don't Worry Baby," "Help Me Rhonda," and "Getcha Back." Love said he wants Hank Williams Jr. to sing "Help Me Rhonda."

Also in the works is an album of more contemporary philosophical music, Love is making with cousin Brian Wilson. The title song, "Unleash the Love," sends out a strong message of universal love and understanding.

"My goal is to become more creative, more productive and create more positive, uplifting actions for humanity," Love said when asked about retirement.

Paving the path for caper movies

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

From the opening moments of "The Usual Suspects," it's obvious that director Bryan Singer and screenwriter Christopher McQuarrie are consciously imitating "Reservoir Dogs." There just aren't that many other wildly popular dark, violent caper movies about a small band of talented career criminals drawn together by a single master planner in order to take on a dangerous escapade which is explained in a choppy, nonlinear style, beginning with the ending of the story.

About all that's missing from "Suspects" is the casual torture and the wonky riffing about Madonna lyrics. But as necessary as these features were to the "Reservoir Dogs" experience, their removal doesn't hurt "Suspects." McQuarrie knows where to borrow his ideas, but he also knows how to carry out his own; he provides a watertight framework for this gritty crime drama, and he fleshes it out with a series of jarring epiphanies designed to keep viewers guessing until the credits roll.

Kevin Spacey (just off the set from "Seven") stars as Roger "Verbal" Kent, one of only two survivors of a mysterious mass slaughter at a San Pedro, Calif., dock. As Verbal's nickname indicates, he talks too much, and when an uncompromising Customs agent (Chazz Palminteri, "Jade") twists the thumbscrews, Verbal starts spitting out flashbacks.

It seems it all started when he and four other longtime hard cases were hauled in on suspicion of hijacking a truckload of guns. All five men get thrown in a holding cell, and inevitably, they start talking business, past and future. The

FILM REVIEW

"The Usual Suspects"

★★★½ out of ★★★★★

Director..... Bryan Singer
Screenwriter..... Christopher McQuarrie

Keaton..... Gabriel Byrne
"Verbal" Kent..... Kevin Spacey
McManus..... Stephen Baldwin

holdout is Dean Keaton (Gabriel Byrne, "Miller's Crossing"), a former dirty cop who's trying to go legit and doesn't want to get involved in anything seedy. But the other four — Fester (Benicio Del Toro), McManus (Stephen "Three-some" Baldwin), Hockney (Kevin Pollak) and Verbal himself — quickly put together a uniquely twisted sting operation. Once they manage to rope Keaton in, the rest is history.

The first heist works so well that the group can't resist jumping back in for another round. But as events unfold, it becomes clear that someone's manipulating them, and the lineup that brought them all together was a setup. The more they try to pinpoint who's pulling their strings, the more complex their problems become.

Like "Reservoir Dogs," "Suspects" is told in bits and pieces, starting with the end of the dock debacle and working back and forth through time, creating a powerful sense of tension and anticipation by letting the audience put together the puzzle piece by piece. Like "Dogs" writer/director Quentin Tarantino, Singer handles this in an admirably straightforward fashion, without the annoying stylistic flourishes that usually make flashbacks and voice-overs the bane of the cinematic world.

The cast is similarly straightforward about its work, although Spacey, Palminteri and Byrne call most of the shots. Despite Byrne's annoyingly intermittent accent, this is his best role in quite a while; Spacey, who's had a string of excellent roles of late, lives up to them all. The worst that can be said about the rest of the cast is that they're underused. All in all, the "Suspects" team pulls together so smoothly and seamlessly that even viewers who see the surprise ending coming are still likely to find themselves nodding approvingly at its skillful execution.

"Reservoir Dogs" still holds the gold medal for achievement; even if all other things were equal, it would still come first. But "Suspects" is a worthy follow-up, a brainchild that lives up to its parent's potential in most ways.

Iowa City tradition lives up to its name

DAVID
FOOD

I was initially taken back by the prospect of reviewing The Airliner, an Iowa City mainstay since 1944. I was fearful it would resemble a first-year art student's critique of a Monet.

However, as Airliner owner Randy Larson was quick to point out, a lot can change in 50 years. I prefer to think things can only get better.

The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., deserves two stars for tradition alone, but people don't want to eat nostalgia — they want good food.

If you can snag a seat by the window, you'll manage one of the most scenic views of Iowa City available

Thankfully, The Airliner provides both; and not just pizza as it's primarily known for. The best steak sandwich in Iowa City can be found at The Airliner at an affordable price.

The steak sandwich is prepared precisely the way it's ordered. Whether it's medium or well-done, Airliner cooks should be proud of their accurate work. Even more impressive is the amount of fat or gristle on each piece of meat: none.

The Airliner entrees come complete with a side dish. The most highly recommended is the twice-baked potato. Although the portion may be a tad skimpy, the potatoes are served piping hot and bursting with flavor, which could be the very reason I feel like I never have enough.

If you're looking to eat a little healthier, try the ahi tuna. It's a generous portion of tuna steak doused with mushroom, cheese and a sauce that makes each bite better than the last.

It wouldn't be right to mention The Airliner and not mention the atmosphere. If you can snag a seat by the window, you'll manage one of the most scenic views of Iowa City available. If you're seated at one of the wooden booths, enjoy the constant bustling of people bounding about and friendly chatter that has made The Airliner as special as it is today.

The only downer to The Airliner is the stench of cigarette smoke, but that's natural when an establishment doubles as a bar. Still, it'd be nice to enjoy a nice bowl of chili or scrumptious piece of Airliner carrot cake without leaving smelling like you just dined at a bowling alley snack bar.

Speaking of the chili, it could easily be the best in Iowa City. It's available in either a cup or a bowl, and is easily adjustable to the needs of the customer. No onions? Not a problem.

At most eateries, soups are pre-made. And so it may be at The Airliner, but even if it is, it's nice to know someone has taken the time to realize not everybody prefers their chili prepared the same way.

I was trying to think of the best way to accurately describe The Airliner's chili, but my roommate, Kent, put it best after taking his first bite.

"That's damn good chili," he said.

So when I left, I realized my fears of trivializing The Airliner, an Iowa City landmark paling in comparison to only the Old Capitol itself, were unfounded. It was silly to compare Monet to The Airliner. After all, I'd like to see Monet try to cook a grilled chicken pizza.

TIME FOR THANKS

to ever undergo the surgery there. I am very thankful for the skillful doctors. They were very good to me."

Barb Schanbacher, transplant coordinator at the UIHC, said Thursday is the perfect time for the UIHC to be thankful for people who donate their organs to people like Riley — those who give their lives so others may live.

"Thanksgiving brings the donor families to mind," Schanbacher said.

Riley's daughter, Lynn Ehlers, said she is now an organ donor, along with her husband and children.

"We want to return the gift that was given to us. One person has given to us and now the whole family is organ donors," she said.

Ehlers said the surgery was a miracle and made her believe in the medical world.

"It gave me faith in the medical world," Ehlers said. "It was nothing short of a miracle. My father was given the death sentence but now he has the opportunity to live."

Hamburg Inn fire

The T-shirts are back up on the walls, along with the daily specials. The restaurant even has a few more booths to serve its crowd, which often waits patiently for a table — especially on Sunday mornings.

But the fire that provided the chance to physically improve the Hamburg Inn No. 2 Inc., 214 N.

Linn St., also took away some of its people.

"We lost a lot of people who were like extended family ... they ended up having to get other jobs and do other things," said Manager Steve Fugate. "A lot of the people were irreplaceable."

However, he treasures the staff he has now.

"I think we have a different group of employees from most other businesses. I'm thankful we are able to attract what would be called an alternative group of employees."

Fugate is also thankful for the improved facilities.

"We're a better restaurant because of it," he said. "Basically the kitchen burned down, and we got a new kitchen. Now it's a more functional space."

TURKEYS

18-week lifetime. Daufeldt said he works hard to feed and care for the turkeys properly to ensure modern-day pilgrims have quality turkey on their table.

Some people feel turkey farms like the Daufeldts are inhumane and Thanksgiving itself is a sadistic holiday centered around the slaughter of innocent animals.

"I think it's pretty disgusting," said UI sophomore Rebecca Woodham, co-chairperson of the UI Animal Coalition. "It's a holiday formed around the carcass of an animal."

Woodham became a vegan a year and a half ago, which means she doesn't consume any products made from animals. Even though her family still partakes in the traditional bird, she only eats salads and corn.

Woodham said she disagrees with animals of any sort being raised for human consumption.

"It's not fair for the animal or the vegetarian to be subjected to this tradition every year," Woodham said.

For those concerned with the environment in which the turkeys are raised, there are alternatives to the commercial gobblers.

New Pioneer Co-Op Fresh Food Market, 22 S. Van Buren St., only offers organically fed turkeys, which are raised at Welsh Farms near Decorah, Iowa.

Organically fed turkeys are free of hormone and antibiotic residue, said Maurice Finn, meat and seafood manager at New Pioneer. Organically fed turkeys aren't fed commercial pellets and are raised in roomier conditions, Finn said.

"They're grown yearly," Finn said. "It's not something that's been around a feed lot for a couple of years."

Even though turkey sales have risen this year at New Pioneer, some prefer a vegetarian feast, Finn said.

One of the more popular dishes offered at vegetarian spreads is stuffed acorn squash, said Theresa Carberry, education director at New Pioneer.

"The spirit of the matter is that friends come together and celebrate abundance," Carberry said. "It doesn't really matter if a turkey is in the center of the table or not."

SHUTDOWN

and who lost," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. But he couldn't resist adding: "I think we won. We didn't blink."

That's not how Democrats saw it.

"The president got what we wanted," boasted White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta on ABC's "Good Morning America," saying the administration got Republicans to promise to protect Medicare, Medicaid, education, the environment and aid to working families from severe reductions.

Panetta insisted that the administration had surrendered little in accepting the GOP's timetable, saying it was spending levels for important social programs that really counted. On NBC's "Today," he even seemed to hedge a bit on the timetable itself.

"If we can work out an agreement that protects those priorities, we can do it in seven years or eight years," Panetta said. "But the important thing is protecting those priorities, and that's what we got in the agreement last night."

Those remarks infuriated Republicans, who noted the Sunday agreement called for an elimination of annual deficits "not later than fiscal year 2002."

BEATLEMANIA

recent history and should reach across the spectrum of the population, said Dave Hansen, manager of Discount Records, 21 S. Dubuque St.

"I think, numberwise, this will outsell many bands who are in their prime now, just because of the sheer numbers involved," Hansen said. "I don't think it will be as big with college students as the (Smashing) Pumpkins, but there's a wider variety of people who will be interested."

Even though the band is permanently out of commission due to the death of John Lennon, and the three surviving members haven't been in the spotlight for years, it shouldn't affect the popularity of the new release, he said.

However, Sal Leanhart, manager of B.J. Records, 6½ S. Dubuque St., said he wasn't sure how popular the set was going to be in Iowa City.

"I'm not sure if this release will be as big of a deal in a college community like Iowa City, not like if it was a long-awaited Smashing Pumpkins or Pearl Jam release," he said. "A lot of these students weren't into the Beatles — then or now."

Included on the first set is the ballad "Free as a Bird," which was first aired on Sunday's ABC documentary about the Beatles. It was originally recorded in 1977 by John Lennon on a home cassette player, and has since been digitally altered, adding instruments, lyrics and the voices of Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr and George Harrison.

The first set incorporates several previously unreleased recordings, including two dating back to 1958. It also consists of recordings of live performances and alternative cuts on old favorites, including "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds," "Yesterday," "Getting Better," and "Magical

Mystery Tour."

The anthology provides fans with a chance to hear some fairly obscure cuts from the days of the Quarry Men, which was the band that predated the Beatles and included Lennon, McCartney and Harrison.

The second and third sets will be released next year, with the second set being offered in February. Leanhart said his store hasn't dealt with hordes of fans stopping in or calling about the release, but he expects the anthology to sell out. He attributed this to marketing.

"It really depends on whether the younger people will take to it," he said. "We didn't put a whole lot of promotion into this, but I could still see us selling out."

"If you think about it, the timing was perfect: just before Christmas. Plus, with all the commercials and the TV special, I can't think of any music promotion recently that would compare to this."

FAMILY SLAYING

Joe Birkett, chief of criminal prosecution for the DuPage County state's attorney. "You could not give a horror writer a better script. This puts 'Natural Born Killers' to shame in terms of violence."

A judge Monday ordered the three held without bond on charges of murder and aggravated kidnapping. They could face the death penalty if convicted.

"I'd just like to know why I'm being charged," a disheveled Williams, 28, said as she appeared in court. Her boyfriend, Fedell Caffey, 22, and Levern Ward, 24, of Wheaton, Ill., also were held in the DuPage County Jail.

They are accused of fatally stabbing Deborah Evans, 28; and killing her daughter, Samantha, 10; and son Joshua, 8. Another son, 17-month-old Jordan, was found unharmed early Friday in the bloody apartment; authorities say Ward is his father.

The baby, named Elijah as his mother had intended, was said to be doing well at a hospital.

Birkett described the motive for the killings: "They hatched a plot to take this baby."

After Evans invited the three into her suburban apartment Thursday night, authorities say, Caffey shot her, then joined Ward in stabbing her before the two men went to a bedroom and fatally stabbed Samantha.

Then Caffey cut open Evans' body, and Williams extracted and resuscitated the baby; relatives said she has some training in nursing.

It's unclear how much 8-year-old Joshua saw, but Birkett said, "With what this kid saw, you could call it

Caffey's cousin, Terrence Forest, said Caffey called him at 3 a.m. Friday and said he just had a son. Prosecutors said Williams, the mother of three children, had been pretending she was pregnant so she could claim the newborn as her own.

Investigators got their first break when a witness — someone they won't identify but apparently an acquaintance of Williams and Caffey — reported seeing and speaking to Joshua Evans in Williams' townhouse in Schaumburg, another northwest suburb of Chicago.

Police went to the townhouse Friday night, but Williams and Caffey were gone, possibly to kill Joshua and dump his body in an alley in Maywood, a suburb about 10 miles to the east. The two were arrested when they returned, and Ward was arrested later.

All three have long criminal records. Williams includes convictions for theft and forgery, and Caffey has been convicted of attempted theft, domestic battery and unlawful use of a weapon.

Ward was released from a prison work camp in January after serving a three-year sentence for striking a police officer while trying to enter the home of a former girlfriend.

Police described the short, slender Ward as a "ladies' man." One former girlfriend, Cynthia Aquilar, was granted two orders of protection and reported at least three violations. She sat in the courtroom sobbing Monday as Ward was brought in for a preliminary hearing.

Ward also had beaten Evans in the past, her cousin, Fred Moody, told Chicago television stations Sunday.

Neighbors said Williams and Caffey moved last summer to a townhouse complex in the middle-class suburb of Schaumburg. There were many visitors to the home, including police who were called to quell fights.

One neighbor, Chris McElroy, said he called police after an altercation that ended when Williams walked out of the home with a bloody face.

"The way the world is now, there's nothing that could really surprise me," said neighbor Jerry Clark. "But it really shocked me that it happened out here."

Marino ties record as Dolphins fall to 49ers

Associated Press

MIAMI — Elvis Grbac and the San Francisco 49ers upstaged Dan Marino.

Grbac threw for 382 yards and four scores, negating two touchdown passes by Marino that tied Fran Tarkenton's career NFL record, and San Francisco produced another blowout at Joe Robbie Stadium by beating Miami 44-20 Monday night.

Even more lopsided than the 49ers' 49-26 rout of San Diego in last season's Super Bowl at Miami, the victory was especially impressive on the heels of their 38-20 rout past Dallas eight days earlier.

San Francisco (7-4) again won without injured quarterback Steve Young, who warmed up before the game but watched from the sideline while Grbac completed 31 of 41 passes.

He improved to 3-2 as a starter this season.

The 49ers sacked Marino on the first three plays, and then it got worse for the Dolphins (6-5). Before Marino could match the career record he coveted most — Tarkenton's 342 touchdown passes — San Francisco led 38-13.

The record-tying pass was a 4-yarder to O.J. McDuffie late in the third quarter. Marino earlier threw a 42-yard touchdown pass to Gary Clark.

Marino, who broke Tarkenton's records for passing yardage and completions earlier this year in games Miami lost, completed 23 of 38 passes for 255 yards.

The reeling Dolphins, who have lost five of their past seven games, fell two games behind AFC East leader Buffalo.

The 49ers pulled into a first-place tie with Atlanta in the NFC West.

Grbac rattled a Miami secondary plagued by dissension and breakdowns in recent weeks, throwing touchdown passes of 47 and 46 yards to Rice and 23 and 2 yards to Brent Jones. Rice extended his NFL record to 151 career touchdowns.

San Francisco scored on six of seven possessions during one stretch that produced 34 points.

Safety Merton Hanks had an interception and a 31-yard fumble return to set up 10 points for San Francisco.

Both turnovers came on bobbles by McDuffie.

Despite being hundreds of miles from home, Gable anticipates strong crowd support at the dual matches, scheduled to be held in high school gymnasiums.

"The setting is going to make our athletes rise to the occasion," Gable said. "It doesn't matter whether it's 15,000 people in a huge arena or 1,000 people in a small arena like a boxing match. Your adrenaline will start pumping."

and feels his team shouldn't look past its first-round opponent.

The Bobcats' top returnees include a pair of juniors. Forward Curtis Simmons averaged 10.7 points and seven rebounds per game last season; and 5-foot-8 point guard Geno Ford is the team's top returning scorer at 11.2 points a game.

Bowen is looking forward to the opportunity to play in Alaska, and looks at it not only as a chance to play the best, but a chance to find out Iowa's character.

been Iowa's sixth victory, but the Gophers defeated Iowa 28-13 to end the Hawkeyes' season.

Two years earlier, the Gophers also played spoiler, preventing Rose Bowl-bound Iowa from finishing the Big Ten season undefeated.

Iowa players are by no means taking the Gophers lightly.

"We know that we've still got one more game that we need to win," Iowa senior lineman Casey Wiegmann said. "We've just got to come in with the same attitude as (against Wisconsin) and take it to them."

Minnesota brings to Kinnick the Big Ten's worst defense (442.9 yards per game), but the made of," Bowen said after the win over Marathon Oil last Wednesday.

"We're going to see if we can beat Ohio and then get to play UConn and whoever else we'd have to play.

"But I think it's going to be a great test for us, not only having to play the great teams, but also the traveling and the long flight over there; how we're going to deal with getting adjusted to the time and everything."

If Iowa can make it to the second round, it will most likely meet Connecticut, who will face Texas Christian, coached by Billy Tubbs, in the first round. UConn is led by pre-season all-American Ray Allen, a 6-foot-5 junior forward who averaged more than 21 points per game last season while leading the Huskies to the fourth round of the NCAA tournament.

Hawkeye forward Kenyon Murray should be called on to contain Allen, but other Iowa players warn of the dangers of looking ahead to UConn too soon.

"It's hard to look past Ohio," Iowa shooting guard Chris Kingsbury said after the Hawkeyes' win over Marathon. "Of course, Connecticut has got (Ray) Allen and he's one of the best players in the country, but we've got to focus on Ohio."

Other teams in the Shootout include Old Dominion, Indiana, Alaska-Anchorage and Duke.

Coach Tom Davis said one of the keys in Alaska will be Iowa's inside-outside game.

"We're tired of pounding on each other," Lee said. "This team is itching to get things going and I'm excited to see how things come together and if we've improved since the last time out."

Iowa will look to make a lasting impression at home. The Hawkeyes won't return to Carver till the second week of December, with tough road stops at Kansas and Creighton along the way.

Edwards said whether she plays or not, she knows her teammates will get the job done.

"We waited for this moment since last year's loss in the Big Ten tournament. It's going to be exciting and we're going to come out ready to play," Edwards said.

Iowa closes out season on the road

Jon Bassoff

The Daily Iowan

If the Hawkeyes aren't already turning their attention to next year, they will after this weekend.

Iowa closes out a frustrating season with a pair of Big Ten road matches.

The Hawkeyes are 3-15 in the conference this year and have only one road victory. Iowa entered the season ranked in the Top 25 but have suffered through sub-par play and injuries for much of the season.

MAUI INVITATIONAL

Badgers near upset, Spartans avoid one

Associated Press

Eric Eberz scored 23 points, and Kerry Kittles had 11 of his 16 in the second half as third-ranked Villanova beat Wisconsin 66-58 Monday at the Maui Invitational.

The Wildcats held a 34-25 halftime lead in the opening-round game, but had to survive a frantic start to the second half. The Badgers, who got 17 points from Mosezell Peterson, outscored them 12-2 in the first five minutes to take a 37-36 lead.

But Kittles and Eberz made two 3-pointers apiece to restore control over the next four minutes. The Wildcats led by at least four points thereafter in the first game for each team.

After Wisconsin drew to 53-49, Villanova put the game away on baskets by Jason Lawson and Zeffy Penn, followed by a technical foul on the Badgers' bench. That resulted in five additional points on three free throws and a basket on the ensuing possession.

Michigan State 69, Chaminade 66

Quinton Brooks made an 8-foot turnaround jumper with 51 seconds left and Daimon Beathia converted a free throw 33 seconds later as Michigan State beat Chaminade by three points.

In Tom Izzo's first game as coach, the Spartans struggled in the opener of the Maui Invitational. In the past, the Division II Silverswords upset several ranked teams, including Virginia, which was ranked No. 1 at the time, Louisville and Southern Methodist.

Michigan State trailed 34-29 at the half, then started the second half with a 12-1 run to build a six-point lead. But John Nemhard connected on 11 consecutive points — three 3-pointers

This weekend the Hawkeyes travel to Wisconsin and Minnesota. Iowa defeated Minnesota to open up conference play on September 22, but lost to Wisconsin to start a seven-match losing streak.

Friday's match against Wisconsin will be televised live at 7 p.m. by ESPN 2.

Iowa is coming off a split at home this past weekend. The Hawkeyes defeated Northwestern 7-15, 15-5, 15-13, 15-11 on Friday but fell in three games to Purdue on Saturday.

Heather Calomese led the Hawkeyes to the victory Friday with 16 kills and 14 digs.

Saturday, Purdue dominated a lethargic Hawkeyes squad. Senior Lisa Dockray said Iowa would have to improve communication this weekend.

"Against Purdue we were like six individuals on the court instead of playing as one team," Dockray said.

This weekend will mark the end of the careers of seniors Dockray and Tiffany McDaniel.

and a field goal — during a 1:51 stretch to put Chaminade ahead 50-45.

Brooks then brought the Spartans back, scoring 12 points down the stretch and capping it with the game-winner. He finished with 21 points and eight rebounds. Jamie Feick added 15 points and nine rebounds.

No. 20 North Carolina 71, Vanderbilt 63

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Serge Zwikker converted on consecutive follow-up shots with 3:02 left Monday night to rally No. 20 North Carolina to a 71-63 victory over Vanderbilt in a first round game of the Maui Invitational.

The Tar Heels struggled throughout the game as the Commodores scored on 3-pointers by Drew Maddux, Frank Secker and Howard Pride.

Vanderbilt held an 11-point lead with 11:48 left, but North Carolina got surprisingly strong play from freshman Ademola Okulaja and the steady scoring of Jeff McInnis, who finished with 20 points.

Okulaja fueled a 16-2 run by scoring six points.

FIGURE SKATING

Grinkov dies of apparent heart attack

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Sergei Grinkov, who with his wife won two Olympic gold medals for a romantic skating style that mirrored their off-ice love story, died Monday while practicing.

The 28-year-old Russian was practicing with his wife, Ekaterina Gordeeva, when he suffered an apparent heart attack and fell to the ice at the Olympic Center.

A coach, Marina Zueva, was the first to reach him. Paramedics called to the rink shortly after 11 a.m. transported him to Adirondack Medical Center in Saranac Lake. Grinkov was pronounced dead at 12:28 p.m., according to his publicist, Linda Dozoretz.

The apparent cause of death was cardiac arrest, but there was no official diagnosis, Dozoretz said. Over the objections of Gordeeva, an autopsy was planned for Tuesday morning, said Essex County coroner Robert Huestis Jr.

Grinkov and Gordeeva were on tour with an ice show that had a scheduled performance in Lake Placid on Saturday. They also had skated last week in a made-for-television show in Albany.

"It's a very sad day for figure skating," said John Nicks, a long-time American pairs coach who watched Gordeeva and Grinkov develop.

"We're all shocked. I thought they were the finest exponents of figure skating."

A bowl game. Revenge. Pride. The seniors' last home game. And Floyd.

If the Hawkeyes ever needed reason to get up for a game, they have more than enough this week as they prepare to close out the regular season at home against Minnesota.

Kickoff is scheduled for 1:05 p.m. Saturday at Kinnick Stadium.

When the Hawkeyes traveled to Minneapolis a year ago, Floyd, the bronze pig that is awarded to the winner of this annual rivalry, was the top concern.

While it will be important for Iowa to hang on to the little guy, the Hawkeyes (6-4, 3-4 Big Ten) have a little more to shoot for this season — a sixth Division I victory, which will allow the bowl games to accept Iowa.

"Our backs are against the wall one more time," Iowa freshman Michael Burger said. "Hopefully, if

Jonathan Meester/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's defensive line prepares for the next play against Wisconsin last Saturday in Madison. Iowa wraps up the regular season this Saturday.

we get the win, we're going to a bowl game."

Iowa, who will finish, at best, tied for fifth in the Big Ten, is not guaranteed a bowl berth, but Fry said the Hawkeyes have been contacted.

"We are (being given consideration.) And we have been contacted by people and they're very sincere," he said without naming names. "They know we have a pretty good football team. We're coming on and I think we'll make a pretty good representative."

Iowa's top three possibilities are the Sun Bowl, the Independence Bowl and the Liberty Bowl.

But Fry called bowl talk premature. For now, the Hawkeyes must focus on the Gophers.

"Minnesota always plays lights out against us," Fry said. "We'll have to play every bit as good as (we played against Wisconsin) in order to win."

Minnesota (3-7, 1-6 Big Ten) has destroyed Iowa's bowl hopes before, thus the reason for the revenge factor. In 1992, Minnesota would have

None of the four teams the Iowa wrestling team will face over the Thanksgiving break has ever competed against the Hawkeyes.

Perhaps when it's all over, they'll wish they never had.

The top-ranked Hawkeyes open the season, defending their national title, on Friday when they travel to Philip, S.D., to take on South Dakota State and Augustana.

The Jackrabbits feature Chad Lamer (177) and Josh Sammons (142) who were both NCAA Division II all-Americans last season. The Vikings from Augustana look to rebound from a dismal 2-12 record during the 1994-95 season.

Iowa enters the competition with a 16-match winning streak dating back to the 1993-94 season. Six of the 10 Hawkeye starters have received all-American honors during their careers.

On Sunday, Iowa will swing over to Big Sky country to battle Northern and Western Montana in Great Falls, Mont.

Iowa coach Dan Gable said he hopes the four dual matches will help to promote collegiate wrestling in states that focus more on high school wrestling.

"We feel that both are good high school wrestling states, but they don't offer enough for kids to continue at the Division I level," Gable said.

The Sunday matches will hold special significance for senior Bill Zadick, who will be wrestling in his hometown.

"I don't know if it will be my biggest thrill, but it will be exciting to wrestle in front of my hometown and my high school," Zadick said. "The high school seats 3,800 and it's going to be a packed house."

Although Iowa is the clear cut favorite, senior Erik Stroner said the Hawkeyes don't plan to overlook their smaller opponents.

"They're gonna come after us," Stroner said. "They have nothing

Play time is over.

The No. 19-ranked Iowa women's basketball team opens the regular season at home Friday with an 8 p.m. clash against Stephen F. Austin in the opening round of the Prairie Lights Hawkeye Classic.

Maryland takes on UC-Santa Barbara in the other first-round game at 6 p.m. All games are at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Hawkeye head coach Angie Lee said this could be a preview of four possible NCAA tournament teams.

"This will be a great opening test for us," Lee said. "Plus we get another shot at Stephen F. Austin after they beat us last year. Plus Maryland and UC-Santa Barbara have solid squads, so it should be a great weekend."

Iowa lost to Stephen F. Austin last season in overtime, 79-70 — all the more reason to be ready, said Hawkeye center Simone Edwards.

"We lost a tough game down there. But we're at home this year so hopefully we can take advantage of that. We definitely owe them for last season's loss," Edwards said.

Despite the excitement of opening this season's campaign, Iowa will not be firing on all cylinders. Edwards is questionable because of a nagging calf injury and sophomore forward Tiffany Gooden is nursing a bad back. Lee said these injuries

So much for an easy non-conference schedule.

Iowa plays its first regular season game Wednesday during the first round of the Great Alaska Shootout. The Hawkeyes will have the luxury of playing a team they're very familiar with to start things off: Ohio University.

The Bobcats made up two of Iowa's 21 victories last season and has lost three games in a row to Iowa. The first win over Ohio came in convincing fashion, when the Hawkeyes won convincingly at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, 91-75. The teams' second meeting also took place in Iowa City, this time as part of the NIT tournament. Iowa won 66-62.

Ohio head coach Larry Hunter will be without his star from last season, forward Gary Trent, who graduated and moved onto the NBA's Portland Trailblazers.

However, Iowa forward Ryan Bowen doesn't foresee an easy game when the two teams collide

For the love of Floyd

Never has a bronze pig meant so much to two football teams

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Football practice takes on an added dimension this week — and it involves a 21-inch long pig.

Saturday's game at Kinnick Stadium will mark the 60th anniversary of the first time Iowa played Minnesota for Floyd of Rosedale, a bronze hog with a storied past.

This game takes on significance because even if Iowa were not in contention for a bowl game, Hawkeyes would be dead set on maintaining their stranglehold on Floyd for the third-consecutive season.

"Floyd means a lot to us," Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman said. "We want to keep him in Iowa City. It may sound kind of stupid, but we'll have him out there for practice next week and we'll go pet him before practice. It's a big thing for us."

But how does such a ritual begin? Why do two teams playing in the Big Ten Conference, regarded by many as the greatest college football conference in history, feel the need to tough it out year after year in their season finales for bronze swine?

Ozzie Simmons was Iowa's first African-American all-American in football in 1934-35; he earned the honor twice from The Sporting News, but never managed consensus honors.

"He was one of the greatest running backs I have ever seen. He could make these moves that were something else," Simmons' teammate Erwin Prasse said.

Racial bigotry made him the target of unwarranted attacks on the football field by opposing teams. Perhaps the most vicious of those attacks came from Minnesota, then a national powerhouse.

In 1934, the Golden Gophers held true to their reputation and pummeled Iowa, 48-12, in Iowa City. During the onslaught, Simmons was subject to intense battery by Minnesota's defense, often times well after the play had been ruled dead.

Simmons, who averaged more than five yards per carry during his career, was held to just nine yards on four carries, while the officials took their time getting Minnesota tacklers away from him.

Simmons was knocked out of the game three times. After the third ribbing, Iowa coach O.M. Solem opted to keep Simmons on the sidelines.

The next season, Minnesota was again scheduled to play in Iowa City. Hawkeye fans were seething at the actions of the Gopher squad from the previous year and were threatening physical harm to Minnesota players.

Bottles and other blunt objects weren't banned from the stadium, so the chances of a fan outburst were extremely high.

Iowa Governor Clyde Herring did little to weather the situation by refusing to condemn the ill feelings of Iowa fans. Minnesota players and coaches hired extra security to protect themselves from a potentially volatile crowd.

Then Minnesota Governor Floyd B. Olson came up with an idea. To help divert the Iowa fans' attention from their hatred of the Minnesota defense, Olson proposed that Herring bet an Iowa hog against Olson's

The Gopher defense behaved itself by treating Simmons in a sportsmanlike manner.

Herring presented Olson with a full-blooded champion pig named Floyd of Rosedale. St. Paul sculptor Charles Brioscho was commissioned to sculpt Floyd's image, and from that day on the two teams have played for Floyd of Rosedale.

In the realm of college football, pride changes very little in 60 years.

"We want Floyd to stay in Iowa City and it's something that we're going to talk about all week and be motivated by," Sherman said.

Minnesota leads the overall despite missing every PAT.

In 1993, Iowa cruised to a 21-3 win and Hawkeye fans stormed the field after the game.

Last year's contest was the highest scoring ever between the two teams, with Iowa out-gunning the Gophers, 49-42.

With the Hawkeyes going for their third-straight Floyd win on Saturday, the game takes on a similar look to the 1993 matchup, when Iowa needed a win for a chance at a bowl game. Iowa lost to California in the Alamo Bowl, 37-3.

"We know we have a lot to play for. It's not just for Floyd of Rosedale now. We have to play for an opportunity to play in a bowl game," defensive back Tom Knight said.

Iowa running back Sedrick Shaw has never lost to Minnesota, but was redshirted in 1992 when the Hawkeyes lost in Minneapolis. He understands how important this game is to the players, the fans and Iowa's bowl aspirations.

He also offers his own hypothesis as to why the game has come to bear such a deep-rooted meaning.

"It's a big thing," Shaw said. "It's a big rivalry because those people think it's a big city against a small, I guess you could say, farm town."

One of Iowa's biggest home losses ever came at the hands of Minnesota in 1989, when the Gophers stormed into Kinnick and pounded the Hawkeyes, 43-7.

Seniors bid farewell to Kinnick Stadium

By Wayne Drehs

The Daily Iowan

Although the continuation of Iowa's 1995 season rests upon its outcome versus Minnesota, Saturday will also bring about the last time seventeen Hawkeyes will walk onto the Kinnick Stadium field.

For the past four to five seasons, these seniors have dedicated themselves to Hawkeye football and the Iowa fans. Following Saturday, their Kinnick career will end, and with a loss, so could their Iowa playing days.

"It's the last home game for the seniors, and you want to go out there and give them something they can remember," junior running back Sedrick Shaw said.

These seniors joined the team in either 1991 or '92, and although they attended the Holiday and Alamo Bowls, they have the dubious distinction of being the only Iowa fifth-year class to graduate without a trip to the Pasadena and the Rose Bowl.

Despite this, the thought of saying goodbye still isn't an easy one to digest for the seniors, especially when many of their closest friends are on the team.

"I'll miss a lot of things about being a Hawkeye," guard Matt Purdy said. "The general team atmosphere, and a lot of the guys I've been with every day for the past years. You see them every day, come out and play with them, and it's going to be hard."

Team captains

Lloyd Bickham: The nosetackle from Chicago, has started all 10 games for Iowa this season. In Bickham's career, he has tallied 73 tackles, six sacks and a fumble recovery.

Chris Jackson: After coming to Iowa from Houston, Texas, the defensive back has 162 tackles in his four-year career. He has started 18 games, including all 10 this season.

Matt Purdy: The offensive Mr. Hustle in 1993 and 1994 from Cedar Falls, Iowa, has been a mainstay at the guard position, starting 36 games out of the 44 possible in his career. Purdy has helped lead Iowa to more than 4,000 yards rushing the last two seasons.

Casey Wiegmann: The center out of Parkersburg, Iowa, has also led the way for Iowa's running backs. He has started 22 games in his career, despite various injuries.

The Senior Class

George Bennett: The defensive end out of Miami, has 77 tackles, including six for a loss in his four years at Iowa. Bennett was the scout team defensive player of the year in 1991 and started 12 games in 1994 and 1995.

Bobby Diaco: Going into the Minnesota game, the linebacker from Cedar Grove, NJ, ranks eighth all-time for the Hawkeyes in tackles with 315. He led the team in tackles in 1994 and 1995, and was named Big Ten Conference player of the week against Indiana this season. In that game, he recorded 26 tackles, the second highest single-game total at Iowa.

Aaron Granquist: The fullback from Osage, Iowa, joined the team in 1994 as a walk on after being a junior college all-American as a sophomore. He has played in nine games this season, rushing for 13 yards on five carries.

Willie Guy: Splitting time with Tim Dwight at wingback, Guy has 267 yards receiving on 17 receptions this fall including one for a touchdown. In his four seasons, he has three touchdowns with 563 yards receiving.

Eric Hilgenberg: The sixth Hilgenberg to attend Iowa, Eric was named scout team defensive player of the year in 1992. The defensive end from Prior Lake, Minn., started four games his senior season, totaling 24 tackles before a broken leg at Northwestern prematurely ended his season.

Aaron Kooiker: The right tackle from Marengo, Iowa earned the starting job following spring practice and has played a key role in the success of Shaw at tailback.

Jon Moffitt: The wide receiver from Des Moines, joined the team as a walk-on in 1994, seeing limited playing time. He had 12 catches for 152 yards and two scores in the 1995 spring game.

Marcus Montgomery: The linebacker from Walnut, Calif. has seen action in nine games this season, spelling Bobby Diaco and Vernon Rollins. He has totaled 22 tackles and an interception in 1995 after missing most of 1993 and the entire 1994 season following a broken leg suffered versus Penn State in 1993.

Mick Mulherin: The defensive back from Marion, Iowa, has played in all ten games this season, starting two. In his four year career, Mulherin has tallied 53 tackles and has been a key member of Iowa's special teams unit.

Derek Price: The tight end from Tempe, Ariz., has played in nine games this season, including two starts. He has six receptions for 55 yards in his two seasons at Iowa. He joined the Hawkeyes after earning all-American junior college honors as a sophomore.

Todd Romano: The placekicker from West Palm Beach, Fla., ranks 18th on Iowa's all-time scoring list with 98 points. He received the outstanding specialty team award in 1992, and specialized in kickoffs during his senior season.

Damani Shakoor: The senior from Calumet City, Ill., joined the team in 1991 as a walk-on. He has played in nine games this season, rushing for 70 yards on 15 carries. He was named scout team offensive player of the year in 1992.

Scott Slutzker: The tight end from Hasbrouck Heights, NJ is second on the team in receiving with 495 yards on 34 receptions and a touchdown. For his career, Slutzker has 1,191 yards receiving, 17th on the all-time list, 90 receptions, and five touchdowns.

Jeff Westhoff: The linebacker from New Vienna, Iowa, joined the team in 1992 as a walk-on, seeing limited action in his three seasons.

Reggie Williams: The fullback from Fresno, Calif. joined the team in 1993 following all-conference campaign as a junior college freshman and sophomore. Saw action in all 11 games in 1994 as a special teamer.

Big Ten celebrates 100 years

As it looks to the future, the Big Ten reflects on its storied past

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

It's impossible to think of the Big Ten Conference without thinking about football.

Iowa could win the NCAA title for wrestling, Indiana in basketball and Michigan for hockey, but if the Big Ten's football teams have a down year — which are few and far between — that is what the critics will focus on.

While recent powerhouse teams such as 1994's Penn State squad and this year's Ohio State juggernaut steal the headlines, it was single characters that defined what the Big Ten is all about.

Here is a brief list of some individuals who helped shape the character of the Big Ten, who have left their indelible mark on the most fabled conference in the land.

- Harold "Red" Grange. The Galloping Ghost was a halfback for Illinois from '23-'25 who once ran for 402 yards and five touchdowns in one afternoon. The first four times he touched the ball were good for scores. He was named an all-American three times.

- Perhaps the greatest fullback to ever play the game, Bronko Nagurski, played for Minnesota in the mid-1920s. During his three years as a Gopher, his team lost just four games — by a total of five points.

- In 1934 Michigan had a team captain named Ford. Forty years later this standout would become president of the United States and be more known as the man who pardoned Richard Nixon than the Wolverine big wig.

- University of Chicago's Jay Berwanger became the conference's first Heisman Trophy winner in 1935. Four years later, Iowa's Nile Kinnick took home the honors. In 1943, Kinnick's Navy fighter would go down during a training flight, killing the Hawkeye hero.

- During the 1940s, Michigan would claim four of the Big Ten's 10 national championships and three of its 11 Heisman Trophies. On one of those championship teams was Forest Evashevski, who went on to coach Iowa to three Big Ten titles. Michigan, with 37, has won more conference titles than any other team.

- In 1942, Paul Brown coached Ohio State to the Associated Press national title. Brown would later go on to have an entire NFL franchise named after him: the Baltimore Browns.

- The legendary Woody Hayes took the reigns of Ohio State in 1951 and didn't let go until he was forced to in 1978 after taking a swing at an opposing player he felt had thrown a cheap shot. Under Hayes, the Buckeyes went to eight Rose Bowls. In only his fourth season, Hayes led his squad to the AP title.

- 1953 saw insertion of Michigan State into the Big Ten. The Spartans hadn't lost since 1950, but quickly fell to Purdue, 6-0, to end its winning streak at 28 games.

- Dick Butkus dominated Big Ten offenses in the early 1960s, climaxing with an Illini conference title in 1963.

- A number of NFL standouts made their niche in the 1960s. Michigan's Dan Dierdorf, Michigan State's Bubba Smith and Purdue's Bob Griese were all named first-team all-Big Ten.

- The last time a Big Ten team won the national championship was in 1968, when Ohio State beat USC in the Rose Bowl. The Buckeyes managed to contain Trojan Heisman Trophy winner O.J. Simpson en route to the win.

- Although not part of the Big Ten, future member Penn State hired a new coach in 1966: Joe Paterno. Papa Joe would lead the Nittany Lions to consecutive undefeated seasons in '68 and '69.

- Archie Griffin, now working in the Ohio State front office, was a Buckeye tailback from '73-'75. He led a storybook career during his tenure with Ohio State, bringing home consecutive Heisman Trophies. Griffin remains the only player in college football history to win the award twice. Griffin's NCAA record of 31-consecutive 100-yard games still stands.

- A pair of special teamers came to the limelight in the early 1980s. Reggie Roby, a punter at Iowa, and place kicker Morten Anderson of Michigan State still roam NFL sidelines today.

- Bo Schembechler became Michigan's all-time winningest coach in 1986, surpassing Fielding Yost. Yost implemented a hurry up offense in the early 1900s. In 1901, Yost's squad outscored its opponents 550-0.

- The 1985 Heisman trophy vote was the closest in NCAA history. Iowa's Chuck Long finished just 45 points behind Auburn's Bo Jackson.

- Four seasons later Michigan State's Percy Snow became the first player ever to win the Butkus Award for defense and Lombardi Award in the same season.

- Michigan's Desmond Howard is the Big Ten's most recent Heisman Trophy winner, taking the honor in 1991. He was the first since Griffin to win the award.

- A Big Ten player has been the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft two years running. Ohio State's Dan Wilkinson went in '94 and Penn State's Ki-Jana Carter in '95, both to the Cincinnati Bengals.

Since Wisconsin won the first two Big Ten title back in 1896-'97, 263 Big Ten players have been named consensus all-Americans, more than any other conference.

And with names like Darnell Soutrey and Eddie George floating around, it appears as if the Big Ten's dominance will continue for another hundred of so years.

Nile Kinnick was the only Hawkeye player to ever win the Heisman Trophy. He won the award in 1939, becoming the second Big Ten player to take the honor. Kinnick played 402 of a possible 420 minutes in the final seven games of that season. Iowa's football stadium is named in his honor.

Recruiting process brings talented defensive back to Iowa sideline

Chris Snider

The Daily Iowan

The odds of the name Eric Thigpen being called on the loud-speaker at Kinnick Stadium this week are very slim. At best, he might make a special teams tackle.

But even before he dressed for his first football game this season, the freshman defensive back had accomplished a lot.

Thigpen is the first member of his family to go to college, something he had been planning since an early age.

"I was five years old when I told my mother that I was going to go to school on a football scholarship," said Thigpen, who backed up his promise 13 years later.

Thigpen, who redshirted last season, came to Iowa after leading a storybook high school career, earning USA Today, Parade and Blue Chip all-American honors as a senior at Thornridge High School in Dolton, Ill.

He was recruited by every Division I school in the country, but leaned toward his home state of Illinois.

In his junior year, Thigpen got his first scholarship offer, from Wisconsin. With his stock starting to rise, he set up hours to be recruited. Coaches could call on Wednesdays and Sundays. Period.

"I got pressured a lot by Illinois towards the end of the process," said Thigpen. "The head coach and assistant coaches started calling me early in the morning or all hours of the night."

"They didn't respect my rules. They respected me as a person and my family, but they were too hung up on getting me there. I got tired of it and let it go."

Illinois' loss would become Iowa's gain.

Thigpen went searching for a school. He visited West Virginia, Iowa, Michigan State, Michigan and UCLA, but settled on Iowa.

"Coach Fry and his staff did a heck of a job," Thigpen said. "They're very down to earth. I don't see how anyone could talk to Fry and not want to come here."

Thigpen said Fry wasn't afraid to discuss with him and his family the fact that he would be a black athlete coming to a predominately white school.

"I felt comfortable with him because he was comfortable with the racial issue," Thigpen said.

"Coach Fry, more than all other coaches that came to my house, he was just laid back. He didn't try to sell me like all the other coaches did. He just laid it down."

Thigpen's is an Iowa success story, but it is not unusual in college football.

Long before the Iowa football team plays the rest of the Big Ten and the nation on the field, it squares off in the biggest battle of them all.

Many games are won and lost not on the field or even during practice and preparation. Games are won and lost behind the scenes in the recruiting wars.

The process usually starts where it did for Thigpen, during a player's junior year of high school. College coaches, who are actually recruiting seniors, will see and hear about juniors on the same teams.

Of the 1,800-2,000 players who are looked at and evaluated by the Iowa coaching staff each year, 150-200 will be visited and checked up on by coaches, usually at their schools or homes. Of that total, 56 are flown to Iowa for official visits to the university.

"That was a once in a lifetime opportunity for me to go to any school for free, to not have to pay for anything," said Thigpen, who visited the maximum of five schools allowed per athlete.

It's when a player finally gets to a campus that the actual selling begins. The town of Iowa City is something recruiting coordinator Gene Jones likes to point out to his recruits.

"The biggest selling point is the community itself," Jones said. "The quality of the academic program at the University, the friendliness of the people and the fan support. Definitely, playing in the Big Ten conference is a big selling point, too."

When recruits come to campus, they are shown around by current Hawkeye players and given an idea what the campus is really like.

"Every school is basically the same," said Thigpen. "They show you the overall academic program, get you affiliated with the program and the players."

With the addition of the new state-of-the-art Jacobsen Athletic Building, Iowa's facilities compare favorably with any other school's in the country, but Jones knows that isn't enough.

"Facilities don't make phone calls," Jones said. "We still have to go out and beat the bushes."

From the pool of 56 players that visit Iowa's campus, NCAA rules say up to 25 can be signed per year. Last year, Iowa signed 23 recruits. This year, Jones said the coaches will look to give out around 16-18 scholarships.

Even as a player is being recruited, the Hawkeyes are judging him as much as he is judging

Iowa.

"We look at character," Jones said. "We want to make sure a recruit wants to get an education."

Thigpen, an honor roll student who took college prep courses throughout high school, fit Iowa well.

"I have a lot of good people that stood by me. They told me worry about my academics first. Football and everything else will come," Thigpen said.

The day players can actually begin signing is during February of their senior year. This year, the day falls on Feb. 7.

Unlike college basketball, where players have an early signing period, players can only make verbal commitments in football prior to that date.

After Thigpen put his name on the dotted line and came to Iowa, he noticed a difference in how he was treated. He was no longer as special. He was a part of a team.

But that was all expected.

"During the recruiting process, coaches are going to be your friend," Thigpen said. "You have to know that is all affiliated with the recruiting process. You don't expect the same thing when you put on your pads."

"I knew what I was getting into. I like coaches that are hard on their players. That's what they do here. You have to earn your scholarship."

Like all recruits, Thigpen came in with ambitions of making an immediate impact, but talented players ahead of him and a coaching change have left him waiting in the wings, sowing his oats on special teams and late during an occasional blowout.

"I feel that we have a lot of older guys on the team and I'm young," he said. "My opportunity will come. When I'm older, I don't want some freshman coming in and taking my spot. It will all work out in the end."

Bowl game motivates Hawks

Last week, the Hawkeyes won for Hayden Fry, dedicating the game to their coach and giving him the game ball afterwards. This week, the Hawkeyes are shooting for a bowl game.

Iowa's chances at an automatic bid are out, but the Hawkeyes are still very much in the bowl hunt.

"We are (being considered) and we have been contacted by the people and they are sincere," Fry said after Iowa defeated Wisconsin, 33-20, on Saturday.

A victory over Minnesota would give Iowa the minimum seven wins it needs to qualify.

One thing the Hawkeyes have to their advantage is strong fan support. Fry said bowl representatives know the Hawkeyes travel well, bringing lots of fans, which attracts bowl invitations.

Fry said he would not discuss what he knows until after the Minnesota game, but seemed to hint that if Iowa wins, the Hawkeyes will go to a bowl.

"If (our record) could be good enough, I think we'll make a good representative," said Fry.

Ohio State and Northwestern have sprinted ahead of the Big Ten pack, but with four wins in the conference, Iowa could go to the Outback Bowl on Jan. 1 in Tampa, the Alamo Bowl on Dec. 28 in San Antonio or the Sun Bowl on Dec. 29 in El Paso. These bowls have the third through fifth picks of Big Ten schools.

Michigan and Penn State will more than likely be the first two picks of those three bowls. The Sun Bowl should come down to either Michigan State or Iowa. Michigan State has the better record, but Iowa beat the Spartans convincingly, 21-7, during the season.

If Northwestern is chosen for the College Football Bowl Alliance, Iowa could be bumped into the Alamo Bowl.

Even if Iowa is not one of the first five Big Ten schools selected, the Hawkeyes still have two more options.

The Hawkeyes could go to the Independence Bowl on Dec. 29 in Shreveport, La., or the Liberty Bowl on Dec. 30 in Memphis, Tenn., both of which have at-large spots available.

"I don't care where we go, as long as it's warm," said Iowa fullback Mike Burger.

The players will enter the Minnesota game with the attitude that a win puts them in a bowl

Under a few layers of clothing, Iowa coach Hayden Fry shouts words of encouragement to his team at the Northwestern game Nov. 11. If Iowa beats Minnesota this Saturday, Fry and the Hawkeyes will likely leave their winter clothes behind and head south to a bowl game.

game and a loss keeps them home.

"We know we have a lot to play for," said Tom Knight. "It's not just for Floyd of Rosedale now. We have to play for an opportunity to play in a bowl game."

There are a total of 18 bowl games which take 36 schools. Iowa is currently No. 32 in the CNN/USA Today coaches poll, but received no votes in the Associated Press poll. The bowl alliance uses the CNN/USA Today coaches poll.

Penalties hurting Hawkeyes

Through 10 games, the Iowa Hawkeyes are the second most penalized team in the Big Ten, behind only Michigan State.

Penalties again seemed to torment the Hawkeyes against Wisconsin, as Iowa received eight penalties for 81 yards.

A holding penalty and a personal foul nullified pass completions of 36 and 23 yards respectively in the first half of the game Saturday.

"Some of those calls out there today make you blink," said Fry. But penalties weren't the only thing that concerned Fry.

On another occasion, Wisconsin's Aaron Stecker reached to cross the plane of the goal line, had the ball knocked out of his hands and Iowa recovered.

But, Stecker was ruled down and Wisconsin scored a touchdown on the next play.

"That was a double blinker," said Fry. "That's about the nicest I can put it without getting fined ten thousand dollars."

Shaw will return

Despite becoming the all-time leading rusher at the University of Iowa while still a junior, Sedrick Shaw has no intentions of leaving school and turning pro early.

"I'll be here," he said, as though the thought of leaving never crossed his mind.

Against Wisconsin, Shaw added Iowa records for attempts in a season and yards in a season to his resumé.

"College football is only one chance in a lifetime," he said. "I'm not gonna miss it. I'm gonna enjoy it."

Gophers look to spoil Hawkeye bowl hopes

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Everyone knew the Minnesota Golden Gophers would have a strong offense with names like Chris Darkins and Ryan Thelwell.

However, no one anticipated a defense this bad.

Minnesota (3-7), which has allowed an opponent to rush for more than 100 yards in seven consecutive games, hopes to find some kind of damage control when it invades Kinnick Stadium Saturday to battle the Iowa Hawkeyes (6-4).

One answer for the Gophers might lie in a potent offense that is averaging 26.9 points a contest. Redshirt sophomore Cory Sauter has been a pleasant surprise for Minnesota at quarterback. In his first year as a starter, Sauter has torched opposing defenses for 2,408 yards passing and 18 touchdown passes. In a 34-31 loss to Michigan State, Sauter threw for 404 yards and four touchdowns.

But Sauter isn't Minnesota's only sophomore threat. Wideouts

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Golden Gopher running back Chris Darkins is wrapped up by the Iowa defense last year at Minnesota.

Thelwell and Tutu Atwell are both among the Big Ten Conference leaders in pass receptions. Thelwell is third in the Big Ten with 52 receptions and has also reeled in six touchdown catches. Atwell has caught 40 passes for 733 yards and five touchdowns.

The Gopher ground attack could also give the Hawkeyes trouble, however injuries to Heisman hopeful Darkins have diminished Minnesota's rushing totals. Darkins has churned out 761 yards, but has only played three whole games. His replacements, Rafael Cooper and Javon Jackson, have rushed for 472 and 201 yards respectively.

Although Minnesota's record isn't very impressive, Iowa coach Hayden Fry said the Gophers are never a pushover.

"Minnesota always plays lights out against us," Fry said.

Iowa running back Sedrick Shaw agreed saying that the Hawkeyes will have to be ready for their annual rival.

"It's a big rivalry because those people think it's a big city against a small, I guess you could say, farm town," Shaw said.

For Minnesota to be successful against Iowa it will have to cut down on its defensive miscues.

The Gophers are the Big Ten's worst defensive team allowing 442.9 yards and 32.3 points a game, while the Hawkeyes are fourth in the conference in total offense at 413.8.

■ It's a border war...the battle for Floyd of Rosedale. This one is always a great game, regardless of records.

-Jim Wacker, Minnesota coach

In their seven losses, the Gophers have surrendered a whopping 271 points or nearly 40 points a contest.

Minnesota's defensive standout is junior cornerback Rodney Heath, who leads the Big Ten in interceptions with five and has broken up six additional passes.

With a postseason bowl no longer a possibility, Minnesota is focusing on other things. A Gopher win over the Hawkeyes would eliminate Iowa's bowl chances. Additionally, it would mean the return of Floyd of Rosedale, a bronze pig given to the winner of the Iowa-Minnesota game each year.

The pig has resided in Iowa City since 1993 and Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman said that is where it's going to stay.

"Floyd means a lot to us," Sherman said. "We want to keep him in Iowa City. It may sound kind of stupid, but we'll have him out there for practice next week and we'll go pet him before practice. It's a big thing for us."

Despite his team's suspect defense, Minnesota Coach Jim Wacker said he anticipates a strong showing against Iowa.

"It's a border war...the battle for Floyd of Rosedale," Wacker said. "This one is always a great game, regardless of records."

Pregame's pick...

Hawks head to bowl

There was a time when it really meant something to wear the black and gold of the Iowa Hawkeyes. Those days are coming back.

No matter what the last month may have told you, the future of Iowa football looks bright.

Looking at next year's schedule, the possibility of a Rose Bowl is very strong and after what Northwestern did this season, a very high national finish is not out of the question.

But the last thing on the minds of the Iowa Hawkeyes this week is next year. It's time to talk about today, and the most important game of this year — Minnesota.

It's funny how quickly things change.

Two weeks ago, it seemed like the Iowa Hawkeyes were a team headed nowhere. When it came time to step up and make a big play, they seemed unable to step up take control of their own destiny.

But then it happened.

Last Saturday, an inspired Iowa football team went into Madison and beat a Wisconsin team that only two years ago was the best in the Big Ten.

After four straight losses, the Hawkeyes showed that they still know how to win and they still have the desire to win. It was not a bad Wisconsin football team on that field. Iowa very easily could have packed up and been eliminated from all bowl contention, but it didn't.

Gary Barnett said of his Northwestern Wildcat team's success that it's not about winning as much as the fact his team just doesn't like how it feels to lose.

That is exactly what happened to the Hawkeyes last week. They just got fed up with losing football games. They were embarrassed and they came out and did something about it.

This week, things will not be any different. The Hawkeyes are going to come out and take it to the Golden Gophers. Iowa has no desire to sit around the state of Iowa during the holidays.

Last week, the Hawkeyes played one of the hardest hitting college football games this season. Nothing was left on that field as the Badgers and Hawkeyes battled to stay alive in the bowl race.

This week, the only thing on the line for the Gophers is a bronze pig, but they would like nothing better than to spoil the Hawkeyes' bowl aspirations.

The Gophers are looking to come into Iowa City and take it to the Hawkeyes, who beat them last year, and return Floyd to Minneapolis. Whether Minnesota has the man-power to do so remains to be seen, but it will try.

Minnesota will try everything under its hat to beat the Hawks.

Pregame's Pick

IOWA	MINNESOTA
42	21
HAWKEYES	GOPHERS

Fortunately for Iowa, Minnesota has a very small hat.

The Iowa defense last week was sparkling. Once it figured out what Wisconsin was doing in the second half, the Hawkeye defensive backs read Darrell Bevell like a book, picking off the 25-year-old senior four times.

Penalties hurt the offense, but Sedrick Shaw and Matt Sherman looked sharp. Mike Burger also had a big game in his new starting fullback role. The freshman showed a knack for finding the first down marker that reminded you of some of the great Iowa tight ends.

Sherman's stats weren't the greatest, but he didn't do two things — find Tim Dwight and find Scott Slutzker. Dwight and Slutzker, who lead the team in receiving, combined for only four catches on the day.

This week, look for Slutzker to have a great game in his finale at Kinnick Stadium. Also, don't be surprised if Dwight racks up close to 200 yards of total offense and Sherman nears 300 passing yards.

Sedrick Shaw will once again put it to the Gophers. The all-time leading rusher at Iowa was tired and beaten-up after last week's game, but will return this week. He has no choice, as Tavian Banks will not be back.

Last year, Shaw shook almost the entire Minnesota team out of their shoes on the turf at the Metrodome with his spin moves. This year, he'll do the same.

This week in the Big Ten...

Ohio State goes Bowling, Illini stay home

Another fine season of Big Ten football is coming to a close. It appears that Northwestern will become a victim of Penn State joining the conference. Due to the expanded schedule the Wildcats never got a crack at Ohio State and thus will spend their New's Day some other place than Pasadena.

The Buckeyes also will be cheated out of a shot at the national title due to the Big Ten not joining the bowl alliance. Unfortunately, college football has these type of casualties. But that's a different argument for a different day. Enjoy your Thanksgiving menu of Big Ten football on the last football Saturday of 1995.

Chris James

Purdue at Indiana

Pride is the only thing on the line here as the Hoosiers and the Boilermakers renew a rivalry dating back to 1891.

Too bad the only storied history involved here is the battle to stay out of the Big Ten cellar. Indiana is trying to avoid going 0-8 in the conference for the first time since 1984 when the Hoosiers went 0-11.

Purdue's Mike Alstott became the Boilermakers' all-time leading rusher last week against Northwestern. The senior has rushed for 1,172 yards this year and would probably like nothing better than victory over Indiana in his final game.

But Bill Mallory won't let his team finish the conference winless.

Indiana, 17-13.

Illinois at Wisconsin

The Badgers were eliminated from bowl contention last week with a loss to Iowa. Barry Alvarez and his crew would like nothing more than to spoil the Illini's faint bowl hopes.

Illinois has been the disappointment of the conference. Simeon Rice and the vaunted Illinois defense is the only reason the Illini aren't below sixth place in the conference. Illinois has flunked team chemistry 101 by not having a consistent offense or quarterback for that matter.

Indiana's backup quarterback Adam Greenlee is the only quarterback with a worse passing efficiency rating than Illinois's tandem of Scott Weaver and Johnny Johnson.

This game will come down to two overachieving running backs. Sophomore running back Carl McCullough is having a fine year for the Badgers. He has rushed for 900 yards and averages almost five yards per carry. Illinois' Robert Holcombe has ground out 974 for the Illini.

Sorry Lou, your home for the Holidays.

Wisconsin, 24-20.

Penn State at Michigan State

The Spartans have gotten their act together since a conference opening loss to Iowa. Rookie head coach Nick Saban could be Big Ten coach of the year if Northwestern's Gary Barnett was in another conference.

Michigan State has shocked the experts as the Spartans sit in third place by themselves. They might be New Year's day bowling if they can pull off the victory. But Joe Paterno's squad is just as hungry for that third place spot.

The key to this game will be Michigan State's defense. A solid performance on Saturday is a must for a unit that is 10th in the Big Ten in total defense. If not, Penn State receivers Freddie Scott and Bobby Engram will have Christmas a month early.

Penn State, 30-24.

Ohio State at Michigan

Gee, this game has never decided the conference title before. Once again it comes down to the rivalry of the Big Ten to decide the conference representative in Pasadena.

Michigan is out of the run for the roses but the Wolverines would love to see Northwestern in California instead of the Buckeyes.

Ohio State hasn't played a close game since a 28-25 victory over Penn State. But no one has to tell the Buckeyes and John Cooper how important this game is. Many times this game has decided if Ohio State makes a coaching change in the off season.

The Wolverines must have a big game from sophomore quarterback Brian Griese. Griese has thrown for 10 TD's and 1300 yards.

Ohio State continues to destroy teams with its dominating offense. Buckeye quarterback Bobby Hoying has thrown 29 touchdown passes and Eddie George has rushed for 1722 yards. Enough said.

Ohio State, 38-17.

Pregame Heisman Picks

Chris Snider,
Pregame Editor

Troy Davis — 2,000 yards and only a soph. (I can't believe I'm voting for a Cyclone.) Shaw wins it next year. Dwight in '97.

Shannon Stevens,
DI Sports Reporter

Eddie George — he made the Illini look like they're from Akron, Ohio.

David Schwartz,
Assistant Sports Editor

Danny Wuerffel — He looks like a professional quarterback playing against high schoolers.

Mike Triplett,
Sports Editor

Eddie George — he'll be close enough to 2,000 yards to lessen the impact of Troy Davis' numbers

Wayne Drehs,
DI Sports Reporter

Eddie George — Alien Lives!

Chris James,
Big Ten analyst

Eddie George — They only pick running backs or quarterbacks for the Heisman.
